ADDRESS

Of Alexander G. Lane to be Delivered Before Re-union of Surgeons

OF THE ARMY AND NAVY

Confederate Veterans, Tulane University of Louisiana, May 1903 Organization and Management of Winder Hospital, Richmond, Va.

Standing in the hall of my Alma Mater, where in the prime and innocence of my youth forty-five years ago I was commissioned to care for the lives of fellow beings, I would not, in the happiness of this moment, read from my life's history, my of its darkened leaves, for in the bright eyes and intellectual faces around me I see written upon memory's tablet in golden characters, your confidence and esteem. No! Welcome the past, since it is the back-ground of patriotic adherance to principles enunciated to us by Jefferson, Washington, Henry, Campbell, Shelby, Morgan, Rutledge and a host of others, who combined eminently all the nobler qualities of heroes and states men and left to the world names synonymous with virtue and luminous with public integrity. No! Welcome the present, since the love crown of consciousness of duty done, has drawn us together, pointing each other to altars of courage and constancy to our own Southland homes of beautiful women, sunshine and flowers, with only one glory, to prove ourselves faithful to friends and formidable to foes. Whatever humble or important part, either of us may have performed in this greatest drama "Liberty enlightening the World" we meet today, wiser men, knowing the achievements of that "Mighty conflict of brothers," which has accomplished the solidity of states, perpetuation of Union, and its present destinguished position before the world—abiter of nations and empires. We meet today as at camp-fires of yore, to recite to each other our little part fought, won or lost.

Having received degrees of Bachelor and Master of Arts at Centinary college, Jackson, Louisiana, in 1854 and 1856, twelve months resident student of charity hospital graduate of Tulane University, class of 1858; a successful cotton planter in Carroll Parish Louisiana, I submitted the question of slavery to the arbitrament of the sword, believing it was in the defense of a plain relation to the constitution of the United States, entered service in my native state, with Mississippi College Rifles elected to deliver the valedictory to citizens of Clinton, Mississippi in the vigor of youth burning with inspiration of patriotism, I fired a thousand assembled citizens to shouts as I walked off the platform, carpeted with showers of bequets from hands of Mississippi's fairest daughters. I allude to this occasion not in any self praise, but to recall to your memory how the fires of secession were then burning and how the hearts of our boys were inspired by fathers, mothers and daughters of the confederacy to perform well their part. Six weeks in camp of instruction at Corinth, Mississippi we were ordered to Virginia with Colonel Burt's 18th Mississippi Regiment, fought the first battle of Manassas received commission, surgeon P. A. C. S. dated June 6th 1861, and came off the battle field of Balls Bluff, and made staff surgeon by commanding General Evans.

The federal sick and wounded received from the battle of Balls Bluff, one of the most decisive and fruitful battles of the war only 1,300 confederate muskets engaged eventuated in killing 2,000 men, capture of 5000 stands of arms, 3 Mt. Howitzers, sending 750 prisoners to Richmond and turning back a column ten thousand strong, commanded by General Stone who was afterward cashiered and General Baker of Oregon was killed. Who were not able to be forwarded to prison quarters at Richmond, were placed in a hospital organized by and in my charge at Leesburg, Va., received the same bedding, rations and medical attentions as confederate soldiers.

A very interesting case in point of the 7th Massachusetts regiment a native of the mountains of Vermont, a perfect athlete over six feet high, 180 lbs. weight, never sick a day in his life, was admitted with his arm torn to fragments by a grape shot, which I amputated, just above the seat of injury, in the upper third of the humerus using this scalpel for surgeon's knife and a carpenter's tennon saw to cut the bone and it healed by first intention, and he was discharged in fourteen days after receipt of wound sound and well. The ligature was removed on the ninth day with but a drop of supperation at each suture and in three days the cicatrix was complete.

The Winder Hospital and grounds, covering 125 acres of land, with capacity for 1,800 patients, was organized in April 1862 and conducted by me for three years, till within ten days of General Lee's surrender. It consisted of six divisions, each in charge of a division surgeon and six assistants, with its appropriate dispensary, laundry, kitchens and corps of matrons, nurses and attendants—the whole surrounded by a guard of ot 125 men under and a commissioned captian. Attached to the hospital was the most opproved Russian steam, plunge and shower baths, a bakery with capacity to bake for ten thousand men daily, 10 acres of hospital garden, worked by convalescents, a dairy with 60 milck cows with appropriate barns and stables, dairy yielding three huudred gallons of milk daily, an ice house, forty feet square and twenty feet deep, filled with ice, a commissioned captain of commissary with commissariat, and a medical examining board of three surgeons, giving me a command at 27 years of age, with 800 hundred hospital attendants ranging from two to five thousand men.

