Attention! All Home Canners

Before you begin your 1944 canning, Good Housekeeping Magazine advises you: use the boiling water bath method for tomatoes and fruits only. Can all vegetables except tomatoes by the correct use of a pressure cooker to be sure of killing botulinus germs. In the last few years, cases of botulinus food poisoning have cropped up in widely different parts of the country. Buy, borrow, share a pressure cooker--but don't can low-acid vegetables any other way. If you want further information, write Good House Keeping Magazine, 959 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

WOMEN "MAN" FIRE LOOKOUT TOWERS

There are eight women "manning" fire lookout towers in New Mexico's national forests this season, according to Alva A Simpson, of the Forest Service' reginal office in Albuquerque.

Typical of these women who have found new fields to conquer are Mrs. Mildred Swatzell and Mrs. Nina Clawson. Both of their husbands are with the forest Service, Dick Clawson as a lookout, and Orby Swatzell as a "smoke chaser," whose job is to "git thar fustest" and fastest when a fire is discovered.

From her tower 20 feet above Oso Ridge, itself 8,620 feet above sea level, Mrs. Swatzell has a view of 2,000 square miles of forest and grass lands. Mrs. Clawson, who like Mrs. Swatzell works in the Cibola National Forest, has to be content with a paltry 7,650 feet.

OPA Sets Ceiling On Alfalfa

There's a dollar-and-cents roof over alfalfa hay now. New alfalfa price regulations recently announced in Washington were supplemented this week by Walter M. Connell, district OPA price executive, with rules which apply to New Mexico, Arizona, and Texas.

The base price on alfalfa, loose on the farm, piled and ready to load, has seasonal variatons: May through October, $20.50 a ton; November, $51; December, $21.50 a ton; and January through April, $52 a ton. The maximum baling charge permitted is $5 per ton by single compress menhod and $7 per ton by dougle compress method. If the producer delivers the hay he can ad the cost of transportation to the maximum price.

The Dealer's markup is $4 per ton if the alfalfa is sold from a warehouse in less than carload lots to any person other than a feeder. In all other cases, his markup is $2 per ton. When the alfalfa is unloaded into a retailer's warehouse located elsewhere than on the farm where it was grown, the retailer's markup is $6 per ton. His markup is $3 per ton in all other cases.

Nitrogeneous Fertiler Materials On Free List

Restrictions on the acquisition and use of all organic nitrogenous fertilizer materials except edible oil-seed has been eliminated by WFA.

REPORT OF 5TH WAR LOANS

Lincoln County's quota for the 5th War Loan was $161,000.; of this amount $66,000. was designated as the E Bond qupat. Final tabulation has not been completed to date but available figures indicate that the E Bond quota will not be made for the first time in Lincoln County, however, the total quota is already approximately $15,000 over subscribed.

Present figures give Liucoln County sales of about $41,000. E Bonds and $133,644 50 of the other forms. Carrizozo Post Office handled $1885 00 E Bonds; Lincoln Co. Agency $18,206 25; Fort Stanton payroll $2475. and the estimated balance based on incomplete returnes, were sold through the other Post Offices in the county.

Other types of Bonds sold and credited to Lincoln County are: Lincoln County Agency $98,818., (following were bought elsewhere but credited to the county) State - $20 000, American Tel. and Tel. - $684, Roswell Production Credit - $4000, Conti ental Oil - $3000., Southern Pacific Co. - $18,000, Upper Hondo Soil Conservation - $740, Distrist Court - $2220, Roberts Mere - $2220., Czo. Country Club - $143, Czo. Lodge 40 - $222, W. S. of Christian Service - $74., Czo. High - $18 50, McMath - $3500., and Burr's - $500.

Series "E", "F", & "G" Bonds will be counted on the quota throughout the month of July and all persons who still hav $18.75 are urged to buy one more bond and help put the "E" Bond quota over the top. Liucoln County has been the third county in the State for the past two bond drives on percentage of "E" Bond sales and that record should be maintained.

A world of thanks is extended the members of the County Committee who have so deligently pressed the sale of bonds during the fifth War Loan. Special mention is made of the excellent work of the Carrizozo Boy Scout Troop and the Corona Girl Scouts and to the newspapers for their splendid advertising contributions

This poignant picture made by an Army Signal Corps photographer shows a kneeling Roman mother and her child gently and reverently placing flowers over the still forms of two American boys who paid the supreme price to liberate them from the Nazi and Fascist grip. Look at their faces and you will see that both mother and child realize that these Americans died for them. Remember this picture when you are asked to buy an extra War Bond during the Fifth War Loan.

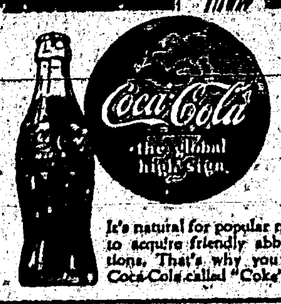
Have a "Coke", says the American airman to a visiting Czech flyer and instantly they understand each other. Around the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the symbol of welcome among the kindly-minded.



It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

Stepping Out For A United Home Front

This is a picture of nine residents of Texarkana, Arkansas-Texas, better known as "Texarkana, U. S. A."—but it is a picture of a lot more than that. It typifies the united front, chins up, flexed muscle, flexed mind, do-or-die spirit with which the whole American home front will march into the $16,000,000,000 Fifth War Loan drive starting June 12. Texarkana, in the role of typical American community, and with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as a guest, is to be the scene of Civilian D-Day, launching the loan drive. The Texarkanians you see here letting our fighters know that the home folks are back of them to the limit, come what may, are (left to right) Sam Holleman, railroad man; J. H. Bailey, butcher; Mrs. David McGehee, homemaker; Curt Weiz, war plant worker; Charles Barber, youth; L. G. Smith, cattleman; Miss Margaret Thacker, woman war plant worker; H. C. McCurry, business man; W. J. Springer, farmer. They're marching down Texarkana's State Line Avenue. It's the boast of the people of Texarkana that the State Line doesn't divide but unites them.

WHY not make a week-end project of putting together a couple of comfortable chairs with the special features shown here? You don't have to have a fancy workshop. The whole job may be done out in the yard or on the porch. Just three stock widths of lumber are needed; all the cuts are straight and the pieces may be nailed or screwed together.

