SUCCESSFUL FIRE TEST.

Railroad fighting force have trial run and work fast. Fire-signals and Members.

LIST OF FIREMAN

The railroad fire department which has just been organized among the employes of the Southwestern stationed here had a trial run of the force on Monday and succeeded in getting a four inch stream of water on the Railroad Eating House in two minutes after the Fire Whistle was blown. The personal of the day and night force has been arranged and the special position of each person designated. The Shops are able to supply 125 pounds of pressure on a moments notice and have all the water in Watsons Lake to supply in case of emergency. The organization of the force means and pratically assures the protection of not only the railroad property in Carrizozo but also of private property within several [illegible] of the water plugs.

The [illegible] follows: One long blast of [illegible] shop), repeated, of [illegible] week. Two short blasts [illegible] of train.

1,300 PASSENGERS DROWN

The worst Maritime disaster in history occured this week when the White Star steamer Titanic on her maiden trip struck an ice burg off the Newfoundland coast in a fog and went to the bottom with 1,312 of her passengers and crew one board. 868 are reported as saved there may be more than this but until the steamers which went to the rescue are in closer wireless range authentic information cannot be obtained. Many notable persons were among the passengers, including John Jacob Astor and wife, William T. Stead, Archibald Butt and others. The exact fact as to the accident and fearful catastrophy are not obtainable as yet the only information coming by relayed wireless.

COUNTY SEAT DOPE.

The Santa Fe New Mexican Tuesday, prints the only County seat news that we are able to obtain this week, the report is as follows:

"Judge E. C. Abbott returned from Las Cruces Sunday evening and opened court Monday. Judge Abbott received the briefs in the Lincoln County, county seat case today. A decision as to whether or not the injunction pending against Carrizozo, obtained by Lincoln shall be dissolved, pending the ultimate decision of the case in the United States Supreme Court, will be handed down soon."

MANY VACANT OFFICES

It was announced in Washington this week from the President's office, that all officers existing and appointed in New Mexico while the same was a territory and who had not since been re-appointed were without authority to act and must be re-appointed to their respective places or others appointed to fill vacancies. This throws many post-offices open and makes it necessary for the encumbents to be re-appointed, and also effects the land offices and all federal appointments in New Mexico made prior to January 6th. The Senators from New Mexico, Mr. Fall and Mr. Catron have been asked for recommendations for the numerous positions.

Judge Fall has introduced a bill in the Senate providing for the setting aside of 5,000,000 more acres of land in New Mexico the receipts of the sale and lease of which are for the purpose of good roads in New Mexico.

PATHFINDER ALMOST HERE

[illegible] Drumm, representing the [illegible] Touring Club, will reach Roswell on the twentieth, [illegible] up to his schedule and will leave the following day for Lincoln County it is expected. When he reaches the Hondo he will be met by automobiles and boosters from, Carrizozo, Capitan and Lincoln who will urge him to view the proposed optional route, from the Hondo, junction to Carrizozo, via Lincoln Capitan and Nogal.

A committee of Carrizozo representatives will leave here as soon as word is received from Roswell that Mr. Drumm is to start from that place. The entire county is showing much interest in the Coast road and every effort will be made to induce the pathfinders to pick the routes through the county. One of which comes from Roswell to the Hondo and thence to Mescalero and Alamogordo via the Ruidosa the other or the winter time route via Hondo to Carrizozo and thence to Alamogordo with the side trip to the Gran Quivera if desired.

A mass meeting was held in Carrizozo last Friday evening at which the matter of issuing $30,000 in bonds for the purpose of making good roads throughout the county, was considered by the citizens. The meeting seemed to be in accord with the movement with certain provisions as to adjudications of public interest matters in the county. Chairman John Haley appointed a committee, consisting of Lee B Chase, George Ulrick, H S. Campbell, Chas. A Stevens and Frank Gurney to communicate with S. M Johnson, the prime mover in the matter, also to act in a conference capacity and report back to the citizens.

If Harry S. Drumm, the pathfinder, can be induced to come to Carrizozo it is expected to have a dinner arranged for him so that he may meet the business men and talk matters over.

GET DOWN TO BUSINESS

State Legislature Resolves To Proceed With Work Without Delay

NO SENATORIAL ELECTION NOW

The house Monday committed itself definitely against any action upon the senatorship at the present session. A resolution, upon which the action was taken, is based upon [illegible] to this time the house has accomplished nothing in the way of legislation; that the continued conference over the senatorship is interfering with any serious effort at legislation, and that the senatorial matter must be eliminated before serious legislation can proceed. The resolution passed according to the house leaders or those who dominate the committee of thirty, will eliminate all differences in the house and enable that body to proceed to business. The outcome is awaited with interest.

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 10.

"Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the state of New Mexico that, whereas, there is general demand by the people of this state that the legislative body proceed at once and without [illegible] important legislation; and whereas,

"The people of this state are entitled to the service of this legislative body, and this legislative body recognizing the justice of the demands of the people to the end that needed legislation shall promptly be enacted; therefore, be it

"Resolved that to accomplish the [illegible] carry out the wishes of the sovereign people of this state, that the question of the election of a United State senator at this present session be not taken up, but that the same be deferred until the January session of the present legislature at which time, as is, required by law, the senator in question can be legally elected in accordance with the statute of the United States."

MCDONALD ASKS FOR MONEY.

Gov. McDonald has asked the Senate and Legislature to appropriate sufficient money that in order if necessary, the New Mexico militia may be sent to the New Mexico-Mexico border on short notice. And the Governor is arranging to send the bulk of the Mounted Police to the border immediately to do patrol duty.

—Mrs A. B. Hamilton is visiting friends in Douglas, Arizona.

—Mrs. A. E. Long, proprietress of the New Southern Hotel, announces the opening of her dinning room on Thursday of this week.

—The annual inspection of the stations and system of the E. P. & S. W. is now underway by the officials of the company and their train is excected to reach Carrizozo this morning where they will inspect all the railroad property. A committee of the Civic League expect to interview the officials while they are here.

DANGER AHEAD

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat, March 28, 1912.

BAPTIST LADIES SALE.

The ladies of the Baptist Church [illegible] sale yesterday afternoon and evening, at which ladies wearing apparel was sold and refreshments served. The receipts from the sale go to the Baptist Church fund.

ANOTHER AMATEUR SHOW.

The amateurs of the "Because I love You" met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kahlert last Friday evening and decided to produce a short comedy entitled "Too Muchly Married" which has five characters. It is hoped to give the playlette in May before Court adjourns and the proceeds will be given to the Methodist Church.

After the business session a very pleasant evening was participated and dainty refreshments were served.

—Mr. John Rice of Parsons was in the city yesterday transacting business.

—Harry S. Comrey, the Ancho stockman was here Thursday transacting business.

—The Odd Fellow chapter met in regular session Thursday evening at Masonic Hall.

—Johnny McCourt, the Armour packing house man visited customers in the county this week.

