"WE Pledge Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible with Liberty and Justice for all."

Benjamin Dow

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dow heard from their oldest son, Benjamin Dow, last week. Ben is now in Osaki, Japan, and has been a prisoner of the Japs since his ship was sunk off Manila bay. Ben had been in the Navy several months before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Mr. and Mrs. Dow have five more sons in the service besides Ben. They are Gene, Jr., Sam, Ralph, Orville and Earl.

Announcement

The Marine Corps has recently authorized the enlistment of a very considerable number of boys who are between 17 and 18 years of age, and we are anxious to have the boys in your community informed of the fact. We have been compelled to turn down a considerable number of boys in the past because there were no vacancies, and now that we are able to accept enlistments, we would greatly appreciate an announcement of the fact by your publication. Boys who are interested may apply in person or by mail to U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting Stations in either Santa Fe or Albuquerque.

James E. Watkins,
1st. Lieut. USMCR.

Talk About Rationing!

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 25th—Pfc. Christobal B. Zamora, U. S. Marine Corps, of Lincoln, N. M., carried his appetite into battle in the Solomon Islands and found it "as good as a compass" for locating food. Pfc. Zamora spent ten months overseas, Guadalcanal, Florida, Tulagi and Tanambogo—and went hungry most of the time. "Hunger became the mother of invention," he said, "so we soon learned to use vegetation on the islands for additional food supply." "We learned to cook Japanese rice with red peppers. We learned to strip the 'cabbage trees' and use the heart for food, boiling it in sea water for seasoning. We found a sweet potato patch one day and made it last as long as possible. We tried fishing with hand grenades, and one Marine made a fish hook from bailing wire, but we just couldn't get fish."

Pfc. Zamora is convalescing from malaria at a Naval hospital here.

Application Filed to Abandon Carrizozo-Capitan Branch Railroad

Application to abandon the Capitan branch line from a point near Carrizozo Junction to Capitan, a distance of approximately twenty miles, has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the E. P. & S. W. Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, it was announced today.

Traffic over this branch, owned by E. P. & S. W. and operated by Southern Pacific, does not justify its continued maintenance and operation, and further, the application states, its abandonment will enable the recovery of vitally needed material.

Freight service only is given over the Capitan branch twice a week and the shipments now being handled by rail can readily move by common carrier truck and by private and contract haulers over the paved highway paralleling the line, it is pointed out.

The Capitan branch was constructed by the El Paso & Northeastern Railway Company in 1897, primarily to afford rail transportation to a coal field formerly operated at Capitan. It was acquired by the E. P. & S.W. upon dissolution of the E. P. & N. E. in 1937. The E. P. & S. W. is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Southern Pacific Company.

Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Karr of El Paso, Texas, are the proud parents of a son born Monday, August 23, 1943. The Karrs lived here until about a year ago when they moved to El Paso, where Mr. Karr is employed by the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sandfer and son of Tinnie were business visitors in Carrizozo last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Norman arrived Wednesday evening from Hot Springs, where Mr. Norman took advantage of the baths.

Lieut. and Mrs. Bradley Smith spent last Monday in Roswell visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jobie McPherson and Tuesday they visited Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Hobbie and M/Sgt. Theodore Hobbie in Ruidoso.

Several inductees will leave next Sunday evening for the Fort Bliss Reception Center, where they will begin their military career. Best of luck.

Pvt. Reuben Sedillo is home on furlough from Watsonville, California. He is a son of Mrs. Benigna Sedillo.

Sgt. Fletcher Hall of Capitan arrived home this week. Sgt. Hall has been in North Africa.

Juvenile Delinquency

AND ITS PROBLEMS

The problem of juvenile delinquency has been on the increase since we have been engaged in the present war, not only here but all over the nation. My primary interest is our local problem and I have made quite a study of conditions existing and causing this delinquency here and it has come to my attention that about 80 percent of our juvenile delinquency problems are caused by minors drinking liquor in one form or another.

This letter is written both, as a warning and for the purpose of asking you to cooperate in this matter. As you know, there is a severe penalty for selling liquor of any kind to a person under the age of 21 years. We contemplate calling a grand jury this year in each county of this district to investigo into certain existing conditions.

In case you entertain a doubt as to the age of any of your patrons, you now have a very excellent way of determining whether a person is under age by asking the person to let you see his selective service registration card. If the person has one, his age will be on it, and if he doesn't have one, you will know that he is under 18 years of age, as all males over 18 are required to register. Another suggestion along this line is: You might warn those who are buying package liquor, especially those you suspect of buying liquor for minors, that we now have a new law passed by the last session of the legislature providing that contributing to the delinquency of a minor is a felony and punishable by not more than five years in the state penitentiary, and furnishing liquor to a minor is considered contributing to juvenile delinquency.

I wish to make my position clear in this matter at this time. I am asking you to cooperate, but this will be the only time I will solicit this, as in the future whenever I have concrete evidence in connection with any establishment selling liquor in any form to a minor, I am going to prosecute that person to the full extent of the law. A copy of this letter is being sent to every liquor establishment in the third judicial district.

Very truly yours,
W. T. Scoggin, Jr.,
District Attorney.

SPEAKING of SPORTS

by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

IN HIS rough dismissal of Bucky Harris as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, William D. Cox, club president, showed a remarkable lack of common decency.

That fact was called rather forcibly to Cox's attention when the Philadelphia players issued an ultimatum which forced the president to apologize. It had been officially announced that the ouster followed action of the club's board of directors. But inasmuch as Harris was a member of the board it was obvious that the move was taken on a quorum basis. Harris could not be expected to take part in his own dismissal.

Bucky Harris

The disagreement between Cox and Harris was a long time growing. Cox was a newcomer to the baseball world. The early success of the Phillies spoiled him. They gave him a false slant on his material and caused him to raise his financial hopes beyond all reason. He couldn't understand it when the team slumped and the crowds fell off.

When Cox saw his club take six straight toward the end of May and then draw 37,176 at a Sunday double header with the Pirates, it gave him a too-optimistic feeling about the whole thing.

Unhappy Day!

Then the Phillies lost six in a row and 10 out of 13. Newcomer Cox was distinctly unhappy.

All during the time the Phils were playing over their heads, Harris, ever a realist, didn't permit himself to believe his club was going far beyond fifth place. He attempted to tell Cox that he didn't have enough good ball players. Cox couldn't believe that.

