Mescalero referendum pits one faction against another

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A referendum Tuesday on the Mescalero Apache Reservation pits a new regime against an old one, asking tribal members to decide if a presidential election should be scheduled.

The vote, the results of which were not available by press time, was the first time tribal members have cast their ballots on electronic machines. Previously, ballots were hand counted. The machines were borrowed from Otero County.

Paul Ortega ascended to the office of tribal president in November after the death of Wendell Chino, who led the tribe for more than four decades. Oliver Enjady, who served on the tribal council, was named to fill the vice president's chair left vacant by Ortega.

The new president contends the tribal constitution calls for him to finish out the last year of Chino's two-year term, but a contingent led by tribal Housing Director Freddie Kaydahzinne interprets the constitution as calling for an immediate election.

In a one-question referendum, voters Tuesday were asked to decide if a special election should be called now.

Ortega expressed the reasons he and Enjady think tribal members should vote against a special election in a letter to the tribe dated Dec. 30.

"We've been in office less than two months," Ortega wrote. "Within those two months, many events have taken place and all for the good of the Tribe."

While the petition presented by Kaydahzinne to elect another tribal president was denied by the tribal council, Ortega, Enjady and tribal council members agreed to conduct a referendum to obtain the general agreement of the Tribe, Ortega wrote, adding, "Although it is not necessary."

He reminded voters that the tribal general election will occur this year.

"We can assure you the integrity or the perfect condition of the Tribe will be greater than when we took office," Ortega wrote. He could not be reached for comment.

Contacted at his office Tuesday, Kaydahzinne said he would reserve his comment until after the election.

"I'm waiting to see how people respond to the election," he said.

In his memorandum on the referendum, Kaydahzinne clearly stated his opposition to the current administration, contending that Ortega, "a man who was not elected by the people to be president," is undoing many of the developments that Chino put in place.

"A new election will allow the people to say if they want Mr. Ortega to continue being their

Tribe could face major changes

BY DIANNE STALLINGS

Some big changes – including running their own gambling operation – may lie ahead for the Mescalero Apache as President Paul Ortega and four new tribal council members look to the future of the Tribe.

The process already has started with the existing eight-member council.

Ortega, in a letter to tribal members dated Dec. 30, laid out some of the actions already taken and others planned. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

The contract with Gaim-Ko, the company that managed the slot machines at Casino Apache, was up for renewal in December.

"The Mescalero Apache Tribe has already paid millions of dollars to Gaim-Ko under the existing contract," Ortega wrote. (At) the time when Casino Apache first started, the risk of managing slot machines was great and now the risk has changed. It's no longer necessary to continue paying more than the market price."

Although he stated he would not discuss the problems with Gaim-Ko, Ortega wrote that on the morning of Nov. 25, the tribal administration took control of the casino.

"Payments to Gaim-Ko for the use of slot machines are made to the bank," he wrote. "Gaim-Ko is not allowed to come onto the Reservation until further notice."

The casino's operation continues as usual and employees are doing an excellent job, he said.

"Casino Apache is presently considering buying slot machines from several major corporations including Gaim-Ko," Ortega said in the letter. "Our tribal attorneys are communication with Gaim-Ko and will be in conference with Gaim-Ko to dissolve our contractual agreement.

"By dissolving the contract, (the tribe) will be able to retain and operate Casino Apache with monies previously paid out to Gaim-Ko. This transition should be completed by or before Feb. 27."

Ortega also made it clear that the Tribe will not subsidize The Inn of the Mountain Gods, a luxury resort

Wine to flow in Ruidoso

• The Southwest Wine Competition, which includes wineries from a six-state region, will be held this summer in Ruidoso along with a wine tasting festival.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Start stocking up on corkscrews, a wine competition and festival is coming to Ruidoso this summer, a coordinator said.

On Tuesday, the executive director of the Southwest Wine Competition notified a local group that their bid to produce the event in Ruidoso has been accepted, said Laura Doth, a member of the group that wooed the competition from its previous location in Angel Fire.

The wine competition and festival will be July 29 through Aug. 1, which is the weekend after the Ruidoso Arts Festival, Doth said. It will include several components such as a wine seminar, a wine tasting/dinner/dance, a wine auction for a local charity and a golf tournament, which is to be called the Great Grape Golf Tournament and is slated for the Links at Sierra Blanca.

Also, coordinators will revive a past Ruidoso event, the Connoisseur Classic, in which local restaurants are teamed with wineries to prepare special "wine tasting" meals. Tickets for the meals are to be sold in advance, she said.

The wine competition involves wineries from across New Mexico as well as those in Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, Texas and Utah, Doth said. About 190 wines are expected to be entered in the competition, she said.

Coordinators say the festival will probably bring in between 200 to 500 visitors to Ruidoso the first year.

"But I think it has the opportunity to grow rather dramatically," Doth said. "It used to be, the Connoisseur Classic ran about 200

Subsidized apartments planned for Downs

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A 60-unit government-subsidized apartment complex is being proposed for land behind the Ruidoso Ford Lincoln Mercury dealership on U.S. Highway 70, participants in the project say.

Johnny Durham, president of Sierra Blanca Motors, owns the land targeted for the development, and is expected to sell to the project's developer, whose name has not been released.

Van Patton, a local real estate agent representing the developer, said Tuesday the developer had been awaiting a rezoning of the 11-acre tract, which is half in Ruidoso and half in Ruidoso Downs, before proceeding.

However, because of a recent review of Ruidoso Downs' regulations, the project will not need to wait for the rezoning process, Patton said.

Last week, Alan Morel, an attorney for Durham, had asked the Ruidoso Downs Village Council to rezone the land from single-family homes to multi-housing, such as apartments.

The rezoning request was to have been discussed in a public hearing at a council meeting this month before the council voted on it.

But a review of the village's zoning laws between Morel and Ruidoso Downs Village Attorney Dan Bryant has shown that the public hearing is not needed for compliance, Patton said.

> Van Patton, development representative

Though the 11-acre tract of land is in both Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, the potential developer, whose name is not on any public records filed with Ruidoso Downs, intends to build on 5.9-acres in Ruidoso Downs, Patton said.

The developer has, at least initially, decided against building inside of Ruidoso because of the village's newly instituted impact fees on development, Patton said.

The fees, which took effect Jan. 1, are to help Ruidoso pay for the cost of growing infrastructure, such as additional burdens on the water system.

Patton said the developer intends to build the apartment complex using a tax credit program, in which investors receive tax credits.

In return, the apartments are rented to tenants with low incomes. The level of qualifying incomes fluctuates based on the number of people in a family.

Patton said the developer has built numerous other subsidized apartment complexes about the state.

"I've seen pictures of the other projects (built by the developer) and they are nice," he said.

The developer of the first project, Stephen Crozier, initially planned the apartments for tenants who would qualify based solely on income.

After considerable opposition from a home owners association, Crozier amended his project to apply to seniors with low incomes.

The opposition to statehood is not confined to class or creed, nor is it affected by political affiliation or party fealty. The cohorts of statehood have conjured every expletive, indulged in every form of ridicule and contumely in a frantic effort to whip into line those papers that have remained steadfast in the belief that statehood for New Mexico, as conditions now exist, would be a mixed problem, tinctured with the most damnable features of a servile peonage in politics and the chicanery of leaders, that promises nothing but years of earnest effort by the intelligent class to remove. The time for the admission of New Mexico into the constellation of sovereign states has not yet arrived...

County youth suicide topic of Thursday meeting

By Sandy Suggitt
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Lincoln County Youth Suicide Prevention Task Force will hold a meeting for youth at 7 p.m. Thursday at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church, 1210 Hull Road.

Angelica Figueroa, co-chair of the task force, said the purpose of the meeting is to have youth brainstorm ideas and make suggestions for a statewide suicide prevention plan.

"We're going going to say, this is where we see problems, this is what we wish would happen, a lot of brainstorming," Figueroa said.

> "Even I was not aware the problem was as major as it is."
> Rick Cogdill, Carrizozo guidance councilor

The meeting will be run by Ruidoso residents who attended a work session sponsored by the Injury Prevention Division of the New Mexico Department of Health Nov. 9 and 10 in Santa Fe: Figueroa, April Figueroa, high school counselor Linda Hawthorne, high school student Jenni Hart, and Sergio Castro from the Counseling Center.

She said the adults present are people who have resources, such as the Counseling Center, Presbyterian Medical Services, the high school counselor and others who have influence with or access to youth.

"What we're trying to do at this point is just raise the level of awareness and help youth see the warning signs that you can look for and ... the way you can access help," said Hawthorne.

Castro, who specializes in counseling youth, said the reason for the meeting Thursday night is to address the fact that New Mexico ranks number two in the nation as far as suicide at all ages, and Lincoln County ranks number one in New Mexico in youth suicide.

"We want to start a grassroots effort to get the information out there," Castro said. "...what we want (youth) to tell us is how we can reach them."

Castro said a14-year-old attempted suicide Tuesday morning, and that such attempts "happen all the time."

"A lot of times we don't want to talk about it because it is taboo in a lot of places, but one of the biggest myths is that if you talk about suicide it's going to cause kids to attempt it, but the more open you are with the kids, the less likely it is that they'll commit suicide," he said.

Tuesday April and Angelica Figueroa, whose brother committed suicide a year and a half ago, gave presentations to middle school and high school students in Carrizozo to give them information about warning signs and resource people and to encourage them to attend the meeting Thursday.

"Even I was not aware the problem was as major as it is," said Carrizozo guidance counselor Rick Cogdill. "I think it's great what these people are doing. It probably helps them to heal some, too."

Angelica Figueroa said she had scheduled "Suicide Awareness and Prevention Day" meetings for Ruidoso students with the middle school and high school principals before the Christmas vacation, but director of instructional support Paul Wirth said they aren't going to happen.

"We want to be cautious about some of the controversial issues we might deal with for the purpose of making sure we do the most appropriate things for our students," he said.

He said this issue came up the last week before Christmas vacation and the administrative council did not meet to make a decision about it.

"We need to have administrators and others make some decisions about what will be the most appropriate setting for controversial issues – suicide issues or health issues or public health issues," Wirth said.

"That's all part of what schools do, whatever we provide for our students, we need to make sure that it's appropriate and reflective of the community," he said.

Businesses ask to be included as part of Ruidoso midtown

By Toni K. Laxson
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Several businesses are asking to be officially included in the midtown area.

"I feel like we are the entrance to the midtown and we would like to be included in that," Candyce Garrett, owner of Garrett Signs and Sculptures at 2101 Sudderth Drive, told the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday.

The commission approved the request from Garrett and four other merchants on the perimeter of the midtown shopping district. The request asks for a change to their stores' zoning designation. The commission's action will be sent on to the Ruidoso Village Council as a recommendation. The council is expected to hold a public hearing followed by a vote on the zoning request at the Feb. 9 meeting, Cleatus Richards, director of the Ruidoso Planning Department, said.

Currently, Garrett's store as well as several others are zoned C-2, which is a regular commercial zoning designation. The request is to change the stores' zoning to C-3, which is specific to the midtown area and gives businesses a different set of code regulations — such as the ability to build out to the lot line and no parking lot requirements.

Richards said the current southeastern boundary of the midtown zoning actually bisects The Gazebo, a shopping strip just west of Garrett's studio.

The new zoning, if approved, would extend the midtown zoning designation to Stan's Snowboard Shop at 2003 Sudderth Drive, but short of the A-1 Vacuum and Sewing Center at 1925 Sudderth Drive. The zoning change would only apply to businesses on the south side of Sudderth, Richards said.

In other action, the commission:

- Set Feb. 2 for a public hearing on a proposed ordinance amendment that would prohibit pre-fabricated metal carports in the village.
- Approved a variance request from Alvin Swanson to extend the deck at a home at 526 Second St. The open deck will be within 7.3 feet of the side lot line, a variance of 2.7 feet from the standard side lot set back, according to village planners.
- Tabled a variance request and a conditional use permit request from Mark Marquez and Truman Barnett regarding a proposal to build an addition to a commercial building at 508 Mechem Drive. The items were tabled at the request of the applicants.

ELECTION: Kaydahzinne listed reasons why an election should be held

president," Kaydahzinne wrote.

He noted that if less than 30 percent of the eligible 1,800 Mescalero voters turn out for the election, a special presidential election will not occur between now and the October regular primary.

He contended that the tribal council acted incorrectly by rejecting his petition with signatures of 25 percent of Mescalero voters.

"It is critical that the Mescalero people be represented by a President that they elected," he wrote.

He listed four other reasons to call for a new presidential election.

They are:

- That Ortega and the Tribal Council broke the contract with Gaim-Ko Inc., which supplied gaming machines to Casino Apache, instead of renegotiating the terms.

"The Tribe now is exposed to expensive lawsuits and additional negative publicity...just before the delicate gaming arbitration (with the state over the cost of regulating Indian gaming) gets under way," he wrote. "It's critical that before jobs are terminated, contracts broken and services are cut back that the people hear the pros and cons and weigh the facts for themselves."

- That a promised general meeting never was called in November or December.
- That a requirement for the President to select an election board to oversee all elections was not fulfilled until the week of Dec. 29, two weeks later than the normal deadline. The referendum wording was prepared by Ortega and the tribal attorney instead of the election board, he said.
- That the election was not advertised properly.

Kaydahzinne also criticized Ortega for having police officers present during council meetings, contending that when a tribal member was escorted out of a council session Dec.15, her freedom of speech was denied.

CHANGES: Top priorities for the council will be to come up with goals

built on the shore of Lake Mescalero. That could mean cutting employee food cost, closure of some hotel services, dropping building improvements and possibly, laying off employees.

"The Inn is one of the most expensive tribal enterprises to operate," Ortega said. A new manager was hired in early November and has been instructed by Ortega with the concurrence of the tribal council to cut expenses, he said.

"By using resources we actually need to operate the Inn, we can better control management and become financially sound," Ortega wrote. "The whole purpose is for the Inn to support itself and (to) detach tribal resources such as cash tied up by the Inn back to the Tribe."

