Indian Railroad Emoloye Found Mangled on Tracks

Manuel Second, 47, member of a well known Mescalero Indian family was found Wednesday morning at Omlee about five miles south of town on the railroad tracks badly mangled. He was found by the section men and apparently had been dead a number of hours.

A coroner's inquest was held by Justice of the Peace H. B. Howerton and jury. The jury did not find much definite further than he was hit by a train.

The victim had left home Sunday and told his wife he was going to Corona to get his pay check. He had been a carpenter on the railroad bridge gang for several years. It is believed that he had been dead some ten or twelve hours before being found.

Marks on the body which seemed rather doubtful of being made by the train were disclosed by Dr. Simms not to have been sufficient to cause death —Alamogordo News.

Slippery roads caused several cars to skid off the highway on Indian Divide Sunday resulting in bent fenders and other minor damages, but no one was injured.

Great Lakes, Ill., Jan. 3, 1946. Eugene D. Erickson, GM 2-c was honorably discharged from this naval ceporation center on January 2nd. His home is Ruidoso, New Mexico.

BLUE BOOK TO BE DEDICATED TO NEW MEXICO'S 200TH.

SANTA FE, N. M., DEC. 20, 1945—A World War II detailed campaign of the 200th Coast Artillery has been submitted to the office of the Secretary of State to be published in the Blue Book which is to be dedicated to this New Mexico National Guard Regiment, Colonel Rufus Sedillo stated today in Santa Fe. The account of the campaign was written by Colonel Charles G. Sage of Deming, New Mexico, Commanding Officer of the 200th who later became Brigade Commander of the Luzon Force Groupment "A" which included the 200th and the 515th Coast Artillery. Colonel Sedillo stated that the article was a splendid day by day description of the assignments and positions defended by the New Mexico Guardsmen during their Philippine campaign and also of their initial training in the United States.

According to statistics furnished by Colonel Harry H. Peck, of Albuquerque, Executive Officer of the 200th and later Commanding Officer of the 515th Coast Artillery, 1841 New Mexicans constituted the 200th Coast Artillery when the Japs attacked the Philippines on December 7, 1941. By the time they surrendered on April 9, 1942, 29 had been killed in action. After V-J Day, 1022 of the original 200th personnel were released from Japanese prison camps and 810 remained listed as dead or missing. Forty-five per cent of this crack New Mexico National Guard Unit gave their lives for their country before V-J Day.

THE MARCH OF DIMES.

For the first time in thirteen years, the March of Dimes, annual appeal of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, is being held January 14-31 without the living presence of the man who inaugurated the fight against infantile paralysis and became its symbol: our late president, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The cause for which he fought so valiently is bequeathed to the American public. The fight is not yet won. We must reinforce our strength and increase our effort until final victory is achieved.

Join the March of Dimes, January 14-31.

This appeal by the National Foundation for Infantile paralysis is for funds to treat the victims of poliomyelitis regardless of age, race or creed.

54 TO BE COMPLETED

Sometime in this merry month of January 1946, Highway 54 is due to receive some improvements and paving, which have been so much needed for so many years.

According to state highway officials, Governor Dempsey and others plans and specifications for the completion of this road are to be started south of Carrizozo, and will be continued over a period of three years. Ten million dollars are to be used for primary and secondary roads in New Mexico of which the Federal government will furnish approximately two-thirds.

It is something for which to look forward when we can drive out 54 and have pavement and oiled road all the way to El Paso, or all the way to California if we wish to drive that far.

This is something for which local citizens and 54 fans have longed and now that the realization is definite, joy is unanimous.

Mrs. Anna Brazel of Carrizozo went to Tularosa Christmas day for dinner with her son, Mr. Mack Brazel and family.

The family is looking forward to the visit of Paul, who has been overseas for a good many months, and is now enroute home.

Lt. Fred Homer English, who has been overseas, somewhere in the Pacific area, has arrived home and will be discharged soon.

NEW MEXICO FARM AND LIVESTOCK BUREAU

The farmers of New Mexico have long felt the need of a strong state organization. Farmers and live stock men represent by far the largest segment of our population, yet, so loosely have they been organized when legislative matters come up for consideration, that their wishes have often been pushed aside without due consideration.

In the future, it is going to be different. In matters affecting their interests, farmers will never again be so lightly considered. They now are organized in sixteen counties of the state. Machinery was set up at their annual convention recently held in Albuquerque to push their organization into every county in the state.

The Farm Bureau is the strongest organization of its kind in the world. It numbers one million farm families as members. Its voting strength runs into the millions. Its voice is now heard, not only at the nation's capitol, but in the state capitols as well. Its achievements during the past year were the greatest in all its history.

Its program and philosophy are a square deal for all and special privileges for none. It is progressive in its thinking. It has its roots deep down in the American way of life. It is in a better position today to defeat foolish laws and drive foreign "isms" from the land than any other organization. Its program and its fight are to keep, inviolate and sacred, the principles that made this the greatest nation on earth. It stands for free enterprise, and the American farm home. It stands for an American standard of living for the farmer and his just share of the national income.

No organization succeeds without members and money. Programs are worth little unless followed through. We should put on a membership drive and not stop until we have 25,000 members and all counties of the state organized.

Michigan is a labor state beset by perpetual strikes, yet that state is just closing its most successful Farm Bureau year. It has six hundred organized communities of minute men who come immediately on call to put its program across.

The New Mexico Farm and Live Stock Bureau at its convention authorized a one hundred dollar club. Surely five hundred men will want to join this club. We need and will have, if funds permit, a full time executive secretary and an organization director to push organization in all counties of the state and, in addition, an office secretary. When all counties are organized and we number 5,000 members, our state and national representatives will be glad to help us kill bad laws and enact good ones.

THE AFTERMATH OF WAR.

President Truman asks those who will to assist in the Nationwide Clothing Drive. Reports give the following shocking details of war torn countries:

Cities, the reports state, have been suffering serious epidemics of pulmonary tuberculosis, bacillary dysentery, typhoid fever, diptheria, pneumonia, scabies and various skin diseases caused by exposure and malnutrition.

In France, where the war left two million people homeless, the infant death rate has climbed to 75% of the country's birth rate. The bombed-out people of Holland are living in chicken runs and leaky shacks, and are suffering from skin ailments. From Greece come letters telling of thousands living in mountain caves.

A cablegram from China stated: "Bed-ridden and helpless persons having no change of garments suffer dysentery, cholera and similar infectious diseases with the result that they are lying in indescribable filth which is likely to reinfect them and to contaminate others. The sick, helpless and even well persons often are drenched and have no dry clothing.