One of baseball's most able observers, Shirley Povich of the Washington Post, said in a recent column that Cox was far too devoted to rah-rah tactics. In part, Povich said:

"Harris discovered that Cox was calling in players for inspirational pep talks and invaded the dressing room at will. Cox once wanted to deliver a lecture on the bench, but Harris talked him out of it. Cox wasn't doing the team or Harris any good by sitting in a box seat and hurling insults at the umpires, either. The man meant well, but it was no way to run a ball team.

"Before the season started, Cox got some grandiose ideas about his Phillies. He thought about calling them the 'Commandos,' a name that would have made the perennial last-place club even more ridiculous. He told Harris that he wanted Commando training for the players in the spring along with their hitting and fielding practice. Harris didn't like it."

Critics Answered

Harris has a reputation for being one of the most patient managers baseball has ever known. When the Phillies chose to come to the support of Harris in his war with Cox it answered the critics who failed or refused to understand why baseball's wise men regard Bucky as a good manager. They knew he wasn't getting a fair shake.

Fred Fitzsimmons, the former Brooklyn pitcher named to manage the Phils, is a well liked player, but his ability as a manager is unknown. Harris proved his capabilities during 19 years of managing big-league teams.

Fitzsimmons has two heart-breaking jobs ahead of him. He must try to suit Cox, who has proved his inexperience, and he must make something out of the Philadelphia club. Either job requires the patience of a Job and the wisdom of a Solomon.

For a while the Phillies were giving more than they were able to and time found them out. They got by on hustle and near-desperation. That were off and they were no longer able to tear themselves to pieces. Cox couldn't realize that. He was wearing rose-colored glasses and believed there were no rough spots or detours on the road to success. Harris realized—all to well—that the club had definite limitations. He knew the day of miracles had passed.

Cox, a Johnny-come-lately, allowed himself to be stampeded into ill-advised action. Only time—and a reasonable amount of common sense—can remedy the situation. Time, in his case, is not the important factor.

Value of a painting often depends on whose nail it hangs from. None of these celebrities have played vaudeville, so there is little danger that their little masterpieces are plagiarisms on the "Berle-Youngman-Jessel" school. Here are some favorite jokes of famous people:

AL SMITH:

A citizen attended his first political jamboree. He wasn't there long before somebody copped his watch. He reported it to the district leader, who whispered: "Next to which guy was you standin' last?" Victim pointed to a fellow in the center. "Just don't say nothin' and it'll be O.K." In a few minutes the leader handed the watch over to its owner. "What did he say?" asked the grateful man. "Sh-h-h—quiet—he don't know I got it!"

MAYOR LA GUARDIA:
(Tells this one on himself)

Two Soviet representatives arrived at City Hall. Instead of the expected and accepted costumes of Stalinites, they wore high hats, etc. They looked at LaGuardia, in baggy everydays, and all he could say was: "Gentlemen, I represent the Proletariat!"

FANNIE HURST:

A dapper fellow walked into a bakery and ordered a special cake: "I want it 55 inches in diameter—nine layers—seven colored frostings. In the center, I want my initials, R. N. I want it as soon as possible." "I'll have it for you in a week," was the answer. On the appointed day, he called, inspected the cake: "It isn't exactly the way I want it—change the yellow frosting to orchid." On the second inspection, the fellow was delighted: "Perfect—perfect." "Where shall I send it, sir?" "No place—I'll eat it here!"

BERNARD SHAW:

When Lionel Barrymore was scheduled to appear in "Macbeth," there was much doubt among New York ticket brokers whether to "buy in" before the opening. McBride was the leading broker. All the "specs" were on hand for the premier. Lionel floundered through the part. Then came the big moment—his shout "Lay On MacDuff!" Came the answer, from the rear of the house: "Lay on, McBride!"

JIM FARLEY:

Joe Louis, in the Polo Grounds, finished an opponent in a few seconds of the first round. After the victim got in his dressing-room, he didn't say a word—he was still out. He dressed and his manager escorted him to the street. It was raining. The pug put out his hand and moaned: "Gee, this will hurt the gate receipts!" "Oh," cracked the manager, "I forgot to tell you—the fight was called off!"

JIMMY WALKER:

A hillbilly called on a girl for a year. Finally, her father flagged him: "Time I asked you something—are your intentions to my daughter honorable or dishonorable?" "You mean I have a choice?" queried the hillbilly.

ILKA CHASE:

A young radical refused to work. His old man let him have it: "Fine bum—why don't you go to work and make some money?" "Aha, I'm glad you brought that up. It'll come the revolution and we'll have a Utopia—we won't need the money!" "But why don't you go to work and make $50,000—when it comes the revolution, then you can help them with it." "Aha—suppose it don't come the revolution—then I'm stuck with $50,000."

MARC CONNOLLY:

When Caesar tried to take Ireland, he was repulsed by Clancy and Finnegan. Caesar returned with more legions—again was pushed back. Julius was now really mad. He gathered the full might of his armies and navies and started for Ireland again. This time, Clancy and Finnegan were careless. Sitting on a raft, they were surrounded, captured after a terrible struggle and brought to the Forum, as captives. Caesar threw the pair into the arena against 500 gladiators. Clancy and Finnegan mowed them down. Caesar burned. He ordered them to fight 2,000 lions. This day the crowd really turned out. As Caesar and his retinue entered the arena, Clancy pointed: "See that beautiful blonde with Caesar? Well, this morning, she looked at me and"—just then there was a mighty roar—"Sorry, Finnegan, here come the lions—I'll have to tell you the rest later!"

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT:

Ailing gentleman ambled into a doctor's office: "I'm having trouble with my eyesight and hearing." "Are you a drinking man?" "Yes, doctor." "That's it—stop drinking at once, report to me in a month." A month later he reported: "Doc, I still have trouble with my eyesight and hearing." "Did you stop drinking as I told you?" "Nope—what I've been drinking is so much better than what I've been seeing and hearing lately I decided to keep it up!"