—Harry Dixon, of rancho Emeral, left Sunday for Douglas to resume his position as dispatcher.

—Carpenters have this week been preparing the people building for court purposes, for the court which is to meet here the first Monday in May —Henry Bell, charged with violation of the White Slavery laws, at Alamogondo escaped last week from Marshall Chavez, who was taking him from Alamogordo to Santa Fe for trial before the Federal Court. Bell jumped from a rear window at Tecolote and has not been apprehended.

CIVIC DANCE TONIGHT

Ladies League to Give Pig in Bag, Auction and Dance Receipts Improve Town.

HAVE YOUR FORTUNE TOLD

The Ladies of the Civic League will give a Pig in the Bag social Friday evening at Real's Hall which will include a dance and several other attractions. The admission is to be free as well as the dancing but in order to procure refreshments, have your fortune told or to get any of the Sweets from the girls at the candy booth it will be necessary for the citizens to dig down and produce the coin of the realm. After the ladies have paid their incidental expenses which will be few, as the refreshments and all are furnished free by the mem bers of the league; the balance of the receipts will go toward the continuation of the Cleaning up of the town which has already been so nicely started by the organization.

There is to be a big time in store for all those who attend this first entertainment of the Civic League and all those who which to encourage the ladies of the town in their splendid move of keeping the town clean are urged to come out and spend a few cents for the good things offered. Remember that there will no charge of admission nor any charge for dancing. Come and see the crowd, have your fortune told and help the good work along.

Mrs. A. J. Rolland is chairman of the Entertainment committee of the League and is assisted by several others who have special features of the affair in charge.

—The New Southern Hotel is now prepared to serve meals, and will live up to the reputation of Mrs. A. E Long for good things to eat.

—The County Commissioners of Lincoln county will meet at Carrizozo, on the first Monday in May, to adjust Tax matters.

Steeple hats are to be worn this spring.

Let the thaw do its worst. The ice crop is safe.

A waiter has stopped a woman from smoking in public. Gave her a tip, probably.

Railroad trains should never forget that it is their prime duty to stay on the track.

Professional oyster openers never find a pearl, but it is a cold day when amateurs do not.

Now that another German warship has been launched Britain will have to hurry and launch two.

Enlightened women believe the decision that "woman's work is never done" to be unconstitutional.

By correcting the calendar China misses a new year this time, but it is happy in having a new birthday.

A burglar in New York has invented a burglar alarm, which seems a very unprofessional thing to do.

Everybody must have noticed that the weather began to moderate as soon as Arizona came into the Union.

A scientist says a man should walk on all fours. So he does when he is searching for the elusive collar button.

We are informed that the price of straw hats will be raised next summer, but what's the use of borrowing trouble?

Wolves and bears kill very few people in this country nowadays, but the deadly railroad frog gathers them in right along.

A Los Angeles society host is going to give a submarine ball. Of course, the queen of the occasion will be a diving belle.

A hen near Tarrytown, N. Y., laid an egg in a snowdrift. She probably knew that the cold storage men would get it, anyway.

A Philadelphia man claims that he knows how to live on one dollar a week. Only weaklings will wish to discover his secret.

Several University of Minnesota students are taking lessons in the lumber trade. They are ambitious to become lumberjacks.

A calamity howler tells us that woman is twice as expensive now as she was seven years ago, but probably she is worth it.

It is calculated by Prof. John Bonler that the world is at least 710,000,000 years old. That is long enough for its debts to be outlawed.

A man who died of pneumonia was found to have a silver spoon in his stomach, although he was not born with one in his mouth.

Burglars stole $28 worth of perfumery and $60 worth of candy. No wonder Prof. Shaller Matthews says the world is being feminized.

The Brooklyn church that keeps burglar alarms on its "poor boxes" may have more or less faith in humanity, but it is taking no chances.

Possibly the preacher who said that a girl should not be courted more than six hours a week has had experience with daughters, and gas bills.

The Denver Times has discovered that sauerkraut promotes longevity. Probably it does kill all the germs in the house while it is being cooked.

That story of a man who preferred death to leaving Chicago inspired immediately curiosity to learn to what fearful place they intended taking him.

Chinamen propose now that they have got rid of their pigtails and the Manchus in wear such clothes as white men wear. We hope they will refrain from calling them "pants."

"The mirror has done more to advance the human race than any other invention," says a scientist. Which may be accounted for in the fact that people seldom talk when they are looking in mirrors.

They are going to establish a school for umpires in Boston. Exactly what the instruction will be is not plain, but it will probably be more convincing than that conveyed from the bleachers by expectations and profanity.

DRY FARMING POINTS

Potatoes Are Good Crop for Rotating With Grain.

System of Rotation Will Produce Four Crops in Five Years—Land Must Be Handled at Right Time and Not Neglected.

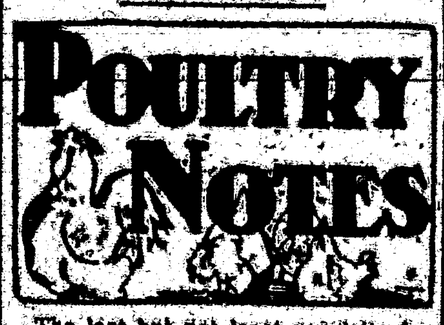
The climate has not changed, nor will it change, but man has and will continue to do so. And why is he changing? Because there are so many devoting their lives to finding out facts and giving them to the human race in a concrete form.

Men like King, Campbell and Hilgard and others, too numerous to mention, have practically devoted their lives to the building of a new agriculture. But for such men as these, we would not be tilling the deserts of the West and making paying crops in years like the present one. Campbell, the great apostle of dry farming, is the first man that ever gave us a complete set of rules for dry farming, and the writer wishes to state that anyone who will take his book on dry farming and apply the rules laid down by him, will succeed, writes Norman E. Holden, in the Scientific Farmer. Of course, there are always local conditions that will modify them.

One of Professor Campbell's rules is to always summer till and have two season's moisture for one crop. The writer has found that system of rotating will produce four crops in five years, but in rotating one must be equipped to handle the land at the right time and not neglect it. If one intends rotating, if it is a grain crop, the disk should follow immediately behind the harvester. This should be done with summer tillage, but it is not absolutely necessary as when a crop is to be planted the following year. After the disking, the land should be plowed, packed and harrowed. The following spring it should be double disked and harrowed sufficiently to make a good seed bed.

Potatoes are a good crop to plant for rotating with grain. One should plant an intertilled crop after grain. Canadian field peas are a good crop if they are planted in rows and cultivated. Corn is another and, where it can be grown, is probably the best. Here is a good rotation for one starting on sod: First year, plant small grain (preferably winter wheat or rye); second year, the same, then summer till the ground; next crop, potatoes, then Durum wheat. Of course this rotation proposition must be carefully looked into and if there is not sufficient moisture in the ground to warrant a crop, it is better to summer till. The moisture in the ground can be ascertained by taking samples as far down as the moisture goes and weighing the same. Place the damp soil in an oven after it has been weighed, dry it, and weigh again. This will give the amount of moisture. It is not advisable to crop unless there is at least four inches of water stored. Another, and one of the most important of all conditions to be understood, is that the more ideal conditions of the soil for plant life, the less moisture it will take to grow the crop.

