DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES HERE

The political meeting held at Community Hall last Friday evening was fairly well attended. Two different parties reached here about the same time, Mr. Barker, candidate for nomination for governor, and Hon. Dennis Chavez, candidate for re-nomination to the office of United States senator. Both parties made their talks, and went their different ways. Mr. L. A. Whitaker, candidate for Probate Judge on the Democratic ticket, introduced both speakers, in the absence of the local chairman, Mr. Kelley, who is in California on account of the serious illness of his brother.

Mr. Barker had his interpreter with him, while Mr. Chavez spoke both in Spanish and English. Both candidates were well received.

Mr. and Mrs. Odell Baker and daughter, of Vaughn, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Smith for Mother's Day. Mrs. Baker went to El Paso, Monday, on business, and Mr. Baker went back to Vaughn, while Lee Adell stayed with her grandparents until her mother's return, Tuesday.

Senator L. P. Hall of Ancho, was in town on business, Monday.

Mr. R. H. (Ray) Rogers, former State Land Commissioner, was in Carrizozo and Lincoln County Monday, campaigning for the nomination for State Treasurer on the Democratic ticket. He left here for Alamogordo. Mr. Rogers has an announcement in this issue of the News-Outlook.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Freeman went to Las Cruces, for the week-end to witness the graduation of Mrs. Freeman's sister, Miss Pettigrew.

The Firemen's Ball will be held here June 1st, instead of the 8th as was published last week. In setting it up a week, the 1st was about the only date they could get the hall, at this time.

RE-ENLISTS AS SERGEANT

Maynard A. Sangster, of Albuquerque, a former major in the army of the United States, enlisted last week in the army as a master sergeant.

But this is not the first time that Sergeant Sangster has been an enlisted man, as prior to this his appointment as a second lieutenant, upon graduation from the Medical Field Service School, he was a private. Sangster rose from second lieut. to major in the army and was discharged at his request. At the end of his terminal leave he was a civilian for only one complete day before he re-enlisted as a master sergeant.

Under a recruiting regulation, ex-officers can rejoin the army as master listed men in the grade of master sergeant.

The lava building blocks seem to be catching on at Raton and other villages in the north end of the state. One outfit, the Standard Building Supply, is making over a thousand of the 8x8x16 blocks every day, bringing the lava from Mt. Capulin to do it. These blocks do not have to be stuccoed and they take paint readily. They seem to have something in those lava blocks. Too bad Carrizozo can't get started. There is enough lava there on top of the ground to make a thousand gillion, one million squillion of such blocks.—Will Robinson, in Sidelites on the news, Roswell Dispatch.

We have wondered about this Mal Pais rock ourselves. We build fountains, fences, flower beds, so why not houses, from this material at our door?

Mr. L. A. Whitaker has announced as candidate for Probate Judge on the Democratic ticket, subject to the Democratic Primary election. He will appreciate your vote and support.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination for County Clerk subject to the will and consideration of the Republican Primary. Your vote and support solicited.

Benton W. McGinnis.

FINANCING BUSINESS IS BANK BUSINESS.

Banks long have been the principal source of helpfulness, inspiration and credit to small business. For example, in the last full pre-war year, tabulation of loans by 5,000 banks (only one-third of the country's banks), totaled 24 million loans to business—a total of 33 billion dollars and an average of $1700 per loan.

Lending to small business is truly a big business, and one that banks are best equipped to handle. Today, and in the months and years ahead, when the efforts of small business will be so important in getting our economic machine back on the track, we pledge ourself to give every possible assistance and to make every possible loan to local business concerns. Come in and talk over your problems with us.

THE LAND OF ENCHANTMENT
By Mrs. Lulu Lewis.

In the time of the beginning,
In the ages long ago,
Earth travailed with wild convulsions
And birthed this land, New Mexico.

Then the Goddess of Enchantment
Moved within this border land,
With her powers to aid creation,
Brought to life the Rio Grande.

Then the desert strewn with cactus,
Where the white sands shift and blow;
Then the cliffs and lofty mountains,
With perpetual peaks of snow;

The bad lands and the mesas,
With their cities in a grave,
The lakes with unknown fathoms
And the Carlsbad's wondrous cave.

From the land of the Pueblos
To the desert's painted sand,
She has wandered down the ages
With her magic in her hand.

When you view the desert sunset,
Watch its colors fade or glow—
Then your heart is filled with wonder
Of this land, New Mexico.

Manhattan Heartbeat

Fifth Avenue, the teeming boulevard which runs the gauntlet from 1 south to 2340 north in the heart of the world's most important Treasure Island, is the Avenue FOR the Americas. In 1918, during the first World War, it was for a time called the Avenue of the Allies, which fooled nobody. With a past as glamorous as Camille's, a present as active as the dollar's, its future is as bright as radar's!

Come Sunday, the city fathers of the good old days shut the Avenue off so that Sabbath worshippers could have absolute quiet. Now it's almost necessary to rope off the glittering store windows so that the strollers can't have free rein! . . . The Avenue is an international hodgepodge of everything: Toy factories, two art museums (the Metropolitan and the Frick), famous cathedrals, churches and synagogues, the Empire State (the world's highest, widest and handsomest), architects and stock brokers, haberdashers, interior decorators, women's apparel specialists, Radio City (which gives natives their largest Christmas tree and an outdoor ice skating rink), a party favor house, swank restaurants, banks, and mansions filled with ghosts.

The first Fifth Avenue Hotel—six stories high (or can you stand it?)—was opened in 1859. It featured a novelty, New York's first vertical railway. What's that? Why, a passenger elevator—you dope. . . . Elevators along Fifth these days are such elegant affairs that operators are likely to look down their shafts at ordinary pilots of the Air Forces.

John Barrymore earned and lost several fortunes during his turbulent career. When a colleague chided him for his financial irresponsibility, Barrymore recited an epitaph he had seen in Westminster Abbey: "What I gave, I have. What I spent, I had. What I left, I lost—by not giving it."

Some of us wondered why Jed Harris, who once made a million dollars as a Broadway showman, didn't connect in Hollywood. . . . Insiders insist this is why. . . . Friends brought him to Louis B. Mayer, the movie magnate, who had been informed of Jed's genius on B'way.

"How much money do you want a week?" asked Mayer.

"How much do YOU get?" demanded Harris.

That did it!

When Heywood Broun first started reviewing Broadway shows he had the habit of making notes during dull shows to appear that he wasn't bored. . . . The worse the show the more he scribbled. . . . One night he stopped making memos during a second act. . . . After the second interval the beaming producer said: "I feel better since I noticed you put away your pad."

"Yes," grumbled Broun. "I broke my pencil."

Sounds in the Dark: At the Singapore: "He reaches for the check like it was an atomic bomb!" . . . At the Stuyvesant Casino: "They say he's an awful bore — but I think he's rather expert at it." . . . At Ciro's: "When he dies the only guy who'll be sorry will be his insurance agent." . . . At the Park Central Lounge: "A layman is a pedestrian who jumped too late!" . . . At the Garden Restaurant: "He was just promoted from Account Executive to Office Boy." . . . At the China Doll: "Her love is so fickle it oughta be listed on the Stock Exchange." . . . At the Bronx Zoo: "But son, I've told you a hundred times, Senator Bilbo is in Washington!"

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once related a bantering conversation he had with a $10-a-week actor who was cast in one of his plays. The young chap had laughingly suggested that the two agree to divide their incomes with each other for the rest of their lives. . . . Naturally, Sir Arthur had refused "such a ridiculous offer."

The $10-a-week youngster was Charlie Chaplin.