The top priorities of the Tribal Council will be to come up with five-year goals to successfully conclude arbitration between the Tribe and the state of New Mexico over the percentage to be paid to the state for gaming oversight, and to build a new $18 million school complex on the Reservation, Ortega stated. He promised the schools will be built in two or three years.

WINE: The event will feature wine, local foods and a golf tournament to 300, but it was in February. So this is a very different dynamic than anything we've had before."

The highlight of the event will be the Grand Tasting/A Taste of Ruidoso, a wine tasting, dinner and dance, on July 30 at the Ruidoso Convention Center.

"We are looking at making it about $35 a head for the Friday night event," Doth said. "And we did that because we want to attract as many people as possible, and not make it a high-end, very hoity-toity thing ... So, I think it will appeal to a very broad base of people."

Lisa Muhn, one of Doth's partners, said the Southwest Wine Competition board had been looking for a new location for the event because of low turnout at Angel Fire.

"So, we put in a proposal and they jumped on it," Muhn said. "Angel Fire was just getting 100 people."

Doth said her group's proposal included a wine seminar on July 29, a Thursday, at the Museum of the Horse. At the seminar, participants will sample wines and hors d'oeuvres while experts tell what qualities to look for in a wine, she said.

The Connoisseur Classic is scheduled to take place on July 31, a Saturday, and the golf tournament is tentatively set for the following day. A Sunday brunch may also be set at a local art gallery, Doth said.

"My goal is to open Ruidoso up to a different kind of consumer than the average vacationer with the family in tow," Doth said. "We are looking at someone who is probably on the high end as far as economics. And I may be completely wrong about that. With the popularity of wine, we may end up with just a very broad spectrum of demographics."

Doth and Muhn's group, which is made up of about four other people, is called the Special Events Resource Group. They are the same people who have produced past events in Ruidoso, such as the recent Octoberfest, Doth said. The group decided to go into the business of soliciting special events based on its positive experiences of producing events as volunteers, she said.

Woman killed in accident

A Texas woman and her two dogs were killed early Friday when the 1989 Ford sedan she was driving crossed the center line on U.S. 70 about 1:25 a.m. and rammed head-on into a semi-truck.

Karen Vogel, 47, died at the scene, according to investigating New Mexico State Police Officer Jose Salazar's report.

Kenneth Willard, 42, was headed east on the highway in a 1998 Freight Liner.

Vogel was going west toward Ruidoso when the collision occurred, said Lt. William Bower. Vogel was not wearing a seat belt, he said.

It is unknown at this time if liquor was involved in the accident.

Willard was admitted to the hospital in Ruidoso, but released Saturday, a hospital spokesperson said.

The fatal collision was the only serious accident in Lincoln County over the holiday weekend, Bower said.

County commission slates first meeting of 1999

One of the Lincoln County Commission's shorter agendas – about 30 items – is scheduled for its next meeting Tuesday.

Commissioners will tackle first-of-the-year duties by appointing new or replacement members to 18 different advisory boards, committees and groups.

The meeting begins at 9 a.m. in the commission room of the county courthouse in Carrizozo.

Leading off are resolutions to adopt the state Open Meetings Act and set requirements for public notice on special and emergency meetings.

A second resolution will set the dates of regular commission meetings.

Under a seven-item consent agenda, which can be passed as a block without discussion unless a commissioner pulls an item off, is approval to set a hearing on establishing a county medical indigent fund.

Other financial issues will include more discussion of salary increases for elected officials requested by County Assessor Patsy Serna; the payment of fees for an attorney who represented elected officials in their request for raises to the commission; and the possibility of raises for employees.

Julie Sterchi, acting administrator of the county-owned but privately operated Lincoln County Medical Center, will update commissioners on remodeling and expansion at the hospital and about the award of a bid for remodeling.

Also on the agenda is a project that has gone through years of problems, starting with a goof by the state Legislature, when it mistakenly awarded money to the town of Carrizozo for new sidewalks slated to be poured in the historic settlement of Lincoln.

The commission is being asked by the state Department of Finance and Administration to sign a joint powers agreement for the expenditure of $20,000 appropriated by the legislature to design, construct and restore the historic pathway in Lincoln. John McGrath, chairman of the Lincoln Historic Preservation Board, will present the item.

Don Katowski is scheduled to ask commission backing of a proposed new volunteer fire department in Arabela. The group broke off from the existing Hondo Volunteer Fire Department last year, because of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the Arabela area was equipped and covered.

Organizers of proposed teen center receive donations; plan for activities

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Businesses are donating lumber, plexiglass, plumbing, and other services to That Place, the teen center scheduled to open mid-January or early February, an owner of the center has said.

Meanwhile, volunteers are scrubbing down the former Seahorse Cafe on Mechem Drive and planning weekly dances and sports areas, said owner Judy Stone.

They're fortunate because the building does not need structural changes, Stone said.

There's a full kitchen for the restaurant in the "boat bar" area, already making coffee drinks and ready to serve "teenage foods" such as hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, and bagels, she said.

"It's going to be a lot of work," said Tory Sablatura, 13, Stone's daughter and one of the teen advisors. "I'm doing a lot so far. We're cleaning, we're thinking of ideas, we're building a store there with candles, necklaces and normal (teenage) things that we like."

Stone said they will have tables throughout the boat bar area, video games against the wall, a "board room" for announcements, jobs listings, tutoring information, and commendations of students who move from failing to passing grades who "need to be honored as much as someone making an A," she said.

The pool tables will stay, she said, and they'll add Foosball, shuffleboards and other games (Sablatura suggested virtual reality games).

The former dining room (of the Seahorse Cafe) will be a quiet area for study, furnished with couches and tables.

Every weekend they'll have a Friday night dance for middle school students and a Saturday night dance for high school students, with live music. Local teenage bands will be encouraged but they'll also have bands from out of town, Stone said.

"Two bands – a high school band and a middle school band – have told us that they wanted to play, so we're really going to push that, and we have somebody here that's gong to be able to make some CDs for them and push individual talents," she said.

There will be opportunities for kids to work waiting tables and as disc jockeys, she said, and there will be equipment for designing and making their own T-shirts.

"The kids that come through here can vote and then we'll have T-shirts made up and they'll get a royalty off it," Stone said.

Michael Crouse, father of teen advisor Chad Crouse, said he's going to build ramps at the side of the building for rollerblading and skateboarding and wants ideas and help from teenagers with the project.

In front of the building they plan to have a basketball court, and at the side a "beach" with sand built up around a volleyball court.

For security, there will be guards both indoors and outdoors, Stone said; a PA system for messages will permit parents to call and ask kids to call home.

Instead of forbidding trouble-makers to return, Stone said, they'd be allowed to return after three hours of counseling "at our expense" and if they agree to enter a mediation program.

"They'll have a lot of power," she said, "and will vote for representatives for a board of the kids, two from each class that they can elect for six months, and one for each class on the executive board, and the board will find out what the kids are wanting to come up with."

She foresees lots of contests (and hopes to find sponsors in the community who'll offer prizes) and free classes in anything kids want to learn, from self-defense to guitar plucking.

Stone said they did a survey of 1,600 to 2,000 kids in Ruidoso, Capitan and Hondo asking them whether they need a teen center and how often they would go. She said they got back over half of them and only 23 said they didn't need a teen center.

"But they also said they'd come if there was one," Stone said.

"Most of what's going is going to be what they want," she said. "It won't work if we don't do what they like."

OUR OPINION

What's in the price of a gallon of gasoline?

Crystal-ball gazing is a notable sport that seems to have its World Series every January. Everybody wants to know what the future holds, of course; but, lacking resident soothsayers and astrologers, most people tend to examine what has gone before, throw in a factor for the unexpected — and call it (depending on the context) a budget, or forecast, or (perhaps more honestly) a guess about what the new year will hold.

Anybody with a stake in Ruidoso inevitably must spend some time thinking about the "big picture."

Those whose Ruidoso memories go back 25 years or so recall with dismay what happened when the Arab oil producers decided to punish what was later called "the great Satan" by cutting off America's oil supply. That resulted, for most Americans, in long waits at the gas pump, and an escalation of gasoline prices.

The battering that the Texas oil patch ultimately suffered still can provoke nightmares. In Ruidoso during the 1970s and '80s it meant all of the above, plus a plunge in the real estate market that some people say still hasn't recovered.

So anything to do with oil tends to get attention in Ruidoso.

With Ruidoso-area gasoline in the 90-cent to $1.10 per gallon range right now, motorists are smiling. (Those in Albuquerque are smiling even more, with regular unleaded fuel at about 82 cents.) But those with memories are a little more interested in the "why," not the price. Economists who watch such things point to, believe it or not, Iraq: The world — including the U. S. — during the past year let Saddam Hussein sell a lot of it everywhere, contributing to an over-supply. When that happens, gasoline prices go down.

Now comes some annual predictions for 1999 from the Independent Petroleum Association of the Mountain States in Denver, and they're enough to give us pause:

Many small independent oil producing companies will not survive. Continued consolidation of surviving companies, particularly mid to large-size independents, can be expected. Growing awareness by local governments of the impact of lost oil revenues could result in different forms of revenue generation — like higher taxes. As oil producers close their doors, the devastation will snowball to smaller refineries.

Well...enjoy the cheap gas now, but remember what happens when we don't have a healthy domestic oil industry. If you don't remember, ask some of Ruidoso's semi-senior citizens who do.

Don't call a Republican about our president

To the editor:

A friend tells me that he had phoned Rep. (Joe) Skeen about the impeachment of our president. My friend, like nearly three-quarters of the U. S. population, did not like the idea. Why? This impeachment was a foregone decision by the Republican...House leadership. The entire circus leading eventually to this impeachment was concocted by innuendo, accusations and finally by entrapment.

Skeen is a Republican and as most everyone of the House Republicans he will try to impair or damage the activities, or even try to get rid of the president. The man did too good for the country. Thus, the Republicans tried to sabotage his success, starting with the Whitewater accusations, then claimed that he or his people killed a friend of his, followed by other innuendos, all turn out out to be untrue, and when everything failed, they found little Monica and trumped up charges on questions which should have never (been) asked in the first place.

So, what's the use to call a Republican? If we don't reconsider our attitudes toward the political tolerance of the folks we elect to represent us, our country will split—until it breaks?

The curmudgeons have a point today

To the editor:

Is it any wonder that there are curmudgeons among us? Watching the county commissioners (mis)manage makes one wonder if we really need that level of government. It's just plain discouraging and a hell of a waste of money that could be better spent. But there is at least one area where our county government has been quite efficient — ripping off property owners.

In federal governmental parlance, a "head of household' status confers a special tax break on a single parent raising children alone. (I)n Lincoln County...a "head of household" is anyone who owns a house or piece of property... (That) individual is qualified to claim a $2,000 property tax exemption — just like a veteran's exemption — but the government doesn't go out of its way to make sure the property owner knows about it. Then, to make it even more difficult, the property owner must drive... to Carrizozo to sign his or her name to receive what should otherwise be an automatic deduction on his or her property tax bill. Thus, by using confusing terminology and everyone's misunderstanding of legal gobbledygook, the county and its communities eventually pocket tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars of illegal and unwarranted taxes. By definition, that's a con game — confusing the victim(s) into paying for something they're not getting!

Everyone reading this, make sure you claim your legal and rightful property tax exemptions, and pass along the information to our friends and neighbors so they can claim theirs. If the government is going to take our money, let's make them do it more openly and honestly. If you feel like raising hell with your elected officials about the government hoodwinking it citizens, that's OK too. They may not think so, but that's why they got elected — and maybe should get diselected.

Girl Scouts help feed county's needy people

To the editor:

The 10 members of Junior Girl Scout Troop No. 1 would like to thank the community for the generous support of their recent food drive. The Girls Scouts and their parents participated in a scavenger hunt on Sunday, Dec., 13; three teams of scouts and parents visited all areas of Ruidoso in search of items on their list. They knocked on doors of friends and neighbors hunting for canned food items. The teams collected in less than one hour over 120 items of food for the needy families of LIncoln county.

They have now reached their goal of 150 cans of food and have decided to donate the items to the Lincoln County Food Bank for this holiday season. Thanks to all the people who opened their doors and gave so generously. Thanks to all the people who gave several items instead of just one. Thanks to the people who searched for those difficult item s on the lists. Thanks for all the kind words that were given to the Girl Scouts. thanks for making this a community that organizations such as Girl Scout Troops can still participate... We are truly blessed to live in such a wonderful community.

Something to consider about using our taxes

To the editor:

The excitement created in the local lodging business by the prospects of another resort hotel is exceeded only by the reality of our tax dollars being used to develop and promote it.

Here's hoping our city fathers soon tire or promoting additional motel/hotel space and direct their energies to other businesses. Perhaps Ruidoso needs another utility company or maybe a ski shop.

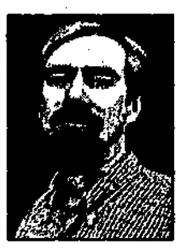
Community journalism and a New Year's resolution

Opportunity brought me to Ruidoso; the charm of the village and its people have kept me here.

BLEEDING BLACK INK



BY TERRANCE VESTAL
EDITOR, RUIDOSO NEWS

In less than a week I will mark one year here at the Ruidoso News as its editor, and what a year it has been.

Some of you may already know that before moving to Ruidoso, I was a reporter for The Taos News in Taos, N.M.

The move here was a whirlwind to say the least and the following year has been much of the same.

But I can honestly say it has been worth it.

My love of journalism began when I was a freshman in high school (Burgess High School in El Paso, Texas, just in case you were wondering). I worked on the high school newspaper there and enjoyed writing and developing stories.

I wanted to become an editor because I believed then and I still believe that newspapers can ultimately make a positive impact on the communities they serve.

Needless to say, being the editor of a newspaper has been a dream of mine since my high school days so when I was offered the editor's position here in Ruidoso, I jumped at it.

