Lundin Winner of S. & W. Prize

Dorothy Lundin, a 10-B commercial student of S. B. H. S., won first prize in a radio contest heard over the N. B. C. red network; and sponsored by the S. & W. Junior Reporter hour.

The first prize was a 1937 streamlined portable Corona typewriter.

Dorothy said, "When I heard them read my name and my story I almost fell over. I was in the kitchen washing dishes and I was so surprised I just about dropped a handful."

Her story was dramatized over the radio on Friday, September 3, 1937. Several days later a representative of the S. & W. company from San Francisco called upon her and requested her appearance at the California theatre September 11. Dorothy attended the theatre, and was presented with the typewriter by Mayor Johnson of San Bernardino,- The Tyro Sept. 30.

The above article was clipped from the Tyro, San Bernardino, school paper. Miss Lundin is a daughter of the former Esther Bixler granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bixler.

Mrs. Duncan Honored

The Rainbows honored Mrs. James Duncan with a bridal shower, at the W. W. Smith home yesterday. Mrs. Duncan was recipient of many lovely and useful gifts. Refreshments were delicious cake and cocoa.

Mesdames Ray Lemon and Frank English attended Grand Chapter O. E. S. in El Paso last Monday. Mrs. Lemon was a guest of Mrs. D. S. Donaldson.

Thank You and God Bless You

During my recent illness and especially after the loss of my dear son, Morgan, when life seemed at its darkest ebb, a host of friends did all that was humanly possible to make things easier by words of sympathy, gifts of flowers, and acts of kindness. My precious boy has gone from earth and earthly cares forever, but the memory of his tender thought for me, together with the kindness and thoughtfulness of those who tried to palliate my suffering brings home the thought that life would be dark indeed without the love of family and friends.

"Friends we cling to may be fewer,
But the love for them is truer,
For we know life's richest treasure,
Is the friendship that endures;
And the old friends all grow dearer,
As we see with eyes grown clearer,
That joy's gladdest, fullest measure
Is friendship such as yours."

Nellie B. Reily.

I. O. O. F. Notes

Last Tuesday evening at the regular meeting Mr. Hugh Bunch received his 3rd degree. After which an oyster supper was enjoyed by about 25 members.

Next Tuesday night the first degree will be conferred on Messrs. Kidwell and Dow and in case Mr. Penfield can be on hand all three candidates will receive the 2nd degree.

Mr. Albert McCall son of Mrs. L. A. McCall was married August 7th to Miss Betty Leo of Chicago. They will make their home in Kansas City where Mr. McCall is a YMCA instructor.

The Ladies Aid at White Oaks are giving a Hallowe'en Party at the home of Mrs. Ed Queen, Saturday 30. This will be a Public affair and everybody is invited.

Applications for Farm Loans May be Made

Applications are now being received by the Farm Security Administration for rural rehabilitation loans for the next crop year; according to Mr. Evans, County Supervisor in charge of the Rural Rehabilitation supervised loan program in Lincoln County. He made the announcement early this week from his office in the Lutz Building.

Mr. Evans stated that a considerable part of the work of his office consists in assisting Rehabilitation farmers to make out practical Farm and Home Management plans and assisting them in their farming and home operations.

These loans are limited within bounds of allotted funds to financially distressed farm families—whether on their own land or as tenants on rented land and who are unable to secure proper credit from other sources to make a crop or to purchase needed livestock and equipment.

Methodist Church Notes

Church is paying 100 per cent on everything I am going to conference at Albuquerque with the best report this church has had in years.

I will be back Monday the first and will try to kill a deer.

Country Club Dance

The opening dance of the Carrizozo Country Club held October 23, proved to be a great success and one of the best attended dances held for some time. KOB radio station orchestra from Albuquerque furnished the music, which was of the very best. Officers of the club appreciate the patronage accorded.

Mrs. C. A. McCammon of El Paso fell last Monday night and broke her shoulder blade. She is now in Hotel Dieu and is doing fairly well.

Woman's Club Notes

The Woman's Club met Oct. 22nd, at the home of Mrs. Albert Ziegler with forty present, the President, Mrs. John Hall, presiding. Mrs. Lemon led the club in singing, "You can Smile", with Miss Leslye Cooper at the piano.

The program in charge of Mrs. Ola Jones, opened with the club singing one verse of "America, the Beautiful".

The subject for the afternoon was "Soil Conservation," the sub-topic, "Erosion".

Several papers prepared by experts on the different subjects were read by the following:

Topographic History of the Rio Grande Valley, preceding the coming of man Mrs. Degitz.

Types of Erosion, giving a picture of the land, showing the normal geological erosion, and the different kinds, Mrs. Jones

Conservation of Natural Resources. Mrs. Paul Mayer.

Methods of Control, Mrs. Jones

The Land as a Text Book, Mrs. Nickels. This paper was written by Ann Raymond who was to have been the speaker for the afternoon.

Conservation Education, Mrs. Blaney.

Soil Conservation Service, under the department of Agriculture, and poem, The Old Indian rejoicing, The Land will be restored, Mrs. Jones

Mrs. Jones had charts with pictures of different types of erosion, showing headwaters uncontrolled. A very instructive and entertaining program and a very important subject in our state, New Mexico.

A very enjoyable lunch of apple pie, cheese and coffee, was served by the committee: Mrs Blaney chairman; assisted by Mesdames Don English, Petty, Jones, Adams, Garner, Lovelace, Eakers, C. Mayer and Sammons.

Reporter.

All patrons of Capitan schools are urged to attend the P. T. A. meeting Nov. 1st at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Frank Wimberly will give the address. There will be a Health Play by the grade pupils, and a Quartet by the Grammer School Faculty.

Mrs. E. I. Griffin of Adobe was in town buying supplies for the store Tuesday of this week. The Griffins have a nice little store, well located and with many conveniences that few ranch people have. Plenty of water stored for household and ranch purposes; a large tank, four 100 barrel cisterns, besides two smaller cisterns; good lights and good refrigeration. Indeed they have a most convenient, attractive home and are substantial enterprising citizens— a splendid family to know.

The local CCC camp is to give a Halloween dance tonight. They dare even those of strong heart not to tremble with fear at the appearance of the ghost at the stroke of midnight! Also free refreshments.

WANTED: Pinon Nuts. We pay cash. The Titsworth Co. Inc.

Mrs. Thelma Peters of Capitan will be in Carrizozo next week to assist her sister Miss Bee Johnson in the Beauty Shop.

School Notes

Mr. Byrant, representing the Lowe and Campbell Sporting Goods Company, visited in High School Tuesday. While here he sold the Boys Basket Ball team the necessary equipment for starting the basket ball season.

Our recent Football game with Hondo looked like a victory for Hondo during the first half when the score was six to nothing in favor of Hondo. During the last half our boys went in to win, and by throwing into the game every ounce of energy our boys won the game by a score of 13 to 6.

All faculty members were dinner guests of the Business Men's Club last Wednesday evening at the Southern Pacific Hotel.

Manuel Gutierrez, who was hurt in the transit to the Alamogordo football game is now able to be up and around. We hope to see him in school in a few days.

Mr. Joe Phillips of Tularosa enrolled in our Freshman class Monday.