I had a ditch cut down a hollow from central grounds of the Hospital, leading towards James river over which was constructed a line of water closets, and two ten thousand gallon water tanks, which were pumped full of water and ditch flooded every other day, carrying off all debrae and filth from hospital grounds. By premission from Sec. of War, I had constructed two canal boats that ran up the Kanawha canal and furnished the hospital from the mountains with weekly supplies of fresh butter eggs, chickens, geese, turkeys, honey and every other necessity that the vast hospital fund, mounting to twelve hundred and twenty thousand dollars, created by commutation of army rations and from the hospital bakery, could obtain for the sick and wounded, who were often regaled in their hot fevers during the summer months with ice-creams, custards and lemonades. On Sundry occasions the federal sick and wounded were sent to this hospital, where they received the same rations, medical attentions and privileges as other patients. Frequently for weeks the bread for prisoners on Belle Island and Liby prison, was baked at the hospital bakery, and was the same in kind as that used in the hospital. All wines and liquors (the best grades of which were obtained through the personal friendship of Mrs. Snowden, blessed be her memory, president of Ladies hospital association, of Charlston, Virginia, to block ade runners from Nassau) were dispensed through hospital matrons. No medical officer was allowpd to touch it, under penalty of immediate orders to the field.

The government of Winder Hospital, was the inspiration of every official and attendant, with a laudable ambition to excell. To this end I told every medical officer, reported to me for duty, that printed rules and regulations of hospital were posted in every apartment; that I was its head, fired with love and zeal for duty and that every official and attendant in it was there with a high purpose and firm resolve to make for it a record. One harmonious whole, in loving kindness to its sick and suffering.

Will you be one with its chief surgeon to add joy to your invironments and say when you lie down at night, "I have lived this day to relieve the suffering of those around me! We are all here (in this mighty conflict thundering at the very doors of our Capital) for a record of every duty accomplished. I well know that it is a custom with many medical officers in the field, when they draw their monthly supplies of liquors, to call in their regimental officers and drink it up. I well know that many officials when they get into a new suit of clothes, a star or a bar on their collars, begin to feel that they are better and look down on the rugged soldiers around them; but this is not truth. Many a patient in this hospital is socially, intellectually and financially our peer. You will be required to treat them and every attendant with the same courtesy and decorum that marks you to be a Southern Gentleman. Believing that we always get the best there is out of our fellow beings, that is, their best service by appealing to the nobler and better attributes of their mind and heart, I make this appeal to you, to emulate the example of your chief surgeon in fullfillment of every personal and official duty and I now challenge you, every person in this hospital, to see that I toe the mark of its regulations, and rest assured I shall see that every official performs well his part. At trumpet call, every day except Sunday, the six division surgeons met me at my office to inspect one of their divisions. This I did promiscuously, so that they were all compelled to keep their divisions in perfect order, not knowing their day for inspection. If I found every thing in commendable condition, after inspection, my rule was to dismiss them with some complementary remark to the surgeon in charge. From this sprung a laudable ambition in each division surgeon's heart to have as much said for them upon their day of inspection. This rule worked so successfully, that after a few months I confessed to them that it was my secret of government of Winder Hospital and I then reminded them that the lives of all the great rulers and governors in the world, teach us that man to make a success in all he attempts he must first become interested in the work, second learn to control himself before he is fitted to control others, and third give it inspiration by personal example. I then exhorted in glowing language flowing from my own heart, not only to adopt this rule in their respective devisions, but each labor to excel the other in inditing it in the daily life and labor of every subordinate official and attendant in their divisions of Hospital. They responded promptly and pledged the best there was in them to my support. This proved the key to success.

I next organized a quiz class, consisting of six division surgeons and myself, a faculty each in charge of a chair in Surgery, Chemistry, Therapeutics, Anatomy, etc.

We met weekly having lessons assigned for the previous week's study, when Prof. for each evening would question class then at close of lesson close his book, and have us come back at him every member with a question on the lesson. The result of this work was that we were all refreshed in both theory and daily practice; drawn together both socially and intellectually every member passed with flying colors before the Army Medical Examining Board, and 33 assistant surgeons in Winder Hospital were promoted to full surgeons.

It may interest you to know that Miss Emily Mason, niece of Senator Mason of Mason and Slidell Aptirasa fame notoriety was chief matron of first division of Winder Hospital, that her personal friends, two daughters of Robert E. Lee, Mrs. Secretary Randolph, Mrs. Grant wife of the richest tobacconist in Richmond, with many others, would frequently drive out from Richmond in their fine carriages, to visit the sick and wounded, became interested in the family history of some wounded soldiers, sat down by their bed sides and wrote letters to their loved ones at home and even fed them like mothers with delicacies and viands they would bring out daily from their own tables.

