COUNTY TEACHERS MEET

County Teachers' Association to Gather at Carrizozo, the First of March

LARGE PROGRAM ARRANGED

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association will meet in Carrizozo, on Saturday, March 1, 1913. Three sessions; a forenoon, an afternoon, and an evening session, will be held. In connection with this meeting of the association there will be several features of especial interest to the pupils in the schools throughout the county and the pupils in all the schools are urged to prepare to take part in these exercises. Parents and patrons of the school throughout the county are urgently requested to attend the association.

The following is an outline of the program that is being prepared.

Saturday March 1, 1913.

Forenoon Session.

10 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. Association Meeting Papers and talks by teachers and others.

11:30 a. m. to 12:00 m. Boys and Girls Industrial Club Meeting. Reports from local clubs. Organization of county club, election of county officers, adoption of a constitution.

Afternoon Session.

1:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m., Teachers' Association

3:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m., Field Day Exercises; Basket Ball and Base Ball, class and individual contests in Running, Jumping and other appropriate field day exercises.

Evening Session.

7:30 to 8:00 p. m., County Contest. Section C for pupils under 10 years of age, Section B for pupils over 10 and under 14, Section A for pupils over 14 years of age. (See rules for contest below)

All teachers should attend this meeting and take a part in the exercises and should also have their pupils prepare to take part in the features appropriate for them.

Rules for Contests.

1. Only those who are bona fide pupils in good standing in their respective schools shall be permitted to compete in any contest. Where schools have closed before the date of the contest pupils who were members of the school in good standing at the time of closing may compete.

PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

2. Pupils entering the public speaking contests will be divided into three classes according to age, Class A consisting of all pupils 14 years of age or over, class B of all pupils 10 years of age and under 14, and class C of all pupils under 10 years of age.

3. Each school room may have one representative in each class.

4. Pieces selected for speaking shall not be of such length as require more than three minutes for delivery.

5. In all cases where schools are still in session and in other cases when practicable the teachers shall direct the preparation and training of contestants.

6. Pupils whose teachers are not able to direct their preparation because of their schools having closed shall submit their selections to the county superintendent for approval.

FIELD DAY CONTESTS

7. The athletic contest or field day exercises shall consist of such basket ball or base ball games between school teams as can be arranged, and class or individual contests in racing, jumping, or other appropriate field day exercises.

8. Basket ball and base ball contests will be conducted according to the official standard rules for such games except as these rules may be modified as to length of game or otherwise by agreement of the contending teams, such modifications to have the approval of the teachers of the schools which the contending teams represent, before becoming effective.

COUNTY SCHOOL EXHIBIT

A county exhibit of school work will be held in connection with the Teachers' Association meetings if a sufficient number of exhibits are sent in to warrant it. Any line of school work may be exhibited, maps drawn by pupils, compositions or essays, arithmetic papers or other written lessons, school industrial or manual art exhibits, etc. Let each teacher select some of the best school work of her pupils and send it or bring to this meeting

BOYS' AND GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL CLUB

The Lincoln County Boys' and Girls' Industrial Club will be organized if sufficient members of local clubs are in attendance. The organization will be along the lines planned by the extension department of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at the State College of New Mexico. Each local club will be entitled to one delegate or representative to each five members or fraction thereof, but clubs of fewer than 15 members may send their delegates. Carrizozo and Ancho have already organized local clubs and those schools still in session that have not already organized should do so at once and elect delegates to represent them in the county organization We presume all teachers have received the circular of instructions from Supt. Conway of the Agricultural College. Any who have not received it may do so by writing to W T. Conway, Superintendent Extension Department of New Mexico College of Agricultural and Mechanic Arts.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MEETS

The Carrizozo Junior League met at the Commercial Club rooms on Tuesday afternoon in business session. The meeting was opened by the older children singing "Neighbor Mine". The League adopted as its motto "We work for Cleanliness". About ninety members were enrolled and more buttons have been sent for the members.

Committees were appointed to look into the matter of starting a city Park. The matter of water supply, securing trees and flower seed will be investigated by the committees.

There will be a special meeting of the League at the School House at 3:30 Friday afternoon, February 14.

The essay contest to which about seventy essays were submitted on the best way to beautify the town, was put in the hands of a committee of Judges composed of J. E. Bell, J. A. Haley and F. W. Gurney. The winners of the contest have not been made public as yet.

TULLY PROPOSES ROADS

Submits two bills for National Highways thru County to the Legislature

HOUSE PASSES SALARY BILL

Representative A. V. Tully who represents Lincoln County in the State Legislature has introduced two Bills into that body during the past week which if passed and become law will make Lincoln County the hub of two National Highways, one being the Borderland Route and the other the Ocean to Ocean route.

The bill as introduced by Mr. Tully are as follows:

An act to provide specifically for the location and construction of a State Highway and the necessary bridges, between the city of Roswell, by way of Glencoe post office, the Rio Ruidoso Valley and post office, Tularosa and Alamogordo to Las Cruces, and there to connect with the Camino Real System of State Highways

Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of New Mexico:

Section 1. There is hereby created a state highway, to start from the west end of Second Street in the town of Roswell, at the corporate limits, thence by the county road of Chaves and Lincoln Counties to Picacho Post office, thence by way of the Post Office of Tinnis, the Hondo Crossing of the Bonito, San Patricio, and Glencoe Post Office to Ruidoso Post Office in Lincoln County; thence via Mescalero and Bent to Tularosa and Alamogordo in Otero County; thence by the most feasible and practicable line to the Post Office of Organ and the town of Las Cruces in Dona Ana County; there to connect with the Camino Real System of State Highway.

Sec. 2. The location construction, repair and maintenance of said state highway shall be done under the authority and control of the State Highway Commission, and out of the proceeds of the sale of bonds as provided in the Act entitled "An Act providing for the issuance of bonds by the State of New Mexico, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a system of state highway," approved June 10, 1912, and known and cited as the State Highway Bond Act or in any other fund subject to the disposal of the State Highway Commission. There is hereby specifically appropriated the sum of thirty (30) thousand dollars, to be expended according to the provisions of Section 4 of said State Highway Bond Act said sum to be apportioned along the line of said state highway among the said three counties according to the provisions of Section 4 of said Act

Sec. 3. It is hereby stated that this Act is necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health and Safety, and shall therefore take effect immediately upits passage and approval.

An act to provide specifically for the location and construction of a State highway and the necessary bridges between the post office of Hondo in Lincoln County, and via Lincoln, Capitan and Nogal to Carrizozo, from whence it shall run to the town of Socorro, and thence via the Magdalena-Springerville State highway to the boundry of the State of New Mexico on what is known as the 'Ocean to Ocean Autombile Route."

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of New Mexico:

Section 1. There is hereby created a state highway to start at Hondo post office in Lincoln County and run via Lincoln, Capitan and Nogal to Carrizozo, from whence it shall run by the most practicable and feasible line to the town of Socorro in Socorro County, N. M., there to connect with the Magdalena-Springville State Highway, on what is known as the "Ocean to Ocean Automobile Route"

Sec. 2. The location, construction, repair and maintenance of said state highway shall be done under the authority and control of the State Highway Commission, and out of the proceeds of the State Highway Commission, and out of the proceeds of the sale of bonds as provided in the Act entitled, "An Act providing for the issuance of bonds by the State of New Mexico, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a system of state highways," approved June 10, 1912, and known and cited as the State Highway Bond Act, or in any other fund subject to the disposal of the Highway Commission There is hereby specifically appropriated the sum of twenty-five thousand ($25,000) dollars, to be expended according to the provisions of Section 4 of said State Highway Bond Act; said sum to be apportioned along the line of said state highway between Lincoln and Socorro Counties, according to the provisions of Section 4 of said Act.

Sec 3. It is hereby stated that this Act is necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety, and shall therefore take effect immediately upon its passage and approval.

COUNTY SALARY BILL

The House has already passed a salary bill and it is held up in the Senate where it may be passed but lacks the two-third majority to use the emergeny clause and make it effective at once Several bills as substitutes have been proposed and the governor is said to oppose the Bill below and would probably veto same if passed by both houses

As finally adopted by the house, the salary bill is as follows on important points.

Counties of the first class, those having an assessed valuation of four millions or over

Counties of the second class, these having over two and a half millions, and less than four.

Counties of the third class, those having over one and three quarter millions assessed valuation, and less than two and a half millions.

Counties of the fourth class, those having one million in assesse l valu ation and less than one and three quarter millions.

Counties of the fifth class, those having an assessed valuation of less than one million:

HOME MISSION RECEPTION

A very successful and enjoyable reception, the first of a series, was given by the ladies of the Home Mission Society in the office of District Attorney Hamilton on Wednesday afternoon. The receptions are to be monthly affairs, and free will offerings for the M. E church work are accepted. The committee in charge of the 'tea' as was called on Wednesday were Mrs. H. B. Hamilton, chairman; Mrs. Clarence Spence, Mrs. J. B. Farley, Mrs Fred Jones who were assisted by Mrs H. S Fairbanks

Delicious refreshments consisting of turkey salad, sandwiches, coffee and cake were served The total receipts after expenses had been paid amounted to over $20.00, which is considered a splendid showing. The girls of the local basket ball team had a candy booth which netted the team $6 00

The next tea will be in charge of Mrs Stanley Squier and a committee to be announced later. There will be a business meeting of the mission society on Wednesday Feb 26

THE EXPERIMENTAL FARM

The experimental Farm committee composed of Messrs. Gurney, F. W. Jones and Stevens accepted the well drilled on the local experimental farm this week from E. E. Phillips the driller. The well was down to a depth of 250 feet and had a stand of 190 feet of water which is thought to be sufficient for all irrigation purposes on the tract. Adequate means are lacking for the testing of the well just at this time but the committee expect to make a thorough test in the course of a week or two, when sufficient pipe and a pump will be available.

