LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS

Unconditional Surrender!

VOLUME XVIII—[Carrizozo News, Vol. 32] CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1943. NUMBER 12

"WE Pledge Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."

Mrs. Juanita Marquez arrived home from Albuquerque last Friday. Mrs. Marquez spent the summer in California with her husband, Seabee Manuel Marquez, but when he was sent to the South Pacific she came home.

Pfc. Fermin Montoya is here from the California desert to visit the home folks until the 12th.

Pfc. Luciano Gutierrez arrived home last Saturday from San Francisco, where he had been in an Army hospital recovering from malaria. Pfc. Gutierrez spent over a year in Australia and saw action in that theatre of war.

Petty Officer Otto Prehm arrived Monday morning from Camp Perry, Virginia, to spend a short leave here with his mother, Mrs. Minnie Prehm.

Seaman Clayton Crumley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Crumley, arrived from San Diego the first of this week. Clayton has just returned from the Aleutian Islands and will spend his furlough at home.

Several people from over the county were here Monday to see off the large number of boys who left for the Fort Bliss Reception Center last Tuesday morning.

Seaman 1/c Lucio Vidaurri, who was stationed at San Diego, has been sent overseas

A New York division, wearing the Statue of Liberty on their sleeves as their insignia, went through here last Monday morning. The boys paraded on our streets until the troop train received orders to proceed.

Sgt. and Mrs. Dale Hill are the proud parents of a son born Sept. 27, 1943. Mrs. Hill was Miss Ida Greer before her marriage.

Mrs. Lala Charles will leave next week for New York City, where she will meet her husband, Chief Petty Officer Ward Charles, for a ten-day furlough. Ward is stationed at Camp Endicott in Rhode Island.—Alamogordo News

Pvt. Alcario Baros of Watsonville, California, was here this week on a short furlough. Upon his return he will be sent overseas.

Seaman 2/c Herman E. Kelt, who has been overseas several months, is expected home within a few days. Herman is in California now. He went to call on Dr. and Mrs. Rathmann, who live at Inglewood. The Rathmanns entertained with a barbecue party for him. Dr. Rathmann, who was very ill and spent three or four months in a hospital, has recovered sufficiently to look after his practice.

Thanks

IF YOU PLEASE !!!

We are not "hard boiled," we of the newspapers—we are the softest-hearted, most peaceable, most agreeable, peace loving, helpful darned fools on earth. They come to us for help and publicity for this and for that and for the other. We give our space freely—which is all we have to give—because we never charge for any public enterprise that is for the good of the people of the nation, of the state, of the county, or of the town, and what have you! But there is one thing that gets under my skin, that makes my blood boil; being a hot headed Kentuckian, and Irish with it, I resent not even getting any thanks.

Under a Carrizozo dateline of October 4th, I read in the El Paso Times: "Credit for the success of the drive [War Loan] goes to retail stores, civic organizations and the war finance committee of the county."

What about the two Carrizozo newspapers that boosted and rooted and tore their shirts helping to put this thing across? I contribute no less than two columns a week of free stuff to help this war effort, and usually it is three or four. Last week I gave a full page. This week I am running the chairman's thanks to his assistants, but nary a word about these little insignificant newspapers and their editors, who have the knack of being extremely helpful, and not expecting any appreciation, either oral or written.

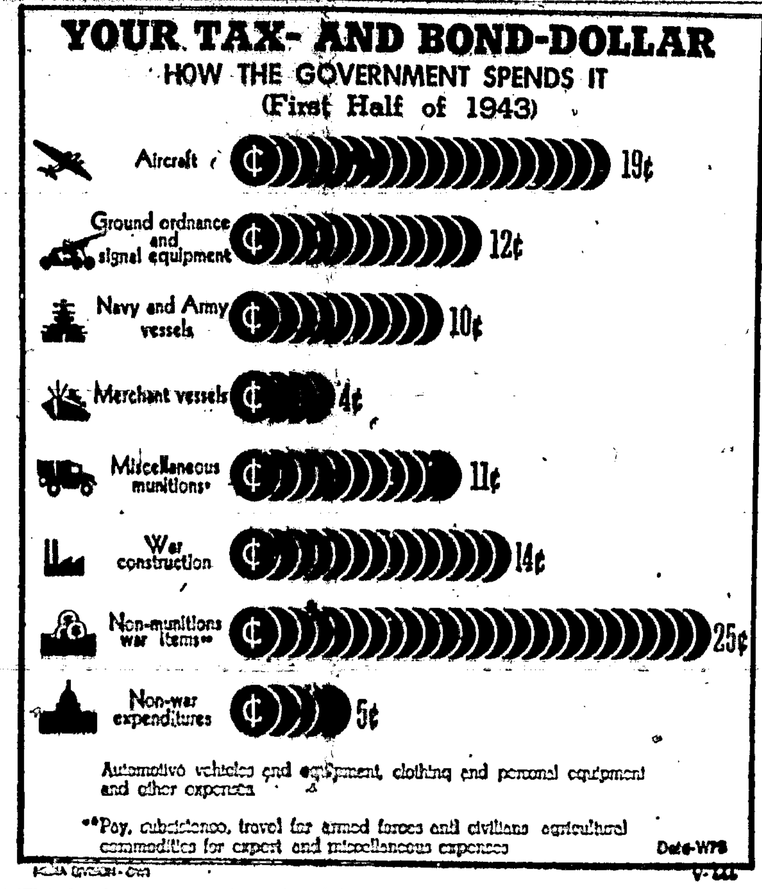
Lincoln County Goes Over the Top!

Lincoln County may be justly proud of its showing for the Third War Loan Drive. Lincoln County's quota was $108,000 and of this amount $52,000 was to be 'E' Bonds. Issuing agents report as follows: Lincoln County Agency $27,450, 'E'; Carrizozo P. O. $9,712 50, 'E'; Capitan P. O. $9,187 50, 'E'; Ruidoso P. O. $7,199 75, 'E'; Fort Stanton P. O. $2,971.25, 'E'; Corona P. O. $2,110 00, 'E'; Ancho P. O. $1,181 25, 'E'; San Patricio P. O. $131.25, 'E'; a total 'E' bond sale of $59,943.50 This is $7,943.50 over our 'E' bond quota. Lincoln County Agency also handled subscriptions for $6,000, 2 percent; $17,000, 7 8 percent; $7,500, G's; $3,256, F's. The State Treasurer credited Lincoln County with $20,000. State purchase giving Lincoln County a grand total of $118,699.50 sales.

