Announces for Sheriff

Nick S. Vega, candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket has authorized the Lincoln County News to publish his announcement.

He has had plenty of experience in law enforcement, having been City Marshal here off and on for several years prior to becoming deputy sheriff under Sheriff Allie Stover and has been a good deputy, never failing to go where his duty called.

In addition to his duties as deputy he has kept abreast of the times by attending all the F B I schools of instruction for the past three years, where they were taught the things that law enforcement officers should know---how to apprehend criminals; how to pick up clues by fingerprints, or otherwise.

Mr. Vega is a member of one of the most prominent Spanish-American families in the County. He was born at Nogal and was reared in Carrizozo where he attended school.

He knows Lincoln County, and knows the people of Lincoln County.

He is young, able bodied, energetic and reliable.

He will appreciate your vote and support and if elected, promises to fulfil the duties of his office conscientiously and to the best of his ability.

Dewey Aroused Little Enthusiasm in Missouri

Governor Thomas E Dewey made no impression on the people of this mid-Western metropolis, said Cecil Brooks in a recent report published in the Rhode Island Free Press. Mr. Brooks wrote the story for his paper from St. Louis while Mr. Dewey was there for the Governor's conference. Mr. Dewey's visit here, said Brooks, coincided with the primary vote indicating a complete lack of support for his pre Pearl Harbor views against preparedness, including lend-lease and Selective Service.

All the reporters, including those for the most sympathetic Republican newspapers, laughed out loud, Brooks said, when Dewey started talking about the Roosevelt depression, when every one of these reporters knows that Herbert Hoover is Dewey's political god-father. Hoover claims Dewey's nomination is proof his philosophy will prevail—waiting for good times around the corner.

These reporters likewise agreed Dewey showed his complete lack of knowledge of foreign affairs, in which he has had no experience, when he said his party was going to write a lasting peace—in fact, he said he was going to do that. Well, Dewey not so long ago snubbed Russia, without whose sympathy and support there can be no lasting peace. And Russia, through lend-lease which Dewey opposed, is pressing toward Berlin.

Most of the real sidelights, said Brooks, did not get into the newspapers. Here are some as reported by him;

The mine workers, the rank and file, are strongly for Roosevelt, even though Lewis backs Dewey. They are organizing Pennsylvania to carry the state for the Democrats. They know the Republicans killed the extension of the Guffey Coal Act, which saved their industry, and which looked to a post war period.

In St. Louis, very few people responded to Dewey's entrance into the city. Instead, they went to the polls to indicate their opposition to isolationism and opposition to the President's foreign policy.

The reporters heard the news—and Dewey did with sadness—that Kansas voters had turned down the renomination of Congressman Walter Lambertson, Republican, who had made personal smearing attacks on the President and his family, with the American Legion denouncing Lambertson—but not the GOP leaders.

Dewey's campaign managers, claiming enough electoral votes to win, shrugged their shoulders when they were told. Chairman Joe Martin, four years ago, made the identical prediction for Willkie.

Reporters realize that Dewey, starting his campaign in the heat of summer, is not only failing to arouse enthusiasm but he is showing his complete lack of knowledge of vital government problems---talking about states' rights when boys are bleeding to death on battlefields all over the world.

Emphasis, as usual is being placed in insurance by Governor Dewey. He is supposed to be a racket buster, but he is playing with the insurance companies which are fighting anti trust legislation, seeking its repeal. Then they could continue to fix rates. Dewey's slush fund raiser, concluded Brooks, is tied up with the insurance companies and it is evident Dewey is going along with the insurance lobby---which is one of the outstanding rackets in the country. They fought Roosevelt four years ago and tried to defeat Senator Claude Pepper in Florida in the primaries.

(Editor's Note: As previously explained, the Rhode Island Free Press said Cecil Brooks, author of this article, is a Washington political writer for an outstanding Republican newspaper. He has to write policy stories for that paper. Through mutual friends, the Free Press continues to open its columns to his real views.)

Miss Sally Silvers of Ancho is attending school at San Marcos Texas.

Hughes, 17, and Ted Shaw, 15 were drowned They were fishing and their boat was leaking; and when it became necessary to abandon the boat, they leaped into the icy water which was about 18 feet deep at that point. It is supposed they were seized with cramps due to the temperature of the water.

Cabled From Somewhere

In Dutch New Guinea

By George Lait

(International News War Correspondent.)

Col. David W. Hutchison, commander of one of the wings of Lieut. Gen. George Kenny's bomber force in the New Guinea interior, now en route to his home in Madison, Wis., on leave, told me of a new technique evolved on the spur of the moment by one of his night fighter pilots. The technique, however, is not recommended too highly for repeat performances. This night fighter took off to attack Jap bombers which were raiding Wake Island. Anti-aircraft gunners and searchlight crews could hear his engine purring in the sky. Suddenly, over the radio they heard the pilot shout: "I am coming into searchlights! For Pete's sake shoot this so-and-so off my tail." The fighter pilot roared into the searchlights' beams with the Jap bomber close behind. The anti-aircraft crews shot off the Jap's tail.

There's a big treasure hunt going on at Lae, British New Guinea. Not for Guinea gold, but for 200 cases of prewar Scotch whiskey buried there by Manager Burns, of Philip Company, before the Jap invasion. Burns, who is now in England with the RAF, intends returning after the war to dig up his cache. The Yanks, with everything from entrenching tools to bulldozers, meanwhile are ripping up the jungle, hoping to beat him to the swag.