"The cold weather adds the threat of gangrene and deaths from exposure. Finally, the serious need for clothing extends to normally self-sufficient classes, particularly to white collar, educational and governmental employees whose income has fallen sharply below living costs. These groups have long since sold needed clothing as well as other possessions to secure funds for food."

From Czechoslovakia, where the winters are severe, a relief worker reports that children have to pool their clothes. To permit one child to go out two must remain in bed. The Vice-Lord Mayor of Prague had only one dress to wear.

The wife of a university professor writes from Belgium, "When you speak of Ordinary Things in your meetings you do not realize our absolute lack of Ordinary Things, and that even a common handkerchief is a gift of importance to us. There has not been one single thing sent to us that has not given joy and made us feel grateful and touched. The children are happier with a pair of shoes or socks or a pretty colored sweater than with lollypops?!"

Americans contributed sufficient clothing, shoes and bedding in the nation-wide clothing drive of April, the United National Clothing Collection, to aid 25,000,000 people in Europe, China and the Philippines. Supplementing the U. S. contributions, the people of Canada, Australia and New Zealand have given approximately 20 million pounds of used clothing for overseas relief.

AN OLD INDIAN CUSTOM.

"Many blankets from American homes are now walking down the rubble-strewn streets of European villages on the backs of men." This is the observation of Sgt. Thomas Brownlie, of New York City.

Noticing man after man wearing an overcoat obviously made from a blanket, Sgt. Brownlie inquired about them and learned that the blankets were distributed by UNRRA workers who said that they had been donated by the American people in the United National Clothing Collection last spring. Resourceful wives decided that their husbands needed coats to wear to work this winter even worse than their families needed warm bed covers.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bule, who have been living at Cuervo, for about two years where he has been employed in the S. P. Signal Service will move to Utah this month, where he will be employed by the Southern Pacific. Mrs. Bule was formerly Edna Littleton of Carrizozo.

Mrs. Bob White and infant son, and her sister Hope Snow spent the 27th and 28th at Las Cruces with Lt. White's family.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe McBrayer have returned to their home at Slaton, Texas, after spending Christmas here with Mr. and Mrs. Andy McBrayer. Joe subscribed for the News-Outlook while here.

Cpl. Ernest Campbell has arrived at his home in Ruidoso after spending a long period as a paratrooper in the Pacific War Zone. He has been presented with the Purple Heart on three occasions, has been awarded the Presidential citation and other decorations for distinguished service. He is a brother to Miss Gloria Campbell and to Mrs. Bill Marler of Ruidoso.

Father of Freedom

Washington believed so thoroughly in the preservation of individual freedom as a basis for national progress that he dedicated his life toward that end.

Today, all America must be constantly alert against influences that are at work to change the American Way and remove the "free" from free enterprise and free chartered banking.

Congress Should Listen To Voice of the People

NOW that a new year has begun, it is a good time to take stock of the Washington scene and the position in which the government finds itself. Scanning the record, that position looks none too good. In the first place, out of the 21-point program which President Truman sent to the congress back in September, only three points have been acted upon by both houses.

These three include the bills to create a single surplus war property administrator, about which more will be written later; to provide for limited tax revision; and for government reorganization. Since September, the President in special messages, has asked for universal military training, for compulsory health insurance, and for fact-finding panels and cooling off periods to head off industrial strife. Aside from the three measures passed, all the other presidential proposals have either been emasculated, held up in committees, or completely ignored up on Capitol Hill. The President has been criticized in some quarters because he has not gone to bat with congress and fought harder for enactment of his program for reconversion and postwar economy.

What of War Powers?

And this criticism brings up an important question which the people most certainly should consider if we are to get the most out of our democratic form of government. President Truman still holds his almost unlimited power under the wartime act. Most folks will agree that during wartime it was necessary that the chief executive exercise this dictorial power reaching into almost all places of our national life and national economy.

But now that the fighting is over and the country is attempting to get back onto a peacetime basis, the question is: "Shall the President continue to exercise that wartime power?" In other words, the President could seize all industry tied up in strikes and operate them; he could direct the foreign policy of the nation; he could fix wages and set prices; he could do all these things and many more under the power that he now holds, but will lose next June 30.

President Truman, however, as was President Roosevelt before him, is loathe to use this power because, if he did so, this government in peacetime would be operating as a dictator nation and not as a democracy governed by the consent of the governed. And the very organizations and individuals who are now loud in their criticism of the President, who claim he is lacking in program and initiative, would be the first to raise their voices in protest over the first dictatorial act.

Public Opinion Rules

This country and its democratic institutions must of necessity be guided by public opinion. No law, no act of our leaders will long withstand the force of an opposing public. The point is, however, what is the opinion of the public on these vital domestic and foreign questions?

Here in Washington are heard only the voices of the vocal minority and pressure groups. We hear these voices on foreign policy, we hear them on elimination of price and rent control; they are heard on farm questions, surpluses, parity prices, conservation, the Missouri Valley authority; the question of strikes . . . what about Russia . . . wage increases . . . the cost of living . . . so-called socialized medicine . . . a thousand-and-one questions.

Are these loud and consistent voices from minority groups here in Washington the considered opinion of the American public . . . of the men and women in the 16,000 home towns of the nation . . . of the 52,000,000 farm and rural area folks . . . of the millions in our teeming cities?

It would seem to your home town reporter that now would be a good time to really let our legislators know what the folks back home actually think about all these vital questions. It all boils down to the question of whether the nation, under our democratic form of government, is to be guided by a unified spoken public opinion on both foreign and domestic affairs, or whether the decisions of the congress and the President are to be controlled by the minority lobbies.

Danger of Lobbies

These lobbies, however, are so powerful and persistent, that a real crisis can break out any time. All this talk about the "invisible government" that we used to hear is not merely wild imagining. There are hundreds of well-paid, shrewd lobbyists in Washington, all skilled at getting the legislation they want passed for the interests they represent. Many are highly successful. They constitute a real danger to our traditions of government, and could bring on a disastrous reaction.

IN THESE UNITED STATES . . . At Miami Beach, Fla., they relax in the shade of palm trees (left), while the temperature soars into the 80s. But it is a different story on New York's Fifth avenue, where old man winter paid a visit. Right, shows Fifth avenue crowd fighting a 12-inch fall of snow which tied up traffic. Buffalo reported four feet of snow, while northern cities announced that they welcomed a white Christmas.