HUMOROUS ESSAYIST

George Fitch Gives History of This State in Humorous Vein

TELLS FACTS IN BREEZY STYLE

George Fitch, the great humous essayist, has made fewer happier descriptions than that of New Mexico, which appears in a recent syndicate series, and which we are taking pleasure in reproducing as a sample both of the matchless style of the great writer, and the close grasp of historical fact beneath the smile

"New Mexico has only been a state for a little over a year, which is a pretty fair proof that the first shall be last; for long before the Pilgrims had ever begun loading the Mayflower, New Mexico was settled by white men and was moving forward at a speed which would make a snail look like the Empire State Express.

"For deliberate growth New Mexico holds all records. It was first settled by the Spanish in 1598. Nineteen years later it had forty colonists and eleven churches. In the last three hundred years it has achieved 327,000 people. However, considering its distance from anywhere in particular this is a pretty good record.

"Moreover New Mexico has gradually improved the character of its citizens. It began with Apaches, who were chased out by the Spaniards, who were in turn booted out by the Mexicans. Then the cowboys and bad men ejected the Mexicans and finally the persevering farmer and fruit raiser crowded out the desperadoes with the nervous trigger finger One can now travel New Mexico from one end to another without encountering anything more perilous than dust in the eyes, all literature to the contrary notwithstanding

"New Mexico is situated in the western elbow of Texas, and is carefully defended from the rest of the United States by mounains, deserts and transcontinental railroad fares. It has 122,000 square miles and enough mountains to furnish scenery for all the people in the world. It is one of the dryest states in the union, running most of its rivers on a six months' schedule and the farmer has to borrow a mountain stream before he can get the land even interested in agriculture. It has some brand new and hustling towns, one fine old Spanish relic 300 years of age, Santa Fe, and a large number of extinct and perfectly behaved Indian settlements varying from 1000 to 2000 years in age.

"New Mexico was once very unhealthy owing to the great danger of breathing Indian arrows and revolver bullets, but has since become noted for the wonderful nutritiousness of its air. New Mexico air will revamp and half-sole a pair of worn out lungs in six months' time.

"New Mexico was once connected with civilization by the Santa Fe trail, a 1100-mile long wagon road, ornamented with skulls. It is now reached by the Santa Fe railroad, and the tourist who stops at the eating houses of this railroad and absorbs the products of New Mexico's soil, learns to love the state in spite of the Indian curio sellers and their prices"

NEW YORK'S BOWERY

Old Timers Lament Passing of Famous Thoroughfare.

No Longer Do Easy Marks With Plenty of Money Frequent Its Glittering Resorts—"Dart Game" Passes Into Oblivion.

New York.—"The Bowery's on the bum. Say, you can go out any night with a cannon and fire a grapeshot up and down the street and not hit a sucker; there's nothing doing. Strangers don't come here any more," was the first thing an old timer said when the report went up and down the other day that John H. McGurk, whilom proprietor of "Suicide Hall" and of other unsavory dives, was dying in California.

Of course the Bowery is not entirely dead. There are still plenty of saloons with back rooms on it and on the adjacent streets and alleys where the underworld gathers and hatches gun plots and plans gang feuds, but the times when the street was thronged with sailors and countrymen apparently eager to be "trimmed" have gone and none know it better than the trimmers themselves.

The dime museum used to flourish on the Bowery and the places were a source of great profit to their owners. You paid only a dime to get in, but unless you were extremely lucky you paid a great deal more to get out. The blood testing apparatus, the phrenologist and the "envelope game," with its promises of valuable prizes, as gold watches, if you guessed right, separated you from the rest of your property. They flourished for years and did a big trade, but the police got after them and they gradually were forced out of business.

Lately three or four of them have started up again, but to judge from appearances and from the admissions of the "cappers" of the places themselves they are not making any money. They all display outside the same garish lithographs of scantily dressed women and underneath is the same old sign of "Men Only" which served to attract thousands for so many years and which never fulfilled the promise it seemed to make. Also outside some mechanical musical contrivance jangles noisily and tunelessly.

A reporter went into three or four of these places the other day and the prospect was dreary. At one of the places, on the east side of the street, when the reporter was paying his admission, the ticket man impressed on him the fact that "this isn't a moving picture show." It certainly was not. The "show" consisted of the old time hideous anatomical exhibit of diseases and freaks, ending with the "two-headed Chinese dragon brought to this country fifty-five years ago and worshipped by the people of that heathen land. And now, gentlemen"—the reporter was the only visitor—"I have shown and explained to you all these interesting specimens, and that is all," concluded the exhibitor in his sing song voice.

"Isn't there anything else?"

"You can stay and look around again if you want to," replied the showman, as if surprised that any one should want to stay any longer.

The paraphernalia for the "dart" game was in evidence, but there was no game. "The man who runs it," explained the showman, "is at the bicycle show this week. He's a bike fan."

In this pastime you throw a little winged dart and try to pin one of a hundred or more tickets hanging on the wall. If you succeed you get as a prize some article corresponding to the number on your ticket. On the wall also were hanging "gold" watches, opera glasses, bracelets and other things, and in old days these articles used frequently to be won—by the "cappers" for the game, until you had exhausted your funds in trying for them. The sport is first cousin to the "envelope" game, which was a swindle pure and simple. It's victims, lured on by seeing the "capper" win watches or receive in place of the watches real money, were persuaded frequently to put up $5 or $10 on their sure chances. Of course they never won, and often if they protested they were roughly handled.

TEXTILE WORKERS SCARCE

Mill Girls at Lancashire and Yorkshire Dislike to Wear Clogs and Shawls of Factory.

London.—There is a great dearth of operatives for the cotton and woolen mills of Lancashire and Yorkshire. The cause of this is the growing dislike of girls to appear in the immemorial dress of the factory girl—clogs and shawls.

The "Lancashire lassies" point to their sisters who work at the shops or in the office, although at a much lower wage, who are able to wear costumes, brightly trimmed hats and gloves and shoes.

The work of the mill girls discourages any attempt at smart or even neat appearance. The wearing of clogs instead of shoes and shawls instead of hats causes the mill girls to be humbled in the eyes of other girls whose occupation permits them to dress more attractively, although they earn only a few shillings weekly as against the $5 or more earned by the despised and rejected factory operative.

The mill managers have met to discuss how mill work for girls could be made more attractive, for it is undoubted that if the girls renounce the factories nothing remains but to import foreign labor. One manager said that the girls in his mill had dropped shawls and clogs and were going to work in flower laden hats and dogskin gloves.

HELPS TO CAPTURE BURGLAR

Youngster and Companion Follow a Robber Half a Mile and March Him to Jail.

Kansas City.—Perhaps the fact that his father is a deputy sheriff had something to do with George Breyfogle, fourteen years old, overcoming his boyish fears long enough to take a leading part in the capture of a burglar, found in the Breyfogle home at Overland Park, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City. Other members of the family were away from the house when George and a companion, Harvey Hosner, also fourteen years old, entered. They heard some one moving upstairs.

"Shucks, it can't be nothing," Breyfogle said, "the folks ain't home yet."

A window was raised and the boys saw a man drop from an upstairs window and run. The boys seized shotguns and followed. After a half-mile run they halted the man and marched him to a constable, who took him to jail. The house had been ransacked, but the arrival of the boys prevented the burglar from taking the loot he had gathered together.

INDIANS BURY OLD CHIEF

Columbia River Braves Give Warrior Full Funeral Ceremonies.

White Bluffs, Wash.—With full funeral ceremonies accorded chiefs of their tribes, the Columbia River Indians buried the body of A-ke-wa-ta on beautiful Craig Island, a few miles above White Bluffs.

The chief was the oldest of all the Columbia River Indians, his tribesmen declaring him to be more than 100 years of age. While attempting to negotiate the fast water at Locke's landing his canoe was capsized and he drowned in less than two feet of water. He was almost totally blind from age.

All the Indians in this part of the valley and many from distant points attended the funeral.

SHIP MET A HERD OF DEER

Animals Were Swimming Delaware Bay to Escape Hunters, According to Steamer's Crew.

Wilmington, Del.—When the North German Lloyd steamer, Neckar, from Bremen bound for Philadelphia, was going up Delaware bay it was forced to deviate from its course because of a herd of deer in the bay. Had it kept in the channel it would have killed several of the animals.

The sight was the most unusual that the pilot and the officers of the liner ever witnessed. The deer were swimming rapidly for the New Jersey shore. They had evidently plunged into the bay from the Delaware side to escape from hunters. They made the swim in safety.

WHERE WE FIND EMERALDS

Famous Muzo Mines in the Republic of Colombia Produce Finest Gems.

