GMC Ballbearing Steering

Now all GMC trucks including the half ton models have the famous GMC development which insures real "Passenger car steering ease.,' The ingenious ball bearings in place of steering worm practically eliminate all friction. Mr. Reil manager of the Western Motor Company of Carrizozo, will be pleased to demonstrate the new model to interested parties.

Thanks

To my friends who so loyally and faithfully supported me and co-operated with me in this campaign in my race for commissioner, I extend sincerest thanks.

Tom J. Cook.

Appreciation

We wish to express our sincerest thanks to all our friends for their co-operation throughout the campaign. To the several chairmen, precinct committees, the Lincoln County News and to all who helped in any way whatsoever, Thanks.

Lincoln County Election Results

Another election has gone into history. After the smoke of battle cleared away the Democrats had five winning county candidates and the Republicans six. Some of them ran such close races, it was difficult to decide who would be ahead in the final count. Following are the results in the county:

For U.S. Senator: Albert Mitchell, r. 1726, Dennis Chavez, d. 1874.

For Representative in Congress: Herman R. Crile, r. 1775, Clinton P. Anderson, d. 1793.

For Governor: Maurice F. Miera, r. 1715, John E. Miles, d. 1873.

For State Senator, 15th district; Geo. T. McWhirter, r. 1741, Lee Stryker, d. 1798.

For State Senator, 18th district: Lorna M. Shipley, r. 1782, A. L. Dunn, d. 1784.

For State Representative, 16th district: S. E. Greiaen, r. 1836, L. P. Hall, d. 1712.

For District Attorney: E. L. Mechem, r. 1703, Martin Threet, d. 1846.

For Probate Judge: John Mackey, r. 1769, Marcial St.John, d. 1793.

For Commissioner, district No. 1: Geo. Kimbrell, r. 1710, Manuel Corona, d. 1857.

For Commissioner, district No. 2: Corbin Hester, r. 1828, Benj. H. Roberts, d. 1732.

For Commissioner, district No. 3: Wm. W. Gallacher, r. 1943, Tom J. Cook, d. 1609.

For County Clerk: Clayton Hust r. 1785, Felix Ramey, d. 1806.

For Sheriff: A. F. Stover, r. 1757, Roley S. Ward, 1670.

For Assessor: Leandro Vega, r. 1600, L. H. Dow, 1971.

For Treasurer: Ernest Key, r. 1802, Wayne Zumwalt, d. 1775.

For Co. School Superintendent: Nellie W. Day, r. 1614, Ola C. Jones, d. 1937.

Expression of Thanks

I wish to express my thanks to all my friends who in any way assisted in my election to the office of Probate Judge. I shall endeavor to show that appreciation by being fair to all, and by fulfilling the duties of office to the best of my ability.

NEW MEXICO AREA NAMED FOR FOOD STAMP PLAN

STATE COLLEGE—Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has announced that the Food Stamp Plan for distributing surplus agricultural commodities will be extended to an area in New Mexico which will include the counties of Santa Fe, Rio Arriba, Taos, Torrance and Sandoval.

Selection of the New Mexico area for stamp plan operation followed conferences between representatives of the Surplus Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture, and local public officials, welfare officials, and business and banking representatives who will be concerned with the administration of the program.

The 1930 census gives the combined population of the five counties making up the New Mexico area as 75,755. It is estimated that there are 8,486 relief cases in the area, representing some 26,551 people.

Under the plan of stamp distribution to be used in the area, eligible families will be given the opportunity to buy orange-colored food stamps and receive free blue stamps in the ratio of 50 cents worth for each $1.00 worth of orange stamps bought. The orange stamps are used to continue the family's regular food purchases while the free blue stamps are used to obtain specially designated surplus foods a additions to the family's food supplies.

Under the stamp plan, price-depressing farm surpluses are moved thru regular trade channels to the families on relief. This gives the farmer a wider market for his surplus crops and, at the same time, adds needed health-giving foods to the diets of families getting public aid. Actual operation of the program in the New Mexico area is expected to begin in about a month. Participation in the program will be voluntary.

Blue Stamps Reduce Truck-Crop Surpluses

A marked increase in the consumption of fresh fruits and vegetables by families receiving some form of public assistance became apparent during the month of August ,as 1,907 persons in the nation spent $4,501,000 in blue stamps for food ,according to F. F. Whitley of the N. M. Extension Service. This represented an increase of 22 percent over the previous month in the number of persons taking part in the plan.

Coupling their increased purchasing power with a wide variety of surplus fruits and vegetables from which to choose, almost two million persons participating in the plan spent $497,000 for tons of oranges, apples, peaches, prunes, pears, and raisins. They used their new purchasing power to consume carloads of vegetables, spending $576,000 for fresh tomatoes, dry beans, snap beans, fresh corn, cabbage, lettuce, beets, celery, carrots, lima beans, peas and spinach.

"The Surplus Marketing Administration, through the Food Stamp Plan, is making an effort to move the farm surplus through normal trade channels by increasing the purchasing power of families receiving public assistance," Mr. Whitley said. Almost $1,440,000 went into the purchase of pork products and lard. This means that those taking part in the Food Stamp Plan ate 6,630,000 pounds of pork and used 3,172,000 pounds of lard during the month over and above their normal expenditure for food.

Another 28 percent of the blue stamp money was spent for butter and eggs. During the month those participating in the food stamp plan consumed 2,550,000 dozen eggs and 2,045,000 pounds of butter with the increased purchasing power made available to them through the blue food order stamps. Each person ate 15 dozen eggs and consumed an average of over one pound of butter more than they had normally.

Cereals in the form of white flour, graham flour, rice, corn meal, and hominy grits, accounted for 16 percent or about $719,000.

CCC ACTIVITIES

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 4—Forty-one CCC camps are scheduled for operation in New Mexico during the current 16th work period, Oct. 1, 1940 to March 31, 1941, according to information received by the Office of Government Reports at Phoenix, Ariz.

The program provides for the employment of approximately 8200 CCC enrollees on conservation work projects in New Mexico during the next six months. Approximately 200 enrollees will be assigned to each of the 41 camps. Of the 8,200 boys assigned to CCC camps in the state, 1,600 will work on improvement, protection and development of national forest areas, 2,400 on erosion control projects on agricultural lands, 400 on waterfowl refuges, 2,000 on grazing lands, 800 on reclamation projects, 600 in national parks, and 400 on park improvement and development projects in state parks.

A dual program for the conservation of topsoil and water supplies in New Mexico has featured CCC work operation in that state. During this last year the Elephant Butte fish hatchery, at the Elephant Butte Dam was completed. This hatchery is designed to provide operation and economic facilities for propagation of sufficient fish to stock the Elephant Butte Reservoir and the Rio Grande. Repair of existing reclamation systems, installation of erosion control check dams, gully and forest tree planting, cleaning of water holes and springs and extensive rodent control and forest protection operations are included among other CCC New Mexico activities.

The following is a list of the work accomplished by the CCC during the period from April 1933 to June 30, 1940.

Bridges, all types, number	1,111
Lookout houses and towers	465
Impounding and large diversion dams,	534
Fences, number of rods	1,916,484
Telephone lines, miles	1,867
Springs and small reservoirs	1,055
Truck trails and minor roads miles	4,649
Trees planted, gully erosion control	4,0003,000
Erosion check dams, number	776,240
Rodent and predatory animal control, acres	9,079,853
Trees planted, reforestation	1,357,200

The estimated aggregate number of New Mexico men given employment from April 1933 thru September 30, 1940 is 23,255, which does not include 18,208 junior and veteran enrollees and 4,947 non-enrolled personnel. The average number of New Mexico enrollees in the CCC during the fiscal year, 1940, was 1,760, while the average number of CCC enrollees working in New Mexico camps was 6,949.

A Correction

I was informed a few days ago that a report had been circulated about town, that Highway 54 between Santa Rosa and Tularosa had been designated a Primary Road. Mr. Ivan Hilton Mayor of Las Vegas and a member of the State Highway Commission called on me at my home last Friday evening and informed me that the Highway Commission of this State were taking the necessary steps with the United States Highway Department to have this stretch of road placed in the Primary System of roads. This piece of road is now a Secondary Road and Mr. Hilton stated that it would take many years to complete it under these conditions.

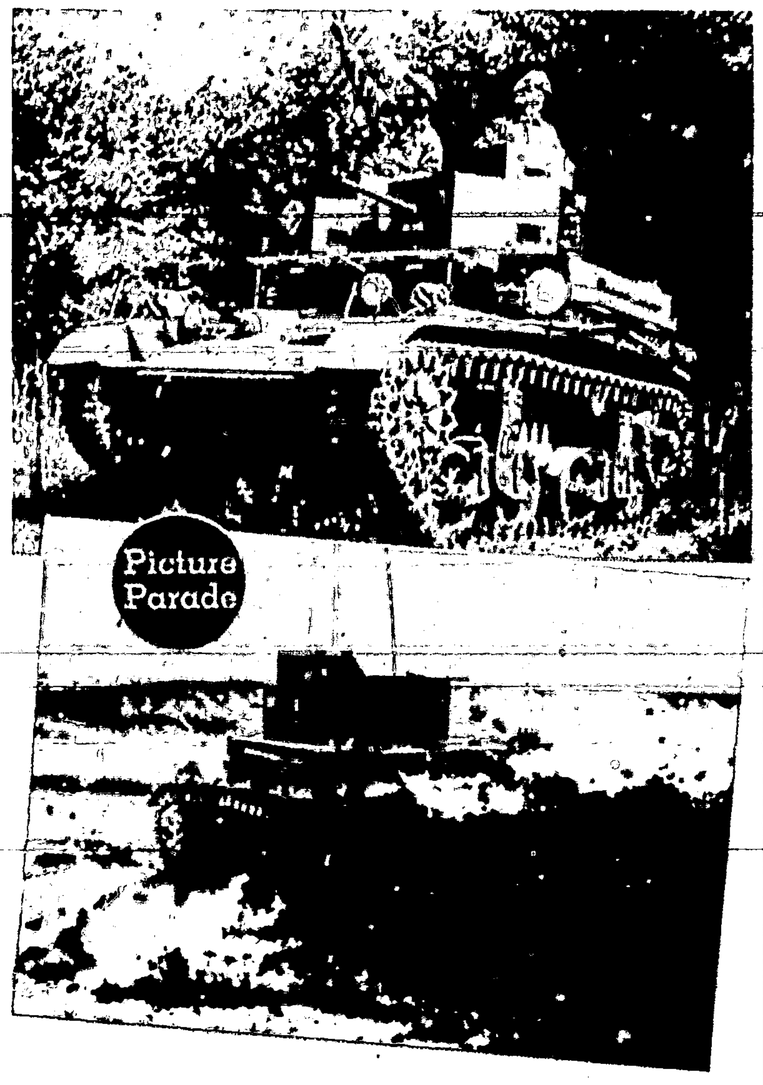
America's Land 'Warships'

During the German blitzkrieg the tank took its place as the most deadly of military weapons in land fighting. While America has the best tanks in the world, we haven't enough of them, although we are industrially equipped to turn them out in gross lots. So let us give our army tanks—so many tanks that not even all the armies of the rest of the world combined would dare attack us. These photos, taken at Fort Meade, Maryland, show you some of the tanks we have.

SINISTER SHADOW . . . Yes, it may be sinister, but we could use a lot more of these shadows on our side of the fence. This medium-size tank is climbing a steep grade.

Left: Medium tank in action in wooded terrain. Small trees are no obstacles to these juggernauts. They mow them down like grass. This one has a machine gun and a small cannon. Right: This U. S. tank soldier received the gash on his face during a practice run. Tankers wear special helmets to prevent head injuries when tossed about in the steel juggernaut.



Top: This tank, armed with machine guns and small cannon, spots a "scouting plane" during maneuvers. Tanks have been found vulnerable to airplane fire in the European war.

Center: Turning at high speed, this tank tossed the real estate skyhigh. This tank can hit better than 30 miles per hour in the rough.

Left: Just as the cavalryman had to look after his horse, the tank soldier must care for his steed of steel. This is washday for the tank after a run through the rough at Fort George Meade.

Words, Slogans, Played Important Role During Hectic War Years of 1914-1918

By JAMES R. MOCK
and
CEDRIC LARSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

We had gone to war—World war I. We had decided to send our boys over to France to save democracy. But even as indignation against Germany had surged higher and higher in those last tense days before 3:12 a. m., April 6, 1917, no one could say just what the American people would do after their eloquent leader had urged them into war.

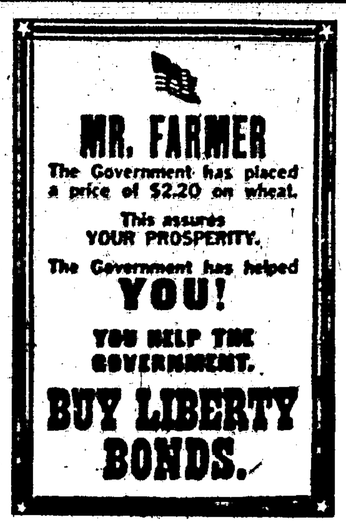
The great majority of Americans, it seemed, wanted to fight, but people wondered anxiously how large and how determined the minority might be.

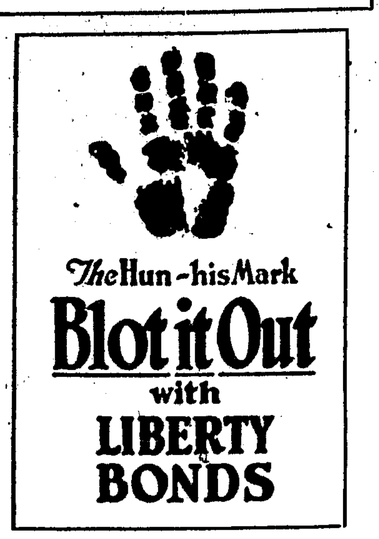
In the World war of 1914-18, words and slogans played an important role in the struggle of the nations for victory. Just how important that role was, has been the subject of a book, "Words That Won the War," written by James R. Mock and Cedric Larson. The accompanying article is a condensation of that book and is presented because of interest now centering around another European war. When opinions are expressed they are the opinions of the authors and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Minorities are dangerous when the fate of civilization is hanging in the balance. How could we count on the millions of Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Poles, Russians and other "aliens in our midst"? Wasn't there something very disquieting in the widely quoted opinion of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka that the Melting Pot had failed to melt? How many people still believed there was such a thing as being too proud to fight? How many remembered the President's statement that there was no essential difference in the expressed war aims of the belligerents? What of enemy spies, of whom there were said to be 100,000 or more at large, and their allies, the pacifists, Socialists and labor agitators? What about the success of Wilson's campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war"? What about warnings against entanglement in Europe's quarrels which still echoed in countless homes?

And what, above all, about the unknown thousands of Americans who might not feel very strongly one way or the other but thought Europe was a long way off and might find it too much bother to make the sacrifices which a modern war demands of the entire population?