That the year 1910 has demonstrater that dry farming is not a myth, is evidenced by the results obtained. The history of dry farming in Beaverhead county has been a course in which something of real merit had all those forces to contend with that have their origin in self-interest, lack of knowledge, etc. However, this season has proven to the most skeptical that dry farming is something real, a line of agriculture that is as safe to embark into as the irrigation system. This is a rather bold assertion. Do the facts sustain it?



The last but not least requisite for fertile eggs is proper care.

Roup can be easily traced to damp quarters, drafts in the poultry house and overcrowding.

Plenty of exercise and plenty of good fresh air are necessary for the health of the flock.

There are many waste products that could be turned to use as poultry feed in every garden.

In selecting a site for a hen house remember that a southern slope is best, as it furnishes the most sunshine.

Get acquainted with your hens. Way be you are. If you are going well with poultry. It means far more than some folks know.

TREES CONSERVE SOIL WATER

Windbreaks Prevent Excessive Evaporation in Dry Land Areas—Good on the Plains.

A hedge fifteen to eighteen feet high will lessen the evaporation of soil moisture in its vicinity. On the leeward side the evaporation of moisture is lessened to a considerable distance from the hedge and close up to the windbreak on the windward side. The influence of the hedge on the evaporation of soil moisture depends upon the humidity, temperature, velocity of the wind, and kind and condition of the soil. At a distance of 200 feet from the leeward side of the hedge this influence falls off, but not rapidly. On the windward side the loss from evaporation is less at 50 feet than at 200 or 300 feet and lowest at 100 feet, probably due to the checking of the wind on approaching the hedge. The hedge has a greater influence in retaining soil moisture in fine, sandy loam than in silt loam, but not at such a great distance from the hedge.

These facts were brought out in an experiment carried on in 1910 by Wilbur Zacharias, a senior in the Kansas Agricultural college. This experiment was continued from October 11 to November 22, or a period of 41 days. Observations were taken and cylinders of soil weighed every 24 hours.

The windbreak in this experiment was an Osage orange hedge on the college farm. Mr. Zacharias, who did the work for his thesis, gave the most careful attention to the test. The physics department of the college took temperature and wind velocity readings.

From this experiment and other observations made by F. H. King of Wisconsin and R. A. Emerson of the University of Nebraska, it is to be inferred that hedges would be of great importance in the level plains region, where the hot, dry winds of the summer sweep across the prairies with a high wind velocity, and the evaporation of moisture is excessive. This is not so necessary in moist, humid climates, but hedges or any forest trees of sufficient height and planted thick enough seem to be an effective means of bringing about a solution of the conservation of soil moisture in the great plains region.

SAVE MOISTURE BY DISKING

Even Held That It Is Wise to Grow Weeds in Stubble Field to Aid in Catching Snows.

(By L. R. WALDRON, Superintendent Dickinson Experiment Station.)

An objection offered to disking stubble land at a time of harvest is that the stubble is broken down to such an extent that the snow-holding power of the stubble is destroyed.

It may be that such practices are to be recommended in preference to disking the stubble land at the time of harvest, but certainly the latter practice has not been experimented with sufficiently in western North Dakota to admit of any definite ideas at the present time.

I doubt if any farmer has carried out really definite experiments to determine the value of disking stubble land at the time of harvest.

Some stubble land was disked at the experiment station in 1911 at time of harvest in comparison with some stubble land left undisked. A month later it was determined that the disking, and subsequent harrowing, conserved moisture to the extent of 1.57 inches of rainfall.

This represents a great deal of water, and probably is as much as would be soaked in from the snow during an ordinary winter. It must be remembered that there is considerable difference in the moisture as it falls as snow, and as it sinks into the ground. The snow drifts badly and at time of melting a considerable portion of it is apt to be lost in runoff, especially if the ground is frozen wet.

Rotation on Dry Farm.

A systematic plan of rotation is just as necessary for a dry ranch as on any irrigated land. Live stock demands forage and this must be furnished in the form of fodder or alfalfa. The practice of growing wheat and summer fallowing is a straight soil-robbing process and does not make well-rounded farming possible. In a few areas it has paid very well for a number of years, and doubtless will continue to do so for a brief period. However, the dry farming community which is to continue permanent and prosperous must grow a variety of crops, some of which are leguminous, must carry a reasonable amount of live stock and return to the soil some of the plant food which the crops remove.

Two Pictures Best.

Two pictures are better than one because while the boys are fooling in one field the other will be recovering and later [illegible] twice feed than if [illegible] are used at once.

NOT AN OBJECTION.

Mr. Hardhead—I have called, sir, to ask for the hand of your daughter.

Old Gentleman (with emotion)—She is the only child I have, and her mother is gone.

Mr. Hardhead (hastily)—Oh, that's no objection, I assure you.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Quite a Predicament.

Henry was at college. He had been spending too freely, and he was short, says The Ladies' Home Journal. It was near the holidays and he hated to write home for money. As a last resort he pawned his dress suit to tide him over.

When the time came to leave for home the suit was still unredeemed. He knew he would need it at home. He hurriedly redeemed it at the last moment, packed it in the grip and was off.

His mother was helping him unpack. She came to the coat.

"Henry," she asked, "what is this ticket on your coat for?"

"Why, mother," he replied, "I went to a dance the other evening and had my coat checked."

She continued putting away his garments. Finally she lifted out the trousers. They, too, were ticketed.

"Henry," she exclaimed, "what kind of a dance was that?"

Corrected.

Gussie was knock-kneed, angular and round-shouldered. He had a terrific squint, and a mouth like a steam roller. All the same, he reckoned on making something of a hit at the fancy dress ball, and his costume was as elegant as his figure was unlovely.

With fast-beating heart he stepped jauntily from his automobile outside the town hall, where the ball was being held. The hall porter stepped backward at the unsightly apparition.

"Great Christopher Columbus!" he gasped, as he regarded Gussie.

"No, no, my good man" chirped Gussie, as he tripped through the portals. "Chawles the First, my dear fellow, Chawles the First!"

The Wrong Aperture.

Frank Daniels, the comedian, is a very enthusiastic motorist and recently purchased a new car. He had Mason Peters with him for a spin when something went wrong. Daniels declared there was some trouble underneath and crawled under the car while Peters started to do a little oiling.

Daniels suddenly crawled out from under the car with a yell.

"What in blazes are you trying to do?" he asked, glaring at Peters.

"Why, I have just given the cylinder a good dose of oil."

"Cylinder," yelled Daniels. "Cylinder nothing. Confound you, that was my ear you poured the oil into."

Driven to Drink Alone.