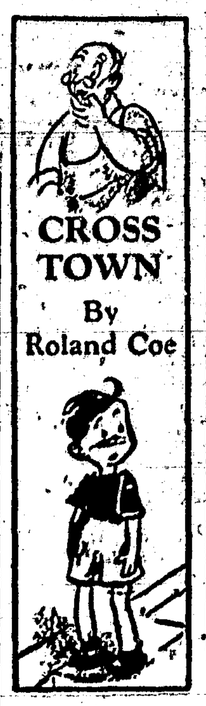
Harry Wagstaff Gribble, the producer, director, author and all around play expert, has coined a swanggant new word to replace the inaccurate "Colored" and equally untrue "Negro." . . . The casts of both "Anna Lucasta" troupes are thrilled about it.

It's a pip, to wit: Negramerican.

This one has been pinned on various hefty humans. But Alec Woollcott enjoyed pinning it on himself. . . . When Alec was tipping the scales (in the 300s) two actors noticed him wading in the Atlantic City surf. Said one: "Let's go swimming."

"How can we?" quipped the other. "Woollcott's using the ocean!"

It was H. Westbrook Pegler's observation: There's No New Thing Under the Sun. But Some Of the Old Ones Are Plenty of Fun!



"I'm afraid I'll have to apologize for the mulligan. Today's a MEATLESS day y' knew!"

"For the last time, Alvin—where were you when I was ready to go?"

Sportlight

by Grantland Rice

THE argument broke into a rash concerning the easiest position to play on a baseball team. We put the debate up to Joe McCarthy, who knows what it is all about, no matter what the position might happen to be.

Grantland Rice

"Why don't you ask a lot of ball players," Joe said, "and get their slant? After Stirnweiss had played third three or four days, I asked him how he liked the job. 'Great,' he said, 'but do I still get paid on the first and fifteenth for playing third?'"

We accepted Manager McCarthy's challenge and soon lined up the viewpoints of all the earnest athletes we could corral.

In the concensus that followed, the catching assignment was rated the toughest, by an extensive margin. What about the pitcher? The pitcher only works every fourth or fifth day, and too often only toils four or five innings.

But the catcher, the better catchers, get few vacations. You might talk to Bill Dickey some time about this and discover the beatings they take around the plate.

Catching a hundred ball games a year is harder work than playing any other position for three hundred games. All of which leads up to the easiest or softest job on the team. This is where the argument started.

'Hot Corner' Easiest

We talked with the Cardinals, Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers, Indians, and several others about the easiest position to play. From the start the players began voting for third and first base. The consensus finally settled on third base.

As one veteran expressed it—"I'll tell you about playing third base. On a general average when they slap one at you, it is either a hit or an out—but nearly always a hit if you don't handle it. Yes, there are bunts to cover, but as a percentage proposition, third basemen get few errors thrown into their records. It always happens in a hurry at third base and it is all different at short and second. They have room enough and time enough to move around. The third baseman doesn't."

The next soft job consensus went to first base. But a first baseman is supposed to be one of the best hitters on the club. Charley Comiskey was the first of all the first basemen who left the safety of the bag to cut down a few drives slashed towards right field. That, 50 years ago, was a daring innovation. It remained for Hal Chase to prove how an artist could handle first. But Hal was too great an artist for his own good along certain devious lines we won't discuss here.

Now here is a peculiar angle. Baseball has known more great first basemen and more great second basemen than it has ever known shortstops and third basemen.

Just how can you explain this?

At first base we have had stars from the days of Fred Tenney on, through Frank Chance, Stuffy McInnis, Hal Chase, George Sisler, Lou Gehrig, and Bill Terry.

Many Stars at Second

Second has the longest parade of stars — Lajoie, Collins, Evers, Frisch, Hornsby, Gordon, Doerr. But outside of the enduring Honus Wagner, shortstop has given the game few outstanding names. There have been such good ones as Bancroft, Jackson, Jennings, Tinker, Long, Wallace—but only a limited list ranged below Wagner's fame.

Third base, voted as the easiest job on the club to hold, should be arrayed and bedecked with great names. The list of good ones is fairly long. The list of great ones very scant. Jimmy Collins, Pie Traynor, Art Devlin, Heinie Groh, Red Rolfe, Bill Bradley, these were among the best.

In order to ward off indignant and protesting letters we'll admit in advance that many good names have been left off the list, due mainly to a zigzag memory.

The tough spot and the most important spot on the infield is the combination of short and second. Two fast men here can take pretty good care of the infield, especially those of the Rizzuto-Gordon and the Peaky-Doerr type, not to overlook Marion and his mate on the Cardinals. Third base may be the "hot corner" but it also requires less terrain to patrol.

No Room for Alibis

The box score is a national institution that has been attracting more and more popular interest in the United States for 70 years.

It carries compact news to countless millions from the smaller hamlets on to the greater cities and the smaller hamlets furnish most of the stars who gather their fame in big league centers. Here it is again with a complete record of runs, hits, errors, strikeouts, stolen bases. It offers no space for alibis or excuses.

Woman's World

Cottons Steal the Spotlight For Cool-as-a-Breeze Fashions

By Ertta Haley

KEEPING cool is the first consideration for summery clothes. The other consideration, which in the past has too often been neglected, is style or smartness.

Style is difficult to achieve in a summery dress because no matter how lovely, it can take on the appearance of a rumpled, dowdy thing within an hour after you've put it on, simply because the weather takes all the starch out of you and your dress.

Because it is difficult to keep cool and at the same time look well-groomed, I'd suggest you concentrate on the simpler fashions for summer. Pleats are very nice, but they're hard to keep well-pressed when the temperature's soaring. Ruffles may look very nice on a blouse for a dressy suit, but they wilt easily when you're perspiring.

All this is said to suggest you consider the choice of a summer afternoon dress carefully. Look at the work of the country's best designers and you will always see simplicity the basic note, the guiding factor in a dress, suit or coat.

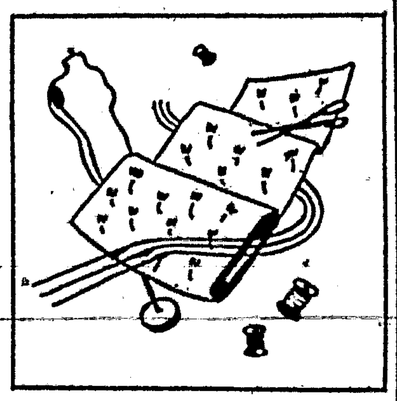
Another factor that has an important bearing on your style is the fabric you use. You would hardly consider a waffle weave for a ruffled effect, nor would you consider the cool but weighty mesh prints for lots of furbelows on a dress.

If you want to look cool and collected, then you'll choose your print and color with a lot of care. Unless you want to appear very gay, don't buy red unless it's relieved by plenty of white or neutral. Nor do I suggest you choose a very warm shade, like orange or yellow-orange.

Take your pick from the pale yellow tints or cool colors like green, blue and violet. Brown and black with touches of white or neutral are also very attractive. White is difficult to keep clean in some sections of the country, but it is cool to wear, and particularly nice for dress-up.

Tailored Interest

The skirt of topaz brown with a flat-seamed center pleat is teamed with a taffy gabardine jacket to make this a smart selection from Molly's collection. Notice the fine interest in detail and careful tailoring.



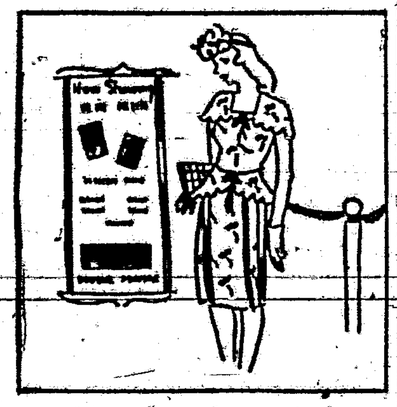
If you have dress-length material. . . .

Cut Your Pattern With Architect's Precision

Remember there's nothing hard about any part of sewing if you work as a professional. Naturally this will permit no slip-shod cutting or careless fitting.

If you are working very carefully and with fabric which is quite expensive, it may be best to cut and fit your pattern of inexpensive unbleached muslin. This can be run together on a machine with long stitches — just well enough to hold it through a good fitting, and then ripped and used as the pattern.