Over the course of the last several years, journalism, especially print journalism, has seen drastic changes in the content of its products.

What has developed is a concept referred to in the industry as "Community Journalism."

With a national downward trend of newspaper circulation numbers, editors, publishers and even reporters have had to rethink approaches to news.

Community journalism, as it implies, emphasizes the community in which the newspaper serves rather than emphasizing state or national news.

No longer are newspapers satisfied with just playing the part of observer but they have moved into more active roles in community while still remaining as objective as possible in covering the news.

One example of this role is the Community Update sessions sponsored by the Ruidoso News last year.

The newspaper brought political and governmental leaders together as well as members of the public to discuss problems facing the communities of Lincoln County and possible solutions to those problems.

Round-table sessions like these are being sponsored by newspapers all over the country.

The Ruidoso News will be holding a similar meeting in March.

With this new-found role, newspapers must walk a fine line, however. Newspapers can certainly act as catalysts in making positive changes in their communities but also must maintain the position as objective observers and not as newsmakers.

In the coming year, the Ruidoso News will continue its effort to accurately reflect Ruidoso and Lincoln County and be the paper of record in this area.

We plan to provide more extensive coverage in other areas of the county that have, for one reason or another, been neglected. We also plan to provide more substantive coverage on issues that impact our communities.

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues.

Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and address. The phone number and street or mailing address will not be printed; however, the author's hometown will be included. The telephone number will be used to verify authorship. No letter will be printed without the writer's name.

Letters should be 300 words or less in length, be of public interest and must avoid name-calling and libelous language. The Ruidoso News reserves the right to edit letters, so long as viewpoints are not altered. Shorter letters are preferred and generally receive greater readership.

Letters may be hand-delivered to the News office at 104 Park Avenue or mailed to P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, NM 88345, attention of the editor.

The News reserves the right to reject any letter.

YOUR OPINION

The New Yorker mag probes Lincoln County

To the editor:

It seems strange to see "1999" automatically pop into view, put here by my word processor as I type this. But even stranger to me was reading one of the feature articles in, of all places, the most recent issue of New Yorker magazine.

Beginning on page 86 of the Dec. 28, 1998, issue you'll find "The Many stories of Billy the Kid" by Fintan O'Toole. Now, if the title of the article doesn't grab your interest, the author's name certainly should. It's a very interesting article for those who know something of the history of the Lincoln County war and The Kid's role in it.

It's simply incredible to me that anyone can find anything new to write about The Kid after all these years. And even more incredible that magazine such as the New Yorker would publish it, considering all those unsolicited manuscripts (mine included) that they must reject each week.

The importance of such an article to all of us here in Lincoln County should not go unnoticed. That is why I am writing. The continuing hubbub over the Lincoln (County) Heritage Trust and the closing of important museum buildings in Lincoln should concern every New Mexican.

The fact that such articles as this one in New Yorker magazine continue to give free publicity to one of New Mexico's premiere tourist attractions should give pause to all of those who would otherwise see no reason for supporting the continued preservation of this wonderful heritage site. The legend of Billy the Kid is alive and well and we New Mexican should do everything we can to see that it remains so. We should do everything possible to preserve the infusion of tourism cash that having The Kid's ghost running free in Lincoln means to all of us.

On losing a friend

To the editor:

Our Christmas was saddened by the death of a dear friend, Dan Storm.

We had the pleasure of meeting Dan about five years ago, and every spring and fall when we would come to Ruidoso we always called and he always wanted us to come out fir a visit.

He would pick us up at the Trading Post (Arizona Kid's place) in his Suburban, because the road was always bumpy, really bumpy to be quite honest. He always made us feel so welcome and way always eager to show us the cows, which he know all by name — one named Tex after us. The lilac bushes were blooming the first year that we visited, and he sent me home with a huge bouquet. Last September his clematis vine was blooming by the door, and we took several pictures for him. He loved that vine.

I think that he had that rare gift of making you feel like you were the most wonderful person on earth, and I never heard him say a bad word about anyone and always complimented others.

We will truly miss Dan and we will miss our chats with him under the shade tree. He was one in a million!

Collector of tokens

To the editor:

I am a lover of history and I have a somewhat unusual hobby. I collect old tokens used by stores, barber shops, pool halls, bakeries, saloons, forts, and other businesses years ago. The tokens were "good for" 5 cents, 10 cents, 12.5 cents or such in trade or merchandise or "good for" a loaf of bread, one drink, one shave, one ride or whatever. They were usually ... metal, and while having the general appearance of a coin, they were made in all shapes and sizes.

...I have reason to believe that some of these tokens were used in your area and I would be most interested in obtaining some of them for my collection.

I would like to hear from anyone...that might be able to help me...

Horse Liniment Eases Arthritis Pain

OCALA, FL – An ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreases inflammation in racehorse's legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx* and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Although the mechanism by which ARTH-Rx works to relieve pain is not totally clear, scientists suggest that pain is relieved because ARTH-Rx intercepts the messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain.

ARTH-Rx is available in a convenient roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, due to the overwhelming demand for ARTH-Rx, supplies are sometimes limited. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446. *1997 PGC

Alcohol sting nets few citations locally

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Wal-Mart and a Pizza Hut got their hands slapped again last month for selling alcohol to a minor.

Agents of the Department of Public Safety's Special Investigations Division (SID) conducted another underage alcohol sting operation in Ruidoso on Dec. 1, visiting 19 local establishments and citing two for selling to a minor.

Six were cited in a sting on Dec.13, 1997, and five on July 16, 1998.

"I'd want to say that there's been a big change," Griffin said about the reduction in offenses, "but the other thing that's lurking in the back of my mind is, how many places called up the road to let them know we were coming?"

Griffin said he saw a man talking at a convenience store on Mechem and asked a clerk what he'd said.

"He told us you guys were doing a sting operation,'" the clerk told Griffin. "So we ran back out the door and had a conversation with this gentleman."

People were overheard talking about the sting operation at Furr's and Allsup's on Mechem Drive, Griffin said, and were apparently forewarned.

"Most of the places that we went to, there didn't appear to be any indications that they were tipped off, except for a few," he said.

The sting started in Ruidoso Downs and worked its way through Ruidoso to Johnson's Village Store in Alto, he said.

An 18-year-old woman, working undercover, carried her own legitimate identification card and was required to answer honestly any questions asked her, such as, "How old are you?"

Clerks and servers at 17 establishments in the Ruidoso area asked her for identification and refused to sell her alcohol, but clerks at Wal-Mart and Pizza Hut asked for identification and sold her alcohol anyway.

"At Wal-Mart, we brought the girl back and let her (the clerk) look at the ID again and she said she just got confused with it," Griffin said.

"If you're trying to do the math in your head and you've got a long line, I can see where it could get confusing. I don't try to do any thick math," he said. "I just remember today's date (in) 1977."

"It used to be clerks and servers wouldn't even ask for identification and now they're doing that more, but some of them seem to become confused or are sympathetic to the minor," Griffin said.

This is a second offense for the Pizza Hut on Sudderth. That establishment paid a $1,000 fine and suspended sales of alcohol for one day for its first offense, said Barbara Rivera, citations manager at the New Mexico Regulation and Licensing office.

The agents issued criminal citations to the employees who sold alcohol to minors, a misdemeanor, and administrative citations to the businesses. Magistrate court decides the penalties for the criminal citations and the New Mexico Regulation and Licensing Department assesses penalties for the administrative citations.

For Wal-Mart, it was the third citation for selling alcohol to a minor, but only the second in the past year, Rivera said.

The first offense occurred Dec. 13, 1997, and therefore is more than a year before the recent Dec. 17 citation. Penalties increase "exponentially," said Griffin, with each successive citation within a year's period.

For its previous second offense, Wal-Mart paid $500 a day in lieu of suspending alcohol sales for 7 days, in addition to a fine of $2,000.

Had this recent sting taken place four days earlier, it would have been a third offense for Wal-Mart with a possible fine of $3,000 to $4,000 and suspension of alcohol sales for 14 days, according to Rivera.

A fourth offense entails a fine of $4,000 to $5,000 and suspension of alcohol sales for 30 days, and a fifth offense entails a fine of $10,000 and revocation of the liquor license.

"That hasn't happened since I've been here," said Rivera, who's been citations manager for three years.

So far Rivera hasn't received the reports on the Dec. 17 sting operation and the fines haven't been negotiated.

Wal-Mart has had five citations since the super center store opened in the fall of 1997, Griffin said.

Besides three citations for selling alcohol to a minor, Wal-Mart also received a citation for not having its liquor stock segregated from other items and a citation for 10 counts of failing to maintain beer keg registrations.

SID agents conducted "Operation Should Tap" stings in Artesia on Dec. 10 and in Hobbs on Dec. 16 in which they cited nine citizens for procuring alcohol for a minor.

Undercover minors approached 72 customers at various convenience stores in Artesia and Hobbs and asked them if they would buy them alcohol.

Seven customers in Artesia and two in Hobbs agreed to do it, took the minors' money, purchased the alcohol, and were immediately confronted by plainclothes agents who seized the alcohol and issued criminal citations.

A sober New Year's Eve

No arrests were made or tickets issued for drunk driving on New Year's Eve in Lincoln County.

Lt. William Bower of the New Mexico State Police said this is the first DWI-free New Year's Eve he can remember in the 7 1/2 years he's been stationed in the district that includes Lincoln and Otero counties.

"Everybody was real good," he said. But the honeymoon didn't last long; some DWI arrests occurred before the holiday weekend ended, he said.

BEN CHRISMAN
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The Smokey Bear Tournament in Capitan will tip off this Thursday and all signs point to a highly competitive three days of boys and girls action.

Ruidoso girls coach Jeanne Jackson said her girls are highly motivated right now and are looking to do well.

"The girls are playing really positively and are not giving up," Jackson said. "We're improving and that is what I'm concerned with."

Capitan girls basketball coach Bryan Massé said the holiday break was a much needed rest for his team and should help them out over the stretch of the tournament.

"When most of your kids do all three sports or are involved in everything, mentally the break will be good," Massé said. "But I imagine we'll be a little rusty and it may take us three games in the tournament to get it out."

Massé said his team has not practiced much, but he is still optimistic.

"We really haven't done anything. But I'm not sure that's bad. Last year we won the thing but didn't play real well after that," Massé said.

Coach Jackson said one of her goals is to have a Ruidoso girl make the All-Tournament team.

> "We really started playing some ball there in the second half. I just hope we pick up from there"
> Bryan Masse, Capitan basket ball coach

Amber Green has a sprained ankle and is questionable to play.

Ruidoso's first game is at 6 p.m. Thursday versus Hagerman.

Coach Massé said their 52-34 win over Quemado in Cloudcroft recently gave his team a needed boost going into Thursday's action.

"We really started playing some ball there in the second half. I just hope we pick up from there," Massé said. "It's not going to be a weak tournament."

Capitan plays Carrizozo on Thursday at 6 p.m.

BY BEN CHRISMAN
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The holiday season did not bring the snow, but it did bring the crowds.

Ski Apache operations manager Denny Grover said the holiday was very good to the ski resort, with crowds estimated to be very close to last year's numbers.

"Last year we had lots of snow, but this year the man-made areas have been excellent and are getting better," Grover said.

Grover estimates three new trails will be open by this weekend, with 47 of 55 trails open now.

Grover said Ski Apache is holding up well compared to other ski resorts in the Rocky Mountain region.

"Nobody is fresh with snow, but we have as good of skiing as anyone in the Rocky Mountains," Grover said.

Orin Nutting, owner of Ski West Sports, said that because Ski Apache has been able to maintain man-made snow, people have decided not to drive father north to ski conditions that are not considerably better than Ruidoso's.

Nutting added the road construction on Mechem Drive has not hurt his business, and considering the weather conditions, sales are doing well.

"Last year would have been hard to beat, but we're pretty close," Nutting said.

Laurie Morrison, clerk for Rush Ski and Snowboard, said that ski rentals have been comparable to last years.

"Retail sales have not been what we expected, but other areas like snowboard sales are doing well," Morrison said.

Morrison and Grover said that a majority of customers are from Texas and Mexico.

"Since the University of Texas in Austin students don't go back until Jan.19, we have a great many of them still here skiing," Grover said.

Ronny Taylor, owner of Mountain Ski Shop said sales have not been as good as last year, but are better than he expected.

"Considering the snow conditions and the weather, we've done well," Taylor said.

Ruidoso boys fall to Canutillo

BY BEN CHRISMAN
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

If it hadn't been for the last 16 seconds, the Ruidoso boys Class AAA Varsity team would have defeated Canutillo and made the finals in the Ruidoso High Country Shootout last week.

With 3:30 left on the clock, the Warriors stormed back from an 11-point deficit to take a three point lead with 16 seconds left.

Then disaster struck. Canutillo hit a three-pointer to take the game into overtime and they never looked back, defeating Ruidoso 66-62.

Ruidoso played tough the following game and beat Lydia Patterson Institute 88-73 to take third place in the tournament. Senior Corey Saenz lead the way with 30 points. Saenz and senior Garvin Grant made the All-Tournament team.

Ruidoso coach Billy Page was happy with the tournament results.

"We finally put a complete game togther," Page said. "Everyone played four complete quarters of basketball."

Coach Page and his team face New Mexico Military Institute Thursday at 4 p.m. at Ruidoso High School. He said his team will have to improve their 45% free throw shooting if they want to win.

"We need to shoot 75%," Page said. "We also need to improve our conditioning and rebounding."

Disabled skiers program seeks volunteers

The Ski Apache Disabled Skiers' Program is seeking volunteers to work with developmentally disabled and visually impaired school children.

The children ski one day a week for six consecutive weeks beginning Jan. 26. Volunteers are needed on Tuesday and/or Wednesdays during that period.

Training clinics are scheduled for Jan. 9 and Jan. 10 or Jan. 23 and Jan. 24.

These clinics will be held at Ski Apache from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

Volunteers should be strong, intermediate skiers who are over 18 years old and have access to ski equipment.