Figures are not on hand to credit sales to localities in an equitable manner at the present time. What figures we do have at this time show that Corona solicitors mailed into the bank subscriptions over $2,000. Capitan Woman's Club during the last two days of the drive sent in subscriptions totaling over $8,000 to the local bank. Committees down the Bonito and Hondo valleys mailed in subscriptions in the vicinity of $5,000.

The undersigned, on behalf of the War Finance Committee, wishes to thank all members of the committee throughout the county for their untiring efforts in pushing the Third War Loan Drive over in Lincoln County. I also wish to pass on the letter of appreciation and gratitude of the State and National Committees, which was received this morning from Cale W. Carson, state chairman; and last but not least, a toast to the people of Lincoln County who went to the bottom of the sugar bowl and bought all the bonds they could.

Felix Ramey, Chairman,
War Finance Committee.



New Otero Range

The War Department started action in U. S. District Court here for condemnation of 512,000 acres of land in Southeastern Otero County for the establishment of what is to be known as the Guadalupe Range. The land involved is occupied by approximately 50 livestock men and their families, whose protests against establishment of the new gunnery range caused the state's congressional delegation during the past summer to ask the War Department not to take over the important grazing tract.

The action filed here is in the nature of a petition to the court to condemn the land for lease to the government for a term of years with permission to renew the lease yearly as long as the big acreage is needed for national defense. The court is asked to appoint three commissioners to appraise damages. Defendants are listed as E. E. Akers, Frank L. Bennett, and all unknown owners.

Sept 24, 1943.

Ray Salas

Ray Salas, 23, of San Patricio died September 29, 1943, in Los Angeles from a heart ailment. The body arrived here last Friday night and was taken to San Patricio for burial. Mr. Salas had been in California only a short time when he died. He was employed in defense work there.

He is survived by his father, Mr. Pablo Salas, former janitor at the courthouse, two brothers, Teofilo and Fermin Salas, all of San Patricio.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carol Johnson announce the birth of a 7½ pound daughter, on October 5, 1943. Her name is Carol Frances. Mrs. Pete Johnson, Sr., is quite thrilled over her first great grandchild and has already gone to visit her.

Mr. A. N. Runnels of Nogal-Mesa was a business visitor in Carrizozo last Wednesday. Mr. Runnels renewed his subscription to the News while here.

A new porch is being built at the T. & G. Grocery by Mr. Tom.

Ration Book No. 4

Ration Book No. 4, designed to last two years, will be ready for distribution the last of October and will go into use early in November, the OPA has announced. The new book, which will be obtained through a nation-wide schoolhouse registration, will combine point and unit stamps, of which there will be 884, printed in blue, red, green and black.

The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 3 are being used this month in the meat-fats program.

Twelve of the 96 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spares," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 5 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

Definite announcement as to dates for local registration for the new books will be made later.

Congratulations

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sargent of Santa Fe, October 3rd, 1943, a son, Jackie Sargent, Jr. Mrs. Sargent is a daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. H. E. Kelt of Carrizozo.

Harry—Did you ever hear of a Scotch mousetrap?

Jerry—No. Is it so tight it squeezes the mouse to death?

Harry—Better than that. It catches the mouse before it gets the cheese!

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Spencer were shoppers in Carrizozo last Monday from Tres Ritos ranch at Three Rivers.

Mrs. Jack O'Malley, formerly of Capitan, who has been nursing in a New Orleans hospital for more than a year, has requested us to send her paper to Santa Fe, New Mexico.

National

WAR FUND MEETING

On October 12, 1943, a meeting of the National War Fund Committee will be held in Roswell, N. M., at the Nickson Hotel. This is a district meeting. This district is composed of seven counties and Lincoln County is included, as are also Chaves and Otero counties. Mr. T. E. Kelley is chairman for the Lincoln County War Fund Drive. He has appointed a number of committees. A full list of committees and committee chairmen will be published as soon as the organization is complete.

At 3 o'clock p. m. on Oct. 12th, Mr. Kelley will speak at the Roswell district meeting. His subject will be "Rural Solicitation." It is requested by Mr. Kelley that as many from Lincoln County as can should be present at the meeting, so that they may realize the full importance of this drive and the necessity for it. There will be a number of speakers. The meeting opens at 1 p. m., Oct. 12. Remember the date.

Something Wrong

Since 1940, two thousand business firms in the state of New Mexico—small, individual places of business have closed, or folded up, or discontinued from some cause or other. Of course some of these places were closed for lack of help, because the young men went to war. But we think the tax burdens became too great for some of them.

There really should be tax exemptions for the business firms that have only one employe Taxes are burdensome; collection methods are becoming more drastic. In so many instances the youngsters on whom the parents leaned are gone and will never come back. Help is hard to get, and so they become discouraged and quit. This is a gloomy state of affairs, especially in New Mexico, where the population has decreased 41,000 more or less in the last two or three years

CARRIZOZO WOMAN'S CLUB

BANKS AND THE WAR

4 Tax Hurdles Still To Go

To get on a Current---Payment Basis, Wage Earners are required to do Four Things.

1. Sept. 15, 1943. File Declaration of Estimated Tax and pay balance of amount due in 1943.
2. Dec. 15, 1943. If necessary, file amended declaration of tax and pay additional amount due.
3. Mar. 15, 1944. Pay one-half of "unabated" tax for 1942 or 1943 tax, whichever is lesser.
4. Mar. 15, 1945. Pay remaining half of unabated tax.

Figure NOW the amounts you will owe, and make advance provision in your bank account.

Paint and Chintz Transform Chair

THERE is a knack about selecting the right thing from the assortment of junk in Mother's attic or a second hand furniture store. Here is a rocker not at all quaint but just awkward to have around.