But the really important thing about this chair is that it is comfortable to sit in and good to look at. The removable back makes it easy to move around and to store for the winter.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a large sheet with working diagrams; complete list of materials; dimensions and step-by-step directions for cutting and assembling this chair. Ask for Design 269 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Back in January, American troops recaptured from the Japs the first invaded rubber-producing land. They took possession of Salder in New Guinea with its 300 acres of rubber trees. All Salder rubber normally goes to Australia.

Informed rubber officials insist that when peace comes, our synthetic rubber plants will be just as vital to the security of the American people as they are during the war period. They say that the amount of post-war synthetic which will be made in this country after the war will depend upon the total world demand for rubber and upon the crude prices established by plantation operators.

FBItems and G-Maneuvers

In the gangster film about Roger Touhy and his gang the producers lost a few good tricks which apparently the gov't agents didn't tell them about—after Touhy and his mob were recaptured. . . . Fr'xample: When the FBI went into the rooms of two of the gang—they didn't notice a match stuck at the top of the door. . . . To let the gang know if anyone entered during their absence. One mobster had started opening the door when he realized the planted match was gone. . . . So he started firing his revolver. . . . The agent came out shooting too, and two of Touhy's pals were hit by the marksman and went to heaven.

Then there's the episode in the butcher shop. . . . A uniformed chauffeur turns out to be one of the Touhy gangsters. He went to purchase meat in the neighborhood for Touhy (and the others) who didn't risk coming out of the house. . . . The butcher shop, however, was staffed by G-Men. . . . After a signal from one butcher a bike-rider G-Man tailed the chauffeur to the scene where Touhy was hiding. . . . But the confederate was not disguised as a chauffeur in the actual kidnap. . . . The movie people apparently didn't want to offend the devout by sticking to the facts. . . . The disguise worn by the gangster in the meat shop was that of a priest.

The average newspaper reader, recalling Touhy's mob, will think the snatched man is the rich Jake the Barber, victim of that gang. . . . But in the film the producers purposely switched things to give the story more pep. . . . Jake the Barber's real tortures cannot be screened or even written about—so vile were they. . . . So for the screen the authors and director borrowed several interesting items from the kidnappings of a wealthy youth named Rosenthal (in New York) and the Urschel snatch in the West. . . . All the kidnappers are now rusting and retting in prison on sentences for life.

The most frightful moment in Director J. Edgar Hoover's entire life happened that terrible 5 in the morning—when the night was still black. . . . Hoover and some of the agents attacked the Touhy mob from the rear of the building—other FBI men covered the front. . . . Mr. Hoover, revolver in paw, climbed over the back fence and tread softly to the back door, where he let out the most piercing shriek ever heard anywhere in the whole world. . . . It seems that a poor, little, inoffensive, sleeping black cat was stepped on by the most famed of all G-Men, and it let out one screetch, which the startled G-Man tried to out-holler.

FBI agents the other day were investigating a theft of gov't-owned cigarettes destined for overseas shipment. . . . The foreman, who had denied any knowledge of the theft, produced a package of cigarettes bearing a give-away gov't label. . . . The agent, who had mooched a cigarette with a definite purpose, forthwith arrested the foreman, who was charged with the crime.

One of the problems confronting the FBI these days is the apprehension of individuals obtaining money fraudulently under the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act. Sixty-nine convictions have resulted during the first ten months of the 1944 fiscal year. An oddity in the FBI's files on this subject has to do with a Louisville, Ky., woman who, when questioned by FBI agents, offered to return fourteen $50 checks she got illegally, but hadn't spent. She said she had kept all the checks except one, which the soldier himself cashed, and that she was most willing to return them to the Government.

The alertness of G-Men was demonstrated again the other day in Los Angeles. An agent spied a man on the street whom he recognized as a fugitive—a wanted notice had been issued a few days before. Although the suspect produced phony selective service cards, the G-Man was persistent and took his fingerprints, whereupon the fugitive admitted his identity as Walter Ray Carroll, wanted in Washington State in connection with a $25,000 narcotics robbery.

Among the latest rackets discovered by the John Edgar Hoovers is that one used by some fortune-tellers to swindle gullible draft-dodgers. . . . The G-Whizzers nabbed one fortune-teller in Texas. . . . She got next fees "for keeping men out of the army." . . . Her hocus-pocus, however, was not very effective. . . . Most of her suckers were inducted, anyhow. And she was inducted into a Federal hoosegow, where she can't predict her release.

Data Helps Win Mastery of Air

General Bissell Describes in 'Aerosphere' How Facts Are Compiled.

NEW YORK.—One of the principal reasons for the development of Allied superiority is the effective use of air intelligence or information on how United Nations' planes and those of the enemy function under combat conditions, according to an article by Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell in "Aerosphere-1943," this aviation year-book's newest edition. General Bissell recently was named assistant chief of staff, intelligence division, United States army, after serving as assistant chief of staff, intelligence, army air forces.

Outlining the application of air intelligence, General Bissell said:

"We must evaluate the enemy's aircraft and his tactics, and compare them critically with our own. We must collect, correlate and condense all the available data on enemy aircraft, aviation equipment and technique, and make it available to those who design or modify our planes. We could produce planes without this constant check and continuing study, but probably not one that possesses the degree of superiority necessary to insure our air crews those advantages in combat so essential to the development of the maximum effectiveness of air power.

Three Sources of Data.

"The collection of this vital data is in some respects the most important work done by air intelligence. The greater part of it comes from three principal sources: First, by the thorough and systematic interviewing of combat crews by squadron intelligence officers as soon as the crews return from their missions. Second, by thorough investigation by 'crash officers' who search out and painstakingly study the design, construction and equipment of all enemy planes brought down in territory we control. Third, by actual tests and analysis of captured enemy aircraft and aviation material.

"By making full use of what we have thus learned, and by exploiting fully United Nations' genius and initiative, we have so far been able to stay several jumps ahead of the Japanese, and at least one jump ahead of the Germans.

"Through detailed knowledge of enemy aircraft we were able to discover weaknesses in the combat performance of our aircraft which we could and did correct. An example of this is the now obsolescent P-40 fighter.

P-40 vs. Zero.

"In the early months of the war much was heard about the Japanese Zero outperforming this plane. In fact, two conflicting theories in design were pitted against each other. It was perfectly true the P-40 could not turn or climb with the Zero. We had loaded it with guns and ammunition to give it deadly fire power. We had self-sealing tanks. We had ample armor to protect our pilots.

"The Japanese built the Zero with lightness as a primary consideration, and sacrificed those characteristics. We built heavily and ruggedly so the P-40 could take punishment no Zero could ever take. We insisted that our fighters not only have superior fire power and defensive armor, but that they have also the strength that would permit the pilot to get home after severe battle damage.

