MEMORIAL SERVICE SUNDAY

The Rev. L. S. Markham of Claunch and the Rev. O. L. Oldham of Carrizozo held a memorial service last Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bivens at Oscuro, in memory of their youngest son, Hoyt Leon Bivens, who lost his life on the Island of Okinawa, June 17, 1945, when he was shot by a Jap sniper.

Hoyt was born July 1st, 1926, and had he lived twenty-three more days he would have been nineteen years old.

His classmates and friends cherish his memory, as do his teachers, his Sunday School teachers and a host of other friends.

4 Ways to Build Bank Credit

1. Confide in your bank. The more we know about your finances, the more we can help you.
2. Keep your checkbook records carefully so that you won't write checks for a greater amount than you have on deposit. Overdrafts damage your credit.
3. Meet obligations as agreed. Pay debs at the bank or elsewhere promptly as agreed.
4. Pay bills on time. This is quite important to good credit standing.

American Legion Auxiliary of Capitan Met Sept. 8th

The Legion Auxiliary of Capitan, unit 57, held their regular night meeting at the city hall Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1945.

The meeting was called to order by unit president, Grace Murphy, all reciting the Preamble in unison.

Grace Burleson being absent at previous meeting of the installation of officers, was duly installed by one of our post presidents, Edna Laramie for the ensuing year.

A vote of thanks from one of our members, Velma Burleson Olson, who was in an Albuquerque hospital with a new son, John Leonard Olson, was read by secretary Ann Earling.

Also a "thank you" from Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Williams now of Ft. Sumner was read.

All old business of the evening being disposed of, we then laid plans for a Bridge party to be held in Capitan the evening of October 17th, 1945.

Edna Laramie was asked to serve as chairman and she appointed Grace Burleson, Grace Murphy and Margaret Bigger to serve on committee with her to make and carry out plans for the Bridge party.

The purpose of our parties, dances and entertainments of all kinds is to raise funds to build an "American Legion Home" in Capitan, that our girls and boys may have a gathering place when they return home to us from the war.

The Auxiliary and Legion of Capitan are very sincere in this undertaking and in planning our entertainments will strive to plan them so as not to conflict with other organizations dates of entertainments and we trust they will give us due consideration also.

Our unit president Grace Murphy has been enjoying a visit from her daughter Mrs. Margaret Ann Anderson, who has been an army nurse thru the war and who now has her honorable discharge. We had with us also one of our new members, Marrietta Bigger, who just received her R. N. Degree Sept. 2nd from Hotel Dieu school of nursing, El Paso, Texas.

Business all finished meeting adjourned.

Refreshments of cake and coffee were served by the Hostesses Grace Burleson and Margaret Bigger to members present of both Legion and Auxilliary. xxx

New Dignity Added To Old Wash Stand

IF YOU have a wash stand of the bowl and pitcher era, here is a way to give it new dignity. Add open shelves at the ends with a new base and top for the whole piece, and you have smart, long lines for a chest to fill an important wall space. The shelves are added to the ends of the stand first with small angle irons. The end boards come next, then the top of plywood with a plain finishing piece around it. The new baseboard is then added and the piece is finished to match the woodwork of the room.

The sketch also shows a framed panel which helps to give the ensemble quite an air. It is an old picture frame without a glass with a handsome remnant of flowered chintz stretched over cardboard and then varnished to look like an old oil painting.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

B. F. Goodrich has produced an airplane tire that figuratively sprouts wings. When wheels are lowered for landing, special vanes or flaps on tire cause it to rotate, which overcomes severe scuffing and drag when wheels hit runway.

American scientists and engineers have achieved in five years with synthetic rubber what it took nearly 70 years to accomplish with natural rubber.

Bees upset many plans for cross pollination of fruit trees until B. F. Goodrich developed a "spider web" rubber spray as a blossom protector.

In this group are Senators Wagner, Kilgore, Pepper, Hill, Guffey and Murray, and they are working on Magnuson, Thomas and Mead, who haven't yet decided to go all out.

Congress will get a battle from the Army. . . . The legislators, fresh from their home constituencies, will whoop it up for more and quicker discharges. . . . The Army will resist. . . . The lawmakers will claim that on the present 85-point system, only about 1,000,000 are eligible for release, and they will propose militantly that the basic minimum be reduced at once to 60 points or less. . . . The army will argue that keeping men in uniform is the perfect answer to unemployment during the reconversion interim. . . . But, in its secret councils, the Army doesn't monkey much with economic strategy — just wants to keep a big Army.

Many who saw the sharp and striking MGM newsreel reporting of the plane crash against the upper stories of the Empire State Building may have admired the enterprise which made these releases by far the best. Therefore, they may be interested in the story behind the story. . . . "Newsreel" Wong, the famous Chinese photographer who has been with Metro 21 years and has covered every battlefront and the far reaches of the globe for news subjects, was given a furlough while attached to Gen. He arrived on a Saturday morning, in uniform and with his cameras, looked up the Metro Manhattan office in the phone book, and went there. The place was closed for the day, but some scrubwomen were at work and so the door was open. . . . Wong was about to leave, when a telephone, hooked on through the switchboard, rang. He picked it up. An excited voice reported the crash. . . . Wong grabbed a cab. Police lines were closed, but because of his uniform and a breastful of service ribbons he was allowed through. . . . He did his stuff with his usual vigor and sped back to the office. . . . By that time, the executives had heard of the hot story and were in and 'phoning for photographers frantically, when Wong, whom they had never seen, whose presence on this continent was news to them, entered with the whole thing in his bag. . . . They slapped him on the back, hugged him, etc. . . . "That's quite all right," said Wong. "I always did want to see the Empire State Building!"

