With The Men In Service

Lt. (jg) Fenner D. Jones, 24, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Jones, Corona, N. M., who piloted his Wildcat fighter plane on 29 missions with Composite Squadron Nine in the Okinawa campaign, has returned to the States for leave and reassignment.

Composite Squadron NINE, Navy flying veterans of Atlantic and Pacific warfare, was cited for anti-submarine successes against German U-boats. From the decks of the USS Bogue and USS Casablanca, Wildcat and Avenger pilots sank four Nazi submarines, damaged and probably sank several others during 10,000 hours of combat flying which earned the group the Presidential Unit Citation.

Then followed 73 days of operations at Okinawa. The squadron leveled Jap buildings, blasted troop concentrations, barracks supply and munitions dumps while expending more than 375,000 pounds of bombs and other ammunition on the Japs.

Commissioned in August, 1942, Squadron NINE has flown 33,000 hours and made more than 5,700 carrier landings.

Lt. Julian O. Kay, USNR, 1813 Claremont Ave., Richmond, Va., veteran torpedo bomber pilot was commanding officer of NINE during its pacific tour of duty. Executive officer and senior fighter pilot of the squadron was Lt. Robert C. Palmquist, USNR, 175 Country Club Rd., Chicago Heights, Ill.

HQ. SERVICES OF SUPPLY, KUNMING, China—The Station Hospital near here, largest of its kind in China, has been awarded the Meritorious Service Unit Plaque for "superior performance of duty in the completion of exceptionally difficult tasks under adverse conditions," it was announced in orders issued by Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding general, Services of Supply, China Theater.

The award covers a period from 15 October 1944 to 15 February 1945 and permits all personnel assigned or attached to the unit in that period to wear a laurel wreath on the sleeve of the uniform.

Col. Alekseï Leonidoff, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., commanded the unit in this period.

The award citation stressed the maintenance of high standard of military discipline and efficiency on the part of the Nurses, Medical Officers and Medical Corpsmen. During the period covered, the hospital, which has several hundred beds, was under expansion, was called upon to handle refugees, and take care of a growing population with limited personnel and resources.

During this same period a systematic plan of helping Chinese Army medical personnel service to improve its efficiency by placing interns in the Army hospital was worked out by the hospital command.

Much of the equipment of the Station Hospital was improvised from scrap aluminum, salvaged oil drums, when "hump" tonnage was sorely needed for gasoline and bombs. Throughout all of the time the hospital has maintained an exceptionally low death rate.

Men from forty-two states are represented at the hospital.

Man from Lincoln County is Pvt. Bruce H. Fabber, of Ancho.

N. M. Coast Guardsman Stationed at Advance Base in Pacific

Coast Guardsman Lloyd G. Coe Seaman first class, son of Mrs. Mary Coe, Hollywood, New Mexico is stationed somewhere in the South Pacific war zone awaiting further assignment. Coe attended Capitan High School and enlisted in the Coast Guard in February 1943. Coast Guardsman Coe took his basic training at Alameda, Calif., and was then attached to the Captain of the Port, Portland, Oregon, for ten months. Following completion of his duties at the Portland station he attended the Coast Guard Electrical school in Boston, Mass. He has one brother, Melvin, with the Army in Germany and another brother, Joe, with the Marines in the Pacific.

Luzon, P. I. —Technician 5th Grade Gilberto Gonzales of Carrizozo has arrived in the Philippines and is on duty with Major-General Frederick Gilbreath's army Service command headquarters. Cpl. Gonzales, assigned to the post exchange headquarters, entered the army in March 1942, and has been overseas since September of the same year. Before his recent transfer to Luzon Cpl. Gonzales was stationed with the army's South Pacific headquarters.

With the 45 Infantry Division in the Assembly Area Command, France --- The 45th Infantry Division is coming home from Europe, but no Japanese can take comfort in the fact. The "Thunderbird" is merely going to sharpen its combat hardened beak and claws for the final assault on Fascism's last stronghold.

The division, of which Pfc. Beryl D. Yandell, Carrizozo, New Mexico is a member, already has established a brilliant record as a spearhead unit in its drive to free Europe from Nazi rule.

Now, at Camp St. Louis in the Mourmelon Sub-Area Command, it is undergoing processing for redeployment, and its members will receive 30-day furloughs in the United States before transfer to the Pacific.

Under command of Major-General Robert T. Frederick, and previously led by Major-Generals W. W. Eagles and Troy H. Middleton, the Thunderbird Division has fought through 511 of the most savage days of the European war, crushing powerful German defensive positions in four invasions, over more than 1,000 miles of the most difficult combat country in the world.

Men of the 45th charged ashore on D Days in Sicily and at Salerno. They created, grimly held and finally broke out of the Anzio beachhead, and chased first-line Nazi troops out of Rome.

They hit the coast of Sotuhern France, drove the Germans up the Rhone, and finally fought into the heart of the Nazis' "Southern Redoubt," overrunning Nuremberg and Munich and, in the capture of the Dachau concentration camp, receiving, a direct object lesson in the reason for their fight.

They won among them, five Congressional Medals of Honor and more than 4,500 other individual and unit decorations for valor, and now many of them have volunteered for Pacific service.

Pfc. Yandell holds the following decorations: E T O, Combat Infantryman Badge and the Good Conduct Ribbon.

AMERICAN HEROES

by WOODY COWAN

INVESTING in War Bonds with their increase in value each year judged against the courage of Lt. J. L. Knight, Weatherford, Texas, 124th Cavalry Reg., seems insignificant, but it helps supply our fighters with weapons. Facing heavily defended Jap positions on the Burma road, Lt. Knight led his men through dense jungle and secured their objective. Reconnoitering the area, he found himself in a horseshoe formation of concealed Jap pillboxes and threw grenades, destroying four. Wounded, he saw that those in his command were protected until he died. A medal of honor was awarded Lt. Knight posthumously. U. S. Treasury Department

Mrs. White Will Teach Complete Course in Home Ec

She graduated from the Carrizozo High School in 1937 and received her degree in Home Economics from New Mexico A. and M. in May 1942. She taught the home-making classes in the Carlsbad Junior High School during the 1942 43 term.

Mrs. White and her infant son, Allen, are making their home with Mrs. White's parents, Mr. and Mrs C. A. Snow while Lt. White is overseas. Lt. White is stationed somewhere in the Pacific.

An interesting and worthwhile program in home-making is being planned for the coming year. It will include the usual classes: Clothing Construction, Food Preparation, and Nutrition, as well as classes in Good Grooming, Personal Hygiene, Keeping the Family Well, How to do a Family Laundry, and many other subjects.

Mr. and Mrs Jess Garrison spent several days in El Paso this week.

Overseas Mailing Postal Requirements

When you are making up a Christmas box - early, to meet overseas mailing requirements—for that man in Europe or in the Pacific, remember the women in service, too.

Although thousands of WACS spent last December overseas, for many, aiding in the redeployment of troops and working with occupation forces, the coming Christmas will be their first on foreign soil. Remembrances from home will mean much to them.

In order to make sure that when your Wac overseas receives her Christmas package, it is just like you want her to have it—undamaged, on time follow the War department's postal recommendations.

These four points are particularly important:

Wrap packages securely to withstand rough treatment.

Address parcels legibly, using complete army address.

Mail packages between September 15 and October 15, only.

Choose gifts wisely; don't send impractical or unnecessary gifts.

For further information about overseas mailing, see your postmaster.

A season of rejoicing was indulged in Tuesday afternoon when the long expected messages of the Jap surrender were received. Sirens wailed, horns blasted, women cried and laughed at the same time. The fire truck lead a procession of cars with flags waving and just when it seemed like Bedlam had broken loose, along came several children with some cow bells to add to the tumult — It was glorious news, and was gladly received.