Off come the rockers and on go a set of casters and a seat cushion to make it the right height. That will make it useful but still no beauty. A remnant of flowered chintz will cover the cushion and the objectionable part of the carved back. Paint to match the soft blue background of the chintz will bring the whole thing together and soften too prominent curves.

Private Papers of a Cub Reporter:

The Washington Wire: It almost causes fist fights when you mention it, but they are saying we'll have a new Chief Justice of the Highest Court in 1945 . . . The big corporations which want to put up reserves for post-war-conversion will soon be cussin' the Treasury's Randolph Paul, who wants them paid out in taxes now . . . The U. S. is getting so much coin that the Democratic Nat'l Committee ain't gettin' any . . . Otto Hapsburg was rejected by the army because he claims Hungarian citizenship . . . His sponsor is a cabinet member's wife! . . . The inner circles hear that Stalin thinks Germany will be out of the war by March.

E. P. Dutton, publisher of the sensational No. 1 best seller ("Under Cover") has enough paper to sell another 60,000 copies. They indemnify book sellers against libel actions (none to date) as a result of selling it . . . In Detroit Ass't FBI Chief Bugas said: "The FBI, in its anti-spy work, hasn't had two cents' worth of help from Mr. Dies!" . . . How come the Dept. of Justice doesn't go after Joe Kamp for putting out pamphlets titled: "Dep't of Justice—From the Secret Files of the FBI"? . . . Isn't the use of the Dep't of Justice name illegal? There is a Presidential order saying that the FBI reports are so secret not even Congressional committees may see them.

War Correspondent Robert Casey (his last book was "Torpedo Junction") was invited by the navy to do a book about submarine warfare . . . After three months with our undersea fighters, Casey submitted the manuscript . . . The navy censors deleted nearly 40 per cent of it . . . Casey was so infuriated he refused to permit the expurgated document to be published . . . Shortly after, the U. S. asked the star reporter to do another job . . . "On one condition," he said, "that I am assigned where there are no American censors!" . . . Casey is now abroad getting the facts without "editing."

New York Melodrama: In the Mutual Radio Theater on 52nd St. the other night the solicitation from the stage (for broadcast spectators) failed to arouse one citizen to buy a bond or stamp. After what seemed like ages and still no bond sales, a sailor yelled from the balcony . . . He rushed down to the stage . . . From his blouse he took a single crumpled dollar . . . Announcing it was his last dollar, he bought stamps with it . . . Then with a defiant air, he licked the stamps and pasted all of them on the stage . . . Then he left—head high—with a glare of contempt at the audience . . . You could have heard their blushes drop for the next few minutes . . . After that, 650 people rushed to the stage to buy theirs . . . Hmf!

The White House phone number is National 1414 . . . The Troika night spot in the Capital 4141 . . . The cafe's exploiter in New York phoned the Troika. He absentmindedly asked for National 1414. When the Washington voice said hello, the p. a. shouted, "Well, we got in the papers today."

"Really!" retorted the White House operator. "Don't we usually?"

A State Dep't source insists that the facts are absolutely correct . . . It seems that just before the recent blowup in Denmark, the Nazis had gone to King Christian and told him they wanted the Nuremberg laws put into effect in Denmark . . . "But," the King protested, "I can't do it. Those laws are barbaric!"

"Don't be a fool," said the Nazis. "Those laws are only designed to oppress the Jews of Denmark."

"Examine the Danish constitution," said the King coldly. "You will see that my official title is 'King of All the Danes!'"

Vignette of a Patriot: She's a little old Jewish lady of about 65 . . . She was inspecting the Coney Island garbage cans, with a stick in one hand and a big bag in the other . . . She looks for tins that housewives neglect to save for salvage . . . Three of her grandsons (all college graduates) are at the fighting fronts . . . A neighbor saw her pecking at one can . . . "You won't find any there," he said, "all the folks in this house save their cans" . . . "Maybe," was the reply—as she kept prodding the garbage, "somebody forgot."

Sounds in the Night: In the Stork: "He's in 6-Z. Rejected by the army and civilians!" . . . At the Park Central Roof: "He must be important. Look at all the smiles in front of him and the sneers behind him" . . . At the Enduro: "Tell me something. If you had it to do over again, would you still be the rat that you are?"

Ex-Mayor J. J. Walker, snapped by a news photogger at Shor's, quipped: "It'll take more than one bulb to bring me back!"

Russ Government Early Sponsored Rifle Practice

Russia has millions of civilian sharpshooters today because, in recent years, she wisely urged and helped her people to take up rifle practice, says Collier's. Numerous ranges were set up and guns supplied; and men who did not undergo training were considered unpatriotic. In the year 1938 alone, more than 6,000,000 men, women and boys won marksmanship badges.

Careers in Engineering

By R. T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

WHO enriched our lives by the airplane, the modern refrigerator, the automobile, the radio? Who provided us with light at the flick of a switch? Who, indeed, has wrought more changes in our manner of life than the engineer?

In conquering the forces of nature man learned engineering. The first lever used to pry a rock, the first wheel built to move burdens, the first wedge shaped to split a log were creations of prehistoric engineers. Over four thousand years ago, engineers built the dams on the Euphrates and erected the Egyptian pyramids.

● Two thousand years ago Roman engineers tied Europe together by highways, spurred the migration of older civilizations into unexplored countries. There the conquerors provided uncontaminated water supplies and shelter against the elements. So down through the ages, making life more secure and more satisfying, the work of engineers has gone forward.

The work of engineers, often unsung, has provided for ever-widening and continuous benefits to the human race, through control of nature's forces and materials.

Today the youth of vision, interested in knowing more about our fast moving age may well consider engineering as one of the most utilitarian and fascinating professions.

Engineering embodying a knowledge of mathematics, technological arts and sciences and the ability to direct and work with men offers worthwhile careers for youth of ability!

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even tho tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Throughout New Mexico can collections are encouraged by WPB. In many areas, collections are being made by drivers for bottling companies after local salvage committees have gathered the cans at a central point.