Locksmiths Are Few

Although there are 50,000 establishments in the United States which can duplicate a key, there are only 2,000 bona fide locksmiths who have mastered the secrets of all lock combinations. There are no schools for locksmiths, no trade or correspondence courses. The art of locksmithing usually is passed on from father to son, and the secrets of the profession are carefully guarded. Locksmithing requires great skill and sometimes courage, particularly when a safe must be opened after being "spiked" with nitroglycerin by unsuccessful thieves.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

It did have a bearing on rubber use—the close to 24 billion gallons of gasoline used by highway vehicles in 1941. California led the states with a mark on the edge of 2 billion gallons. These are numbers for the "A" card holder to conjure with.

Tires for our fighting aircraft consume from 35 to 96 pounds of rubber, depending on the size of the plane. Inner tubes take from 24 to 54½ pounds.

At a rubber plantation in Haiti, a 75-foot tree was pulled to the ground by the weight of cryptostegia vines which had fought one another to climb it.

New Mexico State Fair

At its regular session in Albuquerque, July 23, the New Mexico State Fair Commission, in completing plans for the 1943 Fair, September 26 through October 3, approved appropriations for the largest cash premiums for livestock and farm competitive displays ever offered in the state. Cash awards for beef and dairy cattle, swine, sheep, goats and poultry were increased materially, as were the awards for farm, orchard and garden crops. These were further increased by contributions from every major national association of registered breeders in the United States.

"The Commission feels", said Chairman H. B. Sellers, "that we must do our utmost to stimulate food production in 1944. We can do it only by improved livestock breeding and better range and farming efforts and methods. The cooperation of the great breeder organizations is not only recognition of the value of the New Mexico Fair, but also of its usefulness in stimulating production next year, when food will be most urgently needed."

The Commission completed plans for all entertainment features at the fair. Contracts were signed with Beutler Brothers, of Elk City, Okla., for six nights of rodeo performances, open to champion riders and ropers of the world; with Dodson's carnival company . . . a 35-car aggregation of attractions . . . ; and the State Fair's first sheep-shearing contest was arranged for. The second annual "Catch-and-Have-It" calf contest for 4 H and FFA boys and girls was approved. The State Fair Commission again will have direct management of the eight-day race meeting. Veteran racing men were employed to handle all details of the meeting. The State Fair racing stables already are filling up and indications are that both in number and quality of horses the coming meeting will set a new standard.

Twelve thousand-four hundred separate cash premiums are listed for livestock, farm and garden products, home arts and home science displays. Premiums range from 50c to $100.00. The total offering is approximately $80,000. Both in number of premiums and in total cash awards offered, new high records are set.

"Attendance at the recent Amarillo rodeo and that at Las Vegas this week furnished convincing evidence that the people are hungry for amusement and that the rodeo remains the most popular form of outdoor entertainment," Harms said.

The 1943 premium book of 240 pages, with two-color cover, is now being distributed. Men and women, boys and girls throughout New Mexico interested in exhibiting are invited to write to Leon H. Harms, Secretary-Manager, P. O. Box 1693, Albuquerque, for a copy of the book and entry blanks. There is no charge.

The Roswell Record carried an item to the effect that unless the Carrizozo electric light plant taxes were paid that the plant would be sold for taxes.

These property taxes are for the calendar year 1942, the year that the plant was purchased by the city from private owners. The 1942 taxation was not assessed and payable until after the city assumed control of the plant.

It is recognized that the procedure exercised is the usual procedure in such cases, and as such, is expected to be rectified at an early date.

Christmas Packages For Prisoners of War And Other Men Overseas

Many anxious friends and relatives of our Service men and women who are held in prison and internment camps will be glad to know that they may send them Christmas packages, and the authorities have directed that orders must be placed between September 15 and October 15, 1943, in order to be delivered in time.

The National Red Cross has authorized chapters to receive contributions with which to purchase standard packages of identified and unidentified prisoners of war. Those wishing to avail themselves of this offer to send a Christmas gift may make their donation to the Chapter Chairman, Mrs. Dewey Stokes of Carrizozo, New Mexico, or to the following volunteer workers in your community.

Mrs. W. R. Belden, Corona
Mrs. W. E. Knott, Jr., Three Rivers
Mrs. Kivas Tully, Picacho
Mrs. W. A. Hart, Ruidoso
Mrs. Perry Sears, Capitan
Mrs. Lola Stueland, Ft. Stanton

You will find the regulations governing the size and contents of packages posted on the bulletin board in your postoffice.

Please give the Service man's full name, rank, number of prisoner, nationality, prison camp, country and the donor's name, so that a copy of the order may be sent as a receipt.

Donors may not order more than one package for each prisoner at a time.

SEPT 15 to NOV. 1 has been designated as the period for mailing gifts to Naval and Marine Corps personnel overseas. Parcels must not weigh over 5 pounds or exceed 15 inches in length and girth of the package combined.

American Legion Phonograph Record Drive

A one-day trip on a train is a hard task. Think of thirty-five days on a transport. Just one record of American music would be worth a month's pay. Let's see that they have those records. The American Legion "more records for our fighting men" campaign will do it. Our men on the battlefront are making great sacrifices that we at home may be safe.

We have our radios, our movies, and our players, but those men on the fronts have nothing unless they can get a few records to play. Send them now to the American Legion. Let's draft every old record in town and county and send it to war.

The Lincoln County News is headquarters for "More Records for our Fighting Men" campaign.

Water Camel

Thirst is one enemy of armies and navies that may be frustrated by a generous supply of water. Typhus, another dreaded plague is another enemy that must be subdued in Africa, in the jungle islands of the Pacific.

So the "Lister Bag," more often called the "water camel," or just "camel," is used. The "Lister Bag" is a khaki colored canvas bag having a capacity of about 20 gallons.

It will require many War Bonds to provide enough "camels" for our fighting forces at home and abroad. Yours too! "Back the attack with War Bonds." U.S. Treasury Department

Quoted from a letter . . .

"My conscience hurts me today.

"When I was washing up before getting off the train this morning, I learned that six sailors and three soldiers had sat up all night. These men were making this trip under orders—yet there was no sleeping space available for them.

"When I think of the effort you of Southern Pacific, along with other railroads, are making to care for our service men—and then remember that I obtained a berth that should have gone to a service man—it humiliates me. I was due back for a War Bond meeting today and at the time it seemed important. But compared with taking accommodations away from soldiers and sailors my presence here was highly unessential.

"It has been a good lesson for me. Hereafter I shall travel only when I know I'm not depriving service men of sleeping space . . ."

How's YOUR conscience today?

The letter quoted here came from a western newspaper editor and publisher. This man has a conscience that can't be lulled to sleep by easy self-reassurances.

