Lincoln County election breaks new ground

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Mirroring the high turnout nationwide, more than 81 percent of Lincoln County's 7,403 registered voters showed up at the polls Tuesday.

But unlike the rest of the state, they voted heavily Republican and financially conservative, rejecting all of the nine proposed bond issues.

They returned the two incumbent Republican county commissioners to their seats on the board and elected two Republicans and one Democrat to fill the remaining posts on the newly-expanded board.

If Lincoln County voters had their way, George Bush would be president for another four years.

With the rest of the voters in the Second Congressional District, the county returned Republican Joe Skeen for another term in Congress.

In state offices, Lincoln County voters picked Democrat Pete Campos to continue to represent them in District Eight of the State Senate.

Republican J.O. "Bud" Payne will continue to serve as probate judge.

Voters in Lincoln County joined the rest of the state in rejecting proposed constitutional amendments to allow counties to borrow to repair public buildings and to let a committee set up a reimbursement system for state legislators. In line with the state as a whole, they approved an amendment reaffirming victim's rights and one limiting the terms of elected officials.

But when it came to money, they stood fast against any new bonds. The proposal for bonds for education failed locally by the narrowest margin. Statewide, voters approved three of the nine bond issues: education, senior citizen's facilities and equipment, and health care facilities for Taos and Portales.

The county commission election took on special significance this year because the board is being expanded from three to five positions, with each member elected from within a home district.

Some apprehension has been expressed by critics of the approach that it will foster parochial thinking and pork barrel politics.

Incumbent Lincoln County Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer won in District One by more than a two-to-one margin over his Democratic challenger, Carrizozo town trustee Harold Garcia.

"We had an excellent turnout, which I think meant people saw the national concern, as well as being involved with choosing who would fill the newly-created seats on the local commission. That's good," Spencer said. "By reseating (Commissioner) Monroy (Montes) and me, I think they were saying they liked the basic trend and we should stay in that direction.

"The key with the five members will be not to think district, but to consider Lincoln County as a whole. That's the only thing that could hurt. We're a small county and need full support of all five members.

"I think it's going to be OK," he said.

He noted that some candidates had been referring to the county budget as $6-million. He said they must bear in mind when trying to initiate new projects that only $2-million of that figure is working money.

"I noticed in their ads they said they'd like to see this or that, but it all will cost," Spencer said.

L. Ray Nunley will be the lonely Democrat on the new commission. He defeated Republican opponent and former principal Mike Kakuska by more than two-to-one.

"Not to be ungracious, but I loved winning," he said Wednesday.

"My focus will be two-fold initially. I'm concerned about the county as a total entity and in it being run in the most cost efficient manner so the taxpayers get the most for their money," Nunley said. "Senior citizens also will be a focus. Corona needs a lot of attention and I'd like to address that first."

The county must look beyond its

Police credit merchants for safe, mischief-free Halloween

Little ghosts and goblins walking mid-town during the daylight hours from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. was a big crime stopper according to Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor.

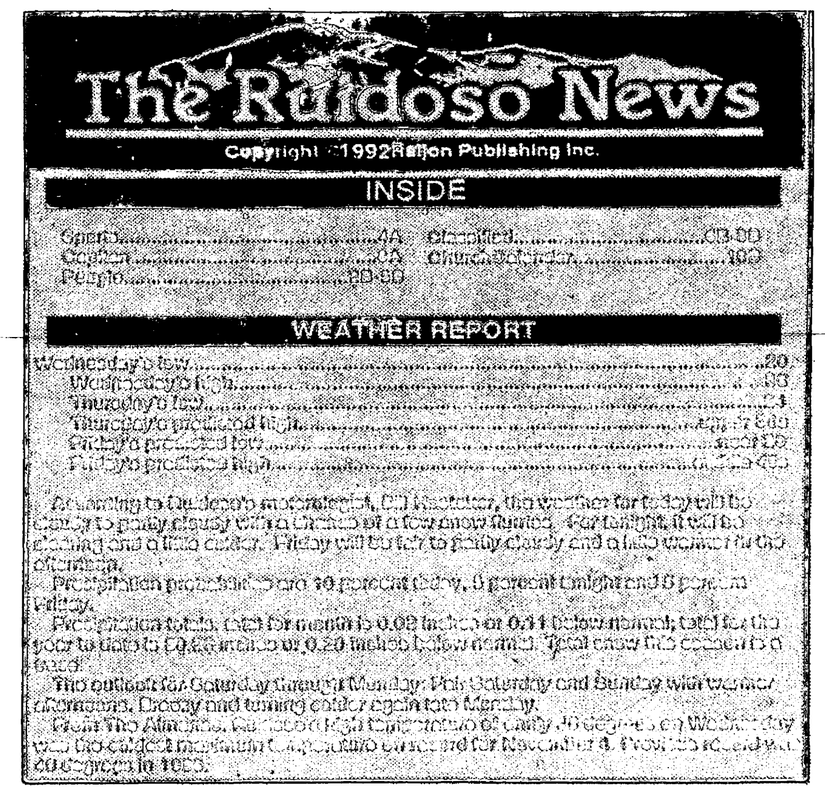
"Every year, the downtown Halloween program gets larger," said Swenor. "The merchants have been real helpful in keeping kids off the steet at night," Swenor said.

Swenor said the layout of Ruidoso in the mountains also is a deterent because of the lack of street lamps and the proximity of homes to each other.

Swenor said outside of a few eggs thrown, there was very little in the way of attempted vandalism.

About a hundred students of Ruidoso High School participated in a contest to see what class had the most students in costume. The sophomores won. The single most original costume was a student dressed as a cow.

Nob Hill Carnival, an annual costume party, provided games, a fun house and other activities for pre-school and elemntary students.



New Mechem designs previewed

Project downgraded to 3-lanes for less impact

Focusing on minimizing impacts to the community, the New Mexico Highway Transportation Department (NMHTD) has re-evaluated the designs for widening State Highway 48/Mechem Drive.

A public hearing on the new highway design was conducted Monday at the new Civic Events Center.

Two years ago, the project was designed as a 45 mph, five-lane structure with curb and gutter, storm sewers, sidewalks and provision for bicyclists.

Ruidoso area residents, for the most part, were against such an ambitious program.

Their concerns included:

1. Reasonableness of 20-year projected traffic volumes.

2. Negative impacts to businesses on State Highway 48 during construction.

3. Appropriateness of a five-lane highway for Ruidoso, a destination mountain resort.

4. Negative impacts of five lanes on driveways and cross street grades.

5. Negative impacts on adjacent property due to road way acquisitions required for a five-lane facility.

After considerable study, analysis, review and discussion among design teams, including the Federal Highway Administration, district personnel and village staff, the NMHTD determined that two viable options remain: reconstruction and rehabilitation.

One of the two options will be adopted in a resolution drafted for the Ruidoso Village Council to be presented at next Tuesday's regular session at village hall.

Reconstruction, called Option A-1, significantly reduces the impacts to adjacent properties, driveway grades and cross street grades when compacted to the initial five-lane design, according to the NMHTD. However, it does not eliminate all impacts.

This road provides for a 40 mph speed with all horizontal and vertical curves reconstructed to fit 40 mph criteria.

The NMHTD noted that limits for three-lane and five-lane adjustments may be made during the final design to allow for proper transition and traffic operation.

Reconstruction highlights include:

—Sudderth Drive to Buckner Drive, three-lane with continuous center left turn lane.

—Buckner Drive to Warrior Drive, five-lane with continuous center left turn lane.

—Warrior Drive to White Mountain, three-lane with continuous center left turn lane.

—adjust the roadway profile to more closely follow the existing terrain.

—reduce roadway widths to the following minimum standards: 11-foot through lanes; 13 foot center left turn lane; five-foot sidewalk; no special provisions for bicycles; Reduction of the number of lanes to provide minimum acceptable loss of shoulder.

The advantages of a three-lane, five-lane reconstruction were listed as:

—provides for current and projected traffic volumes and will not require additional work for the next 20 years.

—provides for drainage within roadway template and drainage basins found within project limits.

—provides pedestrian walkway, five-foot sidewalks.

—increases safety by addressing vertical and horizontal alignment, pavement conditions, clear zone and side slopes in a 40 mph design.

—provides continuous center left turn lane throughout project limits for improved safety and access to businesses, residents and cross streets.

Former Ruidoso Downs mayor dies

Jasper J. "Jack" DiPaolo, the former two-time mayor of Ruidoso Downs, died Tuesday at Sharp Hospital in Murrieta, California. He was 83.

He had been living in Temecula, California, but will be buried today (Thursday) at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Ruidoso. A funeral Mass is scheduled for 10 a.m. at St. Eleanor's Catholic Church. Reverend Richard Catanach will officiate.

Born in 1909 in Santa Fe, Argentina, DiPaolo moved to Wood River, Illinois as a child. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and relocated to Ruidoso in 1955.

With various partners, he built several subdivisions in the area and as a general contractor constructed individual homes, said Jake Harris, also a former Ruidoso Downs mayor.

