County landfill is closed

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Lincoln County landfill is closed.

County road superintendent Tommy Hall contacted the county manager's office Wednesday to say the landfill at Fort Stanton Mesa is closed because there is no more room for refuse.

Arrangements were made ahead of time for the Capitan landfill to open as a Class C site to accept construction waste and other dry, non-compactable, materials after the county landfill closed.

Capitan Mayor Frank Warth said the Capitan site will be open at 8:15 a.m. Tuesday, August 7. Normal hours will be 8:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday as long as usage warrants that schedule, said Warth.

Fees will be based on $6 for each yard with fee schedules available at the Capitan Village Hall, said Warth.

The Lincoln County Commission also made plans to stop county garbage collection service by September 7. Realizing the county landfill had a limited lifetime, the commission made arrangements for solid waste to be transported by Southwest Disposal to its own landfill or to another in Otero County.

Also, a compactor station will eventually be established at the old Fort Stanton site once county collection services have been suspended.

This compactor station will accept household waste.

However, all construction waste and other dry materials will now have to go to Capitan after the site there opens.

Festival draws 10,848

Final, official figures have been computed on attendance at the 19th Ruidoso Art Festival last weekend in its new location below Ruidoso Downs Race Track on track property.

Adults purchasing tickets numbers 9,576 for the three-day event which ran from Friday noon to Sunday at 5 p.m. Children numbered 1,272 for a grand total of 10,848.

Jack Muhn, accountant for the sponsoring Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, said gate receipts totaled $20,455.

Friday, receipts were $4,010.64. Saturday, the figure was $10,647.90. Sunday saw collections of $4,996.50.

The Art Festival is one of the biggest fund-raisers sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce each year.

Patrons come from far and wide to view the art and the work of artisans. Some 132 artists and/or artisans participated this year.

Civic Center is starting over with new designers

The main topic [illegible] part of the meeting [illegible] with some members [illegible] demanding answers from the council about the [illegible] the drawing board.

Before the meeting [illegible] council took action to terminate the architectural contract [illegible] new design firm for the project.

"We are in the middle of the stream [illegible] to change horses," said B. Wooley, chairman of the board of Cree Meadows Country Club. Wooley said questions and concerns were raised at the [illegible] board meeting over the [illegible] heading with the [illegible] center.

Wooley asked [illegible] what happened to the 12,000 square foot building with meeting [illegible]. He said they have heard [illegible] pre-fab building with a large open showroom for [illegible] and motorcycles [illegible] meeting rooms which would [illegible] people for conventions.

Continuing to ask [illegible] what happened to the architectural [illegible] Hernes, Sabatini and Eeds and [illegible] true that gross receipts taxes will be tied up for the next 20 years to the detriment of Ruidoso's water and streets.

Wooley asked if the civic events center will be finished in a reasonable amount of time and is there a chance of the village losing the state money for the civic center.

"These are questions that have been asked me and they deserve answers," he said.

As a final question, Wooley asked if a member of the council has a close relative who is an employee of Speed Fab-Crete, the Texas company that made a presentation to the council in a previous meeting.

Councilor J.D. James disagreed that the original plans were for a 12,000 square foot building. He said the plans started with a 24,000 square foot building with alternate plans to enlarge the building to 40,000 square foot.

Village consulting engineer John [illegible] said the original plans did call for a first phase of 12,000 square feet designed and completely constructed for $600,000.

Mayor Victor Alonso said this council wants to get more for the village and decided to build several phases at once. He said the council opted to come up with additional monies for the different phases through issuing revenue bonds. Alonso said the contract with the hotel calls for the village to construct a building of 12,000 square feet minimum and 40,000 square feet maximum.

"We want to build the most we can the first time," Alonso said. He added right now that is going to be a building between 30,000 and 35,000 square feet.

Councilor Ron Andrews said the presentation which was made to Santa Fe about the civic center was for a building of 40,000 square feet.

Councilor Al Junge said the selected plans for the civic center [illegible] pre-fab construction [illegible] there is nothing [illegible] endeavor of the village to [illegible] certain type of building.

In response to the question about a member of the council having a relative working at Speed Fab-Crete in Fort Worth, Junge said a few years ago he saw an advertisement from a company that build pre-fab buildings. Junge said he wrote the company and got information which he presented to the previous council, Junge said.

Slow down for lower speed limits

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Speeders had better beware. The speed limit has been reduced on several village streets by five miles an hour.

The speed reduction took place after a lengthy discussion on traffic control at Tuesday night's village council meeting.

The council voted unanimously to accept the recommendation of Ruidoso Police Chief William Newman and reduce the speed limit from 35 to 30 mph on White Mountain Drive from White Mountain Road to Hull Road, on Country Club Drive from Cree Meadows Drive to Lookout Drive, and along the entire length of Hull Road and Paradise Canyon Drive, and Cree Meadows Drive.

Newman had recommended the change of speed limit could be accomplished by simply removing the signs since an unmarked street automatically has a speed limit of 30 mph. But the council voted to go ahead and have the streets marked with the new speed limit.

The council tabled until its next meeting a recommendation from the Planning and Zoning (P&Z) Commission to place a three-way stop at the intersection of Old Lincoln Road and Hull Road. Councilors said tabling the issue until the next meeting will give them time to observe the intersection firsthand.

Only Councilor J.D. James voted against the motion to table, saying he wanted to settle the issue at Tuesday's meeting.

P&Z chairman Robert Donaldson, who also lives on Hull Road, told the council the chief's recommendation came out of a meeting he and planning administrator Cleatus Richard had with Chief Newman and Street Department superintendent Charlie Armstrong.

Donaldson said he agreed with all the recommendations except the one concerning Hull Road. He said people are going to drive at a speed they are comfortable with. He said the speed on Hull Road easily exceeds 40 mph.

Donaldson said the hill at Old Lincoln Road is a blind hill. He said Hull Road has a tremendous amount of activity, with people passing on the road where there is no visibility. He said, even though the chief doesn't agree, he feels the flat, lighted area at Old Lincoln Road deserves a stop sign.

"It would be a perfect place for stopping traffic," he said.

From a pure traffic point of view, the stop sign is not needed, but as a passive system of slowing traffic down on a residential street, it would work, Donaldson said.

He also said a number of residents along Hull Road and in the areas off Old Lincoln Road were angry about the traffic situation.

Chief Newman said he agrees that there is a problem with people speeding on the village's streets.

"The traffic in this village moves way too fast for the conditions we have," Newman said.

He added that, with speeding drivers, there is going to be a fatality at the intersection of Hull Road and Cree Meadows Drive. He said a stop sign on a major thoroughfare to slow traffic down is a unique idea, but placing stop signs in the middle of a street is a highly unpopular thing to do.

"Please don't give out my number if stop signs go up," Newman said. "I don't think a stop sign in the middle of a thoroughfare is the answer."

He said the answer is enforcement of the speed limit. Newman told the councilors that he was under the impression that this council and the previous council wanted the police to give some leniency to the locals and the tourists. He said you can't slow traffic down without making some people angry.

Newman said the most common accidents in the village were caused by excessive speed and tailgating. He said to slow traffic down, you have to notify people you're going to enforce the speed limit, give them a reasonable time to slow down and then enforce the speed limit. He added you have to give them a little tolerance, but 50 mph is too fast.

Several other citizens expressed concerns, both for and against them. One man, Paul Harris, invited the council to sit on his porch on Country Club Drive and observe the speeding traffic for themselves.

In the end, the council tabled the issue for further study.

In other action Tuesday, the council:

—Approved a zoning change from R-4 to R-3 on Tracts B,C,D,E, and F of replatted lots 9 and 10, Block 4, White Mountain Estates Unit 4.

—Approved a beer and wine license at K-Bob's Restaurant.

—Adopted Ordinance 90-7 which dissolved the Economic Development Advisory Board.

—Gave the Mainstreet Ruidoso board permission to proceed with drawing up a contract with the village. The contract would transfer funds from the village to the control of the board. It would also make MainStreet coordinator Mary Maul, who is now a village employee, an employee of the MainStreet Board. Councillors said the transfer would help eliminate some concerns from citizens that a village employee was only serving a small group.

—Postponed until August 14 consideration of Ordinance 90-8, regarding authority to issue revenue bonds in the amount of $935,000 for construction of the civic center.

—Accepted the recommendation of village manager Charles Norwood to reject a proposal from Lincoln County to purchase the village's D-8 caterpillar bulldozer. The county was offering the village $60,000 for the bulldozer. Norwood said the appraised value of the bulldozer is $80,000 and he recommended the village seek a higher price. He also recommended the village not lease it to the county while it is seeking the higher price.

Councilor Jess Stinson said the village could get the additional revenue from the county while they were looking around for a better bid. Norwood said the price the county wanted to lease the dozer for was between $1,500 and $2,000 a month. He added the rental price on equipment like that was between $8,000 and $10,000. He said we owe it to the village to seek out a higher price, but he added it would be more accessible, should the village need it, if it was sold to the county.

In the end, the council voted to accept Norwood's recommendation. Councilors Stinson and J.D. James voted against the motion.

Council calls a halt to village overtime costs

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Village Council took steps on Tuesday night to control and reduce overtime.

Councilors passed several changes in the Personnel Rules and Regulations.

The village will now offer current employees a choice of overtime pay or compensatory time off. Employees hired after August 1, 1990, will only receive compensatory time off for overtime worked.

The new policy on overtime and compensation states:

—The policy of the Village of Ruidoso is to offer compensatory time off in lieu of overtime pay for all non-exempt employees in compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. Non-exempt employees hired on or after August 1, 1990, shall receive compensatory time off in lieu of overtime pay.

—At the discretion of the village manager, non-exempt employees may receive overtime pay for work in excess of the work period. This does not apply to part-time personnel working less than 40 hours per week. These employees shall receive straight time for hours worked less than 40 hours. Overtime is for the benefit of the village. A request for overtime compensation, whether it is pay or time off, must be completed by the employee prior to the time the work is performed. Except in the cases of bonafide emergencies, any unauthorized overtime shall be subject to disciplinary action.

—Compensatory time off for non-exempt employees shall be taken within 30 days of accrual, unless specific approval is given by the personnel director or manager. In compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act, management shall not permit employees who were compensated with time off to accrue more than 480 hours of unused compensatory time if engaged in public safety or emergency response activities. Employees cannot accrue more than 240 hours of unused compensatory time if employed in an activity other than those listed above.