We hope many other prospective travelers will listen to the "still small voice" of their conscience when it asks questions like these:

How much business and how much pleasure are involved in the train trip I plan? Is it really important for me to visit those relatives back East this war year? Couldn't I get just as much rest and relaxation a little closer to home?

Today the railroad is hard-pressed to find space for essential travelers: People whose trip must be made to keep business and war production going . . . Service men on well-deserved furloughs, possibly the last before combat duty . . . Parents going to visit their son when the latter can't get away from his post. When people travel for pleasure, or other non-essential reasons, they prevent such deserving travelers from getting on the train. Yes, we sincerely mean it when we say: "Don't take the train unless your trip is really NECESSARY."

What Have You To Offer?

An old iron pail is equivalent to three bayonets, a worn-out copper kettle can be converted into 84 rounds of ammunition, and a flatiron will make two steel helmets. An old lawnmower is good for 6 three-inch shells, and one worn-out tractor will supply enough metal for 580 machine guns.

The "Salvage Army" arrived in Carrizozo on August 9. They have thirty qualified drivers, two medical men and a headquarters platoon of ten men in the 'Army' and all the soldiers are well trained in salvage work. They are on the lookout for old plows, axes, hammers, harrows, hay tedders, old coal stoves, pipes, iron railings, wagon wheels, old bathtubs, faucets, car bodies, tires, etc.

Every citizen is urged to make a systematic search from attic to cellar, garage and barn for vital scrap and it is suggested that it be placed at some point easily seen by the soldiers when they come down the road in their trucks, to facilitate collection, possibly near the garage, barn or mailbox.

If you have anything to donate call the News office, Phone 14, and leave your name for Captain Harper and he will call on you.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

In accordance with Chapter 152 Laws of 1939 the Lincoln County Board of Registration examined the Affidavits of Registration and after due notice to each registrant whose registration they proposed to cancel, cancelled a great many affidavits. Among other things affidavits were proposed for cancellation "of all persons so registered and who had not voted at the last two preceding General Elections, as shown by the notation of Election Officials on his affidavit." Any person who has not voted in the last two preceding General Elections or who received a notice of cancellation and did not reply within the ten day period of time must re-register to be entitled to vote in the coming elections.

N.M. Cattlemen to Meet September 27

Albuquerque, July 29, 1943. The next regular meeting of the Executive Board of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association will be held at Albuquerque, on Monday, September 27th, with a brief preliminary meeting the evening of the 26th, E. G. Hayward, Cimarron, President of the Association announced today. More than 300 leading cattlemen, representing all parts of the state are expected to be in attendance at the meeting, Hayward said.

Principal problems today confronting livestock producers include: the acute shortage of supplimental feed together with a record number of cattle on ranges throughout the state and nation; Government regulations and controls which have in many instances resulted in light marketing of cattle, closing down of local packing plants and small distribution of meat; the Livestock and Meat Industry program to solve our wartime meat problems; transportation problems which will occur during the shipping season in the state, and numerous other like situations which demand considerable thought and action on part of cattlemen throughout the state, Hayward said.

Recalling that the first Quarterly Committee meeting of the Association scheduled to be held in June was postponed because cattlemen were too busy with ranch work and because of transportation difficulties, Hayward stated that it is considered necessary and essential that the September meeting be held in order to discuss and iron out many of the serious problems confronting the industry. All cattlemen in the state are invited to take part in the meeting, Hayward said.

Commenting that the State cattlemen's association office had received nearly 300 new applications for membership to be approved at the September meeting, Hayward said the Association's membership would soon total more than 2,500 members, representing ownership of more than 89 per cent of all cattle in the state.

BUYER MEETS SELLER IN OUR AD COLUMNS...

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But some are a little ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well—you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owes its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured.

Such masters as Deahfell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it. But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with refreshing variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, fit for the most critical, delightful to the most naive. You will find the new magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the size same as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. You will find the cover so pleasing to look at as a book jacket. And you will find the contents the most satisfying quarter's worth of good entertainment you have found in many a day. On sale at all good newsstands—25c a copy.

SPECIAL 10c OFFER TO READERS OF LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS

Because we want you to know Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine we will send you a copy of this anthology of the best detective stories new and old—60,000 words of thrilling mysteries—for only 10c, the cost of postage and handling.

Microbes That Save Soldiers' Lives

By J. D. Ratcliff

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Most of us think of microbes in terms of sudden death. But there are good microbes, too. We couldn't live without them. If we didn't have microbes to eat dead vegetation it would pile up and choke off all life. Microbes give us cheese, buttermilk, sauerkraut, pickles, olives. They capture atmospheric nitrogen to enrich the soil and do us a thousand good turns.

Industry is beginning to see tremendous possibilities in microbes—in the yeasts, molds and bacteria. These little creatures are magnificent chemists. They can do jobs which stump the brightest men. They can turn wood into sugar, and sugar into fat. They can convert stuff like corn sugar into resins, gums and vitamins.

These facts account for the quickening interest in the new science of industrial microbiology. And it also accounts for the fact that in the past year or so, this country had built up one of the world's best microbe zoos—so the creatures will be on hand when jobs are found for them.

Microbe 'Zoo.'

This zoo is in Peoria, Ill.—in the department of agriculture's northern regional research laboratory. The zoo contains 1,000 molds, 1,000 yeasts, and 500 varieties of bacteria. The creatures in this zoo are kept in test tubes and flasks instead of cages. Some live in refrigerator rooms, others in closets or incubators.

The hero of the laboratory at the moment is a mold called Penicillium notatum. This mold makes the drug penicillin, which is the most potent weapon against death ever discovered. The new drug, not yet on the market, was discovered by accident by a British research man named Alexander Fleming. He was growing disease-causing bacteria in his laboratory when he noted that a mold had contaminated the plates. More important, he noted that something given off by the mold was killing the bacteria. He started searching for the cause of this bacteria death—and found penicillin.

British doctors found this drug would do almost everything the sulfa drugs would do and a great deal besides. It was the most potent weapon ever found against infection. Penicillin cleared up horrid bone infections and did other jobs. It literally snatched people back from cure death.