Lower left: The army's "Block Buster" special was being tried out to carry 12,000 pounds of bombs to be dropped on Berlin, when war ended. Upper right: Drawing of army XB-29, six-engine superbomber of the pusher type, faster and more powerful than the superfortress. It is now in process of assembly by the army.

SOLDIER IN IRON LUNG . . . Cpl. Walter H. Hargrave, Topeka, Kan., arrives at Hamilton Field, Calif., with Nurse Lt. Peggy O'Neal, Bridgeport, Conn. Corporal Hargrave made the 11,000-mile trip from Calcutta, India, via an air transport. This was the longest trip in iron lung.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

TRUMAN DUCKS QUESTION OF SECOND TERM

Democratic Rep. Edward Herbert of Louisiana and Mayor Robert Maestri of New Orleans discovered this when they called at the White House the other day.

Maestri reminded Truman that the Louisiana delegation was among the first to support him for vice president at the 1944 Democratic convention in Chicago. Then he added:

"We hope to cast our votes for you for President at the next convention."

Truman chuckled good-naturedly but that was all.

"All I can say to that," he replied, "is that I'm just doing a job here from day to day and letting the future take care of itself."

CLOTHING FOR VETERANS

Chief dilemma faced by the returning war veteran when it comes to new clothes is that either he will get clothes or his wife and sweetheart will get them. There aren't going to be enough for both.

In this choice between man and wife there is no question as to where the U. S. government stands at least in theory—on the side of the man. He has been away fighting, his old clothes are moth-eaten and he deserves something to wear. Getting them for him, however, may be another matter.

Bottleneck of the entire problem boils down to linings. Wool clothing for men must have linings. This means rayon and cotton. At present the wool and worsted situation is improving and there probably will be almost enough for 1946.

But rayons and cottons are different. In the first place most of their production was allocated to war uses and it takes some time to get mills reconverted. Second, and here is where the sex problem comes in, most of the rayon and cotton now available for civilian use has been going to women.

In other words, women are getting the rayon blouses, the slips, the undies and other things they like to wear. Meanwhile the much more prosaic but absolutely necessary lining for men's suits is left out in the cold. In addition, the hosiery manufacturers are even asking for, and getting, a lot of rayon poundage for stockings, despite the fact that nylon is coming back.

WHY WOMEN GET BREAK

Chief reasons for this channelling of clothes to women, despite the needs of veterans, are:

1. Higher prices and more profits in women's apparel. Men's clothing manufacturers blame this on OPA.

2. The War Production board last fall issued priorities on cotton and rayon in order to spur production of medium-priced clothing, but for some strange reason entirely omitted the bottleneck of men's suits—linings.

Since then the WPB has been abolished, but its successor, the civilian production administration, if anything, perhaps, has done a little worse. Well-meaning Herbert Rose head of the CPA textile division, who has sublime faith in the efficacy of priorities under any and all circumstances, has proceeded to grant priorities to "hardship" cases for coat linings. By the end of November, 100 "hardship" cases had received lining priorities from Washington alone with scores of other priorities issued by CPA branch offices, making the whole situation more snarled than ever.

Meanwhile, Frank Chester Bowles, who has done more to protect the American consumer than any one else in Washington, readily admits that he has made a mistake in clothing. His problem, however, is whether to get an army of women's clothing dealers on his neck by decreasing the ceilings on women's clothes, or whether to boost the price of clothes for men by allowing higher price ceilings on their clothes.

One or the other probably will be necessary even in addition to the plan for voluntary rationing of men's clothing and the issuing of clothing certificates to men at separation centers.

Now we in this country have a great form of government and a great basic concept of getting along with our neighbors. And it's time we went out as Christ did and tried to sell our American religion.

CAPITAL CHAFF

"I've been reading the platforms of the two major political parties for the past 40 years," remarked Con. Carter Manasco of Alabama, who did so much to sabotage the full employment bill. "Well, if everything called for in those platforms had been carried out, the country would have been ruined now." . . . "Most significant thing about the Republican's Chicago convention to me," remarked "Cap" Harding, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, "is the excellent planning."

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Marine, fed up with a columnist's poison about FDR, etc., picked him up bodily and tossed him from the bar into the lobby.

After the San Francisco Conference, a Russian attache visited Hollywood as the guest of Gregory Ratoff, the director. . . . Ratoff pointed out numerous movie queens. . . . On one set Ratoff sighed: "They are all so beautiful, but, unfortunately, they don't stay happily married very long!" . . . "In Russia," explained the visitor, "one reason marriages last longer is that a wife looks the same after washing her face!"

At the 400 (which features named bands) a Broadway song plugger had too much to drink and started being a bore.

"Oh," oh'd Lenore Lemmon, "climb back into your flack!"

Errol Flynn's forthcoming book, "The Showdown," is said to be better than his first book. . . . As Flynn strolled with his friend, artist John Decker, John remarked: "I wonder if Hollywood will believe you wrote it?"

"Yes," said Errol, "if they think it's not good."

In Ciro's the other midnight Jack Haley was seated near an actor who had just lost a chance for a choice role in a film. He was popping off about "all the inefficient directors, blind producers, two-timing agents, etc." . . . Jack turned to his wife Flo and niftied: "Pardon me, honey, but I think I smell somebody burning."

Lee Sullivan, the singer, relays the yarn about the two shipwrecked drama critics. They drifted for weeks on a raft. . . . The more frightened of the two started seeking forgiveness for his sins.

"I've been a louse all my life," he said. "I've been cruel to actors. Too often I went out of my way to hurt them. If I'm spared, I promise. . . ."

"Just a moment," shouted the other one, "don't go too far. I think I see smoke from a ship!"

An executive of the Scientific Research Development Board had an appointment with Prof. Oppenheimer, the scientist who had so much to do with completing the atomic bomb. . . . Oppenheimer was to have registered at the Statler Hotel in Washington. . . . But the caller was told that he was not registered, and he wasn't. . . . This is why. . . . While the phone operator kept getting important calls for Oppenheimer—he was seated in a far corner of the foyer—patiently waiting for a room! . . . In any other country he would have been given a hotel or a palace. What dopes!

Sportsman R. S. Evans brought this back from California. . . . A street corner prejudist screamed: "There ain't enough room in this country for furriners and us Amurricans." . . . To which a lumbering giant among the listeners interrupted: "Yessiree, especially pale-face foreigners!"