We have the same degree of faith in the Mikado, the temporary and spiritual head of the Japanese empire as we have in his subjects that bombed Pearl Harbor; therefore we hope General MeArthur will have an abundance of planes well prepared for the representatives of chauvinism when he receives them.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Looking Back—and Ahead

By COMDR. JACK DEMPSEY

As I take over WW's chair, I find myself at a disadvantage. I have seen so little of Broadway in the last couple of years that I really don't know the score. My absence from the old street is only temporary. Like every sailor, I am looking forward to wearing a wide-brimmed Panama again, complete with a loud sports jacket and the brightest necktie I can find. That should be a matter of no more than eight months, for the Nips are hanging on the ropes and the bell isn't going to save them.

In the meantime I am in the Coast Guard for the duration, or as long as Uncle Sam has a job I can do. By the time this reaches you I expect to be somewhere in the Pacific. My assignment is that of military morale officer for the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th Naval districts. Included in this group is Pearl Harbor and my duties may take me farther westward as our fleet hammers at the very doors of Hirohito's hovel.

Wants to Hold the White Horse

If I can only have the privilege of holding the Mikado's white horse when Admiral Halsey mounts him for his victorious ride through downtown Tokyo it will be a bigger thrill than I experienced when Jess Willard failed to answer the bell for the 4th round on that sunbaked day in Toledo, 25 years ago.

Speaking from experience I can assure you that a morale officer hasn't a tough assignment. Not with the Navy and the Coast Guard. I have trained thousands of seamen and I went ashore on Okinawa during that bloody campaign for the sole purpose of observing what benefits, if any, the men had received from our training program. There isn't a sailor out there who doesn't dream of coming home, but none of them want to return until the shooting stops. If you could talk with them at their battle stations you would be proud of just being with them.

As for myself, the war has been a wonderful, though hardly a pleasant, experience. It has been amusing, too. I was in England the day Jack London won the British Empire heavyweight championship from Tommy Mills. A British reporter asked me what I thought of Jack London and I replied that I had enjoyed reading his books and that I thought he was one of the truly great American writers.

"I am so sorry," replied the startled and polite Englishman. "I was referring to Jack London, the British prize fighter, and not Jack London, the American author."

I had to confess that I had never seen London fight and had no opinion to offer on the subject. I have since met London, a bald-headed veteran of 32 years. His defeat by Bruce Woodcock recently came as no surprise to me, as I judged from London's appearance that he was well past his prime.

A NEW FIGHTER

You may have gathered by now that I am still interested in the fight game. I am, and I expect to be active in it during the years that will be left to me after the war. Recently there arrived from the Argentine Abel Costas, a young South American giant, sent to me by my old friend and foe, Luis Angel Firpo. If you know Firpo you will realize that he didn't lay out the money for his passage unless he was convinced Abel can fight.

Costas hasn't been thoroughly tested yet, but I'm willing to take a chance. He's big, strong and rough.

Of course I can't be active in handling the South American. While I am in uniform, Max Waxman is looking after him. Waxman has managed several champions and he has been my personal manager for a great many years. I am fortunate to be associated in a business way with Max and also with Job Amron and Louis Brooks.

Because of them I have not had to make the financial sacrifice so many others had to make when they entered the armed forces. I couldn't have conducted my Broadway restaurant nor the Great Northern hotel any better than they have. We're a going concern and we are looking forward to the postwar years together.

BOXING WAS GOOD TO ME

Looking back from the exalted age of 50 years, I can truthfully say that boxing has been good to me. In the years just ahead I believe it will offer even greater opportunities to some Jack Dempsey of the future. Naturally I am convinced that the next heavyweight champion will come from the ranks of our fighting men. It was so after World War I and if I am not mistaken his name was Gene Tunney, a marine. I seem to recall meeting him on a rainy night in Philadelphia.

Wide Call for Hostess Gowns And Housecoats in Gay Prints

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DEPEND upon it, the happy possessor of a charming housecoat fashioned of gay and beguiling overglaze chintz, as illustrated to the left, will find it a source of joy and comfort the whole summer through, and on into mellow autumn days.

Now's the time that the lightweight houserobe gives real service. Ideal it is for betwixt and between season wear, and it will continue to carry on triumphantly way up to when the new crop of luxuriant "keep warm" fashions begin to come in.

Enthusiasm for housecoats and hostess gowns done in gay print jersey, crepe and washable prints has been unprecedented this season. The trend is toward stunning modes such as the dramatic bowknot print hostess gown shown to the right. The material is a chantung in Du Pont rayon yarn. The gown is ultra modern in that it goes 60-60 print with plain. The front bodice, as you will note in the inset, shows a blouse effect made of the plain. You'll love this dress for its candlelight flattery as well as its daytime loveliness.

Housecrobes of richly colorful jersey print have high fashion rank for fall. They are serviceable and ever so good-looking. One of their outstanding features is that they are so smartly styled, some with inset belts, others with the new corselet effect. Side-draping is much in evidence, also ruffled shoulder treatments and a dramatic use of jeweled buttons at the waistline. These bright, jersey-print lovelies are not only relaxation-perfect but you can meet your guests with perfect poise in one of these fashion-right robes.

The outlook for fall and winter at-home fashions is most glamorous. Fabulous things are being done in exciting lounge wear that involves a use of glitter accents, exotic color and picturesque silhouettes, also there is a feeling of far East influence expressed in such items as hand-painted or sequin-trimmed leisure blouses worn with tapered trousers. Gold bangles dangle from belts, arms are laden with bracelets, and midriff effects are seen in wide girdles and sashes.

Contrasting the dramatic and sophisticated styling of luxury-type novelties, the early new collections show wool jersey hostess robes or coats which place the accent on the refinement and elegance of exquisite simplicity. These are very lovely in pastels, as for instance, the side-button model in pink wool jersey that achieves a slim-at-the-waistline silhouette together with a full-skirted hemline. Wool jersey in the darker colors will be a first-in-favor for practical, "comfy" good-looking fall and winter housecoats.

The robe made of horseblanket plaid brings in the American feeling. This type is the sort college girls go for, and their practicality is emphasized in that some of them have a collar attachment cleverly taped so that it may be converted into a hood.

There is quite a wide use being made of durable all-over lace in tints to match the crepe with which it is made up. One lovely model has a peplum jacket blouse of all-over lace which tops a skirt in matched-color crepe. An increasing trend to soft styling is noted all the way through the advance at-home apparel collections.

Early Fall Gingham

You will be seeing more cottons worn this fall than ever. Their high fashion rank is declared in just such stunning and wearable costumes as is this stunning bolero suit. This three-piece charmer in black and white gingham is just the type that makes for perfect midseason wear. For hot September days the brief bolero conceals a black halter blouse that spells comfort. Then too, with the bolero removed, you have a modish little frock that can go dancing informally.

Make-Your-Own Idea Spreading on Campus

Sewing interest is mounting to a new high. Now that the make-your-own idea is spreading throughout the college girl clan there sure will be something doing in the way of clothes budget thrift by these ambitious enthusiasts. Many of them are already planning to make their next semester's wardrobe.

Exceptional opportunities are being offered in way of sewing instructions given in fabric departments in many stores. To do your own sewing is really inspirational for it gives play to creative genius. No wonder the sewing venture is becoming a hobby with young moderns who have ideas of their own and welcome the chance to work out individual touches in the clothes they wear. You can get perfect patterns for every thing from slacks outfits to daytime frocks and dressy afternoon costumes, with complete sewing instructions.

Fall Sweater Dresses Are Pretty and Practical

You'll be that intrigued with the new sweater dresses that are being shown for fall, you will feel the urge to buy one at first glance. They appeal from two angles. One is their practicality and dependable wearableness, the other is that they are so perfectly charming in appearance.

They have all the qualities to make them a big success fashion. They are shown in one and two-piece versions, combining soft wool jersey tops with black crepe skirts. The sweater tops are in delicate colors like pale pink or beige. In some instances the jersey bodice is finished off with a beguiling jeweled necklace line.

Household Hints

Try a dash of cinnamon on cold watermelon.