The finest emeralds are found in the Republic of Colombia, at the famous Muzo mines in the department of Boyaca, seventy miles north by west of Bogota, which have been worked since 1558. The Spaniards mined there in the middle of the sixteenth century, but withdrew after a time, owing to continual fighting with the Indians; with the result that for awhile the locality of the mines was unknown. They are now worked by an English company, in partnership with the government. The emeralds at Muzo occur in calcite veins running through black carboniferous limestone in all directions and at all angles. Often the limestone is covered with earth, in which bushes and trees are growing; this has to be cleared before prospecting is possible. When calcite veins have been located, the side of the hill is dug away in "banks," usually by Indians, whose chief tool is a steel bar forged to a point at one end. The pieces of calcite vein are examined superficially for emeralds, and are then set aside for conveyance to the sorting-shed, where a detailed examination is made, and the emeralds are divided into fifteen grades according to color, transparency, size, freedom from flaws, and so on.

DUEL BETWEEN SHARK and SWORDFISH

OUR fishing smack, anchored off the Florida coast, was lazily rolling in the gentle swells of the sea, with its idle sails flapping and anchor chain squeaking dismally. A small boat had put off from the vessel and two of the rowers were watching several of the crew disporting in the warm water. With them was a powerful Newfoundland dog whose thrashing and barking added to the interest of the scene.

Suddenly one of the rowers glancing toward the distant shore caught sight of a peculiar trail of foam that seemed to be advancing rapidly. For a moment he was silent and thoughtful, but when the finlike projection above the water came into full view he set up a yell of warning.

"Sharks! Sharks!"

That was sufficient to electrify the swimmers. With one accord they swam with all their might toward the small boat. They reached it and were hauled aboard by their companions before the shark could get within striking distance.

But not so the dog. Not realizing the danger, the Newfoundland barked and swam around the boat, accepting the calls of the men as a part of the game. Meanwhile the sharp approached rapidly, and the men could see the great dorsal fin clerving the water like a knife.

But it seemed impossible to rescue the dog in time. The great man eater knew this, and never for an instant checked its course. When within a few yards of the frantic dog the fin disappeared below the surface and every man knew that the shark was sinking to make the fatal lunge.

At the very moment one of the men caught the dog by the collar the open jaws of the shark, with their double row of incurving teeth swept upward. There seemed no chance to prevent a tragedy, but one of the sailors, quick-witted and alert, thrust a long oar straight down at the terrible jaws.

More through luck than premeditation, the heavy oar struck the lower jaw a glancing blow and then slipped directly into the mouth. There was a snap and jerk which nearly threw the sailor overboard.

When he raised the oar from the water, it was to find it snapped in two as cleanly as if cut by an ax. The next minute the men hauled the dripping, panting Newfoundland dog into the boat.

They tried to frighten the big man eater away with their oars, splashing and shouting vigorously, but the shark was not frightened by this demonstration. It was too enraged by the wound it had received from the blade of the oar and too hungry to retreat at once.

While these tactics were going on the rowers were so intently watching the shark that they took little note of anything else. Suddenly another long, powerfully built creature swam leisurely between the boat and the angry shark. It looked for an instant like another huge man eater.

Apparently attracted by the commotion the newcomer swept close to the boat to get a good view. The shark, at the same instant, having defeated of its attempts to get at its prey, turned viciously upon the other fish.

Its anger and blindness apparently made it less cautious than usual. With swift movement it lunged toward the other fish, and its powerful jaws snapped together just as its prey caught sight of it and darted forward.

The next moment a long, powerful swordfish leaped a foot out of the water and began thrashing the sea into a white foam. The water was instantly dyed crimson. In its upward leap the sailors had seen that part of its tail was missing.

The shark had caught the swordfish off guard and snapped off fully six inches of its tail. It was from this wound that the blood came.

Now, the swordfish is usually a quiet creature, rarely ascending to the surface, and disposed to let other finny inhabitants of the deep alone if they do not molest it. But when in search of food or when its anger is aroused by an attack it is capable of executing some pretty rapid and long sustained motions.

With a movement so swift that the eye could barely follow it through the water, the giant swordfish dashed toward the shark with its powerful lance aimed for the other's vitals. But sharks are quick acting fish, too, and the big man eater thrown suddenly on the defensive dodged and completely turned over.

The sword struck it a slanting blow on the side and ripped a surface wound a yard long. At the same moment the jaws of the shark snapped viciously, and another portion of the lacerated tail was snipped off.

The two combatants remained thus for ten seconds facing each other and waiting for the next round. The sailors, forgetting their own danger, watched the two fighters with fascinated gaze.

Once more the swordfish began the attack. With incredible swiftness it turned and darted away, as if disgusted with the fight, and then swung around and came for the shark at the speed of a railroad train.

The shark knew that it was powerless to avoid that terrible sword except by dodging. When the swordfish was within a yard of it the man eater sprang upward and tried to escape the deadly weapon. Fully two feet out of the water the shark leaped.

But once more the sword raked its side, cutting and tearing through skin and flesh until the blood poured forth in a stream. This second wound brought all the fighting blood of the shark to the surface.

Taking advantage of the muddied water created by the commotion, it plunged downward to a great depth, and then sprang upward with the huge jaws extended. The swordfish lost sight of it for an instant, and barely escaped being cut in two as the double row of teeth closed.

There was another swift and dexterous move on the part of the swordfish to escape. But this time the teeth grazed its side and ripped a piece of skin from it.

The shark, taking advantage of the situation, made a frantic close quarter attack. It snapped and lunged viciously, missing the swordfish each time by only a fraction of an inch. The latter dodged and leaped sideways to escape the cruel jaws.

The fight was so fierce that neither combatant could keep up the pace for long. At one moment the two big creatures floundered around on the surface of the water, and the next dropped entirely out of sight, but the foaming water rising to the surface showed that there was no letup in the struggle.

Suddenly the swordfish swept toward the boat, as if it intended to plunge straight through it, but it dipped at the critical moment and disappeared under it. Close behind it the shark came, and followed beneath the boat.

But it was less accurate in its movements, and its body struck the bottom of the boat a resounding whack. Temporarily disconcerted by this accident, the shark turned to snap angrily at the thing that had struck its head.

That interruption, short as it was, gave the swordfish the time to gain on its pursuer. When it reappeared on the opposite side of the boat it swerved sharply and darted away to a safe distance.

It was out of harm's way now, for in a test of speed and endurance the shark could not hope to win. Once more the watchers expected to see the combat terminate by the retreat of the discomfited swordfish.

For nearly five minutes the two combatants appeared almost motionless in the water. From the sides of each little crimson eddies ascended, showing how badly both had been injured. It was a drawn battle, and both seemed disinclined to renew the conflict. But clearly one of them had to be the victor.

The swordfish slowly moved off, with scarcely a perceptible swish of tail or fins. It seemed as if it was being moved by some under water force that had no connection with its body.

Perhaps a hundred feet away it checked its movements and once more lay quiet, the shark watching it carefully and anxiously. It knew better than the sign the meaning of these tactics.

The swordfish began to circle around again in a quick, jerky way, as if trying its power of speed. The shark remained stationary, waiting for the attack. With ever increasing circles and speed the swordfish continued its movements. Its speed at times seemed almost incredible. It swept in a clean circle around the boat, plunged deep into the water, and then leaped up toward the surface.

Apparently satisfied that it still had the sped and strength necessary for a continuance of the fight, it approached close to its waiting enemy. It played tag with the shark for a few moments, dashing in and away as if to test its courage, but at such a distance that the shark made no effort to pursue.

Then suddenly with a swish of its fins the swordfish turned and darted straight for the shark. It never swerved once from a straight line, but shot forward like an arrow from a bow.

The shark saw the approaching attack and once more sought to dodge the terrible sword. But this time, either through clumsiness or weakness it was slow in its movements. It delayed its jump a second too long.

There was a thud, a violent impact of something hard against flesh, and then a mighty motion of the water. The two big fish thrashed about so violently that for a moment the watchers could not tell which had the advantage.

Blood and foam were whipped together. The waves created by the struggle rocked the boat. When for an instant the two combatants ceased their fighting the men got a glimpse of the true state of affairs.

The sword of the smaller creature was sunk to the very hilt in the body of the shark, the end protruding from the opposite side. The blow has been delivered squarely in the side of the shark, and it was doomed.

There was an ineffectual struggle on the part of the shark to pull away from its adversary. It threshed the water violently with its tail, gasped and spurted blood from its mouth and then lay quite still on the surface.

The blow was mortal, and death came quickly. The big, heavy body was seen to jerk and move violently even after death, but the movements were caused by the swordfish trying to withdraw its long lance. Again and again it jerked and tried to back away from its enemy. But the sword was too deeply embedded in the flesh.

Its loss of blood and the fearful wounds it had received from the shark rendered the swordfish helpless. Its own mortal wound had been delivered before the last attack, and it was now only a matter of time before it would succumb.

Out of mercy for the victorious creature, the sailors rowed up to the two and with a few well directed blows on the head with their oars they put the swordfish out of its agony. No strength which they could exert would serve to release the sword.

Later the two carcasses were towed to the side of the ship and the shark was cut in half before the sword could be removed. By actual measurement it proved to be nearly four feet in length, and the big man eating shark weighed a ton and a half in bone and flesh.