"The opponents of temperance," said Edward F. Marvin, conductor of the sons of Temperance, "advance about as good reason for their opposition as did a drunkard one morning in a police court.

"'You are accused', said the magistrate, "of being drunk and disorderly. Any defense?'

"'I am a respectable man, sir,' the prisoner answered, 'and this would never have happened, sir, only I traveled from Pittsburg to New York yesterday in bad company.'

"'What sort of bad company? said the magistrate.

"'Sons of Temperance, sir.'

"'Sons of Temperance? Why, they are the salt of the earth. I should think they would be the best company a man like you could ask for.'

"'No, sir. Excuse me, sir. You're wrong,' said the prisoner huskily. 'You see, I'd bought a quart of whiskey for the journey, and on account of the company I had to drink it all myself.'"

Willie, accompanied by father and mother, was crossing the ocean. Father and mother were both very seasick, but Willie was immune. Throughout the trip he had been annoying the passengers. Finally his mother, turning to the father, said, in a very weak voice, gasping between each word: "Father—I wish—you'd—speak—to—Willie."

Father, turning a sea-green face toward that rampant youngster, spoke in a languid voice: "How-de-do, Willie?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

"I don't think I'll invest," decided the practical housewife. "But if you have a philter which will make him bring home some of his salary on pay days, I'll allow you a percentage on all sums realized."

NOTHING DOING.

Customer—Say, is my credit good for a shave.

Barber—Naw. If you can't raise a dime, keep on raisin' whiskers.

This Would Account for It.

Perhaps the planet Mars is ruddy
(For that's its color, so 'tis said),
Because instead of being yellow
The dandelions there are red.

Unable to See.

"Would you want your wife or your mother or your sister to have to mingle with men at the polls?"

"I can't see why it would be any worse than mingling with them in overcrowded cars."

At This Season.

"What is this price of peace they talk so much about?"

"Just now it is a set of furs."

Strange.

Miss Highup—How was the charity ball?

Mrs. Blase—All right, but it's a wonder they made anything when you consider the small amount they spent on it. Their expenses were actually less than their receipts.—Puck.

Observant Youngster.

"Gracie, did you learn anything new at school today?"

"Sure! I found out how I could eat an apple 'thout the teacher seein' me do it."

Labor Lost.

Physics Professor (after long-winded proof)—And, now, gentlemen, we get X equals 0.

Sleepy Voice (from rear of room)—Gee, all that work for nothing.—Yale Record.

Blase Kid.

"Do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh, yes."

"And why do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh it's the conventional thing."

Sounded All Right.

Patience—Well, he told the truth, anyway.

Patrice—How so?

Patience—When he was buying the solitaire he told the jeweler it was for a sister.

Patrice—Well, I'm sure that wasn't true.

Patience—Why, yes; when he offered it to the girl she promised to be a sister to him.

TALLER ANYHOW.

Mr. Henpeck—All artists say that five feet five inches is the divine height for women.

Mrs. Henpeck—I am five feet eight inches.

Mr. Henpeck—You are more than divine.

Perhaps.

Her husband boldly aviates,
She seems to that inured.
Perhaps, as Madam Rumor states,
He has his life insured.

"Go ahead, Dear; I'm Listening."

No Pity Needed.

Pastor—I was sorry for your wife during the sermon this morning, doctor. She had such a dreadful fit of coughing that the eyes of the whole congregation were fixed upon her.

Doctor—Don't be unduly alarmed. She was wearing her new hat for the first time.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Maybe He Thinks So.

"Why are you trying so desperately to flirt with that man? Don't you know he is married?"

"He's a widower."

"He's nothing of the kind."

"Why, he told me his wife is an angel!"

"He lied. I know her intimately."

Not a Self Starter.

Red—What's the matter with that fellow's automobile? He's been stopped over there for an hour."

Greene—Why, he's just got a machine with a self-starter, and he's trying it out.

It Is.

"It ought not to be so expensive to get grand opera singers at private musicales."

"Why oughtn't it?"

"Isn't it true one can get them for a song?"

Fitting Equipment.

"What kind of wheels are those they have on the bottom of aeroplanes?"

"Of course, they are flywheels."

How It Turned Out.

"I told that dub he was foolish to be courting so many girls."

"How did it turn out?"

"As you might expect. His expenses were so heavy that he got behind with his board and had to marry his landlady."

Reasonable.

Post—Thinks he's the whole thing, does he?

Parker—Well, I'd hardly go as far as that; but he certainly considers himself a quorum.—The Smart Set.

Little Pitchers.

"Mrs. Giggins, could you go to the poultry show for nothin'?"

"Bless the child! What do you mean?"

"Well, I heard papa tell ma you was an old hen."

Cold Extremities.

"Dubbs was held up last night while going home at a late hour."

"Was he frightened?"

"He says he wasn't frightened very much, but he thinks the ground froze beneath his feet."

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

THE VALLEY OF DESPAIR.

Letitia S. Ulrick

My tears like rain did fall
In the Valley of Despair—
Long, long ago;
But while I wept—lo—
White pure flowers most fair
At my feet in beauty grew
For every tear I knew.
In the Valley of Despair
Came a voice from afar—
Long, long ago;
It said: "Each pain you know
But lays low an iron bar
From the prisoned heart's gate
Where sad heart dwelt."
So I plucked the flowers
In the Valley of Despair—
Long, long ago;
And now mid joy I stand aglow
In my garden white and fair,
With my rosary of salt tears
To pearls turned in after years.

THIS SOUNDS GOOD

The members of the legislature are urged to heed the advice of Governor McDonald as expressed in the interview with the governor published in the Herald Saturday The governor's position is at once dignified, earnest and sensible. He declares he has no crow to pick with the legislature and that he has no disposition to enter into political fusses with the law-makers, nor does he think that there is any such disposition on the part of the legislature toward the executive. What the governor does recommend is what all the taxpayers of this state are insisting on at present: that the legislature pass political differences back into the limbo of incidents that are closed and henceforth devote its time and its effort to getting the state government started, by providing machinery wherewith the constitution may be carried into effect. The governor's admonition states facts which every member of the legislature must realize; it is difficult to see how anyone could be blind to the importance of at once making those absolutely necessary arrangements to enable the people of New Mexico to use the boon of statehood which has been given them. The mere fact alone that it is estimated that the state government will cost close to a third of a million dollars more to operate than the territorial form, ought to be incentive enough to make the legislature strain every nerve to furnish a revenue system which will enable the constitution to be operative. There is on the statute book a school law which is complicated, cumbersome, redundant and clumsy; the matter of school legislation alone is of sufficient importance to make the legislators improve every day of their time.

The state educational institutions need immediate assistance from the legislature; the good roads movement demands immediate legislative attention; twenty six county governments are left up in the air until the legislature fixes the compensation of officials and makes other necessary provisions; matters of municipal administration are awaiting action by the law-making body; laws are needed relative to practically every big industry in the state; health laws, finance laws, irrigation laws—any taxpayer can tell you in a minute a dozen things that need quick action from this expensive legislature which so far has done nothing.

