An After Dinner Speaker's Pat Question.

Mr. Curtis, in his recent lecture on Washington Irving, remarked that whenever two or three are gathered together in this country around a dinner table there is certain to be speech making. Mr. Curtis added that this happened because all Americans were eloquent. The recent "steel banquent" at Chattanooga was attended by many men of many vocations, all of whom, or at least as many as there was time for, spoke eloquently. As usual, it was shown that when it comes to after dinner speaking, the metropolis leads easily—as she does in everything else. United States Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, who was called upon, Frederick Taylor, the banker of the city, is reported, by the Chatanooga Times, as beginning with the assertion: Never have I heard, never have you a more eloquent response to a toast than that made by Mr. Taylor."

There was one feature of this banker-orator's response to the toast "Our Country"—which is especially worthy of commendation. At that notable Southern dinner, surrounded by patriotism of his conviction, he met a salient question asked by the generally loved and lamented Henry Grady at one of our New England dinners, by putting another of yet greater sig... ...prejudice of war live in the hearts of the conquerors after it had died out of the conquered. First insisting that the North had freely forgiven and was inspired only by the most brotherly feeling toward the South, Mr. Taylor asked his question. He said:

"No matter what other issues were involved in the war, the reason the North entered the strife, and so lavishly poured out its blood and treasure, was to vindicate the inviolability of our nationality; and no matter what other result was accomplished by the late war, it established once and for all time the supremacy of that nationality—that the republic is more than any of its parts—the union greater than any of the States.—Now, I don't ask whether you, who were born long ago to the other idea—who sucked in with your mother's milk the later theories of Calhoun and were reared upon them—I don't ask whether you have so far changed in your old age that you fully and freely, without mental reservation, accept that supremacy of nationality which the war has fixed in our political creed immutable as the north star in the skies! I say I don't ask you, who have been brought up to put your state before your country, whether you have changed, but what I do ask is this: How are you bringing up your youth? Are you raising your boys to a patriotism based up on the lines of their states, or are you instilling into their young hearts a patroitims as broad as the continent? I repeat that we trust you as we do ourselves in the sacred care of our nationality; but all the same, as Grady put the question to us, so put I mine to you: "Are you still, in your schools and academies and colleges, teaching your boys, as of old, that their first love and duty are owing to their states or are you teaching them, above all things, to love their country?"

This goes to the marrow of the Southern issue. The future of the New South is largely conditioned upon the reply which she returns to this non partisan question of a loyal American.

HUMAN HAIR MARKET.

A Million Pounds Change from Head to Head Every Year.

Perhaps there is no staple article about which less is known by the public than human hair as an article of commerce. It will doubtless surprise many when it is stated that the dealers in human hair goods do not depend on chance clippings here and there, but that there is a regular hair harvest which can always be relied on. It is said that over 1,000,000 pounds of human hair are used annually in the civilized world for adorning the heads of women. In New York City alone over five tons of this class of goods are imported every year. Much of the ...ury ... the imported article. There has been some talk recently of forming a trust in this business, and if this untoward event should occur our American women would have to dispense with a considerable portion of their tresses or pay a much higher price for them. A well-known hair dealer of this city gave a reporter recently some interesting facts about the hair business and the source from which the beautiful locks are obtained. "Most of the hair which I use in my business," he said, "I obtain from ladies in this city. We had a big harvest during the recent craze for having the hair cut short. Many of the ladies who had their locks shorn at that time have since bitterly regretted it. In many instances the hair grew so slowly that it became necessary to wear a wig or switch as the fashion changed. After women have reached a certain age the hair seems to partially lose its vigor, and if cut it will not grow again. Blonde hair seems to be going out and the demand for bleaching preparations is not nearly so great as it was a few years ago. Not enough human hair can be procured in this country to supply the home demand and in consequence there is a large amount imported annually. The largest supply of hair comes from Switzerland, Germany and the French provinces. There is a human hair market at Morlans, in the Department of the Lower Pyrenees, held every other Friday. Hundreds of trafficking hair-dressers throng to the little place from far and near to buy up the hair of young peasant girls. When a bargain is struck the dealer lays the money in the open palm of the seller, applies his shears and in a minute the luxuriant tresses fall on the floor. Of course, a maiden can rarely see her long braids pass into the dealer's possession without crying, but she consoles herself for their loss with the thought that they will grow again. A woman's hair may grow to the length of six feet. Mme. Hess, of Paris, refused five thousand francs for her 'crown of glory,' which was about that length. It has been proved that a single hair will bear up a weight of four ounces without breaking, but the hair thus heavily weighed must be dark brown, for blonde hair breaks under a strain of two and one-half ounces. What wonder is it, then, that 'beauty can draw love with a single hair?' There are over five thousand importers, manufacturers and dealers of hair in the United States, and they will be represented at the World's Fair in 1892."—Rochester Post-Express.