The easiest way of keeping the material from which you are cutting in a straight line and even fold is to tack it lightly on your working table. Clerks try to keep material straight when they cut it for you, but some fabrics are so slippery, this is impossible. It is better to take a little time to get it in line, "to lie straight" before cutting than to have a dress that does not set well.



Make a pretty afternoon frock.

The little notches on your pattern which are designed as tucks and darts are mighty important in making the garment fit you. The neckline may require more than one or two darts to make it fit snugly. The darts at the waistline may have to be a little smaller than shown in the pattern. Perhaps the underarm darts should be just a little deeper to give you good line. All of these little things can be determined by basting first, then fitting.

A recent bit of news suggested that we women were spreading across the hips much more since the war than our designers anticipated. And, they tell us, that does not apply only to the older women, but to the teen-aged youngsters as well.

Because the skirt fit is so important it's a good idea to baste the entire skirt in place before attempting any sewing. Slip the garment on, and if the seam allowance has been too generous, you can always let it out. If the garment is too snug, it may be necessary to place panels at the sides to give more room. At any rate, it's better to know just what the score is before you put in those hard-to-rip stitches.

Don't feel that just because you're sewing on cotton that you can afford to be careless. Whereas cotton used to be an inexpensive material before the war, it is anything but that now. A good piece of material deserves just as good treatment as you can give it.

Care of Fabrics

For washing woolen garments use a neutral soap. Soaps with alkali have a harmful effect on woolen garments. Use as little friction as possible when washing, as it may ruin the fibers. Squeezing gently in lukewarm suds is the best method. Hang the garment where air circulates freely and is neither too hot nor cold.

These same precautions are necessary for washing silk. To prevent yellowing, hang silk in the shade.

Cotton and linen wash easily, although alkali cleaning agents should be used carefully. Sunshine tends to whiten both of these fabrics and they can withstand the higher temperatures fairly easy in washing.

Soft water and mild soap are the essentials for washing rayons. Two sudsings should be used if necessary. The fabric should not be rubbed or twisted. Ironing with just warm heat is very important.

Bemberg fabrics are handled like silk, wrapped in a towel and ironed with just a warm iron.

Spring Fashion Notes

Button interest is paramount for summer clothes. A simple cotton dress receives elegance from rich, frosty white buttons or jet black ones.

Black skirts with pink blouses make nice dress-up costumes, that are bound to be arresting. Don't forget black poplin or linen-like fabrics with white embroidered touches for dressy and smart suits.

Skirts of cocoa or blue chambray are nice business like affairs when teamed with yellow or pink blouses. Easy to keep looking neat, too.

You'll be seeing more frills and furbelows on women's clothing now that some Civilian Production administration controls have been rescinded. The main features restored by this are french cuffs, pocket flaps and all types of belts.

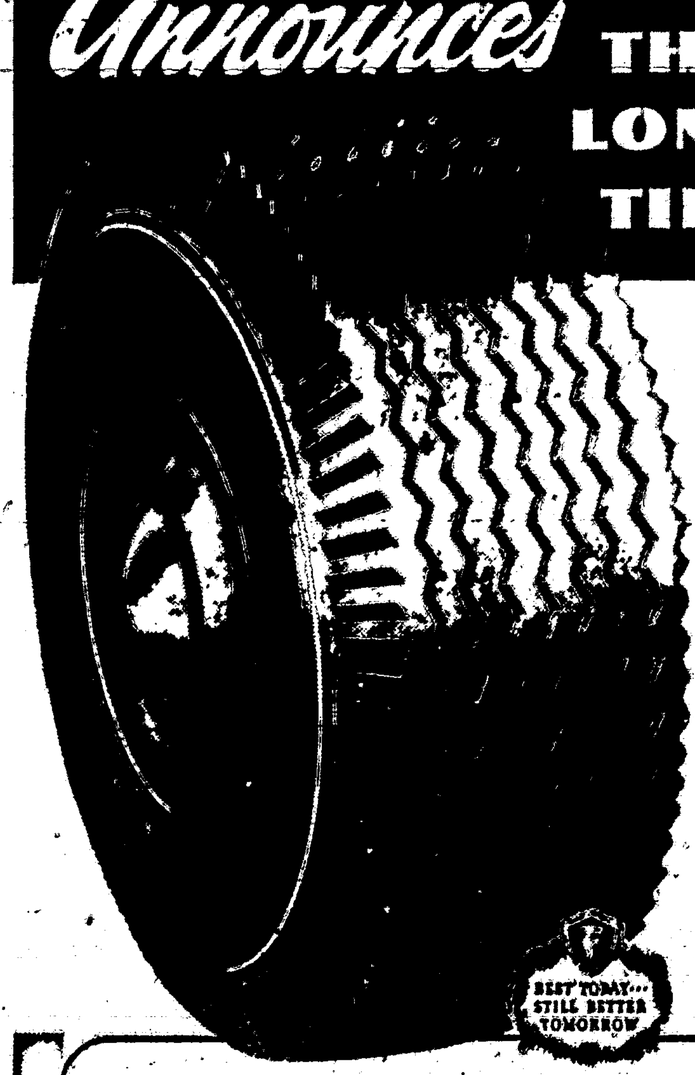
Firestone Announces THE SAFEST AND LONGEST WEARING TIRE EVER BUILT



RAYON CORD AT REGULAR PRICE!

UP TO 55% STRONGER
New Rayon Cord Safti-Sured-Body* Gives Extra Protection Against Blowouts

UP TO 60% MORE NON-SKID ANGLES
New Safti-Grip Tread Provides Extra Protection Against Skidding

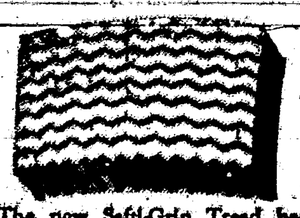
UP TO 32% LONGER MILEAGE . . . .
Wear-Resistant Vitamic Rubber in both the Tread and the Cord Body Assures Extra Protection Against Weather and Wear

INSTEAD of merely substituting a rayon cord body for cotton cord in a previous tire design, Firestone especially engineered this tire to take full advantage of the extra strength of rayon. As a result, Firestone research has created a revolutionary new tire, tested and proved by millions of miles of service — a tire that's new in design, new in materials, new in performance — YET IT SELLS AT REGULAR PRICE. See this new Firestone De Luxe Champion Tire at your nearby Firestone Dealer Store or Firestone Store TODAY!

*Rayon cord bodies in size 6.50 and larger, extra strong cotton cord bodies in smaller sizes until more Rayon is available.

HERE'S WHY THE NEW FIRESTONE DELUXE CHAMPION STAYS SAFER LONGER

Rayon fibers are locked together by the Firestone Safti-Lock process, then Gum-Dipped and calendered with Vitamic Rubber. Safti-Sured Construction welds all parts of the tire into an inseparable unit for EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS.



The new Safti-Grip Tread has up to 60% more non-skid angles for EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING.

New, wider, flatter, silent Safti-Grip tread and large area in contact with the road mean slow, even wear. Precision balance and uniform flexing mean less internal heat. These features assure EXTRA MILEAGE.

THE ONLY TIRES MADE THAT ARE SAFETY PROVED ON THE SPEEDWAY FOR YOUR PROTECTION ON THE HIGHWAY

More For Your Money

A dollar is always a dollar, but . . . everyone knows it doesn't always buy the same amount of what you happen to want at any given time. Sometimes it buys more, sometimes less. When the supply of things outweighs the supply of money, your dollar goes a long way; when things are scarce and money plentiful, the buying power of your dollar shrinks. Because this is a law of economics that is constantly at work, almost anyone can turn it to his advantage. How? Simply by laying away as many dollars as possible when prices are high and buying when dollars will buy the most. Yes, it can be as simple as that. The trick is to make up your mind to follow that program and then STICK to it. Many people who do, accumulate their money in an account at our bank.