We had pledged "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," but could we fulfill that pledge? When a peaceful nation, jealous of individual liberty and proud of its freedom from militarism, attempted to mobilize its men, money, resources, and emotions for one mighty effort, even a rather small minority could bring disaster. "Widespread co-operation" was not good enough when the nation's life was at stake. Nothing less than complete solidarity would do.





The authors of the book, "Words That Won the War," point out the two above examples of information work done in the World war of 1914-18, as appeals that are "not too academic." Ideas of this type appeal directly and do their selling lesson quickly without any subtle reasoning.

U. S. Not Unified.

America was not unified when war was declared. The necessary reversal of opinion was too great to be achieved overnight. The agonizing question in official Washington, the question on which hung the fate of the country's entire wartime effort, was whether the inner lines at home would hold as effectively as the lines in France.

The committee on public information was assigned the staggering task of "holding fast the inner lines." The story of how it fulfilled that mission is a dramatic record of vigor, effectiveness, and creative imagination. The committee was America's "propaganda ministry" during the World war, charged with encouraging and then consolidating the revolution of opinion which changed the United States from anti-militaristic democracy to an organized war machine. This work touched the private life of virtually every man, woman, and child; it reflected the thoughts of the American people under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson; and it popularized what was for us a new idea of the individual's relation to the state.

Committee's Creation.

President Wilson created the committee on public information by executive order dated April 13, 1917, and appointed George Creel as civilian chairman, with the secretaries of state, war, and navy as the other members. Mr. Creel assembled as brilliant and talented a group of journalists, scholars, press agents, editors, artists, and other manipulators of the symbols of public opinion as America had ever seen united for a single purpose. It was a gargantuan advertising agency the like of which the country had never known, and the breathtaking scope of its activities was not to be equalled until the rise of totalitarian dictatorships after the war.

News was the life-blood of the committee on public information (CPI)—news from the front, from training camps, from the White House, from farms and factories, from workers' homes, from every place that had a story to tell regarding the American people in the war.

Press Co-operation.

As George Creel and many other people have repeatedly emphasized, press co-operation with the CPI and its support of the war rested on a "voluntary" basis, but with impressive legal authority behind it. This authority was gradually extended, by congressional and presidential action, as the war progressed, and by the time of the Armistice the government's potential control of the press was nearly complete. A self-denying ordinance by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Creel was all that stood in the way of an attempt to impose a harsh, rigorous, and thoroughgoing censorship.

Even before the CPI, an agreement for voluntary censorship had been reached by representatives of the press and of the departments of state, war and navy. Then, on April 16, 1917, 10 days after declaration of war and three days after creation of the CPI, Mr. Wilson backed this up with a warning proclamation regarding "Treason and Misprision of Treason," stating, among other things, that the courts had found to be treasonable "The performance of any act or publication of statements or information which will give or supply, in any way, aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States."

President Wilson had favored adequate censorship power all along, but for the first 53 days of the war (that is, from April 6 to May 28) selection of news was very largely a matter of the editor's individual discretion. He was subject to laws against treason and his good sense normally told him what might and what might not be published. Then on May 20 came the "Preliminary Statement," in which the CPI codified rules but still depended upon existing laws for its authority.

News Classifications.

"Dangerous" news included stories of naval and military operations in progress; movement of official missions; threats and plots against the life of the President; news regarding secret service and confidential agents; movements of alien labor. Naval information in the forbidden category included the position, number, or identification of Allied or American warships; certain data pertaining to lights and buoys; mention of ports of arrival or departure; any details of mines or mine traps; signals, orders, or wireless messages to or from any warship; all phases of submarine warfare; facts regarding dry-docks. Forbidden military information included any relating to fixed land defenses; movements of American or Canadian troops; assignment of small detachments; concentration at ports; aircraft and equipment that was, or might be, in the process of experimentation.

In general, editors were warned against feeling that because facts were generally known in a local district it was therefore safe to give them publication. Editors were also charged to examine, with the same care that they devoted to news, the contents of advertising copy, and even paid reading notices. And of course everyone was to guard against indiscriminate publication of maps, charts, and pictures.

So the fighting with printer's ink was carried on vigorously on many fronts during the war, with George Creel as editor-in-chief.

Every Citizen Holds High Public Office In Dellview, Nation's Smallest Town

This is Main street of Dellview, N. C., a duly incorporated town with a total population of eight. The building houses the town's one industry, Henry Dellinger's woodwork shop, which is also used as the town hall. At the left Chief of Police Tom Dellinger may be giving a parking ticket to the town's only male resident who doesn't hold office—although that is unlikely as it is his son.

DELLVIEW, N. C.—Stray dogs with a taste for chicken are responsible for the existence of this duly incorporated town, the smallest census enumerators have found anywhere in the United States. Its city directory contains only one sirname, Dellinger. Its population, which has not varied during the 15 years of its existence, is eight.

Dellview was created by act of the state legislature in 1925. At that time three Dellinger brothers operated a large chicken farm. But due to the inadequacy of the county dog laws—or, at least, to the inadequacy of their enforcement—dogs from nearby farms played havoc with the business. Hardly a night passed that squawks from the hen houses did not disturb the Dellingers' sleep. Hardly a morning dawned that feathers were not found scattered over the Dellingers' farm.

It was then that brother Davis P. Dellinger, who practiced law in nearby Cherryville but owned an interest in the farm, came to the rescue. As a member of the legislature he did not want to impose on his rural constituents stricter dog laws than they desired but as a chicken raiser he wanted relief. So he conceived the idea of incorporating the farm as a town and the bill passed the legislature without a hitch.

All that was necessary then was to pass town ordinances against dogs running at large, make the farming Dellingers town officers and arm them with shotguns.

Ten years ago fire destroyed the chicken business and the Dellinger farm was put back in crops. But Dellview remains an incorporated town, complete with municipal government even if it doesn't contain but two families—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dellinger and their son Robert, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dellinger and their daughters Vilma, Marie and Gladys.

Persons of Voting Age Show Large Increase

The number of persons of voting age in the country has increased by 11,234,376 in the last decade, according to the figures of the U. S. census bureau, although the total population gain was only 8,634,835. The reasons for this, census experts believe, are a declining birth rate and a lengthening of the life span due to medical advances and modern sanitation practices.

Transforming a Box Into Smart Ottoman

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

PAD the top of a box and slip-cover it; then add a separate cushion three inches thick. The result will be a smart ottoman that either may match or contrast with the cover of your favorite chair. The little feet made of drawer pulls keep the ottoman from looking like a box. A corded seam where the skirt of the slip cover joins the top, and an inverted pleat at each corner of the skirt also give a professional touch. I suggest tacking the slip cover firmly in place as shown in the sketch.

If down or feathers are used to fill the separate cushion, make an inner cushion of ticking with a top and a bottom piece the size of the box top; and a straight three-inch piece around the sides. If kapok is used for filling, this inner cushion may be made of muslin. The cover of the separate cushion has corded seams to match the box slip cover.

NOTE: These directions should be clipped from the paper as they are not available in booklet form. However, complete directions for making slip covers and for making corded seams are in SEWING, Book No. 1. No. 3 also contains valuable slip cover suggestions. These 32-page booklets are 10c each. CHAPTER XXXI—Continued

—19—

Lynn quieted, turned to Chuck and answered: "I've lost the man I loved. I know what that means, and I didn't have a little child to consider. There is such a thing as decency, Chuck. You may not know it, but there is." All the suffering and hurt of the last year shone in Lynn's white face. Chuck, looking, suddenly felt sorry for her.

"I didn't know you care . . . that much."

Her smile was pitiful. Chuck watched her for a little, curiously.

Chuck spoke at last: "What do you want me to do?" There was defeat in his voice.

Lynn sat up, her hands clasped together: "Give her a chance. I don't know whether she still loves you, Chuck. It has been a year. Find her and Buddy. Go to her, alone. Go honestly. Ask her to come back. Be honest. Don't steal Buddy from her!"

Chuck was silent as he watched her. Then he got up wearily.

"I promise." His voice was dead.

"Don't you love her any more, Chuck?" Lynn's voice was full of fear.

"Yes." His face colored. "I do. I suppose that's why I'm so bitter. She almost killed me, Lynn!" He turned away so that Lynn could not see his face.

Chuck held out his hand. "What name is she using Lynn?"

"You'll play fair?"

"I swear it!"

CHAPTER XXXII

On the second day Chuck called her at the shop in the morning and asked her to meet him at luncheon.

"I'm at the Astor. Under another name. We better eat lunch in my room. I'm leaving town and I want to see you first."

When Lynn walked into Chuck's room two hours later she saw he had not slept. He was nervous, kept looking at his watch. He motioned her into a chair.

"My plane leaves at 2:30 P. M. Our lunch will be along in a moment. They're near New Orleans. I just found out. My man's been working night and day since you told me!"

Just then the waiter brought their food and they were silent as he served it. When the door closed Chuck began again immediately:

"I'll do as you say. It won't work, probably. But I'll keep my side of the bargain!"

Lynn's eyes filled with tears: "Chuck, of course, it won't work if you really don't want Helen and Buddy back!" She raised her hands in protest. "Please listen to me! Would you want Helen to take you back only because of Buddy?" The expression on his face was answer enough. "She'll come, if she knows you want her to!"

She tried hard to make Chuck understand. He was making a great effort. Lynn knew how bitter was his Austin pride. He must care a great deal. When she left him she said:

"Good luck, and happiness!"

He gave her hand a squeeze, leaned over and kissed her cheek. He could not speak for the lump in his throat.

Four days before Christmas she lay in her bed trying to summon courage enough to get up when her bell rang. She jumped out of bed, threw on a robe and hurried to the door.

A telegraph boy handed in a message. With trembling fingers she opened it. It was short, quite unexplanatory.

"Merry Christmas, see you soon." It was signed, "Chuck, Helen, Buddy."

It was Mme. Reanoud who solved Lynn's Christmas problem for her.

"Why don't you trim your tree and have some of the kids from the old apartment building next to you in for a party Christmas day?" she asked. "They could use a party, from the way they look. Better give them meat and potatoes instead of ice cream though. They seem to need it."

Lynn was enthusiastic over the idea. "I'll do it! I'll invite them tonight."

"You better start shopping, young woman! That's more important!"

It turned out that Terry was a harbor of refuge when Lynn came to the shopping problem. He drove her to the stores, here and there.

When Terry and Lynn came back into the living room, he took her hand:

"Can I give you your ring, Lynn? For Christmas?"

Her eyes were black as she spoke: "I wish I could say yes, Terry, but I can't."

"It's the last time I'm going to ask. I have it here in my pocket." He took out a gorgeous yellow diamond which had been in his family for years. "Empress Josephine once wore that, young woman, and it isn't good enough for you."

"You're sweet, Terry." Lynn looked at the gorgeous stone laying in his hand. She shook her head and smiled up at him.

Lynn determined not to think of the tree which Wild had trimmed for her a year ago. She turned restlessly. Somebody was coming down the hall. There was a knock on her door. She got up to open it.

"Merry Christmas!" cried two voices.

It was Chuck and Helen. They came in with a rush, and Lynn was in their arms. Helen was crying and Chuck was swallowing hard. It was a long time before anybody was coherent enough to explain all that had happened.

"Where's Buddy?"

"Home, asleep in his nursery!" Helen said. And Chuck, hearing her, kissed her. She had said "home" of Austin Manor. Said it naturally and happily.

Later, just before they were to leave, Helen tried to say to Lynn some things that were in her heart.

"If I can ever pay my debt to you, Lynn!"

Chuck tried to make a formal speech, and Lynn was between laughter and tears.

"We can't stay, darling. There's a supper party tonight, and Buddy will have us up at dawn." Helen's face suddenly sobered: "But we had to see you for a few minutes. If you could see Buddy with his father, Lynn!" She squeezed Chuck's arm. Then Helen tried to tell Lynn what had happened down South.

"I was almost at the end of my rope, Lynn," she said. "Chuck got to us one night after Buddy had gone to bed. He just walked into that trailer, and I thought I would die in that moment."

"I didn't think she was glad to see me at first!" Chuck interposed.

"I was so stunned, I couldn't move!"

"Then I did just what you told me to. I walked right up and kissed her!" He was sitting with his arm about his wife as they talked. Helen patted his arm:

"I think I cried for an hour before I could even speak. I had been so lonely and afraid. I don't know how I ever stood it!"

"We'll forget all about it now, Helen."

"I hope I won't forget what I learned," Helen said with a sincere note in her voice.

"Neither of us will," Chuck promised. "We've had our lesson."

"And Mr. Mortimer?" Lynn asked.

"I telephoned him from New Orleans. He was pleased. He's a nice person, Lynn." Then she added:

"I want to see you soon, just you and me, so we can take our hair down and have a good talk. We're sailing for Algiers for a little vacation next month, Lynn."

"It's to be our second honeymoon." Then he added: "The family's as pleased as anything about it all."

Then Helen gave Lynn a little box. "This is for you, darling, from Chuck and me. I bought it in Mexico. I hope you like it."

Lynn opened the box immediately. It was a lovely silver bracelet set with turquoise, the fine carving was worn almost smooth by the many beautiful women through the ages who had owned the handsome ornament.

"It's . . . beautiful!" Lynn put it on her slim wrist.

When Helen kissed Lynn good-by she whispered: "I've got a plan, you'll hear about it soon. Before we go away!"

CHAPTER XXXIII

Lynn woke the next morning with that wonderful feeling that something exciting and unusual was going to happen. When she opened her eyes she could see through the bedroom door the glistening Christmas tree rising high to the ceiling.

All morning Lynn worked hard. She peeled quantities of potatoes for her guests, fixed the squash for baking. It was fun. By noon she was improvising a table.

Marty had promised to drop in for the party, and he came in puffing, before the children began to arrive. His arms were piled high with bundles, he had a Christmas stocking for every guest, filled with oranges, candy and toys. And he had a gift for Lynn. It was a pretty compact.

"Merry Christmas, Kid!" Marty said; dropping the bundles onto the couch.

They just had time to put the stockings under the tree when the first guest arrived. Myrtle Price, an artist who lived above Lynn came in to help, and soon the studio was turned into a gay turmoil of wild youngsters having the time of their lives.

Marty was a genius with the children. He got them over their first shyness. He directed their games while Lynn and Myrtle worked in the kitchen to finish the dinner. They were having a grand time. Myrtle borrowed chairs from everybody up and down the hall. Two boys across the way stopped in to see the fun, stayed on to watch that the youngsters got their dinner.

Gradually the apartment and its tumult became the center of life of the big, ramshackle studio building. Everybody left in the place had to poke his head into the door to see the fun. The children ate and ate until Lynn was afraid they'd be ill.

The uninvited guests helped clear the tables, push the tables back against the walls and then everybody sat down on the floor. Marty had disappeared. Shortly there was a wild shout. He came out of the bedroom a rotund Santa Claus with a long, white beard.

The children yelled and screamed in their delight. Then Marty began giving out the little gifts.

"I haven't had so much fun in years," he told Lynn.

