CARRIZOZO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

"Yes," said Prof. Charles L. Schreck of the local public schools, "I have recently returned from attendance at the State Normal University at Las Vegas, and was very much pleased and gratified with the splendid interest manifested there. There was as fine a body of instructors and pupils in attendance there as one could find at any state normal university, east, west, north or south, and New Mexico may well be proud of the men and women who are devoting so much time and effort to her educational affairs.

"It may not be generally known that the work of our State Normal is given equal recognition in both eastern and western educational institutions with the normal work of all the older states, and the great University of Chicago, as well as California's well known Leland Stanford University, give us higher recognition than most of the western states. Our state certificates are recognized by California, Oklahoma, Illinois, Michigan and other states that rank high in educational matters.

"For a new state New Mexico is well advanced and her state school system is considered one of the very best and most efficient. I found a strong sentiment on the part of the leading educators of the state toward the centralized school plan which is proving so practical wherever adopted and doing so much more efficient work than the present rural school, and especially in sparsely settled localities. I believe it to be the coming system.

"Yes, we are planning some new work for the Carrizozo school this year, or rather a renewal of interest in some of the work started late during the last term. We hope to get matters in better shape for our manual training department, giving our boys better facilities for acquiring the rudiments of shop work. We also expect to push the work of an School Patrons' Association and are especially anxious to have the patrons of the school assist in this direction by visiting the different departments and showing the pupils that they are vitally interested in their work.

"We hope, also, to make our Boys' and Girls' Club work a real feature of the school year. This club work is under the general supervision of the State Agricultural College and consists of planting corn and other crops by the boys and of home cooking and sewing lessons for the girls. We are planning to have the Carrizozo Boys' and Girls' club carry off some of the prizes offered this year, feeling that the work is most practical and beneficial.

"In point of building and school equipment Carrizozo has perhaps as good as any city of its size in the state, but the board anticipate adding some needed improvements and facilities made necessary by increased attendance and demands. Our high school work will, as heretofore, be made to meet all requirements so that credit will be given our pupils by the higher institutions. I might note that every member of our eighth grade class of last year successfully passed the state examinations, which is a matter for local pride. I expect a somewhat larger high school class the coming term. Our enrollment last term was about 240, and I understand this will be increased somewhat as several families expect to move in from their ranches.

"Generally speaking, as compared with my previous teaching experience in other states, I consider the interest in school work here in Carrizozo up to standard. Our board is progressive and liberal, we have, I believe, as good educational facilities as are provided by older and larger communities. Our attendance is good, and the outlook for local school work is excellent.

"I feel that our corps of teachers is unusually strong. Only two changes have been made from last term and the new instructors come to us with the highest qualifications and record. Another matter that might be mentioned is that we anticipate publishing a regular monthly school paper this year, which we hope will have its effect in keeping the pupils as well as the patrons of the school interested in our work."

WILSON

The nomination of Wilson for the presidency by the democrats puts into the field the strongest candidate they could have named. To the entire nation there is this patriotic consolation, that should the fates decree that a democrat is to occupy the White House after March 4, which is extremely unlikely, it will be by a scholar and a gentleman, a student of economics and politics, a clean man who will lean to the right side on all moral questions. Though radical opinions are ascribed to him, they are rather philosophical than revolutionary, and he will use no big stick to put them into effect. What is best of all, the nomination of Wilson eliminates altogether any danger that might have arisen to the republic from a radical third party movement. Wilson will be extreme enough for every radical; at the same time he will gather to himself a strong following of college graduates, teachers, educators, Presbyterians, Prohibitionists and those who take a decided stand on moral questions. The New Mexican still believes President Taft will be elected, for on the tariff and economic questions, Wilson is entirely British, while Taft stands for protection. Wilson's election would mean an industrial and financial panic, while Taft's reelection means stability, continued industrial prosperity and a sound financial policy. It is the issue between the political theorist and the sound, practical businessman. The glory of Taft's re-election will be so much the greater, because the victor's crown was contested by one so worthy as Woodrow Wilson.—New Mexican.

Why the New Mexican asserts that Wilson's tariff views are entirely British or why it asserts that his election will "mean an industrial and financial panic" is hard to understand.

The platform on which Mr. Wilson is running for the presidency avers that a tariff for revenue is the only ground upon which such a tax can be justified. Does the New Mexican know of any other?

The British view is flat-footed free trade, quite a difference.

That his election will "mean an industrial and financial panic" is all in the imagination. Wilson nor any other president cannot change a law without the consent of the congress, but possibly the fear that Wilson would conscientiously try to enforce some that are now practically dead letters causes our contemporary to fear the panic.

If all those who have been receiving immunity from punishment were where they should be certain ranks would be thinned but there will still remain enough to transact all legitimate business in the country.

Mrs. French's Bridge Party.

Perhaps the most elaborate mid-summer social event of the season locally was the bridge party given last Friday from 3 to 6 p. m. by Mrs. J. B. Fredch. The charming home of the hostess was decorated in exquisite taste, the colors being pink and white—and the color scheme worked out with a profusion of sweet peas and asparagus fern, was most effective.

The same color scheme was carried out in serving the collation, consisting of ices, cakes and bonbons.

There were several tables and much interesting rivalry for the handsome silver bonbon dish as first prize, which was won by Mrs. Truman Spencer. Mrs. John A. Haley was awarded the consolation prize—a hand embroided handkerchief.

Among those who enjoyed the afternoon were Mesdames W. C. McDonald, Truman A. Spencer, A. J. Rolland, Stanley Squier, G. J. Dingwall, H. S. Campbell, Harry Dawson, Farley, Wm. Riley, Frank Elliott, Frank Mudge, J. B. Garven, Wallace Gumm, George Ulrick, E. B. Walker, Hal Fairbanks, H. B. Hamilton, Dr. Lloyd, J. A. Haley, Hosck, Frank Sager, Fred Jones, Henry Lacey, Frank Kimball, Frank Gurney, John E. Bell and the Misses Nell S. Coomes, Margaret Chase and Lorena Sager.

Camp Meeting.

A protracted meeting has been in progress at Angus since Friday of last week. The attendance has been good, especially on Sunday, when the school house was crowded. Rev. Charlie Robison, a holiness preacher of Texas, is in charge of the meeting, and is ably assisted by his wife, who plays the organ and sings. Their special songs are much enjoyed by the people. R. M. Yarbrough leads the singing. Rev. Robison is an able and forceful speaker, and his message carries conviction to his hearers. The meeting will continue over Sunday, Aug. 11, and if the interest justifies, may be carried on further. Rev. Robison and wife expect to remain in the mountains for several weeks, and will hold revival meetings at various points in this region.

The Common Sense of Socialism. No. 2.

Strange as it may seem, there are some objections urged against socialism, and socialists in general, that are so absurd that socialists, as a rule, pass them over as unworthy of their consideration; especially as they are altogether foreign to the question of socialism.

These objections are: That socialism is opposed to the church and the marriage relation, and that the ultimate object of socialism is to destroy the church and break up the home.

And so long as this is believed to be the ultimate aim of socialism, it is almost impossible to get the majority of men and women to consider the claims of socialists that socialism is the hope of the laboring class.