Stiffer Attitude Toward High-Handed Unions Seen

THE "anti-Petrillo" is now the law of the land, signed by the President. And that signature marks a milestone of some kind, for this reporter believes that despite the fact that we have a weak-kneed, supine congress, the law will mark the turning point in government relations with labor abuses.

This so-called Petrillo bill is a slap on the wrist for Mr. James Caesar Petrillo, head of the musicians' union, but it eliminates abuses in only one industry, "featherbedding" in the radio industry. It permits the same abuses to be practiced by Mr. Petrillo in other industries . . . notably motion pictures and theaters, and it leaves other unions free to perform the same practices that Mr. Petrillo is punished for in the radio industry.

For instance, the law says that Mr. Petrillo cannot levy a royalty or a tax on phonograph records used for broadcasting, but the union can still levy this royalty on every record you play in your home. Mr. John L. Lewis is at this very moment seeking to levy a tonnage tax on every ton of coal, 10 cents a ton, to provide a huge fund for his miners' union. But Mr. Lewis is free to do that since the "anti-Petrillo" law doesn't apply to the miners' union.

But a congress which gave in to political expediency in its worst sense, and played checkers with the security of the nation in the emasculated draft bill, and which indicated such utter stupidity and disregard for the welfare and opinions of the rank and file of the American people in passage of the vivisected OPA bill in the house, probably could not be expected to take up the abuses of labor-union leaders in one fell swoop.

Unions Are Necessary

Your Home Town Reporter believes in labor unions. They are necessary in our American way of life, since without them the American workers would be at the mercy of greedy employers. Were it not for labor unions, a man's toil would still be a commodity to be bought and sold, to be used or disregarded at the whim of any capitalist. But the abuse of these benefits which have been granted to labor by certain labor bosses and in which these bosses even defy the government of the United States, should most definitely be curbed. Public opinion polls indicate that the rank and file of the American people hold to this opinion and the folks who live in the small towns and the rural areas are particularly incensed at practices and unlicensed affrontery of some of these leaders.

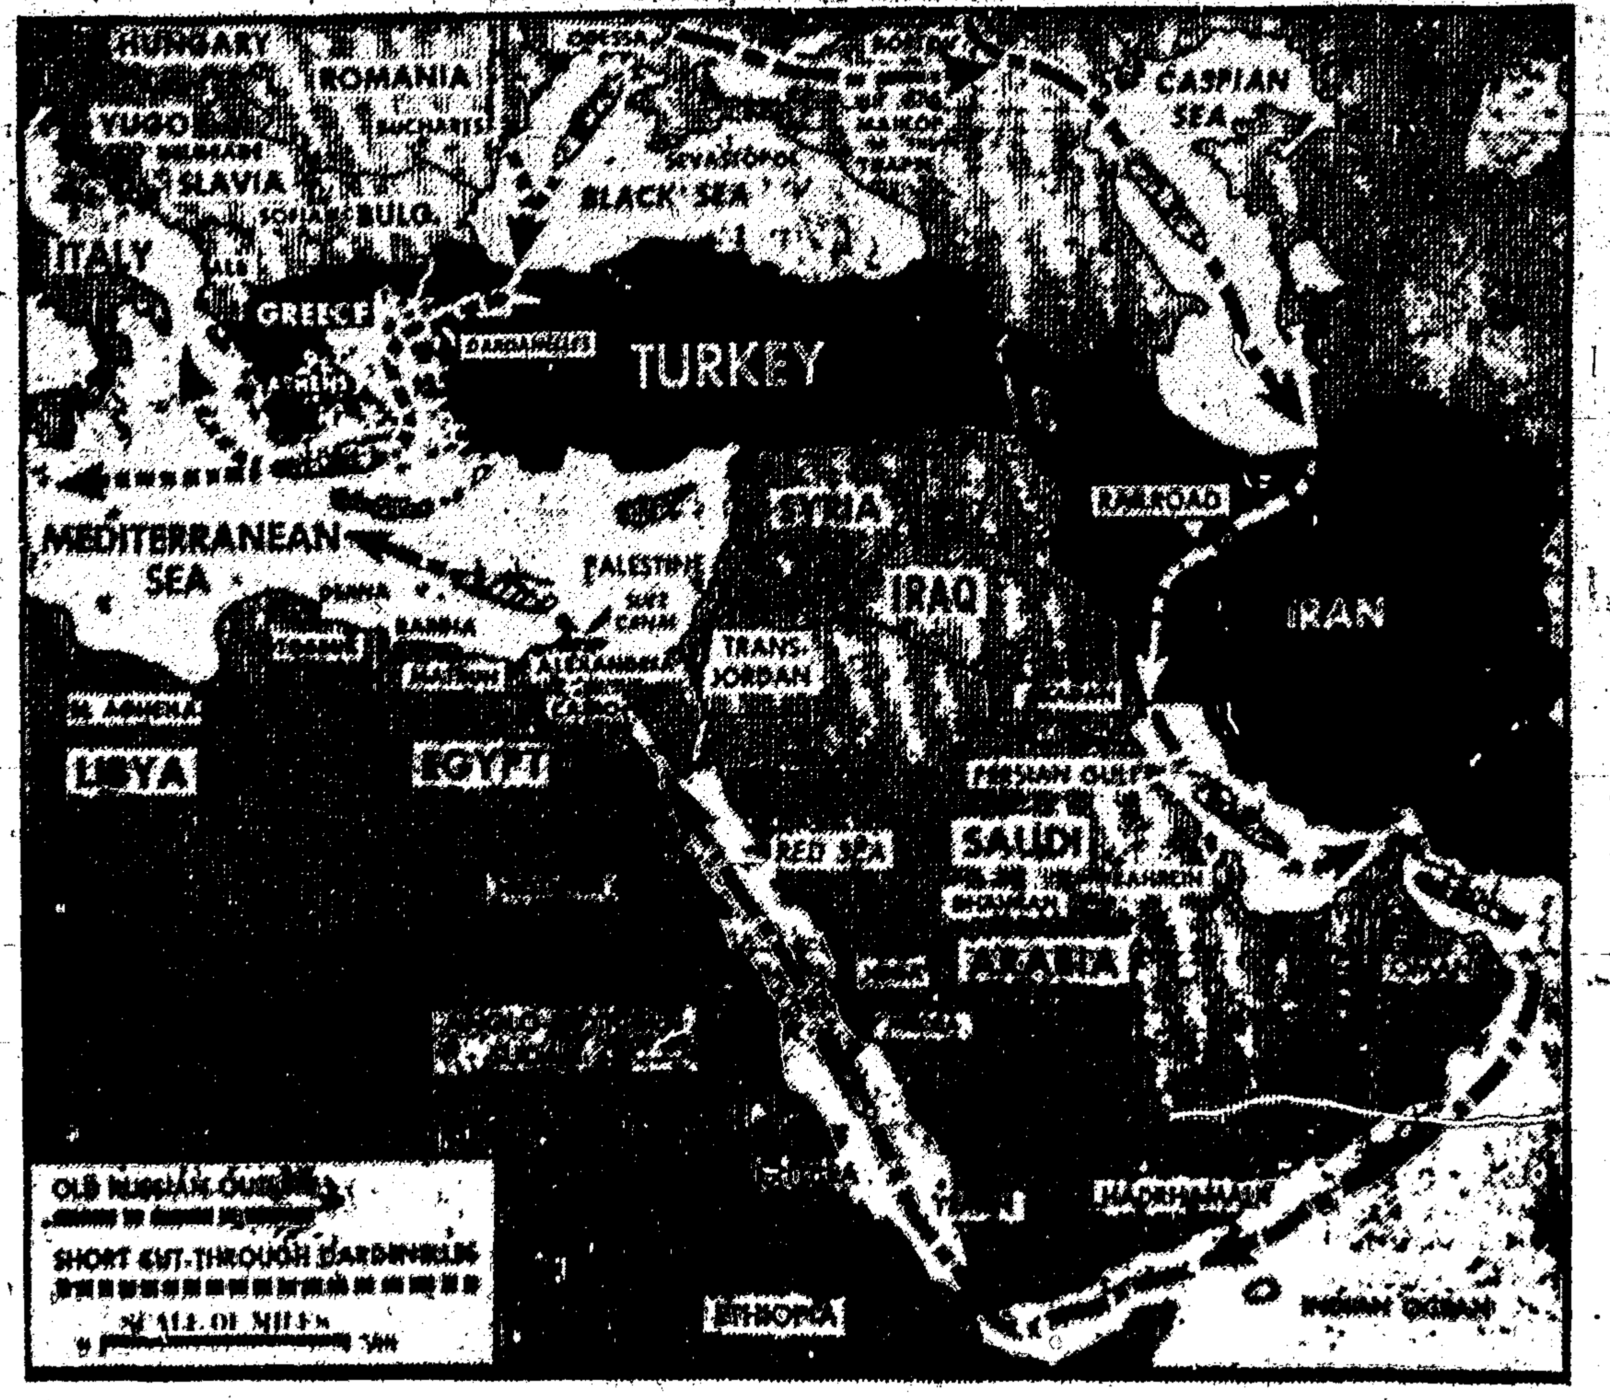
The Case bill, approved here by some of the farm organizations, will die aborning in the senate and in the senate labor committee. A majority of this committee has had the temerity to propose a measure which would punish unions seeking to extort money from farmers by coercion or force and to prevent farmers from transporting perishable farm products to market.