The bracelets and the dollar watches Terry had bought sent the crowd into mild hysteria. Of course, three of the watches were promptly broken, for the boys wound them too tightly. But it was all breathless and spontaneous. Toward evening some of the mothers came for their children and Lynn gave them sandwiches of the leftover turkey.

"It's the loveliest Christmas I've ever had," Lynn said as she and Marty dropped down for a moment on the couch to rest.

Of course, nobody wanted to go home. It was dark now, and the lighted tree was lovelier in the dim studio. Art started some carols and soon the child voices were raised in song, a little off tune perhaps, but they loved it. Art went across the hall and got his accordion and shortly the whole building was shaking as the children danced to his tunes and the older people sat back enjoying the fun. Yes, it was a good day.

Nobody heard a knock on the door. Finally Marty did, and opened it. It was a messenger boy. A cable.

"From Rene, bless his heart. He wouldn't forget!" Lynn cried as she took it. The boy grinned as he watched the dancing children. Lynn pressed some candy into his hand and Marty gave him a dollar.

Lynn tore open the cable casually. It was wonderful that a word of greeting could come to her so far. Marty turned to her, stopped short. Lynn's smile died.

"Marty!" She was trembling. He took the cable from her hand. Only a few words.

"Bouchier seriously ill, American Hospital; come." It was signed by Dr. Antonio Marelli, in Rome:

Lynn held on to Marty's arm. "We mustn't spoil their party. Keep them going." She went into the bedroom and closed the door. She sat down on the narrow bed, piled high with children's coats and hats, and reread the cable. Rene must be desperately ill, or the doctor would not have cabled. Marty found her there a few minutes later.

"I'd never forgive myself if I didn't go . . . and anything happened." . . . She looked up distractedly. "He can't die, Marty."

"No." Marty and his Santa Claus beard awry, wiped his forehead with a trembling hand. "He can't die. He's too important to the world, Lynn. He's a great painter! It would be terrible . . ."

Poor Rene. Alone, ill, maybe dying. She forced a smile to her lips, but her eyes were bright with tears.

Shortly, the party began to break up. It was a long process. Hats and coats had to be rescued, rubbers and galoshes straightened out. Marty, watching Lynn's face, was glad she had this distraction. They finally departed, a disheveled, happy, noisy crowd. Then quiet settled over the apartment like a pall. Marty went out to buy a newspaper and Lynn was alone.

Mechanically she tried to bring a little order out of the chaos in the apartment. Marty was not gone long, but when he came back he had everything planned.

"There's a sailing tomorrow, but no use to take it. It's a slow boat. Better wait for the Normandie. She sails Thursday."

"That's two days!"

"It can't be helped."

"I'll get you a tourist class ticket. You can go straight from Havre to Rome."

"It will be over a week, Marty."

"Yes."

"I hope I'm in time."

"You will be. He'll probably be all right by the time you get there."

"If I only knew how serious it is!"

"Shall I telephone the hospital?"

"Will it cost a lot?"

"Not too much, Lynn. I'll try."

Later they both went out to the corner drug store, and in an hour Marty had the call through. He got an Italian clerk who worked in the store to speak with the hospital in Rome. It was a short conversation.

"He's got pneumonia," the boy informed the two who waited. He told the hospital that Lynn was sailing on the Normandie.

"How is he?" Lynn demanded.

"They say he's pretty sick." That was all.

Marty and Lynn went back to her apartment, and Lynn got out her suit cases.

"I'll go to the bank tomorrow morning, Marty as soon as it opens and get the money."

"Don't worry about that. I'll get a ticket, there won't be any trouble this time of year. Reservations are light. I'll have the boss see about your passport. You'll have to get a picture. Do that first thing. We'll have to pull strings to get it in time."

"I haven't any idea how long I'll be gone. What shall I do about my apartment?" Lynn was distraught.

"Better get it in order, pack everything, and leave it. When you see how things are, write and I'll have your stuff sent on to storage. That is, if you stay," he added.

Winter Fashions Turn Spotlight On Handsome Jewelry Accents

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WEAR dramatic jewelry in a dramatic way and your costume will soar to dizzy heights of chic and charm this winter. The technique for the costume ideal as prescribed by current fashion demands that "clothes" be styled with utmost simplicity of elegant choice fabric to serve as a perfect setting for jewelry that is superbly adornful. After you follow this formula of dress to a nicety you can complete the ensemble with a devastating chapeau.

In selecting your jewelry collection keep uppermost in mind that fashion emphasis this winter is on handsome important individualistic pieces, rather than flashy glittery baubles. The smartest of the smart are finding definite appeal in the idea of a gorgeous clip or brooch strategically placed below the shoulder, preferably to one side, to "show off" on the bodice. To this they match up intriguing earrings, which are vastly important this season, an eye-dazzling finger ring and imposing bracelets. To be sure, a necklace may be added, but "the latest" whim of fashion is to concentrate on the clip of artful design and exquisite workmanship.

The illustration herewith tells a fascinating story of current jewelry trends. To the left above in the picture dull finished gold and platinum leaves set with pale yellow sapphires make an unusual clip worn smartly on the lapel of a brown sealskin coat. A tailored bracelet of the same dull finished gold with jewel-set buckle serves as an appropriate companion piece. The casual daytime dress (favorite two-piece type) is of sheer wool with cartridge tuckings at the shoulder and pockets. This stunning frock in neutral color is one of those tailored classics well-dressed women adore.

A beau catcher if ever there was one! She is the cunningly bonneted young girl centered in the group. Bonnet toques of quaint prettiness such as this are the "newest cut." The young set like them immensely and wear them most becomingly. This one is of black broadcloth and has velvet ties under the chin. The suit is of the same woolen fabric used for men's tuxedos. Needless to say it tailors beautifully, and with its braid trimming makes a stunning formal costume for town. It's quite the thing, as you no doubt know, to affect masculine fashions both as to materials bought in men's tailoring establishments and details such as blouses cut shirt fashion, and coats that look as if they might have been filched from brother's wardrobe. At any rate the young miss pictured yields to feminine urge when she wears an eye-impelling single jewelry piece of rubies set in gold.

Appropriate for a young girl to wear for afternoon or dinner dates is the winsome jewelry "set" shown above to the right. The ensemble consists of two flower pins, uniquely positioned one below the other on the bodice together with bracelet and ring of unusual workmanship which are well accented against the black of her simple dress.

Soft tweeds, as noted below to the left in the group, make a stunning background for jewels. Here a gold clip with sprays of rubies accents a heather and ruby tweed dress. The bracelet of flexible gold links and gold balls enameled by square cut rubies is matched by the earrings.

For bridge or informal dinners a black chiffon dress as shown below to the right achieves a sophisticated and perfect background for diamond and platinum jewelry. Earrings? Of course! For earrings are a fashion "must." They are tiny hoops of diamonds. A diamond clip brooch together with flexible platinum bracelet with diamond buckle add infinite style prestige. The only note of color is a resplendent cocktail ring of diamonds and rubies.

New Shape Handbag

Handbag designers continue to present new ideas. Here is the long handbag, low and wide at the base. It interprets a very new silhouette. Inside is a smart detail in the jewel-like wire zipper which protects the safety pocket. A bag with the "new" look like this will impart infinite chic to your winter costume.

Girdle Treatments

New frocks of the slenderizing type have wrapped hips done in gypsy girdle manner. Sometimes the girdle is draped with streamers to the front ending in a deep fringe finish.

Braiding, Quilted Designs Popular

Winter fashions display extreme enrichment in decorative detail worked out in lavish braiding, colorful embroidery and very interesting quilted design.

Many dressmaker suits have jackets that are allover braided in soutache. Braided sleeves and pockets add charm to many of this season's sheer wool dresses.

Evening sweaters and the new long-torso jerkins are all aglitter with all over sequin embroidery. Very new and chic too are draped turbans of fabric that has been colorfully embroidered.

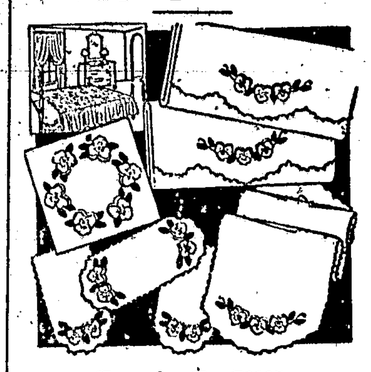
Late Fall Scarfs Are Voluminous

Voluminous evening scarfs made of tulle or chiffon in vivid color are very charming. There is one the full width of the tissue-thin fabric and more than two yards long. Their effectiveness, thrown over bare shoulders when the dress is black or rich dark tone, and extremely decollette is very lovely. It is a grand way to give your black velvet evening dress a dramatic touch and to add the dash of color that flatters.

Tricolor Costume

Tricolor costumes for evening and daytime continue to have the approval of such famous designers as Mainbocher.

Bedroom Ensemble of Appliqued Pansies



Transfer No. Z9105

A NEW note is attained in this captivating pansy bedroom ensemble. For, besides the usual scarf, vanity and pillow slip motifs, there is a circle of pansies just right for a quilt block.

Yellows or lavenders, of course, would be most suggestive of real pansies, but any pastel to harmonize with your bedroom could be used. The illustration indicates the use of applique; an equally charming effect might be achieved in embroidery.

Briefly—from this one transfer, Z9105, 15c, you can make a complete group of linens for the bedroom—and a lovely matching spread. Send order to:

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

HAWK IN THE WIND

★ by Helen Topping Miller

When Virgie Morgan turned down Wallace Withers' proposal of marriage she started something in the Carolina mountains. There was sabotage at her pulp mill, labor troubles without end, unscrupulous enemies to be dealt with. And, on top of it all, she had to manage a headstrong daughter with gentle hands.

"Hawk in the Wind" is an absorbing novel of love and intrigue. If you've read Helen Topping Miller's "Whispering River," "Let Me Die Tuesday," or her "Storm Over Eden" and "Blue Marigolds," you'll know what to expect.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

$2 EGGS

WHEN my mother went overland in a covered wagon to a new home in the West, the country was just settling up. Transportation was slow, was expensive. Prices of everything were high.

She preserved a newspaper of her girlhood on the frontier, and it interests me occasionally to read the current prices of things you buy every day now for a few cents.

Charles Roth

Eggs were $2 a dozen in those days. Sugar brought 40 cents a pound. Kerosene was $3 a gallon. Candles cost 25 cents apiece.

Compare these prices with the prices you see advertised in your newspaper today and you will see that, although much talk is bandied back and forth concerning the increased cost of living, the fact is that the cost has gone downward consistently since frontier times.

One of the reasons for high prices then was undoubtedly the difficulty with which the supply was obtained—the hazards and expense of transporting goods.

But the chief reason was that the cost of these necessaries could not be spread out over enough customers to bring them at lower cost to all. The merchant had to pay the cost of his business out of sales to a comparatively few customers. Costs had to be high.

Prices on everything you buy today, regardless of whether you live in a village or a large city, would be higher now if it were not for the service of advertising in lowering them to your advantage.

As soon as a manufacturer or a merchant begins to advertise he begins to sell more. As he sells more it costs him less to sell to each customer. He cuts the price. More customers come. Again he is able to cut the price.

Pretty soon you have the situation of improved quality and lower prices, brought about through the creative service of advertising to the consumer.

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

The man who builds a business on advertising can give you more for your money because advertising enables him to give more for less. See how advertising pays you every day.

Greater DRIVER COMFORT

Come in and see what GMC has done to make truck driving easier, safer, and more comfortable! GMC insulated Rider-Ease Cabs are remarkably big and roomy, with lots of leg room for the huskiest driver. The seats are a revelation in buoyant cushioning. The controls are placed just right, so you don't have to stretch to reach them. Even the instrument panels are scientifically grouped for split-second visibility. And GMC front springs are l—o—n—g, to cushion your ride over the roughest road. You'll feel the difference the first mile you drive one of these comfort-built trucks. And you'll discover steering ease that makes driving effortless!

GMC Ball-Bearing Steering in all models!

Now all GMCs, including the half-ton models, have this famous GMC development that insures real "passenger car steering ease." Friction is practically eliminated, through the ingenious use of ball-bearings in place of the conventional steering worm. Its safety has been proved in millions of miles of owner service in medium and heavy GMC Trucks.

HAWK IN THE WIND
by HELEN TOPPING MILLER

When the widow, Virgie Morgan, and her daughter, Marian, decided to manage a pulp mill in the Carolina mountains they could not foresee the troubles ahead of them. But through all those harrowing days the widow watched understandingly as Marian's pride kept her from admitting her love for a fine young man.

The story moves briskly from start to finish, while alternate threads of romance and intrigue run through it. You'll enjoy Helen Topping Miller's great new novel immensely. Don't miss it!

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Close in, in the critical diplomatic huddle at Ankara is our John Van A. MacMurray, ambassador to Turkey. A veteran career diplomat, Mr. MacMurray might have been a star reporter. He has a gimlet mind and is a diligent digger and researcher. While our state department may not have much to say about what happens in Turkey and the Balkans, it will surely have the record, when it all becomes history.

Our Ambassador To Turkey Is a Grim Fact Chaser

As minister to China, Mr. MacMurray studied the country and its people so diligently that his friends said he began to look like a Chinese. There was the matter of likin, or Chinese import taxes. No other western diplomat had worrried much about them. Mr. MacMurray completely surrounded them.

He is the world's greatest authority on the subject. When he left his post in China after five years, he had compiled two stupendous volumes on the general theme of "Rights and Obligations of China From 1894 to 1919." These were only small details of his encyclopedic roundup of knowledge of the Far East. That being the case, they shifted him. Which is a reminder that this writer has a friend, a career diplomat, who learned Chinese and amassed such information in eight years in China, and was shifted to Geneva last year to be replaced in Peking by a young man starting from scratch.

With all his grim fact-chasing Mr. MacMurray has, like all good diplomats, a touch of Dale Carnegie about him—that is, he makes friends and influences people. He has a charming, ingenuous smile, when his adding-machine mind is out of gear, and he has been happily placed in the gold-lace maneuvers of our diplomacy.

He was born in Schenectady in 1881, educated at Princeton and Columbia and entered the diplomatic service as secretary of the legation in Siam in 1907. He became head of the far eastern division and minister to China in 1925. In 1930 he became minister to Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, and minister to Turkey in 1937. Many big issues of international politics seem to have gone the way of Chinese likin, and of Estonia et al, but whatever they are, or were, Mr. MacMurray knows about them.

WHEN Capt. Henry Harwood defeated the Graf Spee pocket battleship, off Montevideo last December, the home office flashed a message in which he learned he was a knight and an admiral. "Thank you, boys," he wig-wagged to his three British cruisers, as a sporting gesture in which he gave credit where it was due. He had had 37 years in the navy without a swing of the spotlight in his direction. But the victory over the Graf Spee started songs in the Drury lane musical halls about "Hadmiral Ennery Arwood"—a natural—and now he's almost the ruler of the king's navee because he took the measure of the big Graf Spee. It doesn't quite scan, but he gets the job as assistant chief of the naval staff, and member of the board of the admiralty.