Yet there was a catch to all this magnificent life-saving. The mold that produced the drug was inordinately difficult to grow. And it yielded only minute quantities of the drug. Since large quantities of penicillin were desperately needed to treat war wounded, British research men turned to America. Would the Peoria laboratory see what it could do toward finding molds to produce large quantities of the drug? The job was handed to long-faced, pipe-smoking Dr. Andrew Moyer.

Some people have an intuitive sense of knowing what will please children. Moyer has the same flair with molds. He has worked with them 20 years, knows their likes and dislikes. He coddles them with vitamins, beef broth and other things.

'Penicillium' a Slow Grower.

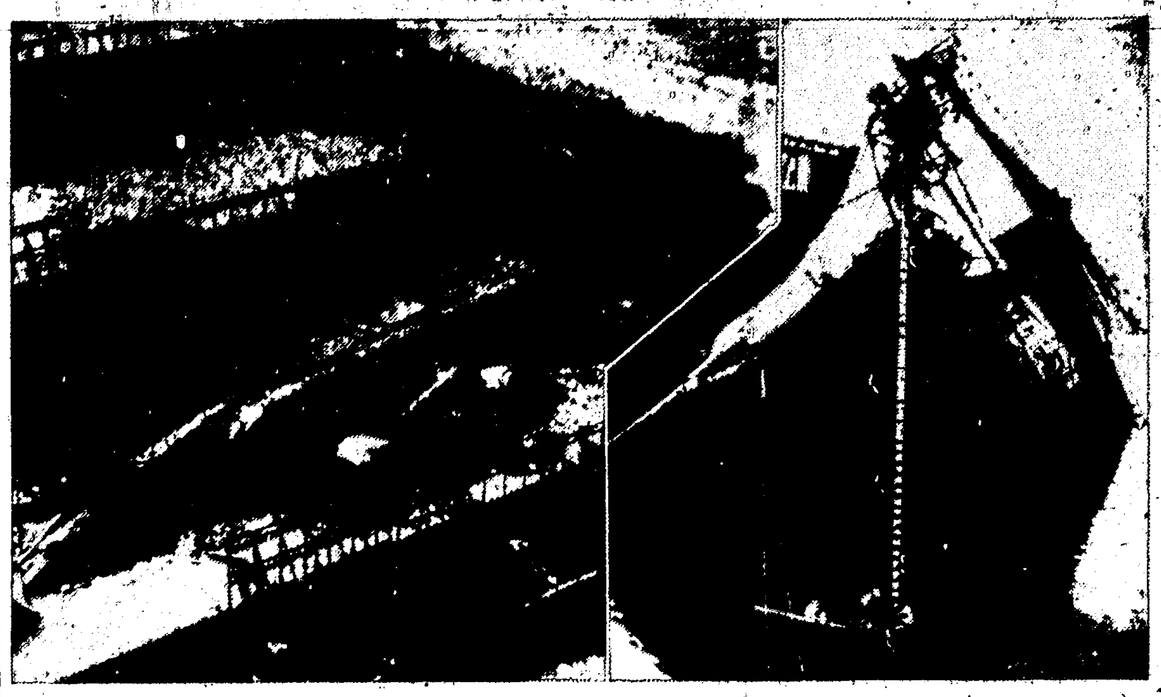
When it was turned over to him, Penicillium notatum was pretty corry stuff. It was difficult to grow. And it produced only two units of penicillin per cubic centimeter. Since a desperately ill human being might require two million units, this was an almost hopelessly inadequate yield.

Maybe, Moyer decided, the British weren't feeding the green mold properly. He looked around for other foods—and hit on corn steep liquor. This is the water starch-makers soak corn in. Don't ask why Moyer decided this might work. He can't tell you himself. But it did work. Production shot up immediately. He looked for other foods that might be tempting; and looked for more productive strains of the mold. All this, of course, required months. But the work was crowned with magnificent success. Instead of getting 20 units of penicillin per cubic centimeter, Moyer is getting dozens of times this yield!

Government chemists recently found a microbe that would produce tremendous quantities of gluconic acid. At the time, this stuff was a chemical curiosity costing $100 a pound. But once it was available, in quantity and at a low price, research men quickly found uses for it. They found that if it were converted into calcium gluconate, it had uses in tanning, metallurgy, and in making toothpaste. But its most striking use was in veterinary medicine, where it provided a ready source of calcium in a form easily assimilated by farm animals.

Gluconate Saves Cows.

Normandie Floats Again—Soon to Be Erect



The USS Lafayette, formerly the French luxury liner, Normandie, will once again sail the seas despite the devastating fire of February 9, 1941, which swept through her and the 100,000 tons of water which were poured into her hull sending her crashing to the bottom of the Hudson river. A corps of 70 divers and 700 workmen have her rapidly on the way up in the final stages of the second tremendous naval salvage operation of recent weeks. The other record setting ship raising and refitting was at Pearl Harbor. Left: The Normandie just after she rolled over. Despite the intense fire and the hundreds of workmen aboard only one life was lost. Right: It has been necessary to paint new numbers on this measuring tape to keep pace with the rapid rise of the ship.

Stilwell Naps While Flying Over Himalayas

Making Gasoline From Coal

New Type Litter

One or two men can carry a casualty with this new type of litter which is pictured adjusted for a two-man carry. Designed by Lieut. Col. S. H. Bingham, it is said to ease the strain on both bearers and the casualty. Movement over narrow tracks, through jungles, or mountain trails is made much easier with the new litter.

Allied Bombing Victims Receiving Aid

Victims of Allied bombings over Le Creusot, France, are shown receiving food and clothing, according to a French caption in a Nazi-controlled magazine. The bombing referred to apparently was the second attack by the Allies on the huge Schneider works, one of the biggest war plants in Europe where munitions have been turned out for Germany.

ISOLATIONIST CUPID

The nuptial rumor that the Chicago Tribune's Col. Robert R. McCormick was going to wed Mrs. Helen Essary, widow of the Baltimore Sun correspondent, was told to the President recently by one of his aides.

Both Colonel McCormick and Mrs. Essary are ardent isolationists and vigorous critics of the administration. In fact the colonel is considered the leading isolationist of the Midwest, if not the nation, while the Widow Essary, writing in the Washington Times-Herald, is probably the leading lady isolationist in the nation's capital.

So the President received word of this isolationist romance with considerable interest.

"I wonder," he mused, "what their progeny will be like."

