NEWS OF CARRIZOZO AND LINCOLN COUNTY.

Talk well of your own town. Talk well of your neighbors and your town will look much better to you than it ever did before. Appreciation of your community and its people can be made a habit and a very satisfactory one that will help your town to grow.

How much better this spirit is than that of the grumbler, who is sure that his town was the last place made, and was made of the leavings. How much better it would be for the grumbler to examine his home and his place of business to see if he is not contributing his bit to make his home town look cheap and untidy. If every grumbler should take time to clean up his own surroundings, the town would look better at once and the new interest in it that would be bred of a conscious effort to improve it, even in a small way would make the grumbler, a better neighbor and a better citizen.

Good citizens always have a good word to say for their home town. They know its good points, and if there are other peculiarities, they do not present them. The grumbler who knows all the bad features of of a town and mentions them at every opportunity is not only a poor citizen, but he is one who does nothing to improve the town he lives in It is good enough to provide a home for him and perhaps a place of business or an occupation, but that is forgotten in the general flow of complaint every resident can do something for the betterment of his town If he cannot improve property for lack of means or ownership, he can at least keep his own home neat and clean. He can have a clean yard, a grass plot or something to add to the appearance of the place, and above all, he can say a good word for the place at every opportunity.

"The House Of Good Taste"

Have you made the acquaintance of the latest hit in American humor Sewell Ford's "Shorty McCabes" stories? If not you are missing a heap of fun. Shorty is a "character" in every sence of the word. As an artist in humorous slang he can match George Ade's fables, and as a creator of original and witty phrases he can match Mr. Dooley, Wherever you go you will hear people talking and laughing over them. Thousands of people take THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD simply for its Sunday Magazine and the inimitable Shorty McCabe. It begins to be a question whether Shorty is not a more popular personage than Mr. Dooley.

ANNOYING MANNERISMS.

If we could only learn to be quiet, absolutely quiet, when we are supposed to be quiet, without motion or sound; faces quiet, hands quiet, feet quiet; if everything that we do could be done as noiselessly as possible without an unnecessary sound or movement! The movement to restrain noises should begin at home rather than abroad; better innumerable bells and whistles outside than slamming doors, creaking shoes or shrill voices inside. We need the training given by constant attendance in a sick-room. What a relief it would be to tired nerves if a general reformation of this kind took place! If we could learn to listen to ourselves as to others!—Harper's Bazar.

"THE HOUSE WHERE PRICE AND QUALITY MEET"

Joe, Nurse and Cowboy

By William Russell Rose

"Just a week ago to-night," he told the woman, "I sat by a campfire out in the prairie and ate my supper with two Siwash Indians and a French Canuck. I don't know what we ate—I didn't much care to know." Then he laughingly added, "This is different."

"I am glad you like this," said the woman, "although we can't offer you as much variety in dining companions."

Joe laughed at the contrast.

"Do you know," he said, "that if traveling was all like this I think I'd like to travel forever?"

They were two happy days for Joe that followed his first encounter with the woman and her children.

She was a real lady, Joe told himself, and it was a delight and an education to listen to her talk. And Joe learned many things from her—being quick at observation and clever at imitation.

As for the woman, she liked this clear-eyed, willing boy, who strove so hard to please her. And because her children liked him, the little Elsie being almost as fond of him as Eddie, she liked him all the better.

"And what are you going to do when you get to Chicago?" she asked him.

"I'll find something to do," he confidently replied. "I may have to knock around for awhile, but I don't intend to starve."

"What would you like to do?"

"I think," replied Joe, "that I'd like to be a railroader."

The woman laughed merrily.

"And ride on car trucks?" she asked.

"Not as long as there are nursemaids' places to fill," Joe quickly answered.

And the woman laughed and said that was very good, and Eddie patted his hands—dimly understanding that applause was due—and even Elsie looked up and softly cooed.

"You have your friends well trained," laughed the woman, and Joe thought this was very good, too.

They were booming through Iowa that evening when the train came to a sudden stop. It was a jarring, grinding stop, and almost instantly shots were heard ahead.

"Train robbers!" some one shrieked, and the passengers were in instant confusion.

Joe snatched his big hat and put it on.

"Don't be scared, ma'am," he said. "Hide your money!"

He stepped into the aisle just as the door at the opposite end of the car was thrown open and one of the robbers appeared.

"Hands up, everybody!" he roared.

Then he saw Joe. The boy's hat was pulled low and something gleamed in his hand.

"Next car," he shouted at the bandit. "Git! I'm workin' this lot."

No doubt the bandit was excited and nervous. He was deceived by the confident tone, the cowboy garb, the big hat and the shining thing in the boy's hand—and there were a half dozen men in the gang, and it was not easy to recognize faces the length of the car.

The ruffian backed out.

"Scream!" commanded Joe, as he walked up the aisle.

Some of the frightened passengers understood him and set up a wild outcry.

The shots outside continued and then came the long, shrill note of a distant locomotive whistle. Another train was approaching.

The shooting ceased.

Joe listened a moment, then went back to his seat. He was laughing. And the lady, although quite pale, also laughed.

"That was fine," she said.

The passengers were coming forward and patting Joe on the back.

"And what was the shining thing you had in your hand?" inquired a man. "I'm quite sure it wasn't a pistol."

Joe was still laughing.

"Something right in my line," he said. He held it up.

It was a baby's silver rattle.

The next morning as the train slowed down in the Chicago station a big, fine-looking man of 40 appeared in the doorway.

He stared down the aisle and then hurried forward and tenderly embraced the woman and kissed the children and stared hard at Joe, who was carrying Master Eddie.

"How very well you are looking, dear," he cried to the woman. "I was afraid the trip would be too much for you. I just received a telegram from Anna, and Marie is much better. And what's all this I hear about a train robbery and only one car escaping the looters? Did they frighten you very much?"

"No, Robert," said the woman. "It was our car that escaped and all the credit is due to Joe here."

The big man grasped Joe's hand.

"Good for you, son," the big man cried. "And now who is Joe?"

"You were just wondering, dear," said the woman, "how I stood the journey so well. It is all because of Joe's helpfulness. I don't think even Marie could have done more."

"Good for you, son,' cried the big man again.

"And, Robert, he wants to be a railroad man."

"He shall be," cried the big man. "He looks like the right stuff—and his recommendations couldn't be better. You will come into my office to-morrow, son. What's your name?"

"Joe Rogers," replied the lad; "nursemaid and cowboy."

And the big man laughed loud and long.

SNOBBERY REBUKED.

Speaking of the pretensions of those who might be counted as in society, Mrs. Bloomfield Moore, in her book on "Sensible Etiquette," tells the following story: A snobbish young man and his sister, "after their return home from an evening party, were criticising the company, quite unaware that their sensible old uncle was lying awake in his chamber, and could hear every word from where they stood in the corridor. 'Why, even the Grinders were there, and you know their father was a grocer; I was never in such a mixed company,' said the sister. 'And we will never be again, if I can help it,' answered the brother. The uncle called out, 'Children, what do you think your grandfather was? He was a bootmaker, and some people say not a very honest one, either. Now, go to bed.'"

HAD LARGE IDEAS OF DIGNITY

Courts and Judges of Colonial Days Surrounded Themselves with Much Pomp.

In colonial days York, Me., was the county seat to which the judges and lawyers from New Hampshire and Massachusetts often went, and the court sessions were attended with much official pomp and ceremony. In "Old Colonial Houses in Maine" Emma Huntington Nason quotes from a record left by John Adams, who, as a young barrister, went to York in 1774, and who made at that time the following entry in his journal:

"When I got to the tavern on the eastern side of the Piscataqua river, I found the sheriff of York and six of his deputies, all with gold-laced hats, ruffles, swords and very gay clothes, and all likely young men who had come out to that place to escort the court into town."

This gives us a hint of the pomp and splendor affected by the court officials of those days, "when the judges wore robes of scarlet with large cambric bands, and immense wigs, and the barristers had gowns and also bands and tie-wigs.

As the judges approached the shire towns, the sheriff met them with an escort and flourish of trumpets. Their arrival was announced by cannon; and the daily summons to the court before bills were introduced was by beating a drum.—Youth's Companion.