I hold before you chief surgeons, official record of Winder Hospital Fund Book which I now commit to the Archives of Army and Navy Surgeons, in which will be found the cardinal facts that I disbursed twelve hundred and twenty thousad dollars of public funds, from April 1, 1862 to March 1 1865, that 76,214 sick and wounded were admitted: 11,530 were transferred to other hospitals leaving 64,084 treated in Winder with 3,250 deaths, just 5.02 per cent of mortality. A record at that day unprecedented in the annals of general militars hospitals whether in the North or Europe.

I hold before you this clip from the Richmond Enquirer of proceeding of confederate states senate in which you will find that as early as September 25 1864, mortality in general hospital No. 2, was 10 per cent No. 13, 14 per cent, No. 9, 1 per cent, No. 5, 13 per cent, No. 23, 6 per cent. Balance each 8, 9 and 10 per cent, except Winder a remarkable exception, where out of 22,874 patients treated, the mortality was only six per cent.

In conclusion permit me to remind you comrades, that every person state, or nation that stands for the defense of the right and the truth, must have a history of conflicts and sorrows, that the memorial which binds you to the great heroism and mighty sacrifices of the past, has already become a bow of promise to American grandeur and power through the gallantry of your sons during the Spanish-American War, forming a mighty prisim to reflect the noon-tide radiance of your achievement into a halo of glory to encircle the brow of your departing worth that today this giant young Republic is thundering past the old nations and decaying monarchies of the east with the rush of the Limited Express that her public school system is not only the boast and pride of her citizens, but the palladium of her progress and power, that having produced seventy billions of wealth in little over one years, she is today in population annual saving, public credit, agriculture, mining manufactures, consolidation of personal capital (as factors to commercialism) education and munificent endowment of universities a bazing meteor before the civilized world, forty per cent richer in material wealth than any nation on earth, and that the Anglo Saxon race now belt the world. It has laid the foundation of our Western Republic and started it off in a career of monumental commercialism progress and prosperity. Under its benificence to the human race, universal education and a free ballot, its grip upon the masses will not be relaxed as the battle for unity right and justice to its humblest and poorest citizen waxes hottet, but will rather tighten its hold and increase its power (see late merger decision) over trusts and commercialism, until language custom and purpose are one until under the banner of control of the holy trinity of liberty religion and universal higher education, America will give law to the world and Anglo Saxon supremacy will mould its multiform elements into complete accord with this union, and the Christian Religion shall direct the whole for humanity and God.

Dr. LANE'S ADDRESS.

Are you not all proud gentlemen to know that you are living factors in this grandest achievement of the 20th century for the elevation, advancement and happiness of man

The lateat from the Raton oil well is that work is proceeding night and day and up to last evening a depth of 600 feet had been sunk. The well is almost filled with water and there is a considerable pressure fo gas. When lighted it flames up to a height of several feet. The water for the engine has been heretofore hauled by a team from the stream near by, but a steam pump was received by the company yesterday and taken to the well and will hereafter do service in pumping water from the well which was drilled for the puapos a few feet from the oil well. New Mexico Official Here En Route to Capitan.

J. E. Sheridan, the New Mexico coal mine inspctor, is in town today from his home at Silve City. He is en route to Capitan to examine the coal mines at that point, having had his attention called to the death of a miner in that camp with a request that the workings be examined and the cause of the death be inquired into. He will leave this evening over the Rock Island, and will thoroughly inspect all the coal fields about Capitan and White Oaks. El Paso News.

Our Territory is Prosperous.

One thousand and seventy four miles of railroad quilt.

One million and three hundred thousand acres of land taken up in homesteads.

One hundred and fifty new postoffices added.

This is the showing that New Mexico has made since June 30, 1900, when the census was finished. This beats any other potion of the nation with equal population.

Republican "Watchdogs."

Two years more of republican administration will insure an economic and honest administration of affairs in Doña Ana county. "There will be no shortage on any fund. No robbery on any line of public money. The people safe—what this means. Public officers are not making 'rough riders' charge on rich funds to steal. Public money is safe in republican hands." East Cruces Progress.

Yes. That's a fact; its safe in the hands of republican officials. As corroborative evidence, allow us to refer your esteemed contemporary, to the exalted and dignified record of the Hon. Abran Abeyta, of Socorro county, who put about $15,000 safe out of reach of the commonwealth of the county of Socorro, also to the present trio of republican political pets of historic old Lincoln county, two of them, Lincoln county postmasters, who were through the powers of the Federal Court of New Mexico, last year, elected to the positions, respectively, of Librarian and Hostler in the territorial penitentiary. The third, an influential merchant and a retiring republican leader, is foreman of the grand jury of the kangaroo court behind the bars of the county bastile, in default of bail only $5,000, the charge being arson of his neighbor's goods. There are no Noble men, but Romans.