Next week the State Educational Association meets in Albuquerque. Our Faculty is enrolled 100 per cent. They plan on leaving for the big meeting early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Minerva Stivender, at the age of 82 years, enrolled in the Freshman class of Florida University, she expects to graduate in June 1942 with a Bachelor of science degree. Freshman of Carrizozo High School please do not get discouraged by the passing years and you may beat the record of Minerva Stivender.

Each High School class has chosen a candidate for Beauty Queen. The final voting on these candidates will take place at the Senior Carnival Nov. 13th at the Community Hall. The candidates are; Freshmen- Audrey Lamb, Sophomore Louise Degner, Junior- Lois Smith and Senior- Evelyn Ellison.

Mrs. Burleson, who spent the last three weeks in El Paso returned home this week with her daughter, Mrs. F. A. English.

FAR EAST CONFERENCE

Davis Heads American Delegation to Brussels . . . Trying for Labor Peace . . . Special Session

Secretary of the Navy Swanson pinning a special congressional medal on Admiral Richard E. Byrd for the contribution he, with other members of the second Byrd antarctic expedition, which ended in 1935, made to science. The other members of the expedition received similar awards. Looking on are Admiral William Leahy, center, and William C. Haines, meteorologist.

Davis Sent to Brussels

NORMAN H. DAVIS is on his way to Brussels, Belgium, as head of the American delegation to a conference of the signatories of the nine-power treaty which, the optimists hope, will put an end to the warfare between Japan and China. More realistic observers of the course of events have no such expectation, for the pact has no "teeth" and the conferees can do little except talk.

Norman H. Davis

Associated with Mr. Davis, the administration's roving ambassador, are Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck and Pierrepont Moffat as advisers. Robert T. Pell is the press officer and C. E. Bohlen is secretary of the delegation.

Before sailing for Europe the delegates received instructions from President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, but these were not revealed to the public.

The invitation to the conference was issued by the Belgian government "at the request of the British government and with the approval of the government of the United States." China and Japan are both signatories to the treaty. The former accepted the invitation to the Brussels meeting, but it was believed Japan would not be represented there. Tokyo has maintained the policy that the Sino-Japanese troubles must be settled without the intervention of other nations.

Labor Peace Parley

LEADERS in the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. gathered in Washington for a conference designed to end the warfare between those divisions of organized labor in America. Some of them thought the negotiations might result in an early settlement of their disputes or at least a truce. Neither President Green nor John L. Lewis ventured any prediction as to the outcome of the deliberations. Some students of labor politics were inclined to think peace was not yet in sight and could not be brought about without the removal of Green from the A. F. of L. presidency and the elimination of Lewis from consideration for that post. Their suggestion was that peace might be negotiated eventually by replacing Green with some such labor figure as Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, or Edward F. McGrady, former assistant secretary of labor and now Radio Corporation labor relations chief, and by giving industrial union groups stronger representation in shaping the federation's policies.

Secy. Perkins

President Roosevelt displayed active interest in the labor controversy and received Secretary of Labor Perkins at his Hyde Park home, where for three hours they discussed the subject. The restoration of harmony in labor's ranks is considered of great importance to the administration for both economic and political reasons.

Secretary Perkins announced in Washington that she had named a federal committee on apprentice training to become a permanent agency in the Labor department. Its purpose, she said, is "to provide a sufficient number of highly skilled workers to supply the country's growing needs and to guarantee a thorough trade preparation for apprentices."

Straus Heads Housing

NATHAN STRAUS of New York city was named administrator of the $526,000,000 federal housing program by President Roosevelt. He is the son of the late Nathan Straus, philanthropist, and has been connected with the housing work in New York. His appointment was considered a victory for Senator Wagner over Secretary Ickes who wanted Howard Gray of the PWA named.

Arkansas Picks Miller

JOE ROBINSON'S successor as senator from Arkansas will be Congressman John E. Miller, Democrat, for he defeated Gov. Carl G. Bailey in the special election by an impressive majority. The Republicans had no candidate. Miller has been a rather lukewarm supporter of the New Deal in congress.

Airliner Wrecked; 19 Dead

SMASHING against Hayden peak, in the Uinta mountains of Utah, a big transcontinental airliner of the United Air Lines was totally wrecked and its passengers and crew, numbering 19 persons, were killed. The debris was sighted by scout planes some 10,000 feet up the mountainside, but efforts of rescue parties to reach the scene were hampered by heavy snow.

Special Session Called

CONGRESS was called in extraordinary session to start November 15, and immediately afterward President Roosevelt explained in a "fireside chat" over the radio the necessity for this as he sees it. Reporting cheerfully on his western trip, he outlined the legislative program which he declared the American people need to promote prosperity.

President Roosevelt

These are the five measures he said should be passed without delay:

Crop production control to "build an all-weather farm program so that in the long run prices will be more stable."

Wage and hour standards to "make millions of our lowest paid workers actual buyers of billions of dollars of industrial and farm products."

Regional planning to conserve natural resources, prevent floods and produce electric power for general use.

Government reorganization to provide "Twentieth century machinery" to make the "democratic process work more efficiently."

Stronger antitrust laws in furtherance of "a low price policy which encourages the widest possible consumption."

Chairman O'Connor of the house rules committee predicted the house would pass a farm bill in the first week of the session and then take up the wage and hour measure. Some Democratic leaders said the labor bill, which was passed by the senate in the last session but held up in the house rules committee, would probably be the only one of the five measures to get through congress in the special session. Even that is strongly opposed by southern Democrats and has been condemned by the American Federation of Labor.

Why the Stock Slump?

WHO or what is responsible for the decided slump in the stock market is a moot question. In his recent "fireside chat" the President intimated that Wall Street was to blame for its own troubles and belittled the effect proposed legislation would have on the markets and general business.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National bank, largest bank in the country, doesn't agree with Mr. Roosevelt in this. He says Wall Street is honest, and lays the blame for the adverse market situation on the doorstep of the administration and particularly the securities and exchange commission.

New Budget Figures

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT found his estimate of $418,000,000 as the probable deficit for 1938 fiscal year was much too low. So he gave out new budget figures putting the probable deficit at nearly 700 millions. And it admittedly will be much greater unless the executive and congress achieve very considerable economies.

Brady Gang Wiped Out

LAST of the big "mobs" of bank robbers and murderers, the Brady gang was wiped out in a gun battle with federal agents at Bangor, Maine. Al Brady, the leader, and Clarence Shaffer, Jr., his lieutenant, were killed; and James Dalhover was wounded and captured. The outlaws were recognized by a clerk in a sporting goods store and the G-men were summoned. Dalhover was to be taken to Indiana to stand trial for the murder of a state policeman, one of four killings attributed to the gang. He made a full confession, and search began for persons who had been aiding them.

The gangsters' capture was believed to have nipped a potential New England crime wave. Floor plans of two banks were found in Dalhover's possession with maps of nearby roads.

Divorce Rule Stands

CHURCH laws against remarriage of divorced persons by Episcopal clergymen stand unchanged for at least three years. Proposed liberalization of the rule was defeated by the house of deputies of the church at the general convention in Cincinnati. The deputies voted to continue for another three years the commission on marriage and divorce.

The defeated proposal would have permitted bishops to allow Episcopal clergymen to solemnize marriage of persons, who were divorced for any cause, after study of each case.