There was issued by the English Board of Education recently a syllabus respecting physical exercises in elementary schools which is receiving the warmest commendations from British educationalists. This syllabus is regarded as in a measure constituting the first official recognition in this country of the fact that it is not only the mind, but also the body, of the child that requires development in a system of national education. Old-time pedagogues might hold up their hands in horror at the role which the board of education now assigns to the schoolmaster, who is expected to be slow as much attention on the care of his pupils' bodies as on the training of their intelligence.

The American Home Economic association says that there is a large field for dietitians in the hospitals, colleges and domitories of institutions. Cooks and caterers are not equal to the management of the kitchens of sanitoria and while trained nurses and good physicians are available it is hard to get trained dietitians. In this country the dietary is left largely in the hands of cooks, but it is evident that this should not be.

Prof. Struempell sent the following signed statement to the Associated Press: "I diagnosed Mr. Harriman's complaint as carcinoma of the stomach the end of July. "It is not fair to doubt Dr. Cook's word in the absence of any evidence whatever against him." This statement was made by Capt. A. G. Winterhalter of the navy, chief of the hydrographic office, in Washington, in speaking of the doubt that had been expressed in some quarters as to whether Dr. Cook actually had reached the North pole. "Not one time in a hundred thousand," he said, "would Dr. Cook be able successfully to fake astronomical observations. I have had much experience in making observations and compilations from them, and I speak from my own knowledge in such matters. Fake observations from day to day could not possibly be continued for any length of time without detection, and why not wait until access is had to Dr. Cook's records and books? These, in my opinion, will clear up every question as to his actually having reached the pole. If they do not, it will then be quite time enough to cast aspersions upon him."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. H. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

ALFALFA THE KING

Grown on Western Sagebrush Desert or Any Other Soil.

Question of Feeding for Stock an Interesting One—So-Called "New" Clover When Once Planted Grows Luxuriantly.

In the farm world the question of greatest interest in recent years has been the feeding value of alfalfa. In spite of much incredulity and some prejudice the plant has fully proven its superior profitableness to the farmers of the western states, especially the southwest.

This so-called "new" clover is as old as human history. It grew in central Asia, where the races of Europe originated. The ancient Greeks and Romans knew and valued it. The Moors introduced it to Spain; hence its Arabic name, alfalfa, meaning "the best fodder." The Spaniards brought it to the Pacific coast—one debt at least which America owes to Spain. Even on the Atlantic coast, where it is most positively looked on as "new,"

it has been cultivated in a small way for 150 years in New York, Pennsylvania and the Carolinas.

Once successfully planted, alfalfa grows with wonderful luxuriance, and as many as 11 cuttings of it in one season are made in California. It will grow in most soils—on the sagebrush desert of the western states or the clay and gravel of New York. It is grown profitably in almost every state and territory of the United States—Maine, New Hampshire and Alaska being all that are left in the "experimental" stage.

The Wisconsin experiment station says that one acre of alfalfa yields as much protein (the milk and meat producer) as three acres of clover or nine of timothy or 12 of brome grass. Alfalfa is worth $15 to $35 on the market and $35 to $60 as feed for stock. Land in Nebraska and western Kansas that a few years ago was considered barren is paying $15 to $25 an acre in alfalfa.

All kinds of stock relish and thrive on alfalfa hay. Feeders in the west claim to be able to put fat cattle on the market 20 to 30 per cent. cheaper with alfalfa, as balance of feed, than on corn alone. Careful feeding tests at the Utah station yielded this result: To produce 706.61 pounds of beef there are required 10,083 pounds of shredded corn fodder, or 11,960 pounds of red clover hay, or 9,575 pounds of timothy hay, but only 7,182 of alfalfa hay.

PREPARING THE SEED BED

New Method in Arid Region Is to List the Ground Soon as Possible After Harvest.

A new method of preparing the seed bed for wheat is coming into practice in the arid region. The plan is to list the ground with an ordinary corn lister as soon after harvest as possible. The lister furrows are run from three to three and one-half feet apart, very much the same as when the lister is used for planting corn. Later when the weeds have sprung up the soil is worked back into the listed furrow by means of a disk harrow or sled. In our dry climate this method of preparing the seed bed has several advantages, as follows:

The cultivation of the land soon after harvest tends to conserve the moisture already stored in the soil; the farrowed land is in good condition to catch and store the rain and the later cultivation clears the land of weeds and leaves a mellow soil mulch to conserve the moisture already stored in the subsoil; the early and continued cultivation of the soil favors the action of bacteria, and the development of available plant food.

The above illustrated lister is an excellent implement for use in conserving the moisture in the soil.

OPREATING A DRY FARM

Cheaper Than Irrigation Because No Ditches Required and Has Other Advantages.

Dry farming is cheaper than irrigation, and in addition, has some decided advantages over the latter system. In the first place, no ditches are required and no subsequent repairs needed, and no laborers are hired for irrigators. And, secondly, it is a demonstrated fact that dry farming is the better proposition of the two when practiced on a large scale. One man, it is estimated, cannot farm profitably more than 50 to 75 acres of irrigated land, while under the dry farming system large tracts can be handled, especially when small grain and alfalfa are sown.

The State Agricultural College of Utah, at Logan, in one of its recent bulletins says, "the cost of producing a crop of wheat, oats or barley, should not exceed $4.00 per acre, after the land has once been cropped. When the farmer uses his own implements and team, the cost per acre would be: Plowing, 90c; discing, 30c; a total of $2.40. When the work is let by contract, the cost would be $4.25 per acre." But the cost of farming in one section may differ from that of another. An expert dry farmer in the vicinity of Denver furnishes the following table:

640 acres at $2.25 per acre	$1,430.00
Plowing and seeding, $2 per acre	1,280.00
Harvesting, at $1 per acre	640.00
Hauling to market, 3c per bushel	600.00
Hauling to market, 3c per bushel	1,000.00
Total cost, including investment	$4,960.00
20 bushels per acre; 19,200 bushels, at $1 per cwt	$11,520.00
Net income first year	6,570.00

FARM NOTES.

If you keep cows you can't make a better investment than to build a silo. Ensilage is as good for beef making as it is for milk production.

Some farmers have to be forced to work on the road. Others like to have good roads, and often work on them at their own expense.

In front of many farms you will see the grass nicely cut in the highway. No weeds nor brush to mar the premises. Other farmers never cut a weed in the roadway.

GETTING AIR INTO THE SOIL

Russian Experimenters Claim to Have Discovered Secret of Nourishment of Plants.

A London paper puts forth the following:

The Russian experiments in wheat growing by which it is claimed 40 tons or more of grain can be grown to the acre are arousing attention in many countries.

The conical pits and frequent layers of earth are not the only secrets of the system. These Russian experimenters maintain that they have discovered a secret of the nourishment of all plants. They argue that "all the observations resulting from the experience of the culture of corn by 'husking' shows us that the principal condition for obtaining good crops depends mostly on how much soil can be impregnated with air.

Experience will convince that by the loosening of the layer of the soil the earth improves in quality and is [illegible]

[illegible] cles of air as well as water contain as gases all the elements of which the soil consists.

The truth of the principle has been acknowledged in some form in English text books, but the method of obtaining the aeration is a Russian discovery, and a most fascinating principle for experiment in any garden.

Trucks for Harrow.

Tongue trucks for a disc harrow save on the horses as much as they do on the self binder, and neither machine should be used without them. That the team should carry a part of the weight of the machine on their necks is too much like a first attempt at machine making, and too hard on the horses, too.

Humus Is Soil Life.

Land that has lost its humus has lost its life. Coarse barnyard manure turned under is a good restorer of the humus. Green crops turned under also accomplish the purpose. If the land is without humus it must be re- [illegible]

WHAT IS PAINT?

The paint on a house is the extreme outside of the house. The wood is simply a structural under layer. That is as it should be. Unprotected wood will not well withstand weather. But paint made of pure white lead and linseed oil is an invulnerable armor against sun and rain, heat and cold. Such paint protects and preserves, fortifying the perishable wood with a complete metallic casing.

And the outside of the house is the looks of the house. A well-constructed building may be greatly depreciated by lack of painting or by poor painting.

National Lead Company have made it possible for every building owner to be absolutely sure of pure white lead paint before applying. They do this by putting upon every package of their white lead their Dutch Boy Painter trademark. That trademark is a complete guarantee.

WHY NOT?

One of the preachers has asked the members of his congregation to bring their canary birds to church. Why not try to save some of the parrots?

Mottoes of a Queen.