The governor has voiced the feeling of the people and has pledged his own co operation; he realizes the urgency of the situation as do the serious minded men in the assembly who have been powerless to do anything by reason of the attitude so far taken by the majority of the legislators.

Remember, in thirty days of hard work the legislature can do the emergency work and leave the state free to go ahead. Until this is done the people do not know where they are "at." The situation is critical in every sense of the word.

Let the legislature heed the advice of Governor McDonald and buckle down to business. If it will not, it should adjourn and save the people's money. The situation is plain and the legislature's duty is staring it in the face.

Let us have action.

—Albuquerque Herald.

EIGHTH GRADE EXAMINATION

Last Friday and Saturday Mrs. Wallace L. Gumm, Superintendent of the Schools of Lincoln county, conducted an Eighth Grade promotion examination for all the schools of the county at Carrizozo. ALTO "ALLUSIONS"

The farmers of this vicinity have all their ground plowed and ready for planting. Some have already planted corn.

Many of the garden are planted and some are up, notwithstanding the continued cold weather.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Tillie Crawford is improving from a several spell of erysipelas.

Mr. Garlow who has recently moved to Alto from Oklahoma has rented J. W. Stuart's resident opposite the P. O.

At the last regular meeting of the White Mountain Literary Society the new Constitution was read by Mrs. J. W. Stuart and laid on the table until next meeting, for further discussion.

P. G. Peters of Carrizozo was on a business trip to Alto Saturday accompanied by his daughter.

C. B. Lane is one of the farmers who is fortunate enough to have a storage tank and is taking advantage of the snow waters from Little Creek, and is filling his tank.

JUNIOR MISSION TEA

The younger members of the Home Mission Tea who are terms as the Junior Department will give a Tea at Real's Hall next Thursday afternoon to which the general public is invited. The Tea is one of the series being given by the Home Mission society of the M. E. Church. Miss Kitty Reily, Miss Mildred Peters, Miss Elsie Farley, and Miss Patsy Johnson will be in charge; refreshments will be served.

REDUCE LINCOLN FOREST

An executive order issued by President Taft, makes a considerable reduction in the area of the Lincoln national forest in New Mexico. The executive orders follows:

Under arthority of the act of congress on June 4, 1897, and on the joint reccommendation of the secretary of agriculture and the secretary of war, it is hereby ordered that the proclamation of May 16, 1910, modifying the boundaries of the Lincoln national forest, New Mexico, be, and the same hereby is, further modified to reduce the area of said national forest by eliminating therefrom the following described lands in the state of New Mexico: S. 1 2 section 23, and all of sections 26 and 35, township 7 south, range 17 east, New Mexico Principal Meridian:

Provided that those parts of the lands reserved by executive order No. 1262, dated November 2, 1910, for military purposes, embraced in the above described sections, to wit: NE. 1-4, SW. 1-4 and SE. 1-4, section 23; N. 1-2, NE 1-4, S 1-2, NW. 14, S. 1-2, SE. 1-4 and SW 1-4 section 26, and all of section 35 township 7 south, range 17 east, shall remain subject to the said executive order No. 1262; and

Provided further, that the public lands herein eliminated and not reserved by the said executive order No. 1262, to wit: W. 1-2, SW. 1-4 section 23, and S. 1-2, NE. 1-4, SE. 1-4, section 26, in township 7 south range 17 east, shall be, and hereby are, reserved for military purposes

ADVERTISE NEW MEXICO

Do you want to help advertise the great New State in which you live? Do you want to be a booster? If so let the CARRIZOZO OUTLOOK furnish you with a supply of the New Mexico Return Post Cards. It will cost you nothing to slip one of these cards in each letter you mail outside the state and by so doing you will help to place the opportunities of your state and your district before thousands of people.

The card is addressed to the New Mexico Bureau of Immigration and the reverse side contains six blank lines for names and addresses and a request that those receiving the card fill out the blank spaces with names of people who may be interested or who may become interested in the New State, stamp and mail. Upon receipt of this card the Bureau of Immigration sends a set of New Mexico literature and a letter urging careful consideration of opportunities in the New State, and inviting further correspondence. A card is enclosed in the letter to each address given on a return card received, thus forming an endless chain of advertising.

That this plan has produced results is shown by the fact that more than 10,000 names have been received on these cards since last June when the plan was first put into effect. The cost of these names has only been that of printing cards and mailing them to parties who have consented to use them in their outgoing mail. A total cost of not over 50, or ½ cent per inquiry.

Many people have been located through this medium; 10,000 people have learned about the New State. If you are a booster get the return Post Card Habit. It will only cost you the energy of asking for the cards.

The CARRIZOZO OUTLOOK is boosting this state and we want our subscribers to boost with us. Call or write today for a supply.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT, 1914 BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals.

"You can bet I shut off and skinned out of there in a jiffy; I'd been in a cold sweat all the while. The racket my sending raised had sounded as loud as the Trump of Doom; I couldn't to save my neck understand how Black failed to hear it, even if he were at the other end of the island, and come back and exterminate me. So I beat it on the dead jump.

"The farm-house was in my way, however, and I pulled up there to reconnoitre. There was a sound of voices out front, and I went in the back way—the premises being empty—and snooped to the front windows and eavesdropped. To that instant I'd had never a thought that you might be mixed up in the mess; but I recognized your voice, and overheard just enough to open my eyes to the complexity of the situation.

"I didn't linger long enough to hear much; my position being somewhat delicate—from more than one point of view. So I sneaked out by the rear again, and laid for you on the path to the beach. Then that shower came up and I lost touch with the path. By the time I'd re-found it and traced my way back to the farm-house, you were gone. I set sail in pursuit, but by the time I sighted the deserted village, you were invisible, and Blackstock (by this time I knew his right name) was superintending the planting of Power. Seeing nothing of you I concluded—and hoped—you'd sloped for the boat, and dodged round after you. Those shots stopped me right by the boat on the beach; I saw you coming and . . .

"I've talked myself hoarse—for once in my life. Never dreamed I'd have such a taste of Heaven . . . !"

Coast was about to speak when Appleyard stopped him with a lifted hand. "Look," he said, with a wide gesture, "and if you're superstitious at all—that is to say, human—hug comfort to your heart. For my part I'm going to take this for an omen. You may please yourself."

Overborne by the freshing easterly wind, which blew down the Sound as through a funnel, the fog was rolling back like a scroll. The little man laughed gently. "Haven't we won out to light and freedom, while back there"—he indicated the looming headland astern that shut off No Man's Land from their vision—"still they walk in darkness, bound upon the wheel of their own naughtiness?"

"Wal-l," conceded Coast a little dubiously. "But on the other hand . . . here's this wind brewing. Doesn't it smell like an easter to you?"