LeRoy Gooch said DiPaolo was the type of person who never met a stranger.

"I knew him real well," Gooch said. "He was a good musician, played a good trumpet.

"One of the things I remember, he was instrumental in encouraging a fine trumpet player at the old Chaparral, who had a wife and five kids, convinced him to go back to college. The man and his wife both did and got master's degrees.

"That was quite an accomplishment. He took an interest in other people. He was a real nice guy and had a super personality."

Jerry and John Howden also praised DiPaolo. Howden grew up with DiPaolo in Illinois. Mrs. Howden was a former Ruidoso Downs town clerk. They had kept in touch with DiPaolo and his wife, the former Barbara Taylor, after they moved to California three years ago.

"I've known him since 1933 boundaries to determine how it can fit into the new markets that will be created by the North American Free Trade agreement," Nunley said.

Republican Wilton Howell fell only a couple dozen votes short in District Three of the same margin of win against Democrat Charles Griffin.

"I'm very pleased with the way it came out," Howell said. "My pet project will be to encourage a better understanding among the officials in the courthouse and commission. I feel the different entities should try to get together since they are attempting to accomplish the same goals for the county.

"I'd like to see some of the controversial things put to rest.

"I think we're going to have a real good commission," Howell said. "It will be nice to have some continuity with the two incumbents on board. Yet, with five members, it will be more representative. It puts a new group of people telling us what they want. I'm excited about it. The commission has more direct effect on our lives than the Presidency."

Republican Bill Schwettmann's victory over Alto neighbor and Democrat Fred Hansen in District Four was closer, but solid.

Schwettmann said he intends to spend the next few months before being sworn into office the first week in January learning about the job.

"I think it's a learning process to begin with. You have to listen," he said. "It's bad to jump in with both feet until you feel the temperature of the water.

"I kind of like what (the commissioners) were doing the last couple of years. I'm not there to dictate anything."

The campaign "has been a wonderful experience for me," Schwettmann said. "I didn't know how fine the people are, how down to earth the people in Capitan are. You don't push yourself on them. You listen and I will."

Waiting for January, he plans to study the county's budget and the packet sent to new commissioners outlining their authority and obligations.

In District Five, incumbent Republican Monroy Montes posted the tightest race, but won the majority by 124 votes.

"I didn't like the outcome of the national election, but I was pleased at the county level," Montes said.

"I don't think I will have any trouble working with the three new commissioners and I know I can work with Stirling. It should be a good mixture. We all have different styles."

Montes said his victory signified to him that the majority of people in the area of the proposed Rio Bonito land exchange by the Bureau of Land Management agree with the stance taken by the commission over the past year.

On that issue and others tackled by the commission, "I feel we have a good record over the past two years," Montes said.

He congratulated his opponent, Democrat James Sanchez, for a well-run campaign, "I look forward to him participating in county government at any level where he can serve effectively."

—will upgrade current traffic signals at Sudderth Drive and NM 48, plus provide signals at Cree Meadows and NM 48.

—promotes economic growth and domestic tranquility throughout the 20 year design life.

—project will qualify for federal funding.

—significantly reduces impacts on driveways and cross street intersection grades compared to the original five-lane design.

Negatives connected to the Option A-1 plan listed were that the design would:

—require approximately two years to construct.

—result in some driveway grades exceeding current standards (10 percent maximum.)

-require utility relocation including a million dollar plus village water line.

-require right of way acquisition prior to construction.

—possibly require revised environmental documentation which could delay commencement of construction a year or two.

-possibly require noise abatement facilities in some locations.

Rehabilitation of the roads (Option B-1) addresses poor pavement conditions, existing traffic congestion, and significantly reduces impacts during construction.

All but a few existing driveway and side street profiles will remain as they currently exist. Minor road work will be required at some locations.

Option B also confronts traffic congestion in the short term by adding lanes and signals where needed.

Depending upon actual traffic experience, this project may provide adequate traffic capacity for the next five years, according to the NMHTD.

This project provides for a 35 mph design speed with reconstruction of three existing vertical curves.

Rehabilitation will include intersection improvements and auxiliary lanes where critical, as follows:

—recycling and overlaying of existing pavement on existing grade.

—reconstruction of three vertical curves to obtain 35 mph speed.

—from Poor Drive to Cree Meadows, widen pavement and shoulders to provide two, 11-foot lanes and a continuous 11-foot center left turn lane with 6-foot shoulders.

-at Cree Meadows, provide a signal with acceleration, deceleration lanes north of Cree Meadows.

—from Innsbrook Drive to Warrior Drive, add an 11-foot lane and a 6-foot shoulder on the right (east) and restripe for two, 11-foot lanes and an 11-foot continuous left turn lane.

—improvements to the intersection at White Mountain, which will probably consist of left turn lanes and acceleration-deceleration lanes (signal is not warranted).

The advantages of rehabilitation listed are:

—will require approximately one year to construct.

—will not require significant amount of right of way acquisition.

—will not require village water line relocation but does not eliminate all utility relocations.

—improves safety by providing a 35 mph facility and improved surface conditions.

—provides some traffic congestion improvements for up to five years at major intersections and congested areas within project limits.

—will upgrade current traffic signals at Sudderth Drive and NM 48, provide signals at Cree Meadows and NM 48.

—probably will qualify for federal funding if design exceptions can be justified.

—a categorical exclusion may be adequate for environmental documents; therefore, a project could be ready for construction in future years, 1993-94.

Disadvantages of the project are:

—does not provide capacity requirements for 20-year projected traffic. Without future construction, delays associated with traffic may occur.

—does not confront clear zone and slope requirements in some areas.

—does not confront existing inadequate three drainage structures.

—level of service may decline along with business and economic growth in five to 10 years.

—it is unlikely the NMHTD will return within 20 years to do another project (leverage).

—design speed is below observed operating speed for the road.

—will require several design exceptions for use of federal funding.

when I was eight-years-old," Howden said. "He had a 12-piece orchestra (back in Illinois) and played the best places around St. Louis. He was a business agent for the workers in Wood River and for the musicians. He could pick up any instrument on the stage and play it."

DiPaolo served as mayor of Ruidoso Downs from 1969-70 and from 1972-74. Even when he was not serving in an official capacity, he tried to help the community, Howden said.

"He built St. Jude's church in San Patricio and donated work to St. Eleanor's in Ruidoso," Howden said. "He was one of the finest men I've ever met."

DiPaolo was past president of the Lions Club and the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce and was a member of the American Legion and National People to People Ambassadors program.

He is survived by his wife, Barbara, whom he married in 1969; by his brother Joe DiPaolo of Las Vegas, Nevada; by his daughters Virginia Kuhnline of Brighton, Illinois, Pamela Chertelis of Parker, Colorado and Tamara Orth of Albuquerque; 13 grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Gwendolyn Judnich and a son, John DiPaolo; a brother, Nick DiPaolo and a sister, Mayme Militello.

Windows open way to sales

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

With just 15 seconds to tell your story, the spotlight better be on the right merchandise in a window display.

Cynthia McBurney, a retail specialist with the Oregon Downtown Development Association (ODDA), told audience members at a workshop Tuesday, they must have faith that a good window display will work, because the success can't be measured.

She said if a business places an advertisement in a newspaper for $5.99 T-shirts, it can tell the response as people come in to buy it. Whether a customer comes in because of what is in the window or because of something else, is harder to tell.

The workshop was sponsored by MainStreet Ruidoso and MainStreet New Mexico and was the first of several stops for McBurney in the state. Before joining the ODDA, she was a regional special events director for Frederick and Nelson's, a full-line department store based in Seattle. She also has worked as a consultant for the National MainStreet Center.

McBurney said customers want to see originality, but to save thinking time, businesses may want to look at examples of larger stores out of the area and then change them slightly to suit their own needs.

To give them ideas and to illustrate examples of good and poor displays, she showed slides of window displays she has photographed from across the United States.

Formal balance is one element of design for window displays. With formal balance, a line can be drawn down the center of the display and will be exactly the same on both sides. McBurney said if it is out of balance, it sends the wrong message to the customer.

"If you don't have balance it dilutes the message," she said.

A window display also may have asymmetrical balance, in which it isn't exactly the same, but the objects have the same weight in attracting the eye. She said the color and lighting of an object also may impact the balance of a display.

McBurney reminded the group that white space is important in a display. Similar to looking at a Life or National Geographic magazine, each has beautiful pictures, but they also have white space to accentuate the message. On the other hand, a jammed window display is more like a technical guide that is hard to understand and doesn't have one main message, she said.

As she went through the downtown of Ruidoso on Monday, McBurney said she noticed many businesses have open-backed windows, which can cause some problems. Instead of just allowing it to be open, use a rug, blanket or other merchandise from the business for a background. A background also helps direct the light back on the main product of a display.

"This community is doing better with displays than most small communities I visit," McBurney said.

One problem here is that many of the businesses have Southwest items. Owners need to create a display that makes their store different than the one down the street.