Cottons, in Velveteen and Plush To Rule Campus Fashion Picture

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS year's college girl is doing a lot of "clothes thinking" just about now. This fall the fancy of a school-faring maiden turns to clothes that are neat and flattering with the look of a thoroughbred about them. No freakish fads for the autumn 1945 campus crowd!

The college girl, the school girl, the career girl and the teen-age group who know their fashions have become definitely cotton-conscious these days. The new "rave" is the elegant looking velveteens in black and adorable colors, also the very handsome corduroys that are being made up into coats and suits. There's a new wide-wale cotton plush, too, that is setting a new high in sophisticated cottons.

No doubt the girl going away to school will start her first semester with a few cotton casuals, for it's smart to wear cotton washables. She will be glad she took a chic gingham frock and perhaps a flattering fresh chambray, the sort that looks just right during early warm autumn days under a color-lovely cardigan. There will be dark cotton dirndls in her trunk too, some banded in gay Latin colors; also a very special one with inset border of white eyelet to be worn with her dainty batiste drop-shoulder blouse.

A raft of sturdy campus cottons should be taken along. In the news were pedal-pushers of pin-wale corduroy that's tough and washable. The girls say they are less cumbersome than slacks because of their mid-calf length. Choosing mix-and-match jackets, skirts, pajamas and pedal pushers is great fun. The short boxy flare-back jacket with Chinese collar is a winner, so is also the new lumberjacket that ties with drawstring waist.

When it comes to "date" duds here's where luxury cottons are making a great splurge. A brilliant future is predicted for suits and coats made of rich-looking wide-wale cotton plush. An intriguing style story is told for the 1945 college girl or the younger seminary daughter by Emily Wilkens in the brown wide-wale cotton plush suit as shown centered in the illustration. High neck, broad shoulders, and the tiny waist give a high-style slant on present-day trends. The shoulderline, extending in a wing-like effect, adds width and accents the small waistline by way of contrast. The tiny visor cap matches. This suit will certainly "go places" this fall.

Because the much-beloved velveteen can be had only in dibs and dabs this year (which is why one should buy early) designers are ingeniously working it into dresses using bright wools for contrast. In the junior "date" dress, shown to the left, cotton plays duet with wool in most charming fashion. The shoulder yoke and wide hem are of black velveteen. The rest of the bodice and skirt are violet wool. Red wool binds sleeves and waistline, also outlines the velveteen all around. Here's a type dress that will make "a picture" at college teas and informal dances.

Pale gold and bottle green prove a flattering color combination in wool and cotton for the dress shown to the right below. Green corduroy forms a corselet waist front and full skirt, while gold wool is used for sleeves and bodice top. Rectangular shaped silver nailheads trim the shoulder yoke and sleeve cuffs. Note the clever touch of wool ties.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Slim Silhouette

It's dresses of the lovely lady type that bespeak patrician style in every detail that best-dressed women want. To achieve a slim and svelte silhouette for this good-looking purple wool fall costume, the designer, Joe Copeland, extends the high-necked bodice for the dress into a deep point into the skirt and puckers the skirt on each side in a subtle form-fitting way. Here you see also a charming interpretation of a very new and very important trimming trend, which has to do with necklace and bracelet embroidered right on the material itself in a realistic jewelry effect. East Indian embroidery in pearls and gold makes the "necklace" on the cap-sleeved dress and the single "bracelet" for the bolero.

'Curved Contours' New Fashion Dictate

A new element has entered into the field of costume design. It's "curves." This styling technique is seen in the soft rounded shoulders that give a very different silhouette from last year. The command of fashion to "curve your contours" is also reflected in the way side fastenings and drapes take on a curved sweep rather than a straight or angular movement. Yokes are rounded too, instead of being square-cornered. Hips have an out-curve, while waists have an in-curve. Compare your last year's suit with your this year's suit, or place your last season's felt hat alongside the fall hat you've just bought, with its rounded, bulky, yet flattering new brim, and you will see how designers are obeying fashion's edict to "curve your contours."

Jewelled Belts Set Off Sophisticated Gowns

Much ado is being made about belts and corselet effects this season. This season belts have been glamorized into real show pieces. In some instances the jewel work and metal embroidery arrives at almost barbaric splendor. The new fad is to wear an eye-thrilling belt with a black gown of sophisticated simplicity and not another ornament except, perhaps, a bracelet. The new corselet midriff treatments on dressy gowns are also beautifully worked out in rich jewelry embroidery.

Striped Jersey Suit

Jersey is becoming increasingly important either in wool or rayon weave. Gaily colorful striped jersey delights the teen-ager and it is also smart for career-girl cardigan blouses. Just the thing for the school girl is a jacket and skirt dress of striped jersey in red and white or multi-color stripe.

Oversized Drydock Goes Through Canal Sideways

Although the larger floating drydocks of the U. S. navy are too wide to enter the locks of the Panama canal, the job of towing one through this waterway was accomplished recently by filling one of its hollow side walls with water and tilting the huge craft on its side.