—The hourly overtime rate is computed at 1.5 times the hourly rate of pay or with time off at 1.5 times all hours worked in excess of 40 hours in a seven-day period (212 hours per 28 day period for firefighters or 165 hours per 28-day period for police).

—Sick leave, vacation leave, holiday, leave without pay or other non-worked hours shall not be included in the work period for purposes of computing overtime pay or compensatory time off.

—Requirement of frequent and considerable overtime/compensatory time off in a department shall be considered evidence of under staffing or poor management of resources and shall be the subject to investigation by the personnel director.

The changes in the personnel rules and regulations also allow the manager, at his discretion, to give exempt employees compensatory time off on a basis of one hour worked for one hour off. Before the changes, exempt employees were not entitled to receive overtime payments of any kind.

The rules and regulations further state: compensatory time off for exempt employees shall be taken within 90 days of accrual, unless specific approval is given by the personnel director or manager. Management shall not permit employees who were compensated with time off to accrue more than 480 hours of unused compensatory time if engaged in public safety or emergency response activities, 240 hours if employed in an activity other than those listed above.

Rules governing holiday pay were also changed by the council on Tuesday night.

hearing date on Ordinance 90-9, prohibiting the taking off and landing of hot air balloons in the village limits die when Councilor Stinson tabled the request indefinitely.

Councilor Bill Karn said he was against the ordinance because he had ridden in the balloon and he knew the pilot was a good pilot.

Councilor James said the Forest Service didn't consider a hot air balloon to be a fire hazard and that other cities with balloon festivals don't have such an ordinance.

Councilor Al Junge said Ruidoso is a tourist town and we have to put up with cats, dogs and motorcycles.

Councilor Ron Andrews said there is no way the ordinance can be enforced. He asked what is the village going to do if the balloon is launched outside the village limits and the winds carry it over the village. He said what are we going to do, prevent him from landing.

"We could put up a stop sign," Councilor Karn said jokingly.

Most of the complaints came during periods of drought, said Mayor Alonso, who expressed concern over fire danger. He suggested balloons could be restricted from flying during times of severe drought.

Karn pointed out that the forests face more fire danger from a person with cigarettes and matches than from a hot air balloon.

There is only one hot air balloon which flies in Ruidoso and that is the New Mexico Military Institute balloon owned and piloted by Rolla Hinkle of Roswell.

MainStreet Ruidoso board zeroes in on planning strategy

by AL STUBBS
Ruidoso News Business Editor

MainStreet Ruidoso planning committee members Monday will be interrogating representatives of five urban design firms about how they would approach Midtown Ruidoso development.

The 1990 New Mexico Legislature passed a resolution which provides $40,000 for planning Midtown development through the Village of Ruidoso and MainStreet Ruidoso.

The money goes to the Village, with the MainStreet board to recommend how it will be spent. The village council must approve final plans.

Urban planners were solicited to determine interest in planning the development. Five firms responded.

Planning committee members Stan Cape, Mac McDougal and J.D. James outlined interrogation strategies at a committee meeting Tuesday morning.

The project area involved runs from about the Standard service station on Sudderth below Pinetree Square to the Gazebo Shopping Center area.

Committee members agreed that the following concerns must be answered by the firms: Pedestrian convenience, public restrooms, utilities, parking, traffic controls, a contemplated riverwalk, public transportation, streetscape, delivery access and handicap access.

A master plan completed some years ago calls for possibly removing parking from Sudderth in the area and providing off-street parking elsewhere. This would allow widening of Midtown sidewalks, which members agree is a crucial need in some areas of downtown.

Planning committee members headed by Margaret Lahey will decide which firm can do the best job for Ruidoso and then will negotiate a price with that firm. Then, the firm will be recommended to the MainStreet board of directors which in turn will make a recommendation to the village council.

MainStreet is a statewide revitalization program for downtown areas of cities, towns and villages.

Money to complete what the planning firm recommends and what the village and MainStreet approve will be sought after a plan is shaped up.

The $40,000 will come out of New Mexico Highway Department funds since Sudderth Drive is a state highway. The eventual plan will include resurfacing of Sudderth Drive. Thus, highway department funds probably would be involved in at least one phase of the project when a plan is approved.

Cape, an architect, said he is interested specifically in how the urban planners will feel about "phasing" how the project will go together.

Alden Deyo, treasurer of MainStreet Ruidoso, said that the organization is seeking "a long-range plan.

"Not too long," McDougal said. He said it is easy for a plan to become outdated if stretched out too long.

Cape said the riverwalk will be in the plan, but that the planning committee shouldn't pin down the urban planners on specifics at the present time.

Other members of the planning committee are Fonda Hazel and Dean Fowler.

James said the committee should zero in on sidewalks, restrooms and the overlay. These, he said, are his first priorities although he likes the riverwalk concept.

Moving of utilities will be a consideration. Signage will be another.

The project director suggested that focus groups be organized to find out what some of the problems people are having in the project area. She suggested that a half a dozen merchants at a time meet in MainStreet offices for brainstorming sessions.

She describes the MainStreet program as a revitalization one.

Cape told committee members he wants the final product to be clear enough to use to acquire financing for construction.

Starting over then appeared in The Ruidoso News that he had a friend in Fort Worth who was going to build the civic center.

Junge admitted he may have written the founder of the company, David Bloxom, Sr., his first (insurance) policy, but he denied any conflict of interest. Junge stated he wished he was a relative, because he would still be in Fort Worth and not on the council. He added if he is guilty of anything it is knowing how to get a bargain.

Andrews said the idea of between 10,000 and 12,000 square feet of meeting rooms has not changed, and he said the exterior of the building should not have an impact on the interior design. He added the individual from Speed Fab-Crete (David Bloxom Jr.) said the exterior of the building could be covered with the same type and color (pink salmon) of stucco as the hotel. Andrews said the village plans to use the concept plans drawn up by Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds for the civic center, but the village couldn't afford the high cost per square foot the architectural firm was proposing.

Councilor Bill Karn said Shaw and village planning administrator Cleatus Richards had problems getting information from the hotel's architect. He said one of the problems that has been encountered with the hotel is they want to build it on a flat earth instead of stepping it with the terrain.

Karn said the council instructed Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds to look into other firms and construction methods. He said they did do it, but only two days before a meeting with the council.

R.D. Hubbard addressed the council on behalf of the hotel and golf course developers and said he is concerned with the timing of the construction of the civic center. He said in conversations with Mayor Alonso he had been assured the civic center would be compatible with the hotel and it would look like the architectural renderings which were presented.

He also said he had talked to the Spencers (who are donating a performing arts center) and they had expressed concern that the facility might be cheap and not compatible. Hubbard added that, as of now, the cost of the golf course is more than $5 million and the hotel over $9 million. He said the projects are major commitments and the civic events center adjacent to the hotel is important.

Hubbard added the hotel construction is affected by the civic center, because he doesn't want a hotel sitting there without the space in the civic center for conventions.

Councilor Barbara Duff said one of the problems with Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds was they kept coming back to the council with designs that had less space and required more money. She said the council wants to build the biggest civic events center it can.

Alonso said it was the intent of the village to build the civic events center to the maximum size and for it to be compatible with the hotel. He added a pre-fab building can be inexpensive and still compatible.

"The public still thinks prefabrication means a warehouse," Alonso said.

Later during Tuesday night's meeting, the council unanimously voted to terminate the architectural contract with Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds and request proposals for a new design firm.

The village's request calls for proposals to be submitted by a firm with a principal who is a registered architect licensed to practice in the State of New Mexico or from a firm affiliated with a New Mexico registered architect.

It also says the village has the right to cancel this request for proposals and/or waive any informality or irregularity and or reject any response to this request and to award the proposal solely within the best interest of the village.

An information sheet provided with the request for proposals calls for:

—The civic center design and construction shall be the maximum facility constructible within a maximum allowable construction cost of $1.5 million and it shall be expandable to 40,000 square feet as the funds become available. The increments for expansion shall be recommended as part of the architectural services.

—The civic center shall be built in close proximity to the resort hotel to be built by SWD Motels, Inc., and shall be architecturally compatible.

—The schedule for construction of the civic center shall be such that the opening of the facility will be no later than July 1, 1991, which corresponds with the opening of the resort hotel and the Sierra Blanca Golf Course.

—The architect will coordinate with representatives of the hotel, SWD Motels, Inc. and the golf course, All Hub Investments, Inc.

—The site plans will be provided to the successful proposer showing the location of associated developments and the civic center location. Detailed site plans for the common area have been prepared. These include the site grading, drainage, landscaping, utility, circulation and parking plans, and they are not a part of the requested architectural services.

—Architectural services are to be provided for the civic center facility, landscaping and pedestrian circulation on the civic center pad area. While the civic center will not contain a kitchen facility, provisions are to be made for a food service area.

—Proposers are advised that information for determining size and frequency of meeting and convention groups in Ruidoso is available from local organizations and the Chamber of Commerce. This information is to be considered in designing the civic center.

—Proposers are instructed that plans and specifications through the design and development phase have been prepared under a previous contract for the civic center. The availability of these plans and specifications shall be considered by the proposers in preparation of proposals. The proposer will be fully responsible for any part of these plans and specifications utilized by the proposer.

—Proposers are advised the village wishes to effect maximum economy of construction and that pre-fab or similar construction systems whose completed construction costs, excluding land and fixtures, do not exceed $50 per square foot while maintaining architectural and functional compatibility with the resort hotel. Those proposers will be given priority consideration.

—Proposers are advised that the village has been informed of certain economies that can be gained through the use of pre-fab construction techniques. Accordingly, the selected proposer is required to have five years experience with the various pre-fab construction techniques.

Village manager Charles Norwood said he and planning administrator Cleatus Richard had worked up a tight schedule for the project.

Norwood said proposals would be accepted for 20 days until August 20. A short list of proposers will be prepared between August 23 and 27. Interviews will be conducted between August 28 and 30, and a selection made on August 31. A contract and order to proceed will be issued on September 4.

Norwood said the design process will take two or three months and the village will advertise for construction bids in December. He said if the awarding of a contractor takes place in January, actual construction could start in February.

Councilor Junge asked Norwood to have part of the council in on the decision.

In response to a question about the termination of Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds, village attorney John Underwood said he had received a letter from their attorney and they had come to a "gentleman's agreement."

Since only 35 percent of the work was completed, the village agreed to pay Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds $40,337.28. Along with previous payments, the total amount of money paid to Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds was $61,304.