Some New Guinea points have a real Broadway flavor these days. In one day I bumped into Maj. Abe Schechter, former bigshot at NBC; Sgt. George McLemore, noted sports columnist, now a combat correspondent; Lieut. Jack Miley, the sports writer, still of approximately the same tonnage as the heavy cruiser on which he is serving; Lieut. Larry Jones, whose father operates Gertner's restaurant, New York., and who is in charge of the largest GI messes in the southwest Pacific; Lew Parker and Jackie Heller, night club performers entertaining troops; Jack Davis, New York representative of the Australian Consolidated Press, who came over for a six-month gander at the war; Capt. Jack Cross, Westchester county journalist (husband of Powers model Betty Riddell) and Capt. Dick Krolick, also a journalist and habitue of East 45th street's famous Pen and Pencil bar; Eddie Dowling's son, Jack, war correspondent for a Chicago newspaper; Douglas (Wrongway) Corrigan, ferrying planes for the Fifth air force, and Col. Merian Cooper (he's gone home on leave to visit his wife, the former Dorothy Jordon of the movies) who produced "Chang," "Grass," and "Long Voyage Home"; Alfred Vanderbilt, who with his brother, George, is giving the Japs hell as commanders of PT boats.

Phil La Follette, former Governor of Wisconsin, has just been promoted to full colonel. He'll be going home soon on leave. . . . Lady Emily Coote of Boston's Back Bay and widow of the first Baronet of Ireland, is now in charge of one of the largest Red Cross outfits in Australia, caring for the wants of recently arrived WACs. . . . Everybody knows Corp. Lew Ayres now serving as a chaplain assistant at Hollandia, but few know that Tech. Sgt. Frankie Darro is a dispensing pharmacist at one of New Guinea's big hospitals. He is the former child star who specialized in tough kid roles.

Capt. Lanny Ross has been almost solely responsible for shepherding around the southwest Pacific all of the bigshot entertainers such as Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Carol Landis, Martha Tilton, Jerry Colonna, Larry Adler and Gary Cooper. . . . One of the biggest successes in New Guinea, who, wiseacres thought, would be a flop, was Judith Anderson, who presented Shakespeare to the GIs, and they loved it. . . . Lee Vanatte, INS daredevil flying correspondent with the Far East air force, tells the story of a combat sergeant who, physically unfit for further fighting, was transferred to army post office censorship to assume duties ordinarily assigned to women. The disgruntled, disgusted sergeant reported to his commanding officer, "Sir, I have come to replace a WAC!"

Jack Benny got plenty of belly-laughs from General MacArthur's GIs with his crack: "I am an old-timer in these Pacific Islands — I used to spend weekends at Catalina." . . . Lt. Cmdr. George Halas, who used to coach the Chicago Bears professional football team, and is now serving as recreation and welfare officer for the 7th fleet, is accompanying Bob Hope's party on its tour of the southwestern Pacific area and sees that the navy boys get their share of the entertainment.

It's Chic to Vary Your Costume With 'Make-Your-Own Toppers'

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS is no year for waste, nor is it a year for want. Off-to-school, as well as career girl activities or volunteer war service, still demand that women look smart, well-dressed and well-groomed. However, in these bond-buying times the spirit within stirs to conserve one's clothes budget. The challenge is to do this without sacrifice of chic or charm in one's appearance.

What to do! The answer is simple. Sew at home and thus create a lot from a little. You can vary your fall costume with "made-at-home" toppers styled after the manner of the quartette of swank models shown in the illustration. You'll find that jerkins, vests, boleros and weskits worn with a basic skirt, together with either sweater or blouse, make stunning costume transformers. It's a wonderful way to create a varied wardrobe out of a little.

The marvelous part about these modish toppers is that they involve such a small amount of money and require such a minimum of material, yet they carry an air of style distinction that will make you outstanding wherever you go.

The "trick" that insures success for the home sewer is to start out right by choosing simplicity patterns that place the emphasis on smart up-to-the-moment classic "lines," more than anything else. The simpler the styling of the garment the smarter. Even an amateur sewer will easily have success making any one of the toppers shown because the patterns used are so easy to follow in that they stress simplicity in every detail.

It's amazing how little material it takes to make any one of the toppers shown here. There's magic in a bolero that you can slip on over a crisp white shirt and presto!—you have a complete change of outfit, just as you see pictured above to the left in the group. It took only a scant yard of bright red wool to make this one. It would be equally as pretty in gay fuchsia or Kelly green or in the bright gold tone which is "new" this season. This glamorous yellow is very much in demand for coats and jackets among the college set.

To top a checked or plain dark skirt, whip together a brilliant green flannel vest as shown above to the right. For this modish vest that looks (save for its color) all the world as if it had been snitched from big brother's suit, less than a yard of material is required. Worn with a topcoat or jacket made of the same check as the skirt, you will have one of the new weskit suits which are so chic this fall.

Of course you will be interested in the two jerkins shown below. It's check and double check on the one to the left. It boasts all high feminine fashion points, yet it is as tailored as dad's own vest. Make it to wear solo over a crisp blouse or to peep out from under a tailored suit. This jerkin struck a clever note when it matched its check to the check used for the skirt, thus achieving a unified suit effect. Add to this twosome a short-length boxy topcoat made of the same check, and you have a smart three-piece companion suit such as registers as the coming thing for fall and on into winter.

You'll like the fitted jerkin to the right, too. The pattern for this is simple and it is very easily made. You will especially like the square neckline as well as the voguish side-buttoned fastening. Choose color-bright flannel or gabardine or jersey for this practical and youthfully styled topper, that can be worn with most any type of skirt. Black jersey is ever so smart to wear with a bright plaid skirt.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lace Lends Glamour

This simple deep rose-colored dress is given a dashing and attractive note by artfully trimming the shoulders and waistline with black lace. The tall chapeau which is the new trend in millinery is fashioned in matching black lace. Black accents on bright-color gowns is a whim of fashion that is going over big this season. It is also smart to wear black accessories with gay wool frocks.

Tunic-and-Trouser Sets

There is fashion news in this season's tunic-and-trouser sets that are made of velvet, and other rich fabrics. This year the velvet ensembles bespeak of a feeling of richness in that they are embroidered with sequins and nailheads. Many of the velvet tunics are elaborated with gold braid trims.