Therefore, I am going to treat these objections as if they were really worth serious consideration, and run the risk of being classed with the ridiculous for attempting to apply the rule of common sense to such senseless accusations.

To begin with, I am going to lay down a rule of common sense to go by. There is a motive in every action of life; and no matter whether that motive is hidden or made public, it will shape every act of our lives.

I would, then, ask what motive could the laboring class have in destroying the church or the home? Would that assist them in getting more to eat and more to wear, with better houses to live in?

As the church is not an institution of the state, and no tax or revenue is collected by it off of the laboring class, and as all it gets is what is voluntarily given by its members, it can in no way concern those who are not members of the church.

The same can be said of the charge that socialists want to break up the home. However, I might add that if the socialists want the home destroyed, the capitalist system is doing that all right, and the socialists must be hard to please in that respect if they are not satisfied.

But it is urged that it is not the rank and file of the socialist party who want to accomplish these things, but the leaders, and that the rank and file of the party is being fooled.

I wish to say that the imaginary leaders of the socialist party have done a very foolish thing, when they organized a party and turned it over to the rank and file of the party; and not one of the so-called leaders has ever had the audacity to offer a resolution or a plank in the platform covering these points. And as these things are not openly advocated in the socialist party, it must be plain to all thinking people that if under socialism the church is destroyed and the home broken up and men and women disregard the marriage relation, these things must come as a result of the changed economic conditions which socialists claim will be brought about by the adoption of a socialist form of goverment.

Now, does any sane person believe that if socialists should succeed in fixing economic conditions so all men could have an abundance of this world's goods to satisfy all of his material wants and some spare time in which to enjoy them, that they would be less inclined towards the church, the home, the marriage relation? Are we to believe that when a man receives ten dollars where he now receives one, he will lose all respect for the things he now regards as sacred, and will cease to attend church and will not allow his wife to pay the preacher out of her own money?

Will the young man refuse to marry just because he has enough money to put up at a first class hotel and take his meals at an uptown restaurant? Will the married man cease to love his wife and children when he gets able to own a six cylinder auto, and some spare time to ride in it, occasionally? I am aware that such questions sound foolish, but it is about the only way to answer the fool charges that the socialists want to destroy the church, the home and the marriage relation.

It is asked, "Why do some of the socialist writers assail the church and the marriage relation and advocate the public care of children? All this I could easily answer, but don't consider it worth the ink and paper. I might add that these comrades brought their opposition to the church and marriage relation with them when they came into the socialist party.

"Why don't you get rid of those undesirables by turning them out of your party?" is asked. There are several good reasons. One is that the socialist party is a political party whose purpose is to so organize industries that all people will have an equal opportunity to make a living, and is in no way concerned about religious or moral questions. Another reason is we have absolute faith in the people to judge for themselves on these matters. Furthermore, we believe in absolute freedom of speech and press.

Those who are inclined to take the Bible as authority on all questions might find an answer to the above questions by reading the parable of the "Tares," as recorded in Matthew, 13 chapter and 24 verse, where the Master refused to let the servants pull up the tares, lest they root up the wheat also. But He said let them grow together until the harvest time and that the wheat could then be separated from the tares without injury. Jesus also said that "The kingdom of heaven was like unto a net cast into the sea that taketh all kinds of fish, and the separation is made after the net is drawn on shore."

I rather suspect that some of the same objections were made to the Christians that are now being made to the socialists. And please notice that Jesus did not deny that some undesirables were getting into the church, but gave the ones who were making the objections to understand that they would be gotten rid of at the proper time and in the proper way. If it were true that this element was getting into the early church, which had an infallible head, what more could be expected of a party like the socialist which lays no claim to higher aims than economic justice?

But I wish to say that the socialist harvest is coming and then we will have ample time in which to do the separating act. And as the socialist age will be an age of machinery and the work of separating the bad from the good will not be disagreeable, seeing it can all be done by machinery.

Now, if all minds are clear on this phase of the subject, we will dismiss it with the promise to say something in the future about things that will appeal more forcibly to a man who is looking at the future for himself and family through the inverted end of a microcoscope.

GHOSTS EVER BOTHER YOU?

If So, Southern Negro Folks Say These Simple Precautions Will Chase 'Em.

As a part of the folklore of the negro folks the superstitions of slavery days are of great interest. The following are some of the negro's beliefs about ghosts:

To feel a hot breath of air strike you at twilight signified the nearby presence of a ghost. Should you wish to avoid him, stop and turn your coat and trousers and hat wrong side out and the spirit cannot encounter you.

If, however, he is a pugnacious sprite and approaches despite the change, turn and address him thus: "In the name of the Lord, what do you want?" Whereupon he will tell you his business upon earth, then depart and never, never trouble you again. If, on the other hand, it is a prowling ghost who crawls under the house, bumps against the floor, makes strange sounds, and whispers in the midnight hours, you have only to put in a new floor and he will do so no more.

Some ghosts are obtrusive and will not only prowl about the house, but creep in through the crack of the door in the wee small hours of the night, and, once inside, expand to vast proportions. To spare yourself any disturbance in this way, sow mustard seed all about the doorstep just before going to bed, or place a sieve on the doorstep.

Before entering, the spirit will have to count all the holes in the sieve or all the mustard seeds, and, by this time daylight will come and he will have to go. As the counting for one night will not do for another you are always safe.—Southern Workman.

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

"Mug" Is Overworked Word.

The most overworked word in the Englishman's vocabulary of slang is "Mug." As a noun it may mean a face, a fool, or a student who prefers reading to sport. As a verb its meanings are still more varied. It may mean to study hard, or to strike in the face. It also means to rob or swindle, and among actors to grimace or make faces. To mug up is also, in theatrical parlance, to make up.

Finally, to mug one's self is to get drunk, the resulting condition being one of mugginess. There is more obvious sense in this last use of the word than in some of the others, for alehouses, in the eighteenth century, were commonly known as mughouses. Mug is the English equivalent of the German Zug, which Mark Twain found to mean everything. A new sense of the verb "mug" in the American slang is to photograph a face.

For Forty Years a Hermit.

Isaac Sheath, who has just died in the workhouse at the age of seventy-eight, lived the life of a hermit for nearly forty years at Newport, Isle of Wight. He occupied a mud-hut which he erected on a piece of waste land in the village of Chale, but the hut became so dilapidated that the rural district council ordered its destruction. Sheath was greatly exasperated by the council's interference, and before he left for the workhouse he burned the hut to the ground. Mice and birds had grown so accustomed to the old man and his lonely ways that they used to come and feed from his hand.—London Mail.

The New Way.

"Going to your summer cottage this year?"

"No; we've decided to stay in the city."

"But I thought you were so fond of the country?"

"We used to be, but now we prefer to stay at home, where we can get fresh milk, eggs and butter every morning."

First Religious Book in America.

The first religious book published on the American continent was printed in the City of Mexico by order of the Roman Catholic bishop there. This was the first work of any kind from movable type issued in the new world and bears date 1545. In point of collaborators the most pretentious work published on this continent is "The Catholic Church in the United States," which has six thousand different coauthors, all but a dozen of whom are actively identified in some way with the American hierarchy.

TRUE TO FRIEND

Remarkable Romance of Kitty Doyle, Which Neither Matrimony Nor Death Could End ---Husband Makes No Complaint

MR. WEIL, THE BENEFICIARY OF KITTY DOYLE'S WILL.