Nothing New Under the Sun Dept: Bob Berryman of the WOR news room has traced the origin of "wolf" as applied to current usage. . . . In the Decameron of Boccaccio, a king with a roving eye was accused of being a "wolf." The Decameron stories were published in the 16th century. . . . This king wanted a man's two daughters as his wives—and the father intoned: "I firmly believeth you to be a king and not a ravening wolf!"

John W. Raper, a Cleveland paragrapher for decades, has put some of his peppigrams between covers. The title is: "What This World Needs." . . . We liked these especially. . . . The theater box office counts the cash, not the applause. . . . Justice is what we get when the decision is in our favor.

Quotation Marksmanship: John W. Raper: Success has made failures of many men. . . . Anon: One man with courage makes a majority. . . . Doris Keane: Romance and marriage are two different things. . . . Voltaire: Satire lies about literary men while they live and eulogy lies about them when they die. . . . Alan Sands: He's one of those in-the-nobodies. . . . Wilson Mizner: There is something about a closet that makes a skeleton terribly restless. . . . Helen Sims: Unplanned as a hiccup.

A PEOPLE DELIVERED

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 6:6-8; 13:17-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will trust, and not be afraid; for the Lord Jehovah even the Lord, is my strength.—Isaiah 12:2.

"Is thy God able to deliver thee?" was the question asked of Daniel in the lions' den (Dan. 6:20). It is in the minds and on the lips of many in every hour of crisis.

God is able to deliver. Moses found that out when in answer to his complaint that the Lord had done nothing for his suffering people (Exod. 5:22), the Lord revealed Himself as the One who was not only able but ready to take them out of their bondage.

I. God's Promise (6:6-8).

Moses was to remember that he was dealing with the Eternal One, unchangeable, and always true to His word and able to make His will come to pass (v. 2, 3).

So often men in dealing with God think of Him in terms of their own weakness and failure. What we need is to have a Godlike conception of God, not a manlike idea of Him. God is the infinite and the Eternal One with whom we have no right to quarrel, and whose dealings with us are too high for us to judge (Ps. 139:1-6).

God's covenant with His people was established (v. 4). He had heard their cry (v. 5), and His deliverance was sure (v. 6). The only thing Moses had to do was to wait and see God work.

That word "wait" is a little one. It seems to call for no effort, to be easy of fulfillment; yet it seems to be the hardest thing for a human being to do. Christians who can speak and work for God when things are active and moving become querulous and despondent when they have to wait or when they are laid aside for a time.

His promise is sure. That is not just a religious sentiment. It is a fact, and it is proved by history.

II. God's Plan (13:17-19).

There was a direct, easy road along the coast of the Mediterranean up to Canaan, but God with His pillar of cloud and fire did not lead in that way.

How strange that He should take them by a longer, more difficult way! Not at all. He knew the danger of the easy way. It was there that the warlike Philistines would be lying in ambush. Such immediate conflict would discourage Israel and tempt them to return to the fleshpots of Egypt. So He took them the other way.

Note that God's guidance for them was one of intelligent planning, not just impulse or chance. He knew what to do, and He did it, for their good.

God has a plan, not only for the nations, but also for individuals, for your life and mine. Let us find His will for us, for it is good, acceptable and perfect (Rom. 12:1, 2).

Note the honoring of the faith of Joseph in God's promise (v. 19). The memory of his assurance was a blessing to his descendants, and they honored it and him. What will our descendants have to say about our faith in God?

III. God's Presence (13:20-22).

Our God does not just send a plan or program to His people. He is always with them and is ready to go before them.

God's plan is made known to His people as they follow Him step by step. This means that there must be guidance, moment by moment, if His plan is to be worked out. He gives such guidance and it is only when His children fail to follow it that the pattern of life becomes confused.

The field of divine guidance is one in which Christians have widely divergent experiences. Some know the sweet, unconfused daily experience of God's hand upon them, caring for even the minor details (or are they minor?) of life. Others have known the directive power of God in some life crisis, but not in the ordinary affairs of life. Many, and perhaps most, think of divine guidance as a spiritual theory of which the preacher talks, but know nothing of it in their own lives.

What makes this great difference? Faith—or the lack of it. Those who trust God accept and receive His blessed leadership moment by moment. It is as simple as that. Others reach out and take it when the pressure of life makes them cast themselves on God. Others simply muddle along "doing their best," which is not their best, for God is not in it.

The pillar of cloud, which became luminous at night, was ideal for the guidance of Israel. It provided shade from the hot sun by day, and it was a sure guide in the darkness of the night.

We who believe in Christ have an even better and more precious evidence of God's presence—the Holy Spirit who indwells us. He reveals God's will to us, urging us on, or restraining us as the need may be. Are we obedient to His blessed promptings? Do we walk in the light of His perfect guidance?

Easy-to-Make Gowns Are Styled For Smart Wear in Midseason

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE rush and the excitement of a busy holiday season is over. Comes now the quiet after a storm when women will have opportunity to take inventory of their wardrobes. It's time to see what's needed in way of one or more smart new gowns that will accent the midseason style program with outstanding chic and charm.

If you find you need something you'll find that it will be thrifty and bring you no-end satisfaction to make your own between - season dresses. Maybe you are an expert at sewing. However, if you are an ambitious beginner you will get along fine by just taking your sewing problems to your local sewing center. You will be surprised and delighted at the wonderful facilities and helpful instruction you will receive in the art. In a few lessons your eye will be trained to fine points of cut, fit and finish, also to keen discernment in matter of selecting patterns and fabric. It's nothing less than fascinating to learn of the wonders that the modern sewing machine performs in way of short cuts to smart dressmaker tricks through almost miracle-working attachments.

Any one of the modish gowns pictured will inject new "pep" into your midseason wardrobe. And what a grand and glorious feeling it will give you to have made it yourself! In choosing yourpatterns keep in mind as a guiding star that soft styling and easy silhouettes strike high - fashion keynote for smartest midwinter clothes. Keep in mind, too, that no styling detail is of greater importance than are sleeves. In fact, it might well be said that a dress or a blouse or a coat is no smarter than its sleeves. It's the deep armhole sleeves that are creating the big sensation this season, especially the new wedged sleeves, such as style the gowns pictured.

Classic and new details are combined in the wedged sleeve frock of beige gabardine as shown centered in the trio. This stunning model takes its "casual" cue from such tailored accessories as its wide leather belt, shoulder-strap bag and square-brimmed sailor. This is a type of basic dress that can lead a double life just by deft accessory changes. Hip-slurring, curved slot pockets and high-riding inverted center front pleat are good fashion aids to stress below-hip flattery.