Satin Vogue Extends From Hat to Footwear

Satin is having its big moment this fall. Black satin is being used for everything from hats, gloves and shoes to stunning suits and dresses that are ever so smart for immediate wear. In fact, they will give service the winter through worn under furs. Satin is the key to dress-up fashions. Women of fashion are showing a liking for the basic gown that is simply styled with a view to stressing the latest slim silhouettes. With these dresses that flaunt flattering necklines, they wear a single important piece of glittering jewelry. There is every indication that satin in delectable colors will fashion gala frocks to wear during the social season. Also blouses of color-lovely satin will lend the touch that tells to the new fur-trimmed costume suits. In the millinery field the hat that is creating a sensation is the fisherman-back type that sweeps its soft brim back from the forehead and falls like a curtain at the nape of the neck. For these milliners use black satin, and a smarter hat is not to be seen on avenue or boulevard. Handbags of satin are quite the thing this fall.

Spotlight Accessories That Set Off Costumes

Here are a few charming accessories you will be wearing with the new fall costumes. There's the new sequinned cravats which will give swank touch to your dinner suits. Give your slim basic dress new uplift with a soft tied sash of satin or chiffon velvet. Animal pins with jewelled eyes are smart on sports sweaters.

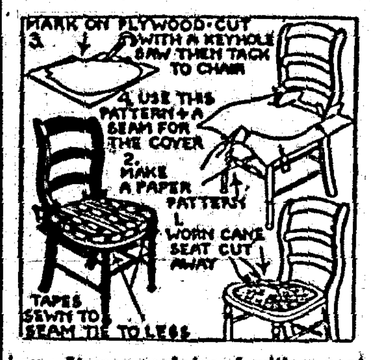
That Old Chair Can Easily Be Reclaimed

NEW cane seats are expensive because the work is done by hand. Endless time is required also for scraping off layers of paint to get down to the grain of the wood in doing over many pieces of furniture. The chair shown here did not seem to be worth this labor.



It was reclaimed with a seat from a scrap of plywood, blue paint and seat cover of blue and white ticking edged with white material raveled to make narrow fringe.

The chipped white enamel that was on the chair was rubbed with coarse and then with fine sandpaper until smooth. The new seat came next; then flat paint which was allowed to dry 24 hours before applying enamel.

NOTE—This chair remodeling idea is from BOOK 10 which also contains directions for making an adorable padded boudoir chair from an old kitchen chair; a high-back chair from an old rocker and an attractive upholstered chair from odds and ends of wood, a little padding and some chintz. Send name and address with 15 cents and receive a copy of BOOK 10.

Firestone

GROUND GRIP TIRES

Give EXTRA TRACTION because

THEY CLEAN BETTER!

HAVE you been hearing or reading claims about tractor tire cleaning lately? As a farmer, you are entitled to know the facts. And here they are:

Remember that the Firestone Ground Grip Tread is patented. Its extra-long, triple-braced traction bars do not have "broken center" traction leaks, no trash-catching stubs or buttons. The wide spaces between the bars clean easily, even in soft soil, because there are no corners or pockets for mud to stick or hide. No wonder Firestone Ground Grips clean so much better in ALL soil conditions!

And don't forget that Firestone Ground Grip Tires give you up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor. That means extra pulling power—and the more pulling power you get, the more time and money you save!

From these facts, it's easy to see why more farm tractors are equipped with Firestone Ground Grip Tires than with any other make. Farmers naturally want the tires that pull better longer—the tires made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker.

Listen to the Voice of Firestone every Monday evening, over N.B.C.

Your War Bond Investment Is Your Investment In America . . .

The Farmer and War Bonds

by Mr. A. S. Goss

Master of the National Grange

WE FREQUENTLY hear farmers raise the question as to whether or not they should buy War Bonds as long as they are in debt. The answer to this question should depend in large measure upon the nature of the debt, and whether or not it is current. If part of it is past due, and the borrower expects to experience difficulty in meeting past due payments, he probably should bring his debt into current position before investing in Bonds. If, however, his payments are current, there seems to be no reason why farmers should not buy as many Bonds as they are able. Most individual investors in government Bonds are carrying debt in one form or another, at rates higher than the Bonds will yield. This is as it should be if the purchaser is in an earning position which permits the accumulation of some surplus, for we all owe it to our government to do our utmost in the financing of the war, even though the transaction may result in our paying some extra interest on outstanding debts.

When a farmer owes money, he is always concerned as to whether his crops will sell at prices which will enable him to repay his debt. When prices are high it is good business and conservative finance to reduce the debt as rapidly as possible because when prices are low, it takes more crops and more efforts to make the payments.

We should not forget, however, that a government Bond will pay off an equal amount of dollars of debt, no matter whether prices are high or whether prices are low. It is, therefore, a sound and conservative practice to buy government Bonds and lay them aside to make payments on existing debts when they fall due. In fact, quite aside from the patriotic appeal, it is good business to buy Bonds rather than make pre-payments on debt, because the time may come when the ready cash is needed and the money tied up in pre-payments cannot be returned. If this money is invested in Bonds, it can be converted into cash to meet any needs which may arise.

If everyone followed the policy of buying no War Bonds until their debts were paid, few Bonds would be sold to the public. We have an obligation to help finance this war which is vastly more important than the income we may receive on the investment of money in War Bonds.

Farmers are finding it impossible to maintain their machinery and buildings in a satisfactory state of repair. They are finding that they cannot replace worn-out equipment except at excessively high cost.

It would seem to be sound and conservative business practice to lay aside money to make the repairs and replace worn-out equipment when material and machines are again available. No safer place can be found to lay aside money for such purposes than in government Bonds.

Every time we buy a Bond we are not only assisting in financing the war, but we are also doing our bit to prevent that most dreaded economic disaster called inflation. If each one of us would invest as much as we could in government Bonds, the danger of inflation would be greatly reduced.