THE LATE MRS. WALTER M. BARRINGER. (Katherine Doyle.)

EXTRACT FROM THE WILL.

"With the understanding, however, that during the lifetime of my friend, Edwin C. Weil, my mother is to maintain said property as a home for my said friend, Edwin C. Weil, and subject entirely to his orders and directions as to the management thereof, in order that he may have the full enjoyment and benefit thereof as long as he may live."

NEW YORK.—Behind a will filed in the Surrogate's office the other day lies the story of a life of romance which did not even die with death. The will was made by Katherine Lee Doyle Barringer, wife for five months of Walter M. Barringer, a rich member of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

She left nothing to her husband out of her $100,000 estate, not that they were not the best of friends. But she did leave to her sweetheart of other days her home. It is a beautiful place at Deal Beach, N. J., and Mr. Weil is to have it for his own as long as he lives in memory of the happy days when they loved each other but could not marry.

It is a story of love spoiled by a will of long ago.

Some years ago young Mr. Weil inherited an estate which is today estimated in the hundred thousands. There was a string to the money. He could not marry out of his faith, and he was a Hebrew. Miss Doyle was a Protestant. They met. It was love at first sight. And then the provisions of the other will—Mr. Weil could marry a girl of the same birth as himself.

Their Sacrifice for Love.

"Very well," he said to Miss Doyle, "if I can't marry you I won't marry anybody."

She told him her love, too, and more.

"I'll give it all up for you," said Mr. Weil.

"And I won't let you," answered Miss Doyle, "much as I love you."

Poor Mr. Weil fairly wept as he confronted the beautiful girl who was giving her love that he might keep his estate. And few could have [illegible] him. There were few fairer [illegible] New York ten years ago than "Kitty"—Miss Doyle. She was tall, ra[illegible] haired, with a complexion of ivory and rose, a lissome figure and the poise of a princess. Many a New York swain had succumbed to her charms only to be turned down.

For ten years young Mr. Weil kept up his suit, but it was all to no purpose—Miss Doyle absolutely refused to marry him and force him the loss of his estate. They were together constantly, and their friends, not knowing the provisions of the will, predicted that they would soon be married. But Katherine Doyle's love was too great for that—she declined to marry a man only to disinherit him.

Few Knew the Secret.

Things went along for several years. Young Weil showered gifts upon the girl he knew would never be his bride. Many of their mutual friends wondered why there never was the announcement of an engagement—only a few in the secret actually knew the real reason why.

"It can never be," answered the girl to all questions, "but more than this I can't say."

Still there was no sign of any loss of the love that each bore the other. Mr. Weil carried Miss Doyle's photograph in a gold locket and a chain just as a man would wear a watch. They were always together—out on an automobile jaunt, at the theater, in the restaurants, at the beaches—everywhere.

Now, Miss Doyle's family are well to do. Her sister, Mrs. Julia H. Flaacke, lives in a handsome Colonial house at No. 141 Harrison avenue, Jersey City. Her mother, Mrs. Lucille C. Gorman, has a home at No. 3 West Eighty-third street, New York City. And Miss Doyle had a fortune of her own—in fact, she had received something like $100,000 from Mr. Weil in jewels and real estate alone.

So things ran along.

Miss Doyle a Wealthy Woman.

By judicious investments Miss Doyle increased her estate until it came to be worth more and more. Some say today that it may realize as much as $400,000, but a more conservative reckoning will make it nearer $100,000. No estimate of the amount of its value or the value of the real estate has been filed with the will.

Then came a sudden change. Miss Doyle met Walter M. Barringer, a wealthy member of the Chicago Stock Exchange, who makes his headquarters most of the time in New York and at the Holland House. Barringer, a good-looking, well-dressed man under forty, promptly fell in love with the fetching New York girl, and it wasn't long before he proposed marriage to her.

"There's Mr. Weil," answered the girl.

Mr. Barringer knew all about the old days and the love of the two for each other, and he knew, too, that they could never marry. He would listen to none of Miss Doyle's arguments, and finally she succumbed. Last November they were quietly married. Mr. Weil sent his congratulations as soon as he heard of the wedding—he had [illegible] the day before and she had [illegible] a word to him about it.

Honeymoon Ended by Death.

There was a brief honeymoon and a long trip to Chicago, where the couple were ideally happy. It was a bad winter, and young Mrs. Barringer felt the Chicago cold keenly. She went to her home at Deal Beach in the hope of recuperating. It availed little. Soon she failed so suddenly that her husband was sent for, and he arrived in time to be with her when she passed away with pneumonia on April 23 last.

After the funeral the bride's will was found. It gave her home as at No. 3 West Eighty-third street, and recited that there were kept her clothes, paintings, furniture and jewels. She left $1,000 each to her two uncles, Donald Swain and Chapin Swain; $500 to her cousin, Earl Swain, and $100 to Delia Dimly, her maid. Then came the provision leaving to her mother, Mrs. Gorman, the Deal Beach property, with the exception that it was to be Mr. Weil's during his lifetime. Everything else was left to Mrs. Barringer's mother, who was named as executrix. It was the will that revealed the earlier romance in the dead woman's life.

Mr. Barringer Satisfied.

"I don't think there was anything peculiar about my wife's will," said Mr. Barringer. "I knew nothing of its provisions beforehand. I suppose she thought that as I was comfortably off and did not need her money she had better leave it to some one who did.

"We had only been married about five months when she died. There had never been any quarrel between us. We loved each other devotedly and were sweethearts to the last."

Mr. Weil lives at No. 644 Madison avenue, New York, and makes his business headquarters with the stock brokerage firm of H. Content & Co., No. 751 Fifth avenue. He said that he had been friends of the family for years and that there was nothing strange in that the use of the Deal Beach home had been willed to him. More than that he did not care to be quoted.

"Kate was a splendid girl," declared Mrs. Althea Geddes, one of the witnesses to the will, who lives with Mrs. Gorman. "Her taking off was all so sad, and just when she seemed so happily married."

And now it takes the formal legal wording of the will to recall the romance of other days.

HARD WORK OF AUTHORSHIP

Years of Patient Preparation Required to Produce a Book That Will Endure.

Those who have never carried a book through the press can form no idea of the amount of toil it involves. Livingstone, the African explorer, declared that he would rather cross the African continent again than undertake to write another book.

For the statistics of the negro population of South America alone Owen is said to have examined more than 150 volumes.

It is said one of Longfellow's poems that it was wrritten in four weeks, but that he spent six months in revising and condensing it.

Bulwer declared that he had rewritten some of his briefest productions as many as eight or nine times before their publication. One of Tennyson's poems was rewritten 50 times.

Gibbons spent 20 years on his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire;" Adam Clark, 26 years on his "Commentary," and Carlyle 15 years on his "Frederick the Great."

A great deal of time is consumed in reading before some books are prepared. George Eliot read 1,000 books before she wrote "Daniel Deronda." Alison read 2,000 before he completed his history.

Modest Kit.

Christopher (Kit) Carson touched the wild life of the west at more points than any other person of any time. But he was always modest, declares a writer in the Century Magazine, and disliked anything which savored of flattery.