LA GRIPPE seized upon quite a number of our citizens this week. The disease originally came from Russia but the article now footing with us was imported from Lincoln.

LAST Monday Sheriff Roberts passed through town en route to Santa Fe with three male prisoners and one female convict to the penitentiary. U. Ozanne accompanied the sheriff as guard.

MRS. T. W. HEMAN and son Elwood, returned from the east on Thursday. They had been paying a protracted visit at St. Louis, with Gen. Madison Miller, father of Mrs. Heman. Col. Heman is the happiest man in town and the LEADER rejoices to see Mrs. H., and the little gentleman, Elwood, with us again.

THE attempt to fleck from us our honestly acquired reality in this town was the most mendacious within our ken. By reference to court proceedings, as published in another column, it will be seen that the efforts of the malignants "gnaged aglee." Two avenues are still open for our adversaries—assassination and arson, but as courage is an important factor in such dernier resorts we opine the galled jades will wince at the end of their tether.

WE received a very pleasant call last Saturday from Mrs. Goodin-Ellis and her interesting family.—She gave us a novel pointer in the double suicide case. Miss Higely being consumptive, was in the habit of taking frequent baths, and on many occasions exposed to Mrs Ellis her naked breast while bathing it with liniment, and directing attention to the fluttering of her heart which palpated like unto a confined bird, seeking egress, and would smilingly say, "Oh! wouldn't that make a nice target!" It was not until the heart was utilized as a target that the terrible force of the expression found lodgment in Mrs Ellis' mind.

GENERAL ORDERS N[illegible]

Headquarters Dep[illegible] N[illegible] Mexico, Grand Ar[illegible] Republic, Las Cr[illegible] M[illegible]
May 1, 1891.

The sacred duty we owe to the memory of our depart[illegible] in arms again invokes us to come with reverent hearts and loving hands to deposit on their graves the fragrant offerings of loving remembrance by which we seek to preserve and perpetuate the glorious memory of their heroic deeds, their valorous endurance, their loyalty and their unselfish patriotism.

More than a quarter of a century has elasped since the world witnessed the sublime and unparalleled spectacle of more than a million armed men, marshaled in defence of our National Unity, peacefully laying down their victorious arms, furling their tattered battle flags, and quietly resuming their duties as citizens of the Nation whose integrity their patriotic valor had preserved.

This mighty host of patriots is rapidly passing away; in a few short years none of them will be left to carry the badge we are proud to wear over our hearts, and our Grand Army will be re united beyond the shores of the dark river.

The rapid decrease [illegible] numbers emphasizes the sacred duty imposed upon the survivors of honoring the memory of their departed comrades by laying aside all other duties and avocations [illegible] due observance of

It is earnestly recommended that on the Thirtieth day of May the several Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic in this Department, inviting to co-operation of all patriotic men and women, perform the solemn and impressive services of decorating the graves of hero dead, and, by exalting their memory and their deeds, inculcate a lesson of patriotism and heroism to those who are to take our places here when we are summoned to surrender to the only foe the soldier of the Union has found to be invincible.

An After Dinner Speaker's Pat Question.

Mr. Curtis, in his recent lecture on Washington Irving, remarked that whenever two or three are gathered together in this country around a dinner table there is certain to be speech making. Mr. Curtis added that this happened because all Americans were eloquent. The recent "steel banquent" at Chattanooga was attended by many men of many vocations, all of whom, or at least as many as there was time for, spoke eloquently. As usual, it was shown that when it comes to after dinner speaking, the metropolis leads easily—as she does in everything else. United States Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, who was called upon, Frederick Taylor, the banker of the city, is reported, by the Chatanooga Times, as beginning with the assertion: Never have I heard, never have you a more eloquent response to a toast than that made by Mr. Taylor."