Add a few chopped ripe or green olives to either plain or lemon sauce served with fish.

Peanut butter mixed with a little cream makes a good filling for white or graham cracker sandwiches.

Before starting to polish leather-seated chairs, wipe off the seats with a cloth dipped in sweet milk. You will be surprised at the dirt that will come off. Polish as usual.

Linoleum can be cleaned easily if it is kept waxed. A dry dust mop is generally all that is needed. Scrub only when dirty.

Rotating Statue

One of America's outstanding memorials of the First World war is The God of Peace, the 38-foot onyx statue of an Indian by Carl Milles, installed in 1936 in the Ramsey county court house in St. Paul, Minn., says Collier's.

To show the detail of its back, this 60-ton figure rotates automatically on its base, to the right and to the left, 66 degrees in each direction, completing the two movements in five hours.

Firestone GROUND GRIPS
Best on EVERY job... Under ALL Conditions
40% LONGER TREAD LIFE
14% STRONGER CORD BODY
UP TO 16% MORE DRAWBAR PULL

GOOD tractor tires do two things. They get every ounce of pulling power from your tractor. They stay on the job. That's why Firestone Ground Grips are best on every job . . . under all conditions.

There are sound reasons for this. Cord bodies are 14% stronger . . . able to withstand hard knocks. Tread life is 40% longer . . . capable of giving years of extra service.

Firestone Ground Grips increase pull at the drawbar by as much as 16%. That's because traction bars are connected, adding up to 215 inches of traction bar length per tractor. Also, there are no broken-bar, trash-catching pockets. The strong, sturdy bars are always clean . . . ready to take the next deep, forceful traction step.

That's why it is just sound economy, when buying tractor tires, to demand Ground Grips, made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker.

For the best in music, listen to the "Voice of Firestone" every Monday evening over NBC network.

For caution, the Russian Bear has the world skinned. To borrow western slang, the Russians always wait to see "which way the cat is going to jump" before they go into anything.

The golden rule for war is to do unto other armies what you know they would like to do unto your armies— but do them F I R S T .

"Necessity is the mother of invention" For example this war has brought forth some wonderful achievements. Our fighter planes were equipped with extra storage tanks which were detachable and could be cast off when the gas had been consumed, thus lightening the load. But the interesting part about their construction was that they were composed entirely of waste paper and glue. Technicians had a formula for pressing and treating these tanks in a way to hold gas for long range fighter protection.

The emperor of the setting sun is too "uppety;" he wants to dictate the terms of surrender himself (By the way uppety isn't in the dictionary, but 'us southerners can use a lingo all our own.')

Admittedly the emperor has large armies that are undefeated. Why not pick out some near by spots and drop some more atomic bombs near enough for the not holy emperor to feel the reverberations; they might jar the slant out of his eyes so he could see straight

BIRTH SLIPS TO BE DISCONTINUED

Director J. R. Scott announced that the State Health Department has stopped issuance of birth notification slips to parents, even though it would create somewhat of a burden on the people of the State of New Mexico.

The slip was free. It will now be necessary to obtain birth certificates at a cost of $1.

"Among the uses tat have been made of these slips," Dr. Scott said, "has been the presentation of the slip to ration boards for the issuance of food ration cards for the babies. The slip also has been used to prove the age of a child who starts attending school for the first time."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

How to Greet a Wounded Soldier

Charlie Jenkins got back from overseas the other day, discharged for wounds...and he was pretty well banged up.

Naturally, our town felt mighty bad about it. We wanted to sympathize with him and help him. But Doc Walters set us straight about that.

He said that what Charlie wanted most was to be accepted as one of the gang again... as if nothing had happened. So we asked him over to pitch horseshoes with his good hand, and enjoy a friendly glass of beer and chew the fat like old times.

And you should have seen him pick up! From being scared of meeting people, Charlie got his confidence back and soon became his own self again.

From where I sit, Doc Walters gave us the right steer. The wounded men coming home don't want our sympathy or our overenthusiastic help. They want to be treated like the rest of us... with a chance to work and lead a normal life. And that's the least we can offer them.

EL PASO— International Mining Day will be celebrated November 2 and 3 in El Paso.

The mining committee of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the anual celebration, has decided to advance the date so as not to interfere with the opening of the hunting season in New Mexico.

The committee also began to poll mining machinery corporations throughout the country, asking whether they would care to participate in a mining exhibit which would be held in conjunction with International Mining Day.

Eugene M. Thomas, Dean of Engineering of the Texas College of Mines, is the general chairman for International Mining Day of 1945.

Nearly 500 registered for the 1944 celebration. International Mining Day is a get-together for mining men of New Mexico, Texas, Arizona, Colorado and Mexico. Although the program is primarily social, culminating with the famous Sourdough Supper, one business meeting is held at which leaders in the mining industry speak. The El Paso Metals Section of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers also has a program in conjunction with International Mining Day.

The Carlsbad Section of the AIME is expected to participate in this year's program.

NEW PROGRAM FOR VETERANS OF WORLD WAR II

Effective July 1st veterans can purchase government surplus property on a high priority to set themselves up and maintain themselves in business it was announced today by John F. Bynon, N. M. District Manager of the Smaller War Plants Corporation. The exercise of this right by veterans will be accomplished through SWPC, thereby affording veterans the highest priority possible. Under the terms of the Surplus Property Act, SWPC can purchase surplus property for resale to small business organizations and under Surplus Property Board Regulation No. 2 has a federal agency top priority to buy surplus property. SWPC will act as a buying agent or clearing house on all veterans purchases. It has the responsibility of determining whether the veteran has a likely chance of success in his venture.

If he decides he has not, SWPC must explain that decision to the Surplus Property Board. The War Food Administration will advise SWPC concerning applications for surplus property items useful in farming, forestry, grazing(fruit growing and the like. Under this system a veteran cannot buy more than $2,500. of surplus property. Prices will be governed by OPA ceilings, and the prices will not be more than the government originally paid, less depreciation.

To take advantage of this preferential buying, a veteran must have or be prepared to operate a small business or professional enterprise on his own. This might consist of a commercial, industrial, manufacturing, financial or service business, or it might be a medical, dental or legal office.

On approved applications the veteran can purchase surplus property with 15% down payment. Credit will be extended on the balance for a reasonable period, depending on the type of material purchased. There is a limitation on the type of goods a veteran can buy under this system, for example, he can buy equipment and fittings to operate a store but he cannot buy the merchandise he sells from his shelves. The latter comes under a different regulation.

A few of the items a veteran might be able to buy under this preferential system are: Office and store equipment, trucks, automobiles and motorcycles, tractors and road building machinery, factory machinery, medical and scientific instruments, construction machinery and materials. Many of these items are not now available but probably will be later on.

The veteran and others who wish more information about the policies and procedures that govern the sale of surplus property for the veteran and small businessman may obtain it from any regional or district office of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, said Mr. Bynon. The albuquerque District Office, covering the State of New Mexico is located at 103½ W. Central Avenue, Room 2, Albuquerque.

WHITE SANDS POWER LINE

AMARILLO, TEX., AUG. 6th—Work is progressing rapidly on the high voltage transmission line from Las Cruces to Alamogordo, New Mexico, being constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation to serve the U. S. Army's White Sands Ordnance proving grounds, the air field near Alamogordo and the city of Alamogordo.

Several miles om holes have been dug by the Reynolds Electrical and Engineering co. of El Paso, the contractor, and materials are beginning to arrive. The 70 mile line, with three substations, is slated for completion by October 1, according to Wesley R. Nelson, regional director of the Bureau of Reclamation, with headquarters in Amarillo.

The extension of the line from Las Cruces to Alamogordo, which will transmit hydro-power from Elephant Butte dam, will eventually serve a number of REA cooperatives in New Mexico in addition to the present emergency war needs, Mr. Nelson said.

Work on the power line is being directed by O. Newall Parker, construction engineer for the Bureau, with offices in Las Cruces.