One day in 1862 the great frontiersman chanced to stop at Maxwell's ranch on the Cimarron river, in New Mexico, a well-known point on the Santa Fe trail, when a regular army officer of high rank who was there, exclaimed exuberantly:

"So this is the distinguished Kit Carson who has made so many Indians run!"

Carson silenced his eulogist by quietly remarking, "Yes, I've made some Indians run, but a good deal of the time they were running after me."

An Expert on Eggs.

"When is an egg bad?" is the query sent out from the pure food department at Washington. This is the Downs (Kan.) News' answer: "Scientists differ as to the exact moment when decay sets in, but generally speaking, when it explodes with a sound not unlike that of a cannon cracker; when its breath resembles that of a ward politician the morning after election; when its interior mechanism no longer retains its party solidarity; when the atmosphere surrounding it causes you to think involuntarily of the Lorimer investigation—then, we believe we are safe in saying the egg is bad."

Says Uncle Eben.

"It's so easy to find fault," said Uncle Eben, "dat a man who is sure-enough smart ought to be ashamed to waste his energies dat way."—Washington Star.

NOT IN POLITICS TO STAY

Colored Man's Theory Might Have Been All Right, but There Were Exceptions.

Douglas Fairbanks, out in Chicago, went into a barber shop the other day to get a shine. He found three negro bootblacks there. As one of them rubbed Fairbanks' shoes the subject of women came up.

"Ah tell yo," said the negro who was working on the "Officer 666" actor's shoes, "women is a peculiah thing. Yo' gotta know just how to handle huh or yo' goin' to git the worst uf it. Lots of times she'll git mad at yo' an' then yo' gotta talk to huh. Talk to huh—that's the way to mastah huh. She won't stand fo' no beatin' or nothin' lak that. Talk to huh. That's the way Ah handle ma wife."

Another negro working next to him, looked up. "Whah did yo' git that black eye yo' got, Rufe?" he asked.

"Well, ma wife done it, but—"

"Why didn't yo' talk to huh?"

"How could Ah?" came from the first. "She had me by the throat wif my wind shet off."

Man's Usefulness.

Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, president of the Woman's Municipal league, was discussing in New York the movement for cleaner streets.

"Now that women have gone in for cleaner streets," she said, "we'll probably get them. Don't mistrust woman's influence. It is everywhere at work."

Then, with a smile, Mrs. Hewitt uttered this epigram in her sex's behalf:

"Few are the men who would have reached the top of the ladder if their wives hadn't steadied it for them."

ment of the law and the provisions thereunder for the prevention of the spread of contagious diseases would, no doubt, save some lives and much money to the county and the people, but there is an element of society that requires the vigorous methods of the constable of Richardson precinct, referred to in last week's paper, before the proper enforcement of the law in such cases can be accomplished.

Antonio Montoya of Richardson was in town a few days ago, having the wound on his head, inflicted by the constable's gun, treated. The wound of itself was not of a dangerous nature, but infection had set in, making medical treatment necessary. Montoya's son, who had the small pox, is reported to be recovering rapidly and no other cases are reported from that neighborhood.

Grand Chancellor of the K. of P. order in New Mexico, George L. Bradford of Dawson is visiting friends and relatives in Capitan. Bro. Bradford was for many years a resident of this county and has scores of friends who are extending him the glad hand. He has been postmaster at Dawson for the past six years and was reappointed by President Taft for another four year term a few days ago, being one of the seventeen, whom the New Mexican facetiously and invidiously refers to as being the "seventeen votes secure for Taft in the coming campaign." GHOSTS EVER BOTHER YOU?

If So, Southern Negro Folks Say These Simple Precautions Will Chase 'Em.

As a part of the folklore of the negro folks the superstitions of slavery days are of great interest. The following are some of the negro's beliefs about ghosts:

To feel a hot breath of air strike you at twilight signified the nearby presence of a ghost. Should you wish to avoid him, stop and turn your coat and trousers and hat wrong side out and the spirit cannot encounter you.

If, however, he is a pugnacious sprite and approaches despite the change, turn and address him thus: "In the name of the Lord, what do you want?" Whereupon he will tell you his business upon earth, then depart and never, never trouble you again. If, on the other hand, it is a prowling ghost who crawls under the house, bumps against the floor, makes strange sounds, and whispers in the midnight hours, you have only to put in a new floor and he will do so no more.

Some ghosts are obtrusive and will not only prowl about the house, but creep in through the crack of the door in the wee small hours of the night, and, once inside, expand to vast proportions. To spare yourself any disturbance in this way, sow mustard seed all about the doorstep just before going to bed, or place a sieve on the doorstep.

Before entering, the spirit will have to count all the holes in the sieve or all the mustard seeds, and by this time daylight will come and he will have to go. As the counting for one night will not do for another you are always safe.—Southern Workman.

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

"Mug" Is Overworked Word.

The most overworked word in the Englishman's vocabulary of slang is "Mug." As a noun it may mean a face, a fool, or a student who prefers reading to sport. As a verb its meanings are still more varied. It may mean to study hard, or to strike in the face. It also means to rob or swindle, and among actors to grimace or make faces. To mug up is also, in theatrical parlance, to make up.

Finally, to mug one's self is to get drunk, the resulting condition being one of mugginess. There is more obvious sense in this last use of the word than in some of the others, for alehouses, in the eighteenth century, were commonly known as mughouses. Mug is the English equivalent of the German Zug, which Mark Twain found to mean everything. A new sense of the verb "mug" in the American slang is to photograph a face.

For Forty Years a Hermit.

Isaac Sheath, who has just died in the workhouse at the age of seventy-eight, lived the life of a hermit for nearly forty years at Newport, Isle of Wight. He occupied a mud-hut which he erected on a piece of waste land in the village of Chale, but the hut became so dilapidated that the rural district council ordered its destruction. Sheath was greatly exasperated by the council's interference, and before he left for the workhouse he burned the hut to the ground. Mice and birds had grown so accustomed to the old man and his lonely ways that they used to come and feed from his hand.—London Mail.

The New Way.

"Going to your summer cottage this year?"

"No; we've decided to stay in the city."

"But I thought you were so fond of the country?"

"We used to be, but now we prefer to stay at home, where we can get fresh milk, eggs and butter every morning."

First Religious Book in America.

The first religious book published on the American continent was printed in the City of Mexico by order of the Roman Catholic bishop there. This was the first work of any kind from movable type issued in the new world and bears date 1545. In point of collaborators the most pretentious work published on this continent is "The Catholic Church in the United States," which has six thousand different coauthors, all but a dozen of whom are actively identified in some way with the American hierarchy.

TRUE TO FRIEND

Remarkable Romance of Kitty Doyle, Which Neither Matrimony Nor Death Could End ---Husband Makes No Complaint

MR. WEIL, THE BENEFICIARY OF KITTY DOYLE'S WILL.

THE LATE MRS. WALTER M. BARRINGER. (Katherine Doyle.)

EXTRACT FROM THE WILL.

"With the understanding, however, that during the lifetime of my friend, Edwin C. Weil, my mother is to maintain said property as a home for my said friend, Edwin C. Weil, and subject entirely to his orders and directions as to the management thereof, in order that he may have the full enjoyment and benefit thereof as long as he may live."