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But some are a little ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well—you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owes its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured.

Such masters as Dashiell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it. But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with refreshing variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, fit for the most critical, delightful to the most naive. You will find the new magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the size same as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. You will find the cover so pleasing to look at as a book jacket. And you will find the contents the most satisfying quarter's worth of good entertainment you have found in many a day. On sale at all good newsstands—25c a copy.

SPECIAL 10c OFFER TO READERS OF LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS

Because we want you to know Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine we will send you a copy of this anthology of the best detective stories now and old—60,000 words of thrilling mysteries—for only 10c, the cost of postage and handling.

Fill in and mail the coupon below with 10c today.

Christmas Packages For Prisoners of War And Other Men Overseas

Many anxious friends and relatives of our Service men and women who are held in prison and internment camps will be glad to know that they may send them Christmas packages, and the authorities have directed that orders must be placed between September 15 and October 15, 1943, in order to be delivered in time.

The National Red Cross has authorized chapters to receive contributions with which to purchase standard packages of identified and unidentified prisoners of war. Those wishing to avail themselves of this offer to send a Christmas gift may make their donation to the Chapter Chairman, Mrs. Dewey Stokes of Carrizozo, New Mexico, or to the following volunteer workers in your community.

Mrs. W. R. Belden, Corona
Mrs. W. E. Knott, Jr., Three Rivers
Mrs. Kivas Tully, Picacho
Mrs. W. A. Hart, Ruidoso
Mrs. Perry Sears, Capitan
Mrs. Lola Stueland, Ft. Stanton

You will find the regulations governing the size and contents of packages posted on the bulletin board in your postoffice.

Please give the Service man's full name, rank, number of prisoner, nationality, prison camp, country and the donor's name, so that a copy of the order may be sent as a receipt

Donors may not order more than one package for each prisoner at a time.

SEPT. 15 to NOV. 1 has been designated as the period for mailing gifts to Naval and Marine Corps personnel overseas. Parcels must not weigh over 5 pounds or exceed 15 inches in length and girth of the package combined.

Coal May Be Rationed

It is rumored that coal will be rationed in the early winter From reports I have received, this will not happen if the present volume of coal now taken from the mines is continued. Cars for the movement of coal are hard to get now and freight moves slowly, and will move slower as the movement of troops and war materials grow heavier. It is suggested by mine operators that you order your winter's supply of coal now, while available.

Sicily Was No Cinch

By Quentin Reynolds

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly.)

Let's take a look at the whole Sicilian operation and see just how much of a push-over it was. It was undoubtedly one of the most daringly and brilliantly executed military operations of all time, with Americans, British and Canadians working in beautiful harmony.

It was a textbook operation, with the Tactical forces (Alexander in command) carrying out everything just as the Strategic forces (Eisenhower in command) had planned. The success of the landing on "D" day, which was July 10, and the rapid advance through Sicily during the following days far exceeded the hopes of our military chiefs. But it was not easy!

Our Intelligence told Eisenhower that there were about 335,000 German and Italian troops on Sicily. Eisenhower decided to land about 65,000 men on "D" day and then gradually increase his force as needed.

The First division under Gen. Terry Allen landed at Gela on the southwestern coast. This is a great fighting unit which has even won Montgomery's admiration, and Monty is not one to toss bouquets around—even to his own troops. The weather when they landed was what the navy boys call "force five," which means that a 30-mile wind was a-blowin'.

However, Terry landed his men on time as he always does, with colorful, loquacious but fantastically courageous Gen. Teddy Roosevelt as second in command. They landed and advanced rapidly against pillbox opposition which they soon smothered.

Cruiser Beats Tanks.

Then the Hermann Goering division came at them hell-bent with tanks. The First had to fall back to the beach, where they would have fought it out to the end—and against tanks there could have been only one end. Happily, a cruiser offshore got word of what was going on, and opened up with its big guns against the tanks. It was probably the first time in military history that an engagement between tanks and a cruiser took place. Anyhow, they paid off on the cruiser.

The original plan called for Gen. Matt Ridgway's airborne troops to work with the First. However, on "D" day there was a big wind, and the lads who took to the silk were blown all over the island. Instead of being able to consolidate according to plan, the airborne lads ganged up in groups of six to ten and just improvised as they went along.

The beauty of our army, as I see it, is its infinite capacity to improvise. If the scheduled plan goes awry, the boys can dream something up on the spur of the moment. Mentally, our kids are elastic. That night the airborne lads just went a-wandering all over the landscape, popping off at anything they saw alive, and this considerably baffled the orthodox Eyetie and German defenses, which didn't think it quite sporting.

If you think that I am blindly, hopelessly impressed by, and devoted to these kids of ours—if you think that I am prejudiced and completely lopsided on the subject of our American troops here in Sicily—why, you're absolutely right.

Any American who isn't deliriously proud of our army should have his head examined. I am just trying to say that they took Sicily (I know the British and Canadians had important parts, but we're not considering them for the moment) against great odds.

Acted Like Veterans.

But let one far better qualified than I, have the floor. Alex Clifford is the war correspondents' war correspondent. The brilliant Englishman, who writes for the London Mail, has studied warfare for many years. "I got the surprise of my life," he told me. "I've been with the veteran Eighth army for a long time and naturally didn't expect much from a comparatively green outfit like the First division. You can only learn to fight by fighting. But somehow this bunch had learned it without having many fights! In action they were cool, absolutely, and they acted like veterans!"

Then he went on, thoughtfully: "When tough artillery fire came at them, they didn't bunch up as green troops always do. They fanned out beautifully. They're good fighters, and cruel fighters, too, and they are the best disciplined outfit I ever saw.

"They storm a town and have a tough time with casualties and then they walk in. Instead of getting tough with the local inhabitants or with prisoners, what do they do? They share their chocolate, their cigarettes, with them, when all their instincts must be to slaughter them as they think of their own casualties."