"Now, after two years of actual use in combat, we have the proof that we were right, and that the Japanese, who sacrificed so much for climb and maneuverability, were wrong. Fire power and armor helped our American pilots gain command of the Pacific air."

Nazis Hope to Build Up Sea Power for Next War

LONDON.—An article in the German newspaper "Munchner Neueste Nachrichten" reaching here said the maximum hope remaining to Nazidom is to hold onto conquered Europe for a peace that will allow the creation of German naval power sufficient for a new try at Great Britain and the United States.

In discussing Nazi postwar aspirations, the article blamed Germany's inability to invade England upon lack of naval strength, and said the only reason the conflict had been confined to the mainland of Europe was that Germany did not possess the means of inflicting defeat on British-American sea power.

The article added that it must be taken for granted Great Britain and America would emerge from the war with their sea power unimpaired, and the new Nazi order would have no chance until such time as Germany and the new Europe had created sea power.

Germans Take 10,000 Workers From Rome

ROME.—Allied military government agents reported after a preliminary investigation that the Germans had carried away 10,000 Roman male workers in the last few days, but otherwise hardly molested the city. The removal of the workers was carried out under a "voluntary enforcement" program.

Shorts Costumes Are Popular For Sports and Leisure Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COOL, cute and comfortable are the shorts costumes which are regarded as being both practical and eminently style-correct for sports and leisure wear this summer. The widespread enthusiasm for these utilitarian outfits is part of the back-to-the-sun movement so notable in this year's warm-weather fashions.

Designers are styling this season's shorts outfits so cleverly that becoming versions are provided for all figure types. These smart abbreviated costumes for busy or idle hours follow the current theme of slenderized lines with nicely indented waistlines for figure flattery. A characteristic feature of this summer's shorts is that they are cut on fabric-saving lines. The new-this-season types are no wider than your hips, whether they be pleated, slightly flared or boyishly creased front and back, so as to achieve the much-desired tapered silhouette.

Fabrics play an important role in the success of the new shorts costumes. Fine rayon weaves and attractive mixtures of rayon and wool or rayon and cotton provide a wide variety of materials. Plain fabrics are teamed with print or woven pattern fabrics for interesting contrast. Note with what chic the trio of shorts costumes illustrated make fabric contrast their theme. Fine rayon crepe in a novelty striped print of russet tones against white makes the attractive vagabond skirt of the slender silhouetted costume pictured to the right. The slightly flared skirts are of spun rayon basket cloth in a solid russet tone.

Snowy white rayon crepe is a popular medium for both long-sleeved and short-sleeved shirts, which have the practical advantage of retaining their original whiteness no matter how often they are tubbed or cleaned. These white classics are frequently teamed with shorts in linen-textured spun rayon in solid pastels or high color. They are also shown with shorts of plaid or plain checked taffeta, printed or monotone fine rayon shantung, and mannish corded spun rayon weaves.

Centered in the group pictured, crisply tailored shorts of gleaming taffeta checked in red, white and black combine beautifully with the newly popular classic shirt in snow-white rayon to make a striking costume for either active sports or for loafing decoratively outdoors in warm weather.

The eye-thrilling shorts costume, shown to the left, presents a most intriguing novelty in way of a short-sleeved shirt which has a new and striking target-back motif, the same achieved by a clever cutting and manipulation of deep green and white striped fine rayon crepe. This target-designed shirt teams nicely with tailored shorts of corded rayon and cotton weave.

Some of the most flattering shorts costumes for women who wear larger sizes, as well as for youngsters who like to keep their dressing problems simple, include separate skirts of either matching or contrasting fabrics, which button on to make the outfit do double duty for shopping or boardwalk wear. Fine rayon jersey, which resists wrinkling and packs beautifully, is a favorite medium for these versatile vacation costumes.

Sun worshippers with trim figures and with an urge to get their full daily quota of vitamin D are attracted to shorts outfits which team brief trousers with pretty halter or bra tops of roman-striped or floral printed fine rayon jersey, cleverly draped to flatter and with straps that can be slipped off for all-over shoulder tanning.

Accessory Lure

It's accessories that count this season. One basic black gown and a generous supply of lovely lacy neckwear together with fetching jewelry accents, also artificial flowers galore now that the vogue for wearing flowers has been revived, and one can dress to occasion with perfect ease and assurance. This year it's the rose that is the favorite flower of fashion. A rose on your hat, in your hair, at your waistline or worn as a shoulder corsage is playing a glamorous role in adding the touch that tells to milady's summer costume.

Patent Leather Bag Sets

Registered in the "something new" class you will find bags and compacts of black patent leather richly decorated with hand-painted motifs, done in bronze gold.

Flower Trimming for Charming Necklines

If there is one thing more than another that should be considered in choosing a new frock, it's a flattering neckline. No detail is more essential than a neckline that is that becoming you're sure to look your prettiest no matter how simple and inexpensive your frock. Dresses this summer are noted for their charming necklines. If you have a frock with a simple low-cut square or deep U-neckline, with a little ingenuity you can add little touches to it that lends to its charm. For a pretty effect try a flower-trim. Make a lei of flowers by sewing one single blossom after another along a wee tape or cord. Flat daisies are the easiest to handle but you can use miniature gardenias or roses. For gala occasions you can baste this chain of flowers about the low neck of your dress.

Tri-Color Dress Is Smart

Now that the jumper dress has become such an important fashion, designers are giving it added interest in that they work it out in stunning tri-color effects. For example, a brown crepe jumper is worn over a blouse the sleeves of which are styled of citron and coral crepe. The bolero suit is another outlet for color strategy. A skirt may be navy, the bolero deep fuchsia, the blouse in muted pink or white and the color scheme will surprise you with its chic and charm. As new fashions appear, you will be more than impressed with the fact that designers are thinking in terms of striking and unusual color combinations. 1t

Rameses III Camouflaged Troops to Confound Foe

It is generally believed that camouflage developed during the 1914-18 war. Armies then used all sorts of devices to make themselves invisible, and vessels were painted in "dazzle" style. In the beginning, however, many uniforms were splendidly colorful. The French infantry wore red pantaloons.

British uniforms, from earlier experiences in India and South Africa, were already the dull but useful khaki, which blends into the ground colors so well. First to use camouflage was the ancient Egyptian king, Rameses III. He made his soldiers paint their shields and tunics with tiger stripes, to confound and terrify the enemy.