Mine Disaster

COAL gas exploded in the Mulga mine in Alabama 12 miles from Birmingham, and the lives of 33 miners were snuffed out. Five hundred men were at work in the mine at the time, but fortunately the explosion was four miles from the entrance. The blast was the first since the operation of the mine was taken over by the Woodward Iron company, large producers of merchant iron in Birmingham. However, 56 men had been killed at Mulga in former years.

"Lindy" Still American

RUMORS that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was planning to become a British subject seem to be false, for he has just accepted a five year renewal of his commission in the United States army air corps. Army officers expressed the belief privately he would not have renewed his air corps tie if he intended changing his allegiance. The airman has retained his military status since his graduation in 1925 from the air corps flying school at Kelly field, Texas.

Palestine Terrorism

BRITISH military authorities took stern measures to suppress the violence in Palestine, but apparently without success. The Arabs continued their attacks on the Jewish people and buildings and in Jerusalem began using bombs.

Gen. A. P. Wavell, commander of the 10,000 British troops in Palestine, ordered the homes of Arab terrorists burned, following the destruction of Kalandia airport, near Lydda, with an estimated loss of $50,000.

Sixty persons were arrested for breaking the twenty-four hour curfew which amounts to virtual martial law.

If this sort of thing keeps up, Great Britain is likely to make Palestine a crown colony instead of a mandate.

Big Battle at Shanghai

SHANGHAI was witnessing the fiercest battle of the Sino-Japanese war. Land and air forces of both sides were fighting furiously and the casualties were piling up hour by hour. The Chinese were making a great counter-offensive for which they had massed men and guns about the city. The Japanese were ready for the attack, and desperately battled to turn back their foes. Observers described the hand-to-hand fighting as that of madmen, especially in the Chinese quarter.

A big fleet of Chinese airplanes was sent down the Yangtse and bombs were showered on the Japanese warships along the Japanese-occupied shore of the Whangpoo.

Luxuriously Furred Costumes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE big news about fall and winter fashions is that they bespeak a new high in elegance. When fashion goes opulent, goes sumptuous, goes luxurious, then what inevitably happens? Well, for one thing it follows as the night the day that designers turn to handsome furs and fur trimmings as one way of conveying the message of elegance in the mode.

Which accounts for the fact that the new coats, suits and ensembles show an enrichment of fur that emphatically declares an era of luxurious dress. In consequence, women who are fashion-alert have taken their cue and are making it their chief concern to acquire a complete ensemble costume styled of high-grade material ranging from rugged colorful tweeds to refined duvetyns, broadcloths or velvets that are graced with precious fur—the sort that bespeaks a "lady of quality."

The models pictured have been carefully selected from among a collection shown at a preview given by the Style Creators of Chicago in the wholesale district. These furred costumes were designed by members of their group to meet the demands of women that class as among the best dressed.

Perfect for crisp autumn days is the outfit to the left in the picture. The dress is of sheer black alpaca weave. Its novel metal chain and clasp closing showing between the fur on the coat gives it a military bearing. The free-swinging coronation red wool coat is a fascinating garment, and its tuxedo bands of marten fur make it more so.

Which reminds us the revival of marten fur this season is a most significant event. It has been a long time since we have been seeing much marten in the style picture. Its return will be welcomed for it is not only as handsome as can be, but for dependable wear it has no superior.

When the smartly dressed woman steps out in a gorgeously furred costume as centered in the picture, she will be the cynosure of admiring eyes. This sheer wool model combines a tuxedo-front coat trimmed in a huge cross fox with a one-piece dress that is simply charming. Note the decorative quilted flowers outlined in gold thread at the neckline. The gold kid belt adds the finishing touch.

There is really no limit to the ingenuity displayed in the placement of fur. It is used for separate sleeves in cloth coats so much so that the fashion has become quite outstanding this season. The coat with a bolero top is ever so smart, too. The newest wrinkle is the bolero type that has the lower cloth part zipped on so that it can be removed at will thus providing a jaunty little fur jacket or full length coat. Among countless other fur arrangements novelties are to be seen such as a panel of fur extending down the back of the coat from neck to hemline as if it were a watteau pleat. Frequently double borderings of fur occur about hemlines.

SUEDE FOURSOME

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Suede from head to foot is the next move, says fashion. Here is shown a suede foursome that answers to the call. The hat is a harvest rust off-the-face suede model with a right up-flung brim. It fits low in the back. The shoes are multi-toned open throat suede oxfords with bindings of coffee brown and Araby green on harvest rust. The bag is a large suede design in harvest rust with gold metal trim.

JEWELRY DESIGNERS GO ROMANTIC ALSO

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With romanticism gaining such a headway in fashions for fall, small wonder that jewelry manufacturers have recognized it and are all set for a hey-dey. Jewelry, my good woman, is not only getting bigger and better, but practically all of it has been inspired. Some of the inspirations are modern, but most of them have been drawn from an era when romance was at its height and glamour stalked the world in high places.

Such romantic figures as Empress Carlotta, glamorous wife of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian who reigned for such a short time, (1864-1867) over Mexico; Joan of Arc; grand duchesses whose jewels were of such splendor as to have been remembered; these, and lovely ladies of the gay nineties and the naughty naughts, are being immortalized, more or less, in smart pieces of costume jewelry designed by Alberta, one of America's leading costume jewelry designers.

The "Empress Carlotta" jewelry has been copied from some of her pieces of jewels found in a museum in Mexico. For evening it is the most elegant, for it is made of Kimberley gems which are cut and set like fine diamonds in 24 karat gold washed metal.

"Joan of Arc" jewelry is part of an all-metal group which Alberta believes will be a big success for fall. This line is made of a silvery metal studded like the doors of a medieval castle.

Costume Jewelry

The dog collar and the feather tiara are two revivals of the Gay Nineties period which are important this season.

Hats, Handbag Match

Knitted hats and handbags are designed to match hand-knit frocks and suits in dark, rich colors for winter wear.

CHAPTER I

—1—

"Of course you knew," the girl said, "a man has been killed, here on the 94 range?"

Billy Wheeler turned to look at the girl who perched beside him on the corral fence, and for a moment he forgot to answer. Marian Dunn hadn't been in the desert country long enough to gather a very heavy tan. Under the shadow of her Stetson her face reflected the glow of the fresh morning sunlight upon the red hills; to Billy Wheeler it seemed a fragile face, finely drawn, suggesting transparency. And her eyes were blue distance boiled down. She wore belted overalls and half boots; but she could never have been mistaken for a Westerner.

Billy Wheeler, though, could never be mistaken for anything else. The dry intermountain country, by its necessity of wide ranges and the perpetual mobility of the saddle, has set its mark upon its sons. Wheeler was young, but his weather-trimmed features showed the blast of sun and sweep of wind, and his gray eyes were visibly tuned to distance.

The girl turned her eyes to him, reminding him he was supposed to say something.

"I didn't hear much," he said. "A gas station man told me there was a killing, as I came through Inspiration; but he didn't know much about it."

"I guess nobody does."

"Yes, but—who was killed? And when?"

"That's just it," the girl told him. "They don't know who was killed. It's the strangest thing I ever heard of. They can't even find him."

"Can't find who? The man who was killed?"

"That's it."

Billy Wheeler grinned slowly, boyishly. "Well, I'll be darned!"

"I don't think it's funny. I think it's—horrible."

"Well, yes; I guess it is."