U. S. Officers Teach Chinese Modern Warfare

Chinese officers attending a U. S. artillery school in their country are being taught modern warfare by American officers. This is part of Gen. Joseph Stilwell's program to train the Chinese for an offensive. Left: Col. Garrison B. Coverdale of Lawton, Okla., explains a firing problem as an interpreter translates his instructions phrase by phrase. Center: Two Chinese officers in a foxhole watch the effect of artillery fire through binoculars. Standing at right is Col. C. J. Tai of the Chinese army. Next to him is Capt. Delmar R. Frazier of Milwaukee, Wis. Lower right: Chinese students prepare mortar shells for practice firing.

Litter Bearers in Action on New Georgia

Medical progress, coupled with speedy evacuation of wounded from combat zones to rear hospitals have been responsible for a tremendous increase in the percentage of recoveries of men wounded in this war compared with World War I. Part of the credit goes to hard-working, little-publicized litter bearers pictured in action on New Georgia island. Top left: Still wearing camouflage suits, bearers place wounded aboard a landing craft. Bottom left: Attendants place patients in ambulance for transfer to ship. Note the mudcaked wheel. Right: A patient is carried out of a bomb shelter after an enemy raid.

Warriors Learn to Care for Waifs

Dodge Own Bombs

Having lost their first encounter with American troops in Italy, these German prisoners dig in for protection from their own planes. French, Italian and Corsican troops cooperated with English and American forces in a common drive against the Germans. Fleeing before the Allied advance, German forces demolished the Naples waterfront, scuttled 36 ships to block the harbor, and wrecked industrial and rail centers.

QUEZON ON THE JOB

It's bad news for the Japs that President Quezón of the Philippines is back in Washington. They knew—though it was not generally realized in Washington—that Quezon had suffered a relapse of his old illness, huberculosis, which has plagued him off and on for 20 years.

Quezon was a well man at the time of Pearl Harbor. But confinement in the dampness of Corregidor, during the Jap attack, brought the illness back again. That was one reason MacArthur urged him to return to the U. S. in a submarine. When he came to Washington, Quezon was advised to take things easy. Instead he rushed into the official activities of Philippine Commonwealth affairs, not sparing himself.

His physicians advised him not to remain in Washington during the summer of 1942, nor last winter. But he remained nevertheless. Result was that last spring he suffered a further relapse.

Specialists were summoned, and Quezon was given the stern advice that he would have to get out of the humid climate of Washington immediately, if he wanted to live. Yielding to pressure, he went to Saranac, N. Y., and submitted himself to a rigid discipline during most of the past summer.

Quezon led the life of an invalid, sitting in the sunshine in a wheel chair, listening to the radio, or to his nurses as they read to him. Result of this regime was that the tuberculosis was arrested, and Quezon gained 12 pounds.

When the Japs heard of his relapse, they were ready to say to the people of the Philippines, where Quezon is still highly popular: "Look, this is the skeleton you pin your hopes to."

But today Quezon is back on his feet and back at his desk, still hoping to realize his one great ambition, to see U. S. and Philippine forces march into Manila.

SEVEN MINUTES TO WAR

Every day now, pictures are arriving in a little room in Washington which seven minutes before were in Algiers, 3,400 miles away. One day, just after the landing in Italy, 41 pictures came through the air and landed safely on top of the Pentagon building, in a little room marked "Confidential—Keep Out."

Inside that room is a little machine not as big as a typewriter, with a little cylinder on it. The cylinder spins around, exposing a negative to dots and dashes of light, and after seven minutes, the exposure is complete. From there on, it's merely a matter of developing the negative, and the U. S. public has a picture of the landings in Italy, or the surrender of the Italian fleet.

And ditto for the South Pacific. It is farther away, but the seven minute requirement still holds. From an unmentionable post in Australia, the dots of light flash into the little room, and you have a picture of General MacArthur flying in a bomber over New Guinea.

The pictures may have been taken by any one of the four photo syndicates—Acme, AP, INP, or Life—or they may have been taken by the Army Signal service. In any case, they can be telephotoed only by the official airwaves.

What would be a highly expensive daily transmission cost for the photo agencies is thus fully borne by the war department. Officials justify the cost in terms of keeping the public abreast of the war—in fact, only seven minutes away from the war.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ex-Congressman Joe Casey of Massachusetts, now doing various inside jobs for the White House, recently made a political survey of New England, reported that Maine was so strong for Roosevelt's war policies that the only Republican who could beat him was Wendell Willkie . . . Admiral Standley, U. S. ambassador to Russia, has cleared with the state department a significant speech in which, after praising Russian victories plus those of England and the United States, he says: "A victory for one is a victory for all" . . . Highly inflammatory remarks in Negro newspapers, some of them close to sedition, are being studied by the army . . . Lew Douglas, war shipping administrator, was personally thanked by the President for the job he did in helping to smooth British and American general staff feelings at Quebec. There have been some very vigorous differences between them, and thanks partly to Douglas, things were smoothed out considerably at Quebec.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Winsome Molly Flynn of OCD recalls that on the day before Pearl Harbor she drove up to the White House door, on invitation to Mrs. Roosevelt's tea, and was told by guards, "We don't see your name on the list, but it's all right if you say so." Today, you can't get near the White House.

Among the cannniest officials of OCD is Stanley McCandless, on leave from Yale university. At Yale, he was a stage-lighting expert. With OCD, he is a black-out expert.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Heat and friction are the greatest enemies of rubber. Tire treads wear out five times as fast in a temperature of 100 degrees as when the thermometer registers 40 degrees.

Rubber previously used for garden hose will provide for tires on carriages of 8,500 "75's" and 6,800 37-mm. anti-aircraft guns and 600 pontons for Army bridges.

Samuel Peal was granted the first rubber patent in England in 1791. It covered the waterproofing of leather, cotton, linen, etc.

Margaret Nichols owned some property in joint tenancy with Kitty Chatfield. When Kitty died it meant $200,000 to her. She explains the situation to her friend, Barry. Elsa Chatfield had been disinherited at Aunt Kitty's death, but is glad to be freed from a tyrannical aunt who had imposed many restrictions. Huntoon Rogers, a detective, asks what Aunt Kitty died of, and is told an overdose of morphine. The detective meets Reed Barton and discusses the matter of Kitty Chatfield and Elsa. He suspected that Kitty Chatfield was murdered although the police hold to the opinion that it was suicide. There were no fingerprints except her own on the hypodermic syringe she used.