The village's original contract with the architectural firm was from $81,000 and called for them to design a civic center of at least 12,000 square feet and compatible with the hotel. When the village decided to build several phases of the building at once, the contract was renegotiated to $134,000.

Councilor Andrews said one of the problems the council had with the architectural firm was the contract had escalated and Holmes, Sabatini and Eeds had wanted the contract to go to $167,000.

Museum of the Horse is moving to Ruidoso Downs

The Museum of the Horse is coming to Ruidoso Downs.

The Museum, a collection of horse memorabilia, family heirlooms, Indian crafts and fine art which Anne Stradling has collected over a lifetime, reflects the collector's love for the horse.

Stradling, who is transferring her priceless collection to be on display in the old Chaparral Convention Center at Ruidoso Downs Race Track, will be in the area Friday for Anne Stradling Appreciation Day.

She will be a special guest at the racetrack where a blanket race will be run in her honor. She will be touring the facilities and making final arrangements for the transfer of the Museum.

She and members of her board will be meeting with R.D. Hubbard, founder and owner of the Hubbard Museum.

Mrs. Stradling started her collecting at a very young age and has assembled a major collection which includes almost every type of buggy or wagon ever pulled by the horse — drilling rigs operated by horse, treadmills operated by horse — and untold numbers of harnesses, saddles, bits and spurs.

Included in the Museum are Stradling's family heirlooms which tell a story of the life and history of her family

When Stradling relocates her museum to Ruidoso Downs, she will orchestrate the installation of the Museum in the old Chaparral Convention Center.

Anne Stradling's Museum of the Horse will come under the perpetual care of The Hubbard Museum to preserve this most significant collection of her life's work.

"The Hubbard Museum is proud to be able to carry Mrs. Stradling's tradition forward," said John Hall, museum director.

County residents say they're left holding their trash bags

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

Sun Valley is a community noted for banding together to solve its problems.

In the '70s, the small Alto community removed a mobile home that was in violation of its restrictive covenants.

In the '80s, the residents stopped a nearby condo complex from dumping raw sewage in their neighborhood.

And two weeks ago they thought they had solved the problem of no dumpsters.

"Most of the residents hadn't known that the dumpsters would be removed after the July 2 Commissioners' meeting, explained resident Nancy Bankston, who promptly organized a neighborhood meeting. Twenty-eight residents agreed on alternatives:

First, two property owners volunteered the use of their vacant lots for dumpster sites, stipulating that rules for proper disposal would be clearly visible.

"That's what started the problem," grumbled another resident. "Inconsiderate people using dumpsters like mini-landfills, piling old furniture and unbagged garbage all over."

Second, the neighborhood offered itself to be used as a prototype community for a recycling project.

Third, neighborhood representatives volunteered to meet with either the county manager or commissioners to iron out details.

"We were trying to work together to solve the thing," emphasized Bankston.

Their community effort came to nothing, however, when commissioners voted to remove all county dumpsters on or after September 7.

Some county residents felt this action to be hasty, but Commissioner Karon Petty said it was a solution to the problem of not knowing how to bill for trash collection.

"We must start over and get everyone on an equal footing," she said in a telephone interview a few days after the meeting. "By September 7 we hope to have a small compactor station at the Fort Stanton landfill," she added.

It was suggested that groups such as neighborhoods or subdivisions organize into solid waste districts to contract privately for that disposal; however, some county residents interviewed point out two major drawbacks: cost and security.

Southwest Disposal Corporation of Alamogordo, for example, charges $200 per month per dumpster, which some consider expensive for sparsely populated subdivisions. And keeping non-payers from using an unattended dumpster may prove difficult, they claim.

What some fear is that without an organized, convenient collection system, trash will litter roadways, vacant lots and empty cul-de-sacs.

As for Sun Valley and the rest of the rural county subdivisions, one resident believes they have been catapulted into the past with the loss of their trash collection. In the absence of county dumpsters after September 7, all must now find new means of trash disposal.

Ready to celebrate

Altrusa Club of Ruidoso has formed the Altrusa Foundation to act as the trustee for funds the group receives for charity. The Foundation's first big project is the Charity Celebration during All American Week. The new board looks over the brochure for the gala that will benefit community service projects. Board members are (seated, from left) Jane Deyo; Eleanor Shockey, vice chairman; Jennie Dorgan; (standing, from left) Karen Morris; Frankie Jarrell, secretary; Jane Terrell, treasurer; and Wanda Harmon, chairman.

Crimestoppers logs seven calls

The Ruidoso-Lincoln County Crimestoppers Board of Directors met Thursday and heard that seven calls were logged since the last meeting.

Crimestoppers coordinator Detective Lanny Maddox said one call dealt with a burglary in the Upper Canyon, one was drug related, one call pertained to a vintage Harley-Davidson motorcycle stolen in the county, one dealt with a burglary at Ruidoso State Bank, one was on the shooting of a colt and two calls were about stolen property.

"We should have several rewards pending by the next meeting," Maddox said. No rewards were approved Thursday.

The board discussed several proposals and designs for new Crimestoppers patches which will be placed on caps which already have been ordered.

Maddox told the board the Ruidoso Downs Race Track will have a special ladies day for Crimestoppers on Thursday, August 9. During that day, for every woman purchasing a ticket to the Turf Club, the track will donate $5 back to Crimestoppers.

The board also discussed placing a Crimestoppers float with McGruff in the upcoming Aspenfest parade.

In state Crimestoppers news, the New Mexico State Crimestoppers is assisting Santa Fe Crimestoppers in solving recent bank robberies in Santa Fe.

The local Crimestoppers number is 257-4545.

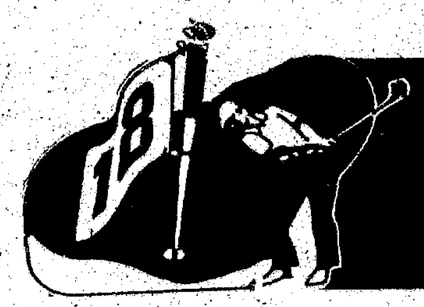
Swing into action at the Sierra Blanca Golf Club

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Sports Editor



Golfing in Ruidoso

In the last seven months of covering sports in Ruidoso, I must have been asked the same question at least a hundred times:

"What do you know about the new golf course?"

It doesn't matter whether I am at a basketball game or a track meet, I always get asked about the new course.

Of course golfers are particularly interested in the new course. I've yet to play a round of golf at one of the local courses that someone doesn't bring the subject of the new golf course up in a conversation.

But it is not just golfers who are interested in the course. It seems everyone wants to know about the new golf course on the old municipal airport land.

You know what, I'm tired of calling it the new golf course on the old municipal airport land. From now on I'm going to call it by its proper name: The Sierra Blanca Golf Club.

All the information in this article was provided to The News by John Colligan of Golfscapes, the architectural firm responsible for the actual construction of the course. Colligan generously provided me with a book detailing the individual hole design of the Sierra Blanca Golf Course.

The individual design book lays out the course hole by hole. Rather than describing each hole in detail, I'll let the rendition of the course on the opposite page do that. Instead, I'll do like I have tried to do with the other golf course in this series and report to you on how to play the course. The strategy for each hole is outlined in the design book.

Each hole on the course has four different tee boxes, gold, blue, white and red. The gold tee boxes are farthest from the hole and the red tee boxes are the closest. For the purpose of this article, I'll use the measurements from the blue tees.

—Number 1, 360 yard, Par 4.

The tee shot calls for the player to aim down the center of the fairway and hit a slight fade toward the middle third of the fairway. From this position, the golfer has the best angle to the green.

The second shot depends on the success of the drive. A golfer may choose to use either a mid to a short iron with his approach. The strategy is the same for either club, aim at the right third of the green and hit a slight draw into the center. The sand trap behind the green has been raised to provide a target to aim at from the fairway.

—Number 2, 430 yard, Par 4.

Like the first hole, the second also plays with the prevailing southern winds. The tee shot should be a slight fade which rides the wind and lands on the right side of the fairway. From this position, the golfer has the optimum angle to any pin position.

Depending on the drive, the golfer will be left with anywhere from a four iron to a three wood. The green is angled to the left to set up a slight draw into the back left pin position.

Shorter hitters can run the ball onto the green with their approach shot, because the front of the green is unguarded.

—Number 3, 380 yard, Par 4.

This hole plays back into the prevailing wind and the golfer will want to hit a slight draw off the tee. From the left side of the fairway, the golfer has the best chance of taking the water hazard to the left of the green out of play.

A long hitter will want to hit a knock down eight or nine iron into the green. For shorter hitters, the strategy will be different. With a longer iron, the idea is to hit a slight draw at the right edge of the green.

—Number 4, 500 yard, Par 5.

The tee shot on this long hole is the same as on number two. Hit a slight fade which will ride the wind.

Golfers gambling to reach the green in two will want to aim at the right sand trap and draw the ball into the green. Because this hole does play downwind, it is one few par fives on the course that can be reached in two.

For those not as adventurous, the second shot should be to aim at the front center of the green and fade the ball along the right edge of the fairway.

The golfer has a choice on his third shot, he can either fly a short wedge to the green or play a bump and run to the flagstick.

—Number 5, 310 yard, Par 4.

The strategy on this hole is determined by the pin placement. With the pin front left a player would want to hit a slight draw toward the last cluster of bunkers on the left. From there a golfer will have a minimum carry over the sand and plenty of green to work with. With the pin placements back left or along the right side of the green, a player should work the ball into the right side of the fairway.

On the second shot, a player from the left side of the fairway would want to hit a soft wedge or a nine iron onto the green. A bump and run shot is not very practical because the ball would have to carry over sand. However, from the right side of the fairway, a bump and run shot or a short pitch is the shot to hit.

—Number 6, 190 yard, Par 3.

This is the toughest par three on the front side and the hole plays into the prevailing wind.

A player will want to use either a long iron or a wood from the tee. Since the green is angled left, a player will want to aim the ball at the right edge of the green and draw it in slightly. A player that does not draw the ball won't be penalized because there is a bail out area right of the green.

All the severe hazards on this hole are short and middle left of the green. A grass bunker behind the green awaits a long shot over the green.

—Number 7, 520 yard, Par 5.

With out-of-bounds along the left side of the fairway, the golfer will want to hit a fade to the right side of the fairway. The left to right sloping fairway will throw any sliced shots into the mounds on the right side of the fairway.

From the right side of the fairway, the golfer will want to hit a slight draw on his second shot and try and land the ball on the left side of the fairway toward the grass bunkers. From there, he will have a good shot into the green, regardless of pin placement.

