Topic: "Moral Values and Idealisms."

All ideals of life and conduct, all ethical truths, are seen perfectly only when embodied in man himself. This is the principle of incarnation, of the revelation of God in man, of the Divine Word made flesh. So the human figure has power to fascinate the attention and enchain the heart of youth. So personalities carry at once the content and enforcement of moral truth. The high school period is the last chance for such spiritual effects, and probably the best. It is a valley of decision with respect to ideals and principles. The elementary pupil lacks the breadth of mental horizon to enable him either to comprehend or feel the essential greatness of the most educative figures. It should be impressed on every boy that every girl is somebode's sister, and that it is a sacred duty to afford her the same respect and protection which he would expect from another boy to his sister. The rule of conduct is chastity. Every infraction is a sin. Morality without it is rubbish. The early love of the adolescent is, perhaps, the purest and most ethetial experience, next to motherhood, that most human beings ever experience. No description can over-estimate it. It is a morning land full of bursting flowers, bathed in the sunshine and the dew, a pure and virgin soil where no foot has trod, where no dust and stain have come. It is a land where love is born amid the friendships, the smiles, the sports of youth. It lies at the threshold of our life, like a radiant paradise where the joy of living, of seeing, of worshipping reverently from afar, and almost without telling our love, suffices us. The formation of character is our earnest pursuits that pass over into habit and attitude and so form the essence of our morals. Unless youth be golden; age will be but dross. The more distinctly ethical aspect of social studies is the expansion of the realms of altruism in the mind of the adolescent youth. "Who is my neighbor?" is the insistent practical question in morals. In the abstract any one agrees that we should love each other, but most of us find that our charity not only begins at home, but never gets far away from its character. The first and most general task of the high school teacher is to lead youth not only to think all things in their individual clearness and their immediate relations—which is science—but also to get a vision of the wholeness of the world of life, and the radiations of the cause and effect out to their remote bearings in both space and time, and finally to feel that all things get their meaning and value from their relation to life of mankind, with all the possibilities, both tragic and glorious. We should hearten ourselves by yielding to the fancy of all good wishes fulfilled and all high ideals realized.

Mrs. Nesbitt of Fort Stanton was a pleasant high school visitor Tuesday. She reports that fine work is being done in the different departments of the high school.

Last Saturday night the Senior class gave their play at the Capitan high school auditorium. The play was well attended, and all agreed it was well mastered. It was without doubt the best play that was given by any class in years. It was given for the purpose of raising money to defray the expenses of the Senior class. The play was clean with wholesome comedies, full of fun and plenty of music. Receipts, $42.70; expenses, $10.82; balance, $31.88; balance from pie supper, $2.25; total amount on hand March 26, $34.13.

Town Pump and Watering Trough

The town pump of our boyhood has become an outlawed sinister menace, and now the livestock specialist of the New Mexico State College says that "the watering trough has outlived its usefulness, and is a menace as a spreader of disease among horses. Let's declare it a public nuisance and do away with it. * * * When horses are still used the owner can better afford to carry his own water bucket. * * * Because of the slight necessity of these public troughs and the great menace they offer the heath of horses they should be abolished."—N. M. Health Bulletin.

Vanderlip Offers Aid to Investigating Committee

Washington, D. C., March 24.—Frank A. Vanderlip, the financier, is willing that his reputation should suffer if it will direct attention to the need of a clean-up at Washington, he said, in a statenent Sunday night, commenting on his resignation from the Continental Can Company, at the request of J. Horace Harding, a director in that corporation.

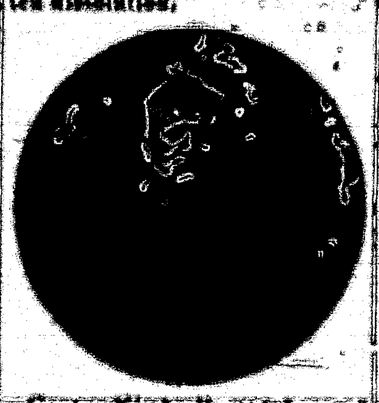
"The country will learn, before the present senatorial investigation in Washington is finished, that Wall Street, so long regarded by the public as a hot-bed of financial greed and corruption, is, by contrast with certain departments of the United States government, the heads of which were appointed in President Harding's administration, pure and undefiled," Vanderlip said.

"If reputations must suffer in order to draw attention to the immediate need of a complete clean-up in various departments, controlled by men left over from the Harding administration, then I am willing that my own reputation should suffer, as it has, because of what has been called my indiscretion."

Vanderlip has organized the Citizens' Federal Research Bureau and is here furnishing information obtained by his investigators to the Wheeler committee investigating the department of justice.

Old Citizen Called

News reached here Wednesday of the death of Mr. George Kimbrell of Picacho. Mr. Kimbrell, one of the oldest citizens of Lincoln county, both in age and residence, passed away Tuesday afternoon, March 25, at the home of his son, William R. Kimbrell. Mr. Kimbrell had been in poor health for some time, and the infirmities of age combined to hasten dissolution.



George Kimbrell was born at Huntsville, Arkansas, March 31, 1842, and was therefore within six days of his eighty-second birthday at the time of his death. He was with the Pike Column, at the age of 17, when it visited Colorado in 1859. He came to New Mexico the following year, landing at Las Vegas, and settled in Lincoln county in 1863, and made this his home until his death. He was married in 1864 to Miss Paulita Romero, who, several years ago, preceded her husband to the grave. Four children were born to the union, a daughter and three sons—Mrs. F. W. Brockway, John, Henry, and William R., the present probate judge.

Mr. Kimbrell was sheriff of this county about the time of the close of the "Lincoln County War," and the famous Billy the Kid, one of the principals of that war, surrendered to Mr. Kimbrell during the latter's term as sheriff. He served his community as justice of the peace for many years, and was also probate judge of the county for one term, a position now held by his son.

For over sixty years this estimable old citizen had made Lincoln county his home, and during all those long years of residence gave his best to the upbuilding of his community and his county, and was always active in every movement for the good of his neighbors and the advancement of humanity. His long life has ended, but the present generation will long remember the kind, generous old citizen, who had faced many early hardships and endured many trials, but who possessed a nature so open and even that the gentle hand of time made the evening of his life one of interesting reminiscences which left no mark of rancor, if, indeed, any ever existed; and that he met the last summons as he had every vicissitude of his long life, calmly and fearlessly. Our heads are bowed in sorrow in memory of this faithful old citizen who has passed to his rest.

Educational News

(By Mrs. Louise H. Coe)

The next State Eighth Grade Examination will be held April 15 and 16.

W. A. Neve, one of the High School teachers at Corona, was taken to El Paso last week to undergo an operation for appendicitis. We hope he will soon be able to resume his school duties.

The Capitan High School Senior play was staged with much success last Saturday evening. Much credit is due Miss Mary Harris who directed the comedy. Music was furnished by McNeff's Orchestra. It is hoped that the seniors will be able to defray the Commencement expenses from the proceeds of this play.

Miss Ruth McBride has resigned her position in the Corona High School to enter the University of Louisiana where she will receive her A. B. degree at the end of the summer term. The Corona board has been very fortunate in securing a teacher to fill this vacancy.

As a member of the Legislative Committee of the Educational Council, I desire that the people of Lincoln county who are interested in the school laws of New Mexico, submit to me in writing the objectionable sections of the School Code as they now appear, and make such sections write out the revised form which you recommend.

Woman's Club

The next regular meeting of the Carrizozo Woman's Club will be held at the home of Mrs. Paul Mayer, April 4.

Mrs. W. C. McDonald has charge of the program which promises to be instructive as well as entertaining. A large attendance is requested.

On the evening of April 28, the Woman's Club is arranging to give a sacred cantata at the Theatre building. The public is cordially invited.

School Certificates Valid

The School Code, namely Chapter 148 of the Laws of 1923, specifically provides for the issuance of certificates of indebtedness, at Section 810 and 906. It should be remembered that this Act was enacted subsequent to Bateman Act; these certificates are legal; they are recognized by law and their issuance approved by the Attorney General of the State, who also rules that they may be issued to the teachers in case funds cannot be borrowed by the districts.

It is a fact that these certificates must be retired out of the proceeds of this year's taxes.

J. E. Owens,
Educational Budget Auditor.

In accordance with the above, the Board of Education of this municipality issued certificates to teachers for their past month's salaries. These certificates have been taken up by local parties, and the authority given above would seem to settle not only their validity but their soundness.

Better Homes In America

The American home is the foundation of our national and individual well-being.—President Calvin Coolidge.

THE U. S. A.—Garden Nation of the World in 1930.

Better Homes in America.

Here are two slogans to conjure with. They cry on a vast army of Americans fighting for two national causes that are so inseparable as to be practically one and the same. More gardens create better homes. Better homes create more gardens. Therefore the "Garden Nation of 1930" will have "Better Homes." So the organized champions are to be congratulated they are the shock troops of one army and active belligerents in the other.

The first attack in force in the 1926 campaign will be made April 19-26, the second annual National Garden week.