He looked away, estimating again the nearness of the approaching riders. John "Red Horse" Dunn, Old Man of the 94, at whose summons Wheeler had come 300 miles, had not been on hand to receive him, having set out before daylight on an unknown mission with three of his cow hands. But they were coming in now; across the dry morning Wheeler could identify the individual riders at the half mile as they jog-trotted in, their ponies abreast.

"When did all this happen?" he asked.

"Uncle John found the sign, as he calls it, yesterday morning."

"Then he must have wired me right after that."

"I guess so."

She hadn't known, then, that her uncle had sent for him. She hadn't known that he was coming—and he hadn't known she was here. That made a difference.

"Uncle John hasn't wanted to talk about this thing—to me," the girl now said. "Perhaps he'll give you a different, clearer story, Billy."

They fell silent. Billy Wheeler let his eyes run over casual, familiar things—the roadster he had come in, the tall barns, the low-sprawled house, bunkhouse, and grub shack. But as Billy Wheeler's eyes drifted out over the vast rolling "flats" of the plain, resting here and there on a broken, flat-topped mesa or far up-thrust mountain of gaunt red rock, all that he saw, excepting only the far peaks, was under the dictatorship of Horse Dunn's brand—the 94.

Billy Wheeler looked at these familiar things, but he was not thinking about them. He was thinking about the girl at his side, whom he hardly looked at at all.

Billy Wheeler had not seen Marian Dunn for two years. Had he known that she was here, he would not have come here now.

Marian Dunn was Horse Dunn's niece. Once, for a couple of months two years ago, Wheeler had seen her every day. He had used every persuasion he knew of, all he had, to make this girl love him—and had failed. Sometimes he could still hear her low, cool voice: "I'm sorry—truly sorry." The sincere regret in that was pretty hard to take.

In everything else he had succeeded. He had come up from nothing in cows, and tripled in land, and switched back to cows to double again. He had liquidated everything at the peak of cattle prices, and at twenty-seven had nothing to worry about. But in this one thing he cared most about he had met only complete blank defeat. He would not have come here, to raise again the bitterness of that defeat, if he had known that she was here.

And down there was a certain awkwardness between them, since she inevitably knew all that, too.

"I think he's going to ask a favor of you," Marian said.

"I don't know if you know this," Billy Wheeler said slowly; "but his wire made out as if he was offering me a job."

"Yes—I knew that."

"I owe a lot to old Horse Dunn," Billy Wheeler said. "He picked me up when I was fourteen years old, half-way starved and all alone. He carried me along four years. If it wasn't for him, I'd be in the wild bunch—or in the pen. And he showed me my start in cattle."

"I suppose, then," Marian said, "you won't turn him down in this thing now."

"I've got things to see to, Marian," he stalled. "I couldn't take on another job now."

He supposed she might know that this was not so. For the present he was out from under; he could afford to do anything he wanted to, to fill his time or to help a friend. But to take a job in which he would see this girl every day, while yet tight-cinched by the knowledge that she was not for him, and never would be—that was something else.

"I don't know how much he needs you," Marian said; "nor who else he could get, instead. But I know this—he has more enemies than friends, by three to one."

Billy Wheeler stirred restlessly, and began to build a cigarette. He knew it was true that the 94 had many enemies, few friends. Here in this dusty, mesa-broken land Horse Dunn had set out to build a cow kingdom—a kingdom on the grand scale of the old days.

"I'll—Get Out of Here If You Want Me To."

But you can't build a cow kingdom, buying up the range rights of little brand after little brand, without annoying and disturbing the brands that are left; and the bought-out brands are forever trying to edge back.

Here and there in the world were perhaps half a dozen graves commemorating the drawn-out, inevitable conflict. There had never been a general open war. But more than one lone-riding cowboy of the 94 had come to his end by the gunfire of persons unknown, and one or two others had left on the range an enemy who would force the issue no more. And at Ace Springs had died two men of four—hired gunfighters all—who had jumped Horse Dunn from ambush. The 94 could have started its own Boot Hill.

More effectual than those brief, unofficial bursts of action was the enmity of certain cooler, more wisely watchful men, like Link Bender, Pinto Halliday, Sam Caldwell—the defeated contestants for the Red Hills ranges. Nowadays the expanding 94 found itself encircled by a veritable wolf ring of enemies—a wolf ring biding its time with a malevolent optimism.

"I don't even know what the situation is," the girl went on. "But it's worrying him deeply; he can't hide that, not from me. And his first move was to turn to you."

"Oh, shucks now, Marian . . ."

"I shouldn't like to think," the girl said oddly, as if with difficulty, "that you turned him down because I'm here."

For an instant he sat perfectly still, silent. He hadn't expected her to come out with it, direct and straight like that.

She put both hands on the rail between them and leaned toward him. "I'd never forgive myself if I thought you let Horse Dunn down on account of me. I'll—get out of here, if you want me to."

He looked straight at her—and lied. "Nothing farther from my mind," he assured her. "No call to even think of such a thing."

He paused, listening to the stampede of hoofs beyond a big barn which obscured the riders as they swung into the layout.

And now rescue came, as Horse Dunn thundered around the corner of the barn and slid his pony to a stop before them in a great up-jump of dust.

To old-timers John Dunn was known as "Red Horse Jack"—or more commonly, just "Horse" Dunn—partly because he was big as a horse, and partly because of the coarse sorrel mane he had had in his youth. Nobody knew how old Horse Dunn was; they thought he must be sixty-eight at least, and his mustache and curly beard were at last roaned with gray. But he seemed to have an Indian medicine on him which cheated time, for he was powerful and barrel-chested yet, and straight as a lodgepole pine.

Half an hour after his return Dunn was to be seen leaning against a post of the open gallery which ran along the front of the cook-shack; he was chewing a blade of burro grass. Said he, "We all grant a man is dead. Any of you still doubting that?" He watched the cowboys, who lounged along the open edge of the gallery floor, but none of them answered.

Breakfast had been set out by a little withered old woman known as Tia Cara. She had fed them promptly—and they ate the same way.

"Look here," Dunn went on. "Look here! I'm going to ask you once more—and this is the last time. If any of you is a good enough man to have blasted a cow thief, say so now! I'll back any boy of mine that shot in defense of the brand. You know that!"

He paused, and waited. Val Douglas, Dunn's thirty-year-old range boss, let mild eyes dream on a distant peak, and Tulare Callahan spat over his shoulder through his teeth.

"All right," the Old Man said. "I ain't doubting you, any of you. Now I'm telling you what I want you to do. You've seen the killer's trail at Short Crick—the trail of a cup-hoofed pony, long in the toe; been shod, and the shoes pulled off. We've missed out on locating that trail where it left Short Crick. Now I want you to start in and comb this range. Somewhere, somehow, we got to cut that trail. And especially we've got to find the man that's dead."

"Anybody checking back on the dead man's horse?"

"Don't you worry about the dead man's horse. There'll be plenty checking done on that horse! Tulare, you take the flat country to the south."

"Okay."

"Gil, you sweep northwest between Short Crick and the Spotted Range," Dunn went on. "Val, you take a wider swing than Gil, and to the east. Scout the edge of the bare rock below Red Sleep Ridge."

The cowboys waited. "Is there any guess yet," Tulare asked after a moment, "as to who it is we're looking for?"

Unexpectedly the Old Man flared up. "How the hell do I know!" he roared. "And what do you care? You'll know him when you find him because he's dead! Ain't that enough for you? What you waiting for now? Get on with it!"