Red Cross News

The Home Service of the American Red Cross at Fort Stanton, New Mexico, has a supply of special postal cards for distribution to the relatives and friends of the soldiers who are prisoners of War in Japan.

As Japan limits the correspondence of the prisoners of War to 24 words on each card, it is believed that these cards would expedite the delivery of mail to its destination.

These cards need no postage stamps and their use is optional.

REMEMBER?

Remember how the Republican Party took care of the servicemen after World War I? After the soldiers tired of selling apples on street corners and marched on Washington, they were driven out at the point of bayonets. It was Herbert Hoover, the same gentleman who is now silently directing the campaign of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who issued those orders for Republican relief to the servicemen. — The Hoosier Sentinel (Dem.)

LOOK TO DEALERS FOR YOUR PELLETS

Ranchers and farmers who are anxious to obtain a supply of protein pellets for winter's feed emergencies should seek them through their regular trade channels, the State AAA office advises. Results from recent action taken by WFA to encourage increased production of pellets to meet the current heavy demand from ranchers will be evidenced by an increased supply available through regular trade channels and not through the Government set-aside allocation to the state.

Republicans for Dempsey

Some unusually far-seeing Republicans of the State have organized a Dempsey for Governor club and propose to carry on an intensive campaign for Mr. Dempsey's re election.

We quote the following:

"Whereas, the administration of the present Governor and Democratic candidate for re-election, John J. Dempsey, has been based more on business princip es and less on politics than any administration we have seen in New Mexico for some time, now therefor, be it

Resolved, that we, the members of this organization, shall work during the coming campaign for the re-election of John J. Dempsey as governor of New Mexico.

State headquarters are in Albuquerque.

Both are Phillips Research Laboratories

IN TIME OF PEACE hundreds of Phillips chemists and engineers devoted themselves, in the glass-bricked laboratory pictured above, to search for product betterment.

Car-owners reaped the benefit in improved gasolines and lubricants, at prices which represented ever-increasing value for the money.

IN TIME OF WAR, Phillips research activities are sharply focused on the requirements for victory, and the U. S. Armed Forces . . . and you, not as a car-owner but as citizen and taxpayer . . . reap the benefit in improved products, at prices which represent ever-increasing value for the money.

The Phillips airplane pictured above, with its unique test and measuring devices, is also a laboratory . . . a flying laboratory for a Phillips pioneering research project. Phillips recently was first to conduct a flight test program, to determine the anti-knock performance of aviation gasolines . . . not in earth-bound test motors . . . but in combat-type engines under actual flying conditions.

PHILLIPS HIGH PLACE in the war production of butadiene for synthetic rubber, 100-octane aviation gasoline, and other petroleum chemicals, is the result of Phillips long years of peacetime research to extend the frontiers of knowledge concerning hydro-carbon chemistry.

Who can predict what great new benefits will flow to motorists after victory, as the result of Phillips wartime exploration of the limitless possibilities of the chemical production of new and better things from petroleum gases as well as from petroleum!

This much can be predicted with confidence: With the coming of peace, car-owners will be offered a vastly improved postwar Phillips 66 Gasoline. In the meantime, whenever you see the Phillips 66 Shield, let it remind you that Phillips great refineries are gigantic chemical plants pouring out weapons for victory.

The New Wartime style in food

Dan Miles allows he's swimming right in style these days.

Dan's always made a point of finishing up whatever food was put before him. "Don't make sense to waste food just to be stylish," he says.

Now out comes an etiquette authority who says it's wartime fashion to take only what you're going to eat—and finish it up clean—because "Food Fights for Freedom."

As Doc Mitchell says, "Most folks eat too much anyway. Man and boy, I've watched this town for years, and 75% of us dig our own graves with our teeth."

From where I sit, this new style in eating may lead to moderation, and moderation has never hurt anybody.

In fact, you find moderation and tolerance go hand in hand ... whether it's what you eat or what you think.... Or whether one man prefers a moderate glass of beer when you yourself would rather have a soda.

AMERICA'S STANDARDS IN WORLD COMMERCE

AMERICA REPRESENTS APPROXIMATELY 50 PER CENT of the world's buying power. In American markets is sold one-half of the world's products. American wages are double the wages of some nations, and several times the amounts paid in other nations. Our workers have shorter hours than do the workers of any other nation. Our 130 million people drive more automobiles, have more telephones, more electrical home appliances, than do the 300 and more millions of people of all Europe, or the more than 600 million of all Asia. Our farmers enjoy better and better-equipped homes than the farmers of any other nation. Our standard of living, both rural and urban, is far and away above that of any other people on the globe.

All of these things are made possible by our American market. Some of our theoretical bureaucratic idealists believe we should throw open, on an even basis, our American market to all the world. To do so the cost of producing corn and beef in Argentine; of wheat in Australia and Russia; of cotton in India, Africa and South America, would fix the selling price of such commodities as we produce and sell in our home market. We would sell shoes based on the cost of shoe production in Czechoslovakia; the factories of Europe would fix the price of our automobiles; France, Germany, Japan, India and England would fix the price of the cotton fabrics purchased in the American markets.

American "know how" in agriculture and industry is superior to that of any other nation, but it takes more than "know how" to offset the lower wages, the longer hours and lower living standards of other nations. If, in our home market, we must compete with the cheap wages, the longer hours, the lower living standards, of other nations, we can do so only by lowering American wages, increasing American working hours and lowering American living standards. Under any program of opening our markets to the competition of all the world would mean disaster to our American farmers and workers, or the closing of our industrial plants. Should the latter happen, the American market would largely disappear. We would have seriously injured ourselves and permanently helped no one.

The world needs a standard to which to strive. America has provided that standard, and it has been accepted by other peoples as a desired goal. Let us keep America what it is as an example for other people and other nations. That would be the best service we can render the underprivileged people of the world.