For truly dramatic accessory changes the model shown to the left presents an unbeatable basic dress that's collarless. Its wedged sleeves of contrasting color fan out in simple mandarin lines, and its minimized waistline is accented by a shapely curving stitched belt of self fabric. The skirt front interest is heightened by inverted pleats that are stitched down to well below the waistline.

Another midseason sure success project is a two-piece wedge-sleeve dress that dramatizes the new rounded look in easy-to-wear lines, after the manner of the smart model pictured to the right. Raspberry spun rayon is used for the bow-tied blouse, and black rayon for its curved waistband and full-gathered skirt. The rounded raglan shoulders are contrived to form a diagonal bodice yoke that wings out into deep armhole sleeves. With the aid of dolman shoulder pads such as are featured at local sewing centers, in a variety of colors and sizes for dresses, coats and suits one can more easily achieve perfected rounded shoulder and deep armhole lines.

Among other style details played up in last-minute midwinter fashions, the idea of drawstring belts makes wide appeal, for you are assured of a perfect fit, in that the waistline may be adjusted to any size.

Controls Sprinters

An electric device has been designed to prevent sprinters in track events from making false starts, says Collier's. It consists of a small box connected by wire to the starting gun and to a metal plate placed on the ground before each contestant.

To make the electrical connection that permits the gun to be fired, all runners must be in starting position and exerting a certain pressure on the plate with both hands.

Swift Camera Photographs Explosive Action of 'Gas'

A movie camera that takes 40,000 pictures a second is used to photograph the explosive action of aviation gasolines at the NACA aircraft engine research laboratory in Cleveland, says Collier's.

This camera so slows down actions that if it were used to photograph a football player making a 40-yard run, the projection of the film, at the normal rate of 24 pictures a second, would require 2 hours and 20 minutes.

President Truman signed H B. 4309 reducing individual income and corporation taxes and repealing the $5.00 motor vehicle use tax stamp effective July 1st, 1946. That's very nice; but just to think we won't have the pleasure of using that nice little sticker the Standard Oil Company sent us not so long ago to place over our use-tax stamp to protect it and keep it in plain view on our windshield.

—o—

Any way, we are glad Mr. Truman did something we can praise. What with his report on the state of the nation that didn't make a hit with anybody, not even the CIO, and the radio commentators nor, Mr. Taft, it's a glorious relief to know that at least no one will complain July 1st about not being compelled to buy a use tax stamp.

—o—

We are thankful that the mailed fist of war no longer exists with us, but a more cunning and deceitful menace has reared its head. We refer to the labor troubles and defiance of law and order that are becoming so numerous. If the strikers can strike, the soldiers feel like they have a right to stage a demonstration to show their resentment over what looks to them like neglect pure and simple. We feel that the predicament in which the soldiers find themselves is unavoidable, but they have been so patient so long there is some excuse for them, but we can't see much excuse for the strikers, who are not only at home with their families, but have every comfort on earth, and good wages when they are at work.

—o—

On Sunday, December 30, 1945, we mailed some stuff to Roswell to have cast and set. We waited patiently until Friday, January 4th at noon, then we called Roswell. They said all metal had been mailed early Thursday morning in time for the noon bus and should have been received at 5:30 Thursday, but it wasn't; so we have some of our last week's ads and news into today's paper. For instance the Blue book item, and Highway 54, etc. Will Robins stated in the Roswell daily last week that nothing was delayed in the Roswell postoffice during the rush, or does he know? Above by way of explanation that we are not a trailer, but three colums of last week's news were held up somewhere.

A "Look at the Books"

OR

"A Finger in the Pie"?

Which is the UAW-CIO really after? Is it seeking facts—or new economic power? Does it want to know things—or run things?

These questions concern you as well as General Motors.

For years the facts about General Motors have been made public.

In spite of this, the UAW-CIO demands a chance to look at our books, with the hint that we could meet Union demands "if the truth were really known."

We have firmly declined to recognize this as a basis for bargaining:

1. The Full Facts are Published

How much General Motors takes in each year—how much it pays employes—how much it pays to stockholders—how much it pays in taxes—how much net profit we make—and many other facts are plainly stated in annual reports and quarterly reports.

These are broadcast to 425,000 stockholders from coast to coast—sent to newspapers and libraries. Additional copies are free for the asking.

2. All Figures are Thoroughly Checked

Every General Motors annual statement is audited by outside auditors. Similar figures are filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission.

Does the UAW-CIO honestly believe that General Motors would or could deceive these experts?

3. Basis of Collective Bargaining is Defined

The Wagner Act lays down the rules for collective bargaining. These cover such areas as rates of pay, hours of work, working conditions.

No mention is made of earnings, prices, sales volume, taxes and the like. These are recognized as the problems of management.

4. Something New has been Added

The obvious fact is that the UAW-CIO has gone beyond its rights under the law—and is reaching not for information but for new power—not for a look at past figures, but for the power to sit in on forecasting and planning the future.

A "look at the books" is a clever catch phrase intended as an opening wedge whereby Unions hope to pry their way into the whole field of management.

It leads surely to the day when Union bosses, under threat of strike, will demand the right to tell what we can make, when we can make it, where we can make it, and how much we must charge you—all with an eye on what labor can take out of the business, rather than on the value that goes into the product.

5. This Threatens All Business

If the Union can do this in the case of General Motors, it can do it to every business in this land of ours.

Is this just imagination? Union spokesmen have said, "The Union has stated time after time that this issue is bigger than just an ordinary wage argument, that it is bigger than the Corporation and bigger than the Union."

For Labor Unions to use the monopolistic power of their vast membership to extend the scope of wage negotiations to include more than wages, hours and working conditions is the first step toward handing the management of business over to the Union bosses.

We therefore reject the idea of a "look at the books" not because we have anything to hide but because the idea itself hides a threat to GM, to all business, and to you, the public.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

ART: "Saw you at the movies last night, Judge. That was quite a weekend that alcoholic went through, wasn't it?"

OLD JUDGE: "Sure was, but I'm afraid most people won't really understand it."

ART: "What do you mean, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "Simply this. That poor chap was really a sick man...not just a drunk. Studies by famous psychiatrists and the medical profession show that alcoholism is not caused by a craving for alcohol...it is usually the result of some deep-rooted social, physical or emotional condition. If that fellow had not turned to alcohol for escape, he would have turned to something else."