This has happened in Pennsylvania, in New York, and in other sections wherein farmers' trucks have been overturned, or the farmer has been forced to pay tribute to unions to drive his truck of produce into the market place. But what about the farmer who seeks to transport nonperishable products? Why not include that in the bill for it is most certainly as wrong for unions to prohibit the hauling of logs to market as it is to levy tribute for lettuce. And why not at the same time protect others besides farmers?

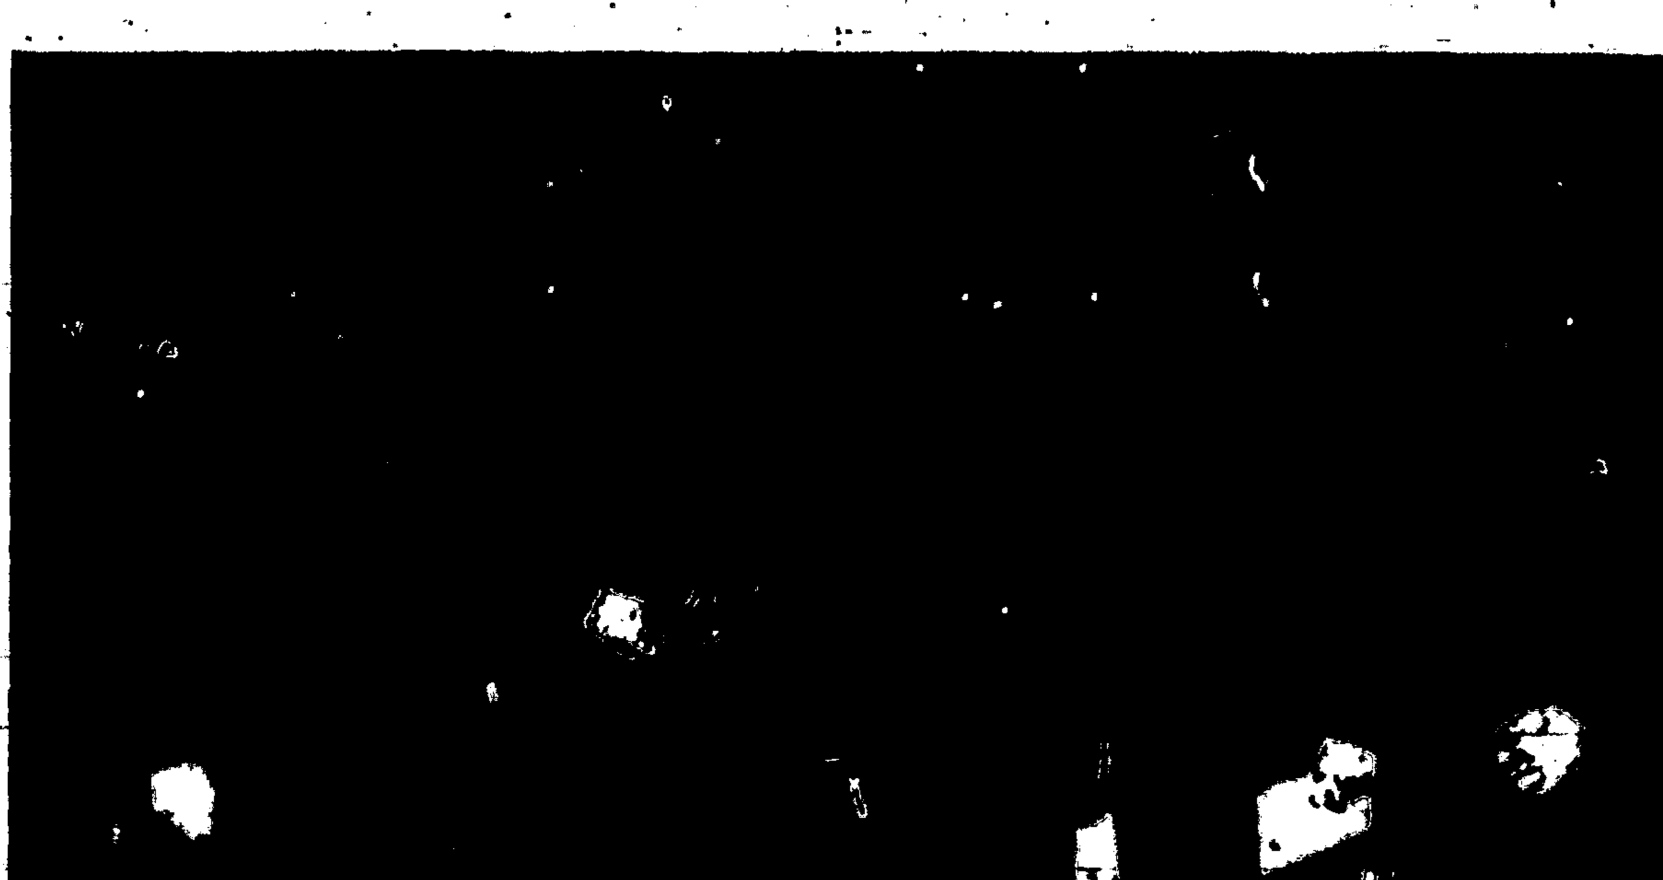
A Tribute on Every Ton

Now the entire country is just about to pay tribute to John L. Lewis before he consents to let his miners mine coal for industry and to heat your houses. Mr. Lewis struts from the headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America, a stone-facaded building about a block from my office here, and which resembles nothing more than an exclusive Union League club or a Carnegie library, and issues an edict . . . an edict to the Mine Owners, to Industry, to the American Public and to the Government of the United States . . . and he will probably get away with it.

Wages for his miners is a secondary issue. What he wants most is that royalty of 10 cents a ton which would mean some 50 to 60 million dollars a year in Mr. Lewis' coffers for welfare or whatever he determines to use it for. So what difference 400,000 miners out of work for three, or five or six weeks, or why should Mr. Lewis care if members of other unions in steel, autos and a dozen other industries are thrown out of work by his coal strike . . . or that production is delayed and reconversion slowed?