Household Hints

Stitch a crocheted motif of fine thread over holes in tablecloths and dresser scarves. Cut away worn or damaged fabric underneath. Additional motifs make the crocheted work look intentional.

WHEN Grandma was a farm girl, she tended the chickens, milked the cows, churned the butter (72 percent of the nation's butter was home-churned then; less than 20 percent today). When she produced more eggs and butter than the family could eat, she would trade the rest for "pin-money" or frills.

Today, Grandma's "pin-money" has become BIG money. Last year it added more than five billion dollars to the income of U. S. farmers. That's more than hogs brought in—or cattle—or sheep. Just look:

	1944 Gross Farm Income
Dairy Products	$2,969,000,000	$5,264,000,000
Poultry Products	2,295,000,000
Hogs		2,796,000,000
Cattle and Calves		2,607,000,000
Sheep, Lambs and Wool		450,000,000

And believe it or not, dairy products alone returned more money to farm families than the entire corn and wheat crops combined!

Any way you look at it, cows and chickens is a great industry. It is nation-wide, too. California and Texas are crowding close on the leaders—Wisconsin, New York, Minnesota, Iowa, and Pennsylvania. From millions of small dairy herds and chicken flocks in every state, as well as from large-scale operations, comes the enormous volume of dairy and poultry products that are such a vital source of our nation's food.

LET'S KEEP THE MACHINE IN GEAR

In these days of mechanized farming practically everyone is familiar with the gears that make the wheels of tractors, combines, and other equipment go 'round. We know that should one gear be removed or get out of line—or even if a single gear-tooth is broken—the machine won't run smoothly, if at all.

It is much the same with the livestock and meat industry. The three main gears are the producer, the processor and the retailer. When any one of these "driving gears" gets out of order, then the entire industry suffers. Coordination of their interests can contribute greatly to the smooth functioning of the industry as a whole. None of us gains by insisting too vigorously that our part of the industry is the only one which has problems that matter. We gain more by trying to look at our particular problems as they affect all of us. In other words, whatever hurts or helps the producer hurts or helps the processor and the retailer also.

The livestock and meat industry is an important part of the national economic structure. We at Swift & Company believe that we can contribute most to the welfare of America—and ourselves—by promoting harmonious practical working relations between producers, processors and retailers.

Here We Are Again!

This series of advertisements is renewed in this issue and will appear monthly. We again invite you to send in good ideas which will help others in the business of farming and ranching. We will pay you $5 for each good idea accepted by the judges, whose decisions are final. And don't forget to come in and see us whenever you are in Chicago—or if you haven't time to visit, phone us at Yards 4200, Extension 710; or write us at any time about any matter which pertains to agriculture. Remember our address: F. M. Simpson, Agricultural Research Department 128, Swift & Company, Chicago 9, Illinois.

Reclaim Croplands with Wheatgrass

Ranchers who have need of extra grass can often bring abandoned croplands back into production with crested wheatgrass. In tests conducted by the Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, in cooperation with ranchers, and reported by Clinton H. Wasser, good stands of crested wheatgrass established on abandoned croplands in northeastern Colorado have supported as much stock per acre as two to four acres of good native sod will in the spring and early summer. And it makes pasture two or three weeks earlier in the spring, and later in the fall when the moisture is good.

Time to Reseed: September is a good time to reseed lands to either crested or western wheatgrass. The job may also be done in the late fall or early spring. For best results, try six to eight pounds of seed per acre drilled into grain, sudan, sorghum, millet or weed stubble. Land badly grown up to perennial weeds may first require heavy discing or even plowing before seeding.

LIVESTOCK MOVIES FOR YOU

We will lend you films for school, church, or other farm meetings: "Livestock and Meat," "A Nation's Meat," "Cows and Chickens... U.S.A.," and two brand new animated movies—"By-Products" and "Meat Buying Habits." All for 16-mm. sound projectors. You pay transportation one way only. Write Swift & Company, Department 128, Chicago, Illinois.

Martha Logan's Recipe for SKILLET DINNER

Pan fry 1 lb. bulk sausage meat with 2 tablespoons onions until brown. Pour off the drippings. Add 2 cups cooked rice, 1½ cups canned tomatoes and ½ cup chili sauce. Blend well. Cover and cook over very low heat for 30 minutes. Do not raise the cover. Serve with lettuce salad and crusty bread. Serves 6 to 8.

CULL THE NON-LAYERS Now!

Hens in your flocks that are still producing eggs regularly in the early fall months are superior layers. They are the ones to save for breeding stock, writes H. L. Kempster, chairman of the department of poultry husbandry at the University of Missouri.

Mr. Kempster says it's easy to select the good layers. They are the hens with white bleached shanks and with old, frayed and brittle plumage. The slick hens with yellow legs and smooth feathers are the ones that should be used for poultry meat. They should be culled out of your flock to make room for mature, ready-to-lay pullets now on the range. As it doesn't pay to sell laying hens, try to examine all individuals in your flock carefully. A red comb and moist, expanded vent are sure signs of a layer. If the vent is dry, puckered and yellow, you may be certain that hen has stopped laying for some time.