They moved off.

Horse Dunn turned to Billy Wheeler. "Get your war bag. You got to get into horse pants and boots. You and I got some riding of our own to do, no later than now!"

Billy Wheeler jerked suitcase and saddle from his roadster and followed Horse Dunn to a room in the rambling weathered house—the only room the Old Man used when he was alone.

Here, while Wheeler changed to cow-country work clothes, Horse Dunn stood looking out across the range. He turned to Billy Wheeler, his big crinkly-bearded face unreadable.

"Look out the window. Look over at Lost Whiskey Buttes. You see a signal there?"

Wheeler obeyed. Four miles off, on a high place, he made out a thin vertical line against the brassy sky.

"That's Steve Hurley's smoke," Horse Dunn told him. "Last night Steve was in Inspiration, checking up. This morning—he's been on that butte since before daybreak."

"What's the smoke mean, Horse?"

Beavers Are Nature's Flood Engineers; Dams Are Far Safer Than Man-Made Levees

Beavers are the original flood-control engineers, and they are among the shrewdest and thriftiest and most valuable as well. Beaver dams near river sources, and forests, are stronger and surer and safer than the best of man-made levees. Unhappily, both beavers and forests are diminishing, and we are trying desperately and not to successfully, to substitute steel and concrete for their services, asserts a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Nine times out of ten, the site chosen for a beaver dam is the most feasible spot along any particular stretch of river. The tenth time the dam may fail, in which case the beavers abandon it and diligently hasten to make good their mistake by building another. For beavers, as the old adage will remind you, are workers, especially the old beavers for whom the cutting of a tree 4 or 5 inches in diameter is a simple matter, generally to be accomplished at a single sitting without stopping.

The actual work of cutting the logs is generally done by one beaver to a tree. Just before the tree falls, the cutter warns his fellows by thumping his tail.

With four sharp teeth and tireless industry, the beaver hews his logs and trims them and chops them into convenient sizes for rolling.

Then with the help of strong webbed feet, and a flat tail which serves admirably as a rudder, the beaver begins the construction of his dam, making good use of big stones and sandbars, and choosing a site that offers plenty of dam material.

The beaver dam barricades the stream and prevents most of the water from rushing downstream suddenly after a heavy rainfall.

And herein lies the great value of the beaver dam to man. It regulates the flow of river water, which might be overmuch at certain seasons and uselessly little at other times, so that the river bed is neither dry nor flooded, but there is an even stream-flow in fair weather and foul. Brooks that have been dammed by beavers are leaky reservoirs which take care of the overflow of flood times, but keep continuously supplying the river.

Crazy Patch Work at Home in a Modern Setting

THE crazy patch is the oldest of quilt patterns, yet there is something amazingly modern in its angular lines. So whether your living room is traditional in style or newer than tomorrow you will be interested in the revival of crazy patch work for what our grandmothers and great-grandmothers called a "slumber throw."

A corner of one of these old silk crazy quilts is shown here at the lower right. The pieces were small—many not more than 1½ inches wide or long. A variety of embroidery stitches joins the pieces. Both plain and figured silks were used, the plain patches often being embroidered with flowers, fans and other amusing motifs—note the beetle embroidered on one patch. Several colors of silk embroidery thread were generally used but in the most artistic of these quilts one color predominated in the embroidery.

Larger patches with simple feather stitch and herring-bone stitch at the joinings also give a good effect. The pieces are sewed to a foundation of some firm soft material. Outing flannel or an old wool blanket are good. Pin a piece in place over the space to be filled, trim the edges to the right shape, as at A, allowing enough to turn under, as at B, where the patch laps over the one next to it. Baste the turned edges down, as shown. When a number of patches have been basted in place, sew them down to the foundation with the embroidery stitches and then remove the bastings. The backing is tied to the front with silk embroidery thread as comforters are tied. Little or no padding may be used and a plain band around the edge is effective.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Open Peach Pie.

6 peaches	1 cupful flour
Sugar, cinnamon	1 egg
1 egg yolk	½ teaspoonful baking powder
3 tablespoonfuls cream	¼ cupful sugar
1 tablespoonful butter	2 tablespoonfuls milk

Make a cookie dough type of crust from last six ingredients, as follows: Mix dry ingredients. Work in butter, and add the slightly beaten egg and milk. Mix and then pat and roll out on board or pastry canvas. Fit into nine-inch pie plate. Peel the peaches, remove stones and slice in even slices. Arrange in circular fashion over the dough. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon mixed. Beat the egg yolk, add three tablespoonfuls cream and drip over and around the peaches. Bake in hot oven for about 30 minutes or until crust is browned and peaches are soft.

Simple Way to Avoid Dust When Shaking Grates and Taking Ashes From Pit

THERE is an easy way to keep dust from sifting through the cracks of the ashpit door when shaking furnace grates. Quite a few readers have asked me how it can be done, and I'm sure many more of you will be interested. Here's how:

Have a spray made of small pipe, connected with the cold water system installed in the ashpit of the furnace. Only a short length of pipe will be needed. In it have small holes drilled and cap the free end.

Just before shaking the grates, turn on the spray. It will throw a fine mist over the whole ashpit, wetting down the ashes as they drop through the grate openings and settling the dust immediately. Then remove the ashes from the ashpit. They will be sufficiently wet to prevent the dust from rising and settling in the cellar.

The cost and installation of such a spray will be but little, and it certainly will save you considerable work in dusting off things on which the dust would otherwise settle.

What Price Safety?

The safety of a bank depends upon many things, not the least of which is the intenseness with which the banker scrutinizes each loan application. It is essential that the banker know the purpose for which a loan is intended; that he know it can and will be repaid on time.

As a result of this protection the banker must give his depositors, he is often misunderstood in his community. The price of safety-- and your safety as a depositor, not the banker's-- it is often a high one, but one on which the successful banker cannot bargain.

Capitan School Carnival

The new gymnasium at Capitan was filled to overflowing last Saturday night with people out to enjoy the school carnival. Hamburgers, candy, 10 or 12 booths, a fish pond, boxing and wrestling matches, a negro minstrel and a jitney-dance really netted some money for the school.

Like All Women, You Want Your Clothes to Be Right

AND the only way that you can be sure they will be right is to know what the designers and creators of new styles have decreed shall be right. Cherie Nicholas, nationally known authority, who writes on women's fashions for this paper, tells you just what you want to know and pictures for you the garments and hats that the well-dressed woman will be wearing in the weeks to come. The styles that Miss Nicholas describes are authentic and the garments that she depicts are up-to-the-minute, but they do not represent style extremes. The garments are those that will be worn by the average woman and that you will find for sale in your home stores.

Keep up with the changing styles through Miss Nicholas' illustrated fashion articles, appearing in these columns, and tell your friends about them

"Flying Dutchman"

SO AMAZING have been the developments in aviation in recent years that it is a brave man indeed who will venture to say "Why, they can't do that!" when told of some new feat in the air by man. Therefore, it is not especially remarkable, perhaps, that the whole world accepted as authentic a photograph which came out of Germany a year or so ago.

It showed a man flying through the air just above and a little ahead of four others who were running after him. It might have been mistaken for a skier in action except for the fact that he was holding two bell-like objects and apparently blowing into them through a tube. The description on this photograph read:

"For the first time in history a man has succeeded in flying under his own power. This picture shows Erich Kocher of Berlin performing that feat, followed by his excited friends. He blew into the bell-like arrangement, causing to revolve two rotors which also served as wings. On his feet was a ski landing gear, and attached to his hips was a 'tail skid.'"