There was one feature of this banker-orator's response to the toast "Our Country"—which is especially worthy of commendation. At that notable Southern dinner, surrounded by patriotism of his conviction, he met a salient question asked by the gennerally loved and lamented Henry Grady at one of our New England dinners, by putting another of yet greater significance [illegible] prejudice of war live in the hearts of the conquerors after it had died out of the conquered. First insisting that the North had freely forgiven and was inspired only by the most brotherly feeling toward the South, Mr. Taylor asked his question. He said:

"No matter what other issues were involved in the war, the reason the North entered the strife, and so lavishly poured out its blood and treasure, was to vindicate the inviolability of our nationality; and no matter what other result was accomplished by the late war, it established once and for all time the supremacy of that nationality—that the republic is more than any of its parts—the union greater than any of the States.—Now, I don't ask whether you, who were born long ago to the other idea—who sucked in with your mother's milk the later theories of Calhoun and were reared upon them—I don't ask whether you have so far changed in your old age that you fully and freely, without mental reservation, accept that supremacy of nationality which the war has fixed in our political creed immutable as the north star in the skies! I say I don't ask you, who have been brought up to put your state before your country, whether you have changed, but what I do ask is this: How are you bringing up your youth? Are you raising your boys to a patriotism based up on the lines of their states, or are you instilling into their young hearts a patroitims as broad as the continent? I repeat that we trust you as we do ourselves in the sacred care of our nationality, but all the same, as Grady put the question to us, so put I mine to you: "Are you still, in your schools and academies and colleges, teaching your boys, as of old, that their first love and duty are owing to their states or are you teaching them, above all things, to love their country?"

This goes to the marrow of the Southern issue. The future of the New South is largely conditioned upon the reply which she returns to this non partisan question of a loyal American.

HUMAN HAIR MARKET.

A Million Pounds Change from Head to Head Every Year.

Perhaps there is no staple article about which less is known by the public than human hair as an article of commerce. It will doubtless surprise many when it is stated that the dealers in human hair goods do not depend on chance clippings here and there, but that there is a regular hair harvest which can always be relied on. It is said that over 1,000,000 pounds of human hair are used annually in the civilized world for adorning the heads of women. In New York City alone over five tons of this class of goods are imported every year. Much of the [illegible] the imported article. There has been some talk recently of forming a trust in this business, and if this untoward event should occur our American women would have to dispense with a considerable portion of their tresses or pay a much higher price for them. A well-known hair dealer of this city gave a reporter recently some interesting facts about the hair business and the source from which the beautiful locks are obtained. "Most of the hair which I use in my business," he said, "I obtain from ladies in this city. We had a big harvest during the recent craze for having the hair cut short. Many of the ladies who had their locks shorn at that time have since bitterly regretted it. In many instances the hair grew so slowly that it became necessary to wear a wig or switch as the fashion changed. After women have reached a certain age the hair seems to partially lose its vigor, and if cut it will not grow again. Blonde hair seems to be going out and the demand for bleaching preparations is not nearly so great as it was a few years ago. Not enough human hair can be procured in this country to supply the home demand and in consequence there is a large amount imported annually. The largest supply of hair comes from Switzerland, Germany and the French provinces. There is a human hair market at Morlana, in the Department of the Lower Pyrenees, held every other Friday. Hundreds of trafficking hair-dressers throng to the little place from far and near to buy up the hair of young peasant girls. When a bargain is struck the dealer lays the money in the open palm of the seller, applies his shears and in a minute the luxuriant tresses fall on the floor. Of course, a maiden can rarely see her long braids pass into the dealer's possession without crying, but she consoles herself for their loss with the thought that they will grow again. A woman's hair may grow to the length of six feet. Mme. Hess, of Paris, refused five thousand francs for her 'crown of glory,' which was about that length. It has been proved that a single hair will bear up a weight of four ounces without breaking, but the hair thus heavily weighed must be dark brown, for blonde hair breaks under a strain of two and one-half ounces. What wonder is it, then, that 'beauty can draw love with a single hair?' There are over five thousand importers, manufacturers and dealers of hair in the United States, and they will be represented at the World's Fair in 1892."—Rochester Post-Express.

THE MAN WHO SPOUTS.

Here Is a Little Tender Guidance for Amateur Elocutionists.

The mine from which the reciter draws his material is in itself dangerously broad and deep—nothing less than the wide field of English literature. In it he finds things he is tempted to recite because he loves them. But that is one of the worst of reasons for choosing them. They may or may not gain by recitation. His personal love for them must not cloud his judgment. He finds pieces magnificent in drama and scope for declamation, but the drama may be purely taken from the literary point of view, and its very excellence judged thence may be faults from the actor's and reciter's points of view.