Start Your Baby With Sound Health

Regular Bowel Movement from Childhood on Forestalls Future Serious Diseases

We cannot all start life with the advantages of money, but every child born is entitled to the heritage of good health. Through unfortunate ignorance or carelessness in the feeding of a baby its tiny stomach may become deranged. The disorder spreads to the bowels and before the mother realizes it the two chief organs on which the infant's comfort and health depend are causing it great suffering. If the condition is allowed to continue grave ailments often result.

There is, however, no occasion for alarm, and the sensible thing to do—but it should be done instantly—is to give the baby a small dose of a mild laxative tonic. In the opinion of a great many people, among them such well-known persons as the parents of Dixie Dudley, Magnolia, Ark., the proper remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. Earl Dudley writes: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used. It cured my baby of flatulency colic when the doctors failed; it cured my husband of constipation. My home shall never be without Syrup Pepsin." It is a pleasant-tasting laxative, which every person likes. It is mild, non-griping, and contains that most excellent of all digestants, pepsin.

This remedy is especially intended for infants, children, women, old people and all others to whom harsh cathartics, salt waters, pills, etc., are distressing. In fact, in the common disorders of life, such as constipation, liver trouble, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, and the various other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels nothing is more suitable than this mild laxative-tonic. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

DIXIE ASKEW DUDLEY

Two generations of people are using it today, and thousands of families keep it constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, the latter being the size bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

WHAT WORRIED HER.

"I asked your father and he said you were old enough to know your own mind."

"He didn't tell you how old I was, did he?"

Something to Be Thankful For.

Michael Meehan was the proud possessor of a brand new silk high hat. At the wake of his dearest enemy he had guarded it carefully, and as a consequence was strolling home with the tile unscathed. As he passed the site of a building operation, a lady acquaintance nodded pleasantly.

With an ostentatious wave of the hat, which exhibited it to excellent advantage, Michael bowed. At the same moment a brick sailed down from an upper floor and bounced from his bared skull. Upon coming to he inquired anxiously for the hat. A bystander restored it unharmed. Mike felt the egg-sized lump on his head occasioned by the impact of the brick, and then regarded his undamaged tile. "Begorry," he sighed in satisfaction, "it's lucky it is I saw the loidy in toime!"

A GOOD BREAKFAST.

Some Persons Never Know What It Means.

A good breakfast, a good appetite and good digestion mean everything to the man, woman or child who has anything to do, and wants to get a good start toward doing it.

A Mo. man tells of his wife's "good breakfast" and also supper, made out of Grape-Nuts and cream. He says:

"I should like to tell you how much good Grape-Nuts has done for my wife. After being in poor health for the last 18 years, during part of the time scarcely anything would stay on her stomach long enough to nourish her, finally at the suggestion of a friend she tried Grape-Nuts.

"Now, after about four weeks on this delicious and nutritious food, she has picked up most wonderfully and seems as well as anyone can be.

"Every morning she makes a good breakfast on Grape-Nuts eaten just as it comes from the package with cream or milk added; and then again the same at supper and the change in her is wonderful.

"We can't speak too highly of Grape-Nuts as a food after our remarkable experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.—Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

Touching the Cardinal.

At the Democratic convention in Baltimore last summer two of the sergeants-at-arms were Ohioans, Col. John Bolan of Toledo and Capt. Joseph Dowling of Dayton. Bolan is the wit who laid down the maxim that "anny man who parts his hair in the middle is no Dimmycrat."

When Cardinal Gibbons had finished the opening prayer, he descended from the rostrum and made his way toward the door. As he neared the exit where the two Ohioans were on guard, Bolan whispered:

"Joe, touch him whin he passes ye."

"All right, colonel," replied Dowling, with an inocent air. "What pocket has he got it in?"—Popular Magazine.

Rev. J. W Oliver of Duran was in town the past week to conduct the funeral service of our fellow townsman Mr Brown who died in Roswell. Mr. Brown, whose home has been in Corona for many years, has suffered for many months with a cancer on the lower lip He made several trips to specialists at Kansas City and for some time had been under treatment of Roswell doctors, but all to no avail. He was past 60 years of age and leaves a large family of children and a widow, who has been his companion for 40 years, to mourn his loss The family has the sympathy of the community in this trial.

PICACHO NOTES

The snow fall around this vicinity was about 8 or 10 inches.

Bony Kimbrell has filed on a homestead claim three or four miles south of here, where he has already moved.

Clement Hightower was here a few days this week surveying land for Pablo Fresquez and Martin Chavez.

Pablo Fresquez and his sons are very busy lambing part of their sheep out at their ranch So far they are having good luck.

Esiquel Sandoval started on horse back to his sheep camp near here last Friday night and his left leg was badly cut upon a barb wire fence.

W. E. Kimbrell went down to Roswell last week to purchase a windmill which he will install on his ranch near here.

SOCIALISTS CELEBRATE NATIONAL WOMAN'S DAY

To the average voter one of the most remarkable phases of the American Socialist Party is its increased advocacy and support of the suffrage movement. Special committees and departments have been created in state and national organizations

In order that greater attention may be devoted to the education of potential women voters classes in civics, economics and politics have been organized, social centers have been created, and now their latest move is the setting aside of February 23 as National Woman's Day.

On this day every man and woman, every official, lecturer and lay member will celebrate. Millions of leaflets will be distributed The entire Socialist Party will think, sing, talk and work for the industrial and political freedom of women.

Local Socialists will celebrate

LIGHT ON HIS PAST

Girl's Fiance Makes a Confession That Surprises More Than One Friend.

By FRANK FILSON.

"Fanny, you've been lording it over me for for the past month, ever since your engagement to Edward Brooks. But you can't do it any more," said her friend Mildred Thomas, holding out her left hand with a blush. Fanny Upton seized it and dragged her friend into the light. On Mildred's third finger sparkled a diamond in a platinum ring.

"Mildred!" exclaimed Fanny, kissing her. "Who is it?"

"I mustn't tell you," answerd Mildred. "Now don't be angry, dear, because you shall be the very first person to know. It's a sacred promise—for certain reasons."

"Oh, I'm sure I don't want to know, Mildred," said Fanny coldly, releasing the hand she held.

"Oh yes you do, Fanny. Now don't be cross. Listen! We're going to have an engagement party on Saturday night, and it will be announced then. And you are to come and be told first. See?"

Fanny was mollified a litttle. "Well, if you think it's worth making a secret of to please your fiance, all right," she said. "But you know very well he has secrets he hasn't shared with you."

"Fanny!" cried Mildred Thomas indignantly.

"Of course he has, goose. Don't you suppose he has been in love dozens of times—rapturously in love, and never told you a word of it?"

"Fanny," said her friend indignantly, "he told me that he has never been in love in his life before. He has never kissed any girl but me."

"Booh!" said Fanny mockingly. "Now Edward knew I was too sensible to fall for that sort of yarn and he confessed. But he didn't tell me all. No, sir, and I'm going to find out a whole lot more before I marry him."

Mildred remained coldly silent.

"Oh, Mildred, here's a joke," said her versatile friend. "Now are you game for it? Let's each write a letter to our fiances, saying, 'I have found out everything and shall expect you to explain—if you can.' What a joke that would be. Picture the poor men's faces! Will you, Mildred?"

"Mr. George Howard, Miss Upton."

"It seems a shame," murmured Mildred. "But I couldn't bear to think he had deceived me. Are you sure he has, Fanny?"

"My dearest girl, of course he has. How old is he? Twenty-eight! And never kissed anyone but you? Mildred, you certainly are simple. And now's the time to show him you aren't as simple as he thinks, and he'll think all the more of you for it. Is it a bargain?"

It was. It was not without many misgivings that Mildred Thomas mailed her letter to George Howard, but Fanny's hints were eating into her soul like vitriol. She must know, now, whether her lover ever had been in love before. That would be dreadful. Still she might forgive it, but she could never forgive deceit. When the letter was mailed she wanted it back, and all that day and the next she listened in terror for the postman's whistle. On the third day, Friday, the answer came—a hasty, incoherent letter, full of self-accusations and reproaches. "I shall tell you about what you refer to when I call tomorrow evening," he wrote, "and I shall come half an hour before the party, in the hope of gaining your forgiveness before the guests arrive."

Mildred was looking her prettiest when George Howard arrived. He looked so haggard and mournful that she could hardly find words with which to greet him. Bitterly now she repented having been persuaded by Fanny to play that foolish joke. But she must play her part through. They sat down very soberly side by side in the empty reception room.

"I'm going to tell you everything, Mildred," said George humbly. "I did not wilfully deceive you, for it was only because I had put the memory of that mad summer, two years ago, out of my mind and heart, and dared not recall it, even to myself. She was the only woman before you."

"Go on," murmured Mildred, and to her consternation she discovered that she was not shocked at all—only deeply interested.

"It was at Atlantic City. I won't tell you her name. We were almost the only guests at the hotel at the end of the season. We fell in love with each other; we loved each other madly. We were engaged. Then she went back to town, and I, like a fool, lived in a fool's paradise, anticipating the time when I should meet her again, to ask her to fulfill her promise.

"Well, the upshot was that she had imagined me to be a cousin of mine, Garfield Howard, the wealthy manufacturer. When I called at her home she was quite frank about it. She said she had loved me and would have fulfilled her promise, but she had resolved never to marry a poor man."

"The horrid cat!" exclaimed Mildred indignantly, slipping her hand into his.