Lift tickets will be provided for the training clinic as well as on the days spent skiing with children.

Completion of the clinic also will certify volunteers as Special Olympic coaches in alpine skiing.

Additional training clinics will be held as time demand permits throughout January.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Lisa at 336-4416 or 354-3191.

Elm research branches out to communities

A non-profit organization that focuses on elms has found a shortcut to help communities restore the venerable tree to the American landscape.

The Elm Research Institute based in Westmoreland, N.H. has come up with the concept of the instant elm nursery. The institute has offered community planting programs of its disease resistant American Liberty elms for the past 15 years. Last year, its started a Johnny Elmseed Regional Nursery program, which jump starts elm projects, because it allows volunteer groups to set up a nursery without any digging.

The elms arrive already planted in 12-inch plastic pots in specially mixed soil with the correct alkaline/acid balance and nutrient level. Each tree is protectively wrapped to guard against damage by mice and sun scald.

The start up is speedy, according to J. P. Hansel, executive director of the institute.

Volunteers take the potted trees out of shipping cartons and line up the elms above ground on black plastic mulch in a fenced nursery area. Simple boardwalks allow access to the trees for the routine of watering, weeding and pruning.

When the fast-growing trees reach five or six feet in height, they can be picked up easily, still in the same pots, and transported for transplanting at public sites. The caretakers sell or donate the trees for planting along streets in front of homes and business, at parks and historic sites, and around town halls and libraries.

Volunteers already have helped plant more than a quarter million elms in more than 650 communities since 1983, Hansel said. In most nurseries, volunteers planted the ERI propagated elms directly in the ground, or they planted the small trees in pots and sank the pots in trenches.

"Now we're making it easier to start nurseries and to move trees out when it's time to site them in communities," Hansel said. "From the start, the trees will have ideal soil and suffer no root shock. With proper care, you'll have everything in place for the trees to thrive."

Local start-up funding for nurseries can come from corporations, service clubs, foundations, municipalities, individuals or a combination of sources, he said. Nursery funding provides the potted trees, stakes to stabilize them, shipping, a fence allowance and consultation expenses for a local tree expert chosen by the ERI.

Participants choose from nursery sizes of 100 trees to 200, 500 or 1,000 elms, and in sizes from one to two feet, two to three feet, or three to four feet. Funding costs start at $3,700 for a nursery of 100 elms, one to two feet tall.

The nursery elms will belong to the nonprofit volunteers who care for them, such as Boy Scouts, 4-H, service clubs and garden clubs. The groups may sell their trees as a fund raising project or donate them to communities. If selling, the ERI suggests pricing five to six foot elms at $125, which would bring in $12,500 for 100 elms.

Community transplanting time comes in about one year for nurseries that start with elms three to four feet tall. The smallest elm is ready in about two to three years.

In the 1970s, ERI sponsored research to save the American elm, which was threatened with extinction by Dutch elm disease. By selecting American elm parent trees that proved their ability to fend off the beetle-borne fungus, researchers produced the disease-resistant American Liberty elm, introduced in 1983. This purebred elm, not to be confused with European and Asian hybrids, retains the American elm's classic vase-like shape and grows well in urban conditions.

ERI selects groups for participation in the Johnny Elmseed Regional Nursery program through an application process.

Water Department Superintendent Claudie Peterson in a report at the last meeting of the Village Board of Trustees said that the water department now is receiving more revenue than at any time in the department's history, and gave as one of several reasons the fact that the percentage of loss of water from the city's mains and laterals in the new system is only about 2% where once it ran as high as 20%.

Painting for peace

• Dorothy Whisenhunt painted a dove on a tree ornament as an international message of peace.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Dorothy Whisenhunt stayed up all night one day in mid-December painting a Christmas tree ornament.

Though she doesn't normally paint through the night, the part-time Ruidoso resident and longtime decorative painter had received a request from the White House for the ornament on a Tuesday.

"And it had to be in his (President Bill Clinton's) suitcase on Friday to go to the Middle East," Whisenhunt said recently from her Ruidoso home. "So, it really was a rush job."

Whisenhunt was one of 10 decorative painters in the nation asked to supply unique, hand-painted Christmas ornaments for the president to deliver to Israeli officials during his recent preholiday trip.

The ornaments featured themes of peace, Whisenhunt said. On hers, she painted a flying dove on one side of the flat, wooden ornament and a lion sleeping next to a lamb on the other.

"I heard he put the ornaments on a tree in Bethlehem," Whisenhunt said, adding that she understood the ornaments would later be given to Israeli families.

Two other ornaments by Whisenhunt were featured on a Christmas tree in the White House's Blue Room, where the decorations were supplied by members of the Society of Decorative Painters, an organization Whisenhunt has been a member of since 1974, she said.

Her White House ornaments featured a teddy bear and Santa Claus on one and Christmas bells on the other.

This is the second year that the White House has asked the Society of Decorative Painters to supply Christmas ornaments, she said.

And though hundreds of decorative painters submitted the White House Christmas ornaments, only 10 were asked to produce the "peace" ornaments. Another decorative artist, Rosemary Thigpen, nominated her for the task, said Whisenhunt.

She was unwilling to guess why she was among those chosen for the task, and modestly shrugged off a suggestion that her work stood out.

In return for her efforts, Whisenhunt was one of the artists invited to tour the White House, which she did last month with a Ruidoso friend, Camille Mansell. Mansell owns the accounting office where Whisenhunt, a retired employee of the Texas Department of Public Safety, works part-time.

Though Whisenhunt puts in long hours as a decorative painter, the part-time job allows her a chance to get out of the studio and out among people, she said.

Whisenhunt, who with her husband divides her time between Ruidoso and a home near Abilene, Texas, has been a decorative painter for almost three decades. The genre of painting encompasses the ornamental art work typically found on jewelry boxes, hand mirrors, furniture, walls and more. The subjects include but are not limited to birds, flowers and plants and ribbons.

Toni K. Laxson/Ruidoso News

Dorothy Whisenhunt, a decorative artist, recreates the Christmas ornament she made at the request of the White House. President Bill Clinton took the ornament, along with nine from other artists, to Israel with him last month on a peace-keeping mission.

Whisenhunt and other members of the society create patterns of their decorative pictures that are sold at national chains of arts and crafts shops. The patterns consist of booklets with step-by-step instructions on how to reproduce the paintings. Besides currently working on a pattern that will be published in May, Whisenhunt also teaches the painting technique in classes, she said.

Her work, such as painted boxes and clocks, can be found locally at the Colors of Nature art gallery on White Mountain Drive across from the intersection of Sunny Slopes Drive.

At her home art studio in Ruidoso, she has several projects underway, including an assignment to make 15 duplications of the Christmas ornament sent to Clinton. Though she doesn't normally create group duplications of her work, she liked the reason for the request.— a Bible school teacher in Abilene wants to give them as gifts next year to his students, she said.

Like the ornament that traveled with Clinton, the duplicates will be flat, circular, wooden cut-outs about 6 inches across. Whisenhunt doesn't cut the wood herself — Paul and Twylla Wetzel, a Ruidoso couple does her wood work for her, she said.

"Everybody (who is a decorative painter) needs what I call a good wood person," Whisenhunt said.

New Year's resolutions – who's making them

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The traditions that come along with the New Year are many and varied. Some people eat black-eyed peas for good luck, some take time to spend with their families, and others spend their time nursing a friendly bottle. But one tradition of the new year is held above all the others— the New Years resolution.

Nearly everyone wishes they could change something about themselves for the upcoming year, and the New Years resolution is a promise that enables people to do just that. Several Lincoln County residents and a few visitors were asked what their New Years resolution will be come Jan. 1.

Wilton Howell, Lincoln County commissioner:

"I'm going to try to be little less bashful and a little more assertive when it comes to representing the people that elected me."

Joan Zagone, Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce executive director:

"I will try to focus on what brought me here 20 years ago, and to enjoy it more. I want to look at my mountain and smell the pines, and watch the Ruidoso River flow by my office. I also want to be more open to kindness and slower to anger."

Oliver Enjady, vice president of the Mescalero Apache Tribe:

"I want to see if I can lose another pound and make the year 2000 in one piece."

Joe Hayhurst, Ruidoso Downs mayor:

"I'm not a person to make New Years resolutions."

Robert Donaldson, Ruidoso mayor:

"I don't like resolutions because they mean you haven't done something. But I will work as hard in the next year as the last six months for the village"

Tim Wierwille, owner of White Mountain Pottery:

"I'm going to cash in all of my pennies."

Bill Schwettmann, Lincoln County Commissioner:

"We have to make the commission meeting more citizen friendly. We spend a lot of time on things we can not control. I want to personally do all I can to offer equal representation to the people paying the bills."

John Quemada, Ruidoso Postmaster:

"I want to lose weight and live a healthier lifestyle and to make myself a better person. There is more to life than all work and no play. There has to be some fun in life."

Alan Briley, Ruidoso village manager:

"I want to get in shape and I want to get the village in shape. I've read the self-help books and they haven't worked."

"I don't make them, so I don't break them."

Bruce Eldredge, Museum of the Horse director:

"On a corporate note, we resolve to operate the museum facilities to the best of our ability for the benefit of the public. I also want to spend more time with my family."

Linda Flack, Ruidoso village councilor:

"I'm pretty satisfied personally. I want to be happy and smile a lot. I want to do positive things to continue to give good service to the village of Ruidoso. I'm looking forward to working with a good council."

Tom Stewart, Lincoln County manager:

"I want to get off my crutches and get back to normal. I also want to try harder and find better ways to manage the county."

BRIDGE TACTICS

South dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

To succeed at bridge, a player most possess the capacity to shrug off an adverse development and get on with the business at hand. Lacking this capacity, the player might easily overlook a means of overcoming the initial misfortune. Consider this deal where South bid aggressively to reach a reasonable six club contract. Declarer ruffed the opening diamond lead after following low from dummy, then cashed the A-K of clubs.

When West showed out on the second trump lead, South appeared saddled with two certain losers, a club and a heart. But rather than dwell on the unfriendly trump split, declarer instead focused his attention on trying to find some way to salvage his contract. In due course, he hit on a distinct possibility, made more likely by East's overcall and the fact that he had already turned up with three clubs: If East held fewer than two hearts, the slam could still be made. Accordingly, declarer next cashed three spades, and when East followed to all three, South knew he was almost home. Now came the key play – at trick seven, the ace of hearts was cashed, setting the stage for the coup de grace. Having reduced East's hand to five diamonds and the queen of clubs, declarer exited with a club, forcing East to win and return a diamond. In practice East led the ace, ruffed by South. Dummy was then entered with the king of hearts and a heart was discarded on the king of diamonds to make the slam.

Observe that if declarer had not cashed the heart ace before putting East in with the club, East could have exited safely with a heart. Also, if South had taken the king of hearts at any point prior to throwing East on lead, there would have been no entry in dummy to reach the king of diamonds after it became established.

What's for lunch? It's something new

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Gone are the days of only one entree and a puddle of canned spinach in the school cafeteria.

The Ruidoso High School cafeteria is a food court offering up to six meal choices. Middle school students have three different serving areas, and intermediate and elementary students have two choices, said food service director, Ken Weaver.

Weaver is employed by Aramark, a food services management company contracted by the school district four years ago because of high turnover of food services managers.

"In five years they went through five different managers," Weaver said.

But there were other problems besides lack of consistency. Before contracting with Aramark, the district had to supplement the food service budget with $70,000 to $75,000 from the operational budget, said superintendent of schools Mike Gladden.

During the years with Aramark, the district has been reducing the amount supplemented by the operational budget. Last year, he said, the district had to take only $30,000 from the operational budget.

"What we're working towards is to get to the point where we break even and don't have to supplement any of he school food service and we're approaching that a little more each year," Gladden said.

Four years ago, Weaver jumped into his job as food services manager and into the school district by coaching football at the middle school and helping to coach baseball at the high school.

"I'm probably one of the few Aramark employees who has ever done that," he said. "I wanted to become a real piece of the community and it's been a blessing to me."

Then he set to work sharpening the looks of the serving areas by putting up awnings and neon signs and putting the servers in uniforms with school logos. Then he began diversifying the menus and increasing the offerings.

At the primary and elementary schools he set up an extensive salad bar/baked potato bar for the faculty, because they hadn't been participating in the school food program.

At the middle school, he went from one entree a day to about four to five.

There's a grill works area that serves cheeseburgers and hamburgers and sometimes chicken fried steak, chicken patty sandwiches with fries, fruits and desserts every day.

Pizza is served every day also – baked fresh at the high school and served there and boxed up and delivered to the middle school, Weaver said.

Then there's the more traditional lunch line that serves taco salads, enchiladas, spaghetti, and chef salad, to name a few.

The high school offers at least six different menus each day: burgers and fries at the grill works, pizzas, Elodia Almager's "Esta Fiesta" – a Mexican food concession that she plans around student requests. "Expressway" offers menu items such as spaghetti, chef salads, and chicken nuggets.

The snack bar is run by members of the Distributive Education Club of America – the school business club – and serves frito pies, nachos, chili, TCBY yogurt, Coca Cola products, and French fries. The club gets 20 percent of the proceeds and the rest goes into the school food service program.

Weaver is proud of another choice he offers students at the high school, "Reality Check," a mini-convenience store that sells fruit-based drinks, pretzels, slushes, small chef salads, and deli items.

"I think it's pretty cool," said student Kathy Hightower, "but in Reality Check I don't get a drink with a sandwich like at Express Way."

Weaver told her items stocked in Reality Check are competitively priced to similar items in local convenience stores, and students can opt to eat at the regular lunch line and have their drink included in the price of their meal.

Crystal Gheer, another student, said she eats at the school because it's cheaper on both gas and food.

Weaver himself eats at all the schools "to make sure we're doing what we're supposed to be doing." He said he sends out surveys to the students asking about the quality of the food.

"We get grades that are satisfactory or above," he said.