ART: "Are there many that get in that condition, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "Fortunately not, Art. Scientists at a great university have stated that approximately 95% of the people who drink do so sensibly. Only 5% are immoderate at times. In that 5% is the small number known as alcoholics. And the beverage distilling industry which does not want a single person to use its product immoderately, is cooperating fully in the solution of this problem."

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived in Adano, with Major Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth was in charge of security. The Major was determined to hold the confidence of the people and to replace their bell stolen by the Nazis. Despite orders issued by General Matvin, barring carts from the city, Joppolo recalled the orders, to permit food and water to enter the city. The Major placed a ceiling on prices to stop a black market caused by the generosity of the Americans. The fishermen sent Tina to the Major to thank him for arranging for the renewal of their fishing rights. The Major told her he would soon have good news about her sweetheart.

CHAPTER XX

The case which Gargano considered serious was the case of Errante and his mule cart.

Errante was sworn in. The Major asked for the accusation. Gargano pushed Errante to one side and stood before the Major.

"Honorable Mister Major," he began, "this is a case of interference with the American military. I consider it one of the most serious we have yet had to handle."

The Major said: "That is for me to judge, Gargano. What is the accusation?"

Then Gargano told, or rather acted out, the story of how Errante Gaetano's cart had blocked traffic on Via Umberto the First. Gargano the Two-Hands leaped and swore and shook his two fists at Errante, and he made Zito act as the mule, and he attacked Zito fiercely, and then he reeled back from sham blow after sham blow. He did not ask anyone to act out the part of Errante, but let his own dodging and staggering give the idea.

"I am poor, Mister Major," Errante began. "I have a cart. A cart is all I have."

He looked around the room and thought.

"My wife died of the malaria," he said. "My wife was a serious woman. She did not laugh for eighteen years. However, she cooked rabbit well. She died of the malaria."

After another pause he said: "It seems to me that I have heard more laughter since the disembarkation. This is especially true among the children. You see, I have been trying to think out what made me stop and listen to the children the other afternoon, when I did not notice the Swimming War."

"The what, cartman?"

"I call them Swimming War. They are American vehicles which swim."

"Amphibious trucks, yes, go ahead."

Errante Gaetano paused. This time it did not look as if he would come out of the pause. He frowned.

Major Joppolo covered up this embarrassment by saying to Gargano: "We are going to have to dismiss this case, Gargano. I regret that it caused you embarrassment. But after what this man has said, could you see any justice in punishing him?"

Gargano protested: "American soldiers might have been killed by the delay."

The Major said: "I doubt it, Gargano. All he was guilty of was being too interested in the children's laughter."

Errante had recovered from his moment of emotion. He said: "There is more laughter. I think my wife would have laughed at my description of this man"—he looked at Gargano—"talking about my cart. It is too bad she died of the malaria. Now that you Americans are here, I think she would have laughed. In spite of the mistake about the mule. Yes, I think so, Mister Major."

"Oh dear," said Private First Class Everett B. Banto, clerk in A.P.O. 917, in a second floor room in one of the annexes of the Saint George Hotel in Algiers.

He was reading somebody else's V-mail letter, the envelope of which was open. Private Banto was a mail clerk. He had also been a mail clerk in Greenton, Vermont, before the war. Even in Greenton, he had been very concerned about the way America was behaving herself in the world.

"Oh dear," he said, "I don't see how we're ever going to win the war."

"What's itching your pants now?" said Sergeant Walter Frank, another clerk, who was reading somebody else's copy of Collier's.

"Listen to this," said Private Banto. "It says here: 'Why the hell do we have to give the Frogs and the Limeys and the Chinks all the stuff we make? Seems to me we've played Santa Claus long enough.' Oh dear."

"Says who," said Sergeant Frank, "what's a matter with that? It makes me vomit to see these Frenchmen driving all over the place when my folks at home can hardly even drive to the A. & P. to get their food."

"Walter, that's not a very good attitude, is it? We won't make many friends in the world that way."

Private Banto put the V-letter back in its envelope, and put the envelope in its proper cubbyhole. He picked up one of the mail pouches from the front, cut the wire binding and began to sort the contents, most of which consisted of tempting memoranda, not enclosed in envelopes.

"Gosh, Walter," he said, "we Americans certainly go in for a lot of paper work. Look at this stuff from the front—from the front, where they're supposed to be fighting. I don't see how we're ever going to win the war."

Sergeant Frank, who was trying to read a story, said testily: "So what's the matter with a little paper work?"

"And look at this. Gosh, but we're inefficient. Look here, this is supposed to be addressed to someone in the 49th Division which is over there, and it's from someone else in the 49th Division, right there too, and they sent it all the way back to Algiers. Isn't that terrible?"

"Oh yes, it's just terrible!" said Sergeant Frank, imitating Private Banto's voice.

"Well, what should I do about it, Walter?"

"You can jam it in the ash can for all I care," Sergeant Frank said harshly.

"Why, Walter," Private Banto said. When he had recovered from the shock, he said: "Seriously, Walter, what should I do with it?"

"Well, if it don't look important, you can throw it in the dead letter basket, that's what we usually do."

"You couldn't do that, Walter."

"You just said yourself there's too much paper work. What's one paper more or less?"

"It might be important."

"Well, look at it. What is it about?"

"It says: 'For information. Re carts, Adano.' And then it has something about an order that General Marvin issued, and then apparently a certain Major Joppolo countermanded the order, or something."

"It's about General Marvin? Throw it away!"

"Oh no, I wouldn't dare." And Walter put the memorandum in the pouch to go back to the front.

"Now don't bother me," Sergeant Frank said. "I'm reading."

Private Banto kept on sorting. "Oh dear," he said in a few minutes, "listen to this, here's a thing about a captain that's being sent back because of behavior unbecoming to an officer. I don't see how we're ever going to win, dear me."

The idea of a party for Major Joppolo grew up in a peculiar way. It came up partly because of real affection for the Major. But it was also partly because Captain Purvis wanted to see if he couldn't make some time with one of the daughters of Tomasino.

Giuseppe the interpreter stopped in to see Captain Purvis at the M.P. command post one afternoon. Giuseppe was just keeping his butter evenly spread. "How's a thing, a Cap?" he asked. He called Purvis Cap because his tongue always tripped on Captain.

"Okay," the Captain said.

"You like Adano?"

"Okay," the Captain said.

"You like a little more fun?"

"Who wouldn't?"

"Why you don't a go see Francesca no more?"