"That broke the spell, Mildred. I realized then that I had never loved her. I learned to laugh at my infatuation, for I saw her as she was, and my love was dead. So don't you be afraid, in case we ever meet, for I have seen her two or three times since then, and there is nothing left in my heart but aversion."

"Darling!" said Mildred, putting up her face for a kiss.

"And I am forgiven, dearest?" whispered George.

"Absolutely. Now listen, for the guests will be here in a few moments. I'm going to announce it and tell them your name. It's all a profound secret, just as I promised you. I want you to meet my friend—"

But she did not finish the sentence, for the maid opened the door and announced Miss Upton and Mr. Edward Brooks. Mildred darted forward and embraced Fanny and shook hands with her fiance.

"I want to present my fiance," she annouced triumphantly. "Mr. George Howard. Miss Upton—Mr. Howard. Mr. Brooks. Now you have got to like each other as hard as you can. Fanny!"

The last remark was almost an interjection, for Fanny Upton had put forth her hand as gingerly as though it were of porcelain, and George was stretching out his finger tips as though he was afraid of never getting them back again.

"Mr. Howard and I have met before," said Fanny icily.

"You have? You never told me. Where?"

"I think it was at Atlantic City, or thereabouts," said Miss Upton casually.

Reprinted by Request.

An editor in the Blue Grass state has been trying for a long time to inject himself into politics and get elected to something. At last he was made a delegate to the state convention of his party. The day on which the convention opened was also the date of issue of his militant weekly newspaper; and in the excitement of the moment, he had forgotten to write his usual burning editorial. He was reminded of his dereliction just as he was leaving town for the convention.

"Oh," he said to the genial factotum of the mechanical department, "just reproduce last week's editorial, and state that it is reprinted by request."

The intelligent foreman followed instructions, and the editorial was served up to the amazed readers under the startling caption:

"Reprinted by Request of the Editor."

Golf Ball Poachers.

Many complaints have been received by the police lately of the loss of golf balls from the Epping Forest links, while actually in play. It is alleged that gangs of youths gather at places on the links where the players cannot see the balls fall, and that the balls disappear sometimes even when they fall on the fairway. As the result of a watch kept by the police in trees and behind hedges, several prosecutions have taken place recently.—London Mail.

Raising "Cavies."

There's a man near Providence who makes a good living by raising "cavies"—that is to say, guinea pigs—for medical schools and biological laboratories. The demand for the cavie is such that prices run about on the level of those for chickens.

SUCCESSFUL ON A DRY FARM

Much Depends Primarily Upon Nature of Soil Tilled and Manner in Which Work Is Done.

(By PROF. HOMER H. DERR.)

The success or failure of the dry-land farming depends primarily upon the nature of the soil he is tilling; and secondly, and none the less important, upon the manner in which he tills it. The most desirable land for this purpose is a deep, sandy loam. Such a soil is easy to plow deep and cultivate thereafter, and readily combines with organic matter, making a rich, deep seed bed which absorbs moisture rapidly and retains it for a longer period than most other soils. If made compact it will draw up nature's supply of moisture in the subsoil perfectly through the action of capillarity.

In this kind of soil roots of plants penetrate freely to a consideragle depth, which is not the case in clay, on account of the hardness of the subsoil. Owing to the compactness of the latter, water percolates through it very slowly and, when heavy rains come much of it is lost by being shed from the surface into watercourses and streams. The capillary action of water being drawn up through clay is not rapid enough, even if plenty is stored in the subsoil, to supply plants during extreme hot weather, when the demands are greatest, and there is little rainfall during that season.

On the other hand, land which has a thin layer of surface soil underlaid by a subsoil of sand or gravel is even more undesirable; for to attempt to raise a crop on such land in semi-arid regions is worse than folly, only amounting to time, labor and seed lost, unless summer rains have been unusually frequent and copious, as during the past season. A gravelly or coarse, sandy subsoil will readily absorb much water, but unlike the lamp wick in the oil, it will not draw it up to the surface again. This accounts for the fact that there is a much greater quantity of water flowing in underground channels than in streams upon the surface of the land. In seeking for new farming lands it is bred into the hearts of many of us to look for a clay subsoil; but beware to test the soil several feet deep, and remember that four or five feet of sandy or silt loam is ideal for the so-called dry-land farmer.

VALUABLE WAX FROM PLANT

Arid Desert Specially Adapted to Culture of Candelilla Weed—By-Products Possible.

Vegetable wax appears to be a product for which the arid desert is specially adapted. As a protection against excessive evaporation, the plants exposed to dry heat develop a waxy covering, and a British consular note states that in the western part of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila, in Mexico, the candelilla weed yields two per cent of wax, although in well watered regions it contains little or none. The extraction of this wax is becoming a considerable industry. Several extracting establishments have been recently started and one of them—now being enlarged—has a capacity of twenty-five tons of wax per month. There are certain possible by-products, such as tannin, to which little attention has been so far given. The wax product is exported to the United States, the British isles and Germany, and is in demand for many purposes, such as shoe polishes, floor waxes, phonograph records and electrical insulation.

Wheat and Rye.

Rye is more hardy than wheat, but when farm work is pressing in the spring a week or ten days would make a great deal of difference between wheat and rye. The rye grows so rank it dries out the soil fast. On the other hand, wheat gives us more latitude if we are rushed with other work or kept back by late rains.

HOW TO USE FLOWERS

STUDY OF PLANT HABITS AND GROWTH ESSENTIAL.

Keynote of an Artistic Floral Decoration Now Is Irregularity and the Surface Space Must Be Well Balanced.

The woman who essays to employ flowers for decorative purposes should delve deeply into the study of plant life to become familiar with their habits and growth.

Flowers of a stiff, upright growth do not lend themselves readily for decoration. When they are used, their natural tendencies must be humored, if the effect is at all artistic.

The erstwhile popular custom of banking cut flowers or growing plants and festooning with heavy ropes of evergreens no longer obtains.

The more artistic and natural, loose, graceful arrangement of flowers and plants is now used, and bare stretches of wall are bridged over with delicate trailing vines, supplemented by generous sprays and branches of foliage.

Receptacles for cut flowers should be neutral in color, and in shape follow the main lines of the flower.

The keynote of an artistic floral decoration is irregularity. There must be no geometric arrangement to tire the eye; no repeats to pall the senses. Instead, each portion of the decorative scheme must have a distinctive charm of its own.

Surface space must be well balanced. There must be no overcrowding at one point and bare stretches at another.

Flowers employed for decorating should be seasonable. The flower that in midsummer would compel admiration for its appropriateness as well as beauty would be wholly out of place in a midwinter decorative scheme. Nor must blooming plants or cut flowers and evergreens be combined in a decorative scheme.

The most artistic effect is produced by employing flowers of one color, with the setting of green that nature uses in all her color schemes.

Two colors may be combined, sometimes, with pleasing effect, provided they blend naturally or form a harmonious contrast.

When a number of rooms in a house are to be decorated for some such an occasion as a reception or similar function, the treatment depends upon the arrangement of the rooms.

When they may be thrown together, as may be done in modern houses of any pretensions, the same scheme should be carried out in all. If this is not the case, an individual scheme may prevail, if desirable, in each room.

TIDY FOR DRESSING TABLE

How This Useful Novelty Can Be Made With Remnants of Colored Silk.

In our sketch may be seen a little useful novelty that would make a nice, inexpensive present; it is for standing upon the dressing-table, and forms a combined watch-stand and tidy. It may be easily carried out with any prettily colored remnants of silk and for the foundation a piece of cardboard is cut out in the shape shown by diagram A. In the center of the upper part of this card a large dress hook is sewn, and the card is next smoothly covered on both sides with silk, a small slit being cut in the material for the hook.

Across the lower half a pocket is arranged lined with soft white silk and turned over at the top, so that it forms a little flounce and shows the lining with pretty effect.

The tidy is finished off at the edges with a tiny ribbon frill, or silk cord may take its place if preferred.

TOUCH OF CHINESE NEEDED

Fashionable Costumes For Spring Will Show Slight Suggestion of the Mongolian.

If your new spring costume is Mongolian in suggestion, it will be absolutely in line with fashion's new plans for the coming season. The Chinese touch must not be too strong, however, and should be merely a suggestion conveying the idea that you know what is what in sartorial matters.

(Copyright, by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

This gown by a famous Paris coutier has a tunic of brocade, showing raised Chinese figures in velvet on a pin striped ground, and this tunic in the Russian style, falls over a skirt of silver gray lansdowne draped about the ankles in the Turkish fashion, but showing smart, modern boots with buttoned tops of light suede.

Colored Shoes.

Colored shoes are being worn; they are in Russian green, russet, prune and other colors. For afternoon, the shoes should match the toilette in color, or if a black dress is worn with any color introduced by the trimming or belt, the shoes should match the trimming.

TURTLE EBONY IS LATEST

Lovely Brownish Red Wood That Is Being Used for Dressing Table Articles.

There is something new for mademoiselle who wishes a change—not silver, not celluloid, nor ivory—turtle ebony.

One of us are acquainted with the black ebony, and this new ebony is also of the wood, but in a lovely brownish red hue that brings out the grain of the wood. Its newness is its most distinctive feature, and it would be rather easier to keep clean than silver. There are many and various pieces, which come with little silver circles, quite plain and simple, ready to be marked with one's monogram or initial.