Note—Later, Mrs. Essary heard about the President's remark and telephoned one of the White House aides to find out precisely what had been said. She did not comment as to whether the rumor of matrimony were true or untrue, but she showed great feminine curiosity regarding the President's comment.

DAY VS. NIGHT BOMBING

When Churchill and Roosevelt were in Casablanca, the British prime minister had a friendly argument with U. S. air generals regarding the feasibility of daylight bombing. Churchill was against it, arguing that the British system of night bombing was much safer, did more damage to the enemy.

However, latest figures just received by the war department show that Gen. Ira Eaker was right in sticking to day bombing. These figures show that U. S. bombers have knocked out Nazi fighter planes at a rate ten times greater than the British.

Here are the figures: In July U. S. airmen destroyed 600 Axis planes, lost 103 bombers of their own. In other words we knocked out five times as many planes as we lost.

In the same months, the British knocked out 129 enemy planes, but lost 293 of their own. In other words, the British lost two planes for every one they knocked out.

The British were operating at night when they could not see the enemy so well, but also when the enemy could not see them. American planes, operating in the daylight, could better concentrate on enemy fighter planes, but also were better targets for the enemy.

INFLATION REMEDY

The President has a non-inflationary solution to organized labor's demands for wage increases to meet higher living costs: namely, non-negotiable bonds, payable after the war.

Roosevelt revealed this secret during a confidential talk with R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers union, on price rollbacks, strikes and the War Labor board's Little Steel formula. Here is the summary of his views:

Prices. Roosevelt stated that he would make a vigorous attempt to roll back prices. He told Thomas that he would prefer that congress provide the money, but that, failing this, he would use either RFC or Commodity Credit corporation funds to restore the following food prices to their September, 1942, normal: Meat, canned goods, potatoes, milk and milk products.

It would be too difficult, the President said, to attempt a rollback of clothing and personal services. He pointed out that rents already have been rolled back to March, 1941.

Little Steel Formula. Roosevelt frankly stated that he was not enthusiastic about any arbitrary ceiling on wages—15 per cent above those prevailing in January, 1941. However, he considered the Little Steel formula the best brake on wage inflation so far proposed.

Instead, the President suggested that war workers would be much better off, and that the present wage stalemate between labor unions and the WLB could be broken, if workmen agreed to accept non-negotiable bonds, payable after the war, in lieu of wage increases.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Manhattan Banker Jimmy Warburg was not only the mysterious "John Durfee," spanked by the President for calling Victor Emmanuel the "moronic little king," but he also was the fictitious "Wallace Herrick" . . . Warburg has so dominated OWI's foreign broadcasts that some people call it the "Office of Warburg Information".

INSIDE EUROPE

Swiss Minister Charles Bruggmann, brother-in-law of Henry Wallace, is probably the only man in the United States who has recently passed through Germany.

He not only visited Germany, but also France and Spain. In France he found the people downcast and downhearted. German soldiers on the streets of Paris went out of their way to be polite to the French people, even got off the sidewalks if necessary in deference to a Frenchman.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. K. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. March 11 Lieut. Bulkeley showed the squadron their secret orders. They were to take General MacArthur's party and some additional personnel to the southern islands. When they arrived safely at Cebu, General MacArthur promised Bulkeley he would try to get him and his key men out of the Philippines.

CHAPTER XII

"The skipper was frantic to get some of our little fleet back into commission so we could finish out the fight. We'd started the war with six boats. Two were lost off Bataan. One was lost on the escape trip south. That left only three, and two of these were wrecks, fit only for the dry dock, Bulkeley's being the only craft left in fighting condition. But he was bound to get the others back into shape. Did I think I could get mine to Cebu?

"Well, we could try, and we started off, my poor old boat with her earthquake making twelve knots, her back end wiggling like a shipwrecked sailor's dream of a French musical-comedy star. Whatever she was good for now, it wasn't fighting, and I was glad we didn't meet any Japs.

"The machine shop was run by 'Dad' Cleland, a seventy-one-year-old American who'd been in the islands since 1914, and a swell-gent he was—originally from Minnesota and a typical hulking frontiersman. Didn't look a day over fifty and was a kind of patriarch in those parts. His native name meant 'the old man' or 'the headman' in Tagalog.

"He was a great gourmet, too. Had Bulkeley and me out to dinner and we had bottled beer (a great rarity), a big crab-meat cocktail, and then lobster Newburg, which was delicious, but 'Dad' kept warning us to hold back, because then he broke out a couple of roast ducks.

"Dessert was simple, like the last bars of a symphony. Just delicious chilled mangoes and Chase & Sanborn's coffee. It was a magnificent feed after the native chow I'd been eating. We talked about the war. People in Cebu felt the show was about up, unless miraculous help arrived soon.

" 'What are you going to do when the Japs come?' we asked 'Dad.' He straightened up—all six feet two of him.

" 'Have my dignity to think about,' he said. 'I'm not going to the hills. I'll stay right here and face them.

" 'Dad' was working for the government for a dollar a year. When he finally finished with our repairs—they took many days—we asked him how much the bill was. 'We'll forget about it,' he said. 'You fight 'em and I'll fix 'em. It's the least I can do.'

"He clenched his big fist, and it was about the size of a nail keg. Since I've come back here I've read about some outfits working on war contracts who were paying their stenographers fifty thousand dollars a year and charging it to the government as expenses until they were caught. It's a waste of time to indict them. Just get old 'Dad' Cleland back here and let him go in and reason with them in their swivel chairs. With those big fists of his, he'd know how to expostulate with racketeers like that.

"Until we got to Cebu we hadn't been paid since the war started. Well, in Cebu the men all got paid and it was quite a spectacle. The dozen on my boat, going from bar to bar, got rid of two thousand dollars in three days. If it had been two million instead, they would have got rid of it just as quick, although it might have strained them some. Then they settled back to their routine means of livelihood, which was playing poker with the army.

"But things were moving in Cebu, and very secretly we began to hear hints of a big American offensive which was coming rolling up from the south through the islands in time to save Bataan, which was almost out of food and ammunition. Word came that two submarines were arriving in Cebu, where they would be loaded with food and returned to Bataan—we brought the first one in through the channel.