'Hadm. Arwood' May Yet Inspire Kiplingese Lines

It was as a lad of 14 that he first climbed the rigging of the old wooden training ship Britannica. He moved on up through routine grades and in the World war was a torpedo boat lieutenant. In the years between wars, he was with the fleet in South America, China and the Mediterranean, known as a courageous and resourceful officer, but never in the headlines or in the British Who's Who.

He is thickset, square-jawed and ruddy of countenance, planted on the bridge as though he had taken root there and meant to stay. This war hasn't inspired any clanging, inspiriting Kiplingesque lines, but Admiral Harwood may yet touch them off. Ashore he has spent much time in staff training. He has two sons in their early teens, who expect someday to "climb the rigging like their father used to do."

AS A "man against death" Dr. James Ewing has been in the trenches for years in the world war against cancer. A medal is conferred by the New York City Cancer committee for "outstanding work during the year in the campaign to control cancer."

He is director of the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases, a world leader in the battle against the scourge of modern times. He voices hope, but ruthlessly limits his conclusions to demonstrable fact.

AFTER THE FOOTBALL GAME
See Recipes Below.

If you are entertaining the crowd after the game, you'll find substantial refreshments in favor; for the same crisp air that puts football players on their toes breeds keen appetites.

It's good social strategy to arrange everything buffet style and let the guests help themselves. You'll want a table that is festive, easy to handle, and yet casual. You may even want to set up card tables in the living room to make your guests comfortable after they have helped themselves from the buffet.

Natural colored linen, or rough homespun cloth will make a smart background for your serving table. Candles are often used very effectively, when serving buffet style, for they add both atmosphere and light.

If you double as hostess and chief cook, you'll enjoy the game twice as much if you plan a menu that can be prepared beforehand. Sandwich makings and a hot steaming beverage are a wise choice. Then wind up the feast with ice cream and chocolate cake.

Frankfurter Sandwich.

Boil or steam large frankfurters until tender and juicy. Slice thin on white or rye bread and serve with mustard sauce and hot potato salad. Garnish with pickle.

Hot Potato Salad.
(Serves 6)

6 medium-sized potatoes
4 slices bacon (minced)
1 medium-sized onion (sliced)
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
¼ cup water
⅓ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook potatoes in jackets. Cool, skin, and slice. Pan broil minced bacon, then saute onion in bacon drippings until brown. Combine and heat water, vinegar, sugar, salt, and pepper. Add to mixture in frying pan, and mix with potatoes. Place in baking dish and heat in moderate oven (350 degrees) before serving.

Egg Meringue Surprise Sandwich.
(Serves 6)

6 slices bread
¼ cup butter (melted)
¼ pound sharp cheese
6 eggs
Salt and pepper
6 slices bacon

Trim slices of bread and brush one side with melted butter. Place buttered side down on a cookie sheet. Cut cheese into strips about ¼ inch in thickness. Arrange them, side by side, or fence-like on the bread. Separate eggs and drop one egg yolk in the center of each slice of bread. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Whip egg whites until stiff and dry, and pile high on top, completely covering the egg and cheese. Cut the slices of bacon into halves and place two halves on each sandwich right across the egg white. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the egg white is brown and the bacon is crisp.

Silver Cake.
(Makes 1 loaf cake)

¾ cup butter
1½ cups granulated sugar
2¾ cups cake flour (sifted)
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 egg whites (stiffly beaten)

Cream butter, add sugar and beat well. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, and add to sugar and butter mixture. Mix well, and place in refrigerator. When desired for use, remove mixture from refrigerator. Break up lumps with fork. Add milk and vanilla, and beat until mixture is smooth and creamy. Then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased loaf cake tin, and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) for about 50 minutes.

Chocolate Peppermint Frosting.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
8 marshmallows (cut in quarters)
Few drops oil of peppermint

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk, stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes, or until the mixture thickens. Add marshmallows, and stir until they begin to melt. Remove from heat and add peppermint. Cool. Spread on cold cake. This frosting covers tops of 2 9-inch layers or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

Vanilla Ice Cream.
(Makes 1 quart)

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks (well beaten)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream

Scald milk, reserving ½ cup. Mix and blend the sugar, flour, and salt and mix to a smooth paste with the cold milk which was reserved. Add this mixture to the scalded milk and cook, stirring constantly until thick in a double boiler for 15 minutes. Add egg yolks which have been well beaten and cook, stirring constantly, 3 minutes longer. Add vanilla and chill. Fold in the whipping cream which has been whipped, place in ice cream freezer and freeze, using 3 parts ice to 1 part rock salt.

Sausages in Pastry Blankets.
(Makes 8 sausage rolls)

1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder
⅓ cup shortening
3 tablespoons cold water (approximately)
8 pork sausages

Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Blend in the shortening. Then add just enough water to form a dough, mixing lightly. Roll out and cut into 8 oblong pieces, each sufficiently large to wrap around one link of sausage. Place individual sausages (well pricked) on individual pieces of pastry; fold ends over and roll up. Place folded side down on a baking sheet. Prick crust with a fork. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 30 minutes. Serve very hot.

Better Baking.

The smell of baking cookies and cakes will soon be permeating the house. Fruit cakes will be baked, packed and stored carefully, until the time they are to be used for gifts. "Better Baking" includes fruit cake recipes which have been thoroughly tested in Miss Howe's own kitchens. This cook book also contains many good cookie recipes, from old-fashioned Ginger Cookies to Fudge Drops.

If you are planning on giving cookies and fruit cakes to your friends as gifts, it will be wise to write for "Better Baking" now. Start your baking early, and avoid the last minute rush. You may secure your copy of this cook book by writing to "Better Baking" care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and enclosing 10 cents in coin.

FIRST-AID with the AILING HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman

Worn and Soiled Floor.

QUESTION: About 10 years ago we put down a hardwood floor and stained it dark. It has been waxed a number of times each year. It has worn in spots. Can I use anything on these spots, or must I scrape the whole floor? The floor looks soiled and I can't seem to get it clean.

Answer: As a first step in doing over your floor, you should wipe well with turpentine to remove all of the wax. It is very probable that much of the dirt is in the wax, and this treatment will go far to restoring the appearance. With the wax removed, you can touch up the light spots with oil stain. Apply a coat and wipe off immediately, and continue until with successive applications, the color matches the surrounding floor. You should then finish with two coats of good floor varnish before rewaxing. Without varnish, dirt going into the wax will work through to the wood. With varnish this cannot happen.

Warped Bedroom Door.

Question: I built my house last fall, and now find that the door to one of the bedrooms is badly warped. The top corner does not come within an inch of closing when the door is shut. Can I do anything about this?

Answer: A door with any claim to quality should be built so that it is proof against warping, and warping is something that would justify a complaint to the dealer. In the long run it will be better to replace your warped door with one that is warp-proof, because even after it has been straightened, it may not stay so. A cabinet maker could do the job for you, by putting the door in a press, after which he would run heavy dowels into it to hold it straight. But a new door of well-seasoned wood is the best answer.

Soapstone Tub Troubles.

Question: My soapstone tub leaks at one of the joints, and in one place it is rough. What can be done about this?

Answer: Widen the crack with a cold chisel, so that it is wider at the lower, or inside, part of the crack than on the surface. Fill the space with litharge, to be had at a paint store, mixed to a stiff paste with glycerine. Mix this up only a little at a time, for it hardens quickly. Pack this into the crack.

Another method is to pack the crack with soft cotton string or lamp wicking, smeared with white lead. Allow several days for drying before using the tub.

To smooth the rough place, rub with a block of carborundum, which you can get at a hardware or paint store.

Stained Floor.

Question: In the case of a much stained flooring, we have been advised that the stain, due to general neglect, can be removed by washing with water containing soda. Is this correct?

Answer: A strong solution of washing soda or trisodium phosphate will remove the finish, but if the stains are in the wood, only a saturated solution of oxalic acid will bleach it out, after the finish has been removed. A floor finish that is in poor condition and badly stained should be scraped with a floor sanding machine, then refinished.

Sidewall Shingles.

Question: A certain company is suggesting asphalt shingles for the upper half of my house and asbestos cement shingles for the lower half. Also, something is said about asphalt sheeting under the shingles. Would an all asbestos job be preferable to the above arrangement?

Answer: My preference would be for an all asbestos shingle finish, from the standpoint of appearance and durability. Asphalt saturated felt is always used under asbestos shingle siding.

Food Moths.

Question: I find moths in my packages of cereals and crackers, which I keep in my kitchen closet. What should I do to get rid of them?

Answer: Those moths thrive in dried food of all kinds. Boxes of food that have been opened or broken should be thrown out. Clear off the shelves and scrub thoroughly with hot soapsuds. All cereals, nuts, crackers, spaghetti, etc., should be kept in tight containers; tin boxes or tightly capped glass jars.

Gold Leaf Frame.

Question: The gold leaf on an old-fashioned mirror frame has been rubbed off in spots. I should like to know if there is some liquid preparation that I could use to cover the whole frame.

Answer: At your local art store you can get what is generally called a bronzing liquid. It comes in a variety of gold finishes and can be easily brushed on.

Texas Under 6 Flags

Texas has lived under six different flags — French, Spanish, Mexican, Texas Republic, Confederate and United States. First flag to fly over the area that is now Texas and parts of New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming was the French tricolor, from 1684 to 1763. In 1607 the Spanish began to gain control and from 1763 to 1821 it was under the Spanish flag. Mexico gained her independence from Spain in 1821 and from then until 1836 Texas was under the Mexican flag. Then Texas revolted and from 1836 to 1845 it was under the flag of the Texas Republic.

The Texas Republic was admitted to the Union as a state in 1845. During the Civil war Texas flew the Confederate flag.—Pathfinder.

4. Where is the mountainous district known as the Riff?
5. What is a chromosphere?
6. What baseball pitcher holds the record for the number of games won during his major league career?
7. Is prayer an inseparable part of all religious worship?
8. What does a Scotchman mean by a brae?
9. What birds drink by suction?
10. The world's biggest theater is where?

The Answers

1. Twenty-nine days, 12 hours, 44.05 minutes.
2. The Mammoth cave in Kentucky is the largest. It contains more than 200 miles of galleries.
3. As late as 1925 street traffic lights on Fifth avenue, New York city, flashed yellow for "start," red for "caution," and green for "stop."
4. Morocco.
5. A gaseous layer surrounding the sun.
6. Cy Young, with 511 victories.
7. The 150,000 Druses of Syria never pray, believing that it would be both presumptious and impertinent to ask the Creator to consider their own personal needs and wishes.
8. The slope of a hillside.
9. The pigeon is the only bird that drinks by suction, all others having to throw their heads back in order to swallow.
10. The world's biggest theater is in Buenos Aires. It can be changed in three hours from an ordinary theater to a circus or race track. More than once a bicycle race has been held in the morning, a bull fight in the afternoon, and a grand opera at night. The floor can be flooded for aquatic sports.

Joy the Mainspring

Joy is the mainspring in the whole round of everlasting nature; joy moves the wheels of the great timepiece of the world; she it is that loosens flowers from their buds, suns from their firmaments, rolling spheres in distant space seen not by the glass of the astronomer.—Schiller.

MAL-DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME CAUSES "HARD TIMES"

(LABOR)

This week Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's Monopoly Investigating Committee made public one of the most important reports ever issued by any governmental agency.

Entitled "Concentration of Income," it provides statistical proof that organized labor is right in maintaining that too much income in a few hands, and too little purchasing power in the hands of the masses of our people, are the main cause of depression and other economic troubles.

* * * * *

The report was compiled from income tax records and other authoritative sources by Department of Commerce economists, who are so conservative that in the past their statistics have sometimes been used by the enemies of organized labor.

By exhaustive studies, these economists determined the total income distributed in the United States in each of the years from 1918 through 1937, how many persons shared this income, and how much of it went to the few who got the most.

In general, they found that the few get a larger and larger share of the total income, and the many get a smaller and smaller share, as times improve and the total income gets bigger and bigger.

* * * * *

These are immensely significant facts. They are exactly in line with labor's claim that increasing concentration of income in a few hands, in times of comparative prosperity, causes depression by depriving the masses of the purchasing power necessary to keep the wheels of industry turning.

All this is proved again and again in the report's 112 pages of fine print and numerous tables of figures. Only a few examples can be given here.

* * * * *

The number of persons who received incomes rose from 40,161,000 in 1918 to 50,924,000 in 1937.

In 1918, the total income was $59,110,000,000, and 12.70 cents of each $1 went to the 1 percent of our people who had the largest incomes.

By 1928, the total income had risen to $82,493,000,000, and 19.26 cts of each $1 went to the 1 percent at the top.

The crash came in 1929. In 1931, the share of the fortunate 1 per cent of those who had income was down to 13.72 cents of each $1.

* * * * *

Unfortunately, this table and all other statistics in the report omit figures for 1932 and 1933, the bottom years of the depression. The reason given is that the figures for those two years are "not comparable" because a change was made in "the treatment of capital gains and losses" for income taxes and statistics.

* * * * *

In 1934, the top 1 per cent got 12.60 cents of each $1. With partial economic recovery, their share rose to 14.53 cents in 1936, and the country slid into a drastic "recession" late in 1937.

Always as the country nosed out of "hard times" and prosperity seemed in sight, the very rich began "hogging" the profits of industry, with the inevitable result that depression reared its ugly head again.

For example, the share of the highest 2 per cent of the income recipients rose by 35 per cent from 1924 through 1928, while the share of the highest one-tenth of 1 per cent—that is, one out of a thousand,—rose by 75 per cent.

The supreme task before the American statesmen is to reverse this ruinous process. And that is the only may to "make Democracy work."

Expressive Gestures

Highly emotional people frequently express themselves by gestures. Primitive man used gestures to make himself understood, as languages were simple and did not express the full meaning he wanted to convey. Gesturing as an accompaniment to speech seems to be more natural and inherent in the Latin races, and may be termed a racial characteristic.

Lincoln County Election Results

Another election has gone into history. After the smoke of battle cleared away the Democrats had five winning county candidates and the Republicans six. Some of them ran such close races, it was difficult to decide who would be ahead in the final count. Following are the results in the county: -

For U.S. Senator: Albert Mitchell, r. 1726, Dennis Chavez, d. 1874.

For Representative in Congress: Herman R. Crile, r. 1775, Clinton P. Anderson, d. 1793.

For Governor: Maurice F. Miera, r. 1715, John E. Miles, d. 1873.

For State Senator, 15th district; Geo. T. McWhirter, r. 1741, Lee Stryker, d. 1798.

For State Senator, 18th district: Lorna M. Shipley, r. 1782, A. L. Dunn, d. 1784.

For State Representative, 16th district: S. E. Greiaen, r. 1836, L. P. Hall, d. 1712.

For District Attorney: E. L. Mechem, r. 1703, Martin Threet, d. 1846.

For Probate Judge: John Mackey, r. 1769, Marcial St.John, d. 1793.