ROY GUY REALLY KNOWS SHEEP

Roy F. Guy in show ring

When Roy F. Guy, head lamb buyer for Swift & Company at Chicago since 1931, was a lad of 17, he answered an ad in a Kansas City newspaper. That led to his first job with Swift as a $4-a-week messenger boy. Before his first year ended, he had doubled his salary and was getting a start in calf buying. At the ripe age of 22, Roy Guy was head calf buyer at Chicago. He held this post for 10 years and then went back to the starting line to learn lamb buying. In his 46 years with Swift, Roy Guy has bought many million lambs and judged in many a show ring. But his greatest pride is in the boys he hired and trained who have made good with the Company. "I always told a new boy to be careful in choosing his Company . . . and to stay with it," he says.

DRILLING OF TEST WELL AND DRILLING, CONSTRUCTING, AND EQUIPPING OF FINISHED WATER WELL

NOTICE TO BIDDERS:

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Board of Trustees of the Village of Capitan, New Mexico at the office of the Village Clerk in the Village office until three o'clock P. M. Mountain Standard War Time, September 26, 1945 for the drilling of a test well approximately eleven hundred (1100) feet deep, the taking of two (2) true water samples therefrom and logging the formations penetrated, the drilling and construction of a finished water well of one hundred (100) gallons per minute guaranteed minimum capacity and the furnishing and installing therein of an electrically-operated deep well turbine pump of one hundred (100) gallons per minute capacity complete with starting equipment and gauge, for the Village of Capitan, New Mexico; at which time and place the proposals will be opened and publicly read aloud. Any bid received after the above stipulated time will be returned to the bidder unopened.

A Certified or Cashier's Check, or a Bidder's Bond executed by some corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of New Mexico in the amount of ten percent (10 percent) of the total bid, payable without recourse to the Village of Capitan, New Mexico must accompany proposals.

Complete copies of the specifications and Contract Documents may be examined or obtained at the office of the Village Clerk in the Village office at Capitan, New Mexico.

The Village of Capitan reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, to make any investigation deemed necessary of a bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the Specifications, and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the best bid.

The bidder's attention is directed to the fact that bids or proposals shall be submitted only on the forms provided therefor in the Contract Documents and must not be submitted in letter form or in any other form except by filling out in ink in the spaces provided on pages 9 and 10 of the Contract to be bid upon. Bids submitted in any other form will be considered irregular and may be returned to the bidder unopened without receiving consideration by the Mayor and Board of Trustees.

FEDERAL PAYROLLS CONTINUE TO INCREASE

THE POPULATION of the United States consists of just about 135,000,000 men, women and children, representing approximately 27,000,000 families. The government — local, state and federal — civilian employees in April, of 1945, totalled 6,703,000. Deducting those, and the families they represent, and the total is about 110,000,000 people, 22,000,000 families, who are supporting not only themselves, but also those government employees and their families.

It all means that the head of each average sized family — less than five people — is providing food, shelter, heat, clothing and other needs for more than one outsider. Providing for that outsider represents the most expensive and most extravagant item in each family's ever increasing cost of living.

Of the 6,703,000 government civilian employees, 3,539,000 are on federal government payrolls, and 3,183,000 are on municipal, county and state payrolls. These include all police officers and school teachers.

Washington bureaus have found ways to circumvent every effort of Senator Byrd, and his committee, to reduce the federal civilian payrolls. Instead the number of federal employees shows a steady increase, an increase amounting to 270,000 between April of 1944 and April of 1945. The number continues to increase despite the year-by-year increases in taxes; despite the mounting government indebtedness, and the need for economy.

What is to be the end? How many extra mouths must that heavily burdened head of a family feed? The cost of bureaucratic government has run far beyond any semblance of reason. The American people are long suffering and patient, but there is a breaking limit. That applies to both federal, local and state employment. It is time to reduce, rather than increase, all government payrolls. Those who do the providing do not appreciate that uninvited guest at the family dinner table.

JAPS WILL HAVE HARD TIME TO SHOW REFORM

THE JAP SURRENDER is unprecedented in all history. The pill the Shinto deity emperor had to swallow was exceedingly bitter, and it took some hours to get it down. Now that it is over, now that the Son of Heaven is merely the mouthpiece of General MacArthur as American commander, what the future result will be is anybody's guess. Before the Jap can become an acceptable world citizen he must change the ways that have been bred into him through many centuries. That will take years, years that will be hard for the Japs, to effect such a change. The people of the Allied nations are not concerned with the religion of any people, but in the case of the Japs, Shintoism must go before the Jap can become an acceptable world citizen. With the passing of Shintoism will pass the emperor, should he surmount other difficulties.

The Greeks, Romans, Tartars, Goths, Turks, and, at a more recent period, Napoleon and his French legions, attempted what the Germans, Italians and Japs attempted, resulting in the conflict just ended. Each such try has led in time, to another. Let us hope the world, for the future, has learned to curb such malfactors before they become dangerous and set the entire world aflame.

POOR JOHNNY! He is a victim of the death of the old jalopy. Dad has commandeered Johnny's bike as a means of transportation until a new car can be obtained. It recalls the days of the 90s when bikes for the poor and carriages for the rich represented transportation. The price of a bike ran anywhere from $125 to $175. You had a choice between high wheels or "safeties." To get on a high wheel took some practice and many a tumble. The "safety" was considered a "sissy." Both had solid tires, no air to soften the jar, and you loosened your back teeth when riding over the cobble stone pavements of city streets. A part of each daily stunt was peddling a bike from home to the office and back again, in my case a distance of six miles each way. That was considered the pleasurable part of working.