And as to the pieces one may choose, there is everything, from a hand mirror, hair or cloth brush, to shoe horns, nail files, button hooks, salve jars and hat brushes that one would like for the dresser or chiffonier.

Revival of Braid.

The revival of braid in various widths and makes as a trimming is very welcome; it is difficult otherwise to find variety for the finish of the many fabrics which are in vogue for tailor-suits. Rateen, of course, is in itself such a lovely material that it practically needs no trimming, but a little wool-work in Oriental colorings is often introduced in the blouse and the coat of the "three-piece costume."

YAAK "SPECIAL"

The Newest Beautifier

WONDERFUL FOR PIMPLES, COARSE PORES, FRECKLES, AND BLACKHEADS

PLUMPS WRINKLES OUT

KEEP YOUNG LOOKING FOR YEARS

An astonishing product for plumping out wrinkles, hollow cheeks, to a velvety, smooth, exquisite complexion, and keep young looking for years. The Chicago fair sex have suddenly become beautiful and fascinating.

Everywhere you look, walk of turn, you hear women and men talking—"Yaak," "Yaak," "Yaak" special. The Chicago beauty seekers have rushed about to get the latest beautifier called "Yaak." Judging from their desperate effort in the department stores and druggists, that "Yaak" (special) is quickly gobbled up by the mad rush of women, and impossible to supply the enormous demand. "Yaak" is delicate, harmless, and fascinating to the skin, absolutely free from dangerous drugs "Yaak" (special) is purely vegetable Herbs, Oils of Nuts, Lily-bulb Juice, Cerasine, Olive Oils and Cocanut Chips, which give the face a healthful, glowing appearance Apply a little at night, and every morning; you will quickly see a surprising change. The newest, irresistible, brilliant complexion beautifier has suddenly made a tremendous stir among the wrinkled faces, pimply faces, freckled faces, and coarse pores It is said to be the greatest preparation in the wide world to remove forever those ugly facial blemishes, and with amazement, makes the face satin-smooth, plump, and pearly-white. For those who have pimples, blackheads, and coarse pores of long standing will be astonished how quickly they can get rid of those homely features with "YAAK" (special). It never fails to give quick results. No samples given; the ingredients are special products A large shipment of "Yaak" (special) reached Chicago, and it was quickly gobbled up in a few hours. Many disappointed women, failing to get it, left their names with cash for the next shipment of "Yaak" (special) expected in a few days. "Everything gone," "Yaak" is all sold out," "Will have more in a few day," are the short answers from clerks. Many society women, beauty parlors, and residences have telephoned in their orders thick and fast to the department stores and druggists Heavy mail orders from out-of-towns are coming in fast for "Yaak" (special). The demand has been enormous. "Yaak" (special) gives the face an extremely brilliant, fascinating, plump, youthful glow. An exquisite refined complexion. It comes it two sizes: $1.00 per box, and also 50 cents per box. But if your facial blemishes are of long standing, then get the larger size box, you will surely need it for permanent results. Your town druggists can probably get it for you from the wholesaler. Or else send your money orders to any of the Chicago business firms. Will be shipped to you promptly by mail.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The slopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annie Gattle, a fellow-passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie's jealousy aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon. Marjorie suggests wrecking the train in hopes that accident will produce a preacher. Also tries to induce conductor to hold the train so she can shop. Marjorie's dog is missing. She pulls the cord, stopping the train. Conductor restores dog and lovers quarrel. Lathrop wires for a preacher to marry him and Miss Gattle. Mallory tells Lathrop of his predicament and arranges to borrow the preacher. Kitty Lewellyn, former sweetheart of Mallory's, appears and arouses Marjorie's jealousy. Preacher boards train. After marrying Lathrop and Miss Gattle the preacher escapes Mallory by leaping from moving train. Mallory's dejection moves Marjorie to reconciliation. The last day on the train brings Mallory the fear of missing his transport. Mallory gets a Nevada marriage license. Marjorie refuses to be married by a divorce drummer. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie make up. Kitty Lewellyn refuses to return Mallory's bracelet. Robbers hold up the train. The passengers are relieved of their valuables. Dr. Temple admits he is a preacher.

But the robbers kept glancing this way and that, and one motion would mean death. They themselves were so overwrought with their own ordeal and its immediate conclusion, that they would have killed anybody. Mallory shifted his foot cautiously, and instantly a gun was jabbed into his stomach, with a snarl: "Don't you move!"

"Who's moving?" Mallory answered, with a poor imitation of a careless laugh.

And now the man called Bill had reached Marjorie's right hand. He chortled: "Golly, look at the shiners."

But Jake, who had chosen Marjorie's left hand, roared:

"Say, you cheated. All I get is this measly plain gold band."

"Oh, don't take that!" Marjorie gasped, clenching her hand.

Mallory's heart ached at the thought of this final sacrilege. He had the license, and the minister at last—and now the fiends were going to carry off the wedding ring. He controlled himself with a desperate effort, and stooped to plead: "Say, old man, don't take that. That's not fair."

"Shut up, both of you," Jake growled, and jabbed him again with the gun.

He gave the ring a jerk, but Marjorie, in the very face of the weapon, would not let go. She struggled and tugged, weeping and imploring: "Oh, don't, don't take that! It's my wedding ring."

"Agh, what do I care!" the ruffian snarled, and wrenched her finger so viciously that she gave a little cry of pain.

That broke Mallory's heart. With a wild, bellowing, "Damn you!" he hurled himself at the man, with only his bare hands for weapons.

CHAPTER XL.

A Hero in Spite of Himself.

Passion sent Mallory into the unequal fight with two armed and desperate outlaws. But reason had planned the way. He had been studying the robber all the time, as if the villain were a war-map, studying his postures, his way of turning, and how he held the revolver. He had noted that the man, as he frisked the passengers, did not keep his finger on the trigger, but on the guard.

Marjorie's little battle threw the desperado off his balance a trifle; as he recovered, Mallory struck him, and swept him on over against the back of a seat. At the same instant, Mallory's right hand went like lightning to the trigger guard, and gripped the fingers in a vise of steel, while he drove the man's elbow back against his side. Mallory's left hand meanwhile flung around his enemy's neck, and gave him a spinning fall that sent his left hand out for balance. It fell across the back of the seat, and Mallory pinioned it with elbow and knee before it could escape.

All in the same crowded moment, his left knuckles jolted the man's chin in the air, and so bewildered him that his muscles relaxed enough for Mallory's right fingers to squirm their way to the trigger, and aim the gun at the other robber, and finally to get entire control of it.

The thing had happened in such a flash that the second outlaw could hardly believe his eyes. The shriek of the astounded passengers, and the grunt of Mallory's prisoner, as he crashed backward, woke him to the need for action. He caught his other gun from its holster, and made for a double volley, but there was nothing to aim at. Mallory was crouched in the seat, and almost perfectly covered by a human shield.

Still, from force of habit and foolhardy pluck, Bill aimed at Mallory's right eyebrow, just abaft Jake's right ear, and shouted his old motto:

"Hands up! you!"

"Hands up yourself!" answered Mallory, and his victim, shuddering at the fierce look in his comrade's eyes, gasped: "For God's sake, don't shoot, Bill!"

Even then the fellow stood his ground, and debated the issue, till Mallory threw such ringing determination into one last: "Hands up, or by God, I'll fire!" that he caved in, lifted his fingers from the triggers, turned the guns up, and slowly raised both hands above his head.

A profound "Ah!" of relief soughed through the car, and Mallory, still keeping his eye on Bill, got down cautiously from the seat. The moment he released Jake's left hand, it darted to the holster where his second gun was waiting. But before he could clutch the butt of it, Mallory jabbed the muzzle of his own revolver in the man's back, and growled: "Put 'em up!" And the robber's left hand joined the right in air, while Mallory's left hand lifted the revolver.

Mallory stood for a moment, breathing hard and a little incredulous at his own swift, sweet triumph. Then he made an effort to speak as if this sort of thing were quite common with him, as if he overpowered a pair of outlaws every morning before breakfast, but his voice cracked as he said, in a drawing-room tone:

"Dr. Temple, would you mind relieving that man of those guns?"

Dr. Temple was so set up by this distinction that he answered: "Not by a—"

"Waiter!" Mrs. Temple checked him, before he could utter the beautiful word, and Dr. Temple looked at her almost reproachfully, as he sighed: "Golly, I should like to swear just once more."

Then he reached up and disarmed the man who had taken his wallet and his wife's keepsakes.

American children breathe in this desperado romance with their earliest traditions, and Dr. Temple felt all his boyhood zest surge back with a boy's tremendous rapture in a deed of derring-do. And now nothing could check his swagger, as he said to Mallory:

"What shall we do with these dam-ned sinners?"

He felt like apologizing for the clerical relapse into a pulpitism, but Mallory answered briskly: "We'd better take them into the smoking room. They spare the ladies. But first, will the conductor take those bags and distribute the contents to their rightful owners?"

The conductor was proud to act as lieutenant to this lieutenant, and he quickly relieved the robbers of their loot-kits.

Mallory smiled. "Don't give anybody my things," and then he jabbed his robber with one of the revolvers, and commanded: "Forward, march!"

The little triumphal procession moved off, with Bill in the lead, followed by Dr. Temple, looking like a whole field battery, followed by Jake, followed by Mallory, followed by the porter and as many of the other passengers as could crowd into the smoking room.