So cleverly had the photograph been "doctored" that it passed for an authentic representation of an epoch-marking incident in aviation and was accepted as such—yes, even by American newspapers which printed the picture with the headline, "Man's First Flight Under His Own Power." It was not until some time later that the hoax was revealed. Considering the news that has been coming out of Germany about Hitler's treatment of some of its citizens, one wonders if the "flying Dutchman's" name has some significance. "Kocher" could easily be mistaken for "kosher," you know!

Washing the White Lions

IT'S only once or twice in a century that Easter Sunday falls on April 1 but on one of those occasions the coincidence made it easy for some April Fool prankster to perpetrate a classic hoax. In March, 1860, several thousand citizens of London were greatly flattered when they received a neatly-printed and official-looking card which bore the following inscription:

"TOWER OF LONDON! Admit the bearer and friend to view the annual ceremony of washing the white lions on Sunday, April 1, 1860. Admitted at the White Gate. It is particularly requested that no gratuities be given to the wardens and their assistants."

No one had ever before heard of either the White Gate or the white lions so everyone who received one of these invitations was curious to know whether the latter were real or just statues. Children especially were thrilled at the prospect of seeing them—it was just like going to the zoo.

A few staid citizens were dubious about the propriety of attending such a function on Easter Sunday but that didn't bother several thousand others who entirely overlooked the fact that it was also April 1. So they swarmed to Tower hill in hansom cabs and on foot and began inquiring eagerly of the gatekeepers where the White Gate was.

As soon as the gatekeepers saw the invitations they immediately recognized the hoax and they greatly enjoyed the opportunity of answering "April Fool!" to the eager inquirers. In fact, it has been suspected, although never proved, that some of these gatekeepers were the perpetrators of the hoax which has become historic in England.

Long Distance Taxi Ride

SEVERAL years ago newspapers all over the country printed an amusing story, furnished to them by one of the press associations, which told how a bibulous visitor to New York hailed a taxicab and, in response to the driver's query, "Where to?", replied, "Losh Anglesh—and pleash don' drive too fas'." Whereupon the taxi driver took him to Los Angeles and, arriving there, looked at his meter and announced that the fare was $900, which the bibulous one cheerfully paid. Then, so the story ran, the driver sold his taxi and returned to New York by bus.

It was a good story until—the cab driver mentioned was located in New York and denied the whole yarn. He did admit that, during the depression, he had loaded his motherless children in his taxi and headed west, hoping to find work somewhere en route. But he found that jobs were just as scarce in other parts of the country as they were in New York, so, when he reached California, he sold his taxicab and returned home with his children by bus. So that much of the yarn, at least, was true.

As for the tipsy passenger and the $900 taxi fare which he paid—that part of the story was invented by the press agent for the junk yard to which the taxi man had sold his car. That, in itself, isn't such a bad story. For who ever before heard of a junk yard hiring a press agent!

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Relief for Aliens.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—If an American were dependent on public charity in any continental country, he'd be out of luck and out of that country, too, as quickly as they could him out.

If, in addition, he openly attacked the government of that country, he'd still be out of luck because he'd be in jail.

Irvin S. Cobb

Hundreds of thousands of aliens are on relief here. Many of them slipped across the borders through leaks in our immigration laws—and brought their folks with them, also to be cared for at the taxpayers' expense. Some are avowed enemies of our form of government.

Steps to oust such parasites are balked on the ground that to do so would work hardships on their families. You could say the same thing for bedbugs.

We're starting to register these non-residents. But it's to be a "voluntary" registration, not compulsory. Any person in the audience, besides Madame Perkins, who believes the undesirables will come a-running to list themselves, and risk deportation thereby, kindly raise the right hand.

Champion Crooks.

TRUST California to turn up with a world's champion of something. They arrested a man on suspicion of burglary and forgery and organizing a training school for juvenile criminals and first one little thing and then another.

Surely that would seem to be career enough, but this party had additional claims to recognition. He admitted he had been sentenced to forty-nine terms in various jails and penitentiaries, which in itself would seem to constitute an international record, and said that in forty-three of these cases he had been paroled. He didn't explain how the big hearted parole boards failed to turn him loose before he finished those remaining six sentences.

It must be profound regret to the boys in Alcatraz and other bide-a-wee homes conducted by the federal government that, owing to the cruel refusal of Uncle Sam to go into the paroling business on a wholesale basis, none of them, however ambitious, has a chance to equal this splendid showing.

The honor remains where properly it belongs, constituting a magnificent tribute to the bedutiful mush-headed theory that a state's prison should be a clearing house and not a strong-box with a time-lock on it.

Nazi Influence.

I'VE been talking with a friend just back from Germany. In old days, I liked Germany as a land flowing with gemuetlich and good beer and a superior line of liverwurst. I wonder whether I'd like it so well now.

Because this fellow says every minute everybody must give the Nazi salute and say, "Heil, Hitler!" If a citizen wants his eggs fried, he says first to the waiter, "Heil, Hitler!" If he wants 'em turned over, he says it twice—once for each egg.

There's a swastika flag flying over practically every house. Absence of a swastika flag signifies that the folks who used to live there are now in the hoosegow for failing to fly same.

My friend may have exaggerated somewhat, but, I think, not much, because while talking we came abreast of a Leiderkranz cheese in a delicatessen store window and involuntarily he said, "Heil, Hitler!"

Nominating Barkley.

CANVASSES show Senate Leader Alben Barkley gaining as a possible Democratic nominee in 1940.

It's high time we had somebody from Paducah for President. For a hundred and fifty-odd years this republic has fooled along without one of our local boys sitting up there in the White House, writing messages to congress condemning the use of sugar in cornbread and proclaiming that, if any traitor dares to pull down fried catfish, shoot him on the spot.

With Alben on the job, we'll not only have homegrown statesmanship in job lots, but silver-throated oratory, which, by comparison, would make Patrick Henry seem like a tongue-tied man suffering from chapped lips. For Al can talk an hour and never use the same word twice or the letter "r" once.

Nominate Barkley and that night there won't be a dry throat in McCracken county. Elect Barkley and—well, I always did think I'd make a middling fair Secretary of the Interior; certainly nobody could botch up the Indian bureau worse than it is.

It Took a Child to Stump the Prof

"All it wants is practice," pointed out the professor. "There is no earthly reason why each of you ladies and gentlemen shouldn't use your left hand with the same dexterity as your right."

With a piece of chalk he began to draw a figure, using his right hand, then finished it with his left.

"There," he said, "I defy anyone to mention a single action which I can perform with my right hand and which I can't do equally well with my left."

Silence; then a small voice:

"Mummy," it said, "can he put his left hand in the bottom of his right-hand trouser pocket?"

What Two Things Happen When You Are Constipated?

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Wastes swell up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headaches, a dull, lazy feeling, bilious spells, loss of appetite and dizziness. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, bringing on sour stomach (acid indigestion), and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath.

Then you spend many miserable days. You can't eat. You can't sleep. Your stomach is sour. You feel tired out, grouchy and miserable.

To get the complete relief you seek you must do TWO things. 1. You must relieve the GAS. 2. You must clear the bowels and GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES. As soon as offending wastes are washed out you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, the world looks bright again.