Depending on the first two shots, the third shot will be anywhere from a pitching wedge to a seven iron. Whichever iron is played to this green, the golfer should be wary of the pitch since the putting surface slopes toward the creek along the left side of the green.

One interesting note about the tee shot on number seven. The design of the tee shot from the back tee is influenced by the famous "Road Hole," number 17 at the Royal and Ancient Golf Course in Saint Andrews, Scotland. From the back tees, the golfers' best line of play is to hit a blind shot over the tall mound cluster in front of him.

—Number 8, 130 yard, Par 3.

From the first three sets of tees, all players will be forced to carry the ball over water to the green. A player does have the option on how he wishes to work the ball into the various pin positions.

A bail out area front left of the green has been provided for players wishing to hit away from the water. For the expert player playing into the back portion of this green, he should aim at the center of the three sand bunkers and hit a slight fade into the back pin placement.

'Zozo scramble results

Two teams tied for first place at last Sunday's golf scramble at the Carrizozo Golf Course.

The team of Willie Silva, Harold Garcia, Paul Guevara and Ted Brazie eventually won the tournament on the third playoff hole.

They finished regulation play tied at 68 with the team of Tom Baker, Norm Renfro, Marla Renfro and Benny Coker.

The team of Raymond Lueras, Junior Lueras, Nat Palomarez, Gerald Montes and Joe Hooten finshed third with a 69.

Tom Baker won the longest driving contest on hole number one and Bryan Turnbow won the closest to the pin contest on hole number four.

Carrizozo Golf Course manager Ted Turnbow wanted to thank all the local individuals in Carrizozo and Capitan who donated prizes for the tournament.

The tournament was to benefit local scholarships.

Women golfers have been provided a forward tee where they can either bail out straight at the large mound left of the green, with no carry over water, or risk a short shot over water into the wide portion of the green.

Whether hitting from the back or forward tees, getting the ball close will be difficult as a deck bisects the green into two separate halves. To make matters worse for players on this hole, the winds out of the south will push shots toward the water.

—Number 9, 400 yard, Par 4.

For an average golfer, the shot to hit is a slight fade into the right portion of the fairway. This will leave the golfer the easiest angle to the center of the green.

For the longer hitters, the shot is to attempt to fly the large bunker in the left rough and carry it to the upper level of the fairway. A shot along this line will reward the golfer with a shorter approach into the green.

A second shot on this hole will be anywhere from a short iron to a three wood. The golfer can either hit a fade or a draw into this green. But since the hole plays into the wind, an additional club will be needed to reach the green in two.

—Number 10, 380 yard, Par 4.

A golfer will want to hit a slight draw off the tee box, aiming the ball at the farthest mound on the left side of the fairway and working it toward the left third of the fairway. From this position, the golfer will have a favorable angle toward the center of the green and he will take the sand trap and out-of-bounds out of play.

With a good drive, a player on his second shot will want to use a mid iron into this green. The shot to hit is a slight fade started at the left edge of the green and worked toward the center. For a shorter drive, the player will want to hit a two iron or a four wood on his second shot and try to work the ball the same way.

The fairway deck right of the green will punish a good shot straying just off the green's edge.

—Number 11, 170 yard, Par 3.

The golfer will use a medium to a long iron on this hole, aim it at the left edge of the green and work the ball into the center.

Most of the trouble on this hole is right of the green where three sand bunkers wait to catch wayward shots. The right edge of the green is bisected with a "collector cusp" which is designed to roll missed shots off the green and back down the fairway. This will leave the player with an uphill chip off a fairway lie. Three grass bunkers await long shots over the green.

—Number 12, 370 yard, Par 4.

The twelfth hole plays directly into the wind. The golfer should hit a slight fade off of the tee and try to position the ball as close to the right edge of the fairway as possible.

Any tee shots which hook or end up on the left edge of the fairway will force the golfer to challange a large row of trees that block a direct shot to the green. Wayward shots to the right of this green may actually get knocked back into the fairway by the mounding flanking the right edge.

From the right side of the fairway, a long hitter will only have a wedge or a nine iron into the green, but a knock down shot is not a bad play. For the shorter hitters, the golfer will want to hit a slight draw into this green, working the ball around the vegetation that guards the left edge of the fairway and right side of the green.

—Number 13, 510 yard, Par 5.

Since this hole plays downwind, the really long hitters can reach this green in two. In order to reach the green in two, the drive has to be started at the center of the fairway and drawn toward the left edge. For the rest of us, just put the ball in the fairway near the mounds on the right side.

On the second shot, the longer hitters will have a three wood which they must aim at the right edge of the green and draw over the sand bunker. For the short hitter, aim at the extreme right edge of the bunker and hit a slight fade into the right edge of the fairway.

From that right edge, the golfer has two options on the third shot. Either hit a high delicate pitch or a bump and run onto the green. If you are on the left side of the fairway, your third shot will be over the bunker.

—Number 14, 310 yard, Par 4.

The fourteenth hole features two fairways and the choice of which fairway to use is determined by which side of the green the flag is located on. If it is on the left side, use the left fairway, if it is on the right, use the right. Either way it means a drive of 230 yard or 210 yard to leave yourself in good position for a second shot.

Most players will hit either a short iron or a wedge into this green. A bump and run or a soft pitch will work. The hard part about this green is it has three tiers so you better get the ball on the tier with the pin.

—Number 15, 450 yard, Par 4.

This hole is the only dogleg left on the course. It plays into the wind and is among the toughest holes on the course.

The best place for your tee shot on this hole is in the center of the fairway. To get there, the golfer should aim down the left side and fade the ball around the trees which protects the right of the fairway. A hooked drive can catch the sand trap on the left.

For a second shot, most golfers will hit a long iron or a wood into the green. Aim the ball at the right edge of the green and hit a slight draw into the center. For players wanting to take the left sand trap out of play, aim at the left edge of the green and fade it into the center.

—Number 16, 490 yard, Par 5.

This hole plays into the wind, but downhill. A golfer should aim his ball at the large mound left of the landing area, hit a slight draw and land the ball on the left side of the fairway. Don't miss it right, because if you do, you'll face a long treeline down the right side of the fairway.

Which side to hit on is determined by the pin placement on the green.

On the third shot, the golfer will have either a short pitch or a short iron to put the ball on the green.

—Number 17, 120 yard, Par 3.

Actually the seventeenth hole is one of the simplest and easiest holes on the course, and after 15 and 16 the golfer probably deserves it.

—Number 18, 420 yard, Par 4.

The home hole on the Sierra Blanca Golf Club plays downwind. The golfer should aim down the right center of the fairway and hit a slight draw toward a target bunker on the left edge of the fairway. A creek await any missed shot down the right side of the fairway.

With his second shot, the player who hits a long iron will want to hit it straight at the center of the green. He does have the option of hitting a slight fade and letting the ball ride the wind to the flag.

And there you've don't it. You just finished a 6,820 yard long course with a par of 72.

At a recent public meeting before the Ruidoso village council, Colligan said it is still hoped the course will be ready for play by October 15. A temporary pro shop and snack bar will be placed in the cart maintenance shop, which will be built behind the ninth green. This temporary pro shop will serve until the regular shop is completed with the construction of the Radisson Resort Hotel.

The Sierra Blanca Golf Club is a 6,820 yard long course that plays to a par of 72. The course is being developed by All Hub Investments, Incorporated and being built by Golfscapes, a golf course architectural firm from Arlington, Texas. According to the latest schedule, the course is scheduled to open sometime around October 15, of this year. A temporary pro shop and snack bar will be placed in the golf cart maintenance building.

Horses to Watch

CRAFTY NATIVE: This classy 3-year-old gelding stumbled and veered out at the start in Saturday's Zia Sophomore Championship, costing him any chance at victory. He was probably the best horse that day, and if he finds a similar field, most likely will make amends.

GOOSEBERRY PIE: Broke out and was bumped hard leaving the gate in a maiden race here last week. The Zip Peterson stable has been red hot lately, and this Pie In The Sky filly should graduate from the maiden ranks in her next start.

GET ALONG PAISANO: A perfectly pitiful ride was the only thing that kept this hard-knocking 7-year-old gelding out of the winner's circle in his last start. If he finds the same kind of field at either 5 1/2 or 6 furlongs next outing, he will most certainly pose for a picture. A jockey change wouldn't hurt his chances, either.

NEXT STEP: One of the more impressive 2-year-old maiden winners of the meeting so far. This stout gelding humbled a field in the second start of his career last week. No telling how good he might be. String along.

ELIJAH BLACK: Fell to his nose from the gate against an invitational field in his last start. This black colt certainly possess ability.

CRIME STOPPERS

"CRIME OF THE WEEK"

The Ruidoso-Lincoln County Crime Stoppers will pay up to $1,000.00 for information that leads to the arrest and Grand Jury Indictment or Magistrate Court Bindover of the person or persons who committed this crime or any other unsolved felony crime in Lincoln County.

Let's work together to call a stop to crime.

Phone 257-4545

The Crime: Cruelty to Animals

On June 22, 1990, unknown person or persons made their way to the Tisdale residence in Lower Eagle Creek in Lincoln County. At approximately 2:00 AM loud noises were heard. Later that morning it was found that a three month old Thoroughbred colt had been deliberately shot to the head and killed. The colt was found next to the fence approximately twenty yards from the Tisdale residence. Blood was found on the fence and the ground near the colt, and it appears that a high powered rifle was used to commit the crime.

Crimestoppers, in cooperation with concerned citizens of Lincoln County, will pay a $1000 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and magistrate court bind-over or grand jury indictment of the person or persons who committed this crime. Crimestoppers will also pay cash rewards for information leading to other felony crimes or leads to the recovery of stolen property.

Fast horses line up for weekend's cards

RUIDOSO DOWNS-Mary Kimberlin's Shutup And Deal, a hard-closing second to the tough Dance Trainer in his most recent start, heads a field of seven sprinters in Friday's feature race.

The 6-furlong allowance test offers a purse of $6,200.

In Friday's co-feature, 1988 World Champion Merganser returns to the scene of his greatest triumphs when he tackles a field of eight others in an allowance test at 350 yards.

Four of the entrants in the 6-furlong feature all emerge from the July 21 Land Of Enchantment Speed Handicap, which was won by Dance Trainer. Shutup And Deal rallied boldy down the lane that afternoon and was beaten by 1 1/4-lengths.