Another feature that's new is the Aramark/Ruidoso Municipal Schools catering program.

Weaver put together a brochure of menus and costs for catering large and small parties, that can be used as school fundraisers, and can also cater non-school functions, bringing revenue into the district's food services program.

Important Events of the New Year

A Kid's 1999 Calendar

This year we will be celebrating the bicentennial of George Washington. Throughout 1999, people will be honoring his many achievements. He died at his home, Mount Vernon in Virginia, on Dec. 14, 1799.

Looking to a new era

You probably will always remember the celebrations of New Year's Eve, 1999. People will be celebrating the end of a century, or 100 years. Many will also be celebrating the start of a new millennium, a period of 1,000 years.

The first year of the new millennium won't really come until 2001. But most people will start celebrating it in the first minutes of 2000.

This is the first in a four-part series about time and the millennium.

Year of Older Persons

The United Nations has named the year 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons. People today are living and working longer. The United Nations is honoring all the older people who give so much to their communities and families.

Keep this 1999 calendar and watch out for coming special events.

This Year of the Older Person would be a good time to ask your grandparents or older friends more about their lives. Write down or tape-record their memories.

Ask about their favorite childhood memory, or how they met their husband or wife. Think of some questions of your own.

Look through your newspaper for important dates to your family, your community and your country. Why are those dates important?

Next week The Mini Page learns about the coming millennium.

DID YOU KNOW CAPITAN AND CARRIZOZO THAT ZIA NATURAL GAS COMPANY HAS OFFERED UP TO $614,000 TO BUY YOUR UTILITY COMPANY?

Offer has been extended to January 12, 1999 at the request of the Mayor of Capitan and the Mayor of Carrizozo

Mayor Manuel Hernandez
Town of Carrizozo

Carrizozo, NM 88316

Dear Sirs:

Zia would be willing to purchase your gas system for the sum of $614,000.00. The monies paid, $307,000 per community, could be used by your communities for badly needed street, water and sewage projects, while your citizens and customers of your gas company could receive savings of over $190,000 annually in their gas bills, in my opinion.

I would be willing to offer employment to your gas company employees, and would also suggest that your town halls be used for local customer payment centers, which at this time is not available in Carrizozo. For this service by your town halls, Zia would pay each town $700 per month, which we believe are funds which could be used to support their operation.

Zia as a non-municipal entity would be paying property tax which would support your schools, county and city governments. We would also pay franchise fees which could aid in your community finances.

Our offer is based on a $125,000 bonus payment above that provided for contractually in our 1992 Purchase and Sale Agreement with CCNG. The contractual amount should total $489,000 based on 878 customers.

We would propose an effective date of January 1, 1999 with all payables and receivables incurred prior to that date retained by you. Gas billing to the customers after that date would be at Zia's rates, with the resulting savings to them for the remaining heating season.

Zia's offer shall remain open until January 5, 1999, at which time our bonus offer of $125,000 would be withdrawn. I feel we should be able to draft and sign a purchase and franchise agreement in a short time period after your town councils have agreed to exercise your put rights.

I feel our offer is very generous, would resolve the conflicts between us, and Zia would be proud to be a part of your communities. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Very Truly Yours,

David L. Hamilton
President, Zia Natural Gas Company

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN HAVING ZIA NATURAL GAS CO. SERVE YOUR COMMUNITIES PLEASE CALL YOUR TOWN COUNCIL.

Each year the Humane Society of the United States promotes National Farm Animals Awareness Week.

The thrust of the campaign is to recognize the value of farm animals as individuals and to encourage that they live "normal" lives, even if you're a meat eater and know someday they'll head to market.

The three points of emphasis are to:

– Reduce your consumption of meat, eggs and dairy products.

– Replace animal products with other foods. "Good for You!: Choosing a Humane Diet," is available from the HSUS and can guide consumers to make more humane choices when shopping.

"These animals are interesting, intelligent and social individuals known to be inquisitive and courageous," said David Kuemmerle, program manager for farm animals and sustainable agriculture for HSUS "Documented cases show how farm animals protect not only themselves, but also their families and even people from danger. Many people are unaware that today's society has moved from family farms to factory farms where intensive confinement is the norm and animals are denied many of their most basic needs.

"We highlight individual farm animals each year to remind people how affectionate and endearing our farm friends are, so consumers of meat and dairy products will seek out products that do not come from factory farms."

Some of the interesting facts cited by Kuemmerle are:

– Did you know chickens ballroom dance? When a hen and rooster are courting, they dance around each others in a ritual known as "waltzing."

– Did you know cows are music lovers? They have been shown to give 35 percent more milk when listening to Elvis Presley.

– Did you know pigs love to bowl? They enjoy playing with bowling balls, old tires and many other toys, and especially playing with other piglets.

– Did you know sheep can forecast the weather? Sheep are sensitive to changes in air pressure and tend to gather together to keep warm as a cold front passes.

– Did you know President Abraham Lincoln had a pet turnkey? The turkey was proposed by Ben Franklin to be the national bird of the United States.

AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

"Race for the Superbomb"

"It is still an unending source of surprise to me to see how a few scribbles on a blackboard could change the course of human affairs."

—Stanislaw Ulam, mathematician

On August 6th, 1945, a single atomic bomb dropped from a B-29 destroyed the city of Hiroshima. This new "weapon of unusual destructive force" soon ended World War II and forever altered modern warfare. Before long, scientists in the United States and the Soviet Union began a frantic race to build an even more terrible weapon of virtually unlimited power — the hydrogen bomb, known as "the Super" or "H-bomb."

The American Experience "Race for the Superbomb," a two-hour special, tells the story of the spies, scientists, intrigue, and deception that marked the race to develop the hydrogen bomb.

In an atmosphere of crisis, several U.S. scientists argued for an all-out effort to build the H-bomb. The Atomic Energy Commission named a panel of scientists headed by Robert Oppenheimer to study the feasibility of an H-bomb.

Building an H-bomb raised ethical questions, too. "It is not a weapon which can be used exclusively for the destruction of material installations of military or semi-military purposes," Oppenheimer wrote in his final report. "Its use therefore carries much further than the atomic bomb itself the policy of exterminating civilian populations." Oppenheimer's advisory panel voted overwhelmingly against a major effort to develop the H-bomb.

Military and political leaders took a different view. As the wartime alliance between the Soviet Union and the United States was turning cold, the Joint Chiefs argued that a bomb could act as a "possible deterrent to war," or in the case of hostilities, "might be a decisive factor if properly used." By the summer of 1948, the United States and the Soviet Union appeared headed for war when Stalin cut all road and rail links to the Western sectors of the divided city of Berlin.

"Race for the Superbomb" recounts the efforts of Andrei Sakharov, a brilliant young Russian physicist who had been given the task of designing a fusion bomb for the Soviet Union; the setback for the United States when a Soviet spy provided exact plans for the American atomic bomb; and the complex calculations of the Polish-born mathematician Stanislaw Ulam, a key member of the Los Alamos team.

The American Experience "Race for the Superbomb" will air Monday, January 11th at 8:00 p.m. It repeats Sunday, January 17th at 10:00 p.m.

Hung gets new kicks practicing Martial Law

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Meet America's newest cop hero: He doesn't talk a lot, he carries a green card, not a gun, he furnished his apartment with the contents of a Price Is Right showroom, and, at over 200 pounds, he's probably not a candidate for one of those NYPD Blue drawer-dropping scenes.

But Sammo Law (Sammo Hung) and his Martial Law cohorts are bringing home the ratings for CBS.

The Saturday series has undergone a major amount of retooling (one character dropped, another added) since it premiered in September. Audiences get where it's going, and they're climbing on board fast. In December, Law was winning its time period and improving on the previous year's ratings for that time slot by 20 percent.

The key to the success of Law is a combination of the right time period (pairing a new martial-arts cop show with Walker, Texas Ranger was a no-brainer) and the je ne sais quoi of a Hong Kong superstar with a sense of humor.

The series is the first in recent memory with two Asian leads: Hung and co-star Kelly Hu. And the recent addition of Arsenio Hall as LAPD spin doctor Terrell Parker means Martial Law now has the gift of gab.

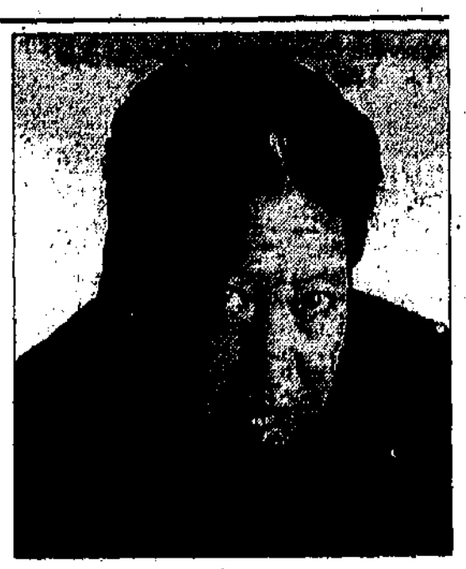
Creator Carlton Cuse (Nash Bridges, The Adventures of Brisco County, Jr.) knows what audiences are looking for in a West Coast action show: fun. Andre E. Morgan, producer of Bruce Lee's Enter the Dragon and co-creator of Walker, knows how to make the genre work for American audiences. And director and martial-arts choreographer Stanley Tong (First Strike, Mr. Magoo), a longtime friend of Hung's, is rarin' to make his first series a success.

"We're trying to do an action show with a lot of fun and stunts," Tong says, "but not always come out with a gun. What's most important is the character himself. He never wants to fight. What he's trying to do is use his bare hands to solve the crime."



Sammo Hung

The man with the crime-solving hands is Hung, an easygoing veteran of 138 Hong Kong action films who directed Jackie Chan in Mr. Nice Guy and played Lee's young opponent in Enter the Dragon.

Taking that success in a new direction, Hung came to grips with his girth in Enter the Fat Dragon, establishing himself as a physical comic.

While Hung made his film debut at the age of 12, his performing career didn't begin with martial-arts flicks on the streets of Hong Kong.

He began his training as a child with a master from the Beijing Opera School who taught many forms of movement.

As a result of his travels, Hung can speak Cantonese, Mandarin, Korean and Thai, which he says he learned by haggling with Bangkok taxi drivers.

The action emigre says he likes the opportunities offered by the film industry in Los Angeles. "In Hong Kong," he explains, "their fantasies aren't very big."

While Hung is a student of American films (Speed, Die Hard and Rocky are favorites), in his spare time, it's a Scottish game he likes to play.

"When I first came here, it was Christmastime, and there was nobody in town. So I played golf every day," he confides.

Hung says he wants his viewers to stop and enjoy life, too. "People work hard all week at their jobs," he says. "I want people watching TV to have a good time."

The case of Clarence Aaron, a college student and athlete serving a life sentence based on no evidence, is chronicled in the Frontline episode "Snitch," airing Tuesday on PBS (check local listings).

Frontline reveals unintended consequences of drug laws

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Is the war on drugs eroding the foundation of freedom in the United States? Before you answer, watch "Snitch," this week's Frontline report, airing Tuesday, Jan. 12, on PBS (check local listings).

The tougher drug laws passed by Congress in 1986 were intended to send a message to drug dealers with stiff minimum sentences ranging from 10 years to life in prison without possibility of parole.

In the 90-minute film, producer Ofra Bikel (Hillary's Class, Innocence Lost) examines the laws' alarming unintended consequences for the operation of the criminal justice system. Now, anyone charged with a drug-related offense faces penalties that no judge or jury can mitigate. The message police and prosecutors often deliver is that the only way out is to turn witness against someone else.

"These laws came about in an incredible conjunction between politics and hysteria," says Eric Sterling, who helped draft the legislation. Today, he calls that work "probably the greatest tragedy of my professional life."

Bikel uncovers astonishing cases, such as the tale of a middle-class teen whose father mortgaged his home and spent $110,000 in an effort to enter the drug market himself, entrap a dealer and turn that person over to authorities in order to reduce his 18-year-old son's 30-year sentence.

Sometimes, as "Snitch" details, the testimony of a single witness is sufficient for prosecution, and often this witness has a long criminal record. At other times, several people involved in a single case are held together in a jail cell where they can converse freely, getting their story straight before facing authorities.

Under conspiracy law, no hard evidence ever need be presented. It's almost unheard of for an accused criminal to pass up the opportunity to turn snitch – regardless of the veracity of the testimony. As this Frontline effort shows, one federal prosecutor calls it "arrogance" not to "take a deal."

Does it still behoove an honest citizen to insist on a fair hearing by a jury of his or her peers? Watch "Snitch" and decide.

Q: How, if in any way, is Walker, Texas Ranger executive producer Aaron Norris related to the show's star, Chuck Norris? –Hazel Distelmeier, Lena, Ill.

A: They are brothers.

Q: Could you give me some background on Garrett Wang (Star Trek: Voyager)? Is he married? –Dawn A. Schrader, Montezuma, Ga.

A: Wang, who plays Ensign Harry Kim on Voyager, is married to actress Taylor Bernard (Phantasmagoria). The 30-year-old actor was born in Riverside, Calif., and has appeared in the movies Hundred Percent, Ivory Tower and Angry Café. He also made a guest appearance in the Margaret Cho sitcom All-American Girl.

Q: How did Roxie Roker (The Jeffersons) die? –Marion Miller, Chicago.

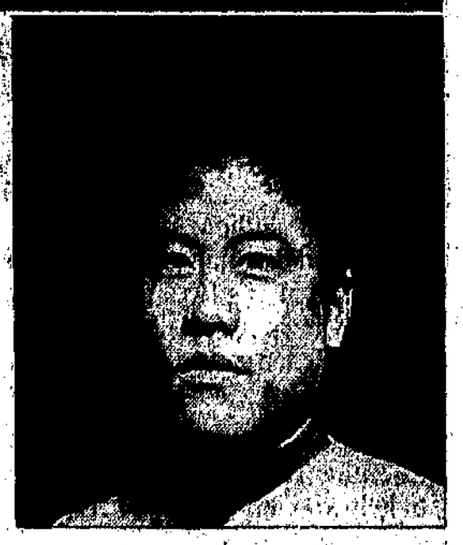
A: Roker, who played Helen Willis on The Jeffersons, died of breast cancer on Dec. 3, 1995. She was 66.