CHAPTER III

"But Kitty talked. Lord, how she talked! Sam, thank God, was a human sort, however; he just laughed at her and went on loving his wife. And then Elsa's mother, to Kitty's great relief, passed from the scene. Pneumonia, I think, although it's hard to remember everything. Sam didn't remarry, however, until after he set himself up again in Mexico; and then it was to Berta, the Mexican. Berta was the last straw to Kitty Chatfield. Berta, of course, was all right. I like her."

"It's time Margaret was getting here. Sam Chatfield and his Mexican wife, Berta, are coming too. They're up from Mazatlan for a few days," he said. "I'm hungry. How about you two?"

"I could eat now," Huntoon Rogers said.

"Perhaps it is clearer now about the will, Barry," said Dwight, settling back in his chair once more. "When Aunt Kitty cut her niece off with only a year's income from the estate, knowing quite well that Elsa would spend all of it—which she did—it was a deliberate thrust at a vital spot, so she thought.

"Aunt Kitty never looked upon Elsa as a Chatfield. Elsa resembled very much her mother. What's more to the point she was not awed by the antiquity of the Chatfields; she refused to kowtow to the great god Family. Which of course did not endear her to Aunt Kitty. Toward the last as bitter a hatred existed between those two as you could well imagine. Elsa, of course, was not to blame for it. Kitty Chatfield was older; her neck was stiff."

"But is that enough to make the two hate each other the way they did?" I asked.

"There was the baby."

"Who was the child's father?" inquired Rogers.

"That has never been disclosed."

A boy came out upon the veranda to inform us that Margaret and the others had arrived.

Dwight Nichols has a kindly face. Dwight is not yet forty, but his is the face of a benevolent philosopher. His brown eyes are benign, soft, almost feminine in their compassion for his fellow man. There is a quiet, gentle smile constantly about his lips; his whole countenance, in fact, is lovable and sweet. His is a face widely known, for it has been seen often in the press—a face of charm, inviting to confidence, winning, friendly.

That's why the devilish caricature in the shop window struck so forcibly upon my attention. It was the eye that did the trick; the caricaturist had provided him with an eye cunning, sly, wicked. It made over the whole countenance of Dwight Nichols; it made a rascal of him, whereas he is an upright man, a sportsman who has written many books of life afield, and a man extraordinarily fond of his wife and home.

And, heavens! there was myself beside Dwight, my own inconsequential physiognomy. I blushed as I stood there on the sidewalk, oblivious to the afternoon crowd that swarmed along the boulevard. Was I such a villain as that? Was I so old?

And, heavens again! Beside me in the window, overwhelmingly, so huge and coarse that at first I had not seen it, was Jimmy the Cheese.

In other shop windows up the boulevard that mild April afternoon I encountered still more caricatures by the same clever hand. There was one of Huntoon Rogers ludicrous in the extreme; the thinning hair on top of his head was all but gone; his ears stood out like flapping wings, and his nose was twice its already generous size.

"Let me see that thing in the window," I requested of the clerk. For full of mounting spirits I had returned to the first window out of breath, thoroughly reckless now. I pointed to my own likeness. The man was hesitant. "I want to look at it. I want to make sure who did it. It's me. Don't you see?"

He looked startled for a moment, as if he were trying to divine whether or not I intended to sue him, then got the caricature from the window and laid it on the counter. Eagerly I scanned it for a signature, and there modestly in the lower right-hand corner was the word I had not been able to see from the sidewalk. It was "Elsa."

"Let me take this for a little while," I requested. The clerk shrugged his shoulders in a way that said no. "Here!" I pulled out my billfold and dropped some money on the counter. "I know the girl who did that. I want to borrow it long enough to take it over and raise heck with her."

"What if you don't come back?"

"Then keep the money. It's more than the darned thing is worth."

"All right," he said. I rolled the thing lightly, made my exit and bent my steps toward the apartment on the heights above the boulevard.

Elsa was not at home, but I found Reed Barton on her doorstep. He was knocking loudly like a desperate man upon the panel of the door as I ascended the last flight of stairs, and left off only when I poked my head within view. He was carrying flowers, which few men like to be seen doing however much they may esteem the intended recipient thereof. He sought at first to hide them from me; hence it was not difficult to see that his case was urgent.

"She's not at home," he announced with an air that indicated Elsa's absence amounted almost to a personal affront. "I thought sure she'd be here, Barry."

"Just leave the flowers on her doorstep. I'll tell her you called the next time I see her," I said. He laughed and brought the flowers around into view, drew a fat green pencil from his pocket, scribbled something upon the white paper and snapped the flowers to the doorknob with a rubber band.

"Look at that! Look at that!"

"She's the most exasperating person I know, Barry," he said. "But what's she done to you?" For the first time he realized I had reason for being there. The light was dim, but I unrolled the caricature and presented it.

He took the caricature from me, and placing it against the wall scribbled on the edge: "Dear Liar. Barry is a wild man about this. I think it's rotten too—Reed." He chuckled, proceeding to fasten it in the door jamb. "Tell her when you see her, Barry, that I called to tell her good-bye. It's rather sudden, you know. The Chief didn't let me know until yesterday. I'm on my way this evening. Come on. I've got to go over to my hangout now. There's not much time left."

We went down the stairs and set off on foot, for it was not far.

"Where are you going and why?" I inquired as we reached the boulevard and jostled along through the crowd.

"Mexico—Mazatlan. Because the Chief says to go."

"Mazatlan! Why, that's incredibly removed from the Hollywood scene."

"Yes, I know."

"But what for?"

"The Chief says I'm to report at the Mazatlan office for permanent work. Take charge of things down there."