[illegible] will be made May [illegible], the third Better Homes in America Demonstration week.

National Garden week is conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with a nation-wide membership of [illegible]. It is directed by Mrs. John D. Sherman, chairman of the department of applied education, who successfully directed the 1925 campaign and served during the war as special assistant director of the United States School Garden Army and a director of the National War Garden commission. This may be her last appearance in the role, as Colorado has announced that it will nominate her for the presidency at the June convention of the General Federation, to succeed Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, whose term then expires.

The General Federation has the cooperation of Better Homes in America, of the United States Department of the Interior through the bureau of education, and of the United States Department of Agriculture through the extension service, the forest service and the bureau of plant industry. It has the approval and good wishes of official Washington.

President Coolidge writes Mrs. Sherman:

National Garden week seems now to be well on the way to establishment as a fixed national affair, and I hope this year's observation of it will strengthen its position in the public interest and activities.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover writes Mrs. Sherman:

It adds to our appreciation and understanding of life. It may be self-expression in the individual and in the community and it may become an ennobling avocation and form of public service.

April 19-26 will not synchronize with actual garden-making in all localities of the United States, but the program of activities is so large that every community can feature, as Mrs. Sherman puts it, "some of the many phases of gardening in its relation to the home and the life of the community in terms of health, education and property and from the viewpoint of utility and beauty." The program in detail would [illegible] everything from landscape gardening to the humble cottage; from tree planting to lectures by radio; from the Sunday sermon to the Saturday children's pageants.

BETTER HOMES IN AMERICA

The Better Homes in America movement was begun in 1922 by Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the Delineator, and an advisory council of which Calvin Coolidge was honorary head and Herbert Hoover chairman. It quickly assumed such national importance that the magazine, which had provided generous financial support, withdrew from all connection with it to allow it to be taken over by a permanent educational, noncommercial organization, incorporated in Delaware as a public service corporation, with headquarters in Washington.

President Coolidge remains chairman of the advisory council, which includes Secretaries Hoover, Work and Davis and twenty-five other men and women of national importance, such as James H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, United States surgeon general; Livingston Farrand, American Child Health association; Dr Lee K. Frankel, chairman National Health council; Mrs. John Lyons, president National Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. W. C. Martin, chairman economic division, Federation of Farm and Home Bureaus; Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy; John Barton Payne, head of the American [illegible] National Housing association; Mrs. Winter, Mrs. Meloney and Mrs. Sherman.

Secretary Hoover is president of the board of trustees. The executive director is James Ford, associate professor of social ethics at Harvard, who has made a study of housing problems and has been granted leave of absence for this work. The other trustees are Miss Grace Abbott, chief, United States children's bureau; Don Barber and Edwin H. Brown, fellows of the American Institute of Architects; John M. Gries, chief, division of building and housing, United States Department of Commerce; Christian A. Herter, George W. Wilder, Mrs. Meloney and Mrs. Sherman.

Cooperation by the many organizations in the advisory council will not be perfunctory. The General Federation of Women's Clubs, for example, has reaffirmed, through resolution of its board of directors, its support of the reorganized movement and Mrs. Sherman has sent out a general letter to the presidents of the clubs in the General Federation, asking their active cooperation in organizing local Better Homes demonstrations.

The general plan is for a community to buy, rent, or build a house, which is then equipped as an educational exhibit of what a home should be. Public demonstration is made of house and contents and of methods to make home life attractive.

Last year Port Huron, Mich., took the first prize of $500. Boy and girl students in civics classes of the Washington junior high school planned, built, equipped and demonstrated a five-room house, suitable for an industrial worker. Seventy-nine organizations participated and 5,000 persons visited the house, which cost $6,000 and was sold for $6,000.

The aims of Better Homes in America are comprehensive, covering every phase of homemaking. The guidebook for 1926 contains instructions and programs.

President Coolidge writes Secretary Hoover:

I count it a happy obligation to remain chairman of the advisory council.

Secretary Hoover, in a foreword in the guidebook, says:

A great need is apparent for well-directed concerted efforts to work out a program from the point of view of the [illegible]

THE USEFUL MARSHMALLOW

A half-pound of marshmallows kept on hand for emergency dishes will be found a most valuable addition to the supplies.

A meringue with a few marshmallows cut in halves or quarters scattered over the top is much improved. Brown as usual and find a meringue with a flavor and appearance quite different from the ordinary.

Marshmallow Frosting.—Put the unbeaten white of an egg, seven-eighths of a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of water in the double boiler. Have the water underneath rapidly boiling and with a Dover egg beater begin to beat; after seven minutes add twelve marshmallows, remove from the heat and beat until the mixture is smooth and cool enough to hold its shape.

The flavor and appearance of many otherwise ordinary dishes is enhanced by a few marshmallows. Drop one on top of the cupful of cocoa when short of whipped cream or into a hot cup of coffee a marshmallow is an addition.

An apple pie prepared with a baked shell, filled with strained apple sauce sweetened and flavored, then covered with marshmallows and browned in the oven makes a delicious dessert.

Gingerbread or sponge cake cut while hot and filled with marshmallow filling placed in the oven until melted, makes another delicious dessert.

Chocolate and cornstarch pudding are both improved by adding a handful of marshmallows. Chocolate pie covered with marshmallows instead of a meringue is especially nice.

Fudge, cream candy, boiled frosting, stay creamy and moist much longer if a few marshmallows are added to them. Drop them into the hot mixture and beat as usual; if the marshmallows are fresh they will melt at once.

Plain cookies, vanilla wafers, saltines or crackers are transformed into toothsome little cakes by topping with a marshmallow and browning in the oven.

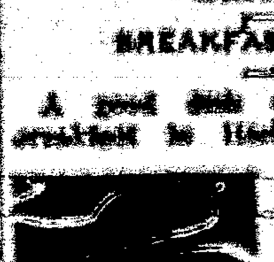
Mix marshmallows in the salad dressing, finely cut up and added with the whipped cream. It adds greatly to a fruit salad. If mixed with fresh fruit and allowed to stand several hours to soften, the flavor is much improved.

A nice dessert is a plain cake frosted with marshmallow frosting then covered with melted chocolate.

To smile at trials which fret and fray,
And not to murmur nor to hope—
The test of greatness is the way
One meets the eternal every day.
—Edmund Vance Cook.

BREAKFAST DISHES

A good dish of oatmeal is a breakfast in itself when properly cooked. Soak it overnight and then early in the morning put it on to cook in a double boiler set deep in boiling water. Keep this water boiling for two hours or more. Salt lightly, uncover and boil. When thus prepared and served with top milk, it is a vastly different dish from the cereal usually served as first course at the family table.



Popovers.—Beat two eggs well, add seven-eighths of a cupful of milk and one cupful of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat well and bake in deep granite popover pans until puffed and brown.

Another nice hot breakfast bread is:

Oat and Cornmeal Muffins.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of shortening in one cupful of hot cooked oatmeal; add one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful [illegible] with three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Mix all thoroughly. Mix and sift together two cupfuls of cornmeal, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, and stir into the first mixture; bake in a hot oven in a well-greased muffin pan about twenty-five minutes.

Scrapple.—This old-fashioned breakfast dish is always one which will be welcomed. Prepare a stew of meat—a combination of pork and beef is good. Cook until tender. Save the broth and chop the meat. Cook cornmeal mush using the broth for part of the liquid, adding salt and pepper to season. When well cooked and ready to mold stir in the chopped meat and [illegible] into a mold which has been rinsed in cold water. Small bread pans make nice slices. Slice when cold and fry in butter until well browned on both sides.

Tomato Toast.—Toast bread by browning in a dripping pan in the oven until hot. Butter well and pour over well-seasoned hot tomato. Tomato soup may be used if fresh or canned tomatoes are not at hand. Set in the oven until the tomato is all absorbed and serve very hot.

King of Denmark "Saved" Movie Actress at Sea

The king of Denmark, who rescued Queen Alexandrine recently when the ice on the sound broke under her feet and she was waist deep in water, once played the leading part in a "spoof" rescue.

He was enjoying a cruise off the Danish coast in the royal yacht Rita, when he heard loud firing and ordered the yacht to turn at full speed in the direction of the sound. He soon came within range of an appalling spectacle.

From the deck of a steamer some men were firing on a rowing boat, and, as the Rita approached, a girl flung herself from the boat. A motor-launch was promptly lowered from the yacht, aboard which the drowning girl was hauled by King Christian himself. His majesty then espied in the offing a huge camera, and realized he had been acting for the benefit of a cinematograph operator. He was angry at first, but calmed down on seeing the humor of the situation.—Manchester Guardian.

The Apple of Discord was a golden fruit bearing the inscription "For the fairest," which was thrown by Eris (or Discord) into the midst of the company at the marriage of Peleus and Thetis. The prize was claimed by Juno, Minerva and Venus, and was awarded to Venus by Paris, who was called in to make the award. The decision brought about the Trojan war.

Odd Race Lives in Underground Caves

Troglodytes of North Africa Antedate the Arabs.