The best place to start is to choose a classification of merchandise; for instance, just fashion boots, instead of a whole outfit. One effective example she saw in Ruidoso was a display of just three lighted lamps. McBurney said that created a very strong impression in her mind and customers would remember that store if they needed lamps.

One very frustrating experience for customers is when a display draws them into a store, but the item that is attractive is not for sale there. She said that happens when either the lighting, color or placement emphasis is put on the wrong item. Also when businesses are having a special event, they may forget they still are trying to sell a particular product, she said.

The props a decorator uses need to guide a customer's eye into the display, not away from it. McBurney said there are three types of props that can be used in a display. The first is the structural prop, such as the walls and floors. These set the perimeters of the display, and it is important to keep these basics in top shape. Clean the windows and keep the walls in good condition, she said.

Functional props are those that wear or hold merchandise, such as mannequins, shelves or chairs. McBurney said if these props are broken or don't make sense with a new display, they should be taken out of the window. People know when a towel is draped over a mannequin's hand, it usually means the fingers are broken off and that should be fixed, she said. Mannequins also should have up-to-date hair styles.

Decorative props are ones that add to the theme, such as cut out decorations or posters. All props should be in quality shape. If fabric is used, it should be ironed before it is put in the display. Signs should be easy to read and help with the message, not distract from it.

Businesses should take advantage of new colors that come out. McBurney said in the past when such colors as teal and mauve became popular, businesses used them in displays because it was being reinforced to the customer through other influences such as magazines. Having a color that is similar won't have the same effect as the new color would in a display, she said.

Many businesses have trouble with glare on windows, but there isn't much that can be done, she said. Using awnings can help, but at some time during the day, only half of the display will be out of the sun. Good use of spotlighting can also help people see a display even with a glare.

McBurney said some business owners prefer to smoke their windows, but that can distort a customer's view of the products. Another problem with the sunlight is that it fades items in a display, and although there are screens on the market that can be used, McBurney is not convinced they work. The best way to avoid fading is to change the display often. By making it a simple one, it becomes easier to do.

A spotlight will emphasis what is important in a display, but instead of using two pointing in the same direction, cross light the object to reduce shadows. Fluorescent and flood lights aren't good, because they light everything including the back walls and other props. Fluorescent lights can be used at the back of a display to make the area seem larger than it actually is, but it should be camouflaged for a nice appearance, she said.

Lighting should be on during the day because that's the high traffic period, not at night, she said.

"Little things can add a lot to your display," McBurney said.

She suggested that decorators get use to working with foam board, which is very light weight and easy to use. She said framing shops around town could demonstrate how it can be used. Decorators can paint on it to do a flooring pattern. They also could go to a flooring business in town and either borrow or buy some tiles at a fairly low cost to give the display a special touch.

If a business allows a decorator to borrow items, a sign can be put in the display window in recognition of the business. Decorators may be able to borrow from a garden nursery for green grass for Easter or plants for other times.

"When you are planning a window, give yourself time to do it all the way you want it," McBurney said. "Don't put your products behind props, and don't put them in a dark back corner."

Prior planning is especially important for a good Christmas display. Business owners should start working on a display in July, not two days before Thanksgiving, McBurney said. They need to be careful that the merchandise doesn't get overshadowed by the Christmas message or scene.

She said, "Give your customers enough clues to visualize your message, but not so many they can't see themselves using it."

Commission to tally election votes

The Lincoln County Commission will meet Friday to canvas and certify the results of Tuesday's general election.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. in the commission room of the courthouse in Carrizozo.

Commissioners will consider a change in the county's purchasing policy that would increase the dollar figure that requires competitive pricing.

Disagreement expressed by Sheriff James McSwane about the current limits is one of the issues that sparked the confrontation two months ago with the commission over the operation of the county jail.

The commission has since taken over responsibility for running the jail. McSwane had contended that requiring at least three oral, written or telephone quotes on purchased of $300 to $1,500 was unrealistic and an unnecessary burden. Most food purchases fell within that category.

As now written, the policy states that purchases of $300 or less require the best obtainable price. County manager Andy Wynham is recommending that figure be changed to $900 or less. He was in the process of revamping the figures to a more realistic level when the flare up over the jail occurred.

Wynham is recommending that the range of purchasing requiring the three telephone or written quotes be increased to $901 to $1,500 instead of $300 to $1,500.

The rest of the policy would be unchanged, with formal bidding procedures for purchases of more than $1,500.

Other items on the agenda Friday include recommendations from the planning and zoning board on approval of River's Edge subdivision, the replat of two lots in Deer Park subdivision and a request for a road width reduction variance in Fox Run subdivision.

The county's 1991-92 audit is scheduled to be reviewed and accepted.

Soccer team ties Alamo in tourney

The Ruidoso High School soccer team finished its first season with the strongest performance of the year in an all-day tournament Saturday in Alamogordo.

The Warriors drew Hobbs for their first opponent at the tournament. The game ended in a 1-1 tie, but Coach Dean Hood said the team didn't play as well as it did the rest of the tournament. The one point of the game was scored by Matt Norbury.

The most exciting accomplishment of the day came when the Warriors tied 1-1 with Alamgordo JV after being defeated by that team twice in the regular season. Hood said it had been their goal to be able to play with Alamogordo, and they did it. Mike DiNapoli scored the point in that game on a cross shot from Armando Lueras.

The final game for the day was against Gadsden, who had also beaten the Warriors twice before. The team was able to slim down the margin of defeat but lost 1-2. Hood said Gadsden has a real good ball club, and they got some good passes through the defense. He said the Warriors then tightened it up on defense and did an excellent job.

Wally Murillo, who had been injured in the last game of the season at Las Cruces, played most of the game against Gadsden and scored the one goal. Murillo made more than 20 goals during the season as the top scorer of the team.

Gadsden went on to the championship bracket but lost to Oñate, while Alamogordo won the JV bracket. Nine teams competed in the tournament.

Assistant coach Roy Seay agreed that it was the best effort of the season for the Warriors. He said the players seemed to have moved to a new level of ability during the games. He said he was especially pleased with younger players Matt Norbury, Matt Ensor, Armando Lueras and Scott Christensen. They also played together well as a team.

"We had three tough games, and each one was a battle for us," he said.

Hood said he was pleased with what the team accomplished this season as far as skills. Many of the players hadn't played for several years, and to be competitive against players who have been playing continuously since they were five years old is quite an accomplishment, he said.

"I'm just glad they played. It is neat that these kids came out and were competitive," he said.

Hood is also optimistic about the future of the Warrior team with so many strong freshmen and sophomores. An undefeated team of eighth graders will also be a nice addition to the high school program. He said he hopes to get a few more of the upper classmen who have been out of soccer for a few years to come out next year.

Hood will be working with the New Mexico Activities Association to become sanctioned for next year, but who ever they play he is sure the Warriors will be competitive.

Hondo wins by forfeit

The Hondo Eagles advanced one step farther in the six-man football play-offs with a forfeit win over Magdalena on Saturday.

Coach Ray Sharbutt said the team would have preferred to have played a game to prepare for Saturday's game against Mountainair in the semi-finals. Kick-off for this game will be at 1 p.m. Saturday at Hondo.

Magdalena had to take the forfeit after it couldn't field a team because of injuries.

This year is only the second time Hondo has been in the play-offs, with the first time being in 1988 against Mountainair. Mountainair won the game 89-62 in an offensive showcase of the two teams and continued on to the state championship for the past three years.

Sharbutt said Hondo scrimmaged Mountainair before the beginning of the season and learned a lot from it. He said the Eagles are a little slower, but they love to hit and have a good defense. It has earned them the respect of many other teams, he said.

"We are ready to play and in good health. We are going to give it our best shot. If we play up to calibre we can give them a good game. With a few breaks here and there we might be able to advance to the finals," he said.

The winner of this game will then play in the six-man championships against the winner of the Lake Arthur-Ramah game. Lake Arthur defeated Roy on Saturday 52-6 to advance.

Sharbutt said they have an outstanding group of sophomores and strong seniors and juniors. It is a young energetic team, he said. The team has scrimmaged probably the two best six-man teams in the United States, Mountainair and Fort Hancock, Texas.

"It helps when you learn to play with the best," he said.

Perfect pass

Cicelee Makowski makes the first pass up to the setter, while Monica Martinez and Christy Jacobs back her up. The Lady Warriors will play at 7 p.m. tonight here against Silver City for districts.

Sports Briefs

Seniors reach for final victory

The boys cross country team has a lot on the line Saturday when it competes in the district meet in Silver City.

The team is looking for its fourth straight district championship, and it has a chance of earning it too. Coach Ronny Maskew said they have beaten their district competitors in every meet this season, but it only counts this Saturday. If they can run like they have been so far, they should be able to do it, he said.

"We are in pretty good shape and are looking forward to Saturday. We have really focused on it all year," he said.

On Friday the varsity boys and girls teams competed in a meet at Albuquerque Academy. In girls varsity Stephanie Haas finished in 45th place and Pam Higginbotham completed it in 85th place.