We swung on up the boulevard. As we passed the shop window, we halted to gaze in at the caricatures of Dwight and Cheesebro, and again farther up the boulevard at still other caricatures. Near Highland the sidewalk became impassable. We endeavored to worm our way through, for Reed's hotel was just beyond the corner. The first intimation that it was more than a mere congestion of pedestrians came with the sound of a man's voice—a reedy, husky voice—shouting:

"Look at that! Look at that!"

We pressed our way into the crowd and beheld at the center of the throng a hatless figure, red of face and vociferous to the point of apoplexy. "Is it me?" he demanded plaintively of the gaping crowd. "Is it me?" He pointed at a shop window wherein I could make out a group of caricatures, the origin of which was quite apparent. I recognized the fellow, a minor comedian; he was a bit player who was cast in an occasional picture.

I don't know why a second figure on the sidewalk should catch my eye at the moment unless it were that the prescient monitor within me had again directed my eyes into the misty pool of future time to that terrifying experience at Mazatlan. For the man was an utter stranger. He was inactive, standing idly by, apparently not greatly moved by the indignity that had been done him. The man was smoking a frayed cigar. He was hatless, dressed in an incredible sports coat, brown slacks and a pink and white check shirt that would have affronted the esthetic sense of a moron.

"I won't stand for it!" bellowed the comedian. "I won't! Give me a brick, somebody. Where's a brick?"

I don't know where the brick came from. I suspected, but with no reason whatever, that the man with the frayed cigar was guilty.

"You know," laughed Reed Barton, as we rolled down town to the union station, "I wish I could stay and see how this comes out."

"I'll tell you how it comes out when I see you at Mazatlan," I said. "I've arranged to go with Dwight and Margaret on their cruise. Leaving in a week or so."

"There is more than a fine talent here," said Dwight, his voice having a judicial sound in the quiet of the ship's lounge on the Orizaba. The thin smoke of his cigarette ascended through the lighted area made by the green-shaded light. He rustled the papers on the table, looking at first one reproduction of Elsa's caricatures and then at another. There was a full page spread of Elsa's caricatures in the rotogravure section; besides others in the news section. Elsa had made a hit; she was being hailed as a find.

"Oh, hello, Cheesebro. Come in!" Dwight, looking past me into the passageway beyond the open door of the lounge, suddenly called out. I turned to behold Jimmy the Cheese on the threshold. We shook hands all around, and Dwight waved Cheesebro to a chair. "We were just talking about Elsa," he explained when we had settled. "About her mugs, as she calls them."

A voice broke in upon us as we sat there in the lounge, a strange voice, slightly blurred in its tone and smacking of New York in its inflections.

"If you're speaking of Elsa, I brought her out. Just now."

"We were, yes." Dwight rose questioningly to his feet and made as if to move toward the doorway whence came the voice.

"Don't bother to get up," said the voice heartily. "Elsa and I just got here a few minutes ago. The steward helped us on board, and I saw you fellows in here so I came on in."

"That's quite right," Dwight assured the man. "I'm glad you did. My name's Nichols."

"Glad to meet you, Nichols. My name's Rumble. George Rumble."

"This is Mr. Cheesebro, and Mr. Madison."

"Glad to meet you both," said Mr. Rumble, shaking hands swiftly with Cheesebro and then with me. "Don't believe I've ever heard of you two before." He helped himself unasked to cigarettes and sat down on the corner of the table. "Nice little boat you've got here, Nichols. Looks like a swell traveler of the ocean blue."

"Yes, thank you. I'm glad you could come down and be with us tonight."

"Thanks. I always get a kick out of going-away parties — especially when it's on a boat. Understand you're starting to Mexico tonight."

"Yes. We're sailing about midnight."

At the moment I was speechless. I observed Dwight endeavoring to adjust the newcomer to his surroundings and us to him. It was plain that he was totally unexpected. His statement, however, that he had come with Elsa made him authentic. But, as I say, I was devoid of speech. For I recognized the man. He was minus the frayed cigar he'd had when he so calmly looked on at the frantic actions of the outraged comedian. His black curly hair was oiled down to his head, and he was now smoking one of Dwight's cigarettes. Otherwise he was the same.

"How did you come down?" Dwight was asking.

"Come down?" repeated Rumble, dislodging a fragment of tobacco from his tongue with a sharp noise of his lips. "We came in Elsa's car. She's got a good car now, and a chauffeur. I helped her pick out the car. And I know the chauffeur's okeh. He's a nice boy. Cousin of a friend of mine. I got him the job."

"That's interesting," said Dwight.

Cheesebro had shrunk into himself at the advent of Mr. Rumble; he sat like a huge, reddish-brown, silent, malignant oyster. I'm sure that if it were the gentlemanly thing to do he would have bitten Mr. Rumble.

"What's your line, Cheesebro?" demanded Mr. Rumble, turning upon Jimmy the Cheese. For a moment there was no reply. I could fancy he was struggling with himself, then he hissed, "Mining investments."

"Investments? Oh, yes. I never had anything to invest myself, but that's a good line, I guess. Me, I'm in—"

But whatever it was that he was in had to wait for the moment, for Elsa called to us from the threshold.

Boom and Collapse in Farm Land Foreseen

High Incomes, Boom Psychology Are Causes

(Editorial From The Chicago Daily News)

The boom in farm lands is under way, following almost precisely the pattern of the World War I boom that ran from 1914 to 1920 and collapsed with disastrous repercussions. Unless controls are set up to curb the boom, it may get out of hand at any moment, in the opinion of William G. Murray, professor of agricultural economics at Iowa State college, whose pamphlet, "Land Boom Controls," has just been published by the Iowa State College Press.

Three factors are responsible, according to Professor Murray. They are: (1) the record-breaking incomes received by farmers since 1939; (2) interest rates and loan charges at an all-time low, making it easy to buy on credit; (3) a land boom psychology in which the same farm may be sold several times during the year, each time at an advanced price. A high percentage of sales are to absentee owners.