Q: As an early "Boomer," I recall a series called Hey, Jeannie about a young Irish immigrant woman who came to live in the United States. Can you tell me anything about it? –Craig Reid, Charlottesville, Va.

A: English actress Jeannie Carson played naive Scottish immigrant Jeannie MacLennan, who quickly made friends with New York cab driver Al Murray (Allen Jenkins) and his sister, Liz (Jane Dulo). The situation comedy, which focused on Jeannie learning the strange (to her) customs of her new country, ran on CBS during its 1956-57 season; ABC aired reruns during the summer of 1960.

Q: Recently I saw the movie Running on Empty on TV. What other movies has River Phoenix been in, and what is he working on now? How old is he? –Brian, Mankato, Minn.



Garrett Wang

A: One of the most promising actors of his generation, Phoenix died at 23 of heart failure brought on by a drug overdose outside a Hollywood nightclub on Halloween 1993.

If you want to catch highlights from his film career on home video, check out Stand by Me, The Mosquito Coast, A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon, Little Nikita and, if you're old enough, My Own Private Idaho, among several others.

Q: I noticed a notation at the end of a recent Promised Land that the episode was dedicated to the memory of Richard Thomas, who played Joe, Russell's brother. Is "John Boy" dead? Also, they didn't cancel Trinity, did they? –Pat, Rutland, Vt.

A: Thomas is alive and well. The note was in memory of a Promised Land crew member's relative, Richard Greco – not to be confused with actor Richard Grieco.

NBC has put Trinity on hold at this writing due to poor ratings.

MANAGED CARE AND VISION BENEFITS

Over 148 million Americans are currently enrolled in managed care plans. Understanding such terms as HMO, PPO, Point of Service, self co-ordinated, in-plan and out of area can make a significant difference in your financial responsibility for the services you receive. Understanding how your plan works plays an important roll in ensuring that you get the care you need and the coverage to which you are entitled.

To find out exactly what your plan covers, read your benefit manual carefully. Your plan's Member Services Department should be available to help you understand all areas of your coverage. Routine vision benefits are not covered by all plans. Preventative eyecare is usually covered only every 12 or 24 months. Do you need authorization before seeing an eyecare professional? Some plans cover a percentage of your services and materials while others pay a flat allowance on exam, frame, lenses or contact lenses. Co-payments, deductibles and other patient responsibilities should be fully explained in your manual or by your plan's representative. It it also very imponant to make sure that your eyecare professional is participating in the plan you wish to select.

Maximizing the value of your vision benefits will make quality eyecare affordable and accessible. We invite you to stop by FAMILY VISION CENTER, 159 Mescalero Trail. By educating patients we can help balance your managed care benefits and provide greater flexibility in making choices. SOAP TALK

Scotti leaving Young & Restless

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Fans of The Young and the Restless are in for a big disappointment. Nick Scotti, who plays Tony, is leaving the show to pursue opportunities in prime time and film. Executive Producer William Bell says Scotti is "a fine actor and will be missed by everyone at Y&R." It is likely the part of Tony will be recast.

Dear Candace: OK, so like the last thing I want to see during the holidays is soap opera characters turning into dried-up mummies. What were the writers on Sunset Beach thinking? I like the characters, but the stories are so ludicrous. If this show were to disappear I don't think anyone would care. –Samantha in Florida.

Dear Reader: SB is trying to be different from the competition, and it is succeeding to a certain extent. Unfortunately, if the writers don't create characters and stories viewers can relate to, it won't be around very long.

Dear Candace: What is going on with Luke (Anthony Geary) on General Hospital? One minute he is there, and the next he is gone. Is he leaving the show? –Pam in New York.

Dear Reader: Geary is not leaving. He took a long vacation last summer. Now he's off due to lack of story line.

Dear Candace: My friend is a big comic-book fan. He watches the show Spawn on HBO. He says that the voice of Wanda Blake is done by a soap opera star. Could you tell me if he is right and who the actress is? –Beth via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Dominique Jennings provides Wanda's voice and stars as Virginia Harrison on Sunset Beach.

Dear Candace: I was wondering why we never get to see Port Charles. It airs so early in the mornings. Usually you can find it around 2 a.m. Why is ABC doing this to what could be a hit soap for them? –Kammie via the Internet.

Dear Reader: It isn't ABC that is scheduling it so early; it's your local affiliate. Write to them and let them know how you feel. If enough people complain, they might change it.

January Is National Eye Care Month

REGULAR EYE EXAMINATIONS are important because they enable your optometrist to diagnose serious health problems, like diabetes and hypertension, even if you display no visible or obvious symptoms.

Look in the Eyes First for Signs Of General Health Problems

(MS) — Diabetes and high blood pressure are serious health problems that don't necessarily display obvious symptoms. Even so, an optometrist will be able to "see it in your eyes," says Lesley Walls, O.D., M.D., president of the Southern California College of Optometry, Fullerton.

"The old adage that the eye is the window to the body is absolutely true. A lot of diseases will manifest themselves first in the eyes," Walls says.

Diabetes and high blood pressure are two health problems optometrists can pick up on early during an eye exam. "People who have early signs of diabetes and hypertension already have changes going on in their eyes that their optometrist would notice. The optometrist would know that person would be at risk of blindness, strokes or heart attack if the underlying condition was not treated and corrected by the primary-care doctor," he says.

Immune-system malfunctions also show up in the eyes, Walls says. Rheumatoid arthritis and lupus are just two conditions that have ocular manifestations easily detected by the O.D. Vascular diseases like atherosclerosis that can put a person at risk for heart attack or stroke also can be detected via an eye exam, even when a patient doesn't have visible symptoms.

Walls says that no matter what one's age, the following symptoms are red flags that require an immediate visit to the optometrist:

- fleeting loss of vision
- fluctuating vision
- one or both eyes turning red
- soreness and inflammation of one or both eyes
- worsening vision

How to Get the Best Buy in Eyeglass Frames

(MS) — To get the best buy in eyeglass frames today, consumers need to look at more than frame fashion, says an optometrist.

Fashion is important, but the nation's 147 million eyeglass wearers also need frames that fit properly and are comfortable, durable and in tune with the wearer's lifestyle, says Irwin Shwom, O.D., Everett, Mass.

Shwom recommends starting with the basics, that is, selecting frames you like and then asking the optometric assistant or optician if they will work with your lenses.

"You want a frame that will hold your prescription lenses in the proper position so that you get the maximum benefit from them," he says. For example, today's high-tech lenses — the very light, very thin aspheric lenses or, in multifocals, progressive addition lenses — need a frame that can be adjusted precisely.

Frames also need to be suited to a person's work and lifestyle. Titanium or stainless steel frames, for example, are good choices for people who work with chemicals or in a corrosive environment. Plastic frames are needed by electricians. Nylon frames are the right choice for adults and children who play sports. For hockey and football players, the glasses must fit inside the helmet. Some people may need more than one pair of glasses for work, play and general wear.

Stainless steel frames with spring hinges are a good choice for reading glasses. They will stand up well to the wear and tear of being put on and taken off a lot.

"If you are tough on frames, ask about frame warranties and frame durability. Also consider the higher priced frames," Shwom says. "You'll save money in the long run because, in general, they are made of better materials and will help you get by a major trauma that would destroy a lesser frame."

Additionally, he says not to panic if your frame is damaged. Gently put the pieces in a container that won't scratch them and take them back to the optometric assistant or optician, who can determine if they can be repaired or need to be replaced.

Today's frames are a lot easier to repair than those of the past. In the hands of someone skilled in frame repair, even those that have been sat on, chewed by the dog or pulled off by a child often can be repaired and readjusted to factory specifications, Shwom says. Most frame repairs can be done while you wait, unless parts need to be ordered. Usually, the only charge is for parts.

To avoid problems with loose, lost or broken frame screws, Shwom recommends buying frames with nylon "bushed" screws. They fit snugly into silicone or nylon inserts, similar to the sleeves used for drywall screws. Nylon "bushed" screws come standard on better quality frames and often can be added to other frames.

Inexpensive do-it-yourself eyeglass repair kits are worth having, but, Shwom cautions, if the kit's screws don't easily go into the frame, don't use them. If the screw strips the threads inside the frame or it snaps off inside the frame, "you may have taken a previously valuable frame and turned it into junk," he says. An alternative, he suggests, is to ask for a couple of spare screws when you get your new glasses.

It's also a good idea to ask if six-month eyeglass tuneups are available and what the cost is, if any. With a tuneup, frames are disassembled, electronically cleaned and refitted with pads. The lenses then are remounted and the glasses readjusted on the wearer.

EYEGLASS WEARERS NEED frames that fit properly and are comfortable, durable and in tune with the wearer's lifestyle. CU997182

Special-Effects Contacts Need Special Care

(MS) — The latest contact lenses dramatically can change one's appearance, however, people who choose to wear them need to remember that these special-effects lenses need special care, according to the American Optometric Association (AOA).

Long a movie staple, special-effects or costume contact lenses now are coming into their own as an appearance-altering accessory for the general public with designs like flames and spirals. However, they're not toys, says Barry Weiner, O.D., chair of the AOA's Contact Lens Section. "These new lenses may look as fun and different as some of the fashions children enjoy today, but they're still medical devices. They aren't for everyone — certainly not for children — and they definitely shouldn't be swapped as if they were baseball caps, not even for a special occasion like a school dance."

Contact lenses require a prescription that's individually determined after a thorough eye examination, even if the wearer doesn't need vision correction. Regular professional optometric care also is important because, treated improperly, lenses can cause problems both with vision and eye health. As with all types of contact lenses, listen and watch carefully as the optometrist or a contact-lens technician demonstrates care instructions for costume lenses. Follow them to the letter, and let your doctor know if you have difficulty with your lenses. CU997184

How to Judge Eye-Exam Quality

(MS) — It can be difficult to judge the quality of health care, but it is possible for consumers to determine if they are getting a quality eye exam.

The exam's thoroughness is the key, says the American Optometric Association. A thorough eye exam, the association says, includes:

- a review of your family and personal health history;
- an examination of your eyes' exterior and interior for signs of eye disease or general health problems, like diabetes or hardening of the arteries, that may show up in the eyes and, for adults, eye-pressure and field-of-vision tests to diagnose glaucoma;
- tests of your ability to see sharply and clearly at near and far distances;
- tests to diagnose nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism, depth-perception problems and, in people older than 40, presbyopia (an age-related condition affecting reading vision);
- a check of eye coordination and eye-muscle function to be certain the eyes are working together as a team;
- a test of the ability to change focus easily from near to far and vice versa;
- a discussion of the exam's findings and any treatment the optometrist prescribes, as well as personal advice about matters like good vision on the job, eye safety and maintaining eye health.

Additional tests for young children are:

- a check for any indications of crossed-eyes or that the child is not using one eye;
- tests to check eye-hand-foot coordination;
- if necessary, a series of tests to determine how well the child's vision skills are developing.

When making an appointment, consumers should ask about the eye-care services provided in the examination fee quoted, the association says. During the exam, people can ask the optometrist what each test covers as it is done. CU997185

WHEN SHOULD YOU GET YOUR EYES EXAMINED?

(MS) — The American Optometric Association recommends that people with no previous history of eye-health or vision problems should be evaluated:

- at 6 months of age
- again at age 3
- then before first grade
- from ages 6 to 18, every two years
- from ages 19 to 40, every two to three years
- from ages 41 to 60, every two years
- from ages 61 and older, annually

Symptoms that call for an immediate visit to the optometrist include double vision, sudden blurred or distorted vision, suddenly seeing floaters or flashes, eye pain, or redness.

Mescalero referendum pits one faction against another

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A referendum Tuesday on the Mescalero Apache Reservation pits a new regime against an old one, asking tribal members to decide if a presidential election should be scheduled.

The vote, the results of which were not available by press time, was the first time tribal members have cast their ballots on electronic machines. Previously, ballots were hand counted. The machines were borrowed from Otero County.

Paul Ortega ascended to the office of tribal president in November after the death of Wendell Chino, who led the tribe for more than four decades. Oliver Enjady, who served on the tribal council, was named to fill the vice president's chair left vacant by Ortega.

The new president contends the tribal constitution calls for him to finish out the last year of Chino's two-year term, but a contingent led by tribal Housing Director Freddie Kaydahzinne interprets the constitution as calling for an immediate election.

In a one-question referendum, voters Tuesday were asked to decide if a special election should be called now.

Ortega expressed the reasons he and Enjady think tribal members should vote against a special election in a letter to the tribe dated Dec. 30.

"We've been in office less than two months," Ortega wrote. "Within those two months, many events have taken place and all for the good of the Tribe."

While the petition presented by Kaydahzinne to elect another tribal president was denied by the tribal council, Ortega, Enjady and tribal council members agreed to conduct a referendum to obtain the general agreement of the Tribe, Ortega wrote, adding, "Although it is not necessary."

He reminded voters that the tribal general election will occur this year.

"We can assure you the integrity or the perfect condition of the Tribe will be greater than when we took office," Ortega wrote. He could not be reached for comment.

Contacted at his office Tuesday, Kaydahzinne said he would reserve his comment until after the election.

"I'm waiting to see how people respond to the election," he said.

In his memorandum on the referendum, Kaydahzinne clearly stated his opposition to the current administration, contending that Ortega, "a man who was not elected by the people to be president," is undoing many of the developments that Chino put in place.

"A new election will allow the people to say if they want Mr. Ortega to continue being their

Tribe could face major changes

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Some big changes – including running their own gambling operation – may lie ahead for the Mescalero Apache as President Paul Ortega and four new tribal council members look to the future of the Tribe.