"It was a big secret—the area was cleared for two miles around. The loading was done at night and by officers only—we helped until our hands were raw—because they were fearful that some sailor or soldier might drop a hint of it in a native bar where it would get to the Japs. For three solid nights we worked until my back and arms ached, stowing all that stuff in the subs, but all the time I kept thinking of Peggy and the grand old gang up there on the Rock and what was left of the peninsula—fighting on without hope or food. Well, here was a little of both we were sending them. To make more room they stripped the submarines of torpedoes—gave 'em to us, four for the 35 boat if we could ever get her into action, two for the 41 boat, which already had two, and charged them for us with compressed air from the submarine's tanks. Now MTB's were ready for battle, and into the submarine's empty tubes we stuffed food, and I kept thinking, as we shoved it in—there's another square meal for Peggy back there on the Rock.

"But that wasn't half of it. Because in addition to the subs—the last one shoved off on April 5—there were seven fat interisland steamers being secretly loaded with food down near 'Dad' Cleland's dock—medical supplies, quinine the boys were dying without, everything they needed to hold on. But how could they hope to get these fat little tubs up through the islands to Bataan? Bulkeley was to find out three days later."

"The General in command at Cebu called me in and verified the hints we'd heard of the big American offensive," said Bulkeley. "He assured me everything was set. It was to start at dawn the very next morning. That very night, twelve fortresses and heavy bombers were coming up from Australia. A swarm of P-35's were on their way up from Mindanao to Iloilo, where they were to gas up and go into action.

"The bombers were to land at Mindanao, gas up, take off, and blow the be-Jesus out of every Jap warship in the region, and meanwhile the convoy of interisland steamers would start for Bataan, bringing food enough for weeks. Bataan was to be saved after all.

"The General showed me messages from all the other generals who commanded in different islands, co-ordinating the offensive. But there was one minor hitch, he explained.

"Aerial reconnaissance had spotted a couple of Jap destroyers steaming down the coast of Negros

"He clenched his big fist, and it was about the size of a nail keg."

Island. Somewhat to the eastward there was a cruiser which carried four seaplanes, but they weren't worried about it. But that afternoon reports had come in giving the progress of the Jap destroyers. Obviously they were heading toward Cebu. Maybe they had broken down our American codes and knew about the interisland steamers, and were coming in either to blockade them or to shell them at the dock.

"Why couldn't we have a part in this great offensive which tomorrow was to sweep up and blast Jap shipping and warships between Mindanao, Cebu, and Bataan?" Lieutenant Kelly thought. "We could be helpful by going out tonight and knocking off one or both of those Jap destroyers, which by midnight should be approaching the narrow channel between Cebu and Negros Islands. The cruiser—never mind her, American bombers would polish her off in the morning."

"Bulkeley came in at eight o'clock that night and told me about it," said Kelly. "My boat had been in the water just four hours—she was supposed to soak for twenty-four before she should be exposed to any pounding, but I asked him if we couldn't go out with him. 'I was hoping you'd like to,' the skipper told me. 'Think you can make it?' 'I don't know,' I said, 'but we'll soon find out. This'll be as good a dock trial for her as any.' "

"To man the boats I called for volunteers," said Bulkeley. "I had no trouble about that. I guess they understood by now that any man who doesn't volunteer won't be in the squadron long if I can get rid of him."

"They were all tickled to be in on the big offensive," said Kelly. "It was apparently so well prepared that the army had given us the radio frequency of the co-ordinating planes—that big American air umbrella which would be spread over us at dawn—in case we needed to talk with them."

"We got out to the island passage about 11:30 that night and sneaked in close to shore," said Bulkeley. "The moon wasn't due until 2:30. I was riding in the 41 boat, Ensign Cox commanding, while Kelly had his 34 boat. We'd worked out our strategy. If two destroyers showed up, my boat was to tackle the leading one and Kelly the second. If only one arrived, my boat would attack her on the quarter, and Kelly's on the bow.

"At five minutes to twelve Glover, the quartermaster at the wheel, called 'Look—there she is!' A black object was coming round the point. 'Jumping Jesus!' said Glover. 'There she is!'—because it was no little Jap destroyer but a thundering big Kuma class cruiser sliding around that point—so clear we could almost make out her 6-inch guns.

"I gave our boat a hard right rudder, sneaking in toward the shore where the cruiser couldn't see us. Apparently she was alone. Now we curved out, into firing position, on her port beam, making as little noise as we could, and as she passed, five hundred yards away, Cox fired two torpedoes, but they straddled her."

"We fired two from our side," said Kelly, "but they also missed."

"After that," said Ensign Cox, "we in the 41 boat made a wide arc and attacked again with our last two torpedoes—Bulkeley himself firing them, and this time two of them hit, right under the bridge. They made no flash, but a good bump and a column of water. But even before that the cruiser had waked up—probably saw the wakes of one of the torpedoes—anyway she speeded up to twenty-five knots and her searchlight came on and she waved it wildly around in the air, probably looking for torpedo planes."

"Our torpedoes were all gone in the 41 boat," said Bulkeley, "but I turned around and ran astern of the cruiser to draw her fire so Kelly could get in for his second attack. Then we saw the destroyers, but they wouldn't give chase, although I tried to create the illusion of a lot of boats by firing machine-gun tracers."

"When the cruiser's searchlight came on," said Kelly, "I turned right to cross her wake and came in on her other quarter. She picked me up astern with her lights and began banging away at me with her secondary batteries—50-calibers and 40-millimeter guns — from about twelve hundred yards. The stuff was going right over our heads in a continuous stream of fire.

"But I was good and mad because our first torpedoes had missed," said Kelly, "so I decided to chase her. I told one machine-gunner to fire at her searchlight, which was blinding me, and the others to sweep her decks to get her gun crews.

"After a few minutes' chase, we had closed in to three hundred yards—so close that her searchlight seemed to be coming right down on us from an angle—about like the sun in mid-afternoon. Then I drew out onto her starboard quarter and fired our last two torpedoes—an overtaking shot. They were the last two our squadron was to fire in the war.

"Then I gave the boat a hard right rudder and started running away—for we were defenceless now except for our machine guns. But the rain of Jap tracers kept right on, and suddenly another Jap ship showed up fifteen hundred yards away. Both started firing their main batteries at me and we were trapped between—splashes all around us now, as close as twenty-five yards. We started zigzagging wildly, trying to dodge the two searchlights, and also the stream of fire which were criss-crossing above our heads like wicker basketry, and landing in the water all around us. It seemed like weeks, but was probably only a few seconds. My junior officer, Ensign Richardson, had the wheel, while I was watching the cruiser through my binoculars. Suddenly I saw a big splash and detonation in the middle of her belly—another two seconds, another splash and detonation right in her engine room! Our overtaking shots had both hit home! Her searchlight went from bright yellow to orange to red to dull brick-red and finally winked out. Every gun stopped firing. She was jet-black now.