FEW, IF ANY OTHERS, have worked so valiantly and effectively at the job of preserving American institutions and rebuilding American character as Dr. George S. Benson, president of Harding college, Searcy, Ark., and some 1,500 country newspaper editors who are cooperating with him. Dr. Benson and these editors have carried their fight for America directly to the rural people of the nation through the columns of 1,500 cooperating newspapers. Week after week, for the past two years, Dr. Benson's ringing messages for a rebuilding of American character and the preservation of American institutions have been reaching the people of the towns and farms. Dr. Benson and the rural editors cooperating with him have done more for the American cause than have any one or any group of our great industrialists.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF UNDER CONSTITUTION

UNDER OUR AMERICAN constitution the President directs the policies of our armed forces as a civilian executive in both peace and war. The constitution does not provide the privilege of a field command, of planning battles or strategy. The President can, and does designate results to be achieved, and names, with the consent of the senate, those entrusted with the achievement of such results. His position as commander-in-chief of the nation's armed forces is more nominal than actual. It was designed by the framers of the constitution to keep the armed forces subservient to the civilian organization of the nation. To we civilians he is our president, and not even nominally our commander-in-chief.

INDIAN TYPHOON

When Amb. William Phillips' famous letter advising Roosevelt that India was a U. S. problem leaked into print, the British government sent instructions to all British consuls in this country to inspire letters to editors, plus editorials in the local press. One man in New York alone wrote 76 letters to different newspapers. . . . Later, British consuls sent copies of editorials, etc., to the British Embassy, with accompanying notes, showing what a good job they had done. . . . In the Embassy, Jossleyn Hennessy, British public relations man for India, left off the accompanying notes, sent the editorials to Sir Olaf Caroe in New Delhi, so Sir Olaf could see what a good job Hennessy had been doing. Sir Olaf then sent them to London. . . . Sir Olaf also cabled London that he had been able to keep the Phillips letter out of India so far, but "under existing conditions" it was sure to be smuggled in, in which case it would be published by the Indian press and there was nothing he could do to stop it. . . . By "existing conditions," Caroe meant anti-British subversion on the part of Indian officials who smuggle news into India despite censorship. Once inside India, the British can't prevent publication in Indian newspapers.

WASHINGTON PERSONALITIES

Breath-taking Bob Gros, California lecturer, has the faculty of coming to the nation's capital every year and interviewing more big-wigs per hour than anyone else in the U.S.A. He has just finished one of his breathless trips and sizes up performers on the Washington merry-go-round as follows:

Wendell Willkie — "The thinkingest, guttiest guy on the merry-go-round; politically unastute."

British Ambassador Lord Halifax —"Worst dressed, but one of the most charming. His sleeves were patched with red thread, he had on almost threadbare gabardine pants."

Donald Nelson—"Determined that small industry shall have a chance to reconvert now, before the armistice."

Economic Stabilizer Fred Vinson —"The best balanced."

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal—"Quick, likable, expounds this philosophy: 'Administration consists 95 per cent of smoothing out human frictions. The secret of American success is driving, restless energy that makes you have ulcers.'"

Secretary of War Stimson—"The most arbitrary."

Small Business Administrator Maury Maverick—"The most two-fisted and dynamic."

Jim Farley—"The most realistic political analyst, the most bluntly and disarmingly frank."

In general, Gros found Washington taking the war in its stride; officialdom much more settled down than last year; less excitement, less hysteria, more efficiency.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

DUDE WOMAN

By PETER B. KYNE

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Mary Sutherland, an Easterner, is lured to Arizona by the ads of the Wagon Wheel dude ranch, operated by Ma and Pa Burdan. She is met at the station by Len Henley, whose father, Ham, has purchased the Burdan notes from the bank and feels that the ranch is now his. Len takes Mary to Phoenix, enters the rodeo there and later rides Mad Hatter to a finish, winning three thousand dollars for Mary, who had bet his dad Len could ride Mad Hatter. Mary now buys the equity in Wagon Wheel, and Ham, learning she has not enough money, threatens foreclosure. Mary re-hires Ma and Pa Burdan and drives to the ranch, where she later kills the son of Sheriff Wade.

CHAPTER XIV

Margaret understood why, of course, and because she was aware that sensible people do not attempt to dam Nature's outlet for the disposal of woe, she sat silently until Mary picked herself together and said, with a defiant shake of her red-gold head: "Well, somebody spilled the beans and it can't be helped now. I'll have to grin and bear it."

"People have too many troubles of their own to remember yours very long."

"But that poor Sheriff Wade Margaret, he's so nice. He visited me and stayed for luncheon and we had such a pleasant visit. And within the week I killed his son."

Margaret Maxwell had known Hamilton Henley and other cow persons long enough and intimately enough to have absorbed some of their vocabulary as well as their rough and ready philosophy. Said she: "The young skunk wanted killing, didn't he? He asked for it, didn't he? Stop your silly talk before I lose patience with you."

There was a knock at the door and Margaret opened it to see who was there. The visitor was Hank Wade. "I didn't tell, I didn't tell," Mary cried at sight of him. "Oh, Sheriff Wade, I'm heart-broken."

"You needn't be, Miss Sutherland. You performed a splendid civic service for Yavapai County. I seen that reporter this mornin' an' he told me how he got the story. Seems he went down to the Wagon Wheel, arrivin' there during Pedro's absence, an' Mrs. Burdan told him all about it. Old Bill tried to stop her, but couldn't. She allowed as how nobody was goin' to make her protect a sheriff that'd picked a venal jury venire when his sons was tried for rustlin'. Bill Burdan prosecuted my boys that time, Miss Sutherland, an' spent a couple o' thousand dollars only to lose twice an' have the case throwed out of court. So his wife didn't see no reason why she should save me from bein' scandalized some more—an' I'm here to tell you, Miss, I been scandalized plenty."