Shutup And Deal, who has two seconds and a third in three outings here this summer, captured a pair of stakes races last fall at Albuquerque. The 5-year-old son of Draconic has won nine of 37 career starts and has banked more than $100,000.

C.J. & Patricia Massey's Scout Beauty could offer Shutup And Deal his toughest competition. Scout Beauty, who hails from the stable of leading trainer Doyal Roberts, faded to sixth in the Land Of Enchantment after forcing the early pace.

The 5-year-old daughter of Scout Leader, however, ran second to the tough Fiesta Del Sol in her previous outing here. Last winter at Sunland Park, Scout Beauty posted a powerful 4 1/2-length victory in the New Mexican Handicap. She has won 10 of 37 career starts and has won in excess of $100,000.

Wells & Shalz's Merganser, who stormed onto the national scene by capturing both the Rainbow and All American futurities in 1988, has not flashed his championship form since his juvenile season. In his first start of 1990, Merganser finished 11th in the Remington Park Championship. Merganser, who is trained by Jack Brooks, has won 13

RUIDOSO DOWNS-Caroll Godwin's Jack Da Quick, one of the fastest thoroughbreds competing on the Southwest circuit, heads a field of nine Saturday in the Great Southwest Speed Challenge at 1,000 yards.

The 6-year-old gelded son of Coup De Kas suffered his only defeat in his last five outings the last time he faced quarter horses in the Fine Loom Stakes here May 26 at 870 yards. On that day, Jack Da Quick finished second behind quarter horse Six Shooter Tex.

Although Jack Da Quick will take on both quarter horses and thoroughbreds in the Great Southwest Speed Challenge, Six Shooter Tex will not be among his rivals. Six Shooter Tex, who finished third in the recent $100,000 Los Alamitos Marathon, will pass this race.

Jack Da Quick, who totes topwieght of 124 pounds, figures to be a prohibitive favorite in Saturday's race. He has won four of six starts this year, including a strong victory June 30 in the Santa Fe Special at The Downs at Santa Fe in his most recent start.

Shining Spirit twinkles in to win Monday

RUIDOSO DOWNS-Shining Spirit, who had finished fourth against stakes company in his last two outings, found an invitational handicap field more to his liking Monday by posting a nose decision in the 400-yard test.

Shining Spirit, who had finished fourth in the Grade III Jet Deck Handicap in his last start, and also had finished fourth in the Grade I Rainbow Silver Cup in his previous start, held off the late charge of TH Dasher. Heavenly Smashed, a shipper from Remington Park, was another head back in third.

Shining Spirit, a 4-year-old gelded son of Streakin Six, was scoring his second victory of the meeting.

For the seventh consecutive day, there were no winners in the Twin Trifecta wager. When racing resumes here Thursday, there will be a carryover pool of $55,283.

PAULA PAPPONI

New principal is ready to go

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Paula Papponi has one word for the coming school year: ecstatic.

The new principal at Ruidoso Middle School has already been busy with class scheduling, meeting the staff, hiring a secretary and even organizing a trip to Long Beach, California, for a conference on middle schools.

Originally from Long Island, New York, Papponi has always been interested in the Southwest and in the cultures of the Hispanic and Indian peoples.

She must have learned a lot because while in Grants, she developed and accomplished many things with an Indian Club at the middle school there.

A pottery collector as well, she is also beginning to dabble in Mexican cooking as one of her many pastimes.

Papponi was drawn to New Mexico by the climate, she said. In her travels throughout the state she visited Ruidoso.

She was always impressed with the schools here and became part of the Ruidoso team after she was hired to replace Mike Gladden after he assumed the role of superintendent.

Ever since she was a young girl, Papponi has always been interested in education.

"I was the type of child who went to school and then went home to play school," she said.

Since her college days she's always been involved in secondary education, but enjoys the middle school years the most.

"They're not babies anymore and yet, they're still not adults," she said. The middle school years are an important transition period for youngsters as they prepare for high school, she said.

Among the challenges she foresees in the coming year is the completion of the renovation project at the sixth grade building.

But Papponi also wants to involve the students and teachers together with parents and the whole community to provide the best educational opportunities possible.

She realizes this will also mean her involvement in the community as well.

But right now the busy middle school principal is ironing out the kinks in the scheduling and looking for a home for herself and her husband.

Papponi also has the honor of taking charge of the middle school named the best in the state last year by the New Mexico Association of Middle Schools.

But this honor also comes with the responsibility of judging the entrants for this year's award.

Like all educators, Papponi enjoys the rewards offered in teaching.

One example she related was when a student of hers once approached her to say how much she enjoyed Papponi's class on Shakespeare, something the students was looking forward to with dread.

Top Gun

Former State Police captain and current sheriff's candidate Bill Butts was the overall winner at last Saturday's Fraternal Order of Police pistol match. Butts received trophies for First Master Overall and for being the Top Gun. He had one first, three seconds, and two thirds in the individual pistol matches.

Bigbee speaks to GOP women

John Bigbee, Republican candidate for state land commissioner, told the Federated Republican Women of Lincoln County Tuesday that New Mexico is rich in natural resources, yet residents are largely ignorant of the government office which controls them.

The former Deputy Land Commissioner then detailed responsibilities of the office he seeks, an office he describes as "one of the most important in New Mexico."

Bighee said the estimated value of New Mexico's natural resources is $48 billion.

"We're second only to Alaska," said Bigbee. This wealth, held in land grants and trusts, is based on reserves of natural gas, oil, coal, molybdenum, potash and copper. In these resources, New Mexico ranks among the top four in the nation.

Revenues generated from them support institutions such as state schools for the blind and deaf, New Mexico Military Institute, Carrie Tingley Hospital, the state penitentiary and others, he said.

"25 cents of every school dollar comes from revenue generated by the land grants."

Despite its apparent importance, voters remain unaware of the state land office, says the former state representative. He related an anecdote of a voter who referred to it as "government welfare." One reading of Bigbee's campaign card "changed his mind in a hurry!"

Bigbee, a past president of the international Center of Holistic Resource Management, concluded by commending the group's recycling program and voter registration efforts.

He listed his experience as deputy land commissioner as a chief qualification for his candidacy.

Hubbard Foundation donates $88,300 to Space Hall of Fame

The R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard Foundation announced a grant of $88,300 to the International Space Hall of Fame Foundation to be used in the construction of a $276,000 education building.

The Foundation was formed in 1986 by R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard of Fort Worth, Texas.

According to a news release, the Foundation is marked by an entrepreneurial approach to philanthropy, reflecting the spirit of the founders.

R.D. Hubbard is chairman of the board at A.F.C. Industry, which is the second largest manufacturer of flat glass in North America. He is also the principal owner of Ruidoso Downs Racetrack in Ruidoso, and the Woodlands Racetrack in Kansas City, Kansas.

Joan Dale Hubbard, a native of Sublette, Kansas, is an educator, and is vitally interested in the continued education of young people. Education is one of the three areas of assistance in the Hubbard's philanthropic work. Grants are also made in the arts and in humanitarianism.

The Foundation has no geographical restrictions, but the majority of the assistance is provided in Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

Funding for the Hubbard Space Science Education Building is now complete, with New Mexico State capitol outlay funds forming the base of the building fund. Construction on the new classroom building should begin this fall.

The Hubbard Space Science Education Building (HSSEB) will be used throughout the year for the large variety of educational programs available at the Space Center.

Representatives of the Hubbard Foundation presented a check to Jerry Yates, chairman of the International Space Hall of Fame Foundation, Wednesday.

The Space Center is a Division of the New Mexico Office of Cultural Affairs.

The Silver Lining

Storm is honored at Saint Anne's

by Dan Storm
The Ridge Runner

Saint Anne's Annual Outdoor Service

The annual Saint Anne's Service and picnic was last Sunday at the Paul Jones picnic grounds down by the riverside under the giant oak and walnut trees.

Church members and friends from all four churches in Lincoln County were present at this happy gathering. These churches are: Church of the Holy Mount, Ruidoso; Chapel of San Juan, Lincoln; Saint Matthias, Carrizozo; and Saint Anne's Chapel, Glencoe.

Visiting priest was The Reverend Robert Williams of Saint Andrews in Roswell. Father Williams for his sermon took his text from the parable of the mustard seed and others in the Gospel according to Saint Matthew. He mentioned being present at a ceremony of the Mescalero Apaches and being impressed with the deep reverence of the ancient chants and other features of the rituals.

The Reverend Ann Gaddy read the prayers of the People.

An ensemble of musicians; Jane Deyo on the keyboard, Mary Cooper with harmonica and myself on the banjo, played.

Ann Gaddy gave thanks for the birthdays of John Echols, Linda Skellett, Leigh Ann Christensen and Jim Paul Whipple. And for the anniversary of J.B. and Jane Terrell.

A Surprise Blessing

During a lull in the service, Father Penn, standing before the congregation, and then out of a clear sky told the folks that I have been a lay reader at Saint Anne's Chapel since 1946; that I was wearing the vestments made by my Mother in that year; and that I am (almost certainly) the oldest active lay reader in the Episcopal Diocese of the Rio Grande.

With that he turned to Ann Gaddy standing by and began opening two gift wrapped packages. One was a beautifully framed permanent Lay Reader's license which read:

"To recognize and acknowledge the faithful service since 1946 both in the Dioceses of the Rio Grande and in the Episcopal Church in Lincoln County, New Mexico. Daniel Agnew Storm, Lay Reader. Granting from this day a permanent license as Lay Reader, July 22, 1990.

Signed: The Right Reverend Dr. Terence Kelshaw, Bishop, Rio Grande."

Then on behalf of the Episcopal Church in Lincoln County, Father John and the Reverend Anne presented me with a beautiful blue tippet, or Sacremental scarf.

Father John Penn presents Dan Storm with a permanent lay reader's license.

As my heart filled with unbounded thankfulness, I felt my Mother's spirit close by, rejoicing along with me and all the dear friends present, and other loved ones in Heaven and in this world.

I am grateful also to all those everywhere who have helped, inspired and blessed me all these years. May God bless you, one and all.

Rufe Dunnahoo

Services were conducted Monday, July 30 at South Park Cemetery in Roswell, for Rufe Dunnahoo, who was called home by Our Lord on July 27.

He was born in Roswell, May 15, 1931, to Henry Alex and Tommie Owens Dunnahoo, and was a life-long resident of Roswell. he was a member of Roswell First Presbyterian Church, and a veteran of World War II in the U.S. Navy.