London.—A strange people, living in holes in the ground, descendants of a race so far antedating the Arabs in North Africa that its origin is lost in antiquity were found by Horace D. Ashton, a fellow of the Royal Geographical society and a member of the Explorers' club, during his travels a year ago into the unfrequented localities of Africa a few hundred miles south of the Mediterranean coast. Mr. Ashton calls these people the Troglodytes, a word meaning cave dwellers, of Southern Tunisia. Their headquarters is in a section 200 miles south of the site of ancient Carthage, in the hills known as the Matmata plateau.

"There are practically 30,000 of these cave dwellers," says Mr. Ashton in describing some of their peculiarities in the travel bulletin issued by the French government tourist office at 342 Madison avenue. "No doubt, 2,000 years ago they were living a pastoral life in tents at the foothills, but the armies of the Caesars, after conquering Carthage, swept southward menaced them so that they took refuge in the rocky hilltops, where they dug themselves in between layers of rock.

"Today most of them live just as the invaders left them, as these refuge caves solved a great problem in house construction in a place where there is practically no wood. Utilizing one stratum of hard rock as a floor and the one above as a ceiling, they dig chambers into the comparatively soft marl between, whose dimensions are about 30 feet long, 8 feet wide and with ceilings forming a perfect arch 8 feet high, the whole finished with a crude cement and then whitewashed."

No Furniture in Homes.

Many of the houses, according to Mr. Ashton, contain several chambers, some opening from the main room, and often with independent entrances, except in the case of the harems, or women's quarters. Furniture is virtually absent. The bed is really a platform or shelf at the far end of the room, about three feet above the level of the floor. In only one house did Mr. Ashton see a table, and that was in the home of Sheik Mohammed Lafet of Dairat. He had a plain table, upon which were his papers and some photographs sent by former visitors.

Along the side walls of the occupied rooms are divans, upon which the occupants sit, as there are no chairs. In the women's quarters will be found bowls and earthen bowls in which the native dishes are prepared. There are also many large jars filled with olive oil, dates, figs and other staple foods.

"In the various towns are usually dug into the conical hills, composed of a succession of strata sometimes rising to a height of 1,000 feet," says Mr. Ashton, "the streets are arranged like terraces or large steps, culminating in a citadel on the summit, which served as a storehouse and place of refuge in the frequent wars which prevailed until the coming of the pacifying French influence. Looking out from one of these citadels toward the opposite mountains, the view greatly resembles that of the region of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, as the erosion and coloring are much the same.

Cave Town of Matmata.

"Sixty miles south of the cave town of Medenine is the strangest place of all, that of Matmata. While the inhabitants appear to be of similar race, their houses are great wells, which dot the valley as far as the eye can see. Surrounded on all sides by low mountains, on top of the loftiest of which can be seen their ancient fortresses and citadels, the valley of Matmata covers more than three square miles. It presents to the eye of the stranger a most astonishing sight, for the whole floor of the valley is dotted with the openings of large circular wells, about 60 or 70 feet in diameter, open to the sky and about 30 feet deep.

"In all the valley there are only three buildings, and they have only recently been built by the French—a school, a mosque and a market. Yet in this valley are said to dwell more than 12,000 souls without a single tent or house as we know the word.

"Their strange subterranean homes are entered through dark, sloping tunnels, usually branching off into small stables on the way, and opening finally into a circular courtyard, 30 feet below the level, around the vertical sides of which are dug the rooms of the occupants.

"Some of these dwellings are quite spacious, often consisting of a series of wells, entered from the first by connecting passages. These wells are the harems or dwellings of married sons or relatives. Here in Matmata there has sprung up of necessity a distinct code of etiquette, which forbids the approach of any one to the upper edge of one of these wells, for these people are all Moslems and are extremely fanatical, guarding very strictly their women from the gaze of all men."

Faithful Dog Dies After Master's Death

Manhattan, Kan.—Old Sport, probably the most famous "common everyday" mongrel dog in Kansas, is dead.

Old sport became known as the faithful servant of Verne Sandell, a crippled Manhattan boy, whose plucky fight to earn his own living despite the fact he was born a hopeless cripple was the subject of "human interest" stories in a number of newspapers and magazines. The dog furnished motive power for his master, drawing a small wagon in which Verne rode.

After his master's death, two years ago, Sport was disconsolate and put in his time guarding the few possessions Verne left. Finally he "just died."

Washington.—A new experimental fur farm, stocked in part with unscented skunks, has just been established by the United States biological survey on a 30-acre tract of wooded land in Greenfield township, Saratoga county, New York. F. G. Ashbrook of the bureau's division of economic investigations, has charge of the transfer of the animals from the former and more [illegible] site at Keeseville.

Present plans call for a series of modern pens to accommodate silver, black and red foxes, martens, minks, fishers and skunks. The breeding habits of these fur-bearers will be studied and methods of combating disease among them will be worked out.

At Keeseville last year martens were successfully bred in captivity for the first time. This work will be continued at the new site and efforts will be made to discover how to breed the fisher, another furbearer for animal which has hitherto baffled the commercial raiser.

Experiments in fighting diseases such as distemper and hookworm, will be carried forward. Hookworm is one of the most prevalent diseases among captive foxes, and the bureau has worked out an effective means of killing the parasites which produce it by use of the chemical, carbon tetrachloride.

Much trouble was formerly had in administering this remedy, however, as the capsules in which it was given were often broken in the mouths of the foxes, with the result that the carbon tetrachloride often went down their windpipes and suffocated them. Recently the investigators found that by use of a more gelatinous capsule which would mash without breaking this trouble could be largely prevented. Methods of artificial respiration, similar to those used to revive an apparently drowned man, were also worked out by which the accidentally gassed foxes could be resuscitated.

The skunks raised on the farm have all had their scent sacs removed. This gland operation does not injure the breeding or fur value of these animals which have been held in such bad odor, but makes them more agreeable from an olfactory standpoint.

CALIFORNIA PLANS TO SAVE FORESTS BY REPLANTING

More Than 700 Acres of Redwoods Replaced.

San Francisco.—California's redwood trees, made famous by many writers in song and story, are to be saved!

Replanting of cutover forest land is the method which has been adopted to keep the giants of the forest safe from the ravages of commerce.

While individuals and groups throughout England and Scotland have made the well known [illegible] plans to save the redwoods, a report has made public by the California Redwood association is the beginning of any great accomplishment. [illegible], 1923, more than 700 acres have been replanted in redwoods by this association.

[illegible] cutover lands means the famous redwoods will never vanish, as has been feared.

Next winter, the association announces, 3,000 acres will be replanted in redwood seedlings, 5,000 acres will be covered in the following year, and the succeeding winter 10,000 acres will be planted.

Two States Double Wealth in Ten Years

Washington.—The wealth of Michigan and Maine more than doubled in the decade from 1912 to 1922, but Maine's per capita wealth showed a larger increase than that of Michigan. Statistics for these states were issued by the census bureau.

Michigan's wealth at the close of 1922 was $11,340,[illegible], an increase of 116.7 per cent over 1912. The per capita wealth was $2,[illegible], an increase of 90.5 per cent.

Maine's wealth was $2,[illegible], an increase of 100.1 per cent. The per capita wealth was $2,[illegible], an increase of 4.1 per cent.

GOOD ROADS

ASK MOTORISTS TO PAY FOR HIGHWAYS

(By ROY D. CHAPIN, Chairman Highways Committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.)

Highway engineers of the United States have carried their task forward to a point where the public can now obtain a visual demonstration of results in every state in the Union. At the end of 1918 there were 12.5 miles of completed federal aid projects in the country. Since then projects amounting to 29,772 miles have been completed, 15,318 miles are under construction, and an additional 6,000 miles have been approved for construction.

Virtually all of this work has been done on those main highways which constitute the selected federal aid system of 7 per cent of the highways of the country, and yet the funds so expended from both federal and state sources are less than one-half of annual expenditures made for rural highway purposes.

The other funds have been expended, first, under state jurisdiction on the secondary roads, and, second, under county and local supervision, on the county and purely local roads.

The net result is that as we swing into 1924 there are approximately 480,000 miles of highways in the United States on which there has been some degree of improvement from those of sand-clay up to the heaviest and most durable roads known to modern engineering. The total mileage of all types of roads in the country is 2,941,294.

This achievement, which gives us a mileage of improved roads almost four times as great as all of the roads in the United Kingdom, has been attained just in time to take care of the swelling army of motor car drivers and it will be only by a continuation of the present program for the next ten years that we can finally arrive at a completed system approximating the needs of highway traffic.

The principal problem to the student of highway transport is that of how an undertaking of this size is to be financed, requiring as it does, and will for a decade, an annual appropriation of at least $1,000,000,000 from national, state and local sources.

The answer has been obtained, in part, through conferences between officials of the American Association of State Highway Officials, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Investment Bankers of America and the bureau of public roads.