Or the drama may be impossible for a public audience. One poem may touch too intimately or penetratingly some domestic or life sorrow, and another may jar on some feeling, possibly even some prejudice, which the reciter may not sympathize with, but which he is none the less bound to respect in his listeners. And, lastly, [illegible] comesome incongruity of appearance or manner may be the touchstone that decides his sentence against a poem, which, if it be a poem he particularly likes and desires to recite, is more than sufficiently annoying.

A man, for instance, with a cherry face should not recite "The Dream of Eugene Aram," "The Raven" or "Il Penseroso;" nor should a pale, spare man recite a line of Falstaff or expect any great success in a selection from "Pickwick." As a rule (with exceptions, of course,) men should avoid all pieces written in the first person singular in which the speaker is a woman. Shelley's "Cloud" is difficult for a man because of his personality. It is impossible to resist the suspicion of ridiculousness when a man gravely says:

"I am the daughter of earth and of water,
And the nursling of the sky."

Matthew Arnold's "Forsaken Merman" generally fails of its full effect for the same reason. I once heard a man, remarkable for a gift of pathos, recite (very well but very painfully) Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women." To an elderly gentleman declaiming Lewis Morris' "Psyche," a lady, Tennyson's "Revenge," and a young man Christian Rossetti's "Royal Princess" were all equally undermined in their efforts by curious physical inappropriateness.

I remember the occasion when I first gave in public an address or recitation which Mrs. Harriet Child-Pemberton sent me, called "Primus." In the last verse comes the line:

"I was the little chap, rosy and brown."

I gave it with conviction, and the reason was an audible laugh. All my [illegible] had been w[illegible] by [illegible] defeated by [illegible] with my appearance [illegible] the red [illegible] 29 [illegible] time and [illegible] —Murray's Magazine.

STEPHEN'S COLLEGE [illegible]

"Hello! Tom. Glad to see you, old fellow! It's almost ten years since we were married. Sit down; let's have an experience meeting. How's the wife?"

"Oh! she's so-so, same as usual,—always wanting something I can't afford."

"Well, we all want something more than we've got. Don't you?"

"Yes; but I guess 'twast will be my master.' I started to keep down expenses; and now I'll says I'm 'mean,' and she's tired of saving and never having anything to show for it. I saw your wife down street, and she looked as happy as a queen!"

"I think she is; and we are economical, too,—have to be. My wife can make a little go farther than anyone I ever knew, yet she's always surprising me with some dainty contrivance that adds to the comfort and beauty of our little home, and she's always 'merry as a lark.' When I ask how she manages it, she always laughs and says: 'Oh! that's my secret!' But I think I've discovered her 'secret.' When we married, we both knew we should have to be very careful, but she made one condition: she would have her Magazine. And she was right! I wouldn't do without it myself for double the subscription price. We read it together, from the title-page to the last word; the stories keep our hearts young; the synopsis of important events and scientific matters keeps me posted so that I can talk understandingly of what is going on; my wife is always trying some new idea from the household department; she makes all her dresses and those for the children, and she gets all her patterns for nothing, with the Magazine; and we saved Joe when he was so sick with the croup, by doing just as directed in the Sanitarian Department. But I can't tell you half!"

"What wonderful Magazine is it?"

"Demorest's Family Magazine, and—"

"What! Why that's what Lil wanted so bad, and I told her it was an extravagance."

"Well, my friend, that's where you made a grand mistake, and one you'd better rectify as soon as you can. I'll take your sub. right here, on my wife's account; she's bound to have a club tea-set in time for one the wedding next month. My gold watch was the premium I got for getting up a club. Here's a copy, with the new Premium List for clubs,—the biggest thing out! If you don't see in it what you want, you've only to write to the publisher and tell him what you want, whether it is a jack hammer or a new carriage, and he will make special terms for you, either for a club, or for part cash. Better subscribe right off and surprise Mrs. Tom. Only $2.00 a year—will save fifty times that in six months. Or send 10 cents direct to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a specimen copy containing the Premium List."

THE MAN WHO SPOUTS.

Here Is a Little Tender Guidance for Amateur Elocutionists.

The mine from which the reciter draws his material is in itself dangerously broad and deep—nothing less than the wide field of English literature. In it he finds things he is tempted to recite because he loves them. But that is one of the worst of reasons for choosing them. They may or may not gain by recitation. His personal love for them must not cloud his judgment. He finds pieces magnificent in drama and scope for declamation, but the drama may be purely taken from the literary point of view, and its very excellence judged thence may be faults from the actor's and reciter's points of view.