NEW YORK.—Behind a will filed in the Surrogate's office the other day lies the story of a life of romance which did not even die with death. The will was made by Katherine Lee Doyle Barringer, wife for five months of Walter M. Barringer, a rich member of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

She left nothing to her husband out of her $100,000 estate, not that they were not the best of friends. But she did leave to her sweetheart of other days her home. It is a beautiful place at Deal Beach, N. J., and Mr. Weil is to have it for his own as long as he lives in memory of the happy days when they loved each other but could not marry.

It is a story of love spoiled by a will of long ago.

Some years ago young Mr. Weil inherited an estate which is today estimated in the hundred thousands. There was a string to the money. He could not marry out of his faith, and he was a Hebrew. Miss Doyle was a Protestant. They met. It was love at first sight. And then the provisions of the other will—Mr. Weil could marry a girl of the same birth as himself.

Their Sacrifice for Love.

"Very well," he said to Miss Doyle, "if I can't marry you I won't marry anybody."

She told him her love, too, and more.

"I'll give it all up for you," said Mr. Weil.

"And I won't let you," answered Miss Doyle, "much as I love you."

Poor Mr. Weil fairly wept as he confronted the beautiful girl who was giving her love that he might keep his estate. And few could have blamed him. There were few fairer girls in New York ten years ago than "Kitty"—Miss Doyle. She was tall, raven-haired, with a complexion of ivory and rose, a lissome figure and the poise of a princess. Many a New York swain had succumbed to her charms only to be turned down.

For ten years young Mr. Weil kept up his suit, but it was all to no purpose—Miss Doyle absolutely refused to marry him and force him the loss of his estate. They were together constantly, and their friends, not knowing the provisions of the will, predicted that they would soon be married. But Katherine Doyle's love was too great for that—she declined to marry a man only to disinherit him.

Few Knew the Secret.

Things went along for several years. Young Weil showered gifts upon the girl he knew would never be his bride. Many of their mutual friends wondered why there never was the announcement of an engagement—only a few in the secret actually knew the real reason why.

"It can never be," answered the girl to all questions, "but more than this I can't say."

Still there was no sign of any loss of the love that each bore the other. Mr. Weil carried Miss Doyle's photograph in a gold locket and a chain just as a man would wear a watch. They were always together—out on an automobile jaunt, at the theater, in the restaurants, at the beaches—everywhere.

Now, Miss Doyle's family are well to do. Her sister, Mrs. Julia H. Flaacke, lives in a handsome Colonial house at No. 141 Harrison avenue, Jersey City. Her mother, Mrs. Lucille C. Gorman, has a home at No. 2 West Eighty-third street, New York City. And Miss Doyle had a fortune of her own—in fact, she had received something like $100,000 from Mr. Weil in jewels and real estate alone.

So things ran along.

Miss Doyle a Wealthy Woman.

By judicious investments Miss Doyle increased her estate until it came to be worth more and more. Some say today that it may realize as much as $400,000, but a more conservative reckoning will make it nearer $100,000. No estimate of the amount of its value or the value of the real estate has been filed with the will.

Then came a sudden change. Miss Doyle met Walter M. Barringer, a wealthy member of the Chicago Stock Exchange, who makes his headquarters most of the time in New York and at the Holland House. Barringer, a good-looking, well-dressed man under forty, promptly fell in love with the fetching New York girl, and it wasn't long before he proposed marriage to her.

"There's Mr. Weil," answered the girl.

Mr. Barringer knew all about the old days and the love of the two for each other, and he knew, too, that they could never marry. He would listen to none of Miss Doyle's arguments, and finally she succumbed. Last November they were quietly married. Mr. Weil sent his congratulations as soon as he heard of the wedding—he had [illegible]

Honeymoon Ended by Death.

There was a brief honeymoon and a long trip to Chicago, where the couple were ideally happy. It was a bad winter, and young Mrs. Barringer felt the Chicago cold keenly. She went to her home at Deal Beach in the hope of recuperating. It availed little. Soon she failed so suddenly that her husband was sent for, and he arrived in time to be with her when she passed away with pneumonia on April 23 last.

After the funeral the bride's will was found. It gave her home as at No. 2 West Eighty-third street, and recited that there were kept her clothes, paintings, furniture and jewels. She left $1,000 each to her two uncles, Donald Swain and Chapin Swain; $500 to her cousin, Earl Swain, and $100 to Delia Diffily, her maid. Then came the provision leaving to her mother, Mrs. Gorman, the Deal Beach property, with the exception that it was to be Mr. Weil's during his lifetime. Everything else was left to Mrs. Barringer's mother, who was named as executrix. It was the will that revealed the earlier romance in the dead woman's life.

Mr. Barringer Satisfied.

"I don't think there was anything peculiar about my wife's will," said Mr. Barringer. "I knew nothing of its provisions beforehand. I suppose she thought that as I was comfortably off and did not need her money she had better leave it to some one who did.

"We had only been married about five months when she died. There had never been any quarrel between us. We loved each other devotedly and were sweethearts to the last."

Mr. Weil lives at No. 644 Madison avenue, New York, and makes his business headquarters with the stock brokerage firm of H. Content & Co., No. 751 Fifth avenue. He said that he had been friends of the family for years and that there was nothing strange in that the use of the Deal Beach home had been willed to him. More than that he did not care to be quoted.

"Kate was a splendid girl," declared Mrs. Althea Geddes, one of the witnesses to the will, who lives with Mrs. Gorman. "Her taking off was all so sad, and just when she seemed so happily married."

And now it takes the formal legal wording of the will to recall the romance of other days.

HARD WORK OF AUTHORSHIP

Years of Patient Preparation Required to Produce a Book That Will Endure.

Those who have never carried a book through the press can form no idea of the amount of toil it involves. Livingstone, the African explorer, declared that he would rather cross the African continent again than undertake to write another book.

For the statistics of the negro population of South America alone Owen is said to have examined more than 150 volumes.

It is said one of Longfellow's poems that it was wrritten in four weeks, but that he spent six months in revising and condensing it.

Bulwer declared that he had rewritten some of his briefest productions as many as eight or nine times before their publication. One of Tennyson's poems was rewritten 50 times.

Gibbons spent 20 years on his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire;" Adam Clark, 26 years on his "Commentary," and Carlyle 15 years on his "Frederick the Great."

A great deal of time is consumed in reading before some books are prepared. George Eliot read 1,600 books before she wrote "Daniel Deronda." Alison read 2,000 before he completed his history.

Modest Kit.

Christopher (Kit) Carson touched the wild life of the west at more points than any other person of any time. But he was always modest, declares a writer in the Century Magazine, and disliked anything which savored of flattery.

One day in 1867 the great frontiersman chanced to stop at Maxwell's ranch on the Cimarron river, in New Mexico, a well-known point on the Santa Fe trail, when a regular army officer of high rank who was there, exclaimed exuberantly:

"So this is the distinguished Kit Carson who has made so many Indians run!"

Carson silenced his eulogist by quietly remarking, "Yes, I've made some Indians run, but a good deal of the time they were running after me."

An Expert on Eggs.