MacArthur Forces Landing on Japan Homeland

Photograph shows part of the landing party which accompanied General MacArthur when he arrived in Japan to set up headquarters in Yokohama as Nippon's military ruler and to receive the official surrender of that country. General MacArthur landed by air accompanied by a large force of paratroopers. Their first duty was evacuating American prisoners of war from a "black hell hole."

Nothing Left on Corregidor When U. S. Heroes Fell

WACs and U. S. engineers examine a portion of the ruins of "topside" barracks, Corregidor, Philippine Islands, showing the complete destruction that resulted before the gallant American forces were defeated by the superior Japanese arms. There was nothing but ruin for the Japs to take over and there is nothing left of the strong prewar fortification now that the island is back in the hands of America.

Youth to Spur Drive on Crime

Fearful of a possible increase in juvenile delinquency, civil, religious and business leaders asked the youth of Chicago to redouble efforts for the welfare of youngsters. The Chicago Youth conference is given credit for a 25 per cent reduction in juvenile crime for 1944. It has a membership of 176,000 parochial and public school students.

Under Sec. of State

Being sworn in as under secretary of state to replace Joseph C. Grew, Dean Acheson takes the oath of office. Acheson served as special representative between the White House and congress.

First Yank to Bring Japs to Heel

When General MacArthur landed in Japan to map the future course of conduct for that country towards the rest of the world, he was not the first American to do just that. In 1854 Com. Matthew Perry of the U. S. navy made the Japs cry "Uncle" when he forced the Mikado to open Japanese ports to American shipping and establish commercial relations.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

By CLINTON P. ANDERSON
Secretary of Agriculture

WASHINGTON. — The first Sunday after V-J Day, a friend came by with an automobile to take my family and his for a drive into the country to have dinner with another friend. Nothing like that had happened in years. We were all delighted at the chance to ride through country lanes, to talk about the height of the corn, the possibilities of crops, and the probability that we would enjoy meat for dinner.

But as we started back into Washington, we could not help but notice that the roads were filling up. There was a long line of traffic and many folks drove by at speeds which seemed reckless to us. They were perhaps driving 40 or 45 miles an hour and we had become accustomed to the 35-mile an hour leisurely gait.

When one speeding car swirled past us, I heard my wife murmur, "My, what I wouldn't give to have gasoline rationing back."

I began to wonder how many of the things that war had brought to us as sacrifices or privations we would soon come to appreciate as blessings in disguise. I began to wonder how long it would be before people would sometimes sigh for some of the real advantages of the days during the war when we all lived a little closer together, a little more simply, and perhaps a little more in the traditional American pattern that had started this country on its way to becoming a great nation.

Real Values of Life.

Do you remember back in the years of the depression that Henry Ansley out in Amarillo, Texas, wrote a book entitled, "I Like the Depression?" Frankly, I liked his little book, because he told of the blessings that had come to him with a reversal in his financial situation. He told of the discoveries that he had made as the period of wild prosperity passed and the long months of depression set in. He told of the farmers who had gone back to living on their farms instead of living off their farms.

The war has done something to all of us. It made us appreciate some of the real values of life that many of us had lost sight of. We all complained a little about the war, didn't we? We were a little disappointed when we found that the stocks of new cars were frozen, but we discovered that the old car was a lot better and would run a lot longer than we had thought.

Car-Pool Neighbors.

I remember my first experience with a car pool. We had two automobiles at our house; our next door neighbor had two automobiles at his place. We were not well acquainted, mostly because it wasn't necessary, until the war came along. Then my next door neighbor and I and two others, who heretofore had gone to our offices by separate means, found ourselves fused together into a car pool. We were irrevocably tied to each other. We had to rise at the same time in the morning, leave at the same hour for work, and return home together in the evening.

I am sure that at first we all resented a little the fact that we lost our freedom of action, but we gained a great lesson in neighborliness. We found out that the people who lived next to us might be just as interesting and attractive, just as pleasant and just as companionable as the people whom we had always known who lived down the street or across the city.

Victory Garden Blessing.

How many women improved their figures as they walked to market! And think what Victory gardens did for the men!

Like Drew Pearson, I will perhaps be away from Washington when this column is printed, away on a short vacation. While I am gone, someone will be mowing my lawn. During the war I had to mow my own lawn. I couldn't find anyone interested in taking care of my particular little piece of property. And a strange thing happened: I found that I could mow it as well as anyone else, that I could mow it quickly, and that I could learn within a short time exactly how each particular section could be best mowed to develop the best cut of grass. And I found out also that when I mowed it myself, I not only improved the lawn, I improved my own digestion.

I'll miss that now that the war is over, because I'll tell myself that I'm too busy to do it when I can hire someone else for the job. I suppose that my wife will miss something, too, because she used to walk to market and carry her groceries back home in a basket.

As for myself, I reflect upon the fact that an automobile salesman used to be able to sell me a new car each year. But when the war came I learned that automobiles will go 50,000 or 100,000 miles and still be pretty dependable as a means of transportation.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Leonard Borth, an M.P., was to be in charge of security. The Major set out immediately to win the friendship of the citizens, and to improve their living conditions. The first duties of the Major, after posting the civil instructions, was to find out what the citizens needed the most. He seem determined to replace their bell, which the Germans had taken. Major Joppolo found that the bell was the very symbol of their private and civic life in Adano. He determined to secure a bell satisfactory to the people.