"But Pedro warned her and Pa Burdan and Carlotta, Pedro's wife, to keep this news secret because of the embarrassment that would be my portion if it became known."

"I reckon the lady forgot to protect you in her anxiety to smear me. I'm right sorry, Miss. I can stand this but it's hard on you."

"This is the second brickbat I've received this morning from those whose duty it would seem to be to protect me. Poor old Pa! He's the sacrificial goat—because now I'll have to dismiss them both from my service. And I do so loathe being cruel to helpless people."

There was another knock at the door and again Margaret opened it and Mary saw Pa Burdan, arrayed in his Sunday suit, standing in the entrance and looking as if his feet hurt him. "Miss Sutherland," he said, "I've called to say I couldn't stop her in time. I'm sorry an' shamed an' we've left the Wagon Wheel without givin' you notice because I ain't expert at bitin' the hand that feeds me." And Pa commenced to sniffle.

"Come in here, Pa Burdan," Mary commanded. "I want to shake your hand in farewell and tell you I'm sorry it happened, too. Perhaps this may be a lesson to Ma." He took her hand and Mary went on. "Pa, your kindly, friendly, decent personality should serve you rather well in a small retail business."

"I was thinkin' of a fillin' station in combination with a quick order roadside restaurant," poor Pa mumbled.

"I purchased your equity in the Wagon Wheel at a ridiculous price because you were unable to protect yourself, Pa Burdan. I can afford to pay more and I'd like to, so I think it would be a grand idea for you to devote a couple of months to looking around for a site for your new start in life. When you have found it, come out and see me—after July first—and I'll give you twenty-five hundred dollars additional for your ranch equity. Meanwhile, I'll give you a check for a full month's salary in lieu of notice of dismissal."

As Pa, much moved, turned to go Hank Wade's hand fell on the defeated old man's shoulder. "Thanks, Bill," he said. "If you'd took a quirt to her maybe she'd have kept quiet."

"Not for long, Hank. Seems like she wasn't none too anxious to please Miss Sutherland anyhow, on account Miss Sutherland prefers to eat alone. Never havin' been a servant Ma don't relish not bein' treated like one o' the family, Miss Sutherland."

"My fault, entirely, Mr. Burdan. She was miscast in this drama. Goodby and good luck to you, and I think you're mighty sweet."

When the door closed behind Pa the sheriff said, "Who said the meek shall inherit the earth?"

Mary laughed and that moment she was cured. "Whoever he was, sheriff, he was closely related to the person who said: 'If thine enemy smite thee on the right cheek turn unto him the left.' Would you mind doing me a little favor?"

He smiled wryly at that. "The man that wouldn't do you a favor, Miss, had ought to be shot at sunrise. Name it an' consider it done if I can do it."

"A big private plane is going to drop in on the local airport in a day or two and disgorge something that thinks it's a man but isn't. The name is Joseph Alcott Blanding. Joseph's father left him twenty million dollars and from infancy Joseph has been accustomed to having his slightest wish granted. Can you imagine the result?"

"He probably ain't worth hell-room, Miss Sutherland."

And the following morning the sheriff's little drama was staged without a rehearsal. The next day Hank Wade dropped in again to report that he had handcuffed Joe

"I didn't tell," Mary cried at sight of him.

Blanding and led him through the streets to the county jail, where he had confined him incommunicado. That morning Joe Blanding had been tried on a charge of disturbing Mary's peace and on the sheriff's testimony the local police magistrate had found him guilty and given him the maximum sentence—six months in the county jail—but had agreed to suspend the sentence provided Mr. Blanding climbed into his plane within the hour and flew far away from Prescott, Arizona, never to return. Mr. Blanding had agreed to that and the sheriff had seen him off at the local airport.

While driving back to the ranch after delivering Mary at the hospital, Pedro Ortiz devoted some very earnest thought to the situation that confronted him in his new employment. He was very proud to be a ranch manager, a position he had never hoped to achieve, and he was profoundly grateful to his Dona Maria for having given it to him. And Carlotta was very happy, too; both had resolved to render such faultless service that their employer would never consider replacing them. This service, in their case, would entail no extra effort, for already their affections had been engaged and already the loyalty that is born of affection had indicated to Pedro that his position as manager automatically made Dona Maria's enemies his and that it was his duty to relieve her of them at whatever cost.

He did not know, of course, that Sheriff Wade had seen to it that his sons had been made aware several days previous that a dude girl was now the owner of the Wagon Wheel. He did not realize the Wade boys had read two weeks before that Pa Burdan's caballado had been attached and believed, in consequence, that since there would be no horses to ride on the ranch no rider would be apt to surprise them at work. He did not know the brothers had acted with speed worthy of an honest effort and had descended promptly upon the Wagon Wheel to comb the range for late calves which had been overlooked for branding by Pa Burdan on his last round-up.

All Pedro knew he suspected—and he suspected very strongly that if one Wade brother had invaded the Wagon Wheel range the other two could not be far away! They must have packed a couple of mules with camping equipment and food and arrived with the intention of doing a thorough job during this period it seemed they could work without interruption or fear of discovery. Breezy had been killed about nine o'clock in the morning and at this season of the year daylight arrived about seven o'clock. It seemed reasonable, therefore, to assume that Breezy Wade had left camp then and, in searching the thickets along the river wash, he had proceeded slowly and methodically, hazing all cows and calves he saw out into the open to see whether the calves were branded or not. A search for mavericks is always slow, so Pedro concluded Breezy had not traveled more than two miles from camp—a mile an hour would be almost fast. His brothers had probably ridden down the river through country that gradually flattened out and would provide wider territory on each bank to be ridden and searched. The river valley was narrow at the spot where Breezy had gone to his accounting, and the cattle were down along the river now, because there was more grass in that area than on the rocky rolling hills and water was easier of access.