"When is an egg bad?" is the query sent out from the pure food department at Washington. This is the Downs (Kan.) News' answer: "Scientists differ as to the exact moment when decay sets in, but generally speaking, when it explodes with a sound not unlike that of a cannon cracker; when its breath resembles that of a ward politician the morning after election; when its interior mechanism no longer retains its party solidarity; when the atmosphere surrounding it causes you to think involuntarily of the Lorimer investigation—then, we believe we are safe in saying the egg is bad."

Says Uncle Eben.

"It's so easy to find fault," said Uncle Eben, "dat a man who is sure enough smart ought to be ashamed to waste his energies dat way."—Washington Star.

NOT IN POSITION TO TALK

Colored Man's Theory Might Have Been All Right but There Were Exceptions.

Douglas Fairbanks, out in Chicago, went into a barber shop the other day to get a shine. He found three negro bootblacks there. As one of them rubbed Fairbanks' shoes the subject of women came up.

"Ah tell yo," said the negro who was working on the "Officer 666" actor's shoes, "women is a peculiah thing. Yo' gotta know just how to handle huh or yo' goin' to git the worst uf it. Lots of times she'll git mad at yo' an' then yo' gotta talk to huh. Talk to huh—that's the way to mastah huh. She won't stand fo' no beaten' or nothin' lak that. Talk to huh. That's the way Ah handle ma wife."

Another negro working next to him, looked up. "Whah did yo' git that black eye yo' got, Rufe?" he asked.

"Well, ma wife done it, but—"

"Why didn't yo' talk to huh?"

"How could Ah?" came from the first. "She had me by the throat wif my wind shet off."

Man's Usefulness.

Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, president of the Woman's Municipal league, was discussing in New York the movement for cleaner streets.

"Now that women have gone in for cleaner streets," she said, "we'll probably get them. Don't mistrust woman's influence. It is everywhere at work."

Then, with a smile, Mrs. Hewitt uttered this epigram in her sex's behalf:

"Few are the men who would have reached the top of the ladder if their wives hadn't steadied it for them."

ment of the law and the provisions thereunder for the prevention of the spread of contagious diseases would, no doubt, save some lives and much money to the county and the people, but there is an element of society that requires the vigorous methods of the constable of Richardson precinct, referred to in last week's paper, before the proper enforcement of the law in such cases can be accomplished.

Antonio Montoya of Richardson was in town a few days ago, having the wound on his head, inflicted by the constable's gun, treated. The wound of itself was not of a dangerous nature, but infection had set in, making medical treatment necessary. Montoya's son, who had the small pox, is reported to be recovering rapidly and no other cases are reported from that neighborhood.

Perry and Grover Hightower have arrived at Magdalena, where Grover played ball last Sunday as a member of a "pick up" team, which played the regular town team. Grover went into the box in the seventh inning with the score 11 to 9 in favor of the regulars; only one man reached first after Grover went into the box and the "pick ups" won the game with a score of 11 to 13.

Constable Ferman Escobar of Richardson brought in a sick man from Billings' sheep ranch north of Richardson last Saturday. Dr. Scott prescribed the required treatment for the patient.

Grand Chancellor of the K. of P. order in New Mexico, George L. Bradford of Dawson is visiting friends and relatives in Capitan. Bro. Bradford was for many years a resident of this county and has scores of friends who are extending him the glad hand. He has been postmaster at Dawson for the past six years and was reappointed by President Taft for another four year term a few days ago, being one of the seventeen, whom the New Mexican facetiously and invidiously refers to as being the "seventeen votes secure for Taft in the coming campaign." Brad might vote for Wilson, but for the Broncho Buster—nix!

WHY A ROOSEVELT PARTY?

We call it a "Roosevelt Party" because there seems to be very little else in it. Roosevelt is its brains and its inspiration. Only for him a new party would never have been organized. Had another been nominated at Chicago he would at once have lost interest in the scheme and the new party would have collapsed.

There is no essential feature of the real progressive movement which in the past few years has so universally absorbed public attention, which is not represented by the democratic ticket nominated at Baltimore and which has not for years been advocated by democratic leaders and embraced in democratic platforms. Any honest and earnest progressive can consistently vote for Wilson and Marshall in the full assurance that his views on the leading public questions will be fairly and faithfully represented by them. They have both been tried and have made good in their opposition to rings, combinations and corrupt practices in their respective states.

Mr. Roosevelt was president for two terms and his record shows that he has no interest in or sympathy for the common people, but on the contrary is a friend to and supporter of the combinations and specially favored "big business."

He has always proclaimed himself a "trust buster," while no act of his while in office indicates that he is anything else than a trust promoter and defender. Elect him for a third term and he will do just as he has done before -talk loyally to the people of the gallery of his devotion to the masses and what he proposes to do in their interest, while by his acts promoting the organizations engaged in the robbery of the public. Why, then, is the party of Roosevelt?

The Moosevelt Convention.

There is no denying the fact that Mr. Roosevelt and his "progressive" friends had a big powow and love feast at their convention in Chicago this week. About the first thing they did was to announce that they were strictly "for the people" and endorse the Bull Moose as the party emblem of the new organization. Then Senator Dixon made a pretty speech about how much the people needed a new party just such a new party as the present gathering was there for the purpose of "borni'n," and he was followed by Ex-Senator Beveridge with one of that eloquent gentleman's remarkable and really notable speeches a sort of sub-keynote to the great "confession of faith" of Col. Roosevelt himself, which followed the next day. Both speeches were greeted by the eleven hundred delegates and the packed galleries of the great Coliseum with the most unbounded enthusiasm.

The convention was one of the most orderly political gatherings ever held—everybody seemed to be of the same opinion—that about all the country needs is Roosevelt and the whole proceedings were carried on as smoothly as if greased—though Mr. Dixon said really no grease was used.

As we go to press the convention is still in session with every indication that it will successfully "born" a new party and nominate Theodore Roosevelt for president and governor Johnson of California as vice-president. The committee on platform work is hard at work and it is expected that document will be a remarkably strong production.

Col. Roosevelt held a conference Wednesday with the New Mexico delegation, which is composed of Ex-Gov. M. A. Otero, John Baron Burg, Marcos C. de Baca and Congressman George Curry regular delegates and W. F. Walkowjak alternate. The New Mexicans have been treated with distinguished courtesy by the leaders, and are cutting a lot of political ice in Chicago.

Col. Roosevelt's "confession of faith" includes advocacy of the recall of judicial decisions, state and national, new and easier methods of amending the constitution, government aid to laborers in becoming part owners in the business employing them, control of the trusts, recall of public officials, regulation of the prices of necessities, minimum wage scales, old age pensions, insurance against sickness and lack of employment, woman suffrage and other progressive slogans. It is certainly progressive in every line and if the Colonel could only reorganize human nature and carry out his plans it would be safe to bet on the millenium within a week or two.

LATER — After unanimously nominating Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency and Hiram W. Johnson for the vice presidency, and adopting a platform that out-progressives any brand of progressivism ever advocated by a political party in this country and is a mere repetition of Mr. Roosevelt's personal views, the delegates to the first progressive party convention sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and adjourned Wednesday evening.

Capitan.

State Representative James W. Mullens, an old-time Lincoln county resident, with some Roswell friends passed through Capitan recently, en route to the White mountains at the head of the Bonito for a few days' outing.