Her majesty, the queen of Portugal, pins her faith, it is said, to the following mottoes:

Keep out of doors all you can. Breathe outdoor air, live in it, revel in it. Don't shut yourself up. Build your houses so that the air supply is good. Throw away your portieres and bric-a-brac. Don't have useless trifles about you.

Have a favorite form of exercise and make the most of it. Ride on horseback if you can; cycle if you cannot get a horse; do anything to get out in the open air.

Don't overeat. Drink little and let that little be pure. Don't try to dress too much, yet dress as well as you are able. Wear everything you can to make yourself lovely.

True Thrift.

"When visiting a certain town in the Midlands," says a medical man, "I was told of an extraordinary incident wherein the main figure, an economical housewife, exhibited, under trying circumstances, a trait quite characteristic of her. It seems that she had by mistake taken a quantity of poison—mercurial poison—the antidote for which, as all should know, comprises the whites of eggs. When this antidote was being administered, the order for which the unfortunate lady had overheard, she managed to murmur, although almost unconscious, "Mary, Mary! Save the yolks for the puddings!"—Tit-Bits.

PRESSED HARD

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in North Carolina says:

"My mother since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family liked it so well, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

PEARY TELLS THRILLING STORY OF HOW HE REACHED NORTH POLE

"Mine at Last" He Shouts Over Frozen Wastes; "Prize of Three Centuries" at His Feet

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

Report on the discovery of the north pole by Robert E. Peary, commander U. S. N., copyright, 1909, by Charles R. Miller, as vice-president of the New York Times Company.

This preliminary account by Commander Peary of his successful voyage to the north pole was issued on September 8 by the New York Times Company at the request of Commander Peary and for his protection, as a book only, copyrighted and exposed for sale before any part of it was reproduced by any newspaper in the United States or Europe, in order to obtain the full protection of the copyright laws. The reproduction of this account, in any form, without permission, is forbidden.

BY ROBERT E. PEARY, U. S. N.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Times Company and printed in this paper by special arrangement.)

Battle Harbor, Labrador (Via Marconi Wireless, Cape Ray, N. F.), September 9.—The steamer Roosevelt, bearing the North polar expedition of the Peary Arctic Club, parted company with the Erik and steamed out of Etah ford late in the afternoon of August 18, 1908, sailing the usual course for Cape Sabine. The weather was dirty, with fresh southerly winds. We had on board twenty-two Eskimo men, seventeen women and ten children, 226 dogs and some forty odd walrus. We encountered the ice a short distance from the mouth of the harbor, but it was not closely packed, and was negotiated by the Roosevelt without serious difficulty.

As we neared Cape Sabine the weather cleared somewhat, and we passed close by Three Voort island and Cape Sabine, easily making out with the naked eye the house at Hayes Harbor, occupied by me in the winter of 1901-02.

From Cape Sabine north there was so much water that we thought of setting the lug sail before the southerly winds, but a little later appearance of ice to the northward stopped this. There was clear, open water to Cape Albert, and from there scattered ice to a point about abreast of Victoria head out of the thick weather and dense ice, bringing us some ten or fifteen miles away.

From here we drifted south somewhat, and then got a slant to the northward out of the currents. We worked a little farther north, and stopped again for some hours. Then we again worked westward and northward till we reached a series of lakes, coming to a stop a few miles south of the Windwards winter quarters at Cape Durville. From here, after some delay, we slowly worked a way northeastward through fog and broken ice of medium thickness, through one night and the forenoon of the next day, only emerging into the open water and clear weather off Cape Fraser.

Finally, on September 2, we squeezed around Cape Union and made fast in a shallow niche in the ice, but after some hours we made another short run to Black cape and hung on to a grounded bit of ice. At last, a little after midnight of September 5, we passed through extremely heavy running ice into a stream of water, rounded Cape Rawson and passed Cape Sheridan. Within a quarter of an hour of the same time we arrived there before—7 a. m., September 5—we reached open water extending beyond Cape Sheridan.

Snug in Winter Quarters; Ship Aground.

We steamed up to the end of it, and it appeared practicable at first to reach Porter bay, near Cape Joseph Healoy, which I had for my winter quarters.

Spent Time Hunting; Moving Supplies

The latter part of September the movement of the ice subjected the ship to a pressure which listed her to port some 8 or 10 degrees, and she did not recover until the following spring. On October 1 I went on a hunt with two Eskimos across the field and Cass Parr bay and the peninsula, made the circuit of Clemants Markham inlet and returned to the ship in seven days with fifteen musk oxen, a bear and a deer. Later in October I repeated the trip, obtaining five musk oxen, and hunting parties secured some forty deer.

Make Start for the North on March 1.

By February 27 such of the Cape Colan depot as was needed had been brought up to Cape Columbia, the dogs were rested, double rationed and harnessed and the sledges and other gear overhauled.

We camped ten miles from Crane City. The easterly wind and low temperature continued. In the second march we passed the British record made by Markham in May 1876—82 degrees 20 minutes, and were stopped by open water which had been formed by the wind after Bartlett passed. In this march we negotiated the lead, and reached Bartlett's third camp. Borup had gone back from here, but missed his way, owing to the faulting of the trail by the movement of the ice.

Cross Many Newly Frozen Leads.

Marven came back also for more fuel and alcohol. The wind continued forming open water all about us. At the end of the fourth march we came upon Bartlett who had been stopped by a wide lead from March 1 to March 11. At noon of March 11 (the same) we [illegible] and shaped like a football by excessed reflection, just raised itself above the horizon for a few minutes and then disappeared again. It was the first time I had seen it since October 1.

Fortunately on March 11, the lead was practicable, and leaving a note for Marven and Borup to push on after us by forced marches, we preceded northward. The sounding of the lead gave 110 fathoms. During this march we cross the eighty-fourth parallel and traversed a succession of just-frozen leads from a few hundred yards to a mile in width. This march was really simple. On the 14th we got free of the leads and came on decent going. While we were waiting a courier came from Marven and informed me he was on the march in the rear. The temperature was—59.

The following morning, March 14, I sent Hansen with his division north to pioneer a trail for five marches, and Dr. Goodsell, according to program, started back to Cape Columbia. At night Marven and Borup came spinning in with their men and dogs, steaming in the bitter air like a squadron of battleships. Their arrival relieved me of all anxiety as to my oil supply.

At the end of two short marches we came upon Hansen and his party in camp, mending their sledges. We devoted the remainder of the day to overhauling and mending sledges. On the next morning I put Marven in the lead to pioneer the trail, with instructions to make two forced marches to bring up our average, which had been cut down by the last two short ones. Marven carried out his instructions implicitly.

One Party Travels While Other Sleeps.

A considerable amount of young ice assisted in this. At the end of the tenth march, latitude 85 degrees 23 minutes, Borup turned back in command of the second supporting party, having traveled a distance equivalent to Nansen's distance from this far to his farthest north.

From this point the expedition comprised twenty men, ten sledges and seventy dogs. It was necessary for Marven to take a sledge from here, and I put Bartlett and his division in advance to pioneer the trail.

At our position at the end of the second march Marven obtained satisfactory sight for latitude in clear weather which placed us at 85 degrees 48 minutes. This result agreed very satisfactory with the dead reckoning of Marven, Bartlett and myself. Up to this time the slight altitude of the sun had made it not worth while to waste time in observations. In the next two marches the going improved and we covered good distances.

In one of these marches a lead delayed us a few hours. We finally ferried across on the ice cakes. The next day Bartlett let himself out, evidently for a record, and reeled off a plump twenty miles. Here Marvin obtained satisfactory sight on latitude, which gave the position as 86 degrees 38 minutes (or beyond the farthest north of Nansen and Abruzzi) and showed that we had covered fifty minutes of latitude in three marches.

"Be careful of the leads, my boy."

The party from this point comprised nine men, seven sledges and sixty dogs. The conditions at this camp and the apparently unbroken expanse of fairly level ice in every direction reminded me of Cagni's description of his farthest north, but I was not deceived by the apparently favorable outlook, for available conditions never continue for any distance or any length of time in the Arctic regions. The north march wound over good going, but for the first time since leaving land we experienced that condition, frequent over these ice fields, of a hazy atmosphere, in which the light is equal everywhere. All relief is destroyed and it is impossible to see for any distance. We were obliged in this march to make a detour around an open lead. In the next march we encountered the heaviest and deepest snow of the journey, a thick, smothering mantle lying in the depressions of heavy rubble ice. I came up on Bartlett and his party, fagged out and temporarily discouraged by the heart-racking work of making a road. I knew what was the matter with them; they were simply spoiled by the good going on the previous marches. I rallied them a bit, lightened their sledges and sent them on, encouraged, again.