Uncle Sam Pins Orchids On Local Women For Saving Used Fats!

Things have really been happening to fat-salvage-collection figures since town and farm women got busy on the job! Latest official government records show that their fat savings have left the excellent record of city women 'way behind.

But it isn't a drop too much. This year, we face a shortage of 1 billion, 600 million pounds of fats in domestic supplies. Tons more of war and home-front supplies made from fats are neededl.

Farm folks get more meat these days than most city people—so it's up to them to save the fats. Skim stews, soups, gravies. Scrape pans. Melt down meat trimmings. It all helps you fill the fat-salvage can, and you get up to 40 and 2 red points a pound. If you have any difficulty, call your Home Demonstration or County Agent. Approved by WPA and OPA. Paid for by Industry.

LAW REQUIRES FISHING LICENSES FOR SERVICEMEN

From time to time requests have come to the State Game Department to permit convalescent and other servicemen to fish without a license or to issue them free licenses to fish or hunt. Authority to purchase a few licenses and rotate their use among convalescent and other servicemen has also been requested.

The State Game Commission at its meeting on June 11 and again on July 10 took this matter under advisement and went into it fully. The Commission feels most kindly toward all men who are serving their country in the armed forces and is particularly sympathetic toward those who are now convalescing in hospitals or at convalescent stations.

"The Game Commission would like very much to assist these men in any way possible that will hasten their recovery" said the Chairman, Judge William J. Barker, "however, the Commission's authority is limited by statutes and we find that no special provision has been made by the Legislature for handling situations of this kind. The Commission finds that it cannot waive the provisions of law governing such matters."

There are two separate sections of law relating to fishing licenses: Section 43-301 of the 1941 Statutes Annotated provides as follows:

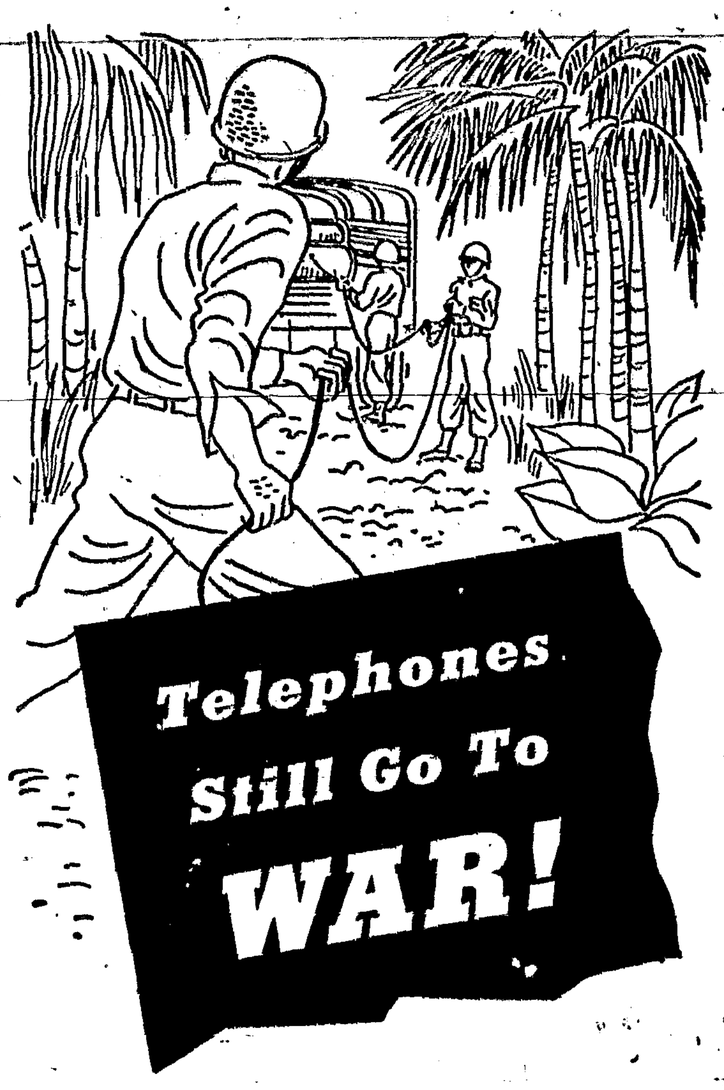
"* * * No person shall at any time shoot hunt, kill, injure or take in any manner, any game animal, game bird, or game fish without paying for and having in possession a license as herein provided for the year in which such shooting, hunting, fishing or taking is done. * * *"

and Section 43-308 says:

"* * * It shall be unlawful for any person except children under age of 14 years to take any game fish from any public stream or water in this State without having in his possession and on his person a fishing license as herein provided. * * *"

"Thus it will be seen that, regardless of the Game Commission's desire to be of assistance, the law is specific and the making of exceptions is not authorized," commented the Commission Chairman.

State Game Warden Elliot Barker sugested that perhaps many sportsmen would like to assist these convalescent servicemen by purchasing licenses for them. Money thus spent would go back into the Game Protection Fund. Those desiring to do so should contact hospital or convalescent station officials.



● In Europe, telephones played a mighty important part in the defeat of Germany.

Now, in the Pacific, telephones help unite our far flung forces of ships and planes, and provide a vital web of communications for the fighters-on-foot.

We look forward to the day when we will be able to serve everyone again, but the demands of war must come first.

U. S. MUST PLAY VITAL PART IN WORLD AFFAIRS

FOR MORE THAN a century our only continuing and emphatic foreign policy was the Monroe Doctrine. It was a policy that was understood and respected by European nations, but not always so well understood or appreciated by the Latin republics of this hemisphere.

When, on two or three occasions, those outside of this hemisphere attempted to interfere with us we took a hand in outside affairs. Those occasions represented incidents more than a policy. It was not that we were isolationist; we were not interested in affairs outside of our own back yard. We tried mildly to take a hand in the Far East. The open door for China was not an emphatic policy, and we were easily bluffed out.

Conditions have changed. We can no longer have only a hemisphere policy, we must have a world policy. To make our policy, whatever it may be, respected it must be emphatic, consistent and continuous. We can no longer merely sit on the side lines and watch the world game. We must be more than "kibitzers," we must take a hand.

We must have a part in directing the game, in keeping it honest, with the cards on the table, and none of them marked. That part calls for a policy. We can be arbiters, but we cannot be merely appeasers. We must recognize and call a bluff before it becomes a threat.

Our policy is being formulated now. A portion of it was demonstrated at the Potsdam conference. We gave unmistakable evidence that we propose to play a part, in keeping with our place in the world, in the events of the world, and in dictating international policies. In previous conferences in which we participated, much was left to interpretation. Our position had not been definitely stated. That should not be true of the future. Every t should be crossed and every i dotted.

James F. Byrnes, as secretary of state, will have much to do with formulating that emphatic and continuing American foreign policy. He knows the American people and our desires in international affairs. But most important of all his qualifications is that he knows a bluff and will call it before it becomes a threat. Doing that is a long step in the preservation of world peace.

RAILROAD LAWS TIE UP NEEDED MANPOWER

HOW THE "FULL CREW" LAWS that are on the books in a number of states can result in railroad labor "feather bedding" is illustrated by an incident of which I heard recently.

In California the law provides that extra brakemen must be employed on such portions of track where the mountain grades are in any way unusual, or on any curve that is more than ordinary. These laws call for the employment of as many as five to seven brakemen on short sections of track, some of them only a few hundred yards in length. These brakemen, with modern train control, have nothing to do but ride.

A short time ago a train loaded with government war supplies was passing over a division in which a short section called for seven brakemen. The brakemen were called, but did not arrive before the train was ready to leave the division point. The conductor, not knowing they were not aboard, gave the engineer the "go" sign, and the train pulled out. It was not until the conductor was checking in at the end of the division that he realized he had made the run without the legally prescribed number of brakemen.