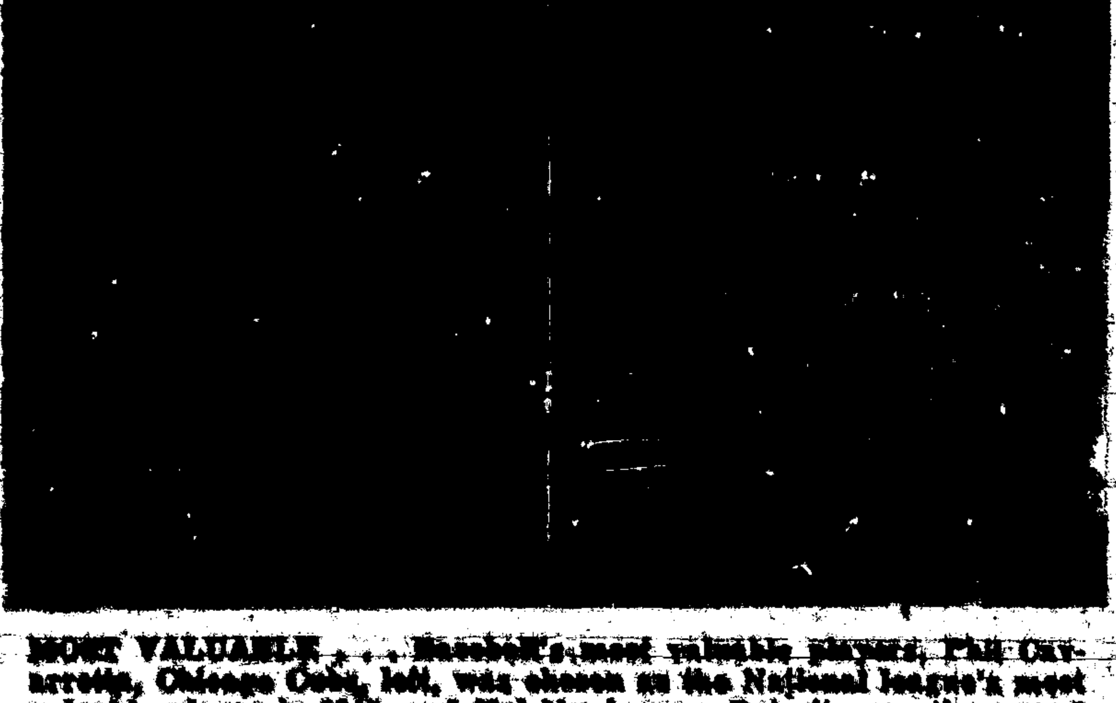
COMPLICATIONS FOR BIG FOUR . . . While the Big Four conference in Paris faces many difficult problems involving treaties and claims and boundaries, the Turkish situation presents future complications. In the dark areas shown are the three buffer states of the Near East and Middle East. Here the strategic and economic interests of Russia and the western powers meet. Control of the Dardanelles is a vital issue and Russia has sought to press claims on Turkey's eastern frontiers. Arrows on the map show how use of the straits cuts 3,000 miles from the supply line to Russia. At the opening sessions the Big Four sidestepped the troublesome Trieste and Italian colonial questions and began the consideration of the Italian-French frontier, the size of Italy's future armed strength and disposal of her surplus shipping. France's proposal to add internationalization of the Ruhr and detachment of the Rhineland from Germany to the agenda, added further complications. British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin caused another upset by insisting that Belgian, Dutch and Luxembourg representatives be permitted to sit in on such negotiations as spokesmen for nations which suffered heavily through German aggression.



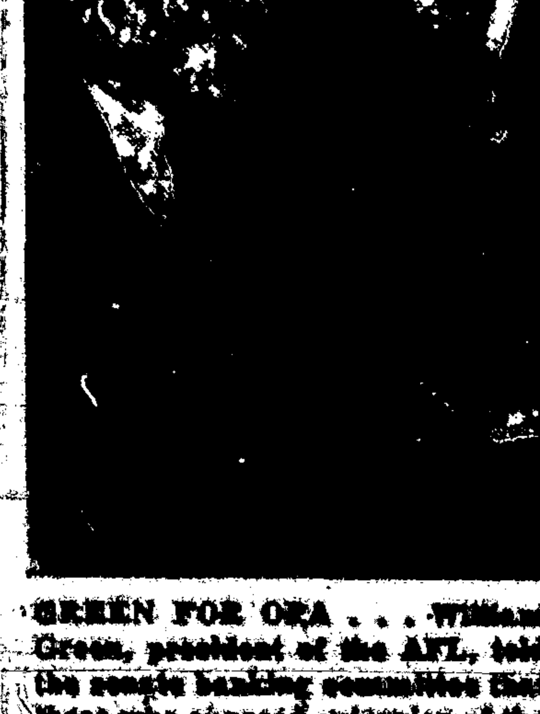
TO INVESTIGATE FRANCO'S GOVERNMENT . . . Committee of the U. N. security council which will investigate the charges that Generalissimo Franco's government in Spain is a menace to world peace and security. Left to right: Oscar Lange, Poland; Henri Bonnet, France; Pedro Velloso, Brazil; Paul Hasluck, Australia, and Hsushi Shu, China.

YOUNGSTERS STUDY AT FBI ACADEMY . . . Kenny Rose, Dick Little and Hugh McMahon, cub scouts of Falls Church, Va., look over a small section of the huge "model city" which is part of the equipment used by the FBI national academy in teaching traffic problems to special FBI and local police from all over the nation who come to learn modern police science. Thousands of youngsters visit the FBI monthly.

TEA TIME FOR TRILBY . . . Trilby, leader of the elephant herd of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus, shows his latest tea cup.



MOST VALUABLE . . . Baseball's most valuable players, Phil Cavarretta, Chicago Cubs, left, was chosen as the National league's most valuable player in 1945, and Hal Newhouser, Detroit, won the award for the most valuable player in American league. Both men show promise of being leading contenders for the high honor this season.



GREEN FOR OPA . . . William Green, president of the AFL, told the senate banking committee that those who opposed extension of the OPA were a "death lobby." He demanded it be continued intact.

SENATORS URGE RULE CHANGE

WASHINGTON.—Ten senators—Democrats and Republicans—got together secretly the other day to study that most sacred of all sacred cows—senate rules. Behind their meeting was the conviction that die-hard Dixie Democrats can block any measure they oppose via the filibuster, and that the majority must rule if democracy is to function in the U. S. A.

The secret meeting took place after senators received a flood of letters both for and against the attempt by Wayne Morse, Oregon Republican, to secure passage of the anti-poll tax bill through unanimous consent of the senate. Only senators on the floor at the time Morse attempted this strategy were Morse himself and Republican William Langer of North Dakota.

Liberal Democrat Warren Magnuson of Seattle, Wash., was presiding. Had he immediately asked senators if there was objection, there would have been none and the anti-poll tax bill would have passed. Morse had identified the bill only by number, so Magnuson did not at once recognize it. But, even if he had, probably he would have hesitated to pass a controversial bill without debate.

He was rescued from this dilemma by Senator Ernest MacFarland, Arizona Democrat, who quickly came to the floor and objected.

Since then, senate mail has been strong with letters both objecting to the Morse attempt as trickery and supporting Morse on the ground that this strategy was no more unfair than the filibuster.

Regardless of the above merits, a bipartisan group of ten senators has determined that senate rules must be changed. They seek to limit debate on any single bill to ten days, which would bring up the anti-poll tax bill, already passed by the house, before the senate recesses. They are thinking also of bringing up legislation to create a permanent FEPC—provided they succeed in winning their amendment to the senate rules.

The ten senators are: Democrats—Pepper (Fla.) Magnuson (Wash.), Guffey (Pa.), Glen Taylor (Idaho), Huffman (Ohio), Kilgore (W. Va.), and Mead (N. Y.); Republicans—Ferguson (Mich.), Knowland (Cal.) and Capper (Kan.).

FINAL PEARL HARBOR REPORT

Believe it or not, but the long-delayed reports on the Pearl Harbor investigation at last are being whipped into shape. They will not be published until around June, but here is the inside story on how the final verdict is shaping up.