Ice Opens Almost Beneath the Igloos.

During the next march we went through a thick fog driven by a biting air from the northeast. At the end of the march we came upon the certain [illegible] a wide open lead with [illegible] north and northeast. We built our igloos and turned in, but before I had fallen asleep I was roused out by a movement of the ice, and found a startling condition of affairs—a rapidly widening road of black water ran but a few feet from our igloos. One of my teams of dogs had escaped by only a few feet from being dragged by the movement of the ices into the water.

Another team had an equally narrow escape from being crushed by the ice blocks piled over them. The ice on the north side of the lead was moving around eastward. The small floor on which were the captain's igloos were drifting eastward in the open water, and the side of our igloos threatened to follow suit. Kicking out the door of the igloos I called to the captain's men to pack their sledges and be ready for a quick dash when a favorable chance arrived.

We hurried our things on our sledges, hitched the dogs and moved on to a large floe west of us. Then, leaving one man to look out for the dogs and sledges, we hurried over to assist the captain's party to join us. A corner of their raft impinged on the ice on our side. For the rest of the night and during the next day the ice suffered the torments of the damned, surging together, opening out, groaning and grinding, while the open water belched black smoke like a prairie fire. Then the motion ceased, the open water closed, the atmosphere to the north cleared, and we rushed across before the ice should open again.

Bartlett Hates to Turn Back to Ship.

A succession of laterally open leads were crossed, and after them some heavy old ice, and then we came to a layer of young ice, some of which buckled under our sledges, and this gave us a straight way of six miles to the north. Then came more heavy old floes covered with hard snow. This was a good long march. The next march was also a long one. It was Bartlett's last lap. He let himself out over a series of large old floes, steadily increasing in diameter, and covered with hard snow.

"With the disappearance of Bartlett I turned to the problem before me. This was that for which I had worked for thirty-two years; for which I had lived the simple life; for which I had conserved all my energy on the upward trip; for which I had trained myself as for a race; crushing down every worry about success."

Peary then goes into details of how he picked his dogs—powerful males—good sledges and ample provisions. On and on he pressed into the frozen zone, sleeping but little. When he reached the 89th parallel the ice floes were grinding beneath his feet but no motion was visible. Peary thinks the ice was settling back into equilibrium and probably sagging northward.

The thermometer was 40 below zero.

"The going was even better and there was scarcely any snow on the hard, granular, last summer's surface on the old floes, dotted with the sapphire ice of the previous summer's lakes," says Peary.

"A rise in temperature to 13 below reduced the friction of the sledges, and gave the dogs the appearance of having caught the spirit of the party. The more sprightly ones, as they went along with lightly curled tails, frequently tossed their heads with short, sharp barks and yelps.

"In twelve hours we made forty miles. There was no sign of a lead in the march. I had now made my five marches, and was in time for a hasty noon observation through a temporary break in the clouds, which indicated our position as 89 degrees 57 minutes. I quote an entry from my journal some hours later:

"'The pole at last! The prize of three centuries, my dream and goal for twenty years!

"'Mine at last! At last!

"'I cannot bring myself to realize it!

"'It all seems so simple and commonplace. As Bartlett said when turning back, when speaking of his being in these exclusive regions, which no mortal has ever penetrated before,

"'"It is just like every day!"'

"Of course, I had my sensations that made sleep impossible for hours, despite my utter fatigue—the sensations of a lifetime; but I had no room for them here.

Big Travel, Little Sleep.

"The first thirty hours at the pole were spent in taking observations, in going some ten miles beyond our camp and some eight miles to the right of it; in taking photographs, in planting my flags, depositing my records, studying the horizon with my telescope for possible land and searching for a practicable place to make a sounding.

"Ten hours after our arrivel the clouds cleared before a light breeze from our left, and from that time until our departure in the afternoon of April 7th the weather was cloudless and flawless. The minimum temperature during the thirty hours was 33 below; the maximum, 12.

"We had reached the goal—but the return was still before us. It was essential that we reach the land before the next spring tide, and we must strain every nerve to do so.

"I had a brief talk with my men. From now on it was to be a big travel, little sleep and a hustle every minute. We would try, I told them, to double march on the return—that is, to start and cover one of our northward marches, make tea and eat our lunch on the igloos, then cover a number of marches, eat and sleep a few hours and repeat this daily. As a matter of fact, we nearly did this, covering regularly on our return journey five outward marches in three return marches."

CUTICURA CURED HIM.

Eczema Came on Legs and Ankles—Could Not Wear Shoes Because

Of Bad Scaling and Itching.

"I have been successfully cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I cleansed my limbs but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I did not attend to it until it came to be too itchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks I was free from the confounded itching. Capt. George P. Women in Postal Service.

The distinction of first appointing a woman postmaster does not belong to America, nor is the employment of women in the postal service a new idea. As early as 1548 a woman postmaster was appointed to look after the mails of Braine la Comte, an important town of France. In the trying times of the Thirty Years' war, the principal office in the postal service of Europe was held by a woman, Alexandrine de Ruc. From 1628 to 1646 she was in charge of the mails of the German empire, the Netherlands, Burgundy and Lorraine. She was known as a master general of the mails. In America, Elizabeth Harvey was the first to hold a place in the postal department. She had charge of the letters in Portsmouth, N. H., in the beginning of the seventeenth century. A half century afterward Lydia Hill was placed in charge of the postoffice in Salem, Mass.

Why Are We Stronger?

The old Greeks and Romans were great admirers of health and strength; their pictures and statuary made the muscles of the men stand out like cords.

As a matter of fact we have athletes and strong men—men fed on fine strength making food—such as Quaker Scotch Oats—that would win in any contest with the old Roman or Greek champions. 2

It's a matter of food. The finest food for making strength of bone, muscle and nerve is fine oatmeal. Quaker Scotch Oats is the best because it is pure, no husks or stems or black specks. Farmers' wives are finding that by feeding the farm hands plentifully on Quaker Scotch Oats they get the best results in work and economy. If you are convenient to the store, buy the regular size packages; if not near the store buy the large size family package.

PRESIDENT TAFT WILL BE AT THE PUEBLO STATE FAIR.

President Taft and party is coming to the State Fair at Pueblo on Wednesday, Sept. 22. He will see the largest display of fruit he ever saw in his life; he will see the largest and best display of horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs ever exhibited in a western state; he will meet the finest people (providing you are there, dear reader) on earth and he will know what real western hospitality means, for he will mix with the people out in the open. The Colorado State Fair management desires you to attend the fair this year, because it promises to be by far the best in every respect ever given. It has cost the citizens of Pueblo nearly half a million dollars to establish this fair and now that it is a good one everybody is cordially invited to attend. Then, too, President Taft is coming here especially to see you, to talk to you and get acquainted with the people of a state that is making the dry plains a mighty farming district.

Pueblo extends a cordial invitation to everybody, and the things to be seen at the State Fair will more than repay you for all the time and money spent in the visit. If you have anything that you think other people would like to see, bring or send it to the fair. There is a prize for almost everything under the sun. At night there will be plenty of outdoor amusements, and on Wednesday night the Sun Worshipers will make a parade of their order which will eclipse anything ever seen, consisting of an electrical display unequaled. Something doing every minute. Railroads all make very low rates.

It is expected to have the Golden Flyer, the Glenn Curtis flying machine here, operated by Willard, the man who is startling the easterners. Watch for later announcements of this wonderful mile-a-minute air-cutting machine.

CARRIZOZO - - - NEW MEXICO

It is an ill wind that blows no good to the hatter.

Bolivia should stop and count 100 before going to war.

As yet the aeroplane men cannot go up for an all-day picnic, taking their lunch along.

As the list of summer tragedies grows larger the need for greater care grows plainer.

New York is evidently harboring too many Chinamen who look on murder as a pastime.

King Edward is getting to be a veteran ruler, for he has entered upon the ninth year of his reign.

Now that the hot-weather record has been broken, it is to be hoped it will be mended and stay so.

A Virginia woman shot her husband because he insisted on playing a phonograph. This is a record case.

Through dissensions and the lack of funds the movement in New York to build a children's theater has been abandoned.

Isn't it annoying that now, just in the finest time of the whole year, the charity people tip off the fact that there are jobs for everybody?