For Commissioner, district No. 1: Geo. Kimbrell, r. 1710, Manuel Corona, d. 1857.

For Commissioner, district No. 2: Corbin Hester, r. 1828, Benj. H. Roberts, d. 1732.

For Commissioner, district No. 3: Wm. W. Gallacher, r. 1948, Tom J. Cook, d. 1609.

For County Clerk: Clayton Hunt r. 1785, Felix Ramey, d. 1806.

For Sheriff: A. F. Stover, r. 1757, Roley S. Ward, 1670.

For Assessor: Leandro Vega, 1600, L. H. Dow, 1971.

For Treasurer: Ernest Key, r. 1802, Wayne Zumwalt, d. 1775.

For Co. School Superintendent: Nellie W. Day, r. 1614, Ola C. Jones, d. 1997.

Expression of Thanks

I wish to express my thanks to all my friends who in any way assisted in my election to the office of Probate Judge. I shall endeavor to show that appreciation by being fair to all, and by fulfilling the duties of office to the best of my ability.

NEW MEXICO AREA NAMED FOR FOOD STAMP PLAN

STATE COLLEGE—Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has announced that the Food Stamp Plan for distributing surplus agricultural commodities will be extended to an area in New Mexico which will include the counties of Santa Fe, Rio Arriba, Taos, Torrance and Sandoval.

Selection of the New Mexico area for stamp plan operation followed conferences between representatives of the Surplus Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture, and local public officials, welfare officials, and business and banking representatives who will be concerned with the administration of the program.

The 1930 census gives the combined population of the five counties making up the New Mexico area as 75,755. It is estimated that there are 8,486 relief cases in the area, representing some 26,551 people.

Under the plan of stamp distribution to be used in the area, eligible families will be given the opportunity to buy orange-colored food stamps and receive free blue stamps in the ratio of 50 cents worth for each $1.00 worth of orange stamps bought. The orange stamps are used to continue the family's regular food purchases while the free blue stamps are used to obtain specially designated surplus foods a sadditions to the family's food supplies.

Under the stamp plan, price-depressing farm surpluses are moved thru regular trade channels to the families on relief. This gives the farmer a wider market for his surplus crops and, at the same time, adds needed health-giving foods to the diets of families getting public aid. Actual operation of the program in the New Mexico area is expected to begin in about a month. Participation in the program will be voluntary.

Blue Stamps Reduce Truck-Crop Surpluses

A marked increase in the consumption of fresh fruits and vegetables by families receiving some form of public assistance became apparent during the month of August ,as 1,067 persons in the nation spent $4,501,000 in blue stamps for food ,according to F. F. Whitley of the N. M. Extension Service. This represented an increase of 22 percent over the previous month in the number of persons taking part in the plan.

Coupling their increased purchasing power with a wide variety of surplus fruits and vegetables from which to choose, almost two million persons participating in the plan spent $497,000 for tons of oranges, apples, peaches, prunes, pears, and raisins. They used their new purchasing power to consume carloads of vegetables, spending $576,000 for fresh tomatoes, dry beans, snap beans, fresh corn, cabbage, lettuce, beets, celery, carrots, lima beans, peas and spinach.

"The Surplus Marketing Administration, through the Food Stamp Plan, is making an effort to move the farm surplus through normal trade channels by increasing the purchasing power of families receiving public assistance," Mr. Whitley said. Almost $1,446,000 went into the purchase of pork products and lard. This means that those taking part in the Food Stamp Plan ate 6,650,000 pounds of pork and used 3,172,000 pounds of lard during the month over and above their normal expenditure for food.

Another 28 percent of the blue stamp money was spent for butter and eggs. During the month those participating in the food stamp plan consumed 2,550,000 dozen eggs and 2,045,000 pounds of butter with the increased purchasing power made available to them through the blue food order stamps. Each person ate 15 dozen eggs and consumed an average of over one pound of butter more than they had normally.

Cereals in the form of white flour, graham flour, rice, corn meal, and hominy grits, accounted for 16 percent or about $719,000.

CCC ACTIVITIES

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 4—Forty-one CCC camps are scheduled for operation in New Mexico during the current 10th work period, Oct. 1, 1940 to March 31, 1941, according to information received by the Office of Government Reports at Phoenix, Ariz.

The program provides for the employment of approximately 8200 CCC enrollees on conservation work projects in New Mexico during the next six months. Approximately 200 enrollees will be assigned to each of the 41 camps. Of the 8,200 boys assigned to CCC camps in the state, 1,600 will work on improvement, protection and development of national forest areas, 2,400 on erosion control projects on agricultural lands, 400 on waterfowl refuges, 2,000 on grazing lands, 800 on reclamation projects, 600 in national parks, and 400 on park improvement and development projects in state parks.

A dual program for the conservation of topsoil and water supplies in New Mexico has featured CCC work operation in that state. During this last year the Elephant Butte fish hatchery, at the Elephant Butte Dam was completed. This hatchery is designed to provide operation and economic facilities for propagation of sufficient fish to stock the Elephant Butte Reservoir and the Rio Grande. Repair of existing reclamation systems, installation of erosion control check dams, gully and forest tree planting, cleaning of water holes and springs and extensive rodent control and forest protection operations are included among other CCC New Mexico activities.

The following is a list of the work accomplished by the CCC during the period from April 1933 to June 30, 1940.

Bridges, all types, number	1,111
Lookout houses and towers	465
Impounding and large diversion dams,	534
Fences, number of rods	1,916,484
Telephone lines, miles	1,867
Springs and small reservoirs	1,055
Truck trails and minor roads miles	4,049
Trees planted, gully erosion control	4,0003,000
Erosion check dams, number	776,240
Rodent and predatory animal control, acres	9,079,853
Trees planted, reforestation	1,357,200

The estimated aggregate number of New Mexico men given employment from April 1933 thru September 30, 1940 is 23,255, which does not include 18,208 junior and veteran enrollees and 4,947 non-enrolled personnel. The average number of New Mexico enrollees in the CCC during the fiscal year, 1940, was 1,760, while the average number of CCC enrollees working in New Mexico camps was 6,949.

A Correction

I was informed a few days ago that a report had been circulated about town, that Highway 54 between Santa Rosa and Tularosa had been designated a Primary Road. Mr. Ivan Hilton Mayor of Las Vegas and a member of the State Highway Commission called on me at my home last Friday evening and informed me that the Highway Commission of this State were taking the necessary steps with the United States Highway Department to have this stretch of road placed in the Primary System of roads. This piece of road is now a Secondary Road and Mr. Hilton stated that it would take many years to complete it under these conditions.

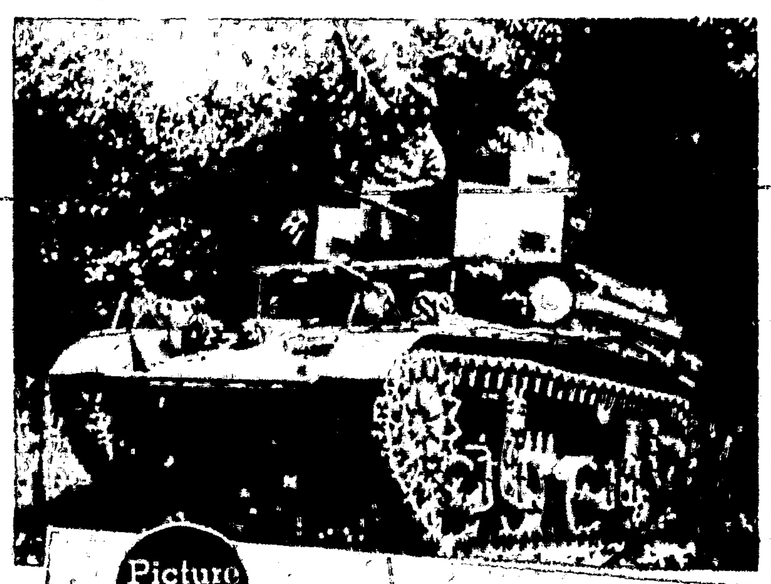
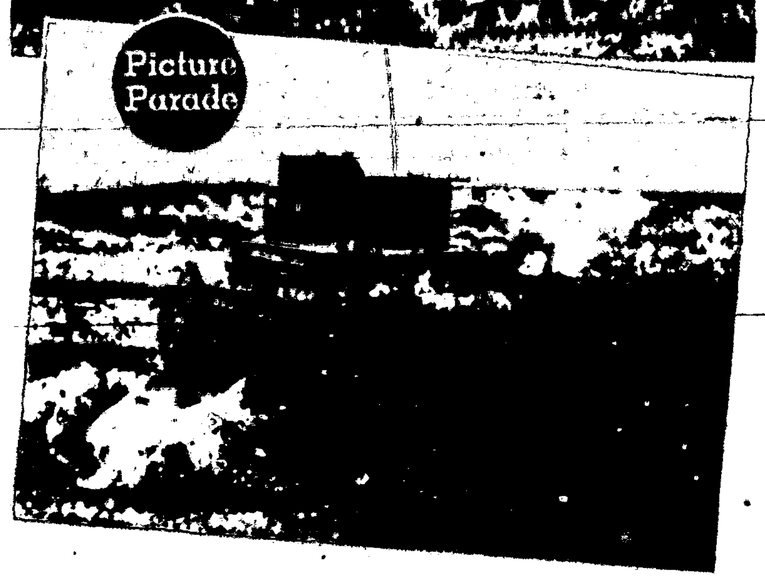
America's Land 'Warships'

During the German blitzkrieg the tank took its place as the most deadly of military weapons in land fighting. While America has the best tanks in the world, we haven't enough of them, although we are industrially equipped to turn them out in gross lots. So let us give our army tanks—so many tanks that not even all the armies of the rest of the world combined would dare attack us. These photos, taken at Fort Meade, Maryland, show you some of the tanks we have.

SINISTER SHADOW . . . Yes, it may be sinister, but we could use a lot more of these shadows on our side of the fence. This medium-size tank is climbing a steep grade.

Left: Medium tank in action in wooded terrain. Small trees are no obstacles to these juggernauts. They mow them down like grass. This one has a machine gun and a small cannon. Right: This U. S. tank soldier received the gash on his face during a practice run. Tankers wear special helmets to prevent head injuries when tossed about in the steel juggernaut.





Top: This tank, armed with machine guns and small cannon, spots a "scouting plane" during maneuvers. Tanks have been found vulnerable to airplane fire in the European war.

Center: Turning at high speed, this tank tossed the real estate skyhigh. This tank can hit better than 30 miles per hour in the rough.

Left: Just as the cavalryman had to look after his horse, the tank soldier must care for his steed of steel. This is washday for the tank after a run through the rough at Fort George Meade.

Words, Slogans, Played Important Role During Hectic War Years of 1914-1918

By JAMES R. MOCK
and
CEDRIC LARSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

We had gone to war—World war I. We had decided to send our boys over to France to save democracy. But even as indignation against Germany had surged higher and higher in those last tense days before 3:12 a. m., April 6, 1917, no one could say just what the American people would do after their eloquent leader had urged them into war.

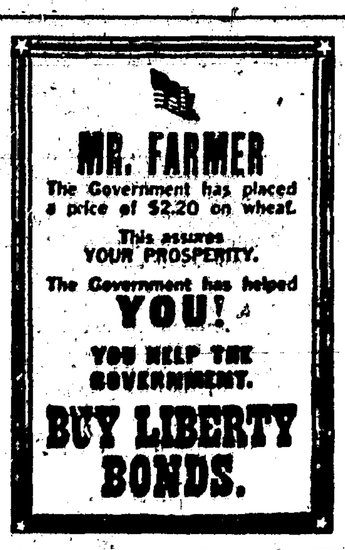
The great majority of Americans, it seemed, wanted to fight, but people wondered anxiously how large and how determined the minority might be.

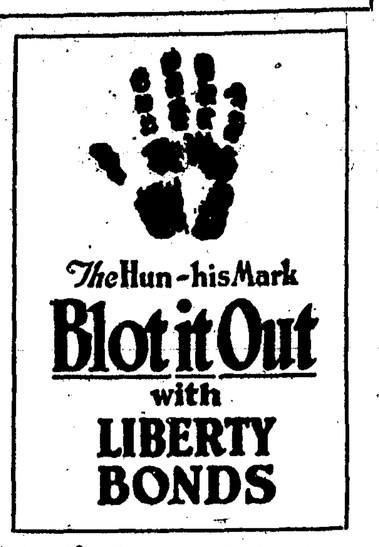
In the World war of 1914-18, words and slogans played an important role in the struggle of the nations for victory. Just how important that role was, has been the subject of a book, "Words That Won the War," written by James R. Mock and Cedric Larson. The accompanying article is a condensation of that book and is presented because of interest now centering around another European war. When opinions are expressed they are the opinions of the authors and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Minorities are dangerous when the fate of civilization is hanging in the balance. How could we count on the millions of Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Poles, Russians and other "aliens in our midst"? Wasn't there something very disquieting in the widely quoted opinion of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka that the Melting Pot had failed to melt? How many people still believed there was such a thing as being too proud to fight? How many remembered the President's statement that there was no essential difference in the expressed war aims of the belligerents? What of enemy spies, of whom there were said to be 100,000 or more at large, and their allies, the pacifists, Socialists and labor agitators? What about the success of Wilson's campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war"? What about warnings against entanglement in Europe's quarrels which still echoed in countless homes?

And what, above all, about the unknown thousands of Americans who might not feel very strongly one way or the other but thought Europe was a long way off and might find it too much bother to make the sacrifices which a modern war demands of the entire population?

We had pledged "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," but could we fulfill that pledge? When a peaceful nation, jealous of individual liberty and proud of its freedom from militarism, attempted to mobilize its men, money, resources, and emotions for one mighty effort, even a rather small minority could bring disaster. "Widespread co-operation" was not good enough when the nation's life was at stake. Nothing less than complete solidarity would do.





The authors of the book, "Words That Won the War," point out the two above examples of information work done in the World war of 1914-18, as appeals that are "not too academic." Ideas of this type appeal directly and do their selling lesson quickly without any subtle reasoning.

U. S. Not Unified.

America was not unified when war was declared. The necessary reversal of opinion was too great to be achieved overnight. The agonizing question in official Washington, the question on which hung the fate of the country's entire wartime effort, was whether the inner lines at home would hold as effectively as the lines in France.

The committee on public information was assigned the staggering task of "holding fast the inner lines." The story of how it fulfilled that mission is a dramatic record of vigor, effectiveness, and creative imagination. The committee was America's "propaganda ministry" during the World war, charged with encouraging and then consolidating the revolution of opinion which changed the United States from anti-militaristic democracy to an organized war machine. This work touched the private life of virtually every man, woman, and child; it reflected the thoughts of the American people under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson; and it popularized what was for us a new idea of the individual's relation to the state.

Committee's Creation.