He had made the railroad liable to severe penalties for not employing men for whom there was not the slightest need. The incident illustrates one of the reasons for labor shortages. These brakemen are not needed as are the men on the farms, but the brakemen are exempt as being employed in an essential industry.

IN 1944 THERE was in circulation in the United States $178 for every man, woman and child in the nation. That was more than three times the currency in circulation in 1919, at the close of World War I. The more money in circulation, the greater the danger of inflation.

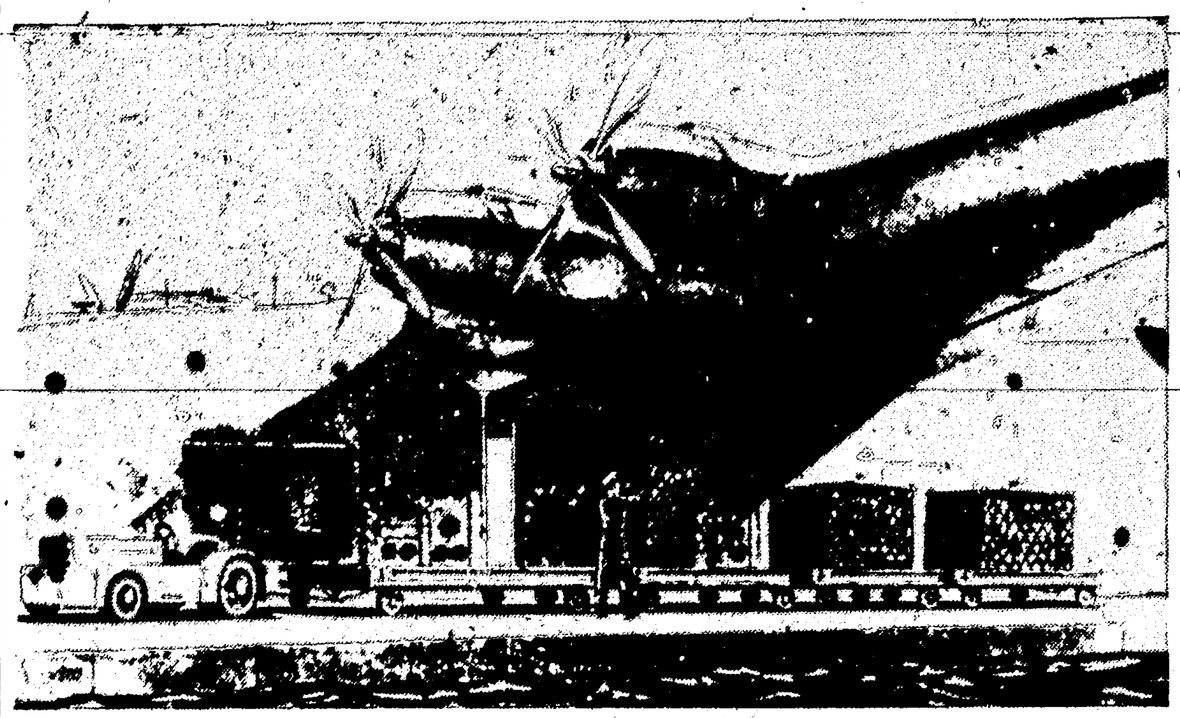
THE JOYS AND SORROWS of the farmer were contributed to by more than 75 departments, bureaus, administrations and other units of the federal government. Each of them had some part in telling him what to do and how to do it; in paying him for being good, or punishing him for being bad. He has been looked after, watched over, regulated and regimented by an army of nearly 100,000 employees on the payrolls of the agricultural department alone, none of whom were on the nation's farms.

Postwar Streamlined Cargo-Handling Plane

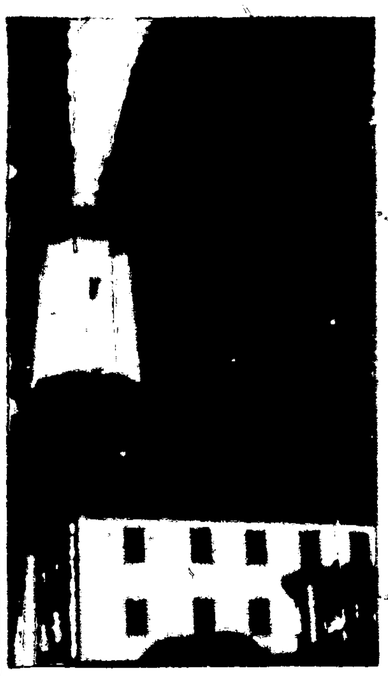


A streamlined cargo-handling system has been devised for speeding vitally needed supplies to the Pacific war front via the 72½-ton Mars Transports. It is the first ever planned for a fleet of large flying ships operating on extended overwater routes. The system has proven so successful that its use during postwar era is assured. These and similar planes will be fitted to carry on large operations on future global routes.

Jap 'Ersatz' Merchant Fleet Takes a Beating

The harbor at Hachinohe, in the Jap home island of Honshu, is no safe harbor for these "ersatz" wooden luggers of the dwindling Jap merchant fleet. Hastily and crudely built to replace better ships sunk by the Americans, these ugly ducklings of the sea soon join their better predecessors at the bottom of the sea—urged on their way by guns and bombs of carrier-based aircraft of the mighty U. S. Third fleet.

Light Comes on Again



Blacked out since Pearl Harbor, the 300,000-candlepower beacon at Montauk Point, Long Island, is shining again with its prewar brilliance. One of America's first lighthouses, it was established in 1789 and is one of thousand aids to navigation.

Tires to Aid Civilian Needs

Here is one of the huge shipments of rubber tires which arrived from Europe, where they were used on U. S. army vehicles throughout the war area. They were unloaded at Fort Totten, N. Y., where they were inspected and classified by the army. Some will be kept in army service, but many turned over for disposal to civilian purchasers.

DREW PEARSON

BRITISH LABOR PERSONALITIES

Britain's Labor party which swept Churchill out of office is a strange mixture, resembles the liberal branch of the Democratic party more than any Socialist movement. It has its liberal and its conservative wings, has had no labor troubles similar to ours during the past decade.

Clement Attlee, Britain's new prime minister, is a poor man. . . . He was little known among the fashionable people of England until 1935 when his salary was raised to 2,000 pounds a year. . . . After getting this pay boost, Mrs. Attlee was able to venture into society for the first time, was able to start playing golf, hire enough help to keep her home going. . . . Attlee likes to putter in his garden, do odd jobs around the house, constantly puffs a pipe, is a sharp contrast to fiery, charming Ramsey MacDonald, England's last Labor prime minister. . . . Attlee is no forthright leader, is considered more of an impartial middle man, will have all he can do to keep peace within his own widely split party.

Attlee's greatest rivals for power inside the party are paunchy, jovial Herbert Morrison and hard-headed, deep-voiced, testy Ernest Bevin. . . . Morrison lost his right eye when he was three days old, has had a "leftish" outlook ever since. . . . Morrison has played runner-up to Attlee in many elections, carries on constant behind-the-scenes warfare with Bevin. . . . Bevin had the same war job which Sidney Hillman took over in the OPM after Pearl Harbor—handling labor relations. However, Bevin made a better go of it, fought grimly and successfully for better rations for workers. . . . Morrison is a cockney, has a spry sense of humor, likes to dance, is head of the Labor party in politically potent London. He is also a man of daring, had the ancient tradition-encrusted Waterloo bridge torn down because he found it unserviceable, afterward had traffic rolling more smoothly through the center of London. . . . Morrison is a hard ruler.

Bevin—Union Boss.