"But I didn't have much time for philosophizing, because this other destroyer was on my starboard bow, closing in, banging away with her 5½-inch guns and me with only 50-caliber machine guns left."

"Kelly got twenty-three salvoes of 5½-inch steel that night," said Bulkeley. "But there was no doubt that his two torpedoes polished off the cruiser. I saw her searchlight fade out, and heavy yellow smoke arise. Her stern was under in three minutes—the destroyer put the searchlight on her decks, where the Japs were all running around, not knowing where to go—and she had sunk in twenty.

"But I was running around with three destroyers after me, which were firing all they had, and I could see another one hot on Kelly's tail. That was the last I could see of him and I thought he was a goner.

"My destroyers chased me down to Misamis, but at dawn I dove into a place to hide—there were six miles of shallow water where they couldn't follow even if they had seen me. We spent the day sleeping."

Soybeans Benefit By Crop Rotation

Beans Use Chemicals Remaining in Soil

Since soybeans have assumed such an important place in the family of war crops, the condition of the soil on which they are produced is a matter of importance to the farmer.

George H. Enfield, of the agronomy department of Purdue university pointed out that while soybeans need a plentiful ration of plant foods in order to produce maximum yields for Uncle Sam's war requirements, their diet can be adequately filled by "eating at the second table" if the soil's fertility level is high.

" 'Eating at the second table,' Mr. Enfield explained, "means that soybeans respond to the hold-over fertility placed in the soil by previous crops in the rotation. Long-time fertility tests have demonstrated repeatedly that yields have been increased, on the average, from 3.2 to 10.6 bushels per acre because of this sound practice."

In view of the essential value of soybean products to agriculture and war industries, Mr. Enfield said, the fertility level of the soil that produces the crop is of prime importance. "Every farmer has noticed that beans will produce larger yields on fertile than on infertile soils," he added.

In three-year soybean growing tests on fertile land at the Purdue soils and crops farm, he said, increase from applying fertilizer with an attachment to a corn planter for row-seeded beans was about 70 per cent greater than when the same treatment was applied with the wheat drill and the beans seeded solid.

"The tests revealed that the unfertilized crop averaged 27.0 bushels of soybeans per acre," Mr. Enfield explained. "Applying 100 pounds of 0-20-20 with the fertilizer attachment to the corn planter at seeding time increased the yield 3.3 bushels per acre."

Advantages of "plow-down" methods of fertilization were likewise described by Mr. Enfield. "In dry seasons," he said, "if the fertilizer is placed near the surface it is in dry soil and out of the reach of feeding roots. However, if the fertilizer is placed deeper, the roots can get it out of the moist soil. In wet seasons, fertilizer placed near the surface encourages weed growth. Results from one experiment showed that the weed competition was so severe where 600 pounds of 0-12-12 analysis was applied to the surface of the soil and disced in, that the yield was decreased 1.6 bushels per acre. The same treatment plowed under greatly increased the yield."

Mr. Enfield declared that soybeans apparently are very sensitive to potash deficiency. The results of demonstrations showed that potash-starved soybeans did not mature naturally. The leaves would start to die before the beans were completely filled and the test weight was lowered. In all cases of potash-starvation the percentage of damaged beans was unusually high.

Pressure-cooker canning is safer than is the hot water bath method because it is the only method whereby the heat-resistant spores that cause canned foods to spoil can be killed. These spores are found in meat, fish, and poultry, and in all vegetables except tomatoes, pimientoes, peppers and rhubarb.

Concrete Floors

A steel trowel produces a smooth concrete surface for workshop or poultry house floor. A rough finish is used for dairy stable floors. A wooden float will give an even gritty surface suitable for this.

Rural Briefs

Our soldiers in tropical countries use a dusting powder made of a derivative of castor beans to kill typhus-carrying lice.

Six demonstrations of dusting peanuts with sulphur to prevent leaf-spot in Hertford county, North Carolina, in 1942, showed an average gain of 378 pounds of peanuts per acre.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

EVERY homemaker knows how many steps could be saved if table linens could have a special closet in the kitchen or pantry. In one home that we know of space for such a closet was going to waste all because cupboard doors or drawers would interfere with the door shown here in the small

Household Hints

People with normal digestions will have no trouble digesting hot, new breads if they are eaten together with roughage foods and not in excess.

• • •

These hot nights place your fan in an open window, facing the room. The air should not strike sleepers.

• • •

Oil, grease and tar stains respond to kerosene. Some women put a cup of kerosene in the suds when washing work clothes.

• • •

Marks caused by match-striking on a painted surface can be removed by rubbing with a cut lemon.

• • •

A large piece of cellophane placed behind your table-top stove keeps grease spots off the wallpaper and is much more attractive than a piece of oilcloth, as it allows the wallpaper design to show through.

• • •

After filling jars in canning season test them for leaks by tapping the bottoms with a knife or spoon. The sound will tell whether or not the jar is sealed.

Creamed hard boiled eggs served over split muffins is a good dish for meat-saving days. The proteins of the enriched flour used in your muffins, together with the proteins of the egg and milk add up to plus values.

When the word went out that soldiers overseas wanted packages from home—the response was so overwhelming that Uncle Sam reluctantly had to call a halt. Today, due to shipping space, there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men—but you can still send packages to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are. When you do, remember—one of their favorite gifts is cigarettes, and the favorite brand is Camel. Sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camel is first choice with men in all the services. So send him that carton of Camels today.—Adv.

NO SUGAR NEEDED IN EASY-TO-MAKE ALL-BRAN MUFFINS

Here's an already favored recipe that's gaining new wartime fame . . . ALL-BRAN Muffins without sugar! See for yourself how the flavorsome crispness of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gives these delicious muffins a texture and taste all their own!

Kellogg's All-Bran Muffins

2 tablespoons shortening
⅓ cup corn syrup
1 egg
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
⅓ cup milk
1 cup flour
⅓ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and corn syrup thoroughly; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk, let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 8 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¾ inches in diameter.