President Wilson created the committee on public information by executive order dated April 13, 1917, and appointed George Creel as civilian chairman, with the secretaries of state, war, and navy as the other members. Mr. Creel assembled as brilliant and talented a group of journalists, scholars, press agents, editors, artists, and other manipulators of the symbols of public opinion as America had ever seen united for a single purpose. It was a gargantuan advertising agency the like of which the country had never known, and the breathtaking scope of its activities was not to be equalled until the rise of totalitarian dictatorships after the war.

News was the life-blood of the committee on public information (CPI)—news from the front, from training camps, from the White House, from farms and factories, from workers' homes, from every place that had a story to tell regarding the American people in the war.

Press Co-operation.

As George Creel and many other people have repeatedly emphasized, press co-operation with the CPI and its support of the war rested on a "voluntary" basis, but with impressive legal authority behind it. This authority was gradually extended, by congressional and presidential action, as the war progressed, and by the time of the Armistice the government's potential control of the press was nearly complete. A self-denying ordinance by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Creel was all that stood in the way of an attempt to impose a harsh, rigorous, and thoroughgoing censorship.

Even before the CPI, an agreement for voluntary censorship had been reached by representatives of the press and of the departments of state, war and navy. Then, on April 16, 1917, 10 days after declaration of war and three days after creation of the CPI, Mr. Wilson backed this up with a warning proclamation regarding "Treason and Misprision of Treason," stating, among other things, that the courts had found to be treasonable "The performance of any act or publication of statements or information which will give or supply, in any way, aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States."

President Wilson had favored adequate censorship power all along, but for the first 53 days of the war (that is, from April 6 to May 29) selection of news was very largely a matter of the editor's individual discretion. He was subject to laws against treason and his good sense normally told him what might and what might not be published. Then on May 29 came the "Preliminary Statement," in which the CPI codified rules but still depended upon existing laws for its authority.

News Classifications.

"Dangerous" news included stories of naval and military operations in progress; movement of official missions; threats and plots against the life of the President; news regarding secret service and confidential agents; movements of alien labor. Naval information in the forbidden category included the position, number, or identification of Allied or American warships; certain data pertaining to lights and buoys; mention of ports of arrival or departure; any details of mines or mine traps; signals, orders, or wireless messages to or from any warship; all phases of submarine warfare; facts regarding dry-docks. Forbidden military information included any relating to fixed land defenses; movements of American or Canadian troops; assignment of small detachments; concentration at ports; aircraft and equipment that was, or might be, in the process of experimentation.

In general, editors were warned against feeling that because facts were generally known in a local district it was therefore safe to give them publication. Editors were also charged to examine, with the same care that they devoted to news, the contents of advertising copy, and even paid reading notices. And of course everyone was to guard against indiscriminate publication of maps, charts, and pictures.

So the fighting with printer's ink was carried on vigorously on many fronts during the war, with George Creel as editor-in-chief.

Every Citizen Holds High Public Office In Dellview, Nation's Smallest Town

This is Main street of Dellview, N. C., a duly incorporated town with a total population of eight. The building houses the town's one industry, Henry Dellinger's woodwork shop, which is also used as the town hall. At the left Chief of Police Tom Dellinger may be giving a parking ticket to the town's only male resident who doesn't hold office—although that is unlikely as it is his son.

DELLVIEW, N. C.—Stray dogs with a taste for chicken are responsible for the existence of this duly incorporated town, the smallest census enumerators have found anywhere in the United States. Its city directory contains only one surname, Dellinger. Its population, which has not varied during the 15 years of its existence, is eight.

Dellview was created by act of the state legislature in 1925. At that time three Dellinger brothers operated a large chicken farm. But due to the inadequacy of the county dog laws—or, at least, to the inadequacy of their enforcement—dogs from nearby farms played havoc with the business. Hardly a night passed that squawks from the hen houses did not disturb the Dellingers' sleep. Hardly a morning dawned that feathers were not found scattered over the Dellingers' farm.

It was then that brother Davis P. Dellinger, who practiced law in nearby Cherryville but owned an interest in the farm, came to the rescue. As a member of the legislature he did not want to impose on his rural constituents stricter dog laws than they desired but as a chicken raiser he wanted relief. So he conceived the idea of incorporating the farm as a town and the bill passed the legislature without a hitch.

All that was necessary then was to pass town ordinances against dogs running at large, make the farming Dellingers town officers and arm them with shotguns.

Ten years ago fire destroyed the chicken business and the Dellinger farm was put back in crops. But Dellview remains an incorporated town, complete with municipal government even if it doesn't contain but two families—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dellinger and their son Robert, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dellinger and their daughters Vilma, Marie and Gladys.

Persons of Voting Age Show Large Increase

The number of persons of voting age in the country has increased by 11,234,376 in the last decade, according to the figures of the U. S. census bureau, although the total population gain was only 8,634,835. The reasons for this, census experts believe, are a declining birth rate and a lengthening of the life span due to medical advances and modern sanitation practices.

Transforming a Box Into Smart Ottoman

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

PAD the top of a box and slip-cover it; then add a separate cushion three inches thick. The result will be a smart ottoman that either may match or contrast with the cover of your favorite chair. The little feet made of drawer pulls keep the ottoman from looking like a box. A corded seam where the skirt of the slip cover joins the top, and an inverted pleat at each corner of the skirt also give a professional touch. I suggest tacking the slip cover firmly in place as shown in the sketch.

If down or feathers are used to fill the separate cushion, make an inner cushion of ticking with a top and a bottom piece the size of the box top; and a straight three-inch piece around the sides. If kapok is used for filling, this inner cushion may be made of muslin. The cover of the separate cushion has corded seams to match the box slip cover.

NOTE: These directions should be clipped from the paper as they are not available in booklet form. However, complete directions for making slip covers and for making corded seams are in SEWING, Book No. 1. No. 3 also contains valuable slip cover suggestions. These 32-page booklets are 10c each. CHAPTER XXXI—Continued

—19—

Lynn quieted, turned to Chuck and answered: "I've lost the man I loved. I know what that means, and I didn't have a little child to consider. There is such a thing as decency, Chuck. You may not know it, but there is." All the suffering and hurt of the last year shone in Lynn's white face. Chuck, looking, suddenly felt sorry for her.

"I didn't know you care . . . that much."

Her smile was pitiful. Chuck watched her for a little, curiously.

Chuck spoke at last: "What do you want me to do?" There was defeat in his voice.

Lynn sat up, her hands clasped together; "Give her a chance. I don't know whether she still loves you, Chuck. It has been a year. Find her and Buddy. Go to her, alone. Go honestly. Ask her to come back. Be honest. Don't steal Buddy from her!"

Chuck was silent as he watched her. Then he got up wearily.

"I promise." His voice was dead.

"Don't you love her any more, Chuck?" Lynn's voice was full of fear.

"Yes." His face colored. "I do. I suppose that's why I'm so bitter. She almost killed me, Lynn!" He turned away so that Lynn could not see his face.

Chuck held out his hand. "What name is she using Lynn?"

"You'll play fair?"

"I swear it!"

CHAPTER XXXII

On the second day Chuck called her at the shop in the morning and asked her to meet him at luncheon.

"I'm at the Astor. Under another name. We better eat lunch in my room. I'm leaving town and I want to see you first."

When Lynn walked into Chuck's room two hours later she saw he had not slept. He was nervous, kept looking at his watch. He motioned her into a chair.

"My plane leaves at 2:30 P. M. Our lunch will be along in a moment. They're near New Orleans. I just found out. My man's been working night and day since you told me!"

Just then the waiter brought their food and they were silent as he served it. When the door closed Chuck began again immediately:

"I'll do as you say. It won't work, probably. But I'll keep my side of the bargain!"

Lynn's eyes filled with tears: "Chuck, of course, it won't work if you really don't want Helen and Buddy back!" She raised her hands in protest. "Please listen to me! Would you want Helen to take you back only because of Buddy?" The expression on his face was answer enough. "She'll come, if she knows you want her to!"

She tried hard to make Chuck understand. He was making a great effort. Lynn knew how bitter was his Austin pride. He must care a great deal. When she left him she said:

"Good luck, and happiness!"

He gave her hand a squeeze, leaned over and kissed her cheek. He could not speak for the lump in his throat.

Four days before Christmas she lay in her bed trying to summon courage enough to get up when her bell rang. She jumped out of bed, threw on a robe and hurried to the door.

A telegraph boy handed in a message. With trembling fingers she opened it. It was short, quite unexplanatory.

"Merry Christmas, see you soon." It was signed, "Chuck, Helen, Buddy."

It was Mme. Reanoud who solved Lynn's Christmas problem for her.

"Why don't you trim your tree and have some of the kids from the old apartment building next to you in for a party Christmas day?" she asked. "They could use a party, from the way they look. Better give them meat and potatoes instead of ice cream though. They seem to need it."

Lynn was enthusiastic over the idea. "I'll do it! I'll invite them tonight."

"You better start shopping, young woman! That's more important!"

It turned out that Terry was a harbor of refuge when Lynn came to the shopping problem. He drove her to the stores, here and there.

When Terry and Lynn came back into the living-room, he took her hand:

"Can I give you your ring, Lynn? For Christmas?"

Her eyes were black as she spoke: "I wish I could say yes, Terry, but I can't."

"It's the last time I'm going to ask. I have it here in my pocket." He took out a gorgeous yellow diamond which had been in his family for years. "Empress Josephine once wore that, young woman, and it isn't good enough for you."

"You're sweet, Terry." Lynn looked at the gorgeous stone laying in his hand. She shook her head and smiled up at him.

Lynn determined not to think of the tree which Wild had trimmed for her a year ago. She turned restlessly. Somebody was coming down the hall. There was a knock on her door. She got up to open it.

"Merry Christmas!" cried two voices.

It was Chuck and Helen. They came in with a rush, and Lynn was in their arms. Helen was crying and Chuck was swallowing hard. It was a long time before anybody was coherent enough to explain all that had happened.

"Where's Buddy?"

"Home, asleep in his nursery!" Helen said. And Chuck, hearing her, kissed her. She had said "home" of Austin Manor. Said it naturally and happily.

Later, just before they were to leave, Helen tried to say to Lynn some things that were in her heart.

"If I can ever pay my debt to you, Lynn!"

Chuck tried to make a formal speech, and Lynn was between laughter and tears.

"We can't stay, darling. There's a supper party tonight, and Buddy will have us up at dawn." Helen's face suddenly sobered; "But we had to see you for a few minutes. If you could see Buddy with his father, Lynn!" She squeezed Chuck's arm. Then Helen tried to tell Lynn what had happened down South.

"I was almost at the end of my rope, Lynn," she said. "Chuck got to us one night after Buddy had gone to bed. He just walked into that trailer, and I thought I would die in that moment."

"I didn't think she was glad to see me at first!" Chuck interposed.

"I was so stunned, I couldn't move!"

"Then I did just what you told me to. I walked right up and kissed her!" He was sitting with his arm about his wife as they talked. Helen patted his arm:

"I think I cried for an hour before I could even speak. I had been so lonely and afraid. I don't know how I ever stood it!"

"We'll forget all about it now, Helen."

"I hope I won't forget what I learned," Helen said with a sincere note in her voice.

"Neither of us will," Chuck promised. "We've had our lesson."

"And Mr. Mortimer?" Lynn asked.

"I telephoned him from New Orleans. He was pleased. He's a nice person, Lynn." Then she added:

"I want to see you soon, just you and me, so we can take our hair down and have a good talk. We're sailing for Algiers for a little vacation next month, Lynn."

"It's to be our second honeymoon." Then he added: "The family's as pleased as anything about it all."

Then Helen gave Lynn a little box. "This is for you, darling, from Chuck and me. I bought it in Mexico. I hope you like it."

Lynn opened the box immediately. It was a lovely silver bracelet set with turquoise, the fine carving was worn almost smooth by the many beautiful women through the ages who had owned the handsome ornament.

"It's . . . beautiful!" Lynn put it on her slim wrist.

When Helen kissed Lynn good-by she whispered: "I've got a plan, you'll hear about it soon. Before we go away!"

CHAPTER XXXIII

Lynn woke the next morning with that wonderful feeling that something exciting and unusual was going to happen. When she opened her eyes she could see through the bedroom door the glistening Christmas tree rising high to the ceiling.

All morning Lynn worked hard. She peeled quantities of potatoes for her guests, fixed the squash for baking. It was fun. By noon she was improvising a table.

Marty had promised to drop in for the party, and he came in puffing, before the children began to arrive. His arms were piled high with bundles, he had a Christmas stocking for every guest, filled with oranges, candy and toys. And he had a gift for Lynn. It was a pretty compact.

"Merry Christmas, Kid!" Marty said, dropping the bundles onto the couch.

They just had time to put the stockings under the tree when the first guest arrived. Myrtle Price, an artist who lived above Lynn came in to help, and soon the studio was turned into a gay turmoil of wild youngsters having the time of their lives.

Marty was a genius with the children. He got them over their first shyness. He directed their games while Lynn and Myrtle worked in the kitchen to finish the dinner. They were having a grand time. Myrtle borrowed chairs from everybody up and down the hall. Two boys across the way stopped in to see the fun, stayed on to watch that the youngsters got their dinner.

Gradually the apartment and its tumult became the center of life of the big, ramshackle studio building. Everybody left in the place had to poke his head into the door to see the fun. The children ate and ate until Lynn was afraid they'd be ill.

The uninvited guests helped clear the tables, push the tables back against the walls and then everybody sat down on the floor. Marty had disappeared. Shortly there was a wild shout. He came out of the bedroom a rotund Santa Claus with a long, white beard.

The children yelled and screamed in their delight. Then Marty began giving out the little gifts.

"I haven't had so much fun in years," he told Lynn.

The bracelets and the dollar watches Terry had bought sent the crowd into mild hysteria. Of course, three of the watches were promptly broken, for the boys wound them too tightly. But it was all breathless and spontaneous. Toward evening some of the mothers came for their children and Lynn gave them sandwiches of the leftover turkey.

"It's the loveliest Christmas I've ever had," Lynn said as she and Marty dropped down for a moment on the couch to rest.

Of course, nobody wanted to go home. It was dark now, and the lighted tree was lovelier in the dim studio. Art started some carols and soon the child voices were raised in song, a little off tune perhaps, but they loved it. Art went across the hall and got his accordion and shortly the whole building was shaking as the children danced to his tunes and the older people sat back enjoying the fun. Yes, it was a good day.

Nobody heard a knock on the door. Finally Marty did, and opened it. It was a messenger boy. A cable.

"From Rene, bless his heart. He wouldn't forget!" Lynn cried as she took it. The boy grinned as he watched the dancing children. Lynn pressed some candy into his hand and Marty gave him a dollar.

Lynn tore open the cable casually. It was wonderful that a word of greeting could come to her so far. Marty turned to her, stopped short. Lynn's smile died.

"Marty!" She was trembling. He took the cable from her hand. Only a few words.

"Bouchier seriously ill, American Hospital; come." It was signed by Dr. Antonio Marelli, in Rome:

Lynn held on to Marty's arm. "We mustn't spoil their party. Keep them going." She went into the bedroom and closed the door. She sat down on the narrow bed, piled high with children's coats and hats, and reread the cable. Rene must be desperately ill, or the doctor would not have cabled. Marty found her there a few minutes later.