"There's nothing there, Giuseppe, the family's always hanging around."

"I'm a no so sure. You don't a try very hard."

"Besides, I think the Major's falling for the blonde. He's a good guy, I wouldn't want to mess him up any."

"How you mean him up? You fool around a Francesca."

"No, Giuseppe, I think the Major's serious. I don't know, he didn't say anything, I just got a hunch. If I fooled around with those girls, it would be strictly for fish. No, I don't think it's a good idea."

"You mean a Mister Major, he's a fall in a love?"

"I don't know. Maybe. I think so."

"What a for? Can he have a no fun without a fall over like a that?"

"Doesn't look to me like you can have much fun with a whole bunch around, including you, Giuseppe, and having to eat that awful candy, and the old lady sitting there. No, Giuseppe, if I play house with a little dolly, I like a little privacy."

"Giuseppe's a fix."

"I doubt if you could."

"Francesca's not a scrupulous. Tina's not a scrupulous. You can have a some fun."

"How? What can you fix, Giuseppe?"

"Fix a party."

"There you go with a crowd again. Let's have a little privacy."

"How about a Major?"

"Yeah, I suppose we got to think of him. You know, Giuseppe, he's a funny guy. Sometimes I think he's an awful wet blanket, and sometimes I can't help liking him. He was telling me the other day at lunch that the main thing he really wants around here is to have these Italian people like him. You know what I think we ought to do? I think we ought to throw a party for him. Or rather I think we ought to rig it so these Italians throw a party for him." Captain Purvis never thought of Giuseppe as an Italian, because he spoke English.

"Giuseppe's a fix."

"I mean a real good party, Giuseppe. With people like the Mayor and that old sulphur crackpot, and some nice girls of course."

"Giuseppe's a fix."

"And some wine. Couldn't we get some champagne for a change?"

"Giuseppe's a fix."

"If we really had a big party, then a certain Captain and a certain young lady could do a disappearing act, couldn't they?"

Giuseppe winked again.

"That's what I hate about a small party, anyone goes out, everyone else notices it. We ought to have a big party for a change."

Giuseppe said: "How many you want, a Cap?"

"Oh, I don't know, you can get some of these Italians together and decide. I'll put up whatever dough you need. We could have it down at the villa where my men stay, that Quattrocchi guy's house."

"When you want a party?" Giuseppe asked.

"Well, pretty soon, how about next Friday?"

"Giuseppe's a fix."

And so it happend that in his mail, two or three days later, Major Joppolo got a card, on which was written in Italian: "A Committee of the people of Adano request the pleasure of your company at a party in honor of His Excellency the Mister Major Victor Joppolo on Friday evening, July 23th, at Villa Rossa, 71 Via Umberto the First, at 8:30 p.m."

Major Joppolo propped the card on the inkstand on his desk where he could read it, and often did: ". . . in honor of His Excellency. . . ."

General Marvin believed in what he called "keeping in touch." He liked to know what was going on, both in the world and in the Army.

That Monday morning, the Lieutenant read him Ernie Pyle's column and Pup Tent Poets from the Stars & Stripes, an article on Teller mines and S-mines in the Infantry Journal, a condensation of birth control in the Reader's Digest, three situation reports from A.F.H.Q., a handful of fan letters arising from an article about the General in some magazine, and a letter of commendation of the General from Secretary Stimson, referring to a battle in Tunisia. This last had arrived several days before, and without being told, Lieutenant Byrd had had the sense to read it to the General every morning.

By the time these things were finished, the General was in an excellent mood. But as always seemed to be the case, when Lieutenant Byrd started in on the memoranda from various officers, the old man gradually got angry.

Memoranda always seemed to be written about things that had gone wrong. This morning there was one about how some signal corps telephone wire had been lost on an LST, so that one unit was very badly off for communications; there was another about the need for gasoline dumps to be established closer behind a certain division so that trucks would not have to run so far for fuel; a third about the way close air support was occasionally attacking friendly troops . . . and so they went.

After some of the memoranda, the General would bellow directions to Colonel Middleton, sitting in the next room. After others he would roar: "The hell with 'em. They're no worse off than all the others. The answer is no."

Lieutenant Byrd picked up one of the memoranda and read: "To General Marvin for information etcetera etcetera, routing address, and so forth. Subject: Mule carts, town of Adano."

The General rumbled: "Damn mule carts."

Lieutenant Byrd read: "On July 19, orders were received from General Marvin, 49th Division, to keep all mule carts out of the town of Adano. Guards were posted at the bridge over Rosso River and at Caseparda Sulphur Refinery. Order carried out . . ."

CO-OPERATIVES ORGANIZED FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

WISCONSIN was the first state to enact legislation providing for the "one man, one vote" form of corporation, under which a large portion of the state's co-operatives are organized. When enacted the law was considered radically socialistic. Shortly after its enactment I had the opportunity for a conversation with the promoter of the idea. He was an Irish born, but naturalized, American citizen. A professor on the faculty of the state university. A disciple of the elder LaFollette. Uncouth in appearance, but with a mind as sharp as a needle point. I well remember the explanation he gave me of his basis for the idea. He said: "The American government is a big, a very big, business. It is operated by selected officials of those who own the business, the citizens of the nation. Those selected officials, the President, senators and representatives, are picked on a 'one man one vote' basis. Those who have millions of the national wealth have but one vote, as do those who have practically nothing. That system works.

The same thing will work in any other corporation. The man who has 100 cows has one vote, the man with but one cow has one vote." In Wisconsin it is optional to incorporate under the law, or the older established one of representation by invested values, but where it is used I understand it has worked. I cannot visualize it working as a basis of organization for our large industrial corporations. He classed it as representing human rights as opposed to property rights.

• • •

Emery Reves, considered the keynoter for the world state proponents, insists the only way of preventing international war is the formation of a world government to include all nations. He bases his claim for the effectiveness of such a world government on the federation of our states. What can such a federation of nations accomplish that UNO cannot accomplish? We can have a world civil war quite as easily as a world international war. We demonstrated that in the eighteen sixties.

• • •

WE NOW HAVE 15 government bureaus concerned with the problem of housing. On the claim they are not doing an efficient job congress is considering the creation of another. The bill, however, does not provide for the elimination of all, or any one, of the present inefficient bureaus. That is how government grows.

• • •

A WORLD-WIDE FEAR of utter destruction may prove a preventive of war.

• • •

INFLATIONARY PRICES mean but the decreased purchasing power of money. We have better than a 60 per cent decrease now.