Appleyard sniffed contemptuously. "It do, it sure do," he admitted. "We'll have a bit of a blow by nightfall, certainly."

"And that means trouble, doesn't it?"

"Why?"

"Because I, for one, am going back to No Man's Land tonight. And the more wind, the tougher the job of working back . . ."

Appleyard grimaced his disgust. "Who's afraid?" he demanded, truculent. "A pessimist," he misquoted with a large if inconclusive air of philosophical contemplation, "is a fellow who has to live with optimists. Not only that, but you make me tired."

CHAPTER XII.

Within another hour (and the morning was still young) the Echo rode at anchor in Quick's Hole, on the edge of the navigable channel, near the Nashawena shore, about midway of the [illegible] between Vineyard Sound and Buzzard's Bay; and within ten minutes of the time her anchor splashed over her bows, Mr. Appleyard, his plans formulated and communicated to Mr. Coast, was noisily asleep in the cabin—enjoying a rest which Coast, for all his own weariness of body and mind, could not begrudge him.

For six hours the younger man stood a lonely watch, companioned only by the melancholy voice of the bell buoy off the southern entrance, a sound, the most forlorn and dreary known to man, which came fitfully to his earns in the occasional lulling of the wind.

As six bells sounded Appleyard hopped on deck, yawning and rubbing his eyes, but with a light in the latter, as soon as he permitted them to be seen, and a springiness in his movements which testified to the refreshing soundness of his slumbers.

"Howdy?" he chirruped. "Nothing alarming turned up, eh?"

"Not a thing," said Coast.

"Good enough. Don't look for 'em till evening. When'd this lull set in?" in some corner of the world across the water—"

"I told you his wife said—"

"She said precisely what he told her. Naturally. Probably believes it. Rot! . . . The real reason is the reason why he dropped his remittances to Dundas; because he's broke, and down, and desperate—ready to turn his hand to anything to earn a dishonest dollar. And this job's ideal for his purposes," Appleyard wound up triumphantly.

"But," Coast argued, "she has money."

"How do you know?"

"At least, her aunt had, and it was to go to her."

"But did it? I'll lay you a handsome wager that either she never got it or it wasn't much anyway and Blackstock managed to run through it with the customary facility of scoundrels of his class. Don't talk to me: I tell you, I know a lot of things for certain that I don't know for sure; and this is one of 'em. . . . And now if you'll just kindly quit finding fault with my unimpeachable management of this affair, and duck below and pound your ear for a couple of hours, or until I call you, you'll be in much better shape for what's before you this night."

Coast, soothed by the swash of waves and the softly modulated tolling of the distant buoy, presently dozed off; nor did he wake until Appleyard shook his shoulder several hours later.

He started up in some perturbation—with that singular flutter of the heart that men sometimes wakes to face a crucial hour.

"Well—?" he asked, half dazed.

"Time," returned Appleyard coolly. "They're just about to stand in round Lone Rock. Come on deck."

His small head and narrow shoulders were momentarily silhouetted against a violet-shaded square of sky that filled the companion opening, then disappeared. Coast, realizing from the twilight within and without that the hour was late, followed with expedition.

"What's o'clock?" he asked as he stepped on deck.

"About seven. Take the wheel."

Appleyard dropped lightly into the engine-pit as Coast obediently moved to the stern and grasped the spokes. His first glance was comprehensive, summing up the situation in a single cast; he was now fully awake and very alert.

With a muffled cough the motor began to throb and drum. The Echo gathered way. Coast swung her gently to starboard as Appleyard, throttling the speed to half, climbed out and dropped the hatch.

"Right," the little man approved. "Now hold her steady for Pasque, not too far up channel, and stand ready to put her about when I give the word."

"Aye, aye," said Coast intelligently. He pondered a while as the boat forged sturdily up against the seas. "Suppose," he said abruptly, "this isn't the right boat?"

Appleyard grunted unpleasantly. "It's got to be," he affirmed with conviction. "What else could it be? . . . You'd make a shine gambler, if you want to know," he added, bustling about busily.

Coast subsided, although he continued to eye the oncoming boat with unmitigated mistrust.

Appleyard, having cast off all but one of the stops securing the gaff to the boom, first lighted and set out the starboard lamp, which was of course invisible to the approaching boat, then lighted and placed the other beneath the seat.

"I got an eye-full of her with the glasses as she came across the bay," he said, pausing beside Coast and balancing himself lightly against the motion of the boat. "She's a stepper all right; a cabin cruiser about thirty-four over all with a good, stiff engine in her—twenty-five H. P., I'd guess. She moves when she moves!"

"That argues a crew of two?" Coast surmised.

"Just about—aside from our friend the passenger, Mr. Handyside—who's in such a sweat to get on his job that he has to risk the passage in the teeth of an easter," said the little man. "You can bet your boots no one else would run the chance—nor he, unless it was on urgent business. . . . Now go about and stand across again, a bit further up the channel," he advised as the Echo drew under the shadow of Pasque. "So-o: that's it."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Doesn't It Smell Like an Easter to You?"

Coast informed him. "That's all right; fit in with their plans; they'd rather make a landing in the dark, anyway."

"What difference would that make—?"

"Not much; only the fewer boats touching at No Man's Land, the less attention attracted. I s'pose you know there's a life saving station on Gay Head? Sure; and part of its job is to keep a list of everything that passes by, from a rowboat to a coastwise liner."

"Of course; but—look here, Appleyard." Coast paused, doubt tinting his tone.

"Sir, to you?"

"There's one thing been troubling me. It seems to me we're taking a lot for granted. Of course, to begin with, I was only too keen to believe the worst of Blackstock. But, seriously, what warrant have you for believing he's mixed up with this smuggling game?"

Appleyard rubbed his nose reflectively. "Wal-l," he drawled, grinning, "I haven't got any sure-'nough good excuse, I admit. I just know it's so. That's all."

"But—"

"What's Blackstock sticking out there for? Not because he likes it, you can bet; not solely because he's afraid of getting caught—for he settled on No Man's Land before Dundas come through with his confession; not because he would be [illegible]

Powerful Cosmic Process.

"Let us understand, once for all, that the ethical progress of society depends, not on imitating the cosmic process, still less in running away from it, but in combating it. The cosmic process born with us and, to a large extent, necessary for our maintenance, is the outcome of millions of years of severe training, and it would be folly to imagine that a few centuries will suffice to subdue its masterfulness to purely ethical ends. Ethical nature may count upon having to reckon with a tenacious and powerful enemy as long as the world lasts."—Huxley.

Expert Information Sought.

Jumbled Orator Was a Hit

Valedictorian Got Badly Mixed Up But the Result Pleased His Audience Immensely.

The trouble with the valedictorian was that he had started orations on three different subjects and abandoned two, after committing them to memory.