CHAPTER III

Craxi said: "I needed no bell. I was on the beach to welcome the Americans. My woman was with me, the formidable Margherita, and my seven children. We were on the beach in spite of the shooting, to greet the Americans. But what did my children shout? They did not shout: 'We miss the tinkling of the bell.' They shouted: 'Caramelle! Caramelle!' They were hungry. They wanted candy. I myself, who had had enough to eat as it happens, shouted for cigarettes, not for the pealing of a bell."

Borth and the usher Zito came back. Borth said: "It's nifty, Major. All the records are intact. They tell everything. There are lists of anti-Fascists and lists of those who were enthusiastic and the others who were lukewarm. There's a dossier on each important person. It's perfect. Who are these guys?"

Cacopardo said: "Cacopardo is my name, at your service, sir. Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo."

Borth said: "I remember that name. In the records it says Cacopardo's crazy."

Craxi said: "That is true. He thinks that bells are more important than food."

Borth turned on Craxi in mock anger. "And who is this?"

Craxi was apologetic again: "I am anti-Fascist. Craxi. I believe in food for the moment."

Major Joppolo said: "They are arguing which is more important, food or restoring the bell. Since we obviously can't do anything about the bell just now, food is our concern."

Craxi looked very proud of himself, but Cacopardo turned to Zito and said: "We will leave this matter to the cop of Rosa who was the wife of Zito. What do you say, small Zito, do you consider the food or the bell more important?"

Surprisingly Zito said: "I think the bell."

Major Joppolo was interested by this. He leaned forward and said: "Why, Zito?"

Zito said: "Because the tone of the bell was so satisfactory."

"No," said Cacopardo, "it is because of the history of the bell. When the bell spoke, our fathers and their fathers far back spoke to us."

Even Craxi was swept into this argument. "No," he said, "it was because the bell rang the times of day. It told us when to do things, such as eating. It told us when to have the morning egg and when to have pasta and rabbit and when to drink wine in the evening."

Zito said: "I think it was the tone which mattered. It soothed all the people of this town. It chided those who were angry, it cheered the unhappy ones, it even laughed with those who were drunk. It was a tone for everybody."

Giuseppe came in bringing the priest. Father Pensovecchio was gray-haired and cheerful, and as he approached the group around the Major's desk he made a motion with his right hand which might have been interpreted either as a blessing or as a Fascist salute.

After the introductions, Major Joppolo said to the priest: "Father, we are speaking of the old bell which was taken away."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That is the disgrace of this town. I have in my church a bell which is just as loud as the one which was taken away, though not so sweet and much younger and altogether meaningless as a bell. Any other bell would have done as well in my belfry. I wanted to send my bell. But the Monsignor would not permit it. The Monsignor is the uncle of the Mayor. He has reasons for doing the things he does—" Father Pensovecchio crossed himself, indicating that the things which the Monsignor did were somewhat ugly; "—but in this case I believe he was wrong."

Borth said: "It's ridiculous. There are lots of things more important than this bell. Get them some food and don't forget that alleyway."

Major Joppolo said: "All the same, the bell is important to them." And he said then in Italian: "Thank you for telling me about the bell. I promise you that I will do all I can to get another bell which will have some meaning as a bell and will have a good tone and its history will be that it was given to you by the Americans to take the place of the one which was taken away by the Fascists to make gun barrels."

Cacopardo said: "You are kind."

Craxi said: "I thank you, Mister Major, and I kiss your hand."

Major Joppolo said: "You what?"

Cacopardo the historian said: "He meant no offense. It is an old custom here. Once the important people make us kiss their hands, and later when the actual kissing became too much of a bother, it became the habit merely to mention the kissing, as if it had been done."

Craxi said: "I meant no offense, Mister Major. I am anti-Fascist."

Major Joppolo said: "It appears that everyone in this town is anti-Fascist. Well, we will see about the bell. Now I wish to speak alone with the priest. Zito, you may stay. You are my usher. Giuseppe, you may stay. You are my interpreter."

Craxi said: "Mister Major, the telegram."

Major Joppolo said: "I will try to send it."

Craxi mentioned the kissing again, and turned to go.

When the others had gone, Major Joppolo said to Father Pensovecchio: "Father, I wish to tell you that the Americans want to bring only good to this town. As in every nation, there are some bad men in America. It is possible that some Americans who come here will do bad things. If they do, I can assure you that most of the Americans will be just as ashamed of those things as you are annoyed by them."

Father Pensovecchio said: "I think we will understand weakness in your men just as we try to understand it in our own."

Major Joppolo said: "Thank you. Father, I have been told that you are the best priest in Adano."

The priest said with quite honest modesty: "I am here to do my duty."

Major Joppolo said: "Therefore I should like to ask a favor of you.

You must feel perfectly free to refuse me if you wish. I should like to ask you to say a few words before your mass tomorrow morning about the Americans. I shall leave it to you to say what you wish, if you will merely add that there are certain proclamations which the Americans have posted which ought to be read."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That I can easily do."

Major Joppolo said: "I myself am a Catholic. If you will have me, I should like to attend your mass."

The priest said: "It will be a pleasure to have you." Major Joppolo was glad that he did not say it would be an honor.

Major Joppolo said: "I shall see you tomorrow then."