The chief points were that all who benefit from highway construction should join in paying for them, that maintenance of the interstate and state systems is justifiably chargeable against the motor user, that highway expenditures should be based upon budgets and should not be out of line with other public needs, and finally that depending upon the comparative stage of the highway program, long term bond issues should be voted to provide for immediate construction of the principal systems which must inevitably cost the public less to build and maintain than to go without.

Records Give Wisconsin Longest Concrete Road

Where are the longest continuous stretches of concrete roads?

A recent search of highway records gives Wisconsin the honor with 83 miles. The contestants are from every section of the country and show how the good-roads movement is being carried out.

Miles of Paved Streets in American Cities Big

If the paved streets of 200 leading American cities—which in the first national census of city paving ever made in this country have reported officially their paving yardages last year to the Asphalt association in New York—were merged in a single great highway eighteen feet wide that highway would more than twice encircle the globe. The survey, the results of which have just been announced, shows that, with an average of eighteen feet of width, there are 56,914.5 miles of paved streets in American cities of 10,000 or more population. This mileage by far exceeds that of almost every other country in the world.

Benefits of Dragging

What a difference it makes in frozen roads if they are dragged before the cold wave comes! It is evident in some of our own highways here in the county, says the Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel. Some that were dragged during the recent rains are now regular boulevards. Others that were not are full of ruts and while passable, practically tear a car to pieces. The money spent in dragging those roads has paid the taxpayers many times over on wear and tear on their vehicles.

Clean Dirty Corners

There has been no evidence adduced showing that a member of congress bought oil stocks at a time when it was possible to use advance knowledge, gained by reason of his official position, to make personal profits. Of course, it is hardly necessary to say that millions of good citizens buy oil stocks—mostly for investment, though many are poor investments—and that a man has just as much right to buy an interest in an oil company as to buy an interest in a grocery store or a corner lot. If we keep our hats on straight we will find that the few dirty corners of the administration are such as can be cleaned out by the same old housecleaner that has had the job to do off and on for a century and a quarter—the Democratic party, which, from the time of Jefferson, has controlled the government about one-half the time against all others.

Former Secretary Fall is appropriately identified as "Apples" in the code messages sent by one of McLean's employes. It was an apple, it will be recalled, that caused the first fall.

Bear in mind that this is the administration that gave millions of the people's wealth to private exploiters and then wanted to cut the surtaxes on the incomes which these exploiters derived from their spoils.

The administration has granted an increase of the tariff on wheat from 30 to 42 cents a bushel. In other words, wheat growers who can't collect the 30 cents are to be permitted to collect the 42 cents on the same terms.

The Whiskey Ring in the Grant administration and the Star Route Frauds in the Garfield-Arthur administration were followed by the defeat of the party responsible for them. Is there room for doubt that the present oily administration will not share the same fate?

The State Republican Convention endorsed Coolidge and Burnam and approved the beans. It was an attempted feat of equestrianism calculated to incite the imagination—an imagination so vivid that it believes a body may travel in opposite directions at the same time.

The Republican political bunco game is to fool the farmer into believing that the tariff will increase the prices of the things he sells, when every economist worthy of the name has told him and shown him time and again that products sold in the world market are unaffected by the tariff one way or the other.

There is one salutary thing that may be said of the Republican administration—which was quite sensational on its part—and will be instrumental in the enlightenment of the men and women voters at the coming November elections. The Teapot Dome [illegible] the glare thrown light on the manner in which individual and corporate plunderers got what they wanted when the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill was under consideration.

Inasmuch as Lieut. Col. Roosevelt is scheduled to be a delegate to the Republican National Convention in the interest of Mr. Coolidge, it would perhaps be embarrassing to the President to ask for his resignation. But the new Secretary of the Navy presumably would not be affected by any matter of self-interest and could and should hand Mr. Roosevelt his hat and bid him be on his way, unless the son of a distinguished father should wisely decide to follow Secretary Denby's example.

San Patricio Items

By [illegible]

St. Patrick, patron saint of Ireland, and also of San Patricio, New Mexico, had his festival celebrated here this year by a German Padre, preaching in English to a Spanish-speaking congregation.

Business in the justice court was active during the past week, and the school fund is ten dollars to the good in consequence, and another case for the grand jury to investigate.

Antonio Sanches, a prominent farm owner of this valley, leaves for Arizona in a few days seeking work. Unfavorable conditions and lack of market for farm produce, such as is generally raised by the native farmer, makes this move imperative.

A. W. Roberts and son, J. D., having disposed of their farm at this place, expect to leave soon for other fields. We may, with confidence, expect to see them back within two years. Mr. Laurence will accompany them.

Mr. A. S. Sloane, who a few years ago made a success of the farming game in this valley, has returned after the usual two years absence, and will farm the Rose school section this year.

The Hondo high school received another pupil this week in the person of Albert Sloan. He entered the tenth grade. Pupils have been coming in intermittently all winter.

Petitions are to be submitted to the board of county commissioners from San Patricio, Glencoe, Tinnie, Hondo and Picacho, asking for an election on the proposition of having a Union High School District, embracing the districts mentioned, with Hondo as the location of the school.

Mr. Otto Hedgecoxe, owner of the Spring Ranch, seven miles below Lincoln, and a breeder of fine Hereford cattle, will plant ten acres of this historic old farm to cotton this season.

Herbert H. Neel, who put the upper Ruidoso on the map during the past two seasons as the banner cabbage-producing country, has leased the Jim Reeves farm this season and will engage extensively in growing cabbage, cauliflower and celery, all of which have been grown with success at this place.

Winter's cold and frosty breath was angrily blown into the smiling face of Spring early this week, but without apparent injury to fruit buds. About two or three inches of snow fell in the valley and considerable more in the mountains, adding greatly to the prospects for a favorable season.

Most of the goat raisers have shorn their flocks and are now hauling the mohair to market at Roswell. Notwithstanding the inclement weather at shearing time, very small losses are reported.

Postmaster John C. West, who has been quite ill for several weeks, is now able to attend to business part of the time.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Sensational Evidence Heard by the Daugherty Investigation Committee.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HARRY DAUGHERTY, still attorney general of the United States despite the predictions of Washington's expert guessers, is now undergoing formal investigation as to his official conduct by the senate committee appointed for that purpose. Brookhart of Iowa is the chairman and Wheeler of Montana the "prosecutor," while Daugherty is represented by former Senator Chamberlain and Paul Howland.

Miss Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jesse Smith, the attorney general's confidential aid who committed suicide last May, was the first witness, and she gave a lot of sensational testimony which involved Daugherty in many questionable transactions. Miss Stinson said Smith, after their divorce, supported her and confided in her constantly. Among the important statements she made on the first day of the hearing were:

That Smith told her that "we," meaning, she insists, Smith, Daugherty and perhaps others, were involved in a deal to sell rights to exhibit Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures, which Smith expected to yield a profit of $180,000. The transportation of fight pictures in interstate commerce is forbidden by law.

That Smith and Daugherty came into possession of a considerable amount of White Motor Car company stock certificates in blank, twenty-five shares of which she sold "quickly and quietly" on instructions from Smith, and that Smith told her the stock cost "us" nothing.

That Smith and Daugherty came into the possession of shares of Pure Oil company stock, which Smith likewise said cost "us" nothing.

That Smith had four "blind" stock brokerage accounts in the firm of Samuel Ungerleider & Co. at Columbus, through which he did considerable speculation.

That once when she urged Smith to stop speculating because he was losing money, he told her he had just deposited $[illegible] of "eastern money" in the bank of Mal Daugherty, brother of the attorney general, in Washington Courthouse, to protect his (Smith's) losses.

That Smith told her about a mysterious "green house" in K street, near the Department of Justice, where "they" met to discuss their deals.

That Daugherty and Smith were inseparable in all these transactions and that Smith never acted without the full knowledge and authority of the attorney general.

That Smith disliked the life of intrigue he led in Washington, but said he would stick it out, because of his friendship for Daugherty and that, prior to his suicide, he lived in constant fear of "being closed down upon."

Secretary Mellon's name was brought into the Daugherty investigation by Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice agent, who said that for President Harding he investigated matters connected with "certain permits" having to do with violations of the Volstead act.

"I gave Captain Scaife thousands of dollars to catch him" (Mellon), Means testified. Scaife was formerly a Department of Justice investigator who was active in pressing for investigation of air craft scandals.

Also at President Harding's request, Means testified, he investigated Senator Caraway, and also Senator LaFollette after the latter had been agitating investigation of the Teapot Dome scandal.

Means testified that in February, 1922, in the old Bellevue Hotel in Washington he received from "a Jap representing Mitsui and Company" $100,000 to stop government prosecution in the Standard Aircraft case and that he turned the money over to the late Jess Smith, Attorney General Daugherty's [illegible] and friend.