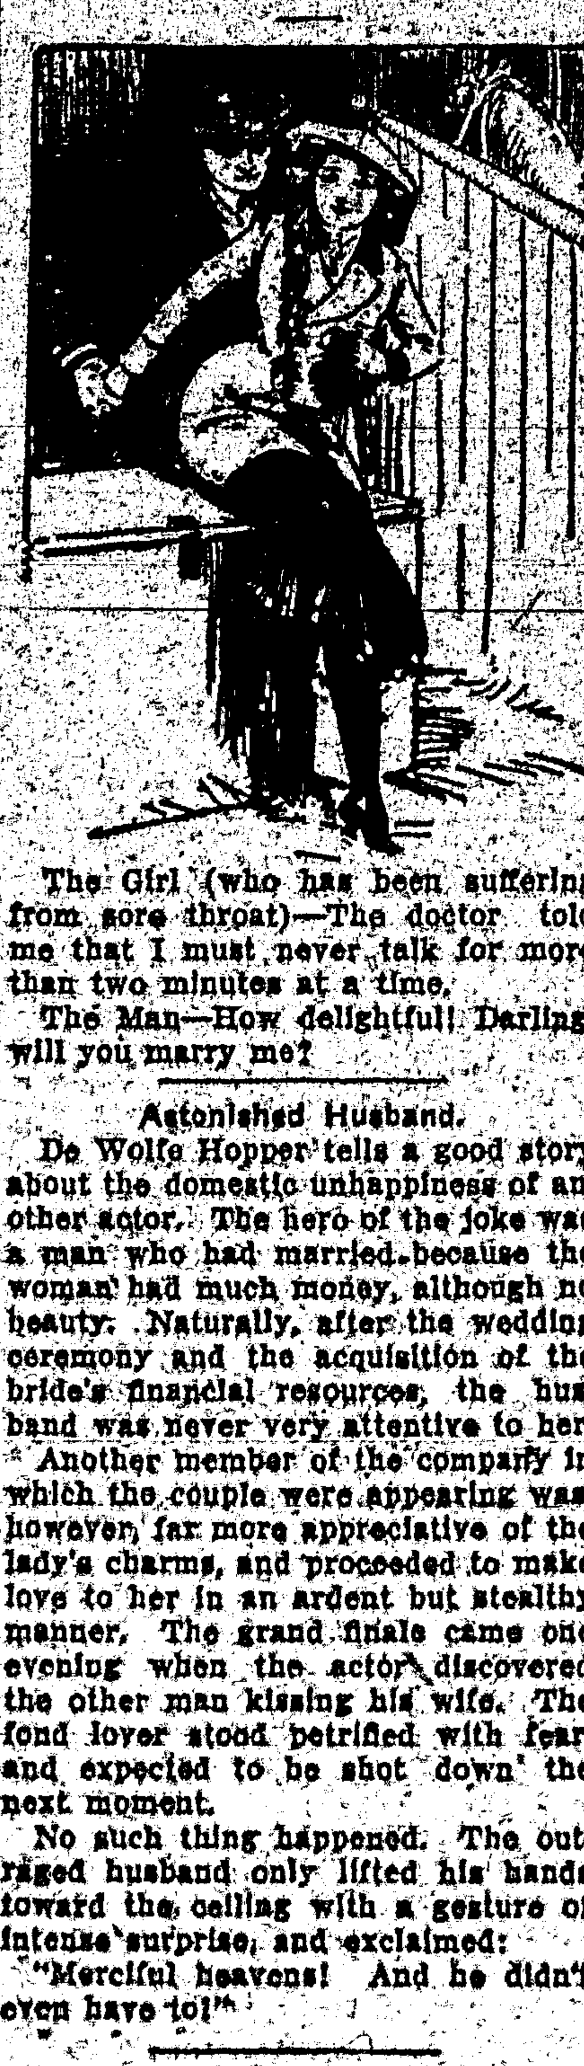
This may account for the fact that the trouble occurred early in the engagement.

The youth made a good getaway and was covering the ground steadily when he suddenly switched.

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy," he cried, as he took careful aim with the [illegible] [illegible] in the gallery. "[illegible] were the [illegible] words of Patrick [illegible] as he [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] at the [illegible] of the steaming kettle. If he had turned aside at the crucial moment, if Hannibal had not braved the minions of the English king, the power and helpfulness of harnessed steam might have been left for the discoverers of a future age. But such is the inexorable decree of fate. Hannibal swept down upon the plains of sunny Italy, the seeds of American independence were deeply rooted, and the steam engine was given to an amazed world. If James Hannibal—I should say Patrick Watt—I mean Liberty Henry—had hesitated—or looked back—the course of empire would have remained unchecked and history would have been rewritten."

Then he sat down amid tremendous [illegible]

THE ONE GIRL FOR HIM.



The Girl (who has been suffering from sore throat)—The doctor told me that I must never talk for more than two minutes at a time.

The Man—How delightful! Darling, will you marry me?

Astonished Husband.

De Wolfe Hopper tells a good story about the domestic unhappiness of another actor. The hero of the joke was a man who had married because the woman had much money, although no beauty. Naturally, after the wedding ceremony and the acquisition of the bride's financial resources, the husband was never very attentive to her.

Another member of the company in which the couple were appearing was, however, far more appreciative of the lady's charms, and proceeded to make love to her in an ardent but stealthy manner. The grand finale came one evening when the actor discovered the other man kissing his wife. The fond lover stood petrified with fear, and expected to be shot down the next moment.

No such thing happened. The outraged husband only lifted his hands toward the ceiling with a gesture of intense surprise, and exclaimed:

"Merciful heavens! And he didn't even have to!"

Not That Kind.

"It would save a lot of trouble," said a newspaper man the other day to Representative Slayden of Texas, after the Democratic caucus on the Henry resolution to investigate the "money trust," "if you would allow us to attend the caucus."

"On the contrary," replied Mr. Slayden, with a twinkle in his eye, "I thought it would make a lot of trouble."

"Well, can't you give me an interview on it, now that the fight is over?"

"No," answered Mr. Slayden, "it would be against my principles. I never kiss and tell!"

HARD TO DROP

But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it.

"About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum'!

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so we returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ills and take up Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DAIRY

AYRSHIRES GOOD DAIRY COWS

Almost Ideal Animal for Consumer on Account of Uniform Composition of Her Milk.

The Ayrshires are distinguished more as good average dairy cows than for heavy production either of milk or butterfat. In both these regards they occupy a position midway between Jerseys or Guernseys and Holsteins. An average herd of Ayrshires would probably produce more milk and butterfat than an average herd of other dairy breeds, but a selected herd of Ayrshires would fall much behind the production of a selected herd of the other breeds. For advanced registry, an Ayrshire cow must produce 6,000 pounds of milk and 214 pounds of butterfat as a two-year-old. The requirements gradually increase until the cow is five years old, when she must produce 8,500 pounds of milk and 322 pounds of butterfat. The milk tests somewhat less than 4 per cent. of butterfat and about 12½ per cent. total solids. From the standpoint of the milk consumer the Ayrshire is almost ideal, because of the uniform composition of the milk, but the heavy flow which many producers want for profitable production is lacking.