• • •

EDUCATIONAL ADVANTAGES cannot always be measured by what it costs. It is what fundamentals the teacher puts into the mind of the student that counts.

PAY DEDUCTIONS AND EFFECT UPON PRICES

WHAT COMES OUT of the pay envelope before the worker receives it? There are four main deductions, and, in a limited and decreasing number of instances, a fifth. The employer must deduct 1 per cent of each wage for social security, and another for unemployment insurance. To these the employer must add an equal amount, which to him is a part of his business cost. The employer must also deduct from each weekly or monthly payment such portion of the worker's pay needed to cover the worker's federal income tax. These deductions are made on demand of the government. On demand of the union the employer deducts such dues, assessments, and fines as may be charged against each individual worker by his union. In such cases as still exist where the worker is purchasing government bonds on a payroll deduction basis the employer takes out that payment.

Deductions from the pay of the worker as a collection method on the part of government or the unions means an added expense for industry and distribution. That expense is added to the cost of doing business, and we, the consumers, pay it as a portion of the price of the commodities we buy.

• • •

It is a phase of the regimentation with which we are being inflicted. It is unAmerican. The unions, in demanding the check-off system as a means of collection, refuse to recognize the honesty and integrity of their members. Such a system is as unAmerican as would be the deduction of payments due on installment purchases. There would be more "take home money" in the pay envelopes if the check-off system was discontinued, and the cost of commodities would be less for all of us.

Bird Should Have Spoken Err It Was Too Late!

Bill Jones stopped in at a pet store and was entranced by a remarkable bird that was not only beautiful to look at but also spoke fluently in eight languages. He paid a good round sum for the bird and asked to have it delivered to his home.

Reaching home at dinner time that evening, he inquired: "Has the bird that I ordered sent here come?"

"Yes, dear," his wife replied. "It's in the oven now."

"What!" he exclaimed. "In the oven? Why, that bird could speak eight languages!"

"Then why didn't it say something?" asked the wife.

To Get Better Cough Syrup, Mix It at Home

So Easy! No Cooking, Real Saving.

To get quick relief from coughs due to colds, you should make sure by mixing your own cough syrup at home. It's no trouble at all, and you know it's pure and good. It needs no cooking, and it's so easy to make that a child could do it.

From your druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add enough plain syrup to fill up the pint. To make syrup, stir two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired. The full pint thus made should last a family a long time, and gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

And for quick results, you've never seen its superior. It seems to take hold instantly, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritated membranes, and helping to clear the air passages.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.—Adv.

THOUGHTS ON THE MARKET

Scenes resembling those leading up to the 1930 stock market crash are now visible in all brokerage offices. And they are being re-enacted in technicolor.

A burned child dreads the fire, but an adult will always go for second degree burns if the tips "are hot" enough.

There is even a more reckless mood in today's buying due to the fact this is a screwier age in which the gambling fever has never run higher. Horses, dice, gin rummy and football pools have made America risk-slappy.

Most people have more cash than they know what to do with, so they are accepting advice from strangers.

The horse players are in the market, too. We heard a fellow rush up when his stock went off a point yesterday and claim a foul.

He is the same one who boasted that he had bought Chrysler and Eastman, and thought they had a good chance in the daily double at the weights.

All some brokerage offices need is a smell of hay, a list of jockeys, an objection heard and a morning line.

In fact, it is our belief the stock market should no longer be opened with a gong. It is time to use a bugle.

Remember away back when "Never Again!" was the Voice of America so far as speculating in stocks was concerned?

• • •

Reflections on Housing

The housing crisis has reached a point where it is suggested that "Tenting Tonight" replace "Home, Sweet Home" as an American folk song.

A four-room fabricated house at $2,870 is on sale at a New York department store. "What floor for residences, landscape gardening and cinder paths, please?"

The old-fashioned American may have been remiss and dumb in many ways, but he never confused a new home with a chicken house.

• • •

BACK HOME STUFF

Frank Dorgan, ex-Princeton quarterback, is now a court magistrate back home and making quite a record for homespun philosophy. The other day, replying to a woman's complaint that the smoke from a kerosene lamp made her apartment unhealthful, Frank came out as a defender of the lamp.

"What do you mean by that?" he demanded. "I grew up in the kerosene-lamp era, and never knew it to hurt anybody. Did you trim the wick? Do you realize that it takes a lot of work to keep a kerosene lamp in good condition, but that if you do it, it's fine?"

Which brings back memories of keroseners in our boyhood. There were some pretty beautiful ones. The parlor lamp was especially high, wide and fancy. And trimming the wicks was a nightly chore. Mom was forever polishing the globes. Looking back, they seem the loveliest lamps in the world. We were sent often to the corner store for kerosene, and it just comes back to us how Lotty, the grocer, used to stick a potato over the spout as a cork.

• • •

Elmer Twitchell says there hasn't been any real happiness in the world since the old-fashioned wooden beer keg went out.

A radio program which makes phone calls at random and offers cash prizes if the subscriber answers a question had this one the other day, "Under what king was Daniel tossed into the lion's den?" Elmer Twitchell lost the pot by replying, "This is a deep humiliation, but I can't even recall the name of the lion."

• • •

"Molotov uses the American term 'Okay' and knows it means yes in English."—News Item.

But does he know what means "yes" in Russian?

• • •

Asked if he didn't want to take a look at the recent total eclipse of the moon Fred Allen quipped, "No, I'll catch it next time."

• • •

New York showmen are amazed at the development, into a hit show of 1945, of "The Red Mill," a musical first produced in New York thirty-nine years ago. It was put on for a limited run of eight weeks, but has developed into a sell-out. Many are the explanations offered, but we think the score, which is almost a grade A catalog of Victor Herbert's best known song hits, is mainly responsible. Such melodies as "In Old New York," "Everyday Is Ladies' Day With Me" and "Because You're You" not only delight grandma, but mother, too, knew them, and even the kids and grandkids have felt their charm on the phonograph and radio.

Household Hints

To tighten cane seats and prevent sagging, sponge the surface with salt water occasionally.

Stiff brushes and brooms will last longer if wetted now and then. This prevents fibers or broomstraw from becoming too brittle and consequently breaking off.

Cutting knives are best kept by themselves in a wooden rack in the kitchen drawer. If allowed to rub against other knives or utensils, they dull quickly.

If you want to make your letters absolutely sure-seal, glue them shut with colorless nail polish. These can't even be steamed open by unscrupulous persons.