Well, at two miles the sound of Breezy's pistol shots or Dona Maria's shotgun shots would not have been heard, so the surviving brothers, Joel and Rube, would not begin to worry until Breezy failed to reappear at their camp that night. They would of course expect him at sunset for the range was not one to be ridden in darkness. Conversely, they could not institute a search for him until sun-up and then, knowing the territory which he had been allotted they would ride up the river, pick up his trail in the wash and follow it to his body. They must know they would not have a long search . . .

He had his plan fully matured by the time he drove in to the Wagon Wheel yard and went at once to his cottage, where Carlotta cooked him a late luncheon; while engaged in eating it the reporter from the Prescott Register drove in and went at once to the dude house.

Pedro was lingering over his second cup of coffee and a cigarette, perfecting the details of his deadly plan, when there was a knock at his door and Carlotta opened it to reveal the reporter standing in the little veranda. "Pedro," he said, "I wish you'd lead me down to Breezy Wade's body. I want to photograph it as it lies. And don't try to fool me, Pedro, I know you speak English. I heard you speak it, without an accent, to Sheriff Wade."

"Yes, I speak English without an accent," Pedro admitted, and went out and closed the door behind him. "And I am Mister Ortiz to you, young fellow, and not Pedro. I am the manager here and I do not like your familiarity; you have pried into my employer's private affair and have trespassed on her property to do it."

When the man had gone Pedro strode into the kitchen of the dude house and confronted the Burdans. His brown eyes, usually so soft and kindly, were the eyes of a demon now; he stared at the Burdans in silence until they began to cringe. Then he spoke:

"Well, who talked to the reporter?"

"Ain't no call for me to keep a secret to save that crooked Hank Wade from sorrow," Ma defended. "Only the day before yestiddy her ladyship gives me orders to cook a special luncheon for him, an' when I give her the hint that ain't agreeable to me she repeats the order."

"As manager for Dona Maria, I forbade the discussion of this matter with outsiders and I have not been obeyed."

"I ain't in your department," Ma defied him.

"True, Senora Burdan, but your husband is, and now, poor fellow, he is fired because of you, who have been disloyal to your salt. You will depart early tomorrow morning and if you will leave me your address I will secure your check from Dona Maria and mail it to you. I regret this action, for in the past we have been good friends, but as manager I may not forgive those who betray my employer, nor will I have Dona Maria embarrassed by your presence here, Senora Burdan, when she returns."

"The news was bound to leak out anyhow," Ma complained, but Pedro was walking away.

That afternoon he cleaned and oiled Breezy Wade's armament and polished both rifle and pistol cartridges. The rifle was an old model and inaccurate at ranges beyond three hundred yards, but it would have to serve his purpose, for he had no rifle or pistol of his own. He was up at six o'clock next morning and had breakfasted and saddled Breezy Wade's horse and strapped the rifle scabbard on the saddle by seven o'clock. He noted with satisfaction that Pa Burdan was loading things in the station wagon, so he bade Pa farewell, again expressed his profound regret at the necessity for the parting, mounted Breezy Wade's horse and jogged off down the dry river bed to the scene of Breezy Wade's demise. He tied the horse behind a screen of mesquite, crawled into the thicket and lay hidden just inside its outer fringe from which he could see the dead man and have a clear field of fire down river.

Hidden Gold Conserves High Protein Feed

Proper Fertilizers Essential War Need

Good pasture will provide livestock growers with "hidden gold" in the form of beef-making feeds that will conserve vitally needed protein crops, if proper management methods are followed.

"Pasture must continue to occupy a more essential place in the nation's livestock producing program until the war's end for several reasons," a statement by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee points out. "Shortages of labor and machinery have shown no signs of marked improvement. The scarcity of high protein feeds continues. Because of these facts, farmers will have to rely on pasture crops as a major source of sustenance for their livestock.

"Grains will, of course, be fed but farmers will want to use every bushel of grain where it will help make the most meat.

"Practical experience of successful livestock growers has demonstrated that high-producing pasture combinations will yield a beef poundage per acre that compares favorably with the return from crops with higher seeding, tillage and harvest costs. For instance, a mixture of alfalfa and brome grass made more than 3 pounds of beef an acre daily in a test in Michigan.

"Bringing pastures to a high production level and maintaining them at this rate requires good management methods. This means following a soil conservation program that builds up fertility and provides plant foods that will assure a good stand of legumes and grasses. In such a program the use of a fertilizer containing phosphorus and potash plays an important part.

"Where a permanent pasture crop is planned, farmers will find generally that a top dressing of fertilizer this fall will pay for itself many times in producing earlier and more succulent grass for spring grazing next year as well as a heavier growth later.

"Agronomists at state colleges and experiment stations are glad to cooperate with farmers in providing information covering the most effective use of fertilizers on pasture crops. One important fact should be borne in mind in considering the soil's nutritional needs. This fact is that while crops such as alfalfa and clover add to the soil's nitrogen supply, they eat up its phosphorus and potash reserves."

Wild Plants Studied For Vitamin Content

Experiments to determine the vitamin value of various wild plants have been conducted by the U. S. department of agriculture, looking to a time when other sources of important vitamins might be lacking.

Buffaloberry, a native fruit of the western states and one of the popular fruit-bearing shrubs recommended for erosion control, proved exceptionally rich in ascorbic acid (vitamin C). A generous serving of the berries was found to furnish about twice the standard daily allowance of vitamin C. Jam made from the berries contained about two-thirds as much of this vitamin as the fresh fruit.

New Hampshire-grown wild blueberries were found to contain a fair supply of vitamin C if eaten raw.

Experiments showed wild rice as a good source of several B vitamins—thiamine, riboflavin, nicotinic acid, and pantothenic acid. And ordinary field mushrooms, Agaricus campestris, were also found to be rich in these four B vitamins.