The process already has started with the existing eight-member council.

Ortega, in a letter to tribal members dated Dec. 30, laid out some of the actions already taken and others planned. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

The contract with Gaim-Ko, the company that managed the slot machines at Casino Apache, was up for renewal in December.

"The Mescalero Apache Tribe has already paid millions of dollars to Gaim-Ko under the existing contract," Ortega wrote. (At) the time when Casino Apache first started, the risk of managing slot machines was great and now the risk has changed. It's no longer necessary to continue paying more than the market price."

Although he stated he would not discuss the problems with Gaim-Ko, Ortega wrote that on the morning of Nov. 25, the tribal administration took control of the casino.

"Payments to Gaim-Ko for the use of slot machines are made to the bank," he wrote. "Gaim-Ko is not allowed to come onto the Reservation until further notice."

The casino's operation continues as usual and employees are doing an excellent job, he said.

"Casino Apache is presently considering buying slot machines from several major corporations including Gaim-Ko," Ortega said in the letter. "Our tribal attorneys are communication with Gaim-Ko and will be in conference with Gaim-Ko to dissolve our contractual agreement.

"By dissolving the contract, (the tribe) will be able to retain and operate Casino Apache with monies previously paid out to Gaim-Ko. This transition should be completed by or before Feb. 27."

Ortega also made it clear that the Tribe will not subsidize The Inn of the Mountain Gods, a luxury resort

Wine to flow in Ruidoso

• The Southwest Wine Competition, which includes wineries from a six-state region, will be held this summer in Ruidoso along with a wine tasting festival.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Start stocking up on corkscrews, a wine competition and festival is coming to Ruidoso this summer, a coordinator said.

On Tuesday, the executive director of the Southwest Wine Competition notified a local group that their bid to produce the event in Ruidoso has been accepted, said Laura Doth, a member of the group that wooed the competition from its previous location in Angel Fire.

The wine competition and festival will be July 29 through Aug. 1, which is the weekend after the Ruidoso Arts Festival, Doth said. It will include several components such as a wine seminar, a wine tasting/dinner/dance, a wine auction for a local charity and a golf tournament, which is to be called the Great Grape Golf Tournament and is slated for the Links at Sierra Blanca.

Also, coordinators will revive a past Ruidoso event, the Connoisseur Classic, in which local restaurants are teamed with wineries to prepare special "wine tasting" meals. Tickets for the meals are to be sold in advance, she said.

The wine competition involves wineries from across New Mexico as well as those in Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, Texas and Utah, Doth said. About 190 wines are expected to be entered in the competition, she said.

Coordinators say the festival will probably bring in between 200 to 500 visitors to Ruidoso the first year.

"But I think it has the opportunity to grow rather dramatically," Doth said. "It used to be, the Connoisseur Classic ran about 200

Subsidized apartments planned for Downs

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A 60-unit government-subsidized apartment complex is being proposed for land behind the Ruidoso Ford Lincoln Mercury dealership on U.S. Highway 70, participants in the project say.

Johnny Durham, president of Sierra Blanca Motors, owns the land targeted for the development, and is expected to sell to the project's developer, whose name has not been released.

Van Patton, a local real estate agent representing the developer, said Tuesday the developer had been awaiting a rezoning of the 11-acre tract, which is half in Ruidoso and half in Ruidoso Downs, before proceeding.

However, because of a recent review of Ruidoso Downs' regulations, the project will not need to wait for the rezoning process, Patton said.

Last week, Alan Morel, an attorney for Durham, had asked the Ruidoso Downs Village Council to rezone the land from single-family homes to multi-housing, such as apartments.

The rezoning request was to have been discussed in a public hearing at a council meeting this month before the council voted on it.

But a review of the village's zoning laws between Morel and Ruidoso Downs Village Attorney Dan Bryant has shown that the public hearing is not needed for compliance, Patton said.

Though the 11-acre tract of land is in both Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, the potential developer, whose name is not on any public records filed with Ruidoso Downs, intends to build on 5.9-acres in Ruidoso Downs, Patton said.

The developer has, at least initially, decided against building inside of Ruidoso because of the village's newly instituted impact fees on development, Patton said.

The fees, which took effect Jan. 1, are to help Ruidoso pay for the cost of growing infrastructure, such as additional burdens on the water system.

Patton said the developer intends to build the apartment complex using a tax credit program, in which investors receive tax credits.

In return, the apartments are rented to tenants with low incomes. The level of qualifying incomes fluctuates based on the number of people in a family.

Patton said the developer has built numerous other subsidized apartment complexes about the state.

"I've seen pictures of the other projects (built by the developer) and they are nice," he said.

The developer of the first project, Stephen Crozier, initially planned the apartments for tenants who would qualify based solely on income.

The opposition to statehood is not confined to class or creed, nor is it affected by political affiliation or party fealty. The cohorts of statehood have conjured every expletive, indulged in every form of ridicule and contumely in a frantic effort to whip into line those papers that have remained steadfast in the belief that statehood for New Mexico, as conditions now exist, would be a mixed problem, tinctured with the most damnable features of a servile peonage in politics and the chicanery of leaders, that promises nothing but years of earnest effort by the intelligent class to remove. The time for the admission of New Mexico into the constellation of sovereign states has not yet arrived...

County youth suicide topic of Thursday meeting

By Sandy Suggitt
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Lincoln County Youth Suicide Prevention Task Force will hold a meeting for youth at 7 p.m. Thursday at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church, 1210 Hull Road.

Angelica Figueroa, co-chair of the task force, said the purpose of the meeting is to have youth brainstorm ideas and make suggestions for a statewide suicide prevention plan.

"We're going going to say, this is where we see problems, this is what we wish would happen, a lot of brainstorming," Figueroa said.

> "Even I was not aware the problem was as major as it is."
> Rick Cogdill, Carrizozo guidance councilor

The meeting will be run by Ruidoso residents who attended a work session sponsored by the Injury Prevention Division of the New Mexico Department of Health Nov. 9 and 10 in Santa Fe: Figueroa, April Figueroa, high school counselor Linda Hawthorne, high school student Jenni Hart, and Sergio Castro from the Counseling Center.

She said the adults present are people who have resources, such as the Counseling Center, Presbyterian Medical Services, the high school counselor and others who have influence with or access to youth.

"What we're trying to do at this point is just raise the level of awareness and help youth see the warning signs that you can look for and ... the way you can access help," said Hawthorne.

Castro, who specializes in counseling youth, said the reason for the meeting Thursday night is to address the fact that New Mexico ranks number two in the nation as far as suicide at all ages, and Lincoln County ranks number one in New Mexico in youth suicide.

"We want to start a grassroots effort to get the information out there," Castro said. "...what we want (youth) to tell us is how we can reach them."

Castro said a14-year-old attempted suicide Tuesday morning, and that such attempts "happen all the time."

"A lot of times we don't want to talk about it because it is taboo in a lot of places, but one of the biggest myths is that if you talk about suicide it's going to cause kids to attempt it, but the more open you are with the kids, the less likely it is that they'll commit suicide," he said.

Tuesday April and Angelica Figueroa, whose brother committed suicide a year and a half ago, gave presentations to middle school and high school students in Carrizozo to give them information about warning signs and resource people and to encourage them to attend the meeting Thursday.

"Even I was not aware the problem was as major as it is," said Carrizozo guidance counselor Rick Cogdill. "I think it's great what these people are doing. It probably helps them to heal some, too."

Angelica Figueroa said she had scheduled "Suicide Awareness and Prevention Day" meetings for Ruidoso students with the middle school and high school principals before the Christmas vacation, but director of instructional support Paul Wirth said they aren't going to happen.

"We want to be cautious about some of the controversial issues we might deal with for the purpose of making sure we do the most appropriate things for our students," he said.

He said this issue came up the last week before Christmas vacation and the administrative council did not meet to make a decision about it.

"We need to have administrators and others make some decisions about what will be the most appropriate setting for controversial issues – suicide issues or health issues or public health issues," Wirth said.

"That's all part of what schools do, whatever we provide for our students, we need to make sure that it's appropriate and reflective of the community," he said.

Businesses ask to be included as part of Ruidoso midtown

By Toni K. Laxson
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Several businesses are asking to be officially included in the midtown area.

"I feel like we are the entrance to the midtown and we would like to be included in that," Candyce Garrett, owner of Garrett Signs and Sculptures at 2101 Sudderth Drive, told the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday.

The commission approved the request from Garrett and four other merchants on the perimeter of the midtown shopping district. The request asks for a change to their stores' zoning designation. The commission's action will be sent on to the Ruidoso Village Council as a recommendation. The council is expected to hold a public hearing followed by a vote on the zoning request at the Feb. 9 meeting, Cleatus Richards, director of the Ruidoso Planning Department, said.

Currently, Garrett's store as well as several others are zoned C-2, which is a regular commercial zoning designation. The request is to change the stores' zoning to C-3, which is specific to the midtown area and gives businesses a different set of code regulations — such as the ability to build out to the lot line and no parking lot requirements.

Richards said the current southeastern boundary of the midtown zoning actually bisects The Gazebo, a shopping strip just west of Garrett's studio.

The new zoning, if approved, would extend the midtown zoning designation to Stan's Snowboard Shop at 2003 Sudderth Drive, but short of the A-1 Vacuum and Sewing Center at 1925 Sudderth Drive. The zoning change would only apply to businesses on the south side of Sudderth, Richards said.

In other action, the commission:

- Set Feb. 2 for a public hearing on a proposed ordinance amendment that would prohibit pre-fabricated metal carports in the village.
- Approved a variance request from Alvin Swanson to extend the deck at a home at 526 Second St. The open deck will be within 7.3 feet of the side lot line, a variance of 2.7 feet from the standard side lot set back, according to village planners.
- Tabled a variance request and a conditional use permit request from Mark Marquez and Truman Barnett regarding a proposal to build an addition to a commercial building at 508 Mechem Drive. The items were tabled at the request of the applicants.

ELECTION: Kaydahzinne listed reasons why an election should be held

president," Kaydahzinne wrote.

He noted that if less than 30 percent of the eligible 1,800 Mescalero voters turn out for the election, a special presidential election will not occur between now and the October regular primary.

He contended that the tribal council acted incorrectly by rejecting his petition with signatures of 25 percent of Mescalero voters.

"It is critical that the Mescalero people be represented by a President that they elected," he wrote.

He listed four other reasons to call for a new presidential election.

They are:

- That Ortega and the Tribal Council broke the contract with Gaim-Ko Inc., which supplied gaming machines to Casino Apache, instead of renegotiating the terms.

"The Tribe now is exposed to expensive lawsuits and additional negative publicity...just before the delicate gaming arbitration (with the state over the cost of regulating Indian gaming) gets under way," he wrote. "It's critical that before jobs are terminated, contracts broken and services are cut back that the people hear the pros and cons and weigh the facts for themselves."

- That a promised general meeting never was called in November or December.
- That a requirement for the President to select an election board to oversee all elections was not fulfilled until the week of Dec. 29, two weeks later than the normal deadline. The referendum wording was prepared by Ortega and the tribal attorney instead of the election board, he said.
- That the election was not advertised properly.

Kaydahzinne also criticized Ortega for having police officers present during council meetings, contending that when a tribal member was escorted out of a council session Dec.15, her freedom of speech was denied.

CHANGES: Top priorities for the council will be to come up with goals

built on the shore of Lake Mescalero. That could mean cutting employee food cost, closure of some hotel services, dropping building improvements and possibly, laying off employees.

"The Inn is one of the most expensive tribal enterprises to operate," Ortega said. A new manager was hired in early November and has been instructed by Ortega with the concurrence of the tribal council to cut expenses, he said.

"By using resources we actually need to operate the Inn, we can better control management and become financially sound," Ortega wrote. "The whole purpose is for the Inn to support itself and (to) detach tribal resources such as cash tied up by the Inn back to the Tribe."

The top priorities of the Tribal Council will be to come up with five-year goals to successfully conclude arbitration between the Tribe and the state of New Mexico over the percentage to be paid to the state for gaming oversight, and to build a new $18 million school complex on the Reservation, Ortega stated. He promised the schools will be built in two or three years.

to 300, but it was in February. So this is a very different dynamic than anything we've had before."

The highlight of the event will be the Grand Tasting/A Taste of Ruidoso, a wine tasting, dinner and dance, on July 30 at the Ruidoso Convention Center.

"We are looking at making it about $35 a head for the Friday night event," Doth said. "And we did that because we want to attract as many people as possible, and not make it a high-end, very hoity-toity thing ... So, I think it will appeal to a very broad base of people."

Lisa Muhn, one of Doth's partners, said the Southwest Wine Competition board had been looking for a new location for the event because of low turnout at Angel Fire.

"So, we put in a proposal and they jumped on it," Muhn said. "Angel Fire was just getting 100 people."

Doth said her group's proposal included a wine seminar on July 29, a Thursday, at the Museum of the Horse. At the seminar, participants will sample wines and hors d'oeuvres while experts tell what qualities to look for in a wine, she said.

The Connoisseur Classic is scheduled to take place on July 31, a Saturday, and the golf tournament is tentatively set for the following day. A Sunday brunch may also be set at a local art gallery, Doth said.

"My goal is to open Ruidoso up to a different kind of consumer than the average vacationer with the family in tow," Doth said. "We are looking at someone who is probably on the high end as far as economics. And I may be completely wrong about that. With the popularity of wine, we may end up with just a very broad spectrum of demographics."

Doth and Muhn's group, which is made up of about four other people, is called the Special Events Resource Group. They are the same people who have produced past events in Ruidoso, such as the recent Octoberfest, Doth said. The group decided to go into the business of soliciting special events based on its positive experiences of producing events as volunteers, she said.

Woman killed in accident

A Texas woman and her two dogs were killed early Friday when the 1989 Ford sedan she was driving crossed the center line on U.S. 70 about 1:25 a.m. and rammed head-on into a semi-truck.