In France, as in this country, it is the wealthier families that are shunned by the stork. Maybe the haughty footman scares the timid bird.

Now that canned fresh air is to be introduced into mines as a safety device, the canning idea appears to have reached its height—or, to speak correctly in this case, its depth.

A man in St. Louis has invented a vice which he claims will make air flights safe. But this will detract largely from the excitements of seeing them if curious crowds are assured nobody will be hurt.

A girl in Pennsylvania who aimed at a rat with a rifle shot her mother. It is time that feminine sharpshooters should learn something by experience. If the girl in question had aimed at her mother, she would have stood a better chance of shooting the rat. Women ought to know by this time that they go by contraries.

A man in New York brought his wife into court because she had such a mania for hard work that he could not restrain her from doing it all the time. This one remarkable case is enough to balance the many which women bring against their husbands because the latter compel them to do hard work all the time.

The Turks have started to fight the Greeks with the boycott—that bloodless weapon of modern warfare which causes more devastation and brings speedier results than all others in the array of improved armaments, and whose victories are caused by the unendurable agony it inflicts upon that most sensitive of all organisms, the pocket nerve.

Uruguay is joining the progressives in South America. That country is now in the market for a loan of $6,000,000 for public works purposes, and like other countries in that quarter turns to the United States to get the money. Another indication of the strengthening ties between this and the South American nations, a relationship that eventually must be highly advantageous all round.

Aeroplanes having shown capacity for going swiftly and for long distances, the problem next to be attacked is how to make them fly high. It is obvious that an airship to be of generally practical use must be capable of ascending to a considerable distance. One of the inventors says "good motors and nerve" will meet the difficulty. And who can doubt that these requisites will be forthcoming?

Curiosity is not confined to any one nation. The phlegmatic English appear to have their full share. The daughters of the czar landed at Cowes and went on foot for a shopping expedition, but the crowd which gathered about to gaze at them became so much of a mob that the police came to the rescue and induced the little grand duchesses to take carriages in order to avoid the annoyance.

NEW MEXICO TERRITORIAL NEWS

Will Profit by Irrigation.

New Mexico, seeking to profit by the remarkable progress of the irrigation, is to the fore with projects that promise to make her agricultural growth nationally famous during the next two years.

J. B. Russell, an officer of the Bluewater Development Company, operating 100 miles west of Alburquerque, on the main line of the Santa Fe, reports that the company's dam, which is designed to hold water sufficient to irrigate 21,000 acres for two years, when necessary, is 35 feet high, and will have been built to its full height of 600 feet before the end of the coming winter.

The dam will be of sufficient capacity. The water shed by which the dam will be supplied covers an area of 240 square miles, and the main sources of supply are the Bluewater and Cottonwood rivers. The company expended $10,000 in surveys and preliminary investigation before "turning a wheel." The canon in which the dam is situated is nine miles long and varies from 100 to 150 feet deep for the entire distance.

A tunnel 275 feet long has been constructed through the solid rock diverting the water from the dam, and this feature is the nucleus of what the builders confidently expect to prove one of the biggest power propositions in New Mexico. A townsite has been platted, and 25 families introduced thereon. Five hundred acres were put under cultivation this year, 25 acres of which were in garden truck. This product has already been marketed for $8,000, this remarkable record indicating the exceptional fertility of the soil. A crop of turnips was raised regularly every six weeks during the season, and $3,000 were obtained for this crop alone. Three good crops of alfalfa were raised, and 75 bushels of oats and 40 of wheat per acre were produced with no difficulty.

This is the identical section that took the prizes for sugar beets, wheat and barley at the Chicago world's fair in 1893. Then the little dam went out, and there has been "nothing doing" until the present corporation took hold of the proposition, securing control of 16,000 of the 21,000 acres under the project, and filing on the water and reservoir site. A large proportion of the company's land was Santa Fe railroad grant land, and all the available government land in the neighborhood has already been filed on.

It is proposed to colonize the land largely by the introduction of Bohemians and other thrifty classes of foreigners.

Irrigate Valley by Pumping.

Alburquerque, N. M.—That the whole area of the great Estancia valley, east of this city, one of the most fertile plateaus in the Southwest, may be reclaimed by irrigation by pumping is the conclusion of O. A. Meinzer, expert of the United States geological survey, after a two weeks inspection of the great valley from end to end. The expert finds that the water supply at shallow depths is everywhere sufficient to irrigate the lands by pumping at small expense even in years of extreme drouth. Coming after a dry season has caused considerable hardship to some of the thousands of homesteaders in this section, this announcement has been hailed with joy by the farmers and next season will see thousands of dollars expended on pumping plants in the valley.

The Estancia valley even without irrigation has become one of the most thickly settled and prosperous agricultural sections of the territory and with irrigation it may outshine even the Pecos valley.

The Bijou irrigation district's reservoir, the Empire, which suffered severe damage some time ago from the breaking of the concrete outlet, is now in the course of reconstruction. The new outlet will be made of three parallel cast iron pipes which will make it practically indestructible.

It is believed that the damage in the Bluewater valley, west of Alburquerque, due to the breaking of the big dam of the Bluewater Development company, will amount to $500,000, as the crops of the farmers under the irrigation system are ruined and the houses are swept away. The loss to the company will probably be $250,000. The big dam held back a body of water two miles long, a mile broad and 60 feet deep at the dam. The latter was a cement structure and the heavy pressure of flood water undermined it, sending a wall of water 30 feet deep down a narrow canon 12 miles long to the [illegible]

H. W. Carbison, a mining man, was fined $50 at Las Vegas for assaulting J. A. Bager, another mining man.

A. B. Crawford of Pennsylvania was assigned to New Mexico as post office inspector, with headquarters at Alburquerque. He has been in the railway mail service twelve years.

Upon the information of Francisco Armijo, Pedro Zamora was arrested at Alburquerque on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Zamora will be kept in jail pending the action of the grand jury.

Miss May Holland was arrested at Las Vegas for insanity and will be kept in the county jail until upon the return of Chief Justice William J. Mills from Clayton, her sanity will be judicially passed upon.

The El Paso & Southwest Railway company filed a certificate of increase of stock from $18,000,000 to $25,000,000. The increase, it is reported, is to be used for extending from Arizona points to San Diego, Cal.

Attorney General Frank W. Clancy handed down an opinion in accordance with which gunners must take out a territorial license to hunt on their own premises. The point has been in dispute for some time.

J. H. Fulmer of Mishawaka, Ind., who returned to Santa Fe, bid in at Parsons, Lincoln county, the Parson group of gold mines for $35,000, at a mortgage executive sale, the mortgages which he held aggregating $120,000. The property is to be worked on an extensive scale.

The Valley Electrical Company, to operate in Eddy, Chaves and Roosevelt counties, has been incorporated, headquarters at Roswell and capitalization $10,000. The incorporators are Clyde C. Caldwell, Robert J. Gatlin, Oliver H. Smith, Joseph J. Jaffa and Erwin M. Mitchell.

According to the report of the Santa Fe land office for August, just compiled, the number of entries was unusually light, only 32,000 acres being entered altogether in this, one of New Mexico's live land districts, during the month. Of these 126 were homestead entries covering 20,050 acres; 41 commuted entries covering 6,355 acres.

Anita Romero, aged 20, shot and killed herself at her home in Santa Fe, because her mother had chided her. She walked into an adjoining room and picking up a revolver discharged its contents into her breast, falling dead. She was handsome and was a favorite among the young people.

Michael D. Koury, a Syrian, in business at Cerrillos, was refused citizenship papers in the United States court on the novel plea that he is not a white man within the meaning of the constitution. The point was raised by United States District Attorney Leahy and is a novel one, as heretofore Syrians have been admitted to citizenship.

The body of an unknown flood victim was found at Navajo, Ariz., west of Alburquerque, floating in the Rio Puerco. The dead man was dressed in a blue suit with striped cotton shirt, but his features were so badly disfigured as to be unrecognizable. The body was turned over to the sheriff, who took it to Holbrook, where a coroner's jury was unable to identify the corpse.

Gov Curry appointed as delegates to the American mining congress at Goldfield: George W. Pritchard and J. W. Akers of Santa Fe, C. T. Brown and E. D. Morton of Santa Fe, C. T. Brown and E. D. Morton of Socorro, Jo I. Sheridan and J. W. Fleming of Silver City, F. A. Jones of Albuquerque, George B. Bent of Bent, William Browne of Carrizozo, and John Y. Hewitt of White Oaks.