Father Pensovecchio said, just to make sure: "At the Church of San Angelo. It is by the Piazza of that name. At seven in the morning. Until then, son."

When the priest had left, Giuseppe said in his brand of English: "You doing okay, a boss. All you got a do now is fix a food."

"Yes," said Major Joppolo, "food. We'll go to the bakeries. But first, do you have a crier here?"

Giuseppe said to Zito in Italian: "What is the name of the crier? Did he run into the hills with the others?"

Zito said: "No, he is here. Mercurio Salvatore. He is here. Only, Mister Major, he does not always say exactly what you tell him to say. He will say the general meaning of what you wish, but he will change it some. Even if you write it down, he will change it some."

Major Joppolo said: "Will you get him, please, Zito? I want to send him out to tell the people to read the proclamations."

Zito went. Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "We will go to the Bakeries, then we will post the proclamations."

Giuseppe said: "Okay, a boss."

Major Joppolo looked down at his desk and saw Craxi's telegram. He undid the safety pin and unfolded the paper and read:

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt, Capitol Building, Washington, D. C. Fremente di gioia per la liberta da molto tempo attesa che i vostri valorosi soldati anno dato alla citta d'Adano stop vi prego accettare i sentimenti sinceri della mia gratitudine e riconoscenza. Antifascista Giovanni La Concetta fu Craxi."

"Giuseppe," the Major said, "let's see how good you are as an interpreter. Now, this is for President Roosevelt. You must make it as eloquent as you can. What does it say?"

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt and a so forth," said Giuseppe. "Crazy with joy because of a liberty so long time awaited which your brave a soldier have a give to a town of Adano. What's a stop?"

"End a sentence. I beg a you accept a sincere sentiments of my gratitude and a recognition. Signed a this Craxi. You going to deliver it, a boss?"

"Sure," the Major said, "the President will be glad to hear."

Mercurio Salvatore, crier of the town of Adano, took a little time to show up, because he had to get into his uniform. His face was happy when he did arrive, because he had thought that his crying days were over. Having been a voice of Fascism for seventeen years, he thought that the newcomers would not want his loud shouts. He had taken his uniform off and hidden it in the house of Carmelina the wife of Fatta. He had then awkwardly paraded himself in civilian clothes and the people, having seen him in uniform for seventeen years, laughed at him.

"Where is the crier?" they asked each other in his presence.

"He has disappeared into the clothes of Fatta which do not fit him," they shouted, and laughed.

Therefore Mercurio Salvatore was happy and grateful when he presented himself to Major Joppolo. "I am glad to be able to serve you and I kiss your hand," he said in his husky voice. Indoors he had learned to speak in a kind of whisper, because he knew the strength of his throat.

If Major Joppolo had been any other American officer, he would have laughed outright at Mercurio Salvatore.

He said: "Crier, I have a job for you. I must explain this to you: the Americans are different from the Fascists. They are different in many ways. For this reason there will be quite a few changes in Adano. I hope that they will be changes for the better."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," to show that he would remember every word of it.

The Major said: "In order to explain some of these changes, I am going to post at various prominent places around the town a number of proclamations, which will make everything clear. All I want you to do is to tell the people to read these proclamations. Impress on them that the penalties for not obeying the proclamations will be severe. That is all."

Mercurio Salvatore looked disappointed. "That is not much to shout," he said.

Major Joppolo said: "Shall I name a new crier?"

Mercurio Salvatore said quickly: "Oh no, Mister Major, I will make something beautiful of what you have said."

Major Joppolo said: "The proclamations will be posted before five o'clock this afternoon."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," and left.

He picked up his drum where he had left it outside the Major's office. Ordinarily he had made his first cry in the Piazza Progresso, right in front of the Palazzo, but this time he was self-conscious, and wanted to have a few tries before crying within earshot of the Major. Therefore he went first to the park opposite the Cathedral.

He rolled his drum long and sharply.

He took a deep breath. Blood and wind rushed into his throat, and his throat roared: "Well, you laughed. But you can see that Mercurio Salvatore is still your crier. The Americans are friends of Mercurio Salvatore. The Americans wish to be your friends, too. You have been expecting the Americans for some time, but did you expect the changes which would come after the Americans? Did you know that they were going to change many things after they came? Did you know that they were going to change practically everything except the crier? Well, your crier is here to tell you this."

Now Mercurio Salvatore filled his lungs and bellowed: "Opposite me I see Carmelina the wife of Fatta in front of her house. I also see the lazy Fatta leaning against the wall of his wife's house. The crier wishes to thank Carmelina for storage of his uniform during the difficult time of the invasion. He wishes also to address a few words to her lazy husband. It is unfortunate, lazy Fatta, that you never learned to read. It is too bad that you were too slothful to memorize the letters of the alphabet. This afternoon you would have had a chance to read of the changes which our friends the Americans intend to bring about here in Adano.

BACK in the dim and far away season of 1876, Chicago won the first National league pennant under the leadership of Albert G. Spalding. Today in the 70th campaign of the older league, Chicago's Cubs are heading for another pennant with the Cardinals still in hot pursuit. As the count stands at this moment Chicago and New York are tied with 15 National league pennants each and if the Cubs win this year, they will have a one pennant lead over their closest all-time rival from Manhattan.

After Albert Spalding won in 1876, Cap Anson won three in a row in 1880, 1881 and 1882, and the slugging Cap repeated again in 1885 and 1886.