EDWARD B. McLEAN, the Washington newspaper publisher, appeared before the Teapot Dome committee and admitted that at Fall's request he had previously misrepresented the circumstances of the famous $100,000 loan. His testimony may be thus summarized:

Fall, in November, 1921, asked him for a loan of $100,000 to buy a ranch. He gave Fall two checks for this amount, but Fall returned them uncashed. Two years later, in December, 1923, Fall, a sick man under investigation, called McLean to Atlantic City and asked him to make a public statement to the effect that he had furnished the $100,000, making it appear that the checks had actually been cashed. He agreed on Fall's assurance that he had not obtained the money from Sinclair or from any connection with the Teapot Dome. Later, when disclosures before the senate committee began to arouse his suspicions he told Fall he was going to tell the truth and did so to Senator Walsh when Walsh went to Miami in January. He agreed it would have been better for all concerned if the truth had been told in the beginning.

McLean's story minimized the importance of the mass of telegrams that passed between Washington and his place in Palm Beach, and he scoffed at the rumor of a million dollar slush fund.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin resigned as chairman and member of the oil lease investigating committee because of ill health. He was succeeded by Senator Ladd of North Dakota, one of the LaFollette group.

OUT in Cheyenne, Wyo., the government's fight for the annulment of the Teapot Dome lease to Sinclair and the Mammoth Oil company was started before Federal District Judge T. Blake Kennedy. Atlee Pomerene and Owen G. Roberts were there for the government, and Sinclair was on hand with his attorneys, ready, he declared, to fight the government's suit "from hell to breakfast." It may be added that Edward Doheny also says he is prepared to defend his rights in any action the government may bring to cancel oil leases held by him.

SINCE the attorney general declined to give the house of representatives any information concerning the criminal charges said to have been made against two congressmen before a Chicago grand jury, the house decided to investigate the matter and a committee of five, headed by Theodore E. Burton of Ohio was named. Representatives Langley of Kentucky and Zihlman of Maryland, who admit they have been told they are the two men involved, have vehemently denied any wrongdoing and have demanded an inquiry.

WITH all the investigations undertaken and contemplated by congress and all the time it is wasting in sterile partisan debate, one wonders why it does not order an inquiry into its own neglect of pressing public business. There are those, too, who think there might well be an investigation of the influences that induced the house to pass, last week, the bill authorizing acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals. McKenzie of Illinois introduced the measure and it was adopted by a vote of 227 to 142, party lines being disregarded. Under the terms of the bill Ford will obtain for $5,000,000 properties that cost nearly $[illegible]; he has the right to lease dams 2 and 3 at Muscle Shoals and adjacent power stations for 100 years for a total rental of nearly $[illegible]; the government is to replace the Gorgas steam power plant for not more than the $[illegible], for which it sold it to the Alabama Power company, and sell it to Ford along with nitrate plants 1 and 2 and the Waco quarry. It is not necessary to give other features of the bill, but it may be stated that the offer of a group of southern power companies, submitted in the Wall bill, was in the opinion of competent authorities much more generous. Also there is before congress a measure for the starting of a great superpower project in which Muscle Shoals would be a vital link, and many eminent engineers and industrial economists are convinced that superpower development is to be the greatest thing in the country's near future.

There is no intimation of undue [illegible] adoption of the Ford offer, but the automobile magnate seems to have our legislators "buffaloed" politically.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE sent a special message to congress last week urging it lay aside all other business and authorize a 25 per cent reduction in 1923 income taxes before March 15, the last day for the filing of schedules. He said the people expected it and it would benefit all elements. Opposition appeared at once, and Representative Longworth told the President there was not the slightest chance of passing the emergency resolution. The Democrats and insurgent Republicans accused Mr. Coolidge of playing politics. On all sides, however, it was agreed that the general tax bill, now being debated in the senate, will carry the 25 per cent retroactive reduction.

THE new soldiers' bonus bill, providing paid up life insurance policies, was completed by the house committee. The policies are to be twenty-year endowment and valued on the basis of length of service, with $1 allowed for each day of home service and $1.25 for each day of overseas service, and to the total will be added 25 per cent. Provision is made for dependents and for cash payments to veterans not entitled to more than $50. The total cost of the bill, it is estimated, would be about $2,000,000,000, and not more than $60,000,000 would have to be expended by the government in any one year.

FEDERAL JUDGE KENYON having declined the navy portfolio, President Coolidge offered the position to Curtis D. Wilbur, chief justice of the California Supreme court, and that gentleman accepted it by wire, saying he would go to Washington as soon as the appointment was confirmed by the senate.

Justice Wilbur was born in Boonesboro, Ia., in 1867 and was educated in the public schools there and in Jamestown, N. D. He was graduated from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis in 1888. Later he studied law and began practice in Los Angeles. For many years he has been regarded as one of the leading lawyers and jurists of California, and is known especially for his work in behalf of child welfare. He is a Congregationalist and a prominent Sunday school worker. Judge Wilbur's brother, Dr. Ray L. Wilbur, is president of Stanford university.

EDWIN DENBY'S retirement from the position of secretary of the navy was accomplished with dignity on his part and accompanied by hearty expressions of esteem by his associates and personal friends. Before he left his office he was sworn in as a major in the marine reserve corps in the presence of many high officers of the navy and marines, and as he took the oath the marine band outside played the corps march, "Semper Fidelis."

BANKERS of New York and neighboring cities have gone to the rescue of the French franc by establishing a banking credit of not less than $100,000,000 in favor of the Bank of France, acting for the French government. The loan will be used to stabilize French exchange and for other purposes, and is so well secured by gold held in the vaults of the Bank of France that the interest rate is said to be relatively low. When the loan was announced there was a sharp rally in francs on the exchanges, and speculators began to wail. Poincare was still having trouble in forcing his tax increase measure through the senate.

There were disturbing rumors from Paris that a military coup d'etat was being hatched and that the government was aware of it and was ready to proclaim a state of siege or martial law.

The German government also was meeting resistance to its tax regulations and other emergency ordinances, and the Socialists were so determined that President Ebert dissolved the reichstag on Thursday. Ebert has told his friends that he will [illegible] the elections in May.

GREECE is now added to the nations that have recognized the Russian soviet government. The Greek cabinet under [illegible] having resigned, a new ministry has been [illegible].

At a recent meeting of the Albuquerque Rotary Club over $1,100 was raised by the members of the organization to assist in getting the War Mothers' Memorial for Albuquerque.

Thomas V. Truder has announced in Las Vegas his resignation from the assistant district attorney's office to become effective next June. Mr. Truder became assistant district attorney on Jan. 1, 1920.

A special election is to be held in Carlsbad, April 7, to vote on an issue of $90,000 school bonds. Most of the citizens of the district are in favor of the bonds and it is believed that they will carry by a strong majority.

Farmers in the vicinity of Springer, under the ditch system, are making plans to raise a large acreage of head lettuce this season and experts from California will assist in the work. It is estimated that a car load can be produced to the acre.

Governor Hinkle has set out a half dozen pecan trees on the grounds at the executive mansion. These are believed to be the first pecan trees to be planted in Santa Fe. They have thrived in Roswell and the governor believes they will do well here.

Joe W. Taylor, president, was elected manager of the Elephant Butte Irrigation district, at a big meeting held at Las Cruces last week. The work of the district offices has increased so that plans are being made to double the size and add to the force.

The Commercial Agriculture Loan Company, recently organized by the officers and directors of the State Bank of Commerce of Clayton, is now ready to function and has a capital of $100,000 available. The new institution will be in charge of H. F. Rixey, president of the State Bank.

A big meeting of the business men and other residents of Carrizozo was held the last week when a new organization was launched to be known as the Carrizozo Commercial Club. The club starts off with a live membership and a feature of the program for the coming summer will be the boosting of road building in this section of the state.

According to reports received in Aztec, attorneys for Sidney Weil have filed notice of their intention to build the Santa Fe & Northwestern railway into the San Juan valley at an early date. Steps are now being taken to secure the right of way and charter and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The general contractor has been instructed to increase the force of men and an additional 100 teams will be placed on the job at once.

A shipment of high grade ore carrying gold value was made from the Calumet mine of the Calumet-New Mexico company last week. This ore is being taken from a vein eight to ten inches in width at a distance of thirty feet from the surface. The Calumet mine is located a mile and a half this side of Pinos Altos and between the Langston, famous for its pockets of gold, and the Silver Cell mine from which a 110-pound silver nugget was taken.

Seventeen federal aid highway projects were completed during the last fiscal year with a total mileage of 188.56 and at a cost of $891,502.21, of which the state paid $[illegible], according to the state highway engineer, James A. French. This brought the total mileage constructed in New Mexico since the inauguration of federal aid up to [illegible]. Construction now under way or planned for this year indicates an appreciably greater mileage to be finished during the current fiscal year.

Albuquerque can go ahead with the issuance of $[illegible] for the building of a public library, but not with the issuance of $75,000 more for city parks, under a decision by the Supreme Court in the case of Maria [illegible], appellant, against the city of Albuquerque. The suit was a friendly one to determine whether or not the Duke City had the power to make either or both of these bond issues, and the Supreme Court while deciding it had the power to issue the library bonds decided it lacked the power to issue park bonds.