Dr. Edgar L. Hewett of the School of American Archaeology in Santa Fe, concluded his summer's work in the Rito de Los Frijoles, having discovered another prehistoric village under the talus of one of the cliffs, and also a communal village on top of Tent rock. In one of the caves was found the remains of a girl in kneeling posture, the corpse being completely mummified. She wore a blanket woven of yucca fiber and beneath that a very fine cotton cover. It was decided to leave the remains in the cave and to place them under a glass cover so that all visitors to the Rito de Los Frijoles might see the kneeling maiden. Out of the [illegible]

LOW COLONIST FARES TO THE WEST AND NORTHWEST.

Union Pacific Passenger Department announces that Colonist Fares will be in effect from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, 1909, to all points in the West and Northwest.

This year the West looks more promising than ever. Now is the time to secure land at low prices, and, at the same time, to visit the many interesting points in the West and Northwest, at which liberal stopover arrangements may be made.

A better estimate of raw lands can be made now than formerly, because these lands are in proximity to new farms that are producing wonderful crops.

Ask Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in all that time have we published a testimonial without the writer's special permission. Never have we knowingly published a testimonial that was not truthful and genuine. Here is one just received a few days ago. If anyone doubts that this is a true and honest statement of a woman's experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound write and ask her.

Houston, Texas.—"When I first began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had been sick for three years with female troubles, chronic dyspepsia, and a liver trouble. I had tried several doctor's medicines, but nothing did me any good.

"For three years I lived on medicines and thought I would never get well, when I read an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and was advised to try it.

"My husband got me one bottle of the Compound, and it did me so much good I continued its use. I am now a well woman and enjoy the best of health.

"I advise all women suffering from such troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. They won't regret it, for it will surely cure you."—Mrs. Bessie L. Hicks, 819 Cleveland St., Houston.

Any woman who is sick and suffering is foolish surely not to give such a medicine as this a trial. Why should it not do her as much good as it did Mrs. Hicks.

A Wise man undertook to win a halo without going away from home discovered, he says, that "it is very hard to be a saint while living with one's family." He understood why Saint Anthony and Saint Jerome went into the wilderness, but most people live in families and if one is to be a saint, that, therefore, is the most important place. And one remembers how Sir Launfal, in Lowell's poem seeking the Holy Grail in distant lands, found it at last in the street in front of his own house.

So with heroism, which is only an other name for the same thing. There is a heroism of the battle, another of the camp. There is not only heroism of danger but also of duty The measure both of courage and of goodness is the amount of hardness which is successfully endured. And accordingly the materials out of which saints and heroes are constructed are at hand in everybody's life: on farms' in schoolhouses' in shops, on sick-beds, an under con-ditions so mean that their very meanness constitutes a tremendous difficulty.

A few years ago Thibet was explored for the first time. Now the north pole has been stepped on The south pole has been approachd to within little more than a hundred miles, and the character of the territory around it is definitely known. Geography retains but a few small sections of untouched territory. Within a decade men have gained well-controlled means of transporting themselves beneath the surface of the ocean aud through the air. Within a generation the heavens have been mapped out with much minuteuess, and even the chemical constitution of many distant suns has been established. The surface of the moon has been well explored, and it is not at all improbable that before long the study of Mars will give us what may properly be called an exploration of that planet.

TREE HAS TURNED TO STONE.

Remarkable Example of Petrification That Has Been Discovered in Arizona.

What is probably the largest example of petrification has recently come to attention in Arizona. It consists of the trunk of a tree, with branch stubs still intact, which has fallen across the head of a considerable canyon and there "turned to stone."

The huge roots of the fallen monarch rise to a height of eight or ten feet at one end, while the upper extremity of the trunk is buried in the soft formation of the land in which it grew. The trunk is more than 50 feet lang and spans a canyon at least 40 feet wide. It forms a perfectly solid bridge of a diameter of from five feet to two at the smaller end. Trees of considerable size have grown up around it from the bed of the canyon, some of them considerably higher now than the fallen tree is long. Over the trunk of the petrified monster they throw a welcome shade to the birds which gather for miles around to sit on the stony trunk during the heat of the day.

This tree is a considerable distance from the Arizona petrified forest and is one of the wonders of the great desert state. It is considered quite probable that its interior portions are practically solid agate, as are those of the other petrified trees of Arizona, but no one has been venturesome enough to cut into the great, natural, paleontological bridge to find out.

WALKING WAS POOR ECONOMY

West Philadelphian Has Figured It Out, and Now He Rides to and from Work.

"I started in to save money on the first of this year by walking in and out of town each day," said a West Philadelphian of rather limited means, "but I figured up a few days ago and the result shows that instead of saving money by this scheme I have actually wasted $10. In the first place I soon found it a mighty lonesome walk, so I started taking cigars along for company. At first I smoked only going in, but soon I found myself sticking an extra one in my pocket for the return trip. These cigars are worth ten cents apiece, so my cigar bill alone has been double what my car fare would have cost. Then, too, it has made a marvelous difference in my shoes. The constant wear of the walking has worn them out rapidly, and as a result I have had to buy two new pairs already this year. Formerly cigars were a luxury only used on select occasions, but the habit of smoking on the way to work has increased my fondness for them, and as a result I am smoking a good bit more at home than I formerly did. Now, I have reached the conclusion that I am too poor a man to walk in to work, and I am thinking of resuming my former habit and riding, not from laziness, but for economy."

SIMPLE.

"You say you have discovered the fundamental basis of criticism?"

"I have," answered the musician. "You must stick to these two propositions: If anything is a success it is not real art, and if anything is real art it will not be a success."

ONLY LABOR BRINGS SUCCESS.

Element of Chance, While a Factor in Life, Is Not Chief in the Affairs of Men.

It is related that soon after the discovery of gold in California a miner, without a cent and very hungry, asked credit for breakfast at a tent "hotel" in the tented camp of Coloma, and was refused. He took his pick and shovel and entered a claim abandoned in despair by its recent owner, and after a dozen strokes brought to the surface a nugget that yielded him $2,000 a few moments later.

That was success, and it may be claimed that it was due to labor, for had he not delved he would have gone breakfastless that day and perhaps many subsequent days, but most of us unthinkingly will continue to ascribe that man's "success" to luck rather than to labor. The dews of heaven fall on the worthy and the unworthy alike, and the element of chance is the biggest sort of a factor in the affairs of men. All the work in the world will not grow a crop of corn in parched Sahara.

But we must admit that labor is the antecedent of success as will is the antecedent of labor. "All the wishes that man can fancy will not fill the Arno, nor turn a plum into an orange." Thomas Jefferson was a successful man, and his confidential agent of 40 years declared that never but twice had he seen Mr. Jefferson when he was not at work.

ENDURANCE OF OAK.

Out of the discarded rail fences on the old farm in Phoenix precinct William Mathes is storing up at his home a supply of oak wood for household use. This is not a very remarkable fact in itself, but there are some particulars in connection that make a good story of it. Fifty-six years ago, after Mr. Mathes had settled in the Rogue river valley and began to hew his farm out of the wilderness, he himself made these identical rails. There they have withstood the ravages of more than half a hundred of winters and summers. Except in the case of "bottom rails," resting on the ground, the timber in them was well preserved; and Mr. Mathes had them hauled to his home in Ashland for firewood, and in this way, he says, they pay for the new fence and furnish the very best of fuel.—Ashland Tidings.

DOGS AS CHIEF MOURNERS.

Three pet Pomeranian dogs were among the principal mourners at the funeral of their mistress, at Blackburn, England, being accommodated in the leading coach next the car containing the lady's remains. Mrs. Harris had been an invalid for years, and having repeatedly expressed a wish that her canine pets should attend her funeral, her husband had this carried out. The dogs, Tottie, aged 11½ years; Dot, three, and Florrie two, were accompanied in the conveyance by a male attendant, and after the arrival of the cortege at the cemetery gates they were driven home again. They were the object of no little attention.

"Why won't you go on the picnic?"

"Aw, I'm too tired. Let's soak a few sandwiches in lemonade and eat 'em on the kitchen floor."

CONGREGATION OF ONE.