Or the drama may be impossible for a public audience. One poem may touch too intimately or penetratingly some domestic or life sorrow, and another may jar on some feeling, possibly even some prejudice, which the reciter may not sympathize with, but which he is none the less bound to respect in his listeners. And, lastly, some tiresome incongruity of appearance or manner may be the touchstone that decides his sentence against a poem, which, if it be a poem he particularly likes and desires to recite, is more than sufficiently annoying.

A man, for instance, with a cherry face should not recite "The Dream of Eugene Aram," "The Raven" or "Il Penseroso;" nor should a pale, spare man recite a line of Falstaff's or expect any great success in a scene from "Pickwick." As a rule, (a rule with exceptions, of course,) men should avoid all pieces written in the first person singular in which the speaker is a woman. Shelley's "Cloud" is difficult for a man because of its personality. It is impossible to resist the suspicion of ridiculousness when a man gravely says:

"I am the daughter of earth and of water,
And the nursling of the sky."

Matthew Arnold's "Forsaken Merman" generally falls of its full effect for the same reason. I once heard a man, remarkable for a gift of pathos, recite (very well but very vainly) Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women." So an elderly gentleman declaiming Lewis Morris' "Psyche;" a lady, Tennyson's "Revenge" and a young man Christian Rossetti's "Royal Princess" were all equally undermined in their efforts by curious physical inappropriateness.

I remember the occasion when I first gave in public an admirable piece for recitation which Mrs. Harry Child-Pemberton sent me, called "Prince." In the last verse comes the line—

"I was the little chap, curly and brown."

I gave it with conviction, and the answer was an audible snigger. It was found to be in perfect order, and was wound and set all right as soon as taken from its icy bed. On returning to England Captain Nares turned the instrument over to the British admiralty office from whence it was sent across to this Government. "Hello! Tom. Glad to see you, old fellow! It's almost ten years since we were married. Sit down; let's have an experience meeting. How's the wife?"

"Oh! she's so-so, same as usual,—always wanting something I can't afford."

"Well, we all want something more than we've got. Don't you?"

"Yes; but I guess 'twant will be my master.' I started to keep down expenses; and now Lil says I'm 'mean,' and she's tired of saving and never having anything to show for it. I saw your wife down street, and she looked as happy as a queen!"

"I think she is; and we are economical, too,—have to be. My wife can make a little go farther than anyone I ever knew, yet she's always surprising me with some dainty contrivance that adds to the comfort and beauty of our little home, and she's always 'merry as a lark.' When I ask how she manages it, she always laughs and says: 'Oh! that's my secret!' But I think I've discovered her 'secret.' When we married, we both knew we should have to be very careful, but she made one condition; she would have her Magazine. And she was right! I wouldn't do without it myself for double the subscription price. We read it together, from the title-page to the last word; the stories keep our hearts young; the synopsis of important events and scientific matters keeps me posted so that I can talk understandingly of what is going on; my wife is always trying some new idea from the household department; she makes all her dresses and those for the children, and she gets all her patterns for nothing, with the Magazine; and we saved Joe when he was so sick with the croup, by doing just as directed in the Sanitarian Department. But I can't tell you half!"

"What wonderful Magazine is it?"

"Demorest's Family Magazine, and—"

"What! Why that's what Lil wanted so bad, and I told her it was an extravagance."

"Well, my friend, that's where you made a grand mistake, and one you'd better rectify as soon as you can. I'll take your 'ink' right here, on my wife's account; she's bound to have a china tea-set in time for our tin wedding next month. My gold watch was the premium I got for getting up a club. Here's a copy, with the new Premium List for clubs,—the biggest thing out! If you don't see in it what you want, you've only to write to the publisher and tell him what you want, whether it is a jack hammer or a new carriage, and he will make special terms for you, either for a club, or for part cash. Better subscribe right off and surprise Mrs. Tom. Only $3.00 a year—will save fifty times that in six months. Or send 10 cents direct to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a specimen copy containing the Premium List."

GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

With our Cash Dollar Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Little More than Our Regular Subscription Price.

CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the past six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a little more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer in subscribers heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author offers or since his time has even in the same that he published, and his works are more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is a lively interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type, published complete, unabridged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,	DARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,	OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,	THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
DOMBEY AND SON,	A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,

These books are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a course of a century they have been circulated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are hundreds of homes in America that not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the great light and of the works of the world's people in moderate circumstances from enjoying the pleasure of reading them. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the enormously low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works as a premium upon the terms stated. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the world's greatest novelists.

THE MAN WHO SPOUTS.