The McKinley Land and Lumber Company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the West, is now making plans to extend its logging operations, according to announcement made in Gallup. An inspection trip was made through the field the last week by Colonel Breece and officials of the Santa Fe up into the Zuni Mts. and on toward Ramah and Atarque. It is reported that work on the big extension will be started early in the summer and that it will open up one of the largest virgin lumber fields in the Southwest.

According to an announcement made in Gallup the last of the week by officials of the Santa Fe system, the double tracking of the lines between Gallup and Holbrook, Ariz., will be completed at an early date. The work is to be started next month and it is said to be the intention to cut through the bedrock just east of Holbrook, thus straightening the line and shortening the distance. This cut will be, according to reports, about one and three-quarter miles in length, [illegible] and on an average of [illegible] feet in depth.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Air Records for Army Made With Old Planes

In the last year the army air service set 11 world records, most of them with obsolescent craft brought up to date. Records for 500, 1,000, 1,500, 2,000, 2,500, 3,000, 3,500, 4,000, 5,000 and 5,500 kilometers were made at Dayton, O., and San Diego, Cal., and were made possible, for the longer distances, through refueling in full flight, a gas tank plane, the new supply being fed through a hose to the lower ship. A world's duration record of 36 hours, 4 minutes and 32 seconds was made over Dayton on April 16-17, by Lieuts. Oakley Kelly and J. A. Macready, which was later surpassed on August 27-28 by Lieuts. L. H. Smith and J. P. Richter at San Diego, with a record of 37 hours 15 minutes 43.8 seconds. This was made in an army observation plane, seven years old in design, refueling in flight.—United States Army Recruiting News.

Thrashing It Out

A group of workmen were holding a lively argument. Presently one of the men turned to a mate who had remained silent during the debate. "Brer Bill," he said, "you're pretty good at an argument. Wot's your opinion?"

"I ain't goin' to say," said Bill. "I thrashed the matter out afore with Bob Jones."

"Ah!" said the other; "and what did you arrive at?"

"Well," said Bill, "Bob 'e arrived at the 'orspital an' I arrived at the police station."—London Telegraph.

Why Pay the Penalty of Lying Awake?

MANY people spend hours at night, restlessly tossing from side to side, waiting for sleep. All because they drink coffee with their evening meal.

If the caffeine in coffee irritates your nervous system and keeps you awake when you should be asleep, recuperating your energies, why not stop coffee and drink Postum?

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine or anything that can disturb health and comfort. Many prefer Postum for its delightful aroma and flavor.

If you want to know the truth, change to Postum for a month or so, and see how much better you will sleep and feel.

Rejuvenated

Prominent retired merchant says he feels like new man since Tanlac relieved him of his troubles. "Can now outwalk men 20 years younger."

R. E. Boyd, 5000 Fourteenth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., for forty-eight years prominent hardware merchant in the national capital, but now retired, lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac.

"Indigestion and stomach weakness of a very pronounced type had troubled me for several months prior to last October fifteenth," said Mr. Boyd, recently, "but since that date the Tanlac treatment has made a new man of me. Now I eat heartily, never have a sign of indigestion, sleep like a log, and get up mornings feeling like an athlete. Today I can outwalk men twenty years younger. Tanlac alone put me in my present fine physical condition, enabling me to get more real pleasure than ever before out of meeting and mingling with friends. Tanlac has rejuvenated me completely, so to speak. It's the finest medicine I ever ran across."

Saving the Snow Birds

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(©, 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"You ought to a-been a snow bird. Seems like you get so glad to see the flakes fall," Major Caswell said to his Granddaughter Grayson, who stood with her face against the window, quivering with delight.

She smiled almost roguishly, flinging over her shoulder: "You shouldn't say that daddy—remember snow birds have wings. And you know you'd miss me if I flew away. Who'd play backgammon with you, and not mind your swearin' when you get beat? Or knit you socks like granny did?"

"You are right-down useful—considerin' your size," the major chuckled. "What is it Billy Newton calls ye—Miss Half-Portion Bligh? Way he looks sometimes he don't want more'n a half-portion—not in the way of girls. And he's pretty middlin' decent, as young fellows grow up these days. Better mind how you handle him, little gal! He's got a heart, man-size—"

"But not quite as big as his nose," Grayson flung back saucily. "I wish he hadn't—he is a good fellow—but think of sitting down opposite that young mountain three times three hundred and sixty-five times every year of my life."

"Ye might have to look at worse," the major said sententiously. "Young folks think looks are everything—"

"I'm glad you remember—granny must have been the beauty of her generation," Grayson interrupted. "Makes me mad every time I look at little Joe—he's her livin' image—and beauty is wasted on boys."

"Well, you might be worse off'n ye are," the major admitted judiciously; "but that's no denyin' my wife took the shine off all the rest. Does it still, by George. See her walk up the aisle—sure as any stranger happens to be thar, he'll find out who she is in short order. You've got her eyes and her 'cussin' little' dimple when you chuckle—but the rest of ye is Grayson, or else Bligh. Your pappy was fine-lookin'—but them bloods give him the right to be—but somehow what they bring don't fit well on the pocket sizes."

"Mandarest! You're worse even than Billy Newton," Grayson protested, but with the chuckle that brought the dimple. It was vastly alluring, adding a touch of the elfin to her fairylike, yet exquisite proportions. Rey Grame sensed that as he came hesitantly through the door to the hall, saying rather stammeringly: "I'p-please—will this blinding snowstorm excuse my intrusion?"

"Sho'ly!" from the major. "Ye'd be a fool to stay out in it with any roof handy. Didn't I see ye in town last first Monday—court day? Somebody said the Grame boy had come back. Many's the miles I've rode with yer grandpap after red foxes—and—maybe—other things," this with a chuckle. "Hang up your overcoat outside thar, then come sit by the fire. Bet ye a ginger cake my little gal thar—her name is Grayson Bligh—can mix ye up somethin' that'll make you forget snow."

Five minutes later, snug at the fireside, Graeme found speech, free and proper in acknowledgment, but yet was scarcely conscious of what he was saying, being so wrapt in the charm of Grayson, who had spoken barely three words to him. When presently she slipped away, the major said proudly: "The little general thinks of everything. She's gone to call up the Halfway house, and tell 'em step granny and little Joe, and keep 'em overnight. She's weather-wise for this valley of ours, and knows the drifts in it will be so high a car can't get over."

"She is right—mine stalled half a mile away," Graeme interrupted. "But—a rider might get through. I'll try it if you can mount me."

"Ever face a blizzard before?" the major asked.

Graeme shook his head, but said steadily: "I'm not afraid to—at need."

"Good boy!" from the major.

Grayson came back, her face deeply troubled. "Halfway doesn't answer," she said. "Wires must be down—or clogged with this damp snow."

"Then I had better start at once!" Graeme said, rising. Grayson looked startled.

The major roused himself to say: "You don't know a foot of the road—and snow hides everything—"

"I know it—with my eyes shut!" Grayson broke in, her hands clenching. "And Trix is sure-footed—I'll start right away."

"Call Billy Newton first!" the major entreated.

"I called him—no answer," Grayson returned, making toward the door.

"Stop! You must be mad!" Graeme broke in huskily. "You! So little! So fine—out in this welter of wind and sleet. I'll go—even if I don't know the way—"

"I won't let you," Grayson said proudly. "Trix never in her life carried double—she shan't undertake it now."

With the last word she vanished, heedless of her grandfather's calls and cries. Graeme made to follow her, but was stopped by an imperious gesture, and the sound of heavy rapping on the front door. Grayson answered it, finding there a black boy spent and breathless, but grinning broadly, who gasped out: "Marse Billy, he done went down de valley road des' soon as de thick snow started—he's dar now—all snowed up nice and safe—in de kyar wid ole Miss and little Joe. Dat's how come me here—he walked back twell he cotched up wid a telephone still a-wukkin'—and called up we-all's house, to say come and tell ye—he done tried ter call ye, but de line was dead. He took blankets and two bottles in de saddle-bags—he say ole Miss was fetching back vittles fit fer Chrismus—whole ham, biscuit, poundcake. And don't you-all fret—he gwine stand by tell de storm blows out—den go find oxens fer drag de kyar home."

"Praise God for all His mercies—Billy Newton in particular!" the major cried, then dropped his head upon the shaking hands locked over the head of his cane. "He'll save them, sure! Now set down, all of us—and trust in the Lord—and the finest man ever He made."

It was a weary waiting—almost twenty-four hours. Grayson tried to be stoical, but all in vain. She was too conscious of Graeme's eyes, of his magnetic voice, most of all of his enthrallment. And he was good to look at—straight, slim, limber, with classic features, harmonious coloring, and the pose of easy culture. He should easily have banished his absent rival—Billy of the big nose, the bigger heart—yet the balance wavered mightily. Sometimes when she had looked and listened for minutes Grayson found herself fascinated—but woke with a sharp sense of satiety that woke a yearning for something different. Inarticulate of course—she was too artless for self-analysis—but none the less of force and effect.