From a mission in Mull with £40 a year Dr. Cameron Lees went to one of the remotest parishes in the Highlands—the parish of Carnoch—a shadow of a congregation. The people had been all swept into the Free church, and a handful only were left in the "Moderate Kirk." There on one stormy Sunday the young minister preached to a congregation of one. The Gaelic service was the first service of the day, and only one man, Macrae by name—Macrae of Achlorachan, the legend says—braved the elements and came to the Gaelic service. The minister went out and asked him to come into the manse and wait for the English service, but the Gaelic congregation declined. "The promise," said Macrae, "is this—Where two or three are gathered in my name, and where the two or three will be, there too will be the blessing; and I am one and you are two—and we will just go on with the service." And the service did go on, and the young minister preached to the Gaelic congregation of one.—London Globe.

THE RISING GENERATION.

Lady Visitor—Was that your sister I met you with yesterday, Dick?

Dick—Now, do I look like a fellow who'd waste his time on sisters?

EVIDENCE POINTED THAT WAY.

"Jimmy," said the fond mother to her smart 11-year-old, "what became of that little pie I made for you as a treat yesterday? Did you eat it?"

"No, mamma," answered Jimmy, with a grin; "I gave it to my teacher at school instead."

"That was very nice and generous of you Jimmy!" complimented his mother. "And did your teacher eat it?"

"Yes; I think so," answered Jimmy. "She wasn't at school today."—Stray Stories.

EMBARRASSING PULL.

"Well, now, look at the little darling," cooed the visitor, who had called to see the new baby. "And hasn't he his father's hair?"

"Not yet," gasped the proud pa, who was vainly trying to liberate his locks from the chubby fingers of his young hopeful. "Er—not yet, but soon."

COULD STAND THE WHALINGS.

"Gracious, Tommy!" said the startled visitor. "I never saw a lad get as many spankings as you do. Why, it seems to be a continuous performance down in the woodshed."

"Oh, I can stand it," laughed Tommy, with a wink.

"You can stand it?"

"Sure! When dad spanks me ma feels so sorry she gives me candy on the sly. Then when ma spanks me dad feels so sorry he gives me a quarter and takes me out to see the ball game."

SHOPPING INSTINCT.

"If he has proposed, why don't you give him an answer?"

"I can't make up my mind whether I would like him when I get him home."—Brooklyn Life.

DR. HALE'S TRAINING.

Dr. Hale was brought up, so to speak, in a printing shop and newspaper office. Compositor, reporter, editorial writer, editor, he saw all grades of the service from the simple days of "the Advertiser newspaper," with a slight accent on the first and the penult. That Advertiser, edited by his father, was a "most respectable daily;" we are not sure that it wasn't the most respectable institution in the universe and that the Boston Athenaeum or King's Chapel wasn't frivolous and plebeian by the side of it. He tells himself of a dispute between his father and a friend of his father as to the day of the week when he (Edward) was born. "On a Wednesday, said one. On a Saturday, said the other. "Born on Wednesday, but the Advertiser didn't find it out till Saturday," was the plausible and triumphant reply of the father's friend. Leisurely and pleasant days, before the telegraph; journalism of the primitive and golden age.

SEEK TRUE FRIENDS.

One good friend is worth a dozen acquaintances. It is the kind of individuals we attract rather than great numbers. Strive to be splendid and charming. It is a worthier ambition than the endeavor to be popular. It is not necessary to seek friends; if you are interesting and bright and cheerful you will be sought after. A host of acquaintances, like riches and silver, often cause more worry than joy. If you have one or two faithful comrades who will love you for your virtues and smile kindly at your faults, you are truly blessed.

ARTISTIC SEPARATION.

"Poor Gladys is almost heartbroken over the breaking of her engagement."

"Then why did she dismiss her dance?"

"Because Gladys is so harmonious and artistic, and as blue is her color, she found that his red hair would not go with the most becoming gown she had."

REASSURED.

"I had a very vivid dream last night that there was a robber in the house."

"Did you arouse your husband?"

"Yes, and he said to turn over and go to sleep; that there wasn't a robber besides the gas meter within five miles of us."—Houston Post.

HOW JOKES ARE MADE.

"All the world's a stage," remarked the party of the first part.

"But you're no matinee idol," retorted the party of the second part.

"I wish I had an understudy to do my work,' said the party of the third part.

And the moral is that you can evolve any kind of a joke from such a starter.

ANOTHER FAILURE.

Tempted by the warm rain the angleworm wriggled out of the ground and started across the cement sidewalk.

When it was about half way over it there came a sudden change in the weather and the worm froze fast to the walk.

This thing of being a harbinger of spring is all right in poetry, but in reality it is tough on the harbinger.

ON THE RESERVATION.

"Education has heap much drawbacks," grunted Chief Scared-of-Ute-Laundry.

"How?" growled Young-Man-with-a-Grouch, drawing his blanket around him and moving closer to the fire-water.

"Sent son to Carlisle. Come back a dude. Passed around the pipe. He say: 'Mercy, pa! Ain't you got individual calumets?'"

NEWS OF CARRIZOZO AND LINCOLN COUNTY.

Talk well of your own town. Talk well of your neighbors and your town will look much better to you than it ever did before. Appreciation of your community and its people can be made a habit and a very satisfactory one that will help your town to grow.

How much better this spirit is than that of the grumbler, who is sure that his town was the last place made, and was made of the leavings. How much better it would be for the grumbler to examine his home and his place of business to see if he is not contributing his bit to make his home town look cheap and untidy. If every grumbler should take time to clean up his own surroundings, the town would look better at once and the new interest in it that would be bred of a conscious effort to improve it, even in a small way would make the grumbler, a better neighbor and a better citizen.

Good citizens always have a good word to say for their home town. They know its good points, and if there are other peculiarities, they do not present them. The grumbler who knows all the bad features of of a town and mentions them at every opportunity is not only a poor citizen, but he is one who does nothing to improve the town he lives in It is good enough to provide a home for him and perhaps a place of business or an occupation, but that is forgotten in the general flow of complaint every resident can do something for the betterment of his town If he cannot improve property for lack of means or ownership, he can at least keep his own home neat and clean. He can have a clean yard, a grass plot or something to add to the appearance of the place, and above all, he can say a good word for the place at every opportunity.

FAREWELL

With this issue of THE SOUTHWESTERN OUTLOOK, we say goodbye to our friends in New Mexico. We are sorry to leave Carrizozo and Lincoln County because we have learned to love the place, but the continued illness of Mr. De Boer has made us return with saddened hearts to our old home in the North.

We have found many true friends in the Southwest whom we hope to to meet again and we wish to thank all who by deeds of kindness and sympathy ministered to us in our afflictions.

It is our earnest desire that the Southwestern Outlook shall continue to prosper.

Mr. Lee B. Chase will be our successor as Editor of the OUTLOOK He is a young man who is deserving of your friendship and good will, and we know that he will always endeavor to give you a good local newspaper.

Have you made the acquaintance of the latest hit in American humor Sewell Ford's "Shorty McCabes" stories? If not you are missing a heap of fun. Shorty is a "character" in every sence of the word. As an artist in humorous slang he can match George Ade's fables, and as a creator of original and witty phrases he can match Mr. Dooley, Wherever you go you will hear people talking and laughing over them. Thousands of people take THE SUNDAY RECORD-HERALD simply for its Sunday Magazine and the inimitable Shorty McCabe. It begins to be a question whether Shorty is not a more popular personage than Mr. Dooley.

ANNOYING MANNERISMS.

If we could only learn to be quiet, absolutely quiet, when we are supposed to be quiet, without motion or sound, faces quiet, hands quiet, feet quiet; if everything that we do could be done as noiselessly as possible without an unnecessary sound or movement! The movement to restrain noises should begin at home rather than abroad; better innumerable bells and whistles outside than slamming doors, creaking shoes or shrill voices inside. We need the training given by constant attendance in a sick-room. What a relief it would be to tired nerves if a general reformation of this kind took place! If we could learn to listen to ourselves as to others!—Harper's Bazar.

What Thieves Won't Steal.

The last thing the woman did before leaving the flat was to put four rings in the clock on the mantel. "So thieves won't get them," she said.

"I should think that would be simply inviting thieves to run away with them," said her friend. "That is a handsome clock, and thieves like handsome clocks."

"They do," said the woman, "but they never will steal this clock. It ticks too loud. No wise thief will run away with a clock that goes like a threshing machine. It isn't the alarm about his person that he is afraid of, for he can stop the clock, but the occupants of the flat are likely to return before he gets safely away, and if a loud-ticking clock is gone, they will miss it the minute they step inside the door, and maybe give him a hot chase for his plunder."