He is survived by his wife, Norma; sister, Tommie Sue Dunnahoo; two brothers, Owns Dunnahoo and Pat Dunnahoo; eight sons, three daughters, three sisters, and eight grandchildren.

Rufe is named for his grandfather, a pioneer who brought a caravan of covered wagons into Roswell in the late 1870s and was a friend of Billy the Kid. Rufe and his family were my long-time friends, and often visited the Storm Ranch.

We rejoice that our good friend, Rufe, is safe and happy with Our Lord in Heaven.

Trankie and Nora Silva Honored

A reception honored Tanquilino "Trankie" and Nora Silva on the occasion of their retirement after 53 years of service as school bus contractors for Capitan Municipal Schools.

More than 400 people gathered to honor this well-beloved couple at the home of their son and his wife, Frank and Connie Silva, a half mile east of Trankie and Nora's home beside the highway over near Indian Divide. Hosts for the reception also were their two daughters, Janice Silva Ware and Becky Tillman.

Music was furnished by a group from the Community Fellowship Church in Capitan, Grober Dobbs and his group. Marcos Barela of Carrizozo played the accordion. Among the singers was Sherry Underwood, who also played the guitar. Tom Crost helped out as master of ceremonies.

Trankie and Nora live on the ranch where Trankie was born March 4, 1916. Trankie is a veteran of World War II in the Coast Guard and is active in Veterans Affairs.

Trankie and Nora said they have enjoyed every minute of the 53 years, and have been inspired by watching the children under their care grow up to be fine citizens. Trankie is happy that he can say that in all the years no accident has been charged to any of his drivers, one of which was Nora for 35 years.

All of us are proud of Trankie and Nora, and we wish them all happiness and God's blessings in their well deserved retirement.

Lincoln Days Getting Ready

Proctor is appointed to a state task force

A local elected official will represent local government in a task force appointed by the governor.

Lincoln County Clerk Martha McKnight-Proctor will serve on the Open Records Task Force to review and make recommendations for any needed changes in open record statutes.

Proctor is part of the 15-member committee which was created by legislation earlier this year.

The first meeting of the task force Proctor will attend is scheduled for August 30 in Santa Fe.

The group will study the Open Records Law and must make its recommendations by December 1, for any changes.

Proctor said many gray areas exist in the statute.

'Zozo citizens speak out on Superfund cleanup

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Carrizozo water got a clean bill of health during a meeting Monday.

Cyanide contamination in the groundwater near Carrizozo has not entered the domestic water supply.

"There is nothing wrong with the city water," said Dennis McQuillan of the Environmental Improvement Division during a public meeting in Carrizozo Monday.

McQuillan was present with representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency to explain a proposed plan to clean up cyanide tainted groundwater at a bankrupt milling site just east of the Carrizozo city limits.

The site, known as the Cimarron Mining and Milling site, was designated as a Superfund site by the EPA on October 4, 1989.

Residents in Carrizozo have until August 17 to file written comments either in support or against the plan which proposes to pump about three million gallons of the contaminated water into the Carrizozo municipal sewer system.

At the point of entry into the sewer line the water must be at or below a predetermined level of cyanide established by EID. Any time the cyanide goes beyond this level, EPA is required to stop pumping the water into the sewer.

After it has entered the sewage treatment process, the cyanide will be broken down in the Imhoff tanks at the facility and in the lagoons.

The use of municipal sewer systems for cleaning contaminants out of a water supply is nothing new and is perfectly acceptable, said McQuillan.

In fact, several municipal systems in the state are now being used, or have been used, to clean gasoline out of water supplies, said McQuillan.

The process proposed to clean up the Cimarron site is similar to the processes used to clean cyanide out of water used in the electroplating industry, he said.

"We are convinced it will work," said McQuillan.

The introduction of cyanide into the treatment plant will not disrupt equipment, nor will the cyanide pose a threat to the lagoon water which has been used in the past for field irrigation, said McQuillan and Paul Sieminski of the EPA.

The contamination at Cimarron resulted from improper use of cyanide solution during a gold milling process at the site in the early to mid 1980s, said Hunter Nolan of the environmental engineering firm of Camp Dresser & McKee, which conducted the on-site investigation last summer.

Cyanide solution was dumped into unlined cinder-block trenches, as well as into an unlined discharge pit area, allowing the toxic chemical to percolate directly into the soil, said Nolan.

Out of 17 test wells drilled either on or near the site, one well tested at 4,000 parts per billion (ppb) of cyanide, which is 20 times higher that the federal allowable standard of 200 ppb.

The contamination was in a shallow groundwater zone at about 55 feet and was confined to the site and, therefore, does not pose a threat to water zones used for domestic water supply.

However, just how toxic a level of 4,000 ppb is for humans was briefly debated during Monday's meeting.

Carrizozo pharmacist Hal Sims said a person would have to drink 12 gallons of the water from the site, and drink it very quickly, before the cyanide could possibly have toxic effects.

Low dosage levels of cyanide in a drinking water supply are normally metabolized by the body, said Nolan. He also said he was not prepared to discuss the possible long-term consequences of drinking cyanide contaminated water.

Children are generally more vulnerable to contaminants in a water supply, but just how vulnerable children are to cyanide is not clearly known, said McQuillan.

There are nine criteria EPA uses to choose a particular plan of action, one of the criterion being acceptance by the community.

The purpose of Monday's meeting was to gather public response and input into the proposal of discharging the contaminated water into the municipal sewer system.

The proposed plan was one of six considered by EPA.

The other eight criteria for choosing a plan inlcude its ability to protect the public health and environment, compliance with all applicable laws, the long term effectiveness of the plan, the eventual reduction of toxicity and the removal of the contamination source, the short-term effectiveness of the plan, the ease of implementation of the plan, the cost and state acceptance of the plan.

The proposed plan is estimated to cost $95,000 and will take about 13 months to complete.

Approximately $531,000 have been spent altogether on the investigation of the Cimarron site, said Sieminski.

Because the proposed plan intends to use chlorination as part of the cyanide-breakdown process, Sims asked why isn't EPA considering an on-site method of chlorination, such as injecting bleach or a similar oxidizing agent, into the wells.

Such an alternative might cost the taxpayers considerably less money, said Sims.

Both Sieminski and Nolan responded that the permeability of the soil on site presents a problem for that type of process, although Sims' idea was not at all farfetched.

Sims continued to criticize the plan for its cost, saying there must be other alternatives that cost less.

"It doesn't seem to pass the smell test with me," he said.

Sieminski explained not all the Superfund monies come from general taxpayers, but that a larger portion comes from taxes levied on the chemical and petroleum industry which the EPA considers to be the heaviest polluters.

The Cimarron site is also a relatively inexpensive site as compared to others, said Sieminski.

For example, the San Juan well number 6 in Albuquerque is also a Superfund sight. Several millions of dollars have been spent there and the extent and level of solvent contamination in the groundwater there has still not yet been determined, said McQuillan.

Since designation on the National Priorities List, naming it as a Superfund site, the extent and level of contamination at the Cimarron site was determined and a plan developed in about one year.

Part of the proposed plan also includes the removal of any cyanide solution left on site, the backfilling of the trenches and discharge pit, and the removal of chemical metal stripper still there.

Carrizozo resident Ralph Forsythe told the EPA representatives that an effort to remove the metal stripper was promised last year, but the chemical remains.

"I want the metal stripper removed and I want it done now," said Forsythe.

An EPA staffer speaks during a public hearing in Carrizozo.

Sieminski explained it took some time before the bankruptcy trustee would release the stripper from its list of assets. Once that was accomplished, the manufacturers of the stripper were contacted.

One manufacturer came out to inspect the chemical and decided it had expired and was of no use, said Sieminski.

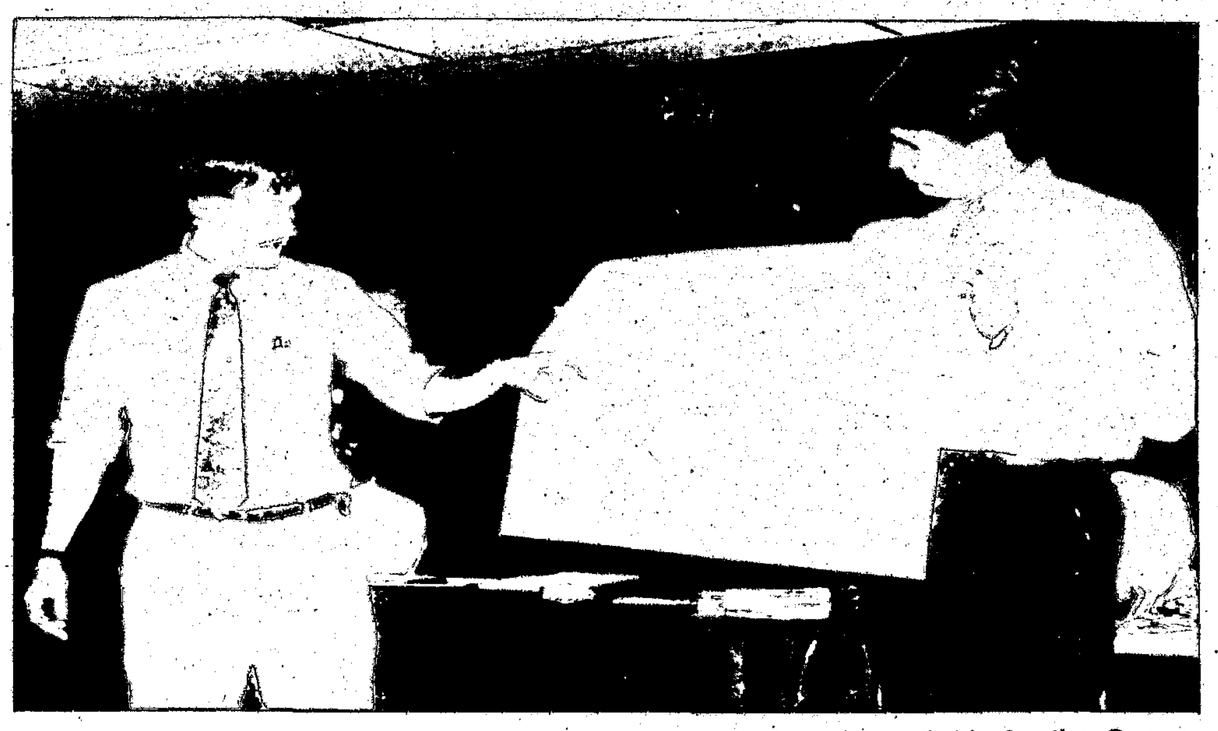
But another manufacturer indicated it will come out and remove the stripper from the site, he said.