"I'd never forgive myself if I didn't go . . . and anything happened." . . . She looked up distractedly. "He can't die, Marty."

"No." Marty and his Santa Claus beard awry, wiped his forehead with a trembling hand. "He can't die. He's too important to the world, Lynn. He's a great painter! It would be terrible . . ."

Poor Rene. Alone, ill, maybe dying. She forced a smile to her lips, but her eyes were bright with tears.

Shortly, the party began to break up. It was a long process. Hats and coats had to be rescued, rubbers and galoshes straightened out. Marty, watching Lynn's face, was glad she had this distraction. They finally departed, a disheveled, happy, noisy crowd. Then quiet settled over the apartment like a pall. Marty went out to buy a newspaper and Lynn was alone.

Mechanically she tried to bring a little order out of the chaos in the apartment. Marty was not gone long, but when he came back he had everything planned.

"There's a sailing tomorrow, but no use to take it. It's a slow boat. Better wait for the Normandie. She sails Thursday."

"That's two days!"

"It can't be helped."

"I'll get you a tourist class ticket. You can go straight from Havre to Rome."

"It will be over a week, Marty."

"Yes."

"I hope I'm in time."

"You will be. He'll probably be all right by the time you get there."

"If I only knew how serious it is!"

"Shall I telephone the hospital?"

"Will it cost a lot?"

"Not too much, Lynn. I'll try."

Later they both went out to the corner drug store, and in an hour Marty had the call through. He got an Italian clerk who worked in the store to speak with the hospital in Rome. It was a short conversation.

"He's got pneumonia," the boy informed the two who waited. He told the hospital that Lynn was sailing on the Normandie.

"How is he?" Lynn demanded.

"They say he's pretty sick." That was all.

Marty and Lynn went back to her apartment, and Lynn got out her suit cases.

"I'll go to the bank tomorrow morning, Marty as soon as it opens and get the money."

"Don't worry about that. I'll get a ticket, there won't be any trouble this time of year. Reservations are light. I'll have the boys see about your passport. You'll have to get a picture. Do that first thing. We'll have to pull strings to get it in time."

"I haven't any idea how long I'll be gone. What shall I do about my apartment?" Lynn was distraught.

"Better get it in order, pack everything, and leave it. When you see how things are, write, and I'll have your stuff sent on to storage. That is, if you stay," he added.

Winter Fashions Turn Spotlight On Handsome Jewelry Accents

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WEAR dramatic jewelry in a dramatic way and your costume will soar to dizzy heights of chic and charm this winter. The technique for the costume ideal as prescribed by current fashion demands that "clothes" be styled with utmost simplicity of elegant choice fabric to serve as a perfect setting for jewelry that is superbly adornful. After you follow this formula of dress to a nicety you can complete the ensemble with a devastating chapeau.

In selecting your jewelry collection keep uppermost in mind that fashion emphasis this winter is on handsome important individualistic pieces, rather than flashy glittery baubles. The smartest of the smart are finding definite appeal in the idea of a gorgeous clip or brooch strategically placed below the shoulder, preferably to one side, to "show off" on the bodice. To this they match up intriguing earrings, which are vastly important this season, an eye-dazzling finger ring and imposing bracelets. To be sure, a necklace may be added, but "the latest" whim of fashion is to concentrate on the clip of artful design and exquisite workmanship.

The illustration herewith tells a fascinating story of current jewelry trends. To the left above in the picture dull finished gold and platinum leaves set with pale yellow sapphires make an unusual clip worn smartly on the lapel of a brown sealskin coat. A tailored bracelet of the same dull finished gold with jewel-set buckle serves as an appropriate companion piece. The casual daytime dress (favorite two-piece type) is of sheer wool with cartridge tuckings at the shoulder and pockets. This stunning frock in neutral color is one of those tailored classics well-dressed women adore.

A beau catcher if ever there was one! She is the cunningly bonneted young girl centered in the group. Bonnet toques of quaint prettiness such as this are the "newest out." The young set like them immensely and wear them most becomingly. This one is of black broadcloth and has velvet ties under the chin. The suit is of the same woolen fabric used for men's tuxedos. Needless to say it tailors beautifully, and with its braid trimming makes a stunning formal costume for town. It's quite the thing, as you no doubt know, to affect masculine fashions both as to materials bought in men's tailoring establishments and details such as blouses cut shirt fashion, and coats that look as if they might have been filched from brother's wardrobe. At any rate the young miss pictured yields to feminine urge when she wears an eye-impelling single jewelry piece of rubies set in gold.

Appropriate for a young girl to wear for afternoon or dinner dates is the winsome jewelry "set" shown above to the right. The ensemble consists of two flower pins, uniquely positioned one below the other on the bodice together with bracelet and ring of unusual workmanship which are well accented against the black of her simple dress.

Soft tweeds, as noted below to the left in the group, make a stunning background for jewels. Here a gold clip with sprays of rubies accents a heather and ruby tweed dress. The bracelet of flexible gold links and gold balls encircled by square-cut rubies is matched by the earrings.

For bridge or informal dinners a black chiffon dress as shown below to the right achieves a sophisticated and perfect background for diamond and platinum jewelry. Earrings? Of course! For earrings are a fashion "must." They are tiny hoops of diamonds. A diamond clip brooch together with flexible platinum bracelet with diamond buckle add infinite style prestige. The only note of color is a resplendent cocktail ring of diamonds and rubies.

New Shape Handbag

Handbag designers continue to present new ideas. Here is the long handbag, low and wide at the base. It interprets a very new silhouette. Inside is a smart detail in the jewel-like wire zipper which protects the safety pocket. A bag with the "new" look like this will impart infinite chic to your winter costume.

Girdle Treatments

New frocks of the slenderizing type have wrapped hips done in gypsy girdle manner. Sometimes the girdle is draped with streamers to the front ending in a deep fringe finish.

Braiding, Quilted Designs Popular

Winter fashions display extreme enrichment in decorative detail worked out in lavish braiding, colorful embroidery and very interesting quilted design.

Many dressmaker suits have jackets that are allover braided in soutache. Braided sleeves and pockets add charm to many of this season's sheer wool dresses.

Evening sweaters and the new long-torso jerkins are all aglitter with all over sequin embroidery. Very new and chic too are draped turbans of fabric that has been colorfully embroidered.

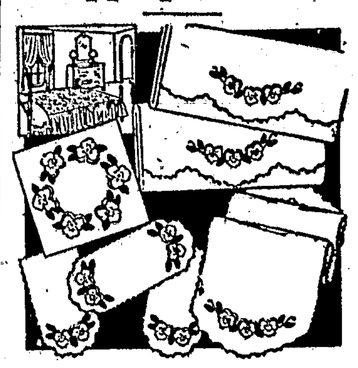
Late Fall Scarfs Are Voluminous

Voluminous evening scarfs made of tulle or chiffon in vivid color are very charming. There is one the full width of the tissue-thin fabric and more than two yards long. Their effectiveness, thrown over bare shoulders when the dress is black or rich dark tone, and extremely decollette is very lovely. It is a grand way to give your black velvet evening dress a dramatic touch and to add the dash of color that flatters.

Tricolor Costume

Tricolor costumes for evening and daytime continue to have the approval of such famous designers as Mainbocher.

Bedroom Ensemble of Appliqued Pansies



Transfer No. Z9105

A NEW note is attained in this captivating pansy bedroom ensemble. For, besides the usual scarf, vanity and pillow slip motifs, there is a circle of pansies just right for a quilt block.

Yellows or lavenders, of course, would be most suggestive of real pansies, but any pastel to harmonize with your bedroom could be used. The illustration indicates the use of applique; an equally charming effect might be achieved in embroidery.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PILLS

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

HAWK IN THE WIND

★ by Helen Topping Miller

When Virgie Morgan turned down Wallace Withers' proposal of marriage she started something in the Carolina mountains. There was sabotage at her pulp mill, labor troubles without end, unscrupulous enemies to be dealt with. And, on top of it all, she had to manage a headstrong daughter with gentle hands.

"Hawk in the Wind" is an absorbing novel of love and intrigue. If you've read Helen Topping Miller's "Whispering River," "Let Me Die Tuesday," or her "Storm Over Eden" and "Blue Marigolds," you'll know what to expect.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

$2 EGGS

When my mother went overland in a covered wagon to a new home in the West, the country was just settling up. Transportation was slow, was expensive. Prices of everything were high.

She preserved a newspaper of her girlhood on the frontier, and it interests me occasionally to read the current prices of things you buy every day now for a few cents.

Charles Roth

Eggs were $2 a dozen in those days. Sugar brought 40 cents a pound. Kerosene was $3 a gallon. Candles cost 25 cents apiece.

Compare these prices with the prices you see advertised in your newspaper today and you will see that, although much talk is bandied back and forth concerning the increased cost of living, the fact is that the cost has gone downward consistently since frontier times.

One of the reasons for high prices then was undoubtedly the difficulty with which the supply was obtained—the hazards and expense of transporting goods.

But the chief reason was that the cost of these necessaries could not be spread out over enough customers to bring them at lower cost to all. The merchant had to pay the cost of his business out of sales to a comparatively few customers. Costs had to be high.

Prices on everything you buy today, regardless of whether you live in a village or a large city, would be higher now if it were not for the service of advertising in lowering them to your advantage.

As soon as a manufacturer or a merchant begins to advertise he begins to sell more. As he sells more it costs him less to sell to each customer. He cuts the price. More customers come. Again he is able to cut the price.

Pretty soon you have the situation of improved quality and lower prices, brought about through the creative service of advertising to the consumer.

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

The man who builds a business on advertising can give you more for your money because advertising enables him to give more for less. See how advertising pays you every day.

Greater DRIVER COMFORT

Come in and see what GMC has done to make truck driving easier, safer, and more comfortable! GMC insulated Rider-Ease Cabs are remarkably big and roomy, with lots of leg room for the huskiest driver. The seats are a revelation in buoyant cushioning. The controls are placed just right, so you don't have to stretch to reach them. Even the instrument panels are scientifically grouped for split-second visibility. And GMC front springs are l—o—n—g, to cushion your ride over the roughest road. You'll feel the difference the first mile you drive one of these comfort-built trucks. And you'll discover steering ease that makes driving effortless!

GMC Ball-Bearing Steering in all models!

Now all GMCs, including the half-ton models, have this famous GMC development that insures real "passenger car steering ease." Friction is practically eliminated, through the ingenious use of ball-bearings in place of the conventional steering worm. Its safety has been proved in millions of miles of owner service in medium and heavy GMC Trucks.

HAWK IN THE WIND

by HELEN TOPPING MILLER

When the widow, Virgie Morgan, and her daughter, Marian, decided to manage a pulp mill in the Carolina mountains they could not foresee the troubles ahead of them. But through all those harrowing days the widow watched understandingly as Marian's pride kept her from admitting her love for a fine young man.

The story moves briskly from start to finish, while alternate threads of romance and intrigue run through it. You'll enjoy Helen Topping Miller's great new novel immensely. Don't miss it!

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

$2 EGGS

WHEN my mother went overland in a covered wagon to a new home in the West, the country was just settling up. Transportation was slow, was expensive. Prices of everything were high.

She preserved a newspaper of her girlhood on the frontier, and it interests me occasionally to read the current prices of things you buy every day now for a few cents.

Eggs were $2 a dozen in those days. Sugar brought 40 cents a pound. Kerosene was $3 a gallon. Candles cost 25 cents apiece.

Charles Roth

Compare these prices with the prices you see advertised in your newspaper today and you will see that, although much talk is bandied back and forth concerning the increased cost of living, the fact is that the cost has gone downward consistently since frontier times.

One of the reasons for high prices then was undoubtedly the difficulty with which the supply was obtained—the hazards and expense of transporting goods.

But the chief reason was that the cost of these necessaries could not be spread out over enough customers to bring them at lower cost to all. The merchant had to pay the cost of his business out of sales to a comparatively few customers. Costs had to be high.

Prices on everything you buy today, regardless of whether you live in a village or a large city, would be higher now if it were not for the service of advertising in lowering them to your advantage.

As soon as a manufacturer or a merchant begins to advertise he begins to sell more. As he sells more it costs him less to sell to each customer. He cuts the price. More customers come. Again he is able to cut the price.

Pretty soon you have the situation of improved quality and lower prices, brought about through the creative service of advertising to the consumer.

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

The man who builds a business on advertising can give you more for your money because advertising enables him to give more for less. See how advertising pays you every day.

Greater DRIVER COMFORT

Come in and see what GMC has done to make truck driving easier, safer, and more comfortable! GMC insulated Rider-Ease Cabs are remarkably big and roomy, with lots of leg room for the huskiest driver. The seats are a revelation in buoyant cushioning. The controls are placed just right, so you don't have to stretch to reach them. Even the instrument panels are scientifically grouped for split-second visibility. And GMC front springs are I—o—n—g, to cushion your ride over the roughest road. You'll feel the difference the first mile you drive one of these comfort-built trucks. And you'll discover steering ease that makes driving effortless!

GMC Ball-Bearing Steering in all models!

Now all GMCs, including the half-ton models, have this famous GMC development that insures real "passenger car steering ease." Friction is practically eliminated, through the ingenious use of ball-bearings in place of the conventional steering worm. Its safety has been proved in millions of miles of owner service in medium and heavy GMC Trucks.

HAWK IN THE WIND
by HELEN TOPPING MILLER

When the widow, Virgie Morgan, and her daughter, Marian, decided to manage a pulp mill in the Carolina mountains they could not foresee the troubles ahead of them. But through all those harrowing days the widow watched understandingly as Marian's pride kept her from admitting her love for a fine young man.

The story moves briskly from start to finish, while alternate threads of romance and intrigue run through it. You'll enjoy Helen Topping Miller's great new novel immensely. Don't miss it!

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Close in, in the critical diplomatic huddle at Ankara is our John Van A. MacMurray, ambassador to Turkey. A veteran career diplomat, Mr. MacMurray might have been a star reporter. He has a gimlet mind and is a diligent digger and researcher. While our state department may not have much to say about what happens in Turkey and the Balkans, it will surely have the record, when it all becomes history.

Our Ambassador To Turkey Is a Grim Fact Chaser

As minister to China, Mr. MacMurray studied the country and its people so diligently that his friends said he began to look like a Chinese. There was the matter of likin, or Chinese import taxes. No other western diplomat had worrried much about them. Mr. MacMurray completely surrounded them.

He is the world's greatest authority on the subject. When he left his post in China after five years, he had compiled two stupendous volumes on the general theme of "Rights and Obligations of China From 1894 to 1919." These were only small details of his encyclopedic roundup of knowledge of the Far East. That being the case, they shifted him. Which is a reminder that this writer has a friend, a career diplomat, who learned Chinese and amassed such information in eight years in China, and was shifted to Geneva last year to be replaced in Peking by a young man starting from scratch.