Ernie Bevin is a hard-headed union boss. . . . He hates dictatorships but is a dictator in his own union, the giant transport workers. . . . Bevin runs his own union like John L. Lewis runs the mine workers. . . . Outside his union, however, Bevin's labor practices are more like those of Sidney Hillman and Phillip Murray. . . . He believes in negotiation rather than strikes. Bevin took a bad trouncing from Winston Churchill in 1926, has never forgiven the ex-prime minister. It was Bevin who called the 1926 general strike in England, a strike which Churchill dealt a shattering blow. . . . Bevin is a forthright anti-Fascist, was against Hitler, Mussolini and the Cliveden set from their inception, was responsible for the tough-minded position his party took internationally from 1933 to the outbreak of war. . . . As leader of the transport workers, Bevin controls considerable of the Labor party, is rough on his enemies, gruff with his friends, lesses his patience frequently.

To get feminine support, the new labor government will lean heavily on a red-headed fiery labor M.P., Ellen Wilkinson. . . . Miss Wilkinson is at home in a fight, knows the world, has contempt for Britain's colonial policies, is a scrapper from the word go. . . . She knows about riots and bloodshed first hand, was in the thick of the black and tan trouble in Ireland, even led hunger marchers on London during the depression. . . . Miss Wilkinson lives in the Bohemian Bloomsbury section of London surrounded by poets, painters, actors and writers; has persuaded many of them to pitch into labor's fight. . . . Blunt and forthright, Miss Wilkinson was the first member of parliament to defend King Edward's marrying American-born Wallis Simpson. . . . In one speech she said, "We say that if a woman is good enough to be a man's wife, she is good enough to take her side by him as his equal in whatever rank of life intended."

Another powerful figure in the new Attlee government will be tall, sparse hard-headed Arthur Greenwood, recently minister of postwar reconstruction. . . . Greenwood was responsible for what little slum clearance the MacDonald government undertook. . . . A member of Churchill's cabinet, Greenwood never was known as a radical or a great liberal, is a seasoned bureaucrat, knows his way around government, is an able talker.

HOMER by CROY

© W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy and his wife settled on a farm in Missouri where Homer was born. Homer was the first Croy to go to high school and college. In New York he worked on a woman's magazine, wrote a novel, and a play. His father and mother both died and Homer mortgaged the farm to help out a relative who was in serious trouble. He then wrote a dealer training film which brought in enough to pay off the mortgages. Homer published and sold for a profit a magazine for authors, he served with the Y.M.C.A. in World War I, wrote radio version of "Show Boat" and worked with Chic Sale and was secretary of Authors League. He continued with his novel writing.

CHAPTER XXIV

Men were posted in the wagons to drive for the women, a starting gun was fired, and slowly—interminably it seemed to me—the wagons inched across the field. Those women knew how to strip ribbons, pick up downcorn, and keep on the throwboard. They were the farm women I had known all my life—tanned, shapeless, amazingly capable, equal to any emergency, overworked and underpaid. At first glance, however, they didn't look like women, for most were in overalls, with men's hats pulled down over their hair. They were there to work and that was exactly what they were doing; regularly, in a sort of rhythm, the ears of corn beat on the throwboards. But the women were feminine after all, no matter what their cover-alls said. For a quarter of them were wearing high-heeled shoes. If my mother had come out to the field in a pair of high-heeled shoes, I'm sure Pa'd 've sent her back to the house. Times change and conditions change. But people don't; for these women were as my mother was—except for the item of the shoes. Sometimes it seems to me, people are the one constant factor in the whole scheme of things.

When the gun went off the second time, the women climbed into the wagons and the wagons started for the scales where the corn would have to be weighed; and the gleanings, too, and the overlooked corn. One woman, before she would allow herself to be driven through the cheering lines, brought out her lipstick. I am glad Pa never saw a Women's National Corn Husking Contest. He had stood up under many things, but a lipstick in a cornfield might have proved too much.

I asked one of the winners what she was going to do with the money. It was going into a college fund, she said. Then glanced proudly at her son she had by the hand.

The contest was held near a farm owned by former President Herbert C. Hoover. I had never been on his farm, so now we drove to it and I walked across it, thrilled to have such a distinguished fellow farmer. When I saw the condition the farm was in, I knew it was just as well he had stuck to politics.

Once, at the behest of his political guides, he had come back to make a speech, just as Farmer Willkie had gone to Elwood, Indiana, to show what a callus-handed son of the soil he was.

Mr. Hoover's fellow farmers came to see one of their kind. The crowd became so great that Mr. Hoover adjourned to his front porch and started to talk to his friends. His friends were more friendly than he knew, and crowded on the porch. Suddenly there was a noise, and a shock, too, and Hoover and his friends and the porch went down. There was a scramble but, after a few moments, Mr. Hoover was able to right himself and went on with the alarming condition of the country.

The porch is still there, in about the fix the speech left it in.

When I got back to New York, I went to the Dutch Treat Club, and there was my neighbor. I went to him, after he had finished lunch but was still sitting at the table, and said:

"Mr. Hoover, I'm going to say something to you that no one else in this club has ever said."

He glanced at me, evidently wondering what to make of this approach.

I said, "I walked across your farm in Missouri a few days ago."

Now he did look with interest. "Well, how is it?"

I told him just what I had seen. That it was in poor condition; the outbuildings were falling to pieces, the house needed painting, the fences were down, the gullies were washing and the soil itself was overcorned. Even, I said, one side of his cave had fallen in.

He asked questions and I told him just how the farm impressed me. Then he wanted to know if I would be interested in buying it. I told him that I did not think I would.

After I left, he went on smoking; but more thoughtfully, it seemed to me. Maybe it had dawned on him that he hadn't been cut out to be a farmer.

All visits are not so glamorous; there are plenty of hard, practical problems to solve. And so Spide and I and Lloyd stand on the south side of the barn and try to work them out. How much land should go in wheat? How much in corn? How much in rye? This is complicated by the fact that the government must always be reckoned with. We will be paid so much for raising this; and so much for not raising that. It takes a bit of figuring.

As we walk across the farm, I see a cornpicker at work. It is not on our land, but in a few days one will be snatching off the ears on our land. I think back to the days when my father shucked corn and my mother came out and helped him, and that night poured tallow in the cracks in his hands. And I think back to the days when I husked, too—surely the hardest work in the world. The land doesn't yield as it did then. Fertilizer is going on it—something my father never dreamed of. And there are a million bugs and insects busy at the corn and at the land, pests he never heard of. The vast fertility of the prairie soil has been depleted. But it's still black loam, still the finest cornland in the world.

We have dinner. Nellie sits in the chair nearest the kitchen, where my mother used to hop up. Spide only bows his head, for the Logans are Catholics. I think of my father sitting in Spide's chair, and a choky feeling pushes into my collar. A little disappointment about dinner, for the cooking isn't as good, and the food isn't as good, as I remember it. After all, there's nothing to season food like a couple of plow handles.

After dinner, house problems. Every room must be inspected. A new ceiling will have to go into this one. But Nellie's son-in-law, who lives in Omaha, is a plasterer. "When his vacation comes we'll invite him to see us," says Nellie. So that's taken care of.

Why! this is the very room where my father used to fall asleep over his livestock paper. The very one where I used to read the farm papers. What does the farm boy of today read? Well, he reads the farm weeklies and semimonthlies (Wallaces' Farmer is still going strong) and he listens to the National Radio Hour and to the market prices as they come in over the Midwest stations. The mail-order monthlies are all gone; but there has come to take their place a plague of cheap movie magazines and radio guides and comic supplement magazines detailing the adventures of Superman and his kind. And the hired man, today, instead of having pictures of race horses pinned on his wall, has Poses of Beautiful Art Models. Sometimes I wish the mail-order magazines hadn't gone their way.

We look at the bathroom. The nondecaying wallpaper has about decayed. So that goes down on the list. It is a single duty bathroom; merely a bathroom and nothing else.

I am asked by my curious city friends what a woman on a farm does when she wants to be alone. The answer is simple. She does as the women have done for three-quarters of a century. Goes to an arrangement in the back yard, or in the edge of the orchard, designed for that very purpose. Naturally in winter time there are certain problems to solve. But she solves them and never once thinks of herself as underprivileged.