The rest went after those opulent feed-bags.

CHAPTER XLI.

Clickety-Clickety-Clickety.

Marjorie, as the supposed wife of the rescuing angel, was permitted first search, and the first thing she hunted for was a certain gold bracelet that was none of hers. She found it and seized it with a prayer of thanks, and concealed it among her own things.

Mrs. Temple gave her a guilty start, by speaking across a barrier:

"Mrs. Mallory, your husband is the bravest man on earth."

"Oh, I know he is," Marjorie beamed, and added with a spasm of conscience: "but he isn't my husband!"

Mrs. Temple gasped in horror, but Marjorie dragged her close, and poured out the whole story, while the other passengers recovered their properties with as much joy as if they were all new gifts found on a bush.

Meanwhile, under Mallory's guidance, the porter fastened the outlaws together back to back with the straps of their own feed-bags. The porter was rejoicing that his harvest of tips was not blighted after all.

Mallory completed his bliss, by giving him Dr. Temple's brace of guns, and establishing him as jailer, with a warning: "Now, porter, don't take your eye off 'em."

"Lordy, I won't bat an eyelid."

"If either of these lads coughs, put a hole through both of 'em."

The porter chuckled: "My fingers is just a-itchin' for them lovin' triggers."

Mallory pocketed two of the captured revolvers, lest a need might arise suddenly again. As he hurried down the aisle, he was received with cheers. The passengers gave him an ovation, but he only smiled timidly, and made haste to Marjorie's side.

She regarded him with such idolatry that he almost regretted his deed. But this mood soon passed in her excitement, and in a moment she was surreptitiously showing him the bracelet. He became an accessory after the fact, and shared her guilt, for when she groaned with a sudden droop: "She'll get it back!" he grimly answered, "Oh, no she won't!" hoisted the window, and flung the bracelet into a little pool by the side of the track, with a farewell: "Good-bye, trouble!"

As he drew his head in, a side glance showed him that up near the engine a third train-robber held the miserably weary train crew in line.

He found the conductor just about to pull the bellrope, to proceed. The conductor had forgotten all about the rest of the staff. Mallory took him aside, and told him the situation, then turned to Marjorie, said: "Excuse me a minute," and hurried forward. The conductor followed Mallory through the train into the baggage coach.

The first news the third outlaw had of the counter-revolution occurring in the sleeping car was a mysterious bullet that flicked the dust near his heel, and a sonorous shout of "Hands up!" As he whirled in amaze, he saw two revolvers aimed point blank at him from behind a trunk. He hoisted his guns without parley, and the train crew trussed him up in short order.

Mallory ran back to Marjorie, and the conductor followed more slowly, reassuring the passengers in the other cars, and making certain that the train was ready to move on its way.

Mallory went straight to Dr. Temple, with a burning demand:

"You dear old fraud, will you marry me?"

Dr. Temple laughed and nodded. Marjorie and Mrs. Temple had been telling him the story of the prolonged elopement, and he was eager to atone for his own deception, by putting an end to their misery.

"Just wait one moment," he said, and as a final proof of affection, he unbuttoned his collar and put it on backwards. Mrs. Temple brought out the discarded bib, and he donned it meekly. The transformation explained many a mystery the old man had enmeshed himself in.

Even as he made ready for the ceremony, the conductor appeared, looked him over, grinned, and reached for the bell-cord, with a cheerful: "All aboard!"

Mallory had a sort of superstitious dread, not entirely unfounded on experience, that if the train got under way again, it would run into some new obstacle to his marriage. He turned to the conductor:

"Say, old man, just hold the train till after my wedding, won't you?"

It was not much to ask in return for his services, but the conductor was tired of being second in command. He growled:

"Not a minute. We're 'way behind time."

"You might wait till I'm married," Mallory pleaded.

"Not on your life!" the conductor answered, and he pulled the bell-rope twice; in the distance, the whistle answered twice.

Mallory's temper flared again. He cried: "This train doesn't go another step till I'm married!" He reached up and pulled the bell-rope once; in the distance the whistle sounded once.

This was high treason, and the conductor advanced on him threateningly, as he seized the cord once more. "You touch that rope again, and I'll—"

"Oh, no, you won't," said Mallory, as he whisked a revolver from his right pocket and jammed it into the conductor's watch-pocket. The conductor came to attention.

Then Mallory, standing with his right hand on military duty, put out his left hand, and gave the word: "Now, parson."

He smiled still more as he heard Kathleen's voice wailing: "But I can't find my bracelet. Where's my bracelet?"

"Silence! Silence!" Dr. Temple commanded, and then: "Join hands, my children."

Marjorie shifted Snoozleums to her left arm, put her right hand into Mallory's, and Dr. Temple, standing between them, began to drone the ritual.

When the old clergyman had done his work, the young husband-at-last graciously rescinded military law, recalled the artillery from the conductor's very midst, and remembering Manila, smiled:

"You may fire when ready, conductor."

The conductor's rage had cooled, and he slapped the bridegroom on the back with one hand, as he pulled the cord with the other. The train began to creak and tug and shift. The ding-dong of the bell floated murmurously back as from a lofty steeple, and the clickety-click, click-clickety-click quickened and softened into a pleasant gossip, as the speed grew, and the way was so smooth for the wheels that they seemed to be spinning on rails of velvet.

THE END.

WENT HURRIEDLY ON HIS WAY

Daring Man Threw Metaphorical Brick Into Assemblage and Didn't Wait for Effects.

"Shall we not carry on this fight until we have more man reduced to a hemipode?" said the suffragette orator.

"We shall. But what is a hemipode, anyway?" spoke up one of the assemblage.

"The black-necked hemipode is a bird about the size of a sparrow that lives in Madagascar. A friend out there sent me a pair of them. The male hemipode alone sits on the nest of eggs and hatches the young and takes care of them until grown up," the orator explained.

"Wouldn't that be lovely?" exclaimed one of the audience.

"There are birds down in South America called groove-billed aris. They build a large communal nest of sticks, and several females sit on the eggs in company, so that their conversation need not stop because of hatching. I'd like to have a vote as to which is the more popular," said a daring man near the door.

But he didn't wait for a vote.—New York Sun.

Stomach Rebelled Against Tacks.

"I remember swallowing a few brads," casually admitted a Philadelphia shoemaker the other day, whose internal pains had puzzled the doctors for a year. The "few brads" turned out to be about a hundred brass tacks, which the X-rays showed to be sticking in the walls of the man's stomach. For the last ten years he had been using his mouth as a temporary tack-box while at work at his bench, and he was quite philosophical when occasionally one or two eluded his palate and slipped down his throat. The surgeons who examined him say that one section of the man's stomach has more tacks in it than the sole of a boot, and an operation is to be performed in the Philadelphia hospital, in which he lies, with the hope of saving his life.

Receiver Has Sanitary Ear Pad.

Sanitary attachments for the transmitters of telephones are numerous in this country, but France has gone us one better in the matter of a sanitary pad for the receiving end of the telephone. The ordinary hard-rubber earpiece of the monophone type of instrument, which is much used in France, is removed and its place taken by a round pad formed of 250 leaves of sterilized paper. Every time the telephone is used one of the leaves is torn off. The purpose of the pad is, of course, to protect the ear from being soiled.—Popular Mechanics.

DIDN'T NEED TO READ LINES

Amateur Palmist Had Other Lines of Information Which Aided Her in Revelations.

The fair amateur palmist looked at the left hand of the sweet girl long and earnestly. Breathlessly she waited for the palmist's next words.

"Ah! I see by your hand that you are engaged to be married," said the palmist. "And," continued the reader of the future and the past, in a more cutting tone, "I see that you are engaged to Mr. Mooney."

"Oh! It's perfectly extraordinary," burst out the blushing girl. "How can you know that?"

"By my long study of the science," was the reply.

"But surely the lines on my hand—cannot tell you the na——"

"Who said anything about lines?" replied the prophetic one, with withering scorn. "You are wearing the engagement ring I returned to him three weeks ago."

ECZEMA CAME ON SCALP

Lebanon, O.—"My eczema started on my thigh with a small pimple. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For eighteen or twenty years I could not tell what I passed through with that awful itching. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I couldn't talk to my friends on the street but I would be digging and punching that spot, until I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep after once in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years.

"I chased after everything I ever heard of, but all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching fire on my leg and scalp, in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell, and Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap has cured that trouble." (Signed) L. R. Fink, Jan. 22, 1912.

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Own Story.

Westwood, Md.—"I am a farmer's wife and do most of my own work when I am able. I had nervous spells, female weakness and terrible bearing down pains every month. I also suffered much with my right side. The pain started in my back and extended around my right side, and the doctor told me it was organic inflammation. I was sick every three weeks and had to stay in bed from two to four days.

"It is with great pleasure I tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have followed your directions as near as possible, and feel much better than I have felt for years. When I wrote you before I was almost a wreck. You can publish this letter if you like. It may help to strengthen the faith of some poor suffering woman."—Mrs. John F. Richards, Westwood, Maryland.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

BREAKS A COLD IN A DAY

And Cures Any Cough That Is Curable. Noted Doctor's Formula.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age." This is the best formula known to science. There are many cheaper preparations of large quantity, but it don't pay to experiment with a bad cold. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it in stock he will get it quickly from his wholesale house. This has been published here every winter for six years and thousands of families know its value. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.