With all his grim fact-chasing Mr. MacMurray has, like all good diplomats, a touch of Dale Carnegie about him—that is, he makes friends and influences people. He has a charming, ingenuous smile, when his adding-machine mind is out of gear, and he has been happily placed in the gold-lace maneuvers of our diplomacy.

He was born in Schenectady in 1891, educated at Princeton and Columbia and entered the diplomatic service as secretary of the legation in Siam in 1917. He became head of the far eastern division and minister to China in 1925. In 1930 he became minister to Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, and minister to Turkey in 1937. Many big issues of international politics seem to have gone the way of Chinese likin, and of Estonia et al, but whatever they are, or were, Mr. MacMurray knows about them.

WHEN Capt. Henry Harwood defeated the Graf Spee pocket battleship, off Montevideo last December, the home office flashed a message in which he learned he was a knight and an admiral. "Thank you, boys," he wig-wagged to his three British cruisers, as a sporting gesture in which he gave credit where it was due. He had had 37 years in the navy without a swing of the spotlight in his direction. But the victory over the Graf Spee started songs in the Drury lane musical halls about "Hadmiral Ennery Arwood"—a natural—and now he's almost the ruler of the king's navee because he took the measure of the big Graf Spee. It doesn't quite scan, but he gets the job as assistant chief of the naval staff, and member of the board of the admiralty.

'Hadm. Arwood' May Yet Inspire Kiplingese Lines

It was as a lad of 14 that he first climbed the rigging of the old wooden training ship Britannica. He moved on up through routine grades and in the World war was a torpedo boat lieutenant. In the years between wars, he was with the fleet in South America, China and the Mediterranean, known as a courageous and resourceful officer, but never in the headlines or in the British Who's Who.

He is thickset, square-jawed and ruddy of countenance, planted on the bridge as though he had taken root there and meant to stay. This war hasn't inspired any clanging, inspiriting Kiplingesque lines, but Admiral Harwood may yet touch them off. Ashore he has spent much time in staff training. He has two sons in their early teens, who expect someday to "climb the rigging like their father used to do."

AS A "man against death" Dr. James Ewing has been in the trenches for years in the world war against cancer. A medal is conferred by the New York City Cancer committee for "outstanding work during the year in the campaign to control cancer."

He is director of the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases, a world leader in the battle against the scourge of modern times. He voices hope, but ruthlessly limits his conclusions to demonstrable fact.

AFTER THE FOOTBALL GAME
See Recipes Below.

If you are entertaining the crowd after the game, you'll find substantial refreshments in favor; for the same crisp air that puts football players on their toes breeds keen appetites.

It's good social strategy to arrange everything buffet style and let the guests help themselves. You'll want a table that is festive, easy to handle, and yet casual. You may even want to set up card tables in the living room to make your guests comfortable after they have helped themselves from the buffet.

Natural colored linen, or rough homespun cloth will make a smart background for your serving table. Candles are often used very effectively, when serving buffet style, for they add both atmosphere and light.

If you double as hostess and chief cook, you'll enjoy the game twice as much if you plan a menu that can be prepared beforehand. Sandwich makings and a hot steaming beverage are a wise choice. Then wind up the feast with ice cream and chocolate cake.

Frankfurter Sandwich.

Boil or steam large frankfurters until tender and juicy. Slice thin on white or rye bread and serve with mustard sauce and hot potato salad. Garnish with pickle.

Hot Potato Salad.
(Serves 6)

6 medium-sized potatoes
4 slices bacon (minced)
1 medium-sized onion (sliced)
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
¼ cup water
½ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook potatoes in jackets. Cool, skin, and slice. Pan broil minced bacon, then saute onion in bacon drippings until brown. Combine and heat water, vinegar, sugar, salt, and pepper. Add to mixture in frying pan, and mix with potatoes. Place in baking dish and heat in moderate oven (350 degrees) before serving.

Egg Meringue Surprise Sandwich.
(Serves 6)

6 slices bread
¼ cup butter (melted)
¼ pound sharp cheese
6 eggs
Salt and pepper
6 slices bacon

Trim slices of bread and brush one side with melted butter. Place buttered side down on a cookie sheet. Cut cheese into strips about ¼ inch in thickness. Arrange them, side by side, or fence-like on the bread. Separate eggs and drop one egg yolk in the center of each slice of bread. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Whip egg whites until stiff and dry, and pile high on top, completely covering the egg and cheese. Cut the slices of bacon into halves and place two halves on each sandwich right across the egg white. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the egg white is brown and the bacon is crisp.

Silver Cake.
(Makes 1 loaf cake)

¾ cup butter
1½ cups granulated sugar
2¾ cups cake flour (sifted)
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 egg whites (stiffly beaten)

Cream butter, add sugar and beat well. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, and add to sugar and butter mixture. Mix well, and place in refrigerator. When desired for use, remove mixture from refrigerator. Break up lumps with fork. Add milk and vanilla, and beat until mixture is smooth and creamy. Then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased loaf cake tin, and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) for about 50 minutes.

Chocolate Peppermint Frosting.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
8 marshmallows (cut in quarters)
Few drops oil of peppermint

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk, stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes, or until the mixture thickens. Add marshmallows, and stir until they begin to melt. Remove from heat and add peppermint. Cool. Spread on cold cake. This frosting covers tops of 2 9-inch layers or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

Vanilla Ice Cream.
(Makes 1 quart)

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks (well beaten)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream

Scald milk, reserving ½ cup. Mix and blend the sugar, flour, and salt, and mix to a smooth paste with the cold milk which was reserved. Add this mixture to the scalded milk and cook, stirring constantly until thick in a double boiler for 15 minutes. Add egg yolks which have been well beaten and cook, stirring constantly, 3 minutes longer. Add vanilla and chill. Fold in the whipping cream which has been whipped, place in ice cream freezer and freeze, using 3 parts ice to 1 part rock salt.

Sausages in Pastry Blankets.
(Makes 8 sausage rolls)

1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder
⅓ cup shortening
3 tablespoons cold water (approximately)
8 pork sausages

Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Blend in the shortening. Then add just enough water to form a dough, mixing lightly. Roll out and cut into 8 oblong pieces, each sufficiently large to wrap around one link of sausage. Place individual sausages (well pricked) on individual pieces of pastry; fold ends over and roll up. Place folded side down on a baking sheet. Prick crust with a fork. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 30 minutes. Serve very hot.

Better Baking.

The smell of baking cookies and cakes will soon be permeating the house. Fruit cakes will be baked, packed and stored carefully, until the time they are to be used for gifts. "Better Baking" includes fruit cake recipes which have been thoroughly tested in Miss Howe's own kitchens. This cook book also contains many good cookie recipes, from old-fashioned Ginger Cookies to Fudge Drops.

If you are planning on giving cookies and fruit cakes to your friends as gifts, it will be wise to write for "Better Baking" now. Start your baking early, and avoid the last minute rush. You may secure your copy of this cook book by writing to "Better Baking" care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and enclosing 10 cents in coin.

FIRST AID TO ILL HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman

Worn and Soiled Floor.

QUESTION: About 10 years ago we put down a hardwood floor and stained it dark. It has been waxed a number of times each year. It has worn in spots. Can I use anything on these spots, or must I scrape the whole floor? The floor looks soiled and I can't seem to get it clean.

Answer: As a first step in doing over your floor, you should wipe well with turpentine to remove all of the wax. It is very probable that much of the dirt is in the wax, and this treatment will go far to restoring the appearance. With the wax removed, you can touch up the light spots with oil stain. Apply a coat and wipe off immediately, and continue until with successive applications, the color matches the surrounding floor. You should then finish with two coats of good floor varnish before rewaxing. Without varnish, dirt going into the wax will work through to the wood. With varnish this cannot happen.

Warped Bedroom Door.

Question: I built my house last fall, and now find that the door to one of the bedrooms is badly warped. The top corner does not come within an inch of closing when the door is shut. Can I do anything about this?

Answer: A door with any claim to quality should be built so that it is proof against warping, and warping is something that would justify a complaint to the dealer. In the long run it will be better to replace your warped door with one that is warp-proof, because even after it has been straightened, it may not stay so. A cabinet maker could do the job for you, by putting the door in a press, after which he would run heavy dowels into it to hold it straight. But a new door of well-seasoned wood is the best answer.

Soapstone Tub Troubles.

Question: My soapstone tub leaks at one of the joints, and in one place it is rough. What can be done about this?

Answer: Widen the crack with a cold chisel, so that it is wider at the lower, or inside, part of the crack than on the surface. Fill the space with litharge, to be had at a paint store, mixed to a stiff paste with glycerine. Mix this up only a little at a time, for it hardens quickly. Pack this into the crack.

Another method is to pack the crack with soft cotton string or lamp wicking, smeared with white lead. Allow several days for drying before using the tub.

To smooth the rough place, rub with a block of carborundum, which you can get at a hardware or paint store.

Stained Floor.

Question: In the case of a much stained flooring, we have been advised that the stain, due to general neglect, can be removed by washing with water containing soda. Is this correct?

Answer: A strong solution of washing soda or trisodium phosphate will remove the finish, but if the stains are in the wood, only a saturated solution of oxalic acid will bleach it out, after the finish has been removed. A floor finish that is in poor condition and badly stained should be scraped with a floor sanding machine, then refinished.

Sidewall Shingles.

Question: A certain company is suggesting asphalt shingles for the upper half of my house and asbestos cement shingles for the lower half. Also, something is said about asphalt sheeting under the shingles. Would an all asbestos job be preferable to the above arrangement?

Answer: My preference would be for an all asbestos shingle finish, from the standpoint of appearance and durability. Asphalt saturated felt is always used under asbestos shingle siding.

Food Moths.

Question: I find moths in my packages of cereals and crackers, which I keep in my kitchen closet. What should I do to get rid of them?

Answer: Those moths thrive in dried food of all kinds. Boxes of food that have been opened or broken should be thrown out. Clear off the shelves and scrub thoroughly with hot soapsuds. All cereals, nuts, crackers, spaghetti, etc., should be kept in tight containers; tin boxes or tightly capped glass jars.

Gold Leaf Frame.

Question: The gold leaf on an old-fashioned mirror frame has been rubbed off in spots. I should like to know if there is some liquid preparation that I could use to cover the whole frame.

Answer: At your local art store you can get what is generally called a bronzing liquid. It comes in a variety of gold finishes and can be easily brushed on.

Texas Under 6 Flags

Texas has lived under six different flags — French, Spanish, Mexican, Texas Republic, Confederate and United States. First flag to fly over the area that is now Texas and parts of New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming was the French tricolor, from 1684 to 1763. In 1687 the Spanish began to gain control and from 1763 to 1821 it was under the Spanish flag. Mexico gained her independence from Spain in 1821 and from then until 1836 Texas was under the Mexican flag. Then Texas revolted and from 1836 to 1845 it was under the flag of the Texas Republic.

The Texas Republic was admitted to the Union as a state in 1845. During the Civil war Texas flew the Confederate flag.—Pathfinder.

Patterns — Sewing Circle

HERE'S real lullaby luxury, for yourself and the lucky friends to whom you give it—this bedtime ensemble comprising a high-waisted nightie that's lovely as a dance frock, and a sweet little bed jacket. Send for design No. 1228-B, and make it up in fine, sheer batiste, chiffon, georgette or—if the cold wind sweeps through your bedroom—of challis or albatross. It will look as though you had squandered a shameful amount of your clothes allowance, but it will in reality cost very little.

This is an extremely easy design to make—the jacket is cut in two pieces and seamed on the shoulders; the nightie requires merely two long seams and a few gathers.

Joy the Mainspring

Joy is the mainspring in the whole round of everlasting nature; joy moves the wheels of the great timepiece of the world; she it is that loosens flowers from their buds, suns from their firmaments, rolling spheres in distant space seen not by the glass of the astronomer.—Schiller.

MAL-DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME CAUSES "HARD TIMES"

(LABOR)

This week Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's Monopoly Investigating Committee made public one of the most important reports ever issued by any governmental agency.

Entitled "Concentration of Income," it provides statistical proof that organized labor is right in maintaining that too much income in a few hands, and too little purchasing power in the hands of the masses of our people, are the main cause of depression and other economic troubles.

* * * * *

The report was compiled from income tax records and other authoritative sources by Department of Commerce economists, who are so conservative that in the past their statistics have sometimes been used by the enemies of organized labor.

By exhaustive studies, these economists determined the total income distributed in the United States in each of the years from 1918 through 1937, how many persons shared this income, and how much of it went to the few who got the most.

In general, they found that the few get a larger and larger share of the total income, and the many get a smaller and smaller share, as times improve and the total income gets bigger and bigger.

* * * * *

These are immensely significant facts. They are exactly in line with labor's claim that increasing concentration of income in a few hands, in times of comparative prosperity, causes depression by depriving the masses of the purchasing power necessary to keep the wheels of industry turning.

All this is proved again and again in the report's 112 pages of fine print and numerous tables of figures. Only a few examples can be given here.

* * * * *

The number of persons who received incomes rose from 40,161,000 in 1918 to 50,024,000 in 1937.

In 1918, the total income was $59,119,000,000, and 12.70 cents of each $1 went to the 1 percent of our people who had the largest incomes.

By 1928, the total income had risen to $82,493,000,000, and 19.26 cts of each $1 went to the 1 percent at the top.

The crash came in 1929. In 1931, the share of the fortunate 1 per cent of those who had income was down to 13.72 cents of each $1.

* * * * *

Unfortunately, this table and all other statistics in the report omit figures for 1932 and 1933, the bottom years of the depression. The reason given is that the figures for those two years are "not comparable" because a change was made in "the treatment of capital gains and losses" for income taxes and statistics.

* * * * *

In 1934, the top 1 per cent got 12.66 cents of each $1. With partial economic recovery, their share rose to 14.53 cents in 1936, and the country slid into a drastic "recession" late in 1937.

Always as the country nosed out of "hard times" and prosperity seemed in sight, the very rich began "hogging" the profits of industry, with the inevitable result that depression reared its ugly head again.

For example, the share of the highest 2 per cent of the income recipients rose by 35 per cent from 1924 through 1928, while the share of the highest one-tenth of 1 per cent—that is, one cent of a thousand—rose by 75 per cent.

The supreme task before the American statesmen is to reverse this ruinous process. And that is the only way to "make Democracy work."

National Defense

Daniel C. Hoan, former mayor of Milwaukee, will speak on the relationship of national defense to municipalities at the national convention of the American Municipal association to be held in Chicago November 13 to 15.

Expressive Gestures

Highly emotional people frequently express themselves by gestures. Primitive man used gestures to make himself understood, as languages were simple and did not express the full meaning he wanted to convey. Gesturing as an accompaniment to speech seems to be more natural and inherent in the Latin races, and may be termed a racial characteristic.

Body of Tall Men

The association which is composed of tall men is called the National Society of Long Fellows. It was organized in the spring of 1937, for the purpose of giving publicity to the needs of exceptionally tall people in the war of special accommodation.