KNOCK THE HEAT OUT OF THE TRIANGLE

To three famous triangles—the eternal or human triangle, baseball's triple play, and the rapidly dissolving Axis triangle - George W. Kimbrell, of the Forest Service, today added the infernal or fire triangle.

"It takes no mathematical wizard to figure out that fuel plus air plus heat equals fire," Mr. Kimbrell. "We have all the constituents in New Mexico's national forests now, including some heat supplied by careless people who did not have time to blow out their matches or stamp out their cigarettes.

"Besides, New Mexico timber is about as dry as when the ranger wrote, "It's so dry up here in the woods now that even my pen has dried up and I have to finish this letter with a pencil."

Beef Restrictions Still Hold

Gordon H. Wood' acting state supervisors of WFA's Office of Distribution, reminded New Mexicans today that the May 25 amendment on farm slaughter of livestock applies only to farmers and to all classes of livestock except cattle.

Under the regulations, farmers are defined as: "persons slaughtering 10,000 pounds, or less, of livestock and whose principal source of livelihood is derived from agricultural activities."

"Persons who have been issued local slaughterers' or butchers permits are still governed by their original quotas regarding beef slaughter," Mr. Wood said. "However, they may slaughter as many hogs, sheep, and lambs as they want to under the present order."

A U.S. Navy News Release

U.S. Secret Service Warns Against Forgers of Dependency Checks

Service families and merchants were warned today to be constantly on the alert against forgers of government checks, as the Eleventh Naval District, in cooperation with the U. S. Secret Service started a campaign to help protect Navy personnel and their dependents against this crime.

During the fiscal year which ended June 30, the government issued more than 809,000,000 checks. Of this number more than 8,000,000 were sent monthly to the families and other dependents of servicemen.

The increase in the number of government checks issued has resulted in an enlargement of the opportunities to steal, forge, and negotiate those checks fraudently. Many criminals now specialize in this "business."

In hunbreds of cases the Secret Service said, checks have been stolen from mail boxes along with letters. The criminal then has proceeded to use the letters as identification while cashing the check.

When an Army or Navy allotment check is stolen, the person depending upon it may be forced to go without some of the necessites of life until a duplicate check is sent several weeks later.

The merchant who is victimized by a forger is the ultimate loser. If the check is stopped, the amount will be charged to him unless he can identify and locate the forger.

To aid in preventing this crime, the Secret Service has formulated two sets of protective suggestions. Those addressed to the payees of checks are:

1. Be at home or have a member of your family at home when the check is due to be delivered. Get your check immediately upon delivery.

2. Be sure your name is printed clearly on your mail box, and equip your mail box with a good lock.

3. Cash your checks in the same place each month to simplify identification.

4. Do not endorse your checks until you are in the presence of the person you will ask to cash them.

To business men the Secret Service adds the following suggestions.

1. When a stranger asks you to cash a check, insist that he properly identify himself as the rightful payee of that check. Know your endorser. There is no form of identification which can be guaranteed--but war ration books, bearing the owners signature, or Selective Service registration cards usually are safer than other cards and papers.

2. Before cashing any check for a stranger, ask yourself this question; "If this check is returned because of a forged lendorsement, can I locate the stranger and recover my loss?"

3. If a check already is endorsed when it is presented to you, insist that it be endorsed again in your presence and compare the handwriting.