The Democratic majority on the committee, led by Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, will absolve the two top military leaders in Washington—Gen. George Marshall and Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Harold R. Stark—of major responsibility. They will receive some minor rebukes, especially for poor co-ordination of army and navy intelligence; but nothing serious.

Democratic members of the committee also will absolve the state department of any blame and will let major blame rest where the original Roberts report contended it belonged—on the shoulders of army and navy commanders in the Hawaiian area—General Short and Admiral Kimmel.

Republican members of the committee will file a sharply worded minority report upholding Short and Kimmel and charging (1) that Short and Kimmel weren't sufficiently advised by Washington about intercepted Jap messages presaging the Pearl Harbor attack; and (2) that the two officers weren't provided with enough long-range patrol planes to spot the Jap fleet.

PATTON'S DIARY

The war's stormiest hero, Gen. George S. Patton, was the center of many a controversy before he died. But today the war department is still sitting on one of the hottest of Patton's hot potatoes—the general's secret diary.

Only a few people in the war department and the Patton family knew it, but the famous general kept a careful diary all during the Normandy campaign, jotting down his frank comments about the Allies and even about his superior officers. Some of the comments just about burned up the page.

General Patton especially paid his compliments to the famous British field marshal, Montgomery, whom he criticized with almost the same bluntness as the soldier in the Sicilian hospital whom he slapped.

CHIPS FROM A GRANITE LIFE

Most people have forgotten, but it was Harlan Stone to whom the nation owes a debt for picking J. Edgar Hoover as head of the FBI. When Stone became attorney general, he swept out Burns and selected a young career man, Hoover, to take his place. No one had ever heard of Hoover before . . . Stone was kicked upstairs from the justice department to the Supreme court by Coolidge when Stone dared move against Andrew Mellon's aluminum trust.

REPORT ON THE RUSSIANS.....

INSTALLMENT FIFTEEN

The thing I liked best of all about the Soviet Union, and it is one we would do well to copy, is the intelligently decent Russian attitude toward minority races. They are helped without being patronized, and they have developed self-respect and an understandable gratitude. If they have no real freedom, neither do the Russians.

While this Soviet racial-colonial policy may not be so good as our handling of the Philippine Islands, it is infinitely better than our bungling and thoughtless treatment of the Negro.

We fly south out of Siberia, down into the ancient Oriental peoples now ruled by the Soviet Union.

Suddenly we are crossing a huge blue lake. It is so big that when land drops away behind us we still cannot see the shore ahead. When it does appear, we see the beginning of a rolling desert. On our left a chain of blue, snow-capped mountains rises like a fence. Geologically, they seem about as old as our Rockies. On the east side of this fence is China.

—Entire factories have been moved from one part of Russia to another.

We enter Kazakstan, of which Alma-Ata is the capital. The Kazak people are part of the savage nomadic tribes who, for a thousand years have pressed against Europe and once formed a part of the armies of Genghis Khan and Tamerlane and Atilla's Huns.

When Europe invented the rifle, they sank from the status of a terrible menace to that of a constantly harassing threat.

In the past few centuries the Russian people have been pouring through the Urals to colonize Siberia. The Russians had to struggle with these savage Mongolian nomads, whose culture was only a little higher than that of our American Indians. They battled the equivalent of Geronimo and Sitting Bull and they have their Custers who made valiant Last Stands, but who finally, after a series of border wars, opened the continent to the White Man. We penned our Indians up in reservations. The Russians found another solution as we shall see.

We step out onto Alma-Ata airport at the base of the foothills into a country exactly like that around Boulder, Colorado, or Colorado Springs. The trees, the scenery, even the weeds are the same.

The prominent Russians and the prominent Kazaks wear immaculate white raw silk suits. Alma-Ata, like Denver, is on an irrigated plain with mountains rising in the background. We pass through cornfields, where sunflowers grow along the irrigation ditches—again—exactly like Colorado. The farm houses are of sun-baked brick, made of clay and straw—the adobe of our Southwest.

This Soviet Denver is a sprawling Russian town, which before the war had 180,000 people and now has 400,000.

That evening after the customary banquet we go to the local opera, where they give a performance based on an old Kazak folk tale. The actors are all Kazaks as are the words, music and costumes. It is a beautiful show, and gives us a vivid idea of what these people once were like. The costumes are clearly derived from the Chinese and a musician picks out a haunting Oriental tune on what looks like a Chinese banjo while a pair of twin Kazak boys sing.

All of their culture came over the mountains with them but it is preserved only here in the opera, for the clothing of those we see in the streets is not picturesque, but is a drab composite of clean patches indistinguishable from the rest of the Soviet Union.

Next morning they take us for a drive out through the irrigated river valley, past pink adobe houses like those of New Mexico (lacking only the strings of red peppers) to a great Soviet experimental station—one of four in the Kazakstan Republic. Kazakstan is four-fifths the size of all Europe exclusive of Russia, but it is largely arid like our American dust-bowl.

This is a fruit farm, where under irrigation they raise apricots, peaches, cherries and plums. They are keenly interested in the plum which they recently brought here from Canada, and is already producing more than twenty-five pounds of fruit per tree. In this particular orchard they use the most modern pipe system of subterranean irrigation. They are proudest of their vineyards; in 1914 they had 3,000 hectares of land in grapes. Now they have 30,000.

Workers on this state farm get only 300 roubles a month in salary, but at the end of the season they get a produce dividend of about 700 kilograms (roughly 1,500 pounds) of vegetables, which includes corn, melons and pumpkins. Then each has his own irrigated garden plot—about a quarter of an acre for each worker. They may sell the produce dividend on the free market, at prices lower than the Moscow free market.

The director gets 1,700 roubles a month and pays monthly 35 roubles for two large rooms in a big house he shares with someone else. The rent, he says, is figured on the basis of 1 rouble, 30 kopeks, per square meter of dwelling space. In American figures, this is about 10 cents a square yard.

Eisenstein is of German-Jewish origin. He is a short, fast-thinking, friendly little man. He and his staff wear colored polo shirts with short sleeves in the Hollywood manner, and Eisenstein wears a well-cut white linen suit.

He is filming the life of Ivan the Terrible. Ivan is one of the newly resurrected Soviet heroes. Eisenstein speaks fluent English, with a slight but agreeable accent.

The name of the President-Premier of Kazakstan is Nutras Undasinov. He is a pleasant, kindly old Comanche or Sioux, who except for his European clothes, might be the dignified tribal chief you would meet on any Indian reservation. Most of his cabinet ministers are also Kazaks, but there are a few blue-eyed, blond Russians present. The Russians, however, are in the background.

The Kazaks tell us the people racially belong to the Turkoman-Mongol group, and fought for independence as early as the twelfth century, when the southeastern part of the present republic was under the rule of the Chinese Seventh Dynasty. Later they adopted the Mohammedan religion. The title of the hereditary ruler was the Khan—as in Kublai Khan and Genghis Khan. The Mohammedan religion is still popular—many people go to the mosque.

But Kazakstan is now one of the Soviet republics and has a great measure of independence; recently it was given the right of a separate foreign minister.

Joyce turning to the premier says, "You say now this is an independent republic; well, tell us about some of the conflicts you've had with the central government."

The premier says there haven't been many conflicts, and lets it rest at that.

"You say that you have the right to send ministers to other countries; who will you send them to? Will you send one to America?"

A big Russian down at the end of the table, hitherto silent, now tactfully leans forward and suggests that such ministers will be sent to those countries most useful to them commercially.

Joyce turns back to the premier. "Are you going to send one to America or not?"

Of course, that would be decided in Moscow, the premier explains.

The premier explains at the time of the 1917 Revolution the people were 93 per cent illiterate. Today illiteracy is gone, and the Soviets have built many theaters and schools. Naturally, the people are grateful, so why should there be any disputes with the Moscow government?