Here Is a Little Tender Guidance for Amateur Elocutionists.

The mine from which the reciter draws his material is in itself dangerously broad and deep—nothing less than the wide field of English literature. In it he finds things he is tempted to recite because he loves them. But that is one of the worst of reasons for choosing them. They may or may not gain by recitation. His personal love for them must not cloud his judgment. He finds pieces magnificent in drama and scope for declamation, but the drama may be purely taken from the literary point of view, and its very excellence judged thence may be faults from the actor's and reciter's points of view.

Or the drama may be impossible for a public audience. One poem may touch too intimately or penetratingly some domestic or life sorrow, and another may jar on some feeling, possibly even some prejudice, which the reciter may not sympathize with, but which he is none the less bound to respect in his listeners. And, lastly, some irksome incongruity of appearance or manner may be the touchstone that decides his sentence against a poem, which, if it be a poem he particularly likes and desires to recite, is more than sufficiently annoying.

A man, for instance, with a cherry face, should not recite "The Dream of Eugene Aram," "The Raven" or "Il Penseroso;" nor should a pale, spare man recite a line of Falstaff's or expect any great success in a scene from "Pickwick." As a rule (a rule with exceptions, of course,) men should avoid all pieces written in the first person singular in which the speaker is a woman. Shelley's "Cloud" is difficult for a man because of its personality. It is impossible to resist the suspicion of ridiculousness when a man gravely says:

"I am the daughter of earth and of water,
And the nursling of the sky."

Matthew Arnold's "Forsaken Merman" generally fails of its full effect for the same reason. I once heard a man, remarkable for a gift of pathos, recite very well but very unlovely Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women." Or an elderly gentleman declaiming Lewis Morris' "Psyche;" a lady, Tennyson's "Revenge" and a young lady Christina Rossetti's "A Royal Princess" were all equally undermined in their efforts by direct physical inappropriateness.

I remember the occasion when I first gave in public an admirable piece for recitation which Mrs. Hamilton Child-Pemberton sent me, called "Prince." In the last verse comes the line—

"I was the little chap, curly and brown."

I gave it with conviction, and the answer was an audible smile. All the pathos and manliness had been wrung by the story were defeated by the conceited assertion which my appearance gave to the line. The rest of the selection held its own uncontradicted.—Murray's Magazine.

Free Reading Matter.

There are various schemes for supplying reading matter at a trifle above actual cost. What would you think if you could get good literature free?

Drop a postal to G. T. Nicholson, G. P. and T. A., A. T. & S. F. R. R. Co., Topeka, Kan., and ask for a copy of "To Mexico on Palace Car." You can also procure free copies of "A Santa Barbara Holiday," "Guide to San Diego Bay Region," "Las Vegas Hot Springs Guide," and folders relating to Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Newspaper Laws.

Mr. Tuckerman, editor of the Workman Cleveland, has taken some pains to collect and compile the decisions of the U. S. Courts on this subject and gives to the Washington Post, as the result of his investigations, the following, which may be relied upon as correct:

Excellent Train Service.

The present schedule of train service on A. T. & S. F. R. R. from New Mexico is an excellent one.

A fast express leaves El Paso, Deming and Silver City early each afternoon, making the run to Rincon, and from Vallasa to La Junta, by daylight, arriving at Kansas City evening of second day, and Chicago morning of third day after day of departure. This train carries Pullman palace sleepers from El Paso to Kansas City, and Los Angeles to Chicago, with Pullman tourist sleepers Los Angeles to Kansas City making direct connection at La Junta for Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Denver, and at Burrton for St. Louis via the Frisco Ry.

The train from San Francisco (with palace sleepers to Kansas City and tourist sleepers to Chicago) leaves Albuquerque daily about noon, strikes darkness near Wagon Mound, arriving in Kansas City evening of next day, and in Chicago the following morning. [illegible]

GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

CHARLES DICKENS.

Which we Offer with One Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than Our Regular Subscription Price.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer is subscribers eclipses any ever before made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is deeply interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is a handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type, published complete, unabridged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

These are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been circulated in every book and corner of the civilized world. Until late years the number of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the great high cost of the sets prevented many people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled in order to reward our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

$500 Reward for Ore Thieves.

The common experience of this camp shows that much is lost by the mine operators by the stealing of gold specimens, if not in amalgum and bullion. Therefore, the "Old Abe" Company offers a standing reward of Three Hundred Dollars for the arrest and conviction or for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons stealing any of the property of the Old Abe Co., even the smallest specimen of ore.