4. Have all checks initialed by the employees who pay out the money for them.

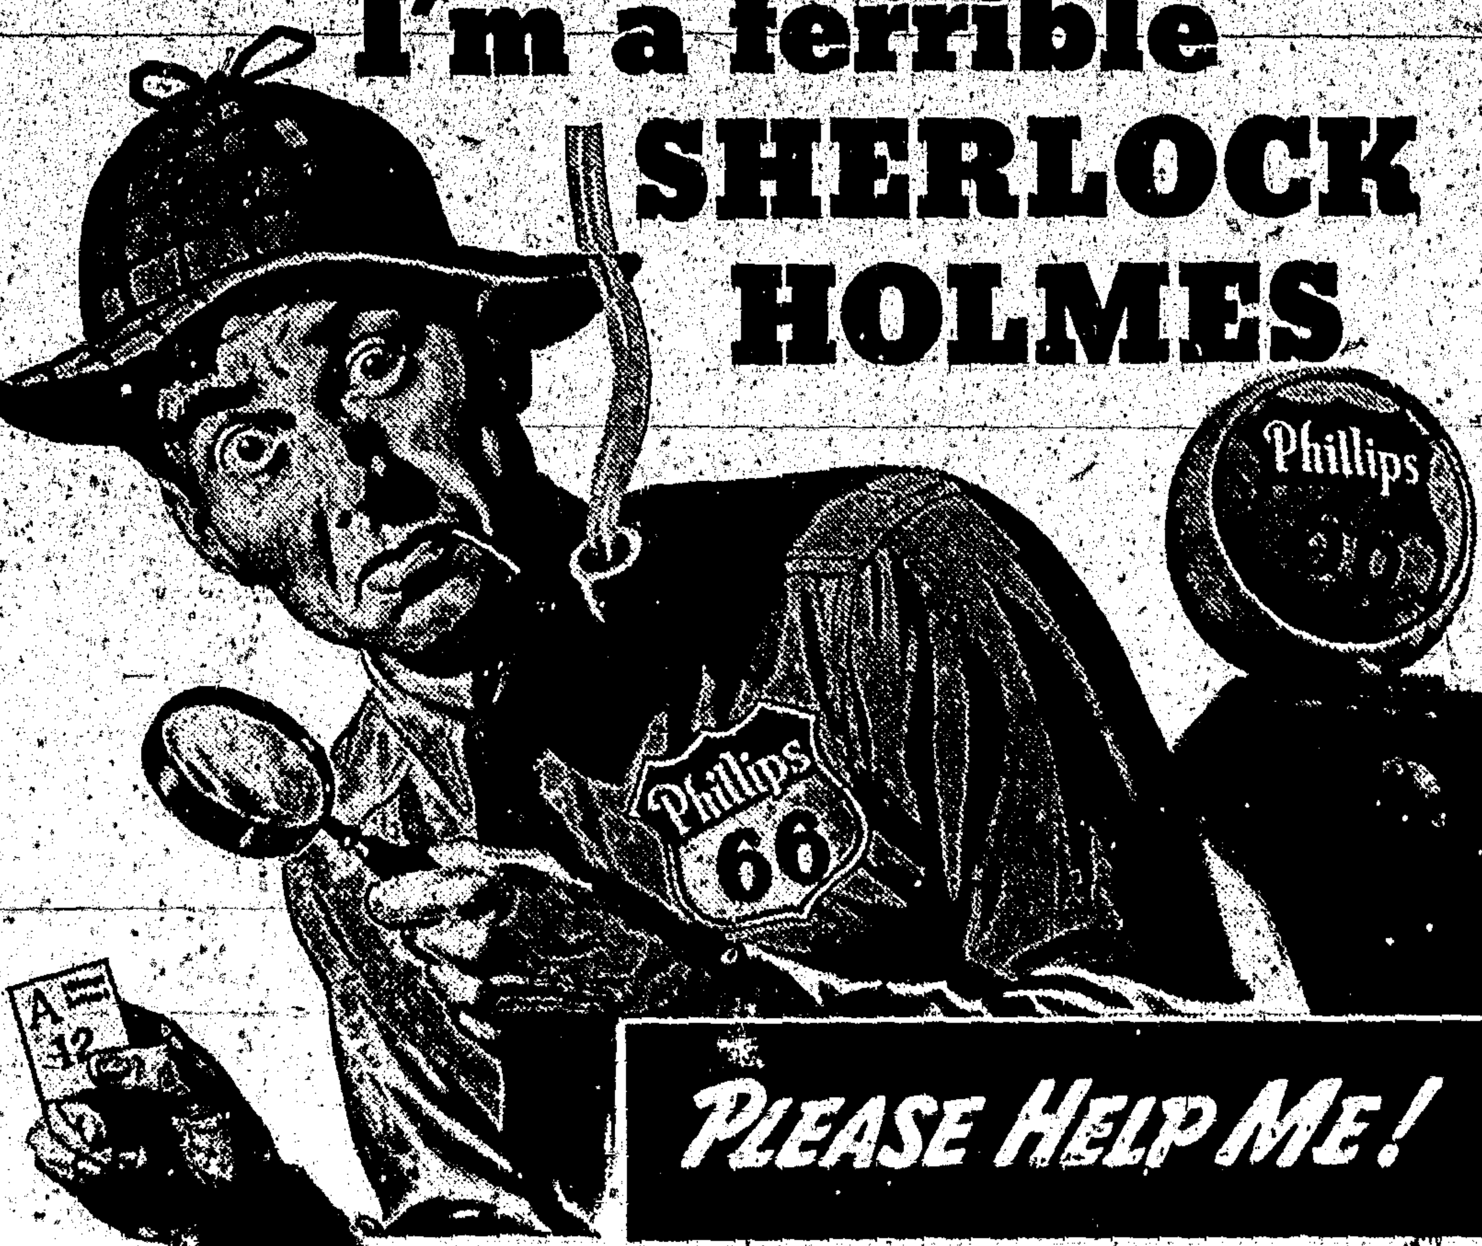
I'm a terrible SHERLOCK HOLMES



I'M AN EXPERT, when it comes to checking tires for inflation, cuts and bruises, and re-capping . . . and I'm even more of an expert at lubricating cars, of any age and make, right from front bumper to tail-light.

But when it comes to catching counterfeit gasoline ration coupons, I'm a washout! Believe me, every service station man in the country tries, because it is his patriotic duty. We know that oceans of oil are needed to win the war, and we know that unless the black market in gasoline is broken, there may not be enough to go 'round.

So, help me and help yourself and your Uncle Sam, by endorsing the face of every coupon in your possession. Don't take any gasoline coupons from anyone as a gift! Don't accept gasoline at any price without giving up coupons! And use the legal gasoline you buy for essential driving only!

I have asked you to help me; in return, I'll be glad to help you. Bring your car in any time for the many Tire-Saving and Car-Saving services I offer. Some are free, and some carry a small charge for materials and labor. But they are a big aid in making your car and your tires last longer and go further.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Parrot gets Will Dudley's Goat

Will Dudley never liked his wife's pet parrot. Claimed the parrot called him "Stinky"—and ate his pipe tobacco. And the Missus said it served Will right . . . she'd told him not to smoke his pipe indoors.

To make her point, the Missus grabs Will's pipe and throws it out the window. So Will grabs the parrot and throws him out too. Looks like unpleasantness—till in comes the parrot with Will's corn cob in his mouth. (And whistling "Home Sweet Home," Will claims.)

Well, Will and his wife both bust out laughing . . . and made peace over a friendly glass of beer, allowing how it's pretty silly getting mad at one another's differences.

From where I sit, that's a mighty happy ending. If all of us would live and let live in a spirit of tolerance—whether it's tolerance for a parrot or a pipe—we'd be a whole lot happier and better off.

DISCHARGED VETERANS

President Roosevelt has just received a suggestion from Chicago's Mayor Ed Kelly designed to aid in the rehabilitation of ex-servicemen.

Kelly, acting on a proposal from his wife Margaret, head of Chicago's tremendously popular servicemen's aid organization, has urged FDR that men be permitted to wear their uniforms for three to six months after they are discharged, if they want to. Kelly pointed out that 30,000 Chicago boys have been discharged from service and that many return home, after a year or more's absence, feeling thoroughly out of place in the community in civilian clothes.

Many folks don't even know the boys have been off to war serving their country, Kelly has pointed out. Discharge buttons, promised many months ago, are still not issued to men everywhere. Even though disabled, they no longer can enter servicemen's centers for recreation, no longer receive special rates in theaters.

Kelly also wrote the President that, during the last war, men were allowed to keep wearing their uniforms for some time after their discharge. Many walked the streets in uniforms hunting jobs and received preference because they were veterans.

Note—Chicago's servicemen's centers have done one of the best jobs in the U. S. A., have served more than 12,000,000 meals free.

CONGRESSIONAL SOLDIERS

It's not nearly so bad as in the last war, but several younger members of congress are having trouble as they seek reelection, because they are in congress and not in the army. In most cases, the "slacker" charges are simply whispered.

In one case, political opponents are whispering about a congressman who has received the navy's Silver Star for gallantry in action. He is Lyndon Johnson of Texas, who saw his bunkmate killed beside him in the South Pacific.

Representative Albert Gore of Tennessee, who is 35, is another who has been smeared in a whispering campaign. A father, Gore waived his congressional immunity last winter and was inducted into the army as a private. However, at the request of the President, he returned to congress before he began training.