The premier explains that the people elect delegates to a regional Soviet, who send delegates to the Kazakstan Soviet, who chose him as premier.

"All right. Now ask him how Stalin got his job; we want to understand it. Ask him that."

The handsome Russian down at the end of the table leans forward and explains smoothly and briefly the intricacies of the Soviet electoral system. He did it politely and there was no feeling that he was brushing the premier aside; only helping him over the hard places.

Likewise when we ask how many refugees are here, it is the alert and friendly Russian who tells us that a million are still here, although many have already gone back to the reconquered territory.

They now present Eric with a complete Kazak costume which consists of a gold-embroidered robe more gorgeous than anything I have seen this side of a Shriner's convention. But its crowning glory is a hood of red velvet, with ear flaps the size of soup plates, and the whole, including the ear flaps, is lined with silver fox fur.

The party they gave us at the hotel that night was the most pleasant we attended in the Soviet Union. It was the most informal. The dinner was elaborate as usual, but it wasn't stiff. The local notables were easy, friendly notables.

There is an attractive girl—she teaches dancing at the local academy and she speaks fairly fluent good English but curiously awkward. She explains she learned it from books and until now has never spoken with an American or an Englishman.

There are vice premiers, councilors and members of the local government, some Russian and some Kazak. There are also half a dozen stars from the local opera—all Kazaks. There are twin boys in their teens, who sang last night, now resplendent in twin Tuxedos, of which they are very proud. There is a Kazak girl of about twenty, who danced the role of the Oriental princess with the cruel father. She could be any of the pretty Indian girls who, when Indians had oil money, were sought after by sororities at the University of Kansas.

Then there are two older artists—women in their forties, who, except that they look like sisters-in-law of Madame Chiang Kai-shek, could be any of the Russian artists who have entertained us in the other towns. Their evening dresses are just as good, they have as many gold teeth, but in addition they wear beautiful Oriental jewelry set with precious stones—old Kazak workmanship worthy of a museum.

Most of all, we liked them as people. They were gentle and friendly, and obviously had never been warned against foreigners. Almost the same thing could be said of the Russians. That invisible barrier of tension and suspicion which separates Russians from all foreigners had been slowly dissolving since we left Moscow. Here in Kazakstan, it disappeared entirely.

We have now left Kazakstan and enter the neighboring Socialist Soviet Republic of Uzbekistan, whose capital is the ancient Mohammedan city of Tashkent. I am riding in the caboose plane with the correspondents. The buffet service is as good as in the plane ahead. It even includes fresh strawberries, taken on at Alma-Ata. Dick Lauterbach pays a visit to the toilet and returns shaking his head.

"I'll never get used to them. Five thousand feet above a howling desert they serve us strawberries, caviar and champagne, and then I go back there and find nobody has remembered to empty the chemical bucket for three days."

The crowd of airport-greeters, as at Alma-Ata, are wearing white silk suits. Again half are Russian and half local Orientals. The local boys are known as Uzbeks. The jackets of all Russian white silk suits button up to the collarbone and have high turned-down collars like the Chinese. They wear caps of the same white pongee silk.

The cap, incidentally, is a relic of revolutionary days and was symbolic of the working class, since only bourgeois exploiters wore felt hats. Recently, the government began making felt hats, explaining that in the new Russia, they need no longer be regarded as a badge of shame. However, all the old-time Bolsheviks still cling to caps. Nesterov always wears one. Mike Kalugin wore one. And, of course, Stalin, in all his pictures. As a hall-mark of the old Bolshevik aristocracy, the cap is probably politically safer than the hat.

RUSSIAN LABOR NOT ALLOWED TO ORGANIZE

I CANNOT FATHOM the reasoning of those leaders of labor who father the demands of the workers for increased wages, changes in working conditions, insistence on seniority regardless of merit; who foment strikes to enforce the demands they create, and go so far as to defy government, and then endorse and approve communism. Many of those labor leaders are loud in their approval of the dictatorial government of Russia, and do all they can to install the same system of government in this country. In Russia that system of government does not tolerate such activities as these men follow in America. The conditions that labor, under the leadership of those admiring communists, refuse to consider in this country, are all, and more, than the established practices under the Russian dictatorship.

Labor in this country objects to and, as a rule, refuses to accept the piece work system. The poor worker must be paid regardless of his ability to produce. The capable worker is encouraged to slow down on production to meet the speed of the sloth.

In Russia the worker is paid by the piece. He is also assigned a stint, and failure to meet that assigned quantity and quality of production calls for a fine or imprisonment. Workers are paid a bonus for exceeding the assigned stint, and, when they do meet it the stint is increased.

Superintendents of government-owned and operated plants are paid high salaries; provided with fine homes, equipped with all modern conveniences, and are paid a bonus for forcing increased production in the plant by driving the workers.

WAGES OF ALL WORKERS FIXED BY GOVERNMENT

THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT fixes the wages of all workers. It designates the hours, the place of employment, and all working conditions. Labor unions, or labor leaders, as we know them, are not tolerated. In Russia the worker is a serf. He is not a free man.

If that is what the Russian people want we can have no reasonable objection, but why do some labor leaders in America advocate the Russian system for this country? For us to adopt the Russian system of government would mean the labor leader would be out of a job, and the worker would have no voice in the matter of hours, wages, working conditions or place of employment. Individually or collectively he would have nothing to say. He would do just as he was told, or else.

No, I cannot fathom the reasoning of the labor leader who advocates the communistic system for America.

It is quite possible that those communistically inclined labor leaders are phonies. It may be they are serving a foreign master as fifth columnists, wolves in sheep's clothing, a master whose every practice and precept is diametrically opposed to what the American worker considers his best interest. If that is true why does organized labor permit them to promote their diabolical schemes under the banner of American labor? It might be well for labor to do some house cleaning if it is to further its own interest, and retain the respect of the American public. Something of the same thing can apply to our federal government.

SOME OF THE industrial wage and hour disputes have been settled for a time. There will be a constant stream of others. Whatever the result it is only temporary. No basis on which wages and hours will be adjusted has been arrived at. Increased wages today but means new demands for tomorrow, and that will continue until there is some recognized method of determining the workers' share in production returns. It is the consumer, who is never consulted, who must pay the price in increased costs of commodities.

3-Ton Candle Expected To Last 1,800 Years

As a memorial to Enrico Caruso, the largest candle in history was made in New York in 1924 and set up in Naples, but it is now in Rome, where it was sent for safekeeping, when Italy entered the war, says Collier's.

Requiring the work of five men for four months, this candle is 18 feet in height, 7 feet in circumference, weighs 3 tons and cost about $5,000. Lighted for 24 hours on every All Souls' Day, it is expected to last at least 1,800 years.

Parley Vee

A young man was knocked down by an automobile in Montreal. The auto sped away and a nearby policeman ran to the assistance of the stricken pedestrian.

Not knowing whether he spoke English or French, the policeman inquired: "Parlez-vous Francais?"

To which the chap on the street replied: "No! No! Chevolay coopay!"

How to CHANGE A TIRE AT NIGHT...

More Quickly—More Safely!

1 Few motorists can change a tire at night with top speed, efficiency—and safety! Night tire-changing can be hazardous—but "Eveready" flashlights can reduce the danger. First principle, says the American Automobile Assn., is...

2 Park off the highway if you can possibly do so. Next best place is on a straight stretch of road. If you must park on a curve, a light should be set on the road some distance back. Be sure neither you nor a bystander blocks off the view of your tail-light!

3 Keep all your tire-changing tools tied or boxed together, where you can pick them up without searching. Remove your spare before jacking up car; removing it later might push car off jack. If alone, set flashlight on a stone in convenient position.

4 In your car or at home—wherever you need a flashlight—rely only on "Eveready" batteries. Ask for them by name. For "Eveready" batteries have no equals... that's why you'll find them in more flashlights than any other battery in the world!