Faustino Miranda was the top runner for the boys in 51st place, while Jeremie Livingston finished in 65th place. Josh Norbury earned 68th place, and Saul Mendez finished at 86th. Kody Sparks finished as the 120th runner. About 180 runners competed in the meet.

About 28 teams competed in the meet, but no team results have been released yet.

Pappy's Diner cooks on court

Only one team, Pappy's Diner, stands undefeated in the village basketball league.

Pappy's has four wins and no losses, while the Tequila Slammers have three wins and one loss. Two teams, T.J. Swan and All Arounds, are split at 2-2. The Mescalero Cavs have one win and three records this season, while Tee and Ski is still waiting for its first win.

In the first game on October 22 T.J. Swan slammed it home to defeat Tee and Ski, 93-74. Joe Monte dropped in 30 points for T.J. Swan and Andrew Herrera scored 36 for Tee and Ski. In the second game Deke LeMay lead the way for Pappy's Diner with 22 points in the 53-39 victory over the Mescalero Cavs. High scorers for the Cavs were Roger Kazhe, Michael Torres, Kenneth Star and Cyrus Wheeler, each with seven.

The Tequila Slammers defeated the All Arounds in a low scoring game, 49-32. Tequila's high scorer was Aaron Choneska with 19, while Ernie Gallegos had nine for the All Arounds. T.J. Swan won again, but this time the score was a lot closer, 54-52 over the Mescalero Cavs. Cheyenne Apachito scored 17 points for the Swans and Kenneth Star made 15 for the Cavs.

The All Arounds defeated Tee and Ski 69-52 on October 29 in the first game. Dewey Keller sunk 31 points to lead the All Arounds. John Ramos and Sonny Candelaria each had 13 points for Tee and Ski. Pappy's Diner pulled out a squeeker with the Tequila Slammers, 47-45. Bobby Snowden scored 22 points for the Diner team, while Clint Bob and Aaron Choneska both had 11 to lead the Slammers.

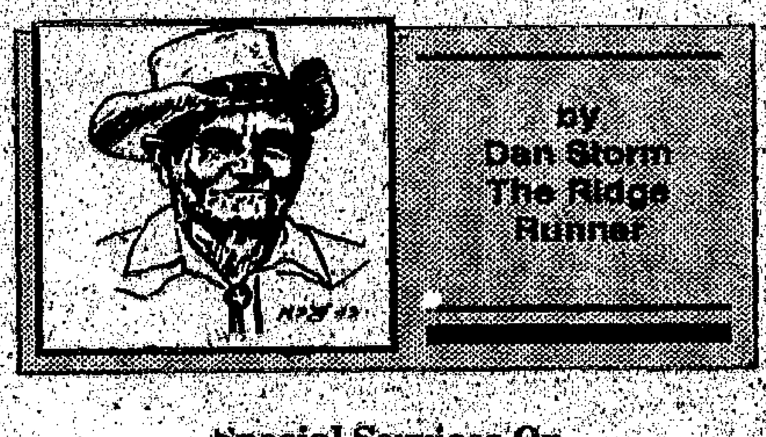
The Silver Lining

Saying hello, goodbye as months change



October's Last Day

The last day of October dawned with a west wind singing down the Vale driving clouds overhead. There was a little breath of frost in the wind as it drove the clouds flying through the sky. All day the wind kept blowing, and yet the clouds kept up an endless parade through the sky. Then, just at evening, the wind ceased blowing and the clouds drifted away.

The silvery new moon — almost a half moon — shone high in the purple sky to the south, while nearby the evening star twinkled cheerfully. One lone little cricket struck up his one-man band in a serenade to the evening of the last day of glorious October, and a welcome to the first day of the Thankful Month.

November's First Day

On the first day of the Thankful Month, the sun came over Sunrise Mountain sending its first rainbow shafts down into the Vale all still and quiet under a sky of purest blue. The snowbirds and Arizona Jays were feeding and singing their November songs; then here came the piñon jays to join in the bird chorus welcoming the first day of November.

The mountain stood out clear and plain to your sight in the bright sun, with royal purple around its base and proudly wearing its crown of shining silvery snow, the first of the year.

At nightfall the half moon and the two evening stars shone down from a dark blue sky, and from the hillside came evening serenade of the robin, peaceful and cheerful on the evening of the first day of November.

Special Services On All Saint's Day

Members of the Episcopal Church from all over Lincoln County gathered on November 1 for services on All Saint's Day.

The services opened with the blessing by Father John Penn of a new banner for the Episcopal Church of Lincoln County, a work of true inspiration made by Peggy Alford.

On the banner is a gold Celtic cross with a green mountain in the background, with the sun's rays shining from behind the mountain. At the center of the cross is the shield of the Episcopal Church. At the top of the cross is "Church of the Holy Mount" stitched in thread work. Chapel of San Juan appears on one arm of the cross and Chapel of Saint Matthias on the other, while the Chapel of Saint Anne is at the base of the cross.

Lay reader Susan Penn read from the book of Ecclesiasticus, Psalm 149 and the Book of Revelation of Saint John: "I saw another angel ascending from the rising of the sun..."

The Reverend Jan Davey read from the Gospel according to Saint Matthew: "Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled..."

The Reverend Anna Gaddy read the list of departed souls to be remembered in prayers and prayers of the people.

The Reverend Robert Batton read the prayers for the baptism of Heather Jackson.

Father John Penn read the special prayer for the day:

"Almighty God, you have knit together your elect in one communion and fellowship, in the mystical body of your son Christ our Lord. Give us grace so to follow your blessed saints in all virtuous and godly living, that we may come to these ineffable joys that you have prepared for those who truly love you; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who with You and the Holy Spirit lives and reigns, one God, in glory everlasting."

Out the church front window, the mountain appeared, between two autumn-colored Lombardy poplars in the foreground ... all gold and purple, outlined against the blue sky with a crown of new snow glistening on its top — truly a sacred mountain.

The Thankful Month

This is being sent to you just one hour after high noon on November 2. The oaks and salt cedar are shining gold all along the winding river, and the oak brush is bright orange amid the pine, piñon and cedar on the hillsides. The American flag floats in a gentle western breeze in a sky of light clouds.

It is a day of late Indian summer with the children of Mother Earth rejoicing in the warm and fragrant air.

Let us be truly thankful during this thankful month, for our many blessings.

BLM proposes federal mining land limitation rules

Rules that would more effectively regulate the use and occupancy of unpatented mining claims on public lands have been proposed by Cy Jamison, director of the federal Bureau of Land Management.

In tandem with the new rules, the bureau also will require that bonds be posted for unpatented mining claims.

"We believe this rulemaking will provide us with a much needed mechanism to prevent people from trespassing on public lands under cover of the mining law," Jamison said. "Illegal occupancy can cause environmental degradation, which is unacceptable to the bureau (BLM).

In addition, trespass often is accompanied by other illegal activities such as marijuana growing and drug production labs that can pose public dangers."

Jamison pointed out that legitimate occupancy on valid mines is an element of regulated mining, but squatting or homesteading needs to be prevented.

Clearing the public lands of illegitimate mining claims occupants will help open up that land for legitimate uses such as mining, grazing and recreation, he said.

PROPOSED RULE

The proposed rule would establish restrictions on use and occupancy of unpatented mining claims and mill sites located on BLM-managed federal lands under the amended Mining Law of 1872.

The proposed rule also would define key terms such as "use" and "occupancy" or "exploration." It would establish standards for use or occupancy, procedures for initiating occupancy, prohibited acts, procedures for inspection and enforcement, and procedures for recognizing and managing existing occupancies. Penalties and an appeal procedure would be provided.

The proposed rulemaking was published in the September 11 Federal Register. Written comments should be submitted no later than November 10 to Director (140), Bureau of Land Management, Main Interior Building Room 555, 1849 C Street NW, Washington D.C. 20240.

In a related issue, the new bonding regulations are scheduled to be published before the end of the year, but not until Congress has completed action on the pending fiscal 1993 Interior appropriations bill, Jamison said.

A Senate-passed bonding amendment is one of the issues that must be resolved at the upcoming congressional conference on the Interior appropriations bill. If the amendment becomes law, it will necessitate some changes in the bonding regulations. If the bonding amendment dies in conference, the BLM will continue on the same rulemaking track it has been on since July 1991. Jamison said. The new bonding regulations could be published as early as mid-October and take effect in November.

The proposed rule would require notice-level operations to file a certificate of the existence of a financial guarantee worth at least $5,000. Under the proposed rule, a plan-level operation would have to post BLM and/or state bonds equal to the estimated cost of reclamation, but not to exceed $1,000 per acre for exploration of $2,000 per acre for mining activities.

The rulemaking on new bonding requirements is intended to ensure proper reclamation on all mining operations on public lands.

The proposed rule, published in the July 11 Federal Register, would require financial guarantees for all mining operations greater than casual use. It would expand the number of financial instruments acceptable to the BLM as guarantees.

In preparing the final rule, the agency will carefully consider the 218 comments received in response to the proposed rule, Jamison said.