Others who have felt the lash of criticism because they are serving their country in the office to which they were elected are Wilbur Mills of Arkansas, Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, Lindley Beckworth of Texas, and even Representative Warren G. Magnuson of Washington. The 39-year-old Magnuson, now running for senator, has seen more of the western Pacific theater than most soldiers and sailors in the area, was serving on the aircraft carrier from which General Doolittle's planes took off for the first bombing of Tokyo.

AIR-COOLED CONGRESS

While war workers swelter in movie theaters and while government officials suffer in Washington's flimsy temporary buildings, the high-ceilinged house and senate office buildings enjoy air conditioned comfort—even with congress adjourned.

Although the capitol air-conditioning equipment is being geared to use the smallest possible amount of freon gas, the fact remains that it took a special deal with WPB to release the 14,000 pounds needed. Meanwhile, movie theaters serving war workers in the South have been denied freon because of military demands.

Capitol Architect David Lynn says he's the man to blame, not members of congress. He says not a single member has taken the matter up with him.

Probably no one is directly to blame, unless it is the WPB officials who played favorites in releasing the freon. No one begrudges the congressmen their air-conditioning, but their buildings, because of thick walls and high ceilings, would be cool even without air-conditioning.

In the army's huge Pentagon building, the freon supply has been cut to the bone. The result, according to workers there, is that the atmosphere is slightly warm. Last year they claimed it was far too chilly, with many colds resulting.

Speaking of Sports

by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

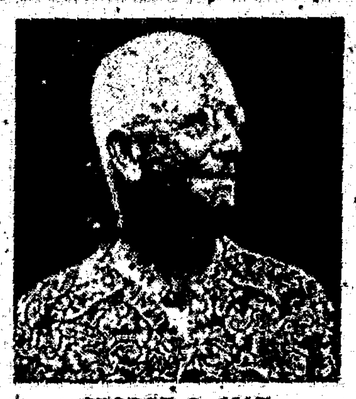
THE circus-like atmosphere which surrounded the Tam O'Shanter All-American golf championships for the past three tournaments will be missing this year.

Scheduled for August, the Tam O'Shanter will be conducted with all the traditions of this dignified Scotch game. It will be like those staged by the U. S. G. A. — instead of George S. May.

May used a full bag of tricks for the first three championships. Most of them were frowned upon by the U. S. G. A. and by many of the players who weren't enthusiastic about the innovations. In fact, George S. and the numerous spectators were the only happy people concerned. The Tam meets were nationally known as "golf circuses" and have been referred to in a national magazine as "Golf Without Elephants." But they drew the largest galleries in the history of golf in this country.

Entertainment Angle

Despite the professional and purist attitudes toward May's shows, he did try to supply a full measure of entertainment for the cash customers. Many of his experiments were a complete break with tradition, and that always invites censure. But now May is willing to comply with the regulations of the U. S. G. A. and the P. G. A. There will be less showmanship this year—the Tam will be golf only.



GEORGE S. MAY

But one innovation isn't going by the boards. That's the one dollar admission fee. More than anything, that low price helped popularize the Tam. In 1943 admission was through the purchase of a one dollar war stamp. The money was handled by treasury department workers. This year May is going back to the one dollar admission, which will absorb the heavier federal amusement tax. Which means that just about anybody can afford to witness the event.

We're glad to see that May has decided to discard his policy of numbering players. From the beginning he thought that if players wore numbers on their shirts which correspond with those on the program, identification would be made easier for the galleries. Much in the manner of football elevens.

Kirkwood Rebellion

The idea was decidedly unpopular among a majority of the players. They figured it undignified. In 1942 Joe Kirkwood, Australian trick shot artist, quit the tournament because of a dispute with Mr. May. Kirkwood refused to wear his number. A satisfactory compromise has been reached. This year the numbers will be affixed to the players' bags and to their caddies.

May also has announced that he will abide by the U. S. G. A. ruling which prohibits amateurs from accepting more than $100 maturity value in war bonds as prize money. Last year he offered more than that, figuring the official ruling was too severe. Not that he has changed his mind about the amount. He had planned amateur prizes of considerable value this year, but the U. S. G. A. could not be placated and so May will adhere to its regulations. Then, too, there will be no extra exhibition matches, such as were played last summer and which were sources of irritation.

A Debt to May

It is obvious that the Tam is going to be a businesslike golf tournament. That will do much to give the event the position it deserves in golf. We have maintained that golf is indebted to May. While many others folded up as soon as the war started, May did much to keep championship golf alive. He provided leadership which was sadly lacking in too many quarters.

The Tam O'Shanter still offers the largest amount of prize money ever known in golf. And that draws entries like sugar draws flies.

Dark Ages Lasted From Fifth to Twelfth Century

Roughly speaking, the Dark Ages extended from the fall of the Western Roman Empire in the fifth century to the revival of learning in the 12th century—altogether about seven centuries. During a good part of that period learning was at its lowest ebb in Europe.

Civilization had been put in reverse by the masses of barbarians who swept down from northern Europe to over-run the former seats of learning.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

DUDE WOMAN

By PETER B. KYNE

WNU SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Mary Sutherland, an eastern girl, is lured to Arizona by the advertisements of the Wagon Wheel dude ranch, operated by Ma and Pa Burdan. She is met at the station by Len Henley, rodeo rider, who tells her that the Wagon Wheel has gone out of business. Len takes her to Phoenix, where she meets Len's Aunt Margaret Maxwell. Hearing that the Wagon Wheel Ranch is broke, Ham Henley Sr., Len's dad, purchased the Burdan notes from the bank. He wants complete control. While at Phoenix Len enters the rodeo, drawing a broncho known as Mad Hatter, toughest horse in the West. Ham Henley bets Ma son Len three to one that Len won't be able to stay on Mad Hatter.

CHAPTER V

"You hear that, you scallawag," the old man almost yelled. "Even strangers realize you been a disgrace to the family." He smiled at Mary with great appreciation of her support and held out his glass to clink with hers. "I'm not surprised. Red-heads is always smart."

Mary thought Len Henley considerably less exuberant than his father, who went on, his voice raised an octave, under the stress of his emotion. "The son of a gun breeds back to my old man, Miss Sutherland, and my pappy was the most contrary man that ever helped Arizona to statehood. If you asked him nice to do something he'd bust a hamestrap to do it, but if you give him an order he'd get rebellious right off.