Man's Preference.

Miss Lillian Hill, lecturing on eugenics in Cleveland, said:

"It is a good thing for the human race that beauty counts for more than intellect when it comes to love. Intellect too often means nerves—insomnia—hypochondria.

"Yes, it is a good thing for the human race that, as an old maid from Vassar put it rather bitterly:

"'Men prefer a well formed girl to a well informed one.'"

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY.

The Rev. Edmund Heslop of Wigton, Pa., suffered from Dropsy for a year. His limbs and feet were swollen and puffed. He had heart fluttering, was dizzy and exhausted at the least exertion. Hands and feet were cold and he had such a dragging sensation across the loins that it was difficult to move. After using 5 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds Kidney Pills. Several months later he wrote: I have not changed my faith in your remedy since the above statement was authorized. Correspond with Rev. E. Heslop about this wonderful remedy.

Dr. Hartman Says:

Write to Peruna Testimonials If You Want to Know the Truth.

The following letter was received by Dr. Hartman through his regular correspondence:

"I notice the testimonial of Mrs. Alice Bogle, which you give in your last article. If I should write her do you suppose she would give me further particulars? I have heard it said many times that such testimonials are fakes; that they are either absolutely fictitious or else the people have been hired to write them. I have been inclined to write you a great many times but these stories about patent medicine advertisements have discouraged me from doing so. I am afflicted with catarrh and should like very much to find a remedy such as your article describes."

To the above letter Dr. Hartman made the following reply:

My dear Madam:—I do not wonder that you are confused and have lost all faith in advertised remedies. There has been so much said against them, so much controversy concerning them, I am not surprised that some people have lost confidence in them.

I wish you would write Mrs. Bogle, as one woman to another. I wish you would ask her whether she has been hired to write such a testimonial, whether her testimonial represents the truth.

I hope you will remember that she is a housewife, like yourself, that she has something to do besides write letters, that she is a woman of moderate means and cannot afford to write these letters and pay her own postage. I hope you will enclose stamp so she can answer you without loss to herself. Mrs. Bogle is a very estimable lady and no doubt you will both profit by being acquainted with each other.

Should you conclude to try Peruna for your catarrh I would be very glad to hear of the result. I can assure you that no use will be made of your letter, except by your written consent. Mrs. Bogle very kindly consented to have me use her letter, which is my reason for doing so, and you will be treated exactly as she has been.

People recover from chronic catarrh who take Peruna. There is no doubt about that. Some surprising recoveries are reported almost daily. I have thousands of them in my files. Peruna is for sale at all drug stores.

DERRICK FOR HANDLING HOGS

"Gallows" and Lift Shown in Illustration Handy in Caring for Large Unwieldy Animals.

Having to help a neighbor butcher with very large hogs that we knew would be very unwieldy to handle, we figured out and built a "gallows" and lift, as shown herewith. It worked so very well I thought it might help others, writes E. G. Kinsell, in the Farm and Home.

Get a good straight post about 14 feet long and 5 to 6 inches in diameter at small end. Band this end and bore a three-quarter-inch hole in center about eight inches deep to receive swivel bolt c. Five feet from top mortise holes at right angles to receive cross bars 2 by 3 inches, on which hogs are to hang. Into these mortises insert arms four feet long and bolt stay irons, as shown. Now plant post three feet in ground.

Get a good stout sweep or pole of white oak or locust about 3½ or 4 inches in diameter at butt end and in this end put an eye bolt with good strong chain of about six feet with a small hook in end, to hook on to gambrel sticks, as shown in cut. Bore a hole to receive 5-16 inch bolt about 5½ feet from butt end of sweep and fasten swivel bolt c to the sweep. At small end of sweep fasten a rather large ring by means of a small staple, and to this tie a piece of rope long enough to allow small end of sweep to rise well up in air when fastening chain to the gambrel stick or the hog.

Now place your sweep on top of post with swivel bolt in position and you are ready to hook fast to a 500-pound hog. Lift him on to the table, shorten your chain again, lift him over the scalding tub and dangle him up and down as much as you choose. Having hoisted the hog clear of scalding table you can swing him around to hang on any arm.

Cut Bone for Poultry.

Green cut bone is an excellent egg producer when fed judiciously, says the Poultry World. The supply should be secured fresh and it should be fed as soon as cut. Would not advise feeding it every day, as the birds are liable to overeat and a sure case of diarrhoea will be the result. Three times a week is often enough to supply this form of feed. I prefer to mix it with bran or middlings and allow the birds all they will eat in 15 minutes. If you prefer, it may be fed clear or it may be mixed with the mash. If fed mixed with other foods as above, the birds will not fight for their share.

Trap for English Sparrows.

Agents of the department of agriculture have been experimenting for the past three months with devices to trap English sparrows. It has been determined upon that these birds are harmful to the fruit trees in the spring, eating as they do into the buds and destroying the cores.

Manuring Garden in Winter.

Any time during the winter or early spring the garden may be manured. The spring rains will dissolve richness from fertilizers and carry them down into the soil for feeding the plants next summer. If the garden is manured in winter fresh manure may be used with safety, as it will have lost much of the heat by planting time.

Rules For Measuring Corn.

There are many rules for measuring corn. Inquiries conducted by the Missouri State Board of Agriculture show the following in common use: Sixteen cubic feet of corn in the shock (or extra well settled 15 feet) make a barrel. The number of cubic feet multiplied by the decimal .4 gives the bushels. Multiply together the length, width and height of the pen or crib, in inches, and divide by 4,200 for old corn or 4,300 for new corn, to get bushels. Where it can be done corn should be weighed rather than measured.

Getting Seed Grain Early.

Do not wait until spring to clean and grade your seed grain. Do it now, while you have plenty of grain at hand from which to select. The best twenty-five bushels of grain out of a hundred bushels are worth much more for seed than is the grain that can be cleaned from a much smaller amount in the spring. The cost of thus cleaning and grading the grain is very slight, and it enables one to have heavy, plump seed grain at very little outlay.

ROOT CROPS FOR DAIRY COW

Turnips and Other Like Root Vegetables Make Fine Milk Producing Feed—Add to Variety.

No matter what some people tell you, turnips and other roots make fine milk-producing feed. Turnips will not affect the flavor of milk, if fed at the right time.

If turnips are fed in large quantities and two or three hours before milking, they are likely to give the milk an unpleasant taste, but if fed directly after milking, no flavor whatever will be noticed.

A peck of turnips to each animal per day is sufficient in most cases. A good plan is to feed directly after hay in the early morning, and once a day is often enough.

A little salt scattered over the turnips, which should be chopped in quarters or smaller, add to their palatability.

Roots make a very valuable addition to the winter ration, because they add to the variety of the feed, and no animal on the farm appreciates variety more than the dairy cow.

In Wisconsin, Iowa and other western dairy states the root crop is becoming a very important part of the crop of the farm.

DECOY HIVES MADE USEFUL

Will Prove Paying Proposition Where Timber Is Scarce and Bees Seek New Location.

In a country where big timber is plentiful decoy hives will stand a poor chance of catching anything, but where timber is small and scarce and bees are consequently hard up for a place to locate, decoy hives will prove a paying proposition. As there is nothing about them but what any farmer can easily arrange, there is no reason why the man living in such a place should not be supplied with bees. All there is to do is to get some hives fitted up with frames of foundation and one frame of old comb and fasten it up in a tree in the edge of the woods. The bees do the rest. Of course, you cannot expect that every hive so put up will catch a swarm, but if you are in a country where many farmers keep bees you will be pretty apt to get enough to pay you well for your trouble. The illustration will show the manner of fastening to the tree.

DAIRY NOTES

Beet molasses is not a very good feed for cows.

A cow is known by the amount of milk she gives.

Guesswork in the dairy never increases the bank account.

There are very few instances when a cow needs to be milked before calving.

On thousands of farms where a cash crop is grown for market the dairy provides the key to the system of maintaining soil fertility.

If the churn is likely to remain idle for some time, keep it filled with lime water.

Oil cake, silage, and roots in the feed make the cream churn more easily.

Handle the nervous cow gently, or don't expect her to be a profitable producer.

Wet distillery grains when fresh and properly fed make a fair feed for dairy cattle.

The cream can is one of the most profitable implements on the farms if it is used persistently.

Heifers intended for the dairy herd should be taught to lead, the same as horses for riding or driving.

We may be taking care of too many cows, but we may be certain that we are not taking too good care of them.

Remember that the dairy cow is a lady, and must be treated as such if the best returns are to be expected.

Feed is an important factor in making a cow profitable but the best feed cannot avail unless good care is given also.

Two pounds of mixed shorts and bran per cow per day is sufficient for cows that are expected to give liberal flows of milk.

BROOM CORN

Growers Shipping Broom Corn

As the growers of broom corn are greatly dissatisfied with the price offered at home for their broom corn, many of them are now shipping direct to Coyne Brothers, Chicago, who are large handlers of broom corn on commission. This firm report their receipts so far this season about 150 cars, most of which have been sold and returned for. Their financial responsibility exceeds ($100,000) one hundred thousand dollars. They are a safe and reliable firm. They offer as references Farmers' State Bank, Texhoma, Okla., and Central Exchange Bank, Woodward, Okla. Other reference furnished on application.