"Bonding is needed to protect against unnecessary or undue degradation of the land by ensuring the performance or reclamation," he said. "Whatever the fate of the Reid-Bumpers amendment, the BLM's forthcoming bonding regulations will become a significant component of surface management efforts."

The agency oversees nearly 750 active mining operations in 11 Western states.

It oversees nearly 1,600 plans of operations covering mining operations that disturb more than five acres per year. It has received about 6,800 notices of operations, for those disturbing five acres or less. Mining on public land extracts a variety of minerals including gold, silver, gypsum and bentonite.

Power outage

Electric service was temporarily interrupted recently to some portions of Texas-New Mexico Power Company's service area, affecting 3,100 customers, according to a press release from the company.

The phase-to-ground fault in the Gavilan Canyon Substation interrupted power for approximately one hour, and the exact cause of the fault is still under investigation. Equipment malfunction is listed as the probably cause, the release read.

TNP crews rerouted the power feed out of the Gavilan Substation and restored service to the affected customers. Damage to the substation was minor.

HAMBURGER KING

Dear Ruidoso,

I don't think that there are two tourists in this town right now. I haven't seen anyone in two weeks that I didn't know. While it makes for slow business, it is kind of nice and peaceful. It lets us fool around with things like corned beef (which I sold out of), and navy beans with ham (which I still have lots of).

Speaking of corned beef, when this ad was put together last week, someone misspelled Dick Swenor's name. Sorry about that, Chief.

Anyway, in spite of our poor spelling and no more corned beef, we are still holding out in the same old stand. Come on down and have a hamburger and help me listen to the ice cream melt.

Sincerely,

Capitan

Capitan art teacher Rice inspires students to paint

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Convention has never been his strong suit. Any doubts about that vanish as Jerry Rice rattles off some of his life choices.

It may be the same unconventional approach to life, the willingness to look at things from a different angle, that translates as inspiration to his students. Whenever local art awards are announced, many usually can be traced back to Rice's students in Capitan.

While his paintings could be called realistic, they reflect a sometimes stylized interpretation of realism with striking color choices that convey a surrealistic impression.

After years of professional growth, Rice is at the point in his career where rewards are not only measured in his personal artistic creations, but also in the development of the talent that enters his classroom each year.

It's easy to spot Rice among the faculty in Capitan. He's the one with the beard who looks like he'd be comfortable driving around in a van with the word "peace" painted on the side.

While growing up in Oklahoma, Rice amused himself by drawing cartoons. His father was a car dealer and didn't really appreciate the arts. Although he was the first in his family to show a bent for the arts, his family encouraged his interest.

"In junior high, I was somewhat of a discipline problem in art class," Rice said. "I didn't get to finish any class in art during those years. I was in high school before I spent a whole year in art."

His high school teacher was very understanding, Rice said.

"He encouraged me a lot and allowed me some freedom of thinking," Rice said. "I did a lot of experimenting with contemporary ideas. He motivated me to want to become an art teacher."

Rice classifies his art at that point as naive and lacking a strong structure.

"It was the mid-sixties, flower children, freedom of expression and the art was design-oriented flat work," Rice said.

Art wasn't his only focus.

In junior high, he started playing guitar and put together a rock and roll, country, blues band.

"We played in hotel lounges while I was in the eighth grade," Rice said. "A couple of fathers had to go with as chaperones.

"That helped me get into college, because I wanted to continue in music and art and I did all through and after college."

Rice attended Southeastern Oklahoma State University with a major in art and a minor in psychology.

"I was more interested in band when I graduated from college, but I had to look realistically at being able to earn a living," Rice said. He took a teaching job in an eastern Colorado farming community.

TEACHING

"I really got into my teaching. I moved with my dog and cried the first two weeks. I was 23 years-old, away from friends and family."

Being isolated from the usual distractions probably helped him focus. Rice said it was sink or swim.

He taught art to grades kindergarten through twelfth and social studies from seventh through ninth.

"I made it a hands on approach," Rice said, a style he still uses today to grab the interest of students.

After two years, he moved to the Navajo Reservation north of Gallup.

"That's when I really started to get an education in art," Rice said. "The students there were terrifically knowledgeable. They had fathers who were silversmiths or sand painters and mothers who were potters. They lived with art and all had a strong feeling for what art was and what it did.

"It was intimidating. All of them could draw and didn't want to know about proportionate scale. I changed my approach to meet their needs.

"That freed me a lot. It removed a lot of my inhibitions. They were never taught they couldn't do something. They were taught that they could. They didn't worry about perfectionism like Anglos or have a fear of failure."

He spent six years at the reservation.

ART DEVELOPS

"My personal art evolved while there," Rice said. "I had been absorbed with abstract, but they could incorporate realism and I started to draw more realistically. My art took a turn toward realism and the Southwest."

While visiting Ruidoso on a weekend in 1982, Rice struck up a friendship with several other artists in the area such as Ken Payne and Dave McGary.

"I got about 10 miles out of town and came back and bought a house," Rice said. "I decided to make a commitment to do what I had to do to be an artist. It was scary.

"But I wanted to be around people I could learn from. It was more the people than the place. It seems like this was where artists were being artists."

His worked at Crucis Art Bronze Foundry and Gallery and was allowed to cast some off his own sculptures there. He stayed with the foundry for about one year, then taught part time in a Las Cruces junior high.

"I got a special education endorsement on my teaching certificate," Rice said. "At that time, there were a bunch of special education positions available, but not so much in art."

After one year, he began teaching in Mescalero. But a year later his frustration level had risen to the bursting point.

"I'd been sculpting and decided to quit," Rice said. "I took a two-year break, kept the house, but moved back to Oklahoma and started playing music again."

But it wasn't too long before Rice decided, "It's true, you can't go home again and I came back to Ruidoso in 1987."

Turning away from sculpting after 12 years, Rice was reinspired to begin painting again.

"I stayed with realism, but I wanted to work with colors again," he said.

He taught in Carrizozo for one year and in 1988, was hired by Capitan, where he has been for the past four years.

Rice characterizes the atmosphere in his classrooms as "the loosest structure possible without chaos.

"I encourage self-expression within the classroom. I give them a few basic tools such as drawing skills to develop their creativity," he said. "I concentrate heavily on perspective, value and intensity."

Although the majority of students leave the class with a heightened appreciation of art, a few are more inspired.

"Even if it's not to be their career, I hope I teach them how to see," Rice said.

In his own studio, Rice has become preoccupied with brilliant colors.

"I enjoy working with normal colors and positioning them so that they become almost fluorescent," he said. "I've really been influenced by Native American painters."

Three pieces by Rice recently were accepted for the Gallup Area Arts Council's Third Annual Route 66 Revisited Art Show.

Only 55 artists nationwide with 150 pieces are represented in the national purchase award show at the Red Mesa Art Center. The show will run until December when it is scheduled to move to Chicago for a month at co-sponsor, the Near Northwest Arts Council Gallery,

The show celebrates the 66th anniversary of Route 66.

The accepted pieces by Rice are titled The Breadmaker, the Potter and Lincoln County Outlaw.

"I was a bit reluctant," Rice said. "It was the first competitive show I had entered in a long time. I sent slides in at the last minute and was really pleased that three out of the four pieces were accepted."

He approaches a painting as if he was sculpting it, Rice said. "Sculpting really helped me to understand when I paint. It increases my awareness of depth and I portray that.

"I use a lot of variety. I like playing with contrasting color in figures and landscapes. My colors are not necessarily realistic."

Rice said lately he has been drawn back to sculpting.

"I want to do both," he said. "I've been real fortunate that the school board and administration have been supportive with me being a working artist. That was the main emphasis when I was hired."

Over the years, Ruidoso has undergone many changes in the art community, Rice said.

"A lot of artists left when the economy went bad," he said. "But recently, there's been something of a rebirth with more artists moving into the area. Two or three of my students' parents are professional artists."

His own 15-year-old son, Keith, who lives in Colorado, already has won several awards in art.

"I was around him until he was about 10 years old and our styles are similar even though now I only see him a few times a year," Rice said.

Several of Rice's works hang in his classroom, including the dramatic "The Medicine Man Shields Himself from the Attack of the Meteor Shower" and humorous "Hot Lips, the Purple Heifer," a school favorite.

"My kids (students) are proud when they see my work in local galleries," Rice said.

His work is exhibited at Dallas Fine Art Gallery, Candlepower and Rio Mercado Furniture in Ruidoso.

Gary's No. 2 opens

Fifteen years of experience clipping and cutting hair gives Gary Mitchell a right to be confident about pleasing his customers.

After visiting the Bonito Lake area for seven years to stay in a cabin owned by his in-laws, Mitchell and his wife decided to stake a claim in Capitan.

He's opened Gary's Barber Shop Number 2, two doors down from Capitan village hall on Lincoln Street.

"I told my wife that eventually I was going to open a shop here and I did," Mitchell said. "I've met nothing but nice folks here.

"This is Lincoln County's newest 'old fashion' barber shop," Mitchell said.