The ladies donned their wraps presently and the party motored out to the Phoenix country club in Ham Henley's car. The orchestra was playing as they entered the dining room, so Len appropriated Mary for a dance while his father led Mrs. Maxwell to the table.

"Well," he announced, as they circled the small dance floor, "that's my old man, dinner clothes, cowman's fine boots, black sombrero and his own tobacco and cigarette papers. I hope you'll like him."

"I hope I shall. He requires knowing, however, although I have half a suspicion his bark is very much worse than his bite. I gathered that you haven't seen each other for a long time."

"We don't travel the same roads, Miss Sutherland."

"It's nice to think you'll meet frequently, now that you have decided to buy the Wagon Wheel ranch." She added, after a long pause, "Why not leave the Wade brothers to somebody else? I have a suspicion your father is in a mood tonight to give you half his kingdom."

"But first he'll make me demonstrate I can manage it capably and profitably. So I think I'll glean my experience on a job that I'll boss; then, if there should arise necessity for a good job of criticism or scolding, I'll do it."

"I could wish you hadn't made that bet with him, Don Leonardo."

"I could, too, but he asked for it and I gave it to him, because there was a certain malice behind his desire . . . Well, not malice, really, but that hateful 'this-hurts-me-more-than-it-does-you' formula of fatherhood in the woodshed. He thinks I'm conceited about my rough riding and that it's his duty, as my father, to take a modicum of that conceit out of me. Also, he'd like to wreck me financially, because he thinks that the older I grow and the poorer I become the easier it will be to break down my resolve never to enter his employ. Happiness means more to me than money greatly in excess of reasonable needs, so Pappy isn't going to slip the burden of his assets to me."

"I can't quarrel with that philosophy, Len."

Her thoughts shifted abruptly. "I imagine had you been inspired this morning to buy the Wagon Wheel ranch instead of this evening you would not have risked a couple of thousand dollars to gamble on yourself."

"That's the principal reason why I decided to buy the ranch!"

"If one handicaps that horse on his past performances, three to one on him are fair odds. And he has already won over you three times."

"True, but I learned the secret of his fighting style. Since then I've watched him unload fifty good men and I've noticed he never changes his technique. But tomorrow I'll ride that old champion to a squealing finish. I'll not even permit the pick-up men to take me off. I'm going to ride Mad Hatter until his heart breaks and he stands still and says: 'Boy, you win.'"

"It must be very comforting," she mused, "to possess that sort of self-confidence, to do all one's own thinking and make all one's own plans. My life runs in a groove, like the ivory ball on a roulette wheel."

"But in the end," he reminded her, "the ball always pops out of the groove."

"I wish I had a job, Don Leonardo. I'd like to make some money for the fun of making it, to work at a task because it is not an easy one, to get it down and throttle it."

"Perhaps we have a small touch of atavism here, Miss Sutherland."

"My great-grandmother walked beside a covered wagon and punched oxen from Springfield, Missouri, to Sacramento, California. And she bore my grandfather en route and got herself two Indians with her brother's Kentucky rifle after the Indians had put so many arrows in him he looked like a porcupine."

"You've been around a great deal—I mean, you've seen more of what people call life than I have, Miss Sutherland—"

"Call me Mary, Len?"

"Thanks. I've been wanting to but remembered the old adage that familiarity breeds contempt and I couldn't risk contempt from you. Have you ever seen a case of love at first sight?"

"I have seen what turned out to be infatuation at first sight."

"Do you believe it's possible for one to fall in love at first sight of the love object?" Len asked.

"In diagnosing a disease doctors often make the mistake of confusing the symptoms; hence it's not surprising that the symptoms of true love and infatuation always confuse the patient who will insist on being his own doctor. Love is a profound emotion and infatuation is a hallucination."

"Well, when one feels all hippity-ho inside, when his feeling is one of worshipfulness and admiration for quality, when he'd swim a river full of hungry crocodiles to fight three world's champions on the farther bank because they were in his way, and if he was unhappy about it because his circumstances indicated he should keep his mouth shut—"

"Why, you old Pollyanna! Didn't you know that true love like that is only found in Victorian novels—that something sloppy and synthetic has taken its place in the modern world?"

"Call me Mary, Len?"

"Not one hundred per cent. For instance you could not possibly induce in any man anything sloppy or synthetic. What worries me is that—"

"The thing to do is ascertain what this girl thinks of you, Don Leonardo, and that's usually discovered by asking."

"Who's talking about me? I'm discussing a hypothetical case."

"I'm talking about you and you're not a hypothetical case. Did the girl fall in love with you at first sight?"

"I don't know and I don't dare ask—for sundry sound reasons."

"I can appreciate them. Well, I'll set your mind at ease. The girl did fall in love with you at first sight."

"How do you know?"

"She couldn't help it. The girl who could help it would be a monstrosity."

At that instant, somewhere in the club house the fuse controlling the light circuit in the dining room and lounge blew out and they stood in inky darkness. Of course the dancing ceased, although the trumpet-player, being a wag, immediately played "Dancing In The Dark." And, fully aware that he should not do it; aware that he was getting himself into deep water close to the shore; aware only that he was no longer responsible for his actions which now appeared to be controlled by an imp, Len Henley drew Mary close to him, miraculously found her face uplifted to his and kissed her three times—breathlessly.

"Tell me," she whispered. "Ask me."

"It isn't synthetic or sloppy," he whispered back. "I'm a broken man. I'll never be the same. I love you. How about you?"

"Oh, darling, I'm so glad!"

Her lips came up again and met his and he held her and she felt the hard regular beat of his heart against her breast. "Promise me you'll never grow up," she whispered, "and I'll always love you and never leave you."

"The Spirit of the Hassyampa," he said, "makes strong medicine, doesn't he? Write your own ticket."

The lights came on and the music started but in their hearts was the music of the spheres, the melody of a love that had had a quick birth and might be destined to die as quickly, but with that contingency they were, happily, not concerned, for Time, the tomb-builder, also builds Castles in Spain!

When they returned to the table Hamilton Henley gave them both sharp looks, in which pride and curiosity were mingled. He said to Mary, "What business is your father in, young lady?" and murmured, "Tck! Tck! Tck!" when informed that her father had no occupation, unless that of killing time could be considered one.

He pondered this. "I should have retired long ago myself," he announced, "only I been afraid to. I wouldn't know what to do with my time. It takes a smarter man than I be to make his pile an' retire an' chuck the habit o' work. The art o' playin' has got to be learnt when a feller's young, like Len."

"My father started learning it in his crib."