Forsythe also requested an itemized statement of the monies EPA spent on the Cimarron site, another request that was made last year.

When remedial work begins on the site, local labor will be considered, said Sieminski.

OSHA requires that workers on a Superfund site complete 40 hours of safety training. Although EPA typically in the past hasn't provided the training, the possibility exists that EPA can somehow provide the training to local laborers, said Sieminski.

Forms for making written statements to the EPA can be obtained at Carrizozo City Hall.



Two representatives of the Environmental Improvement Administration display some charts during a public hearing over the proposed cleanup methods for the Superfund site in Carrizozo. Members of the public voiced concerns over the plan.

Looking stylish

The Ruidoso Federated Woman's Club presented its annual brunch and style show Saturday at Cree Meadows Restaurant. Members and guests saw some of the latest fashions provided by local women's shops and had a laugh at some of the "fashions" that probably won't ever make it into those boutiques. Club president Lillian Steele is shown at the podium during the fundraiser that benefits Woman's Club projects, including the Girls Ranch.

Capitol Comments

How about a big thank you for Saddam?

by KATE McGRAW
Santa Fe Columnist

You Gotta Admit...

...It's a strange feeling to feel grateful to a man national columnists are describing as a modern-day Hitler. (Hitler wasn't modern enough for them? God help us.)

Whom am I dithering about? Saddam Hussein, president-as-long-as-he-wants-to-be of Iraq.

That Hussein is considered a bloody-minded dictator with visions of grandeur is no secret. He reportedly bullies his own people, murdering his political enemies, poison-gassing his native people, the Kurds.

But he's also doing us — I mean us New Mexicans — some good these days.

Talk about feeling ambivalent.

The man has the Middle East in an uproar and he's not likely to develop a sudden case of the humbles. He's planning to take on all of the Arab world, preparatory, of course, to destroying Israel. He's threatening Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, which are relatively defenseless, and blustering against both Iran and Egypt.

And he's bluffed the OPEC nations into cutting production of oil to raise prices steeply...

**** ***** ****

Increasing the World Price of Oil...

...Will increase the price of West Texas Crude, which will mean, praise Allah, more revenues for the strapped State of New Mexico.

Prices have been hovering between $13 and $15 per barrel. Hussein wants them at $21 immediately-if-not-sooner and his subsequent goal is $25 per barrel.

Let's spell this out. For every $1 per barrel the price of oil increases, New Mexico can expect to reap about $10 million more per year in combined tax revenues.

And as any schoolteacher, state employee, or recipient of state services could tell you — boy, could we use the money.

**** ***** ****

For That Matter...

...The members of the Legislature will tell you that. They're the ones who have to stretch the state revenues over the needs.

The Legislature has been faced with having no, count 'em, zero dollars to spend on capital outlay projects next year or for a time to come.

The flow of severance tax money had slowed to such a trickle that it barely covered the severance tax bonds already issued — and there are about $30 million worth of already authorized projects waiting for new bonds sales.

The $1.9 billion operating budget for the current fiscal year was enacted by the 1990 Legislature based on the hope and expectation that the price of oil would average $17 per barrel during the year.

Needless to say, with the prices drooping, the spirits of the state's financial wizards had been sagging also. After Hussein's power-play at last week's OPEC meeting, the bureaucrats are feeling better, too...

**** ***** ****

Even More Importantly...

...Hiking the price of oil to that level could be a God-send to the producers in New Mexico's oilfields, making it worth while to go back into the fields and rework those old strippers.

And that would mean new jobs for oil workers, and more money flowing into hard-put local businesses...

**** ***** ****

Not That We Can Count Our Petro-Dollars...

...Before they appear. Remember that the higher prices depend on this one man, Saddam Hussein, whimsical, arbitrary, belligerent and with a bad case of the hates for the U.S.

And Hussein is making such a nuisance of himself, you see, accusing his neighbors of aggression against his country, claiming he'd be justified in attacking them, etc.

Last week, Hussein blustered that unless he got all he wantd from OPEC, including forgiveness for his Iran War debts as well as cuts in production — the "Iraquis will not forget the saying that cutting necks is better than cutting means of living."

The problem is, the Saudis, long the OPEC power, and the Iranis, long Hussein's mortal enemies, and quite a few other resentful Arabians may not forget that saying either.

And will we have the grace to swallow our oil-funded hopes and say, Perhaps It's All for The Best, if something untoward happens to Saddam Hussein? Talk about ambivalence...

Editorial

Is bigger always better? We have to wonder if the Ruidoso Village Council is sacrificing quality for size in its new direction for the civic center. And we have to question the chain of events that seems to end with a big concrete building more suitable for the annual motorcycle rally than anything else.

On the surface, it looked like the Ruidoso Village Council made a good move in canceling the contract with civic center architects and going out for proposals on designing the center. That architectural contract, originally in the 80 thousands was climbing toward twice that, and we're always pleased when our leaders save us money.

The village will pay the architects $61,000, and seek proposals with new specifications. We're told the original designs will be available for the new architects, and so it's not a total loss. Sounds good, right? Well, maybe, but a couple of things are a little funny about the chain of events.

We were a little surprised when the council listened to a presentation from Speed Fab-Crete some weeks ago. We had to wonder how a presentation from one company fits in with the state rules and regulations on purchasing.

Meanwhile, while we still had an architect, we read in the July 23 edition of "Tarrant Business" that Speed Fab-Crete Corporation, a Kennedale, Texas, corporation, was negotiating with the Village of Ruidoso for construction of a new convention center. The Speed Fab-Crete president quoted in the story must be mistaken, right?

And then on Tuesday, the council took action to terminate the architectural contract and then voted to request proposals for design services. Seems that the new proposal includes a new provision: "Proposers are advised that the Village has been informed of certain economies that can be gained through the use of prefab construction techniques." And we know who informed the village of those economies.

The emphasis is now on size, and we hope our council isn't taking a chance on losing the performing arts center that is (was?) being donated by A.D. and Jackie Spencer.

Things are looking a little different now. Maybe we've just tossed $61,000 down the drain in exchange for what? A big concrete building with an empty lot where the performing arts center belongs?

We believe the Village of Ruidoso and its citizens should have a civic center that will complement the resort hotel and golf course already being constructed. This community will benefit from a smaller, but well-designed, well-built civic center with meeting rooms that can be expanded in years to come. And we further urge our leaders to take care to abide by the spirit and the letter of the state and village purchasing rules as this project continues.

No, bigger isn't always better.

Letters

DEAR EDITOR:

It comes as a surprise to me that a few people have voiced objections to the Institute balloon flying in the Ruidoso area, prompting a request to the Village Council for a public hearing.

I would like to provide the citizens of Ruidoso with some additional information which may facilitate their understanding and appreciation of the benefits to be derived from having the balloon available for not only the tourist population, but also the members of the community.

I bring the balloon to Ruidoso on weekends and holidays, which gives tourists additional activities to enjoy during their stay, producing additional sources of revenue.

Ballooning is a safe sport, providing danger neither to the environment nor the passengers. As the pilot I have a flawless 18-year safety record, and over 1,000 hours of flight time.

Compared to fixed-wing craft, balloons are extremely quiet, and their gentle movement disturbs very few, with the possible exception of an occasional dog.

We launch from several areas in an effort to vary the areas over which we move, though this is strictly dictated by the movement of air currents.

We are cognizant of and adhere to current FAA regulations, and check with FAA officials periodically to maintain their standards, as well as clearing our flight plans with Flight Service.

We believe that we are providing financial and aesthetic benefits to Ruidoso, as well as giving the residents and tourists an opportunity to share a unique and satisfying experience. We are convinced that the majority of residents support this summertime addition to their community's activities.

Rella R. Hinkle II
Roswell

DEAR EDITOR:

What makes people want to leave Ruidoso or maybe never move here?

One thing is the Gestapo type management of the Village of Ruidoso water billing Department.

This is what happens if you have a vacant house and would like to have the water temporarily out of use. Instead of putting a simple lock on the water meter until it is put back in use as other cities do, the water department pulls the meter and charges $250 to replace the water service.

If a property owner sells or leases a property, the purchaser or lessee puts up a deposit. However, he can run up a bill far in excess of the deposit without having the water cut off. This can occur because the city does not care. They can always file a lien on the property, regardless of who is responsible. The property owner has to pay.

A person puts up a water deposit. The city reads the meter on the 14th of the month and you are billed the 1st of each month. A lessee can move into a house on the 27th of the month and put up a deposit that day. He is not liable for any amount of water he uses until the 15th day of the next month, and is billed accordingly. The property owner pays.

Oh well, this gives them 15 days to change the records. The meter readers do not have to get out of their trucks to read the meter. Just another way of doing business at Village Hall.

Fox, Buchanan are married

Jennifer Fox and Michael Buchanan of Ruidoso were married recently at Gateway Church of Christ. Paul Wetzel, brother-in-law of the groom, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Herman Fox of Ruidoso and Patsy Fox of Albany, Texas. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Buchanan of Ruidoso.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of slipper satin and lace. The close-fitted Victorian style bodice featured a neckline trimmed with seed pearls and lace. The puff sleeves were trimmed with a satin ruffle and ribbon. The hemline and cathedral train were trimed with a deep lace ruffle and satin bows.

The bride wore a fingertip veil of silk roses and tulle. She wore pearl earrings, a gift of the groom and carried a bouquet of royal blue and white pixie carnations and baby's breath. She also wore the traditional blue garter.

Deanna Brooks of Paducah, Texas, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Khristi Thompson and Leah Thompson of Paducah, Texas, Twylla Wetzel of Carrizozo, and Rebecca Dykes of Ruidoso. All the attendants wore tea-length dresses of royal blue taffeta, and carried a single white carnation with fern and baby's breath.

JENNIFER AND MICHAEL BUCHANAN

Joe Buchanan, father of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Mike Pritchett and Jeff Shaw of Ruidoso. Ushers were Jeff Fox of Paducah, Texas, and Stan Dykes of Ruidoso. They wore grey tuxedos with royal blue cummerbunds and ties.

Flowergirl was Torrey Wetzel of Carrizozo, niece of the groom. She wore a dress of white chiffon dress accented with a baby blue satin sash.

Ringbearer was Clinton Wetzel of Carrizozo, nephew of the groom. He wore a white linen suit.