Marvels of the Telegraph.

Karachi, in northwestern India, is now within a minute of London by telegraph. The Indo-European Telegraph Company has recently introduced a system of relays along its line, so that the electric current which starts from London can be propelled the full distance of more than five thousand miles to Karachi. Hitherto it has been necessary to have operators at several points to take the message and repeat it. The relays, which substitute a strong current for a weak one, have displaced the operators and quickened the time in which messages can be transmitted. The system is not a novel one, and has long been in use in this country, but the Anglo-Indian line is longest upon which it has been established.

MADE THE PROBLEM SIMPLE.

One Woman's Great Scheme for Carrying Umbrella and Suitcase at Same Time.

A suitcase alone is more or less a burden to carry, and if you have an umbrella too you have more than anybody can carry conveniently, and in some circumstances the two might handicap you seriously, as, for instance, in boarding a train; but here was a woman going traveling and carrying both who when the time came was enabled to get rid of her umbrella completely and yet to carry it along, says the New York Sun.

When this woman had come into the railroad station she set her suitcase on a seat and then calmly she unscrewed the tip of her umbrella, removing it entirely, and then she slipped a catch on the umbrella handle and doubled the handle back on the ribs, thus altogether reducing the umbrella's length by about a foot. Then she opened the suitcase and put her umbrella inside of that. Laid diagonally it went in easily; it was of the folding variety.

PATTI'S PARROT.

Mme. Adelina Patti, staying a few years ago in the fall in New York, heard of a wonderful talking parrot, one Jumbo. Forthwith she bought him at the unconscionable price of $1,000. Once in her possession, Jumbo did not open his beak. Every blandishment failed, and at length she gave him up as hopeless. Then one morning the diva awoke with a severe sore throat. She was engaged to sing at the opera on the same night, and, naturally, in great trepidation sent off for a throat specialist. Jumbo, whom she had quite forgotten, remained to all appearance asleep on his perch. As the door opened, however, and the specialist stood on the threshold, before ever Patti could open her lips, Jumbo flapped his wings in great excitement. "Oh, doctor," he croaked, "I'm so sick!" Jumbo still lives, but that was the first and last time since Mme. Patti became possessed of him that he deigned to speak.

ON TOP.

Miss Leonora O'Reilly was being complimented in Albany upon the strength of her speech on woman suffrage.

"Whatever strength my speech had," said Miss O'Reilly, "lay in the strength of my subject. With a subject so powerful one couldn't very well speak feebly. Like Mr. Webster's case, it was a winner.

"The great Webster, you know, once said gaily to a brother lawyer:

"'We'll win. We're bound to win. There is only one case against us. The only report of that case is in our library, and I am sitting on it now.'"

MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

Angry Mamma—I am going to whip you, Tommy, for fighting Willie Jones when I forbade it.

Diplomatic Tommy—But, mamma, he said his ma's new hat was twice as big and three times stylisher than yours.

Angry Mamma—He did, the little wretch! I hope you gave it to him good and plenty!

RELATIVE VIEW OF HONESTY.

Uncle Andrew's Testimony Took Into Consideration the Age of His Little Friend.

Every day of his life, and in many little ways, Robert Murdock discharged some portion of his hereditary obligation, and felt the responsibility of that peculiar relationship which the antebellum patriarchs sustained toward their people. He was not their master, but the Almighty had endowed him with greater gifts than theirs. Noblesse oblige.

"Well, Uncle Andrew, I'm glad to see you. Sit down."

Murdock's voice grew softer as he spoke to the old negro who came in, leading a small boy by the hand. Uncle Andrew was an old-timer, one of the remaining few.

"Marse Robert, please, suh, take dis boy 'in de sto' and teach 'im sumpin'. I can't do nuthin' wid 'im. He kin sweep out an' fetch water an' run errands."

Murdock glanced at the shrinking, white-eyed little negro. "Well, Uncle Andrew, is he honest?"

Andrew scratched his head, considered a long time, and replied: "Dunno, Marse Robert—dunno yit. But I 'spec' he's tolerable honest for his age."—Everybody's Magazine.

NOVELIST SAVES CHIEF'S LIFE.

When Lloyd Osbourne was in the South seas a native chief came up one day to say good-by to him, asking at the same time if he had any messages to send to Robert Louis Stevenson, who had then been dead for little more than a year. Samoans, it seems, can fix a date like that for their own death, and, strange to say, usually keep it. This chief was a consumptive, and in very poor health, and when he said he was going to die on the following Wednesday Mr. Osbourne knew he meant to do it. The author put in two hours in a talk that would have delighted Mary Baker Eddy, and finally converted the chief to the idea of living. He actually did live for six years afterward.

TO COLOR MEERSCHAUM PIPE.

Some Rules Which the Smoker Must Follow If He Would Get the Best Results.

The following information should appeal to smokers: Ordinarily a meerschaum pipe is boiled for coloring in a preparation of wax, which is absorbed, and a thin coating of wax is held on the surface of the pipe and made to take a high polish. Under the wax is retained the oil of tobacco which is absorbed by the pipe, and its hue grows darker in proportion to the tobacco used. A meerschaum pipe at first should be smoked slowly and before a second bowlful is lighted the pipe should cool off. This is to keep the wax as far up to the bowl as possible and rapid smoking will overheat, driving the wax off and leaving the pipe dry and raw.

A new pipe never should be smoked outdoors in extremely cold weather. Fill the pipe and smoke down about one-third, or to the height to which you wish to color. Leave the remainder of the tobacco in the pipe and do not empty or disturb it for several weeks, or until the desired color is obtained. When smoking, put fresh tobacco on the top and smoke to the same level. When once burned the pipe can not be satisfactorily colored unless the burned portion is removed, and the surface again treated by the process by which meerschaum is prepared. The coloring is produced by the action of the smoke upon the oils and wax which are superficially on the exterior of the pipe, and are applied in the same process of manufacture.

EASY TO GET RID OF WARTS.

Single Application of the X-Rays Guaranteed to Remove the Unsightly Spots.

The very simplest way of getting rid of a wart is by a single application of the X-rays. The wart does not fall off during the actual application, but within a week or ten days afterwards it simply drops off, leaving smooth and healthy skin behind it.

The time occupied by each sitting is something between 15 and 30 minutes, and no dressings or other applications are required. The procedure gives a minimum amount of trouble to the patient, a maximum of certainty of immediate cure, and no scarring.

One kind of wart which is particularly annoying to its possessor is that which grows upon the scalp. These warts may occur in people who are quite grown up or even past middle life. It is as easily cured by an application of the X-rays as are the warts upon juvenile hands.—Hospital.

BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY.

This happened in the days when history was made, at a frontier post 40 miles from a railroad. The officer of the day had just joined from graduation leave, and the recruit on post had arrived a week earlier from the depot at David's Island. And he was one thoroughly disgusted recruit; sick of sage brush and jackrabbits; longing for the sights and sounds of his native Manhattan. The young officer was in a bantering mood, and after having asked our recruit what action he would take in every possible (and impossible) contingency, finally asked: "What would you do if you saw an express train crossing the parade grounds?" Instantly came the answer. "By G——, lieutenant, if it was goin' east, I'd jump right on it."—Uncle Sam's Magazine.

JUST, BUT NOT GENEROUS.

The barefoot boy had carefully broken his fishing pole across his knee and tossed it into the stream.

"What's the trouble?" asked the passing stranger.

"Been fishin' all afternoon. Didn't get a bite. If I could have brought home a mess o' fish I might have squared it for shakin' that hoss an' plow."

"But why did you break the fishing pole?"

"I'm willin' to take what's comin' to me, mister, but I don't see why I should save dad the trouble of cuttin' his own switch."

IN THE MONKEY HOUSE.

Strange what superior airs people unconsciously take or give themselves in the monkey house, yet while in the lionhouse they meekly mouch around in absorbed silence—an expression of the subconscious mind. People have instinctive, resentful superiority to the monkey, so much so that some of them cannot bear the sight of one. On the other hand, all people awe and fear lions. Babies will often shrink at the very sight of any tawny animal. The subconscious mind remains pretty much the same through life.—New York Press.

DIDN'T TROUBLE HER.

"Don't you suffer from ennui out here on the farm?" asked the fair summer boarder.

"No, indeed," replied the farmer's wife. "This is the healthiest place in the state."