That Croy bathroom means something to me, for it was the first in all the neighborhood. People came as if to a shrine. I turn to Nellie and say:

"How many bathrooms are there in this neighborhood?"

She and Spide count it up. On the ten farms nearest ours there are two bathrooms. They still go out back. And that's today in the black loam section.

We go upstairs to the northwest bedroom and my heart goes flutter. This is the room where I had my panel of "Six Famous American Authors." There's where the old Barlock used to repose; on the wall was a picture of Victor Hugo and right under it I read "Les Miserables."

"Homer, the roof leaks," says Nellie.

This is the room where I packed my telescope with the mouschole. How long ago that was! Yet how recent. I remember my mother said: "Homer, I wish you didn't have to go off to the city with a hole in your telescope."

My mind races away to St. Joseph where I saw my second street-car and I think of something that happened, later, when I came to have as a friend the man who invented the electric streetcar, Frank J. Sprague, and he told me this streetcar line was the second in the United States.

We go into "'Renzo Davis'" room. Two sacks of shelled corn are on the floor. "We don't dare leave our hybrid at the barn," says Spide. "Mice."

"This room should be papered," says Nellie.

From room to room we go, and from place to place, then outside. The kitchen foundation is getting weak in the knees; we'll have to have the cement man out.

We go into the basement under the parlor, and I think of the time my father got the acetylene gas craze and had a machine installed in this cellar room. The machine was supposed to dump pockets of carbide into the water and make gas for our lights. One night the machine didn't work and Pa told me to take the lantern and go down and see what was the matter. I came into this room, opened the machine and peered into its depth, aided by the lantern. Suddenly there was an explosion and I was knocked as flat as a doily.

In the back yard, behind the "new" house, is the house where I was born. If there are any chickens in it, I'll wring their necks. Thank God! there aren't. In the floor is the augurhole where I used to see the water drain off and wonder where it went; and under the clock shelf is the very nail where our Hostetter's Almanac hung. And a little to the left is the wall where Pa kept the International Harvester calendar, with circles around the dates when the cows would freshen.

Then to the henhouse. The roof leaks. I don't know why it is, but henhouse roofs always leak. Put that down, too.

We have supper and that evening the neighbors come in, the boys and girls I've grown up with; and with them their children. And, here and there, a grandchild. It just doesn't seem possible. But there they are, staring popeyed as if I was Rip Van Winkle. We talk about the weather and crops, just as we used to; and how the schoolteacher is panning out. Then about what the government says we'll have to do next. That's all now. And puzzling. But on the good side. Our farmers like what the government is doing.

They know about the tall buildings, for they've seen them in the movies; but the subway is different. When I tell them that the train I go to Washington Heights on, runs three miles under the ground without stopping, they glance at each other again. Well, let him talk. His father and mother tried hard enough.

After my "lies" are over, the conversation again swings back to neighborhood matters. Mysteriously Nellie and Opal get up and tiptoe out and there is a clinking in the kitchen. Refreshment time; pretty soon we are eating ice cream and homemade cake. Not ice cream made on the back porch, in a salt-water freezer, but fetched out from town. And not as good, either.

The children are getting restless. It's half-past nine. Why, we haven't been up that late since Grandpa died.

After a while they've gone and the house seems lonely and empty—just as it did when I was a boy. A train whistles in the distance and an exquisite agony lays hold of me.

And now, as I lie in my old room, I think: Some day I'll be no more, and when that day comes I'd like to have my ashes sprinkled on the farm.

The next day we go in to trade, but now it takes only a few minutes to clip off the six miles. What wouldn't I have given if old Dave had had six cylinders? It's a farming town, the guidebooks say, then add: "Industry—none." They're a little off, for there's the lightning-rod factory. A dozen people employed there, counting, of course, the office workers. You're nobody if you're not proud of your home town. We have some "names" that we're proud of—men who were born in the county and who have distinguished themselves. There's George Robb Ellison, judge of the Missouri Supreme Court. Remember I mentioned a boy who went to Harvard and came back with a feather-edge haircut? Well, that was George. And there's Merrill E. Otis, Federal Judge, Kansas City. (He's the one who sentenced Pendergast.) Dale Carnegie, the writer and lecturer. Ed H. Moore was born in our county and lived there all his early days; then went to Oklahoma and beat Josh Lee and became United States Senator. (Should never have left Missouri.) Forrest C. Donnell became Governor of Missouri. Yep, one of our boys. Have you heard of Dawson City, British Columbia, near Alaska? Named for one of our boys.

Pastures Require Renewal Regularly

Depletion Is Rapid If Fertilizer Missing

Farmers who used to let their pastures "shift for themselves" while they concentrated their time and attention on increasing the yield and quality of field crops, have learned that pasture improvement is now a "must," according to Paul M. Burson of the University of Minnesota.

"Nature did not provide the soil with an inexhaustible supply of plant foods which could be drawn upon indefinitely by pasture crops," Mr. Burson pointed out. "Year after year, nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and lime have been removed from the soil by the animals grazing the pastures and marketed in the form of livestock and livestock products. As a result, many pastures which were once productive have become so depleted in plant food that they are no longer able to support a vigorous growth of pasture crops.

"An average herd of dairy cows producing around 4,000 pounds of milk annually, will remove the equivalent of 26½ tons of 20 per cent ammonium sulphate, 9½ tons of 20 per cent superphosphate, 4½ tons of 50 per cent muriate of potash and 3 tons of lime from the soil over a period of 30 years.

"This reduction in fertility represents plant foods sold away from the farm in the milk produced by the dairy cows. It does not include the amount used in building up the body of the animal which is also eventually sold, nor that lost from the manure and the soil in leaching and possible soil erosion. This depletion of plant nutrients results in less vigorous growth of forage, lower carrying capacity, lower feeding value and a shortened grazing season.

"Pastures, whether they are permanent or rotation, should receive the same soil fertility practices as land used for regular production of field crops. The success of such a program depends on proper planning for the pasture fertilizing program. This may include the use of barnyard manure or commercial fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash."

Grain Bag Holder

Four pieces 1 by 2 by 36 inches and eight pieces 1 by 2 by 18 inches are required. Nail the short pieces to the long pieces as shown. Use hooks or nails driven into the top short pieces to hold the bag in the holder.

Can't Judge Milk Cow By Size of Its Veins

The old notion that a high-producing cow can be judged by the number and size of veins showing on the surface of her udder, and those running along her belly, has been tossed out the window by dairy specialists. They have checked on that notion and found there is no significant relation between the size and number of veins and the cow's milk-producing ability.

By keeping financial and production records, having a sound breeding program, practicing disease control, feeding high quality roughage and by practicing modern management methods, higher milk production can be secured. Ability to produce milk is inherited and the volume can be raised considerably by proper herd improvement methods.

Damp litter is not dirty litter if it is 6 to 8 inches deep. Worry more about your ventilation than about the litter—but both are important.

Sulphur Fed Chicks

Tests conducted at Texas state experiment station showed that chicks fed sulphur for the control of coccidiosis, away from the sunlight require four times as much vitamin D carrier as chicks fed no sulphur.

On the other hand, chicks fed sulphur did well if allowed two hours of direct noon-day sunlight distributed over a week's time. The feeding of sulphur to chicks running in the sunlight did not make it necessary to add vitamins to feed.

DAVE FERRISS, the Merlin of the mound, the ex-airman with the Boston Red Sox, is now after big game, meaning the star pitching records of the last 40 years. When you are levelling with dead aim on such past stars as Lefty Grove, Christy Mathewson, Carl Hubbell, Grover Alexander, Smoky Joe Wood, Ed Walsh, Spud Chandler and a few others, you have to adjust your sights to an unusual angle. For in these 40 years of big league baseball there have been others who have set up a number of incredible marks that the brilliant Ferriss must look at, face to face, or figure to figure.

Dave Ferriss

Here are just a few among those who have won more than 20 games in any given season:

Robert Moses Grove, Athletics, 1931: Won 31, lost 4, pct. .886.