Twenty-four head of Ayrshire cows owned by different experiment stations in America produced an average of 6,532 pounds of milk per year and an average test of 3.85 per cent. of butterfat, or 252 pounds per year. The test of the milk 17 cows gave an average of 12.38 per cent. total solids. In this the fat represented 29.6 per cent. of the total solids, as compared with 34.5 per cent. for the Jerseys and 28 per cent. for the Holsteins.

For veal production the Ayrshire ranks next to Holsteins. The calves weigh from 60 to 75 pounds at birth and are strong, vigorous and active.

USEFUL STOOL FOR A MILKER

Provision Is Made in Front for Placing Milk Pail—Not Hard to Put Together.

I have a good milking stool which provides a seat for the milker and a place to set the pail, says a writer in the Farm and Home. Two by 10-inch stuff was used in the making. The seat is 10 inches square, and underneath it is nailed a board 18 inches long which projects out far enough to hold the pail. The legs are 12 inches high.

Overfeeding the Calf.

Overfeeding the calf results in taxing the digestive organs beyond their limited capacity, which naturally deranges the whole system, and is often the cause of scours. Then, again, when the milk is fed at a temperature lower than the animal's body, which in cattle is about 102 degrees, the vitality of the calf is lowered in its effort to heat the food to a point where proper digestion begins; hence it is advisable not to feed cold milk until the calf reaches the age when its activity is sufficient to maintain body temperature.

Selling Unprofitable Cows.

A farmer made the following statement after testing his milk cows the first time:

"I found that I had one cow that gave over 6,000 pounds of milk in a year. From her I could not help making a profit. I found that I had another that gave some 2,800 pounds of milk in a year. From her I couldn't help making a loss."

Every farmer should test his cows and find out how many profitable cows he is feeding and caring for.

CARING FOR THE YOUNG COW

Early Breeding of Heifers Advocated by Dairymen—Very Best Market for Skim Milk.

(By W. H. UNDERWOOD.)

I have long followed the plan of raising ten to a dozen calves each year, thus being allowed to replace the inevitable losses of the dairy and to constantly cull and sell those which I consider least desirable. I think this practice ought to be followed on every farm where skim milk is available, because a dairy calf offers one of the very best markets for this dairy by-product.

I let these calves become mothers rather young. It is surprising how very early a vigorous young heifer will breed if the opportunity is given her. I had once a Jersey-Holstein cross-bred heifer that gave birth to her full term calf when only fourteen and one-half months old.

It is the business of a dairy cow to give milk and to learn to turn all her products and energies along this channel, and so the earlier she can get started in the right way the better.

It is sometimes said that early breeding stunts or dwarfs a heifer, but I have had many heifers to drop their first calves at from eighteen to twenty months of age, and afterward they developed into cows which were large and vigorous for their breed.

I like best to start with a September or October calf and then, if they spend their first winter under favorable conditions, with plenty of skim milk and early cut hay, bran and ground oats in addition, they will be sleek and plump when they go to pasture in the spring.

Great Difference in Milk.

Every person who has never milked cows, as well as some who have only witnessed this interesting process at a very safe distance, realize that there is not much variation in the quantity of milk from certain cows in the herd and on the same feed, but to most people "milk is milk," very few having any correct ideas as to what is commonly called the "richness of it."

Oats Hay for Cows.

Oats hay put up at the right time, when it is not too ripe and hard, makes an excellent roughage feed for cows. The proper time to cut oat hay is when the grain is in the dough and the straw not over-ripe. If the grain is allowed to develop fully the straw will be too ripe to make good hay; if cut too green there will be little, if any, strength in the grain.

DAIRY NOTES

Don't expect the dairy cow to give a very large return in milk for an inferior ration.

The pails used for feeding the calves should be scalded regularly every time they are used.

After the third month the calf will begin to want extra water, and some may be mixed with the milk.

Observe with care and note as a first point that the cow should have a large and ample-sized body.

Cold rains are much harder on cows than dry cold. Damp cold penetrates to the bones. Provide dry shelter.

Turn separator with a steady and uniform speed and flush down with skim milk or water at end of separation.

One man says the first year of milking is the proper time in which to make the foundation for a persistent milker.

In dairying there is no excuse for the man who goes at it blindly and blames luck and the weather for his failure.

Dairying is not necessarily a complicated line of work but at the same time it takes care in order to make a success.

It is quite customary among dairymen to quit feeding calves skim milk when they attain the age of eight to nine months.

The calf is the cow in the making. Feed with that thought in mind. Generous feeding now ensures generous milkings by-and-by.

If you don't believe in keeping cows comfortable visit the stables of the man who get large milk checks. That ought to convince you.

If the cream does not ripen rapidly as is often the case in the winter time the addition of a small amount of buttermilk will help the ripening process.

MADE IT ALMOST TOO STRONG

Bachelor's Excuse for Not Visiting the "Only Baby" Almost Cost Him Father's Friendship.

"One of my closest friends," said a Philadelphia bachelor, "is the proud father of a newly-arrived baby boy. For some days I've had a sneaking and guilty feeling that I ought to visit him and make some comment on the obvious superiorities of his offspring. I couldn't bring myself to do it, though, because, according to my way of thinking, no baby is human until it is at least one year old. I'm not very keen about associating with infants, anyway, but I draw the line absolutely until the year mark rolls around.

"By way of apology, however, I decided to call up my friend on the telephone. The first question he asked was why I hadn't been over to see Toodles.

"'Well, old man,' I said, 'I've been intending to get around to see that boy of yours. In fact, I made note of it six weeks ago.'

"'Indeed!' he answered, 'and never before have I known a man to inject so much sarcasm in one small word. 'Well, it happens,' he continued, 'that the boy has only been in this world three weeks.'

"It took me ten minutes to regain his friendship."

As It Sounded to Him.

Young Fred was on his way to his grandmother's home. The train reached a small station.

"Bunker Hill!" shouted the brakeman, putting his head in at the door. "Bunker Hill!"

"Mamma, mamma!" demanded Fred. "What has she done that they treat her that way?"

"What way, my child?" inquired his mother.

"Why," explained Fred, "didn't the conductor say 'Bump her heels?'"

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. Robert Blankenship, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA.

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything.

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. Gaston Blondeau, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles.

"I got two bottles of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman.

"I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. Mattie Hodnot, Box 406, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself.

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. Mary A. Hockenberry, 713 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed.

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it.

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. Blayton, 1030 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

Why don't you try this reliable remedy?

Small Encouragement.

Kate—They say a woman is as old as she looks.

Maud—Never mind, dear; we all know you are only twenty-six."

Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

Usually a man is a poor judge of his own importance.

Final Recourse.

"Do you want to get a hearing in this court?" shouted the magistrate.

"Sure, sir," replied the very deaf defendant.

"Then," yelled the magistrate, with a last mighty effort, "you will have to go to a specialist."