W. O. Fassett, a former resident of Lincoln county, but now residing at Roswell, is spending a few days with his family in the cool atmosphere of this section. Mr. Fassett is vice grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of this state, and he and Grand Chancellor Bradford of Dawson presided at a special session of the local lodge, Myrtle No. 19, on Tuesday evening, an entertaining and instructive session was held. A regular session will be held Saturday night next and all members and visiting knights are cordially invited to attend.

Our fellow townsman, George Smith, is being pushed by his friends for appointment as road overseer for the Third district. His candidacy is meeting with the approval of all people who interested in the betterment of our roads, knowing that should he receive the appointment he would devote all his energies to the work.

Dr. Paden, county health officer, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Roberts, passed through Capitan Tuesday morning en route to Las Palas, at which place several cases of small pox are reported. Isolated cases of this loathsome disease have existed in different parts of the county since court adjourned in Carrizozo in June, from which place it was carried by persons exposed to the disease there. Sir Walter's Good Fortune.

Sir Walter Raleigh had called to take a cup of tea with Queen Elizabeth.

"It was very good of you, Sir Walter," said her majesty, smiling sweetly upon the gallant knight, "to rule your cloak the other day so that my feet should not be wet by that horrid puddle. May I not instruct my lord high treasurer to reimburse you for it?"

"Don't mention it, your majesty," replied Raleigh. "It only cost two and six and I have already sold it to an American collector for £8,000."

Dodging Trouble.

Miss Bigmitt, the Stenog—Did you fire me just 'cause I misspell a few words now an' then an' sometimes get balled up in my notes?

Mr. Littleton—By no means. You see I have an unreasonably jealous wife and she won't allow me to keep a pretty young stenographer in my office.

Looking on the Bright Side.

After the ways and means committee had been compelled to leave its old quarters and go over to a new House of Representatives office building some of his friends were sympathizing with Champ Clark.

"It might have been worse, Champ," they said. "Cheer up. Pretty soon they will have the electric cars running in the subway and then you can ride over."

"Yes," replied Clark. "It might have been worse. Reminds me of an Irishman I knew down in St. Louis who had both of his legs cut off by a railroad train. 'It might have been worse, Mike,' they said.

"'Sure,' Mike replied, 'suppose I had been a chorus girl.'"

Studied Human Nature.

Wigley—What, roses? Don't you know a girl never marries the man who sends her flowers?

Oldbach—Sure, I do. That's why I always try to keep on the safe side.

Father's Grace.

A young lady, who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday school, desired to impress on them the meaning of offering thanks before a meal. Turning to one of the class whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Go easy with the butter, kids; it's 40 cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.

Pickled Peppers.

"Now, dearie," said the nurse, "I want you to learn this nice little poem about 'Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Peppers.'"

"Shan't!" answered the Boston child, much in the manner of other children.

"Oh, naughty, naughty! Why Waldo, why won't you learn this pretty poem?"

"For two reasons," answered Waldo. "In the first place, the alliteration of the line you quote is so excessive as to destroy any literary finish that such adventitious aids to metrical composition might lend if used more sparingly. And, in the second place, consider the impossibility of picking peppers which have already pickled. The whole thing is beneath the attention of any intelligent person."

Sized Up Wrong.

"Good morning, madam——"

"We don't want no sewin' machines."

"No?"

"Nor no patent clothes wringer——"

"Indeed?"

"An' we got two gran' pianners an' a cabinet orgind."

"Yes?"

"An' every room has a clock an' all on us hez watchis."

"How about pictures?"

"Kain't sell us none o' them, neither, stranger. They ain't a wall in th' house ye kin see for the rafts o' oil painting's hung on 'em."

"I suppose you have a dog?"

"Pap hez mor'n forty, an' all bloodid."

"How about carriages?"

"Barns full on 'em. An' we don't buy no hosses on this ranch."

"Mornin'—say, tenderfut, who bees ye, anyhow?"

"I'm the tax assessor.'"

Cause for Hurry.

It was on an occasion when a President of the United States was making a swing around the country. A man who was carrying the mail on a weekly route between a Missouri county seat town and a little postoffice out at a country store came dashing madly down the road in the direction of the town. A farmer who saw him coming and wondered at his great haste, halted him and said:

"What's the matter, Jimson? What's your great hurry this morning?"

"Hurry?" Jimson repeated, "why, don't you know the President is to be in town to-day?"

"Oh, I see," the farmer replied. "You want to get there in time to see him."

"It's not that that makes me hurry."

"It ain't?"

"No, sir! You may not know it, but this working for the government is a mighty ticklish business, and a man has got to be awful careful, or he'll lose his job. Now suppose the President gets off the train down there and asks about me and I ain't there, and he finds out I'm late. Don't you see, there'd be trouble right off, and I might be asked to resign?"

"I see."

"Yes, sir. So I ain't taking no chances. When the President steps off the train and asks the crowd, 'Where is Jimson?' I'm going to be there, so I can step right out and say: 'Here I am, sir.'"

Many a man looks like a statesman who is not guilty.

Garfield Tea purifies the blood and clears the complexion. Drink before retiring.

It's easier for a mother to train up her son in the way he should go than it is for her to prevent him from going some other woman's way a few years later.

Red Cross Rag Blue, much better, goes farther than liquid blue. Get from any good grocer.

If a man isn't sufficiently original to manufacture his own lies he should stick to the truth.

Quality—quantity—is something to consider in purchasing a remedy for constipation or as a laxative. How about Garfield Tea?

A man thinks a girl is perfectly proper who refuses to kiss him—because he can't think of any other reason why she should refuse.

A splendid and highly recommended remedy for tired, weak, inflamed eyes, and granulated eyelids, is Paxtine Antiseptic, at druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

No Wife's Cooking for Them.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—This paper says that rarely indeed is a wealthy Turk seen at his wife's dinner table.

Mr. Crimsonbeak—Yes, I understand the Turks live a long time.

One Way to Make Country Level.

The Newly Weds were driving along a very hilly road in Northern Missouri.

"Such horrid hills!" she exclaimed. "I think there are entirely too many of them."

"Either that," replied the man, "or here are only half enough."

Solid Ivory.

"Yes," confessed Mr. Dorkins, "it serves me right. I engaged the man to move our goods, and I forgot to ask him how much he was going to charge me for the job. If ever I do such a thing again, Maria, you can have my head for a football."

"It would be a good deal more profitable, John," said Mrs. Dorkins, "to cut it up into billiard balls."—Chicago Tribune.

Rather an Open Secret.

A very important citizen was drawn on a jury, a week or two ago, and I met him after he had been discharged. He seemed to think that he was entitled to be on the bench, at the very least.

"What was your verdict in that case?" I asked.

"The defendant was unanimously acquitted on the first ballot."

"Indeed? And how did you vote?"

"That, sir, is one of the sacred secrets of the jury room."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wanted to Know the Culprit.

The following story was told recently by Austin Haines to a party of friends he entertained at luncheon:

"Down in a little Florida town two negro families live in shanties about a stone's throw apart. They obtain their drinking water from a shallow open well located midway between the two houses. A fence which separates the two yards is built up to the well on both sides. Every evening after her day's work is done, it is the custom of one of the negro mammies to pick up buckets and go to the well for water. One day the owner of the property moved the fence back about ten feet from where it originally stood. That evening when Eliza started out with her pail she fixed her eye on the fence and made straight for it. Walking hurriedly along the beaten path, she plunged into the shallow well with a splash. Her screams brought immediate assistance, and as she climbed out and spied the fence ten feet away she indignantly exclaimed:

"'Now, who done moved dat well?'"