Charley Grimm

Old Cap was one of the most interesting characters I ever knew in baseball. He was a great hitter for close to 25 years. After the Anson cleanup, the Cubs took a dizzy dip for the next 18 years until Frank L. Chance, the Peerless Leader, arrived on the scene in 1906 to win four pennants in five years against his famous rival, John J. McGraw.

McGraw won 10 of New York's 15 pennants, but even his aggressive leadership was not quite enough to catch up with the Cubs.

Outside of the Cubs and Giants, of the 69 pennants already delivered, Boston has 9, St. Louis 9, Pittsburgh 6, Brooklyn 5 and Philadelphia lays claim to her one and only flag which Alexander's pitching brought about 30 years ago.

It has been stated, unofficially, that the Phillies will not win the pennant this season. But we have an idea that under her new owner there will be a change for the better later on.

Grimm's Victories

Returning to the leading Cubs and Chicago's long pennant success, it was Charley Grimm who won for Chicago in 1932 and 1935, using a number of pretty good ball players for this purpose.

Now the cheerful Cub leader has a shot at his third flag, a dream that only the Cardinals can turn into a nightmare. And I don't believe they can with the edge in pitching the Cubs carry. In losing such ball players as the Cooper brothers, Stan Musial and Max Lanier, from last season's squad, the Red Birds apparently have lost more than they could afford.

In spite of these heavy blows, Billy Southworth has turned in one of his best jobs, a statement to which the Dodgers can testify. Southworth's best chance is the 12 games his Cardinals have left with the Cubs.

There may be a wide gap between the Cubs of 1945 and the 1906-1910 teams. That Chance outfit was one of the greatest baseball has ever known. It had one of the game's smartest catchers in Johnny Kling. It had a strong pitching staff headed by Miner Brown and Ed Reulbach. And it had "Tinker to Evers to Chance," plus Steinfeldt at third. It also had such workmen as Scheckard, Hofman, Slagle and Schulte in the outfield. This club was good enough to set a National league record for a season's total — 116 victories.

This 1945 round-up is no 1906 brand. But it is a pretty good ball club for these war years. Above all else it has the most consistent pitching staff in either league. When Charley Grimm calls on a starting pitcher, the odds are he will have one who can finish or at least pitch well.

Two Best Basemen

In Hack at third and Cavarretta at first the Cubs have two of the best now left from either league. Stan Hack has been a badly underrated ball player for several years. He has been one of the best, prewar or through the war. Phil Cavarretta has been one of the most improved players of 1945. A good outfield headed by Bill Nicholson has given Grimm a solid phalanx compared to so many other teams who have had few dependable workmen.

After a straggling start, the Giants and the Dodgers out in front, the Cubs hit their stride in early June and have had no bad spots since. Through June and July they had everything it takes against the opposition offered, which wasn't any too hot. But above all, in Passeau, Wyse, Derringer and others they had better pitching than any other club in their league could show.

As the two leagues are today, anything can still happen with several weeks of play left. But there are only the Cardinals to threaten the Cubs, and outside of Washington's Senators I can't see any other American league team threatening anybody.

Whatever happens, the Clark Griffith — Ossie Bluege delegation lounging in the shadow of the Washington monument have been the surprise team of the year. They have proved again what pretty good pitching can do for any pennant cause.

Male Birds of Paradise But Eat and Court 'Ladies'

Birds of paradise, kings of the bird realm, are the laziest—as well as the most beautiful creatures of the species. Male birds, with their colorful features and plumage capes, lead an easy life in their native South Pacific islands, where all they ever do is eat and look nice for the "ladies."

Female birds of paradise aren't as beautiful as the males, but the boys still are greatly interested in winning their friendship. Elaborate courtship rituals often have ten males paying tribute to a single girl friend in the same ceremony.

Our sincere thanks to all of you who helped

When Japan bombed Pearl Harbor, Southern Pacific became perhaps the most strategic railroad in the United States. Serving the West Coast ports of embarkation from San Diego to Portland, and more military and naval establishments than any other railroad, we were called upon to handle an enormous load.

We were able to handle this load successfully because of the great work of railroad men and women up and down the line, and with the help and cooperation of thousands of people not actually working for the railroad.

Now the war is over. The job is done. But we of Southern Pacific will never forget the way people stood by us when the task sometimes seemed bigger than our railroad.

We send our sincere thanks——to the Army, Navy and Government authorities for their sympathetic understanding of our problems.

—to the shippers who cheerfully put up with delays so that more vital war freight could go through on time, and who cooperated in many ways to conserve equipment.

—to our passengers, for their good-natured acceptance of crowded trains and other wartime discomforts.

—to the thousands of people who stayed off the trains to make room for service men and other essential travelers.

—to the press and radio which understood our operating difficulties and kept the public informed.

We do not know how quickly Southern Pacific can convert from war to peace. Soon transports will be landing thousands of war-weary men at West Coast ports, and many more must be brought back from Europe. These men will want to get home as quickly as possible. We intend to do our best to carry them in the comfort to which they are entitled. This job comes first, of course.

Meanwhile, we are planning luxurious new streamlined trains, new travel comforts and refinements in passenger service, and improvements in freight service. We intend to go forward aggressively with the West, earning our right to serve you solely on merit and performance.

A. T. MERCIER, President