Although he spends most of his time in Capitan, Mitchell still owns the original, three-chair Gary's Barber Shop in Midland, Texas, and he also operates a ranch.

"That's why I head back to Midland of the twenty-fifth of every month for one week," Mitchell said. He returns to Capitan the following Monday.

Mitchell has been a licensed Class A barber for 15 years. Haircuts are $6 and there's bubblegum for the kids. Customers over 65 receive a $1 discount.

The shop's hours are from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday and from 8 a.m. to noon on Friday, but Mitchell said he won't close the shop until all customers are served.

His new telephone number is 354-3396.

Artists of Lincoln County

Ted Robertson
Part 15 in a Series

Sensuality-Robertson's style

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Each stroke of rich color pumps life into the sensuous body and face on the canvas before artist Ted Robertson.

Working on a sandpaper surface, Robertson seemingly transforms pastels into flowing oils that reach out and pull the viewer into a scene.

When his flurry of work ceases, a portrait of the New Mexico countryside or its warm-skinned inhabitants is left behind as testimony to Robertson's skill at the easel.

"It almost has to be an unhealthy type of obsession to be an artist," Robertson said. "There's a lot of preliminary mind work. I pretty much have arranged in my head before I start actual construction of a painting. Then I try to get myself in almost a stupor and slap it out as quickly as I can.

"I was in my 30s before I realized that not all people can preconceive an image in their minds," he said.

That realization was brought home when he taught classes at Carrizo Lodge during the heyday of its art school there.

"I may do a thumbnail sketch for the arrangement of dark and light. But I find if I do a preliminary sketch, it becomes too complete," Robertson said. "I prefer an adventure of traveling into the unknown. I want to search through those dark tunnels and see what I find.

"I enjoy the journey as much as the finished painting."

Using bright colors for contrast to bring life to portraits, Robertson said, "I want them warm and alive, not stiff. Some people think details give life, but it's not so. Color, value, light source and expression creates life. The details don't do it."

Although Robertson sells his pastels as quickly as he produces them in his studio at Lincoln, he's still dogged by guilt.

"I was in my thirties and painting professionally before I could convince myself it was all right that some of my family were sharecroppers who cooked on a wood-burning stove while I turn on the stereo and paint," he said.

His father was in the grocery business and his mother handled ready-to-wear clothing. They were transferred many times and Robertson became used to moving around and living in different cities.

But he was born in the hills of Kentucky. "You had to come there," he said. "It wasn't a place you normally would drive through."

Everyone around him worked hard.

"My relatives would take a look at something I'd drawn and tell me it was a nice picture, but when was I going to learn to plow," he said.

His only early exposure to art was through a cousin in Ohio, who was 20 years older and added color tints to photographs.

"When we had big family get-together, I was standing near the oil paints and remember thinking that was the most wonderful odor," Robertson said.

He started sketching people. Eventually during his teen summers, he was paid for the sketches. A teacher taught him how to letter and a friend's father, who owned a sign company, hired him.

In his senior year of high school in Los Angeles, he came down with rheumatic fever.

"I missed so much school I didn't go back," Robertson said. Instead he attended art school in Denver for the rest of the year. "It was stimulating, although I was not interested in fashion design."

Still he recommends art school for those serious about a career.

He continued his art work in college at Colorado State, earning money, but not learning much about art; and was assigned as an illustrator in the U.S. Army for three years of his hitch.

Once discharged, Robertson spent his days designing electrical signs and his evenings painting.

He moved to New Mexico when his mother was diagnosed with cancer. He was creating electrical signs and then started painting portraits for the now defunct Gallery Three.

He took a break for one year and moved to Las Vegas where he worked with an unlimited budget to design some of the elaborate electronic signs that have become synonymous with the gambling town. He also hoped the hiatus would help him re-establish better work habits.

When he came back, "people started buying the paintings," Robertson said. "I quit my job. I got in with the right people, but it took a lot of determination."

The day he stopped looking through the classified ads, Robertson knew the commitment was permanent.

"I used to scan them all the time to see what other jobs might be available," he said.

But the day arrived when "I knew I wanted to be an artist, that it was my life's work, rich or poor."

He had started painting commissioned portraits while in the Army, but "when I found out I could make a living pleasing myself, I moved away from commissioned pieces," he said.

"I know a great number of artists and we learn from each other. So much of art is just trial and error. It's a lot of investigating, experimenting. It's a long educational process and I hope progressive."

Robertson ventured into the world of pastels because he wanted to brighten up his palette, to experiment with color beyond the dark umber and glaze process he had been following.

Up to that point in his career, he had focused mostly on figures, but with a new medium, he also switched to landscapes to loosen up his technique.

"(Landscapes) are not as confining," he said. "I could move a leaf or limb for a better effect.

"It's fun doing old buildings on a prairie and I love snow scenes because of the warm colors and the sky in contrast.

"I found pastels suit me personally. They're more immediate and spontaneous. There is less mixing and there's more color available.

"I find now when I go back to oils and I have to stop and mix colors, my work is not as spontaneous."

He is able to achieve the look of oil by using sandpaper acid free surfaces.

"A lot of people don't realize that pastels are permanent pure pigment without oil and water," Robertson said.

For the past eight years, he has progressed through different types of sandpaper to find the right grade for landscapes and for portraits.

"When sand paper came along, I think the quality of pastels really jumped several notches," Robertson said. "They had been considered dainty and soft. Now, they're bold and more permanent. Consequently, many artists have been drawn to them.

"On most pastels, the color lies on the surface of the paper. When it is sprayed (to preserve it), the pigment is dissolved and still falls off.

"This (process with sandpaper) adheres to the texture of the paper and forces you to move ahead."

He uses the same approach in pastels as he does in oils. "I stroke with the pastel as I would with a brush," Robertson said.

"I think a lot of fine artists have started using pastels. The quality of art has nothing to do with the medium, whether you use a burnt stick on a paper sack or a sable brush on canvas, it's the quality that matters."

Robertson was elected as a member of The Pastel Society of American based in New York and credits that group with helping to raise public awareness of pastels.

Yet "you can sell a mediocre oil for more than an excellent pastel for those uneducated in the medium," Robertson said.

The subject of a painting is not important, he said.

"It's not the subject I paint," he said. "The subject is just an excuse to arrange a bunch of color and value around."

Robertson also has experimented with water color and etchings.

"I'm fairly versatile," he said. "Occasionally my ego gets in my way. I feel like I should be able to knock out the Lord's Supper in an afternoon."

Marketing his product is the weakest point in his approach to art.

"Fortunately, my wife, Carol, does a lot of footwork for me," he said. "Word of mouth sells a great deal. You get into one gallery and someone sees your work and asks you to be in another."

Private collectors comprise a significant portion of his market. But when they visit for the first time, many are disappointed to find his studio and home are nearly devoid of examples of his work.

"Most of my things when finished have some place to go," Robertson said. "Some are semi-commissioned works. People who have said to me something like if you ever do Hondo Valley, let me know.

"Sometimes people say where's all your work? I have posters from K-Mart in my house. I can't afford my own paintings now, although I am starting to collect a few of my own.

"Basically, when I sign a painting, I'm through with it. The best painting I've ever done is the next one."

One of the benefits Robertson has gained from his lifestyle is time with his family.

"I'm not going to wake up one morning and realize my children are gone," Robertson said of his son, Jason, 10, and daughter Jessica, 12. "I try to stay within a radius so that I can handle any business in two days and be back.

"I'm an artist, but I'm also a parent. I'm not willing to spend 16 hours a day locked up in a studio."

Jason won best of show at a student art exhibit sponsored by the Blue Door Gallery last year in Capitan.

"At his age, I was doing Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck and he draws from life," Robertson said with obvious pride.

He tries to work in the studio on a daily basis. "As a friend says, I paint three days a week to keep from getting worse."

In what free time he can muster, Robertson is building a 3,500-square-foot house on an acre of land at the edge of the small settlement of Lincoln among the mesquite studded stomping grounds of Billy the Kid and artist Peter Hurd. The family now rents a house and a two-story studio that used to be the nurses' quarters of an old hospital. It sits next to the former Ellis Store.

"I think I may go into limited prints to buy some more time," Robertson said. "I won't have to produce originals everyday."

He also offers an occasional workshop.

"Many renowned artists are doing more workshops, because there are more serious students and fewer Sunday painters," he said.

The galleries showing Robertson's work are west of the Mississippi but span that territory from Montana and Park City, Utah to Palm Springs.

Closer to home, he exhibits at Canyon Art Gallery at Carrizo Lodge, the Meyer Gallery in Santa Fe and Artistic Gallery in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Editorial

A day to remember!

The voters spoke with a loud voice on Tuesday. At least 100 million citizens voted — an overwhelming turnout in a democracy where the right to vote has been a privilege taken lightly in some years. Record numbers of Lincoln County voters cast ballot — 81 percent. The very numbers tell a story about the mood of the American people. The election left the American people with a lot to think about...