Whole Milk Selling

A quarter of a million farmers have switched from selling farm-separated cream to selling whole milk during the last five years. Farm sales of whole milk at wholesale increased from 40 billion pounds average for 1935-39 to 60 billion pounds last year, a jump of 50 per cent. This increase was much greater than the total gain in farm milk production. It is not expected that postwar conditions will change this picture to any degree.

AROUND THE HOUSE

If the surface of a piece of your furniture becomes scratched, rub it with a piece of walnut kernel. The scratch will disappear as if by magic.

Dip the ends of rag rugs in starch after washing and they will lay flat on the floor instead of curling on the edges.

Save the core wax paper comes on to wrap your doilies on to prevent wrinkling after laundering.

A rag moistened in milk helps to whiten the piano keys.

A "costume box" is suggested where there are children to amuse. Into a certain box put discarded articles of clothing which have "costume" possibilities. Children love to "dress up," and if the box is reserved for certain occasions such as Halloween, vacations, etc., it is enjoyed more than if it is available all the time.

Don't do without a grater just because such articles are scarce in the stores—make one! Take the lid from a mayonnaise or peanut butter jar, and drive nail holes from the inside out. Put them fairly close together, and the rough surface on the outside does the grating.

If anyone has a rusty wire clothes line which can not be replaced for the duration, it can be made nearly as good as new by painting with black automobile enamel.

If apples or bananas which are to be used in fruit salads are covered with grapefruit juice and chilled, they will not darken and discolor the salad.

A few drops of vinegar or lemon juice added to the water used in poaching eggs will help hold them together.

House plants should have an occasional cool soap and water bath to remove the dust and dirt from the leaves. This may be done by laying the pot on its side, and carefully sponging each leaf with absorbent cotton dipped in cool suds. Then rinse in cold water to remove the soap, taking care that soapy water does not get in the soil.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Sorting the contributions to the nation's scrap rubber drive has been a tremendous job. There are more than 75 types of rubber scrap, but most reclaimed rubber tonnage is derived from auto.

Rubber plantations covered over eight million acres at the outbreak of the war and had a potential production capacity of 1,400,000 long tons a year, according to rubber experts. Our synthetic rubber plants, some of which have already exceeded rated capacities, are expected to turn out over 1,000,000 long tons a year when operating at peak.

PRICE PROGRAM ON LIVE CATTLE

The price stabilization program for cattle establishes high and low limits on the average price which packers must pay for live cattle if they wish to qualify for Government subsidy payments, but the program does NOT fix price ceilings on live cattle.

Under the program, maximum and minimum prices have been established for each of the six principal grades of beef, and subsidies ranging from 50 cents to $1.45 a 100 pounds are payable on each of these grades. However, a packer may pay below the minimum prices on one or more grades of cattle, then offset this deficit by paying above the maximum prices set for other grades, and still qualify for the full subsidy payments on all cattle slaughtered. To do this, the average cost of all the cattle he buys must be somewhere within the high and low limits, or deductions will be made from his subsidy payments. The cattle stabilization program is entirely independent of the price support program for hogs under which subsidies are paid to packers who meet the support prices.

NEW MEXICO SCHOOLS GET READY FOR WINTER

Twelve schools that will have school lunch programs this year have canned 21,000 pounds of green peas at seven canning centers in eastern New Mexico. The schools in Forrest, Grady, House, Rosedale, Causey, Rogers, Arch, Dora, Quay, Texico, Highway and Lingo cooperated in the program.

Following plans outlined by Gordon H. Wood, of WFA's Office of Distribution, and Frank E. Wimberly, state supervisor of vocational agriculture, school officials and civic clubs established canning centers at Rosedale, Causey, Rogers, Lingo, Arch, Dora and Clovis.

Under its price support program, WFA furnished green peas purchased from New Mexico truck growers and the department of vocational agriculture provided canning equipment and part of the supervision.

"All the school officials deserve great credit for the part they played," Mr. Wood said. "And that goes especially for Superintendent Agric Jones, of the Roosevelt County Schools, and for Alan L. Staley, instructor of vocational agriculture at Clovis High."

FARM AND WAR NEWS ROUNDUP

CATTLE SLAUGHTER IS NOT RESTRICTED

With heavy runs of cattle beginning to come to market, the War Food Administration points out that cattle slaughter regulations in no way restrict the number that may be slaughtered. This fact is one that apparently has not been understood by many people, C. V. Hemphill, State AAA chairman, says.

Farmers may slaughter and deliver meat from any cattle or other livestock owned by them without any license or permit and without making any report of such deliveries to the Government. Commercial packers and persons who slaughter livestock exclusively for others on a fee basis must obtain slaughtering licenses from WFA, and anyone slaughtering 50 or more head of cattle weekly or 300 or more annually must turn in monthly reports to WFA.

Slaughterers who kill more than 51 head of cattle weekly that produce "Army style" beef must set aside a percentage for Government purchase which must be Federally inspected. Slaughterers must comply with OPA regulations regarding grading of meat and collection of ration points. "These regulations pertain to licensing, grading, set-aside for Government purchase, and collection of ration points," Mr. Hemphill points out, "but they do not restrict the number of cattle that may be slaughtered."

SPEED APPLICATIONS, IS REQUEST

All business concerns desiring to be authorized tire inspection stations, are urged by the District OPA Office to speed their applications to their War Price and Rationing Boards.
had applications approved by the Dis-
Authorization of all current tire inspection stations expired August 15 and Boards now can accept inspections only from stations which have tiret Office. Haste in filing applications is urged so citizens may not be handicapped by being unable to find authorized tire inspection dealers.

MAIL EARLY TO NAVAL PERSONNEL

Neither the weather nor the calendar indicates it, but the Christmas shopping rush has started for friends and relatives of Navy, Marine and Coast Guard men on duty overseas.

Holiday packages for these men must be mailed between September 15 and October 15 to reach them in time for the Christmas observance on their ship or station.