The greatest mistake this government ever made was the enfranchisement of the negro, and now the greatest opportunity to atone for that mistake is to enact a national law disfranchising every citizen of the country who is unable to read and write and speak the English Language. This would forever take the reigns of government out of the hands of conniving politicians and give us the cleanest administration of public affairs on the face of the earth. It would forever settle the negro question in the South and put him and the ignorant white both, alike, where no harm could be done their countrymen.

THe Blue And The Grey.

In Augusta, Ga., a few days ago occurred a pretty incident, one calculated to take the sting out of the malice of those political vultures of the north who thrive on sectional hate. An old G. A. R. veteran who fought valiantly for the Union in the sixties was convicted of burglary. The testimony brought out the fact that he had served with credit in the Union army the four years of that deplorable struggle. A majority of the men on the jury were ex-Confederate soldiers, and they commended their old foe to the mercy of the court. The judge, who was an old Confederate soldier, fixed the punishment of the convicted man at a fine of one dollar and the sheriff, who fought under Lee, promptly paid the fine and discharged his prisoner.

The men of the blue and grey who were on the firing line, who did the real fighting and grappled with each other in the fierce charges, are not among those who are keeping alive the animosities of the war.

Lincoln county has sustained a hard knock in the loss of the fruit crop, but a good crop of agricultural products and fine ranges are reasonably certain.

STRAW IN MAKING BRICKS.

A Satisfactory Explanation of This Puzzling Question.

E. G. Ancheron, of Sycamore, Del., a civil engineer and clay expert, claims to have furnished a satisfactory explanation of that puzzling question about the use of straw in making bricks, as mentioned in the book of Exodus. He came upon it accidentally. He was studying clays for the manufacture of crucibles, and could not find a certain kind of German clay, which he considered superior to American. After exhausting all the obvious hypotheses, the clue came to him in the form of a hint, which led to the more unlikely one, and, not to bleed the value of any hint, went on to the possibility of straw in connection with brick making. He boiled a lot of straw and used the water in mixing clay, and found that it greatly increased the tensile ductility and strength. He determined that this was due to the tannin contained in the straw, and began treating the clay with a solution of tannin. He found that not only were nonplastic clays more plastic this way, but that the strength was so increased that unburned brick treated with tannin were stronger than burned brick without it. It greatly facilitated the aging and tempering of clay, taking eight or ten days what usually takes many months, even years, and enabling it to be done by one generation for the next. He calls his process "Egyptianizing" the clay.

New Mexico's Subtle Hint.

The Los Angeles Express says:

That was a subtle but graphic hint New Mexico gave to President Roosevelt yesterday when the Albuquerquians sprung a tableau on him in front of the speakers' stand at the Alvarado hotel. New Mexico was depicted appealing for admission to the union, with forty-five little girls dressed in white representing the states, while on the outside of a gate stood a wistful youngster trying to pass Uncle Sam, who posed as Cerebus, guarding the statehood corral.

"President Roosevelt smiled grimly when he saw this touching spectacle and remarked that when New Mexico had a little more irrigation the petite maid on the outside might slip by and join her sister. This was a hint from the other side that should not be lost on either of the territories to the east of Southern California.

"In other words, the president suggested that in stable agriculture lies the road to statehood, and by developing water and cultivating the soil, rather than digging prospecting holes, the political ambition of the territory may be the more quickly attained. This is in line with the oft uttered adage that the permanence of a country's wealth is gauged by its agricultural products. Let New Mexico and Arizona ponder this hint.

Statehood When We're Ready.

At Santa Fe the following was the only reference made to statehood by President Roosevelt:

Irrigation is to be in the future the most potent factor in the agricultural development of this territory and one of the factors which will do most toward fitting it and toward bringing it up to statehood. Nothing will help more than development of that kind in bringing the territory in as a state. That is the kind of development in which I am most interested here. It is the development that means permanent growth and is the proper transformation of the land to help to build up farms in these regions and to benefit the homemakers. In such a manner shall this territory of the present and this state of the future become a great state of the American nation."

The Santa Fe New Mexican can beat them all getting out a special on short notice. The New Mexican's issue on the occasion of the President's visit last week would be considered a good piece of journalism way-back in God's country.

J. E. Wharton went to Capitan last week to assist in the prosecution of Timoteo, Isidro and Francisco Analla charged with arson in the burning of the store and stock of goods of M. A. Wharton & Co. at Hondo. The store was burned on the morning of April 20th. The building and stock amounted to eight or nine thousand dollars was a total loss. The Analla's have a store and saloon only a short distance from the store they are charged with burning, and the motive was to destroy opposition. The circumstantial evidence was strong against them and they were held to await the action of the grand jury and bond fixed at $5,000 each. They were taken to jail.