For instance, change was in the wind, right? Then why did voters replace the president and vice president and send so many incumbent senators and congressmen back to Washington D.C.? With 14 states imposing term limits on their elected officials, why did they re-elect most incumbents? The call for throwing the so-and-so's out seemed to be for everybody else's senators and represenatives, with the majority of voters believing their own elected officials were doing OK. Terms easily can be limited by the voters, and this year's balloting indicated the voters don't really want to place limits on their elected officials.

Were incumbents returned to Congress because they're doing a great job or because their war chests are so hefty that challengers can't compete? If the PAC money and special interest group donations are that effective, maybe term limits or campaign finance reform would equalize that playing field.

Does negative campaigning work? Maybe. Mudslinging reached an all-time high this year, and record numbers of voters turned out to vote. Was that in response to the attack ads, or was it in response to a general concern for this nation?

Lincoln County candidates didn't play the attack game, instead running low-key campaigns that relied heavily on personal contacts, telephone banks and door-to-door stumping. Here, too, voters seemed satisfied with the status quo, re-electing the incumbents who had opposition, having already re-elected most incumbents in the primary balloting.

The economy was the driving force on the national scene, with people worried about jobs, healthcare and taxes. Lincoln County voters said "no new taxes," by turning down all of the bond questions of the ballot.

It was an interesting election, one that can change the course of this county and this nation.

Letters

What's the use of going to P&Z, anyway?

TO THE EDITOR:

I meant to go to the P&Z meeting today (Monday, November 2) but — like it was a waste of time and money — so was my going — hence my letter.

I was notified of a request for a variance for a carport and drive on a new house close to me. This is what I mean — a waste of time and money. The house is up — the roof is on — white if everyone around here objected — would they have to tear the house down?

I have no objection, really, to the carport and drive — just how it was handled by P&Z and whoever else was involved.

When I built a house, you staked it out — carport or garage included and the inspector came to OK the placing of it on the lot before it was built — not after!

If this is the way P&Z and inspections work — why bother? The village surely could use the money in a better way.

Here's the "rest of the story" Midland letter

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is in response to a letter from one Anne Richardson of Midland, Texas, concerning a friend of hers that "tried unsuccessfully to establish a business here." She implied that he was thwarted by an anti-development village administration.

I submit that if it is the same fella I was working with, that isn't the case at all. I never heard anything about the village not allowing his deck.

What I did hear was that my price was too high, and he was unwilling to pay it. It seems he wanted me to do it for nothing, actually, less than nother.

Of course, I don't know how many people have recently planned to open sandwich shops in Ruidoso, and if the letter writer from Midland was referring to someone else, than I apologize to her and her friend, but if it is, I just wanted to set the record straight.

After checking with village hall, it seems all this man's requests were granted. The News could have made the same call I made before printing such a headling.

EDITOR'S NOTE: If The News called to verify every claim made in letters to the editor, those letters would never be published. When names and specifics are used, we do check, and often, because of inaccurate information, we have to ask a letter writer to change some words or we have to edit out some portions of letter. We're not going to check to see if your price was too high, either.

Greeters are great!

TO THE EDITOR:

The Ruidoso Greeters graciously assisted at the reception held by the University of New Mexico at the Swiss Chalet Inn on October 14.

Ruidoso is fortunate at having such a charming and vibrant group of women representing the city. I understand that it is the only all-woman organization of its kind in the country and I certainly realize how proud Ruidoso must be of them

The University of New Mexico has a good number of alumni in Lincoln County and I look forward to returning to Ruidoso and seeing them again.

BETTY AWARDS for the Ruidoso Little Theatre 1992 season.

Countdown begins for the 1992 Miss New Mexico USA Pageant

The most beautiful girls in New Mexico will be in the Ruidoso area next week for the Miss New Mexico USA pageant at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

The Miss New Mexico Pageant is back with headquarters at the Inn of the Mountain Gods in Mescalero

The 1993 delegates will be arriving on Tuesday, and they'll head into Ruidoso on a shopping spree with a stop at the Sierra mall, where they'll be signing autographs from 3-5 p.m.

Tuesday night's opening ceremonies will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday, when the lineup of Miss New Mexico hopefuls will parade in their elaborate regional costumes, and then get into the fast-paced rhythm of this week with a dance contest.

Costumes and dancing will be judged, and the Miss New Mexico USA fans will start picking their favorites for the state title that could lead to a Miss USA title for a New Mexico beauty.

The rest of the week will be busy for Miss New Mexico USA contestants as they put together a spectacular stage show, complete with music and dancing, for the pageant finals at 8 p.m. Saturday.

For a preview of the official pageant, check at the Inn of the Mountain Gods for tickets to Friday night's dress rehearsal.

And on Saturday, all the hard work will pay off as Miss New Mexico USA is crowned.

Tickets for the pageant and victory dance will be available at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Lions sing to light up the world

Right now in Ruidoso and surrounding communities, many of your friends are working hard to aid local residents who experience sigh deficiencies.

According to a news release provided by the Ruidoso Valley Noon Lions Club, these volunteers are untiring in their efforts to prevent blindness worldwide.

The Lions are fulfilling a 75-year commitment of voluntary service for the blind.

On Saturday, November 14, the Ruidoso Valley Noon Lions Club is presenting the Second Annual Old Tyme Barbershop Harmony Show.

"This family-oriented event will surely be a top of the line community experience of the year," continues the release.

The show will feature at least six vocal groups comprising 70 or more performers from throughout the Southwestern United States.

"Your friendly Lions encourage our citizens and their families to set aside this night and join your neighbors at the First Christian Church for this most enjoyable and worthwhile show."

Tickets will be available at the Sudderth Conoco Service Station, the Chamber of Commerce, the Music Shoppe and from any Noon Lion; or call 258-4182 or 258-4477.

Tickets will be available at the door beginning at 7 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for students.

Money earned at this musical event will help the Lions continue to assist people with visual problems.

"Each and every American can assist the blind very easily," continues the release.

In Ruidoso, Lions Club members are always collecting used eye glasses. Each Lions Club recycles these used eye glasses by forwarding them to a center that classified and "remanufactures" them for distribution to the less fortunate world wide.

Local collections sites are at both Furr's stores, Bennett's, The Ruidoso News and Ruidoso Municipal Administrative Center.

Blindness already darkens the lives of 40 million people and numbers are rapidly growing. Sadly, 80 percent of these tragedies are preventable. Causes such as cataracts, glaucoma, complications of diabetes and Vitamin A deficiency rob the sight of 500,000 children every year.

Lions have become leaders in the crusade against visual impairments ever since Helen Keller challenged them in 1925 to eradicate blindness.

Through a network of 41,000 clubs and 1.4 million individual members throughout 177 countries, each Lion voluntarily helps to generate the funds necessary to operate eye banks, provide for 25,000 corneal transplants annually and operate eye clinics/hospitals worldwide.

These and other facilities conduct thousands of glaucoma screenings annually. They also fund sight related research projects and place guide dogs.

Interestingly, it costs $11,000 to train and place just ONE guide dog. If you have any questions relating to sight problems or diabetes, please feel free to contact any of your Lion friends or your newest Lion Club.

The Founding of Santa Fe exhibit on display here

In the early 1600s, the Spanish monarchy issued an edict to Don Pedro de Peralta. He was to take on the monumental task of establishing a new settlement in the northern environs of New Spain (now known as New Mexico).

Dave McGary's "Founding of Santa Fe" monumental sized sculpture is now on display at the Museum of the Horse in Ruidoso Downs.

In the winter of 1609-1610 he arrived fully equipped with the titles of Governor and Captain General and a corps of engineers. He promptly set out to accomplish his task, and the city of Santa Fe was born.

In 1989 the City of Santa Fe announced a competition to honor Don Pedro de Peralta and his role in the city's history.

The honor of constructing a monument to Peralta was given to local artist Dave McGary, renowned for his attention to detail and ability to bring life to his work.

McGary opted to commemorate the founding of Santa Fe by showing Peralta at work, astride his horse giving instructions to his engineer. The final piece of art, titled "The Founding of Santa Fe" weighed in at 3,500 pounds and stands 7.5 feet wide, 10 feet long and 12.5 feet high.

The Museum of the Horse, is pleased to announce an exhibit detailing the creation of "The Founding of Santa Fe."

The exhibit, "The Making of a Monument" includes 20 photographs depicting the step-by-step progression of how a monument of this stature is made. Also included is a bronze working model, a rubber mold of the engineers hand used in the actual process, the original full scale clay bust of Peralta and an original scaled down version of McGary's life size bronze.

"The Making of a Monument" is on display during regular museum hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

Museum of the Horse features artist Charlie Russell's Yarns

Mark your calendars for 7 p.m. Friday, November 20, and plan now to join the Museum of the Horse in remembering western artist, Charlie Russell.

The vivid stories and artwork of C.M. Russell will spring to life in Raphael Cristy's one-man show, "Charlie Russell's Yarns" for patrons and supporters of the Museum of the Horse.

Admission is free to Museum of the Horse members. Regular admission rates apply to non-members.