There is only one product on the market that gives you the double action you need. It is ADLERIKA. This efficient carminative cathartic relieves that awful GAS at once. It often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No waiting for overnight relief. Adlerika acts on the stomach and both bowels. Ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 25 years. No griping, no after effects. Just QUICK results. Try Adlerika today. You'll say you have never used such an efficient intestinal cleanser.

Stuttering Found Related to Twins in Chicago Studies

Both May Be Connected With Left-Handedness

Rockford, Ill. — Twins and stuttering may be closely related in their occurrence, Prof. Mildred F. Berry of Rockford college reports in the magazine "Human Biology."

Recently completed studies of a group of nearly 1,000 Chicago children, half of whom stuttered and the other half of whom did not, reveal that twins are found twice as frequently in stuttering families, Miss Berry declares.

In addition, "in stuttering families containing both twins and single children, stuttering is more frequent among the twins."

Because of the apparent connection between stuttering and twinning, which is believed to be hereditary, Miss Berry also believes that stuttering is passed from one generation in a family to the next. The belief that the affliction is largely psychological now finds itself, she states, "on shifting sands."

Five hundred non-stuttering children and 402 children who stuttered were studied in four Chicago hospitals to determine the possible connection between stuttering and twinning.

Thirty-two sets of twins were found in the immediate families of the stutterers as against only 15 sets of twins in the non-stutterers' families, she reports. Of the 30 families of stutterers containing both twins and single children, 22 of 55 twins stuttered, while only 13 of 99 single children were afflicted, indicating a further connection between stuttering and twinning.

The high frequency of the speech defect among twins was connected by Miss Berry with the previously reported fact that both stuttering and twinning have been connected with left-handedness. Stuttering is four times more frequent among left-handers than it is among people who use their right hands. Left-handedness is also found to occur six times more often among twins than among the remainder of the population.

Iridescent Films May Soon Displace Oil Prospector

Vancouver, B. C.—The prospector struggling scores and even hundreds of miles to the nearest assay laboratory with a heavy backload of ore for testing may shortly be a romantic hero of the past.

His future brother-in-arms will need little more than a fistful of the same ore to determine whether it is worth his while to go back with mining equipment.

Thin films of iridescent color, like the ones seen on oily streets after a rain, used by the expert in analyzing ores may spell the difference between the two.

This was the tenor of a report here by Prof. A. M. Gaudin of the Montana School of Mines at a joint meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

Minerals of different chemical composition but which look alike and are difficult to tell apart except by means of costly tests of large amounts can be analyzed under the microscope by means of colored films, Prof. Gaudin reported. Importance is attached to this discovery because of the fact that similar-appearing ores may be widely apart in value.

Differences in the color of the iridescent films are caused by differences in the thickness of the film.

Pact Protects Whales for at Least One Year

London.—Protection for several fast-disappearing species of whale is expected as a result of the international agreement for the protection of whaling, the leading British scientific weekly, Nature, reports.

Chief features of the new agreement, which runs for one year with the proviso that it may be extended as long as necessary, include prohibition of whaling in large areas, prohibition of killing calving whales and setting a minimum size for each of several threatened species of whales.

Clusters of Stars Whirl About Other Celestial Groups

New Discoveries Show Milky Way's Structure

Cambridge, Mass.—Important new clues to the structure of the Milky Way have been found at the Harvard observatory where officials announced discovery of a new type of astronomical sub-system in the universe.

The new system consists of a giant cluster of some hundreds of stars which revolves about a still larger cluster, much as the earth travels about the sun. Astronomers here say it presents the first positive indication they have had that these tremendous clusters may be connected with one another by gravity to form independent sub-orders within the galaxy.

The discovery, made by James Cuffey of the Harvard observatory staff, was the result of numerous extremely accurate computations of the distances from the sun of nine galactic star clusters in the constellation Auriga, the most comprehensive and exact measurements of these distances ever made.

The two clusters the research showed to be companions are those known as Messier 38, which has a mass about 500 times that of our sun, and NGC 1907, which is about 75 times the mass of the sun. The smaller one, it was found, revolves about the larger cluster with the time required for one complete revolution estimated to be about 60,000,000 years.

Colors Determine Distances.

A painstaking study of the colors of nine such groups in Auriga led to the conclusion that these two clusters constitute a system. The colors of stars in clusters are used by astronomers to determine their distances and Messier 38 and NGC 1907 were found to have very similar characteristics. Thus they were shown to be about the same distance from the sun, approximately 20,000 light years. In space they are only 24 light years apart.

A third and still larger cluster, Messier 36, is also believed to be physically connected with the other two groups for it too is about 20,000 light years from the sun. It is about 150 light years from the first two.

Bulls Given Credit for the Dairy Yield of Their Daughters

Washington.—Bulls are given milk and cream-ratings in a new publication of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Not that the records were directly established. Modern agriculture has done a lot of remarkable things, but as yet milk production remains a monopoly of the feminine members of the herd. Nevertheless the honors accorded to bulls in dairy breeds are based strictly on yield records.

The trick is done by studying the yields of daughters of the sires in question, comparing them with the yields of their own mothers made under similar conditions, and crediting the gain, if any, to the influence of "pa's folks." Thus if ten daughters of a given sire gave a milk-yield record of 10,000 pounds for the test period, while their mothers have a comparable record of 9,000 pounds, the thousand-pound difference is chalked up to the credit of the sire. This process is called "proving."

A proved sire with a good record as shown by his daughters' production performance is naturally in demand for the improvement of other herds of milch cows. In the department's list many animals are recorded as having died before the proof period could be completed. But many of them leave sons, which are sought after as suitably aristocratic alliances by owners of blooded dairy herds.

A list of this kind is as important to the dairy industry as the Almanach de Gotha is in European social circles.

Chance Rules Flarings of the Variable Stars

Cambridge, Mass.—Science's many futile attempts to predict the changes in brightness of the heavens' blinking giants, the long-period variable stars, have been ended by the explanation of two Harvard astronomers that only the law of chance governs their irregular flarings and fadings.

Leon Campbell and Dr. Theodore E. Sterne of the observatory staff say no mathematician can possibly anticipate the irregular changes of brilliance. Their research has also eliminated the belief of some astronomers that there have been important and widespread evolutionary changes of increase or diminution among these long-period variables.

CHOCOLATE EVER POPULAR FLAVOR

Be Sure It Blends Properly With Other Ingredients.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE Spaniards, when they conquered Mexico, took back to Spain gold and other treasures. Nothing, however, was appreciated so much by the Spanish people as a whole, as the chocolate, which soon became the national drink, as it had been and still is in Mexico. This was accomplished in spite of the fact that church officials considered it a wicked luxury, especially when it became the custom to have it brought during long services to church. In commenting upon this custom, Dr. Doran in his "Table Traits" announces, "A cup of good chocolate may indeed afford the drinker strength and patience to undergo a bad sermon."

"To make really good chocolate," says Brillat-Savarin, "one must solve a number of very subtle equations. The roasting of the cocoa bean is an operation so delicate as to require a tact bordering on inspiration." The roasting of the beans is very important whether they are to be used for manufacture of cake, chocolate or cocoa, as fine flavor is developed by the roasting process just as it is by roasting coffee.