DUBIOUS

About What Her Husband Would Say.

A Mich. woman tried Postum because coffee disagreed with her and her husband. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

"I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to my housework—both of us using coffee all the time and not realizing it was harmful.

"One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right off the table and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it, and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was usually half sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum. She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done, she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavor and food quality." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRIVOLITIES

BRIMS OF ODD SHAPE

PECULIARITY OF HATS FOR MIDSUMMER WEAR.

Unfamiliar Lines Mark the Latest Millinery Designs—Elaboration in Trimmings Is Also a Marked Feature of the Season.

There are many large hats displayed for midsummer wear, and nearly all of them show some peculiarity of brim, either in upward lift or indentations or the manner of trimming. There are sudden widenings or narrowings also, giving the hat unfamiliar lines about the brim edge, but these shapes are nevertheless well balanced and becoming about the face. As a rule crowns are medium in size and dome-shaped, and there is departure from this so infrequently that the brim may be said to be the essential feature on which to center attention.

Besides the oddity of brims, it is to be noted that the newest hats show much elaboration in trimmings. Bands of net or chiffon, frills of lace, maline folds, many flowers, velvet ribbons and plumage, are all cleverly managed, so that the composition of a single hat includes three or perhaps four materials. The art of the trimmer is more evident in using this variety than in simply placing a tuft of plumes or a wreath of flowers on a graceful shape. Both simply trimmed and elaborately made hats are attractive, but the latter are more interesting.

As an instance of this successful use of several materials on one hat, one of the rolling brimmed French sailors in white chip may be cited. This shape, with small dome-shaped crown, was bound about the edge with black Brussels net which extends in a fold an inch and a half beyond the brim edge. Just inside this fold are two rows of val. lace about two inches wide. This is laid in narrow side plaits, and one row overlaps the other slightly. This inside row is finished with a close set wreath of tiny June roses. A standing spray of roses, or a bow of velvet ribbon could be used with this brim treatment for the addition of height with good effect, although the model had no trimming on the crown.

MEMORANDUM PAD IS GOOD

Will Be Found of Much Value in the Kitchen and Here Is Easy Way to Make It.

Perhaps in no room in the house is a memorandum pad more necessary than in the kitchen, and the one shown in the accompanying sketch has been specially designed for utilizing old half sheets of note paper.

The materials with which it can be made are almost a matter of choice, and art serge or art linen would do equally well. In size, it is nine inches in height and six inches in width, and a piece of stiff cardboard of these dimensions should be procured and smoothly covered with the material that has been selected.

At the top and bottom bands of broad elastic are sewn across, and under these bands a large number of sheets of notepaper may be slipped and held in their places, and when the uppermost one has been used, it can be pulled from under the elastic in a moment without disturbing the remaining sheets underneath.

The pad is edged all round with cord carried into three little loops at each corner.

SMALL COATS TO BE WORN

Fanciful Little Garments in Many Materials Are a Feature of the Season.

The most difficult part of the fitting of an overdrapery is in keeping the sides straight and slim in outline. The silt skirt is now accomplished with an over-effect.

There is every indication that the short, fanciful little coat in silk of one kind or another is to be an important item of the summer outfit this year. The oton, the bolero and a host of models more or less related to these two old friends are already in evidence, the less closely related contees showing a leaning toward abbreviated mantle or dolman lines, in keeping with the ubiquitous taffetas and their bouillonces, ruching and quillings.

On the whole, these little wraps are picturesque and piquant. Perhaps some of them are a trifle too odd, but that depends a great deal upon the woman who wears them.

To harden the gums and sweeten the breath rinse daily with a little tincture of myrrh.

GIRDLE SHOULD BE NARROW

Important Fact That the Woman of Middle Age Will Do Well to Remember.

If the middle aged woman insists upon wearing a girdle regardless of the length or width of her waist, she should have that girdle very narrow with long ends extending to the hem of her skirt. A certain well dressed middle aged woman who looks much slighter and taller than her true measurements affects girdles of satin or velvet ribbon of black or a deep shade of a color.

The belt portion of the accessory never is more than an inch broad and goes about her waist, closing under two long ends, which are drawn over the belt, but not knotted or bowed. And these ends are weighted invisibly, for that middle aged woman knows that to figures proportioned similarly to hers fluttering ribbons and frivolous little frillings belong not.

Present for Mother.

A very dainty basket of twigs may be made by children, quite easily, and if it be lined with moss and filled with sweet flowers it is just the most delightful present possible to set upon a table for mother to find.

If the twigs are not supple enough to bend, as you begin weaving them, dip them in water and then twist them round and round in the form of a neat. Prune any mossy branches or pretty twigs from the trees to make the neat basket, and if you prefer you may fill it, instead of flowers, with candies, fresh fruit or country eggs, and send it as a gift to a sick friend.

Fashion's Fancies

The mesh bag is still very popular.

Ruchings of old gold taffeta trim many of the new gowns.

The dead white hat is unlikely to be seen again this season.

Cotton corduroys are among the favorite washing fabrics.

Little black taffeta coats appear with gowns of contrasting color.

The cuirass effect on evening gowns is seen in many new designs.

Little frocks of spring muslins will be smart and pretty for summer wear.

Flower-like ornaments with bands of velvet are still popular for neck wear.

Accordion plaiting is among the possibilities for the summer's coming fashions.

With the lingerie dresses the handbags of lace or linen will be largely used.

Taffeta wraps, trimmed with ruching of the same material, are very popular.

Avoid wearing a light hat with a dark gown, if you would really be well dressed.

Evening Gown.

A charming evening gown by Agnes is a combination of black and white chiffon, says the New York Press. This is arranged over a foundation of white lace, which forms a panel in front. The bodice is cut in a low V both back and front. This is filled in with lace to a becoming height. The waist line of this gown has resumed its normal position. A brilliant touch of ruby velvet is knotted over a rhinestone buckle on the girdle.

Snappy Age.

The young man breezed into the old man's library.

"I met your daughter," he announced, "at a Fifth avenue reception. I want to marry her next Friday afternoon at 3:30. She's willing."

The old man turned to his card index.

"Which daughter?" he asked.

"It's Miss Ethel."

"All right," said the old man. "Make it 4:30 and I'll attend the wedding. I have an engagement at the other hour."

It was so ordered. This is a snappy age.—Pittsburg Post.

What Difference Did It Make?

Walking behind some colored girls, homeward bound from school, in a Missouri town once upon a time, a visitor overheard the following unblushing and giggling, rich voiced and sparkling-eyed assertion of individuality from one of them: "Yeh, she kep' me in, but I don' know inny mo' 'bout Caesar now 'n I did befo' han'. An' of she kep' me in twel Gabriel blows his horn I wudden know an' I wudden care. What diffunce it make to me whut ol' man Caesar done away yandeh befo' de waw!"—Evening Post.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the by no means least important discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many cures (we might almost say miraculous cures) should send addressed envelope (or FREE book to Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng.) and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy, "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by drug stores or mail 1$. Youngers (Co.) Beekman St., New York.