Through the murky dark came cries, lantern glimmers, the thudding feet of oxen struggling through the snow—then Billy Newton burst in upon them triumphantly, grandy safe in his arms, as chipper as you please, and actually giggling as she was set down before a speechless major. "You'd be a widower, Jimmy, but for that boy," she said, nodding at Billy.

"And you won't find the match in him this side of heaven, I know," huskily from the major. Then in a loud, if shaky voice: "Billy, you've saved my snow bird for me—so I've got to give ye another for pay."

"Not—unless she's willin'," Billy said humbly, his heart in his eyes.

"Not willing—but glad," Grayson said softly, heedless of a nose frostbitten, and bigger and redder than ever.

Statue of Liberty Less Heroic Than Uncle Sam

The Statue of Liberty, with its majesty of pose, is less heroic than Uncle Sam. While the Statue of Liberty embodies our conscious rectitude and inspires our laudatory and exemplary nationalism, Uncle Sam is not a statue. He is so constituted that he could not by any stretch of the imagination occupy a pedestal. He could not hold the pose without feeling ridiculous. He is hearty and fraternal, impulsive and generous, and, above all, unselfconscious. He has a kind of instinctive wisdom by which he anticipates and disarms the laughter of the world by laughing promptly at himself. It is Uncle Sam who feeds the hungry tramp at the back door while the Statue of Liberty reads him a lecture from the porch, says R. R. Perry in the Century. It was Uncle Sam who went to France in 1917 and to Russia in 1921 while the Statue of Liberty remained at home—on its pedestal.

There is a place for the Statue of Liberty. It should not stand upon the Atlantic seaboard, looking menacingly at Europe and inviting attention to our national perfection. It should not be compelled to enlighten the world. It should be removed to the interior, there to revolve upon its pedestal and stir the aspiration of Americans. It should preside over the domestic life and not over our foreign relations. Thus placed, it would symbolize, not liberty attained before the envious and admiring world, but that liberty which is our goal. It is not then, together with Uncle Sam, symbolize our seeking and our confession of shortcoming, our faith and our candor, and before the world our tolerance and comradeship.

Passing of Cracker Bowl

Six diminutive oyster crackers in an oiled-paper sealed envelope as the maximum portion assigned to each oyster cream stew in a well-known hotel restaurant has opened the subject of New York city eateries, their extent and their characteristics. Once there was a time when every oyster stew order drew a heaping bowl of crackers.

But the free cracker bowl is following the cult of the bread and butter which a decade ago were included in the price of a meal at any first-class food emporium.

There are 15,000 restaurants in the greater city, according to the records of the health department.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Hopeless

A visitor to a school, after questioning an unhappy little boy about various matters, asked him if he knew the ten commandments.

The boy said he did not.

"You don't know the ten commandments?" the visitor repeated, in astonishment.

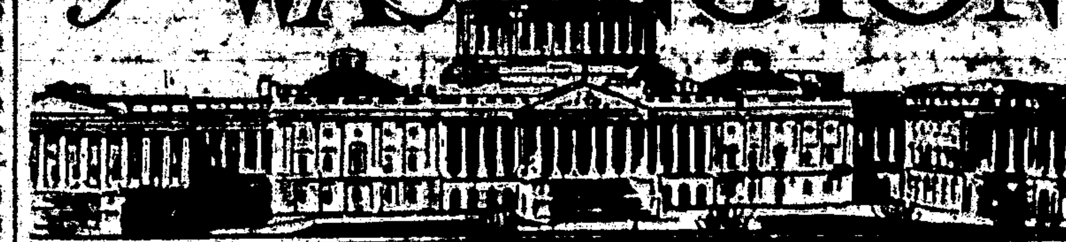
"No, sir," the boy insisted.

"What is your name, my lad?"

"Moses, sir."

The visitor gave it up.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON



1,000,000 Farmers "Going Into Business"

WASHINGTON.—Over 1,000,000 farmers have "gone into business," via the co-operative marketing route, and to the tune of $2,000,000,000 or more during 1923, according to latest figures at the Department of Agriculture, where a survey of the co-operative associations is being made.

This exact statement, coupled with B. F. Yoakum's project for an interstate farm marketing association, heading up at Washington, as described to President Coolidge, and the plans of the National Council of Co-operative Marketing Associations for their new headquarters to transfer from Chicago to Washington, gives promise that the "farm co-op" will soon become as well known about the capitol as the "farm bloc."

The "co-op" is a slang phrase which has been used for many years to designate the loosely knit associations of farmers who make butter and cheese co-operatively, or bargain co-operatively for the sale of farm products. But in the last three years the introduction of the California contract plan, which guarantees the delivery of the farmers' entire crop to the association selling agents, has worked a remarkable evolution in the marketing of most farm products and the 1,000,000 co-operatives have nearly all been signed up within the last three years.

Erstwhile farmers, recently turned business men, attended in large numbers the second annual convention of the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations, recently held here.

Almost every co-operative who spoke described business operations running well up into the millions and showed how thousands of producing farmers are joining the movement each month, in the expectation that "co-operation" will stabilize market prices, and eliminate most of the waste and losses that come from individual shipments to a strange market, where the farmer has little or no representation in the dealing.

"Co-operative marketing," said former Governor Lowden of Illinois, "is our new national business policy. Thirty states and the federal government have passed laws establishing it. The Supreme court has approved these as constitutional. The Department of Agriculture, the war trade board and the farm loan board and the federal reserve board are all behind the movement, which was so badly needed to prevent farmers generally from 'going to the wall.'"

But Congress Will Not Buy the Land

ORGANIZATION of a committee of five public-spirited citizens to conduct a thorough study of the Southern Appalachian mountain range for the purpose of selecting the most typically scenic area as a national park has been begun by secretary of the interior Work. Invitations were sent to Congressman Henry W. Temple, of Pennsylvania; Major W. A. Welch, general manager of the Palisades Interstate park commission of New York, and Colonel Glenn Smith, of the geological survey, asking them to serve on the committee. The Council on National Parks, Forest, and Wild Life, with headquarters in New York, through its secretary, Harrington Moore, was requested to name two other members. In these communications Secretary Work said:

"As you know, there has been awakened a widespread interest in the East in the creation of additional national parks and several bills have been introduced in the Sixty-eighth congress proposing the establishment of areas in several of the southern states as national parks.

"Our national park system is the finest in the world and in making any additions to it, sites should be chosen that will be in every respect up to the standard, dignity, and prestige of the existing national parks. I feel, therefore, that there should be a thorough study of the southern Appalachian range made for the purpose of selecting an area that will be typical of the scenery, plant, and animal life of this range for a national park. I am confident that when such selection is made the various interests urging the creation of national parks can be centered in having the selected area acquired. As there are no government-owned lands in the East, excepting those acquired under the Weeks act for the protection of the headwaters of navigable streams and which are designated as national forest reservations, any area that might be selected probably would be privately owned, but little doubt exists, however, that when a suitable area is selected it will be found that the owners, through patriotic motives, will donate at least part of the land for national park purposes to remain as a memorial to their generosity and interest in public affairs. In any event selection should be made and the property purchased when the ground is cheap.

"I have in mind asking a committee of five public-spirited persons to undertake such a study and if you can devote the time this summer I would like to have you serve as a member."

No More Immigrants Till After June 30

NO MORE immigrants, barring a few scattered handfuls, will be admitted to the United States during the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, next, according to information made public by the Department of Labor. All Europe, except for Scandinavia and France, with a sprinkling of a few score of hundreds of immigrants elsewhere, has exhausted its quota for the current year.

It will be the first time in the history of the country, it is believed, that the human tides will have ceased to roll against the shores of America.

Under the present immigration law, which expires June 30, next, the number of admissions is restricted to 3 per cent of the nationals of any country in the United States at the time the census of 1910 was taken. The total which may be admitted in any one year has been figured out by the Department of Labor at 357,803.

That total is apportioned among the various European and other nations affected by the law (South America is not affected), in quotas fixing the limit of immigration from each country. The highest is the quota of Great Britain and Ireland, 77,342 persons; the next, Germany, with 67,607, while Italy, with an annual quota of 42,057; Poland, with 31,027; Russia, with 24,405; Sweden, with 20,042; Czechoslovakia, with 14,357, and Norway, with 12,202, follow in the order named. Each of the remaining 50 nations affected has an annual quota of less than 10,000; seventeen have quotas of less than 1,000.

Under the Labor department's rulings not more than one-fifth of a nation's annual quota may be admitted in any one month. Even with this check the annual race among steamers to reach New York in the early morning hours of July 1 each year is participated in by from ten to twenty vessels, each laden with immigrants.

Before July the present law will be extended or a new law enacted. Proposals looking to a new law contain restrictions which would reduce still further the number of admissions to 2 per cent of the nationals numbered in the 1890 census.

How effectually the bars will then be up is shown by the estimate that less than 200,000 persons would be admissible under such a law, as compared with 357,803 this year, 805,000 in 1921 and 1,218,000 in 1914.