In this country cocoa is used for the preparation of beverages more often than is chocolate. In the preparation of cocoa powder, a large part of the cocoa butter is removed. The quality of the cocoa bean and the amount of cocoa butter extracted as well as the roasting are all important.

When chocolate is used care must be taken that it is prepared in such a way that it will blend smoothly with the other ingredients of the recipe. For cake and cookies it may be melted over hot—not boiling—water. When it is used with hot milk for pudding or for beverages it may be cut into smaller pieces and melted in the milk. Instead, it may be cooked with a small amount of cold water over direct heat until the mixture is smooth and thick. A cake of chocolate has usually been marked off in squares which weigh one ounce. Recently one of the oldest manufacturers has marked it into half ounce pieces, which allows us to measure even more accurately than before. In order to have a smooth beverage when cocoa is used cold water should be added and stirred with the powder over the direct heat until the mixture is smooth and thick after which it may be boiled a moment before the cold milk is added. This method allows us to make cocoa with the use of only one utensil. As soon as the milk begins to steam the mixture should be beaten until foamy with a heavy beater in order to prevent the scum's forming.

Whipped cream is usually served with both chocolate and cocoa. Instead a marshmallow may be put into each cup before the beverage is poured. This garnish is particularly favored by the children.

Chocolate Creole Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1¼ cups brown sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted.
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour with soda and salt. Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add chocolate and beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk. Add flavoring. Bake in two greased ten-inch layer pans or three nine-inch layer pans in a moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) thirty minutes.

Chocolate Delicacy.

½ cup butter
¾ cup powdered sugar
3 eggs
2 squares chocolate, melted
¼ cup dry sifted bread crumbs

Cream the butter with the sugar, add the egg yolks, slightly beaten; the melted chocolate and bread crumbs. Beat the egg whites and fold into the mixture. Grease two shallow cake pans and pour one-third of the butter into each, reserving the rest for the filling. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty minutes. Remove the pans and put together with the reserved filling. Serve garnished with whipped cream.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

2¾ cups milk
3 squares chocolate
¼ cup water
6 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pint cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Scald milk. Cook chocolate with cold water. Add one cup of milk slowly, stirring constantly. Cook until smooth. Add the remainder of the scalded milk slowly to the slightly beaten egg yolks. Combine these mixtures. Add the sugar and salt and cook in a double boiler over hot water until a custard is formed. Cool. Add cream and vanilla. Freeze, using a mixture of eight parts of ice to one part of salt.

A Trio of Triumphs

THE way to day-in, day-out chic for the woman who sews is shown in today's attractive new three-way plan. It goes deeper than the surface, you see, in the presentation of a sleek new slip. Ah, and it gives great thought to the surface, too, as you can't help but note in the two wing-side models. This is one triangle every woman who sews should want to know all about.

Spicy New Model.

As shipshape as a Parisian streamline fashion and, in its own role, as important—that's the little number at the left above. It does wonders to give one that up and doing feeling that's handy to have around the house in the morning. You can repeat it time and again without fear of being repetitious; without losing your fondness for it. Anything in gay cotton: shantung, print, gingham, crash, will do nicely for this one.

A Congenial Slip.

Beneath a well-groomed surface hangs a perfect fitting slip! That's an old and honest notion and one Sew-Your-Own abides by religiously. Today's five piece version is as easy to put together as it is congenial to your comfort and outward superbness. Make two while you're about it: one with a plain top for everyday, the other with a bit of frou-frou for dress-up occasions.

Deft Design.

The "girl in the little green hat" wears a dress with many tucks in this her latest picture. It is the dress for you, Milady, to star in at familiar Fall festivities. Deftly but definitely it gives you emphasis where you want it; soft pedals worry-areas. No more willing and able frock than this was ever designed and it can be yours so easily. Thin wool is a smart material and it fits this frock's personality to a T. Let's sew and be seen places this Fall. Okay?

The Patterns.

Pattern 1389 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch material, or 4½ yards, with long sleeves.

Pattern 1989 is designed in sizes 34 to 46. Size 38 requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1 yard of ribbon for shoulder straps, and 1¼ yards of edging for finishing upper edge.

Pattern 1392 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch fabric.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

1938 Price Announcement

Simultaneously with the announcement of its new 1938 passenger cars, now being displayed in 9,600 dealer showrooms throughout the United States, Chevrolet made public its new prices. They represent an increase ranging from 3.4 per cent to 5 per cent, or in dollars, of $26 to $34 per model.

The popular Master DeLuxe series shows an increase of $26, from $770 to $796. The increase in the case of seven models is less than $30, and in the case of the other five between $30 and $34, the latter applying to the Master Sport Sedan.

These prices now include the S. A. E. group of accessories such as front and rear bumpers, spare tire and tube, radiator ornament, and in addition, on the DeLuxe models, the right hand tail lamp, all of which were not heretofore included in the total prices listed but were sold at an extra cost to the buyer.

The increase bears out the statement made by M. E. Coyle, General Manager of the Chevrolet Division of General Motors, before the Company's National Sales Convention last month. Addressing the field wholesale organization, Mr. Coyle asserted that the forthcoming new models would be introduced at an increase in price due to the steady advance in manufacturing costs.

Following are the new prices: Master Series; Sedan $730; Coach $668; Coupe, $648; Cabriolet $755 Town Sedan $689; Sport Sedan 750.

Master DeLuxe Series: Sedan $796; Coach $730; Coupe $714; Sport Coupe $750; Town Sedan 750: Sport Sedan $817.

The prices quoted are the delivered prices at Flint, Mich., exclusive of state and local taxes.

All States and Many Nations at New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special).—That the New York World's Fair of 1939 is to be both a national and an international exposition is held to be certain even at this early date.

Thirty-one States and two Territories have already passed legislative measures which their Governors have signed providing for participation in it in response to the nation-wide invitation extended by Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York and Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation.

State response has been both prompt and generous in the amounts appropriated for representation at the exposition. Some of the States are awaiting only legislative sessions to add their names to the list. There is every indication that by the time 1939 arrives, all 49 will have joined their fellow commonwealths in this demonstration of national unity.

The States which have passed bills, with gubernatorial signature, to take part in the Fair are: Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri (the first to come in), Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming. The two Territories are Puerto Rico and Hawaii.

Foreign Nations Active

Among foreign nations there is every manifestation of enthusiasm for the Fair and for the opportunity which they realize it gives them to make extensive displays of their latest achievements in industry, science and art.

Thirty-four nations are now definitely a part of the Fair. Of these, 21 have officially accepted the invitation to participate. They are: Great Britain, Italy, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, France, Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Cuba, Finland, Guatemala, Roumania, Dominican Republic, Haiti, Uruguay, Sweden, Norway, Irish Free State, Ecuador, Netherlands, Chile and Japan.

First definite allocation of space to a foreign government was made to Russia. Her commissioners visited the Fair site and after inspecting the available area for a Soviet exhibit, signed up for 100,000 square feet of space. The housing of a national or governmental exhibit will occupy 10,000 feet of this area. The remainder will be used for expansion of the exhibit through Soviet industries.

Italy, not to be outdone, selected an even larger area for its display, taking 110,000 square feet not very far from the site chosen by Russia. Then the Netherlands, one of the smallest of the European nations, came to the fore with an agreement to take 75,000 square feet. Meanwhile, Great Britain has sent a commissioner to New York to gather data so that his Government may determine the extent and nature of British participation in the exposition.