"I see. Your grandfather done it all, eh?"

"No, the drone strain in our family sprang from my great-grandfather, who went to California in 1849. He was a smart Yankee and quickly discovered that gold was something miners slaved and starved to acquire in order that they might enjoy brief periods of riotous living. So my ancestor decided to supply the riotous living and engaged in the business of retailing squirrel-whisky. The price of a drink was a pinch of gold-dust from a miner's poke — and great-grandfather had an unusually large thumb and forefinger. Eventually he employed both hands and grabbed everything in sight."

That tale drew a hearty laugh from Hamilton Henley. "Well, you ain't a stuck-up dude at any rate," he complimented her. "Len's great grandfather was one o' the first settlers in Arizona an' while the grabbin' was good an' he had the grabbin' instinct the Indians didn't leave him no time to grab. All he collected was the scelps o' Apaches—twenty-eight of 'em, an' then got himself killed resentin' an insult to his jedgment o' scelps. A feller put a piece in the paper claimin' three o' the old man's scelps was Mexican."

It was Mary's turn to laugh. "It would appear," she said, "that the old Grecian spirit isn't frozen in the Henley veins."

Hamilton Henley said to his son: "This dude is good company, son, smart as a fox and easy to look at, but she won't do for you." He spoke in Spanish—Mary was to discover that a great many native Arizonans are bi-lingual. "Be careful, son. I'd have kissed her, too—at your age. Remember, a man has to put on some age before he gets hoss sense. You're just somethin' for her to amuse herself with. I know because you got a speck o' her war paint on the corner of your mouth."

His son thanked him for this information and casually wiped his mouth.

Hamilton Henley spoke again to his son in Spanish. "Not that I blame you, son. It ain't often a fuse blows out and leaves you in the dark for half a minute with a dashin' young woman like this one. A feller's got to smother his opportunities."

"I suggest you start getting accustomed to her now, father, because I'm liable to marry her in spite of hell and high water."

"You would," Ham Henley replied. "Trust you to make a fool of yourself. And after she's lived with you about a year she'll tell you East is East and West is West, an' leave you flat, takin' the baby with her."

"What I have I hold. If she leaves me it will be my fault and I'll take it on the chin. I'll not be embittered—like you."

Ham Henley turned to Mary. "What brought you boundin' out to Arizona?"

"I thought a change would do me good. Mother's in Europe and father's big game shooting in British East Africa."

Hamilton Henley thought: "She wants a change o' scene an' a change o' men admirers. I knew she was dangerous. Of course she kissed my son when the lights went out. Her kind ain't got no reserve. They help themselves to whatever they want." Aloud he asked, "Can you cook?"

"Certainly not."

"Suppose you married a feller that couldn't afford to hire a cook for you?"

Margaret Maxwell noticed that Len appeared to be having difficulty subduing some slight internal disturbance. She did not speak Spanish and she did not know how this, which her woman's intuition warned her, was an undeclared war, had started. However, she decided to find out, so to that end said, "Len, I'm not so old and stiff in the knees I wouldn't enjoy another dance with you." Then she added, "Suppose we leave these two to get better acquainted."

Out on the dance floor with Len she said: "I'm not color-blind, dear, and neither is your father. That adorable girl kissed you."

"Half a dozen times," he confessed with huge satisfaction. "I slipped out and gave the colored bartender an honorarium to pull the electric switch for thirty seconds."

Pasture and Forage Important This Year

Lime and Fertilizer Boost Crop, Improve Quality

The supply of feed grains relative to livestock and poultry numbers promises to be less favorable in 1944 than it has been for several years. As a result, farmers should plan to take every possible advantage of pasture and forage crops in order to produce the volume of dairy and poultry products needed this year, according to the War Food Administration.

One of the best ways to increase production of pasturage and forage, and at the same time to improve the quality, the WFA says, is to apply more lime and superphosphate on pasture and hay land. The 1944 conservation program of the Agricultural Adjustment agency is designed to stimulate increased use of both these materials.

In most of the United States east of the Great Plains, and in some of the higher mountain areas and the areas of heavy rainfall in the Pacific Northwest, the WFA says, it is necessary to add lime to the soil in order to grow such legume crops as alfalfa, red clover, and sweet clover. The legumes are considered desirable for two reasons. They produce heavier crops of more nutritious hay than most of the non-

Competition from war crops has made the legume and grass seed crops problem a serious one. Reserves have gone and it will be necessary to conserve all present acreage as well as provide in some manner for additional seed.

legume grasses. Also, because of their ability to absorb nitrogen from the air and, through their roots, transfer it to the soil, they increase soil fertility.

When superphosphate is used as top-dressing for pastures and hay land, it enables the more desirable, more nutritious, and more palatable legumes and grasses to crowd out the poorer varieties. In a number of tests, pastures supporting mostly poverty grass and broomsedge were top-dressed with superphosphate. Kentucky bluegrass and white clover then tended to crowd out the poorer plants.

Neither lime nor superphosphate can do the job of the other, nor can both together take the place of other elements of good land management, the WFA warns. But on soils which require both, each adds to the effectiveness of the other.

Eight-Year Old Boy Is Tractor Driver

A 13-year-old boy was seen operating a tractor on his father's farm in Greene county. It was his fifth season as a tractor operator, which means he began at the tender age of eight, according to T. L. Davis, University of Illinois.

The farm consists of about 160 acres. The boy's father has been a tenant on it for many years. Father and son comprise the manpower. Mother and two sisters do their part. The boy takes great pride in his work, and when school is in session he even gets in a few licks mornings and evenings. The summer vacation gives him a great opportunity for his favorite occupation.

It is not unusual to see women doing farm work in this county, the farm wives doing a turn. A recent survey showed about 75 of them in the fields. Fifty boys and girls were also doing field work, many of the boys being less than 12 years old.

Killing Poison Ivy

If the poison ivy plants are sprayed with a solution of sodium chlorate in the proportion of one quart of crystals to three gallons of water, the plant will usually die after the first application. If life is still evident, however, a second application may be given in a few weeks.

Food in Brick Form

What is said to be the largest rotary press in the world was installed at the Boughboy Mills at New Richmond, Wis., for forming bricks of dehydrated food for the civilians freed from Nazi subjugation.

The bricks are actually one-half the bulk of dehydrated food, measuring 6 by 3 by 2 inches. Four cargo planes, loaded with 5,000 pounds each of these bricks could feed a million for one day. The mill is making 250,000 daily.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS

"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't compromise! Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.