Cristy's internationally acclaimed portrayal of Montana's cowboy artist will be preceded by Museum of the Horse director, Gary Miller's introduction to the Museum's plans for Anne Stradling's extensive Indian collection.

Construction will soon begin on this large exhibit.

In his own lifetime, Charles M. Russell (1864-192.) became world famous for his paintings and sculptures depicting the pre-civilized western frontier.

Among his contemporaries, Russell was also a legendary joker and storyteller. Charlie and popular American humorist Will Rogers were personal friends for more than 20 years.

Will acknowledged several times that Russell was "the best storyteller I ever heard."

Raphael Cristy grew up in rural Michigan and attended Stanford University in the late 1960s, graduating with a BA degree in English Literature. In June, 1992, Cristy received an MA degree in History from the University of Montana.

Over the past seven years, Cristy lived in Montana and performed the Charlie Russell stories in 22 states, Canada and Australia. He has performed to rave reviews at the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, Texas, the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Oklahoma City and the Gilcrease Museum in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Cristy's performance at the Museum of the Horse will be only his second appearance in New Mexico. Now residing in Albuquerque, Cristy is pursuing a Ph.D in history at the University of New Mexico.

Cristy combines Russell's words with his artwork by showing hundreds of projected slides throughout his performance. Russell's amusing way with old-time Montana lingo combined with his paintings, drawings and sculptures create a stunning effect.

The Kalispell, Montana, Daily Interlake stated, "Hal Holbrook was Mark Twain, James Whitmore was Will Rogers, and Raphael Cristy is Charlie Russell."

Recently, the Rocky Mountain News (and other papers in the Scripps Howard network) stated, "It's an amazing performance ... Cristy's timing is stage perfect, the acting professional."

The Edmonton, Alberta, Journal said, "It's easy to become enraptured."

The Harvard Club of Montana wrote, "We were particularly intrigued with your skillful integration of Charlie's yarns with the slides of his artwork...the Indian sign language...and the amount of research you put into the narrative."

In the past seven years Cristy has been making his living performing mostly in Montana's major cities and smaller rural towns.

In addition to museums, his audiences have included theater patrons, business banquets, dude ranches, universities and schools.

Cristy estimates that he has performed for at least 50,000 Montana school kids. Senior citizens audiences have been especially attentive, finding the old stories and rural speech patterns evoke fond memories of earlier times.

Kids five and older also enjoy these stories from the "Old West."

Just 100 ago, Charlie Russell was working the Montana cattle ranges as an itinerant cowboy who also happened to sketch, paint and model clay while he told funny stories. By the time of his death in 1926 at age 62, Charles M. Russell, with the business leadership of his wife Nancy, had become a millionaire from the sale of his artwork to such notable figures as movie star, Douglas Fairbanks and England's Prince of Wales.

Today, Raphael Cristy enables us to take time out from the latest international crisis, political bickering, swelling utility bills and all the other 'benefits' of advanced civilization.

Charlie Russell's clear perspective in his artwork and yarn-spinning gives us a fresh look at old-time Indians, cowpunchers, bartenders, city dudes, fur trappers, bronc riders, varmits, road agents, cayuses, and campfire coffee.

Everyone is invited to enjoy this insider's view of a pivotal era in American culture.

Museum of the Horse lists hours

For further information, call 378-4142.

Lincoln County Food Bank needs help

The Lincoln County Food Bank has issued an SOS!

The non-profit, volunteer group, which provides emergency food to anyone who needs it, has an urgent need for money, food and additional volunteer workers to staff the bank.

The Food Bank, located in the First Presbyterian Church on Nob Hill, is open from noon to 4 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Volunteers are asked to work a two-hour shift during the open hours each week or to serve as a relief worker for other volunteers needing time off.

Jennie Lanfor, coordinator of the volunteers, asks that those interested in volunteering call her at 258-5598 to arrange a training session and a work schedule.

Sue Hooper, treasurer of the Food Bank, says the Food Bank's financial cushion is at its lowest ebb in several years, so now would be a good time to give an extra cash or food donation.

Checks can be mailed to LCFB, PO Box 1372, Ruidoso NM 88345. Cash or food donations are received at the Food Bank during open hours. Food donations also can be left at the main post office in Ruidoso in a food-drop box located in the service counter area.

The Lincoln County Food Bank was set up to give individuals or families emergency temporary help while they wait for an application for Food Stamps to be processed (usually two weeks). It depends entirely on donations of time, money and food from the residents of Lincoln County.

Except for paying a monthly telephone bill, all donated money goes to buying food.

Traditionally, donations are received from all part of the county.

The First Presbyterian Church of Ruidoso donates the space and utilities for the bank.

Furr's and Bennett's supermarkets assist Jim Morris, food bank purchasing agent, in buying food items in bulk.

Individual working in the markets, including Kris Hudson, the manager of the Furr's baker, arrange for excess foods to go to the Food Bank instead of into the dumpster.

Various churches and service organizations are members of the "Food Wheel" where each group is asked to donate specific food items during the month, with the items rotating among the organizations throughout the year.

The Food Wheel is important in maintaining a good range of foods in the bank to add to the basic items bought in bulk.

Organizations wishing to join the Food Wheel can call Bob Messick at 257-6118.

Tinnie Baptist Church celebrates the Four F's

It's that time of year again when Tinnie Baptist Church has its "big day" for food, fun, feasting and fund raising!

Everyone is asked to donate to the rummage sale, donate baked goods and then stop by and shop from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, November 21.

For lunch, plan on homemade green chili stew, pinto beans, tortillas, a dessert and drink for just $4 for adults and $2 for children.

To donate or to learn more about Tinnie's big day, call Sharon Smith at 652-4475 or Cica Lambert at 653-4100.

Boo!

Halloween lured goblins, ghouls and ghosts to Nob Hill Elementary Friday, while librarian Ingrid Schmitz tended her garden of strange pumpkin pals (above) at the public library. Saturday, the creatures took to the streets, extracting treats from businesses and then winding up the day at the annual Nob Hill Halloween Carnival.

Students chose costumes as traditional as skeletons and as offbeat as fruit slices. Below, classmates line up for a special Halloween performance.

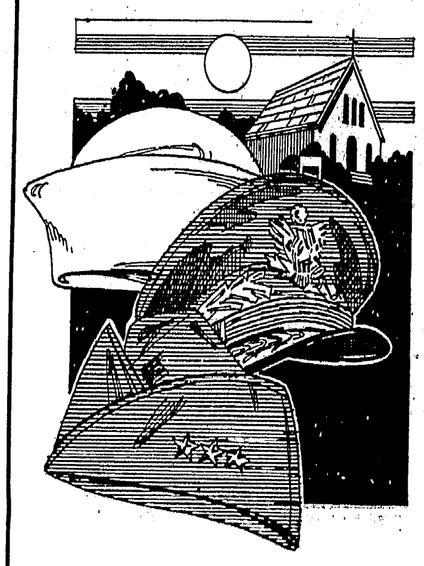
CHURCH DIRECTORY



TO THE VETERANS WHO HAVE FOUGHT TO DEFEND OUR FREEDOM:

You have "fought a good fight," as the Bible conveys,
When you served in some faraway land;
And for that we extend you the highest of praise,
For your valor in being on hand.
You were putting your lives on the line every day,
Till the time when at last you returned;
And we owe you a debt we can never repay
With the honor and help you have earned.
So we welcomed you home with all gratitude due,
For your efforts were never in vain;
Giving thanks to the Lord for such heroes as you,
And the freedom you fought to maintain.

Many Colors To Choose From

Sometimes the difference between a top-notch paint job and one that comes out so-so has less to do with the paint than the painter. Here are a few tips:

- Prime new wood or metal.
- Clean all surfaces. Use detergent to remove grease, grime or chalk. A solution of chlorine bleach will kill mildew. For outdoor use, a power washer will remove flaking or blistered paint along with the dirt and chalk.
- Remove loose paint. Scrape off and sand loose or flaking paint. Use a paint scraper, wire brush or sandpaper. For larger areas, consider a sanding disc on a drill, but only after you've ascertained with a test kit that you're dealing with lead-free paint. If you scrape down to wood, apply a primer.
- Patch holes in plaster or wallboard with plaster or spackling compound. Sand lightly until smooth, then prime.
- Block rust with water. Remove rust down to bare metal. Cover nail heads that could rust with wood filler and primer. Apply sealer over knot holes so they don't bleed through new paint. Caulk cracks or other sources of moisture penetration.
- Rough up glossy paint. Rough up the old, glossy paint with sandpaper or a liquid deglosser.
- Protect yourself. Wear goggles and a dust mask when removing paint. Wear rubber gloves for protection against chemical detergents and solvents. Clean up thoroughly. Dust especially is a hazard to children.
- Use the right tools. Brushes are best for exterior painting, especially on textured surfaces or shingles. Use a natural bristle brush with alkyd paints, synthetic bristles with latexes. Natural bristles absorb the water in latex paints and become limp and heavy. Consider a roller for walls and ceiling.