Wedding music was provided by James and Cindy Hobbs and Carl and Renee Parsons of Ruidoso.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. Karen Garvin of Lubbock served the bride's cake and Gina Harvey of Vernon, Texas, served the punch. The groom's cake was served by Debbie Pritchett of Ruidoso and coffee was served by Robin Hanawait of Tularosa.

Others in the houseparty were Barbara Tidwell of Pinon; Vera Dykes of Marble Falls, Texas; Darla Harlas, Barbara Vickers, and Nadine Brookings of Ruidoso.

The bride was a 1986 graduate of Paducah High School, Paducah, Texas, and is currently employed at Wohlgemuth's Hairstyling. The groom was a 1984 graduate of Ruidoso High School and is currently employed by Parsons Mechanical.

The couple will reside in Ruidoso after their honeymoon trip to Hawaii.

Ruidoso teen is selected for a science, technology conference

Thirty high school students from 20 American Indian nations across the United States are meeting at the University of Iowa in a program designed to encourage their pursuit of careers in science and technology.

Chris Carusona Jr. of Ruidoso, a member of the Oneida Tribe, was selected from among 500 applicants to attend the three-week Comprehensive Enrichment Program through July 28 on the UI campus. It is a program of the American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES), conducted with funding from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

Attending the UI camp on Life and Environmental Sciences are incoming 10th graders, who are of high scholastic and creative ability, according to site coordinator Judy Morrison. The program is designed to prepare them for entrance into math and science disciplines at the collegiate level, leading to careers in science and technology, she added.

AISES sponsors math and science camps for American Indian students in grades 8 to 11 through the Comprehensive Enrichment Program at four collegiate sites, including the UI. Students attend the camps for their grade level each summer and in the final year, grade 12, participate in a research project or internship.

Father John Penn (left) leads the applause for Episcopal Church lay leader Dan Storm during special services on "Fifth Sunday."

Episcopal Church honors Dan Storm

Daniel Agnew Storm was honored for his long service as a lay reader in the Episcopal Church at a special outdoor service on Sunday, July 29.

According to a news release provided by the church, Dan assumed his duties as a lay reader at the Chapel of St. Anne in Glencoe in 1946. At that time, Dan's mother made him a set of vestments which he is still wearing every Sunday.

At the annual St. Anne's picnic, the four congregations of the Episcopal Church in Lincoln County gathered for a "Fifth Sunday" celebration and to thank God for Dan Storm's ministry in Lincoln County.

Father John Penn, the rector of the Episcopal Church in Lincoln County, presented Dan with a letter from Bishop Terence Kelshaw of Diocese of the Rio Grande, which noted Dan's long and faithful service, and which made him a permanent lay reader in the Diocese.

In addition, Dan was presented with a blue lay reader's tippet (a scarf-like vestment) as a gift from Lincoln County Episcoplians.

All of this was a carefully prepared surprise for Dan, who later said: "This is the only time in my life that I'm absolutely speechless."

Storm is a long-time resident of Lincoln County and a regular columnist for The Ruidoso News.

Spencer scholarship goes to Roswell cadet

New Mexico Military Institute has awarded the Truman A. Spencer Jr. Memorial Scholarship for 1990-91 to Robert Nesselrodt III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nesselrodt of Roswell, school officials announced. Nesselrodt will enroll next month as a high school junior.

The $1,000 Spencer scholarship is given each year in honor of Truman A. Spencer Jr., class of 1935, of Carrizozo. Spencer served on the commandant's staff and the Board of Regents of NMMI, and distinguished himself in World War II as a squadron commander in the Army Air Corps.

After the war, Spencer came back to New Mexico and conducted a successful ranching career in Carrizozo. He was the grandson of New Mexico's first statehood governor, William C. McDonald.

Mrs. Truman A. Spencer Jr. and the family still operate the fourth generation of the Bar W Ranch near Carrizozo. The family has supported scholarships at NMMI since 1932.

Teachers team up with top students to tackle some really big problems

High school teachers and students from throughout New Mexico and West Texas will tackle sophisticated environmental engineering problems as part of the second annual New Mexico State University College of Engineering Summer Minority Seminar for High Schools.

Ruidoso High School teacher Richard Overdorf and student Alden Torres are among students and teachers from 25 high schools in 20 cities represented in the intensive education and training course for educators and selected students.

The seminar is designed to make minority students and their teachers aware of the relevance of science and mathematics to environmental engineering. The program "should assist the students in selection of a college direction as well as assist in selection of preparatory courses in high school," according to Dr. J. Derald Morgan, NMSU dean of engineering.

The program will consist of lectures complemented by workshops and laboratories in problem solving, plant design, materials development, market competition and new educational techniques.

Staged by the College of Engineering in cooperation with the College of Education, the seminar will be conducted by faculty of chemical, civil and mechanical engineering departments working with Joe Creed, assistant dean of engineering. Current engineering students and professors will serve in a mentoring role to participating high school students.

The seminar is made possible by a grant from the ARCO Foundation to the NMSU colleges of engineering and education with co-funding from U.S. West, Conoco and the Waste Management Education and Research Consortium (WERC). The grants were obtained through the efforts of Creed and Dr. Juan Franco, NMSU associate vice president for academic affairs. Funding provides room and board and a stipend to all high school participants.

NMSU Regents Program

Sanchez and Lopes are wed

Leala M. Sanchez and Orlando Lopes were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony at 2 p.m. May 20.

The ceremony was attended by close friends and members of the family.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Montes of Hondo.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Lopes.

The reception took place at the American Legion Hall in Albuquerque, where the couple and their friends and family danced from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m.

The Plant Corner

Start right with young, healthy plants

by SALLY BLACK
Ruidoso News
Plant Specialist

DEAR SALLY:

We have just made the final decision to buy our first home. The closing will be in about 30 days. We both enjoy houseplants and would really like to know which plants to begin with.

I have saved your columns for about a year, but would appreciate your help to get us started with the right plants. Thank you.

Janie R.

DEAR JANIE:

Mercy, what a refreshing switch. So many go out to buy their plants and choose the ones on sale or are stuck with plants given to them by well-meaning friends.

I cannot give you exact rules about watering, fertilizer, repotting and so on. Plants, like people, often have quirks of their own that require special treatment.

Therefore, the best and surest way to grow a good house plant is to let the plants themselves tell you what they need. And they always will — if you know how to read the signals the plants will give you. For instance, let's say you've just bought a beautiful geranium. It is short and bushy — with leaves of a deep healthy green — with many lovely blooms — soon you discover the lower leaves are turning brown and dying, and new flower buds are no more. Not only that, but the plant is getting tall leggy-looking and the plant seems to be falling over. Your geranium is telling you — in every way it can — that it is starved for light.

Answer is to relocate it to a sunnier exposure or add some artificial light.

It is best, of course, to have some understanding of your growing conditions, and of the plant's requirements, before you go out and buy. So, rather than striking out blindly and buying the first plant that catches your fancy, really shop, ask questions, talk to friends who are successful at growing house plants. Try to learn the plant's growing requirements, such as humidity, temperature, light, etc. If there is doubt about whether a given plant will grow in your conditions — stop — ask questions. Another thing to look out for is the plant's health. Check for crisp leaves, good color, not limp and yellow or turning brown at the tips. Also check for insects or insect eggs on the stems and undersides of leaves. And remember, even if your home provides better than average growing conditions, your plant is still going to suffer a shock from being taken from the green house comforts to a situation where there is less light, etc.

Most plants have a remarkable ability to adapt to changed conditions, that's why they're considered houseplants to begin with. But, as with people, older plants become more set in their ways and find it harder to adjust to changes than younger ones. It's best to buy young plants, they are less expensive and will adapt to their new home with less stress and strain.

Once you've purchased your plant, be sure to get it home safely. If weather is cold, wrap the plant so it won't get chilled, and don't leave it sitting in a hot or cold parked car. Hurry home, find a comfortable spot for the plant and let it recuperate a few days before repotting, if necessary, giving it a good dusting and bath — never use cold water.

Just a reminder, common-sense will be your best helper along with experience. Good luck. I hope I've been of some help.

The "myth" about hypnosis is that it renders you powerless. The truth about hypnosis is that it helps you find your power.

Art!

Visitors Carol Lamb and Leslie Lamb of Midland, Texas, visit with artist Judith Ann Malewski (right) at the 1990 Ruidoso Art Festival last weekend. Malewski is from McDade, Texas. Her crisp, sharp paintings feature farm animals and recognizable shapes. One of her paintings graced the cover of an Art Festival tabloid section in The Ruidoso News.

Food booths at the Art Festival were popular with young and old alike — cotton candy to hamburgers to sausage on a stick. Dozens of patrons crowded into the huge circus-like tent for a meal or a snack.

Puppets were like a magnet for youngsters at the Art Festival. Here youngsters watch as hand puppets are manipulated for their amusement. Above, one of the top 10 artists at the festival poses with one of his favorite "creatures" with the funny faces. He is Vern Pollin, "sculptor creator of fantasy" from Dallas, Texas.

More art ...

Virtually dozens and maybe hundreds of collectors turned out Saturday to have their Tom Clark figures authenticated and registered at Mountain Annie's Gifts. The creator, Clark, is shown at work at the Ruidoso gift shop in his medium, clay. He creates Woodspirits, Mountaineeers, Seafaring Characters and gnomes.

Our People Make A Real Difference!

Furr's Label Makes A Real Difference

Sharon Maines
Director of Consumer Affairs

At Furr's, we offer our customers a choice between national brands and our own Furr's label products. These products offer you the quality of the leading national brands at a price that's even more affordable. We have hundreds of excellent Furr's label products and are expanding our selection daily. You choose the brand you want. And with the Furr's label, you save the difference.

To help ensure the best quality and value our Furr's Quality Assurance Laboratory continually tests and monitors the quality of our Furr's label products at our distribution center. We not only follow USDA grading standards, but in many cases, exceed the standards. If it doesn't pass our own tough standards, it doesn't go on the shelf. As a result of these efforts, you can be assured that any Furr's label product quality is as good or better than comparable national brands.

All of our Furr's label products carry a 100% money back guarantee. And if you have questions or comments, we list a toll-free number you can call on all products. Our labels also have factual nutritional information to keep you better informed.

To find real values and the best quality when shopping, look for our Compare and Save signs and Save Big arrows. Remember, you choose the brand. And you save the difference.

We are really proud of the products we sell under our own label. Compare Furr's quality and prices against national brands and you will find unbeatable value and quality every time.