This absentee owner feature might warrant the listing of a fourth reason for the boom—a "fear" psychology coexistent with the boom psychology. Professor Murray notes that many of those who are buying land for investment are doing so as a hedge against inflation. To what extent this fear may figure in the national picture cannot be determined; but certainly it is a considerable factor in inducing many city folk to invest in farm lands as insurance against the evils of inflation. Another motive is to buy a farm as a hedge against excessive income taxes. Surplus income that would otherwise be heavily taxed can be put into farm improvements or operations, and thereby escape taxation. These two aspects of hedging are sufficiently prevalent among non-farmer land buyers to warrant listing fear psychology as a fourth major factor in the rush to buy farm lands.

To the extent that they exist, the fear motives might tend to lessen the purely speculative angle of the boom and to ameliorate its evils; but the danger of a runaway land boom cannot be overlooked.

Farmers are urged to buy war bonds, or pay off their mortgages with their surplus income, not to purchase more land. Bonds are a sound investment, and they can be turned to cash readily when the war is over, thus providing liquid assets at a time when farmers will have most need of them. The depression that has followed every war in history always hits the farmers first and hardest.

Vitamin D Doubles Hatchability of Eggs

With the government demanding 67 billion eggs and 4 billion pounds of poultry meat this year, the increased fertility and hatchability reported by two New England poultrymen is considered a valuable contribution to the food-for-victory program. These men attribute the decided increases in the last few years by their older hens to use of high-quality feed containing adequate amounts of "D"-activated animal sterol.

"The hatchability of the eggs from these hens averaged only between 40 and 50 per cent at certain seasons of the year," reported the brothers. "Today 60 per cent hatchability is not uncommon."

For more than two years the feed they used has been fortified with vitamin D, the all-important ingredient that prevents rickets and promotes health and growth of poultry. Egg-shell texture is also much improved, they say.

Support Price of $1.50 Set for Sweet Potatoes

Announcement has been made by the War Food administration of a potato loan program which will insure growers returns in accordance with the support prices announced prior to planting time.

Support prices for cured sweet potatoes marketed after January 1 have been set at a minimum of $1.50 per bushel for U. S. No. 1 or better grade during January, and $1.65 per bushel beginning February 1.

Speaking of Sports

by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ALTHOUGH Erwin Rudolph won his first pocket billiards championship in 1911, the genial cue shark is more active today than he was as a mere stripling of 30 or 35.

On Labor day of 1942, Rudolph started an exhibition tour which has taken him to army camps in all parts of the United States. His first stop was at Fort Ontario in Oswego, N. Y. From there he went to Key West, Fla., finally winding up deep in the heart of Texas the following June. So far he has visited at least 200 camps, played in 600 exhibitions and demonstrated his uncanny ability through the co-operation of Brunswick - Balke, the company which underwrites his army camp tour.

Rudolph, who will be 50 in December, started playing billiards back in 1909, when he was 15. Just a year and a half later he won the Ohio State pocket billiards championship. In 1927 he annexed his first world's championship by defeating Ralph Greenleaf 450 to 386.

Rudolph's Record

After taking the title from Greenleaf in 1927, Rudolph went on to win it again in 1930, 1933 and 1941. His last victory was at the expense of Willie Mosconi and Irving Crane, both of whom he defeated in the playoffs.

In talking to Rudolph, one gets the firm impression that he is much happier demonstrating his wares before the boys in army camps than he was—and is—in championship competition. And it isn't a question of nerves. He just likes to entertain the boys.

"It would be impossible to find a more interested and appreciative audience than the boys in the army camps," he declares. "Most of them understand the fundamentals of the game and are with the player all the time. It's worth traveling any distance just to perform for the boys."

The game of billiards is definitely on the rebound, according to Rudolph. He feels—and with justification—that it will come back strong after the war. Thousands of service men who never played before are taking an interest in the game. As many as 200 billiard tables are found in some of the camps, and as many as 2,500 men have witnessed some of his exhibitions. That this builds interest in the game is proved by the following excerpt from one of the many letters Rudolph's employers have received from commanding officers of army camps where he has appeared:

". . . As you can well imagine, since Mr. Rudolph's appearance, the interest in pocket billiards has taken on new life and we truly are developing some great players."

Repeat Performances

The letters Rudolph receives speak volumes. They tell of the tremendous amount of camp interest and are almost unanimous in requesting a repeat performance.

The former champion entertains with exhibitions of both pocket billiards and trick shots. Many of the latter shots were first used by Rudolph and now are a standard fixture in other players' routines.

In talking to beginners, Rudolph emphasizes three fundamental rules. The first of these—the forming of a firm "bridge" with the left hand—he terms one of the most important factors in the game. He also cautions that the cue must be held very loosely at the balance, with the shooting arm relaxed, and finally that, when stroking the ball, the head should be kept absolutely still, as in golf.

In addition, he warns beginners to refrain from using "english"—the controlled spin imparted to the cue ball when it is stroked. "English will come naturally as you learn the game," he says. "It cannot be taught successfully."

Unlike many of the topnotch billiard players, Rudolph has refused to branch out into balkline or three-cushion billiards. He concentrates on pocket billiards, and that concentration has brought him a just reward. Always sure of himself—but far from cocky—he is known as a fast player. He plays as rapidly in tournament competition as he does during exhibitions.

Added to his other qualifications is modesty. Asked to name his choice for today's greatest pocket billiards player, he replied: "Willie Mosconi."

"REGULAR" AGAIN AFTER 2 WEEKS!

"Cereal Brought Relief from Long Siege of Purgatives!"

Here's a sincere, unsolicited letter every disappointed "doser" will want to read:

"I was a sufferer from common constipation. Took pills or medicines of some kind, but got no lasting relief. Finally, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Have been eating it about 3 weeks now, and have stopped taking pills and things. My bowels move regularly every day. I am a KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN eater from now on!" Mr. Burl Brown, Warren, Ark.

How do scientists explain KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN'S gentle-acting, amazing relief, so familiar to thousands? Simply thus: Lack of certain cellulosic elements in the diet is a common cause of constipation. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's richest sources of these elements—which help the intestinal flora lighten and fluff up the contents of the colon, for easy, natural elimination. Not a purgative, that robs the system of water. Not "roughage" that acts by "sweeping you out"! ALL-BRAN is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if it doesn't give you the relief you've dreamed of. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.