Is Cooking for Her Fourth President

MRS. MARTHA MULVEY was cook in the household of the late J. P. Morgan, Sr., in New York, says the Kansas City Star, and was fully satisfied there when Mrs. William Howard Taft, knowing President Taft's love for good food, prepared properly, brought her to the White House and said: "There you are! You are monarch of all you survey." She stayed there during both the Wilson terms, then became Mrs. Harding's most important under officer and now is serving in a similar capacity for Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. Mulvey was born in Sweden something more than fifty years ago. She has been cooking ever since she can remember, but she is extremely modest about it all. She realizes to the fullest extent the dignity of her position and has invested it with a sort of sanctity that is entirely pardonable when you consider the personages, American, foreign, whom she has served. Her proudest moments come when some world-known celebrity insists on making his way below stairs to tell her personally how good her food tasted.

Mrs. Mulvey is main figure in a romance of the White House, too. She was working hard on her job there when she met James Mulvey, a special policeman, who had been guarding presidents for 30 years. This was during the Taft administration.

"You can't leave me," Mrs. Taft pleaded in considerable apprehension when she heard the news.

Accordingly Mrs. Mulvey fixed it up with James so she would keep her White House position, and now the Mulvey family is a completely happy one. Mr. and Mrs. Mulvey own their own little home far over in the northeast section of Washington, several miles from the White House, and Mrs. Mulvey rises at some unheavenly hour each morning and starts by trolley for the scene of her day's activities and enjoys it.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Read How Mrs. Walsh Was Helped by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mannington, West Virginia.—"I took the Vegetable Compound when having the turn of life. I had been sick for seven years. I would get a little better, then I broke down again. It would be hard for me to describe how I was, for I was a perfect wreck. I suffered with a pain in my left side, then I would have numb spells and I would think I couldn't live. I would have hot flashes, then would come weak spells. I was so weak I would think I couldn't ever get a meal ready. My work was a burden to me. I was not able to do my housework half of the time. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has given me strength and health. The hot flashes left me and I got better of the numb spells. That summer I could do my housework and worked in the garden a good bit. I tell all sick women what your wonderful medicine did for me, and will always recommend it. I was born in Marion County and still live in it. I am known to all my neighbors, and you can publish this statement because it is true."—Mrs. JOHN W. WALSH, R. No. 1, Box 26, Mannington, West Virginia.

Not Familiar With Fowl

"That chicken you sent me was a very old bird," said the bride of two weeks.

"You are mistaken, madam. It was a very young chicken," replied the butcher.

"Don't tell me that. Haven't I got eyes? Why, it hadn't a single tooth in its mouth."—Yonkers Statesman.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Raniger was here Monday from Oscuro.

R. A. Hunnicut was a business visitor Tuesday from his home near Capitan.

J. A. McNabb, Jr., with the tax department of the E. P. & S. W was here Monday from El Paso.

Mrs. E. O. Prehm and son Ernest went to El Paso Monday and are spending the week there.

The White Sister will show at the Crystal Theatre April 8-9.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Greer have moved back here from Tucumcari and now occupy a cottage on Capitan avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fritz were were here Saturday from Capitan, visiting their daughter, who is teaching school here.

W. H. Marr, formerly of Alto, this county, but now living at Bent, Otero county, was here last Friday night.

Mrs. Joe B. Finley arrived last Saturday from southwest Texas to visit her mother, Mrs Clarence Spence, and family. Mrs. Finley expects to remain several weeks

W. J. Ayers, who has been in the employ of the Southern Pacific west of El Paso for a number of years, is back home, and expects to remain and look after his interests in the Jake Springs neighborhood.

Miss Faye Morrison, a friend of Mrs. M. B. Paden, came up from El Paso Saturday afternoon to visit the Paden's. She returned to El Paso Monday, and was accompanied by Mrs. Paden, who returned Wednesday.

The White Sister was screened in Italy, around Vesuvius, and in North Africa, where the Italian soldiers were fighting the Arab tribesmen. This great picture will be shown at the Crystal Theatre, under the auspices of the Carrizozo Entertainers, on the nights of April 8 and 9.

Buster Keaton

Very good houses greeted the "Three Ages," featuring Buster Keaton, at the Crystal theatre, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week. The picture was shown under the auspices of the Carrizozo Entertainers, and was everything claimed for it. A musical program—the violin by Mrs. Heater and the piano with Mrs. Coe—added very much to the enjoyment of the occasion. The Entertainers are making good their promise to give the public the best that is going.

Community Singing

An effort is being made to effect an organization that has for its purpose a creation of an interest in community singing. The initial meeting will be in the Lutz hall next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The proponents of the plan believe it will be the means of producing a better fellowship between all classes, both old and young, and provide a meeting place on common ground, where the hand of welcome is extended to all, where all are invited and where all may derive profitable pleasure from the association. Lend your presence and voice to this proposition.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our gratitude to those who rendered assistance during the last illness of our husband and father, for the sympathy expressed at his death, and for the beautiful floral offerings

Last Sad Rites

William Kahler, Sr., whose death occurred last Friday afternoon, was buried Saturday at 4 p. m. in the local cemetery. A short funeral was conducted at the home, Rev. J. H. Skinner officiating. The remains were then borne to the cemetery, followed by the family and a large concourse of friends. At the grave-side a short prayer was delivered by the officiating minister and the G. A. R. burial service was read by Major T. A. Dolan.

William Kahler was born at Diedenbergen, Nassau, Germany, May 16, 1842. He came to this country with his parents at the age of 7; enlisted in the Union Army at Indianapolis, Indiana, and served until discharged in January, 1865. After the close of the war, he returned to Arkansas, where much of his army service been, was there married and lived until 1874. He then moved to Texas, living there until 1906, at which time he came to Carrizozo, making this his home until his death. The companion of his youth died a few years after coming to Carrizozo, and in 1918 he married Mrs. Callie Boyd who survives him. There were seven children by the first marriage, five daughters and two sons. Two daughters, Mrs. Shoemaker and Mrs. Taylor, reside in Oklahoma; two, Mrs. Sawyer and Mrs. Dobbins, in California, and Mrs. R. E. Hoffman, El Paso. One son, William, Jr., lives in Texas, and John, the other son, makes his home in California.

Mr. Kahler is survived by a number of grandchildren, one of whom, William, made his home with his grandfather.

Mr. Kahler came to Carrizozo with the birth of the town and from the time of his arrival was one of its most loyal citizens and ever ready to join in every effort for the upbuilding of town and community and to render any service that was calculated to bring happiness and prosperity to all. His honesty was proverbial and his love of mankind was as deep as the sea. His lasting love for children was developed to a marked degree, and the liberality with which he excused their foibles was proof that he was generous to a fault. No man possesses higher honors than he who exemplifies in his daily life his love for his fellowman; and William Kahler's every day life showed, in the fullest measure, his yearning to bestow all happiness possible on mankind.

Leigh Hunt must have had just such a character in mind when he wrote "Abou Ben Adhem," and the sentiment in that beautiful creation so thoroughly typifies the character of the old veteran who has answered the last roll call that it is reproduced in testimony to the worth of this estimable old citizen and friend:

Village Ticket Named

Pursuant to a call for a mass meeting to nominate a Village ticket to be placed before the the voters at the municipal election next Tuesday, a fair-sized crowd assembled at the court house Monday night for that purpose. After the preliminaries of organization had been completed, the selection of a candidate for mayor was taken up.

Four names were placed before the meeting for mayor, to-wit: T. E. Kelley, E. H. Sweet, M. Deering and Dr. P. M. Shaver. No choice resulted from the first ballot, and a motion prevailed to drop the low man on each ballot until someone received a majority. Therefore, the name of Dr. Shaver was dropped, the second ballot taken, but still no choice, M. Deering in the lead. Ed Kelley beat E. H. Sweet by the width of an eye winker, and the third ballot was taken with only two names before the meeting—Kelley and Deering. It was nip and tuck on this ballot, but Kelley finally nosed out, defeating Deering by 7 votes.

For trustees, about half of the number present were placed in nomination, many declining, until only 8 were left to be voted for—each ballot to contain four names and the four receiving the majority of the votes cast to be declared the nominees. It was a battle royal and votes were scattered all over the slate, every candidate proposed having been given liberal support. The final count, however, showed four well in the lead, and they were declared the nominees for trustees, as follows: Albert Ziegler, S. F. Miller, G. T. McQuillen and Lewis Adams.

Hotel Deal

H. J. Garrard has closed a deal with Co-Receiver Brownfield of the Exchange Bank for the Garrard House and will take possession May 1. Mr. and Mrs. Garrard at one time conducted the same place as a rooming house only, now the house will be rearranged, a dining room fitted up and meals served as well as rooms furnished. In the meantime, the Garrards hold the Wetmore apartments until the expiration of their lease.

Announcement for Village Clerk

A vacancy occurring on the Municipal Ticket by reason of the withdrawal of Mr. R. E. Lemon, I hereby announce as a candidate for Village Clerk, and respectfully solicit the support of the voters of Carrizozo for that office.