Smoky Joe Wood, Red Sox, 1912: Won 34, lost 5, pct. .872.

Lefty Gomez, Yankees, 1935: Won 26, lost 5, pct. .839.

Walter Johnson, Senators, 1913: Won 36, lost 7, pct. .837.

Spud Chandler, Yankees, 1943: Won 20, lost 4, pct. .833.

Carl Hubbell, Giants, 1936: Won 26, lost 6, pct. .813.

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals, 1935: Won 30, lost 7, pct. .811.

Eddie Cicotte, White Sox, 1919: Won 29, lost 7, pct. 806.

Christy Mathewson, Giants, 1909: Won 25, lost 6, pct. .806.

The above are the high-ranking percentage records since 1904. Ed Walsh won 40 and lost 15 in 1908 for .727. Alexander won 31 and lost 10 in 1915 for .756. Bob Feller's best year was 1939 when he won 24 and lose 9 for .727.

Quite a Target

It is Lefty Grove's record mark, set in 1931, that now becomes the main Ferriss target. Here's quite a target, no matter how keen a sharpshooter you may happen to be—WON 31, LOST 4 — PCT. .886. Only Smoky Joe Wood of the Red Sox in 1912 has even approached these miracle figures and Joe was 14 points away at .872, which is no part of a bust or a flop.

To beat Lefty Grove's 1931 mark, Ferriss will have to win 31 games and drop only 3. This means that Miracle Dave will have to win 14 out of his next 15 starts. You will have to admit this is quite an order.

This reminds us that Lefty Grove, the silent mountaineer, had the 6 greatest consecutive years any pitcher has ever known: .750 in 1928—.769 in 1929—.848 in 1930—.886 in 1931—.714 in 1932 and .750 in 1933. In 1930 and 1931, Lefty won 59 games and lost only 9. Try and match that combination for something over .870 for two straight seasons.

There are those perennial pessimists, who live in ancient history as they stroke their mossy beards, who have this to say:

"This is a soft year for pitchers. They are only facing a bunch of minor leaguers, most of them class B and class C. This is an off year. It shouldn't count."

But wait just a few seconds. Why aren't the rest of the pitchers mopping up as Ferriss is? Newhouser of the Tigers is one of the best from many seasons, but though working for a much better ball club he hasn't been able to follow the Ferriss pace.

No Real Support

And looking back to Grove's big year, has Ferriss another Jimmy Foxx or another Al Simmons batting in runs for his side? Simmons hit .330 that season and Jimmy Foxx hammered 30 home runs over the wall. And there were others. Connie Mack had a world series team that year, back in 1931. Don't forget that Grove drew far better defensive and offensive support than the 1945 Red Sox can offer.

Without Ferriss, the Red Sox would be in seventh place, badly outclassed by every team in the American League except the Athletics. Leave out the Ferriss record and the Red Sox would have only 25 victories against the 42 they held after Sunday's list.

Don't forget again that Lefty Grove and Joe Wood were working with two pennant winning, two world series teams, while Ferriss has been pitching for a team that without him would be next to last among a lot of bad ball clubs. His infield and outfield support has been nothing to compare with the support Grove and Woods knew in other and better years.

Football's Coming Boom

"This will be the greatest war season football has known," remarked Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants. "I am not referring alone to the pro game. I am also speaking for the colleges. We have been getting in a number of reports lately from our scouts. I've heard from a number of college coaches and they tell me their material will be much better than it was a year ago. They won't be beating Army or Navy but they will still be good."

Salt Box and a Pan Holder Rack to Make

HERE is a pair of gifts that will bring joy to any homemaker. The salt box has the graceful proportions of those used in Colonial kitchens, and the rack with cup hooks screwed in place for hot pan holders is designed to harmonize with the box.

Both box and rack are easy to cut out of plywood or thin lumber scraps—either by hand with a coping saw or with a jig saw. The quaint stencil design may be applied right on the wood with wax crayon and then shellacked to fix the color. This washable finish brings out the brilliance of the crayon colors and at the same time gives a soft antique finish. The stencil also may be used with oil paint if preferred.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern for all the pieces of this salt box and the kitchen rack with step-by-step directions for making. A pattern and color guide with complete directions for the stencil design is also included. The pattern may be used over and over for decorating canisters, place mats and other attractive gifts. SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Tire conservation is important on the fighting fronts, too. Winning slogan in a contest conducted by Stars and Stripes, Army newspaper, was "Bring victory, and the fight, conserve tires day and night."

A new highly maneuverable combat vehicle called the "Staghound" uses tires four foot high. Rubber required for one such tire is equivalent to five passenger tires.

MARINES AT GUADAL CANAL

Three years ago, August 7th at 9:05 A. M. American Marines rushed ashore at Guadal in America's first D-Day of this war.

At approximately 6:00 A M a U. S. warship had fired the first shot of the battle and the first shot of America's counter-offensive against the Japanese. The ensuing bombardment lasted three hours. Enemy installations now are softened up for weeks in advance.

When the Higgins boats, bearing young and untried Marines, hit Lunga beach, the members of the First Marine Division raced inland to take positions directly opposite the Japanese airport. This airfield was later to become known to every American as Henderson Field, named in honor of Major Lofton R. Henderson, the Midway Battle air hero.

At Guadalcanal, Marines were with the heaviest responsibility ever entrusted to a fighting force in America's history. Its job was to stop the Japs' sure and relentless advance toward New Zealand and Australia. Enemy seizure of these countries would have paved a broad highway for an eventual assault on the United States.

The Marines' job was to take Guadalcanal and hold it. To do this they saw longer front line fighting than any other combat force in American history. Often they went without proper food and medical facilities. Sometimes they fought without proper equipment. Mail from home was only a thing to dream about.

They fought against well-equipped troops, who were almost always superior in number.

Malaria was as deadly as the Japs.

Complete exhaustion dogged their days and nights. The heat of the tropics, the strangeness of the jungle, the mud, and the incessant rain were all handicaps to be endured.

The enemy was a foreign unknown fighter, with a savage cunning and a thorough training in jungle warfare.

But the Marines fought with such bitter ferocity that the Japs considered them killers who refused to take prisoners. Later, after the Army arrived, the Japanese would surrender to soldiers, but not to Marines.

The struggle lasted six months. Its battles gave fame, and immortality to Marine Corps history, to strange names like Tenaru, Lunga, Matanikau, Illo and Bloody Ridge.

The courage of the Marine Corps fighter pilots against unthought-of odds in the skies became the talk of the nation. One of these airmen, Major Joe Foss, became the first 26-place ace of World War II. He holds the Congressional Medal of Honor for his heroism.

August 7, 1942 will always be a significant date in American history. It brought to an end the Nipponese southward expansion, and began an American offensive which is now rocking the very foundations of the Japanese empire.

August 7, 1942, also marked the begining of the end of a Japanese dream.

Military observers have called the struggle for Guadalcanal one of the most important battles in world history, and the men who fought there the champions of our civilization.

Notice

The Rev. O. L. Oldham announces that it was voted unanimously at his church that a few minutes of silent prayer will be held every moreing at 11 o'clock. The church bell will ring each morning at that hour as a reminder. Let us pray for our war leaders, our public officials, and all those in authority that Divine guidance and Wisdom may aid in all decisions in these momentous days. Especially let us give thanks to the God of all nations for His mercy in sparing us from the misery that has come to our allies.

The Carrizozo Public schools will open on August 27th. The first day will be taken up in classifying and issuing books. Book cards and report cards should be in the hands of each pupil so as not to cause any delay in classification,or issuing text books. High school students that have attended high school elsewhere should have a complete transcript of all their credits sent to the school here before opening date.

Primary pupils that enter school for their first time this year should present a birth certificate.

A short opening program will be held on Monday, August 27th at 9:15 and a special invitation is extended to the public to be present for this opening.