Karen Vogel, 47, died at the scene, according to investigating New Mexico State Police Officer Jose Salazar's report.

Kenneth Willard, 42, was headed east on the highway in a 1998 Freight Liner.

Vogel was going west toward Ruidoso when the collision occurred, said Lt. William Bower. Vogel was not wearing a seat belt, he said.

It is unknown at this time if liquor was involved in the accident.

Willard was admitted to the hospital in Ruidoso, but released Saturday, a hospital spokesperson said.

The fatal collision was the only serious accident in Lincoln County over the holiday weekend, Bower said.

County commission slates first meeting of 1999

Commissioners will tackle first-of-the-year duties by appointing new or replacement members to 18 different advisory boards, committees and groups.

The meeting begins at 9 a.m. in the commission room of the county courthouse in Carrizozo.

Leading off are resolutions to adopt the state Open Meetings Act and set requirements for public notice on special and emergency meetings.

A second resolution will set the dates of regular commission meetings.

Under a seven-item consent agenda, which can be passed as a block without discussion unless a commissioner pulls an item off, is approval to set a hearing on establishing a county medical indigent fund.

Other financial issues will include more discussion of salary increases for elected officials requested by County Assessor Patsy Serna; the payment of fees for an attorney who represented elected officials in their request for raises to the commission; and the possibility of raises for employees.

Julie Sterchi, acting administrator of the county-owned but privately operated Lincoln County Medical Center, will update commissioners on remodeling and expansion at the hospital and about the award of a bid for remodeling.

Also on the agenda is a project that has gone through years of problems, starting with a goof by the state Legislature, when it mistakenly awarded money to the town of Carrizozo for new sidewalks slated to be poured in the historic settlement of Lincoln.

The commission is being asked by the state Department of Finance and Administration to sign a joint powers agreement for the expenditure of $20,000 appropriated by the legislature to design, construct and restore the historic pathway in Lincoln. John McGrath, chairman of the Lincoln Historic Preservation Board, will present the item.

Don Katowski is scheduled to ask commission backing of a proposed new volunteer fire department in Arabela. The group broke off from the existing Hondo Volunteer Fire Department last year, because of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the Arabela area was equipped and covered.

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Businesses are donating lumber, plexiglass, plumbing, and other services to That Place, the teen center scheduled to open mid-January or early February, an owner of the center has said.

Meanwhile, volunteers are scrubbing down the former Seahorse Cafe on Mechem Drive and planning weekly dances and sports areas, said owner Judy Stone.

They're fortunate because the building does not need structural changes, Stone said.

There's a full kitchen for the restaurant in the "boat bar" area, already making coffee drinks and ready to serve "teenage foods" such as hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, and bagels, she said.

"It's going to be a lot of work," said Tory Sablatura, 13, Stone's daughter and one of the teen advisors. "I'm doing a lot so far. We're cleaning, we're thinking of ideas, we're building a store there with candles, necklaces and normal (teenage) things that we like."

Stone said they will have tables throughout the boat bar area, video games against the wall, a "board room" for announcements, jobs listings, tutoring information, and commendations of students who move from failing to passing grades who "need to be honored as much as someone making an A," she said.

The pool tables will stay, she said, and they'll add Foosball, shuffleboards and other games (Sablatura suggested virtual reality games).

The former dining room (of the Seahorse Cafe) will be a quiet area for study, furnished with couches and tables.

Every weekend they'll have a Friday night dance for middle school students and a Saturday night dance for high school students, with live music. Local teenage bands will be encouraged but they'll also have bands from out of town, Stone said.

"Two bands – a high school band and a middle school band – have told us that they wanted to play, so we're really going to push that, and we have somebody here that's gong to be able to make some CDs for them and push individual talents," she said.

There will be opportunities for kids to work waiting tables and as disc jockeys, she said, and there will be equipment for designing and making their own T-shirts.

"The kids that come through here can vote and then we'll have T-shirts made up and they'll get a royalty off it," Stone said.

Michael Crouse, father of teen advisor Chad Crouse, said he's going to build ramps at the side of the building for rollerblading and skateboarding and wants ideas and help from teenagers with the project.

In front of the building they plan to have a basketball court, and at the side a "beach" with sand built up around a volleyball court.

For security, there will be guards both indoors and outdoors, Stone said; a PA system for messages will permit parents to call and ask kids to call home.

Instead of forbidding trouble-makers to return, Stone said, they'd be allowed to return after three hours of counseling "at our expense" and if they agree to enter a mediation program.

"They'll have a lot of power," she said, "and will vote for representatives for a board of the kids, two from each class that they can elect for six months, and one for each class on the executive board, and the board will find out what the kids are wanting to come up with."

She foresees lots of contests (and hopes to find sponsors in the community who'll offer prizes) and free classes in anything kids want to learn, from self-defense to guitar plucking.

Stone said they did a survey of 1,600 to 2,000 kids in Ruidoso, Capitan and Hondo asking them whether they need a teen center and how often they would go. She said they got back over half of them and only 23 said they didn't need a teen center.

"But they also said they'd come if there was one," Stone said.

"Most of what's going is going to be what they want," she said. "It won't work if we don't do what they like."

OUR OPINION

What's in the price of a gallon of gasoline?

Crystal-ball gazing is a notable sport that seems to have its World Series every January. Everybody wants to know what the future holds, of course; but, lacking resident soothsayers and astrologers, most people tend to examine what has gone before, throw in a factor for the unexpected — and call it (depending on the context) a budget, or forecast, or (perhaps more honestly) a guess about what the new year will hold.

Those whose Ruidoso memories go back 25 years or so recall with dismay what happened when the Arab oil producers decided to punish what was later called "the great Satan" by cutting off America's oil supply. That resulted, for most Americans, in long waits at the gas pump, and an escalation of gasoline prices.

The battering that the Texas oil patch ultimately suffered still can provoke nightmares. In Ruidoso during the 1970s and '80s it meant all of the above, plus a plunge in the real estate market that some people say still hasn't recovered.

So anything to do with oil tends to get attention in Ruidoso.

With Ruidoso-area gasoline in the 90-cent to $1.10 per gallon range right now, motorists are smiling. (Those in Albuquerque are smiling even more, with regular unleaded fuel at about 82 cents.) But those with memories are a little more interested in the "why," not the price. Economists who watch such things point to, believe it or not, Iraq: The world — including the U. S. — during the past year let Saddam Hussein sell a lot of it everywhere, contributing to an over-supply. When that happens, gasoline prices go down.

Now comes some annual predictions for 1999 from the Independent Petroleum Association of the Mountain States in Denver, and they're enough to give us pause:

Many small independent oil producing companies will not survive. Continued consolidation of surviving companies, particularly mid to large-size independents, can be expected. Growing awareness by local governments of the impact of lost oil revenues could result in different forms of revenue generation — like higher taxes. As oil producers close their doors, the devastation will snowball to smaller refineries.

Well...enjoy the cheap gas now, but remember what happens when we don't have a healthy domestic oil industry. If you don't remember, ask some of Ruidoso's semi-senior citizens who do.

YOUR OPINION

Don't call a Republican about our president

To the editor:

A friend tells me that he had phoned Rep. (Joe) Skeen about the impeachment of our president. My friend, like nearly three-quarters of the U. S. population, did not like the idea. Why? This impeachment was a foregone decision by the Republican...House leadership. The entire circus leading eventually to this impeachment was concocted by innuendo, accusations and finally by entrapment.

Skeen is a Republican and as most everyone of the House Republicans he will try to impair or damage the activities, or even try to get rid of the president. The man did too good for the country. Thus, the Republicans tried to sabotage his success, starting with the Whitewater accusations, then claimed that he or his people killed a friend of his, followed by other innuendos, all turn out out to be untrue, and when everything failed, they found little Monica and trumped up charges on questions which should have never (been) asked in the first place.

So, what's the use to call a Republican? If we don't reconsider our attitudes toward the political tolerance of the folks we elect to represent us, our country will split—until it breaks?

The curmudgeons have a point today

To the editor:

Is it any wonder that there are curmudgeons among us? Watching the county commissioners (mis)manage makes one wonder if we really need that level of government. It's just plain discouraging and a hell of a waste of money that could be better spent. But there is at least one area where our county government has been quite efficient — ripping off property owners.

In federal governmental parlance, a "head of household' status confers a special tax break on a single parent raising children alone. (I)n Lincoln County...a "head of household" is anyone who owns a house or piece of property... (That) individual is qualified to claim a $2,000 property tax exemption — just like a veteran's exemption — but the government doesn't go out of its way to make sure the property owner knows about it. Then, to make it even more difficult, the property owner must drive... to Carrizozo to sign his or her name to receive what should otherwise be an automatic deduction on his or her property tax bill. Thus, by using confusing terminology and everyone's misunderstanding of legal gobbledygook, the county and its communities eventually pocket tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars of illegal and unwarranted taxes. By definition, that's a con game — confusing the victim(s) into paying for something they're not getting!

Everyone reading this, make sure you claim your legal and rightful property tax exemptions, and pass along the information to our friends and neighbors so they can claim theirs. If the government is going to take our money, let's make them do it more openly and honestly. If you feel like raising hell with your elected officials about the government hoodwinking it citizens, that's OK too. They may not think so, but that's why they got elected — and maybe should get diselected.

Girl Scouts help feed county's needy people

To the editor:

The 10 members of Junior Girl Scout Troop No. 1 would like to thank the community for the generous support of their recent food drive. The Girls Scouts and their parents participated in a scavenger hunt on Sunday, Dec., 13; three teams of scouts and parents visited all areas of Ruidoso in search of items on their list. They knocked on doors of friends and neighbors hunting for canned food items. The teams collected in less than one hour over 120 items of food for the needy families of LIncoln county.

They have now reached their goal of 150 cans of food and have decided to donate the items to the Lincoln County Food Bank for this holiday season. Thanks to all the people who opened their doors and gave so generously. Thanks to all the people who gave several items instead of just one. Thanks to the people who searched for those difficult item s on the lists. Thanks for all the kind words that were given to the Girl Scouts. thanks for making this a community that organizations such as Girl Scout Troops can still participate... We are truly blessed to live in such a wonderful community.

Something to consider about using our taxes

To the editor:

The excitement created in the local lodging business by the prospects of another resort hotel is exceeded only by the reality of our tax dollars being used to develop and promote it.

Here's hoping our city fathers soon tire or promoting additional motel/hotel space and direct their energies to other businesses. Perhaps Ruidoso needs another utility company or maybe a ski shop.

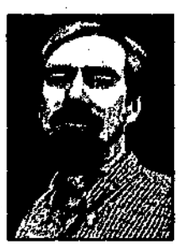
Community journalism and a New Year's resolution

Opportunity brought me to Ruidoso; the charm of the village and its people have kept me here.

BLEEDING BLACK INK



BY TERRANCE VESTAL
EDITOR, RUIDOSO NEWS

In less than a week I will mark one year here at the Ruidoso News as its editor, and what a year it has been.

Some of you may already know that before moving to Ruidoso, I was a reporter for The Taos News in Taos, N.M.

The move here was a whirlwind to say the least and the following year has been much of the same.

But I can honestly say it has been worth it.

My love of journalism began when I was a freshman in high school (Burgess High School in El Paso, Texas, just in case you were wondering). I worked on the high school newspaper there and enjoyed writing and developing stories.

I wanted to become an editor because I believed then and I still believe that newspapers can ultimately make a positive impact on the communities they serve.

Needless to say, being the editor of a newspaper has been a dream of mine since my high school days so when I was offered the editor's position here in Ruidoso, I jumped at it.

Over the course of the last several years, journalism, especially print journalism, has seen drastic changes in the content of its products.

What has developed is a concept referred to in the industry as "Community Journalism."

With a national downward trend of newspaper circulation numbers, editors, publishers and even reporters have had to rethink approaches to news.

Community journalism, as it implies, emphasizes the community in which the newspaper serves rather than emphasizing state or national news.

No longer are newspapers satisfied with just playing the part of observer but they have moved into more active roles in community while still remaining as objective as possible in covering the news.

One example of this role is the Community Update sessions sponsored by the Ruidoso News last year.

The newspaper brought political and governmental leaders together as well as members of the public to discuss problems facing the communities of Lincoln County and possible solutions to those problems.

Round-table sessions like these are being sponsored by newspapers all over the country.

The Ruidoso News will be holding a similar meeting in March.

With this new-found role, newspapers must walk a fine line, however. Newspapers can certainly act as catalysts in making positive changes in their communities but also must maintain the position as objective observers and not as newsmakers.

In the coming year, the Ruidoso News will continue its effort to accurately reflect Ruidoso and Lincoln County and be the paper of record in this area.

We plan to provide more extensive coverage in other areas of the county that have, for one reason or another, been neglected. We also plan to provide more substantive coverage on issues that impact our communities.

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues.

Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and address. The phone number and street or mailing address will not be printed; however, the author's hometown will be included. The telephone number will be used to verify authorship. No letter will be printed without the writer's name.

Letters should be 300 words or less in length, be of public interest and must avoid name-calling and libelous language. The Ruidoso News reserves the right to edit letters, so long as viewpoints are not altered. Shorter letters are preferred and generally receive greater readership.

Letters may be hand-delivered to the News office at 104 Park Avenue or mailed to P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, NM 88345, attention of the editor.

The News reserves the right to reject any letter.

YOUR OPINION

The New Yorker mag probes Lincoln County

To the editor:

It seems strange to see "1999" automatically pop into view, put here by my word processor as I type this. But even stranger to me was reading one of the feature articles in, of all places, the most recent issue of New Yorker magazine.

Beginning on page 86 of the Dec. 28, 1998, issue you'll find "The Many stories of Billy the Kid" by Fintan O'Toole. Now, if the title of the article doesn't grab your interest, the author's name certainly should. It's a very interesting article for those who know something of the history of the Lincoln County war and The Kid's role in it.

It's simply incredible to me that anyone can find anything new to write about The Kid after all these years. And even more incredible that magazine such as the New Yorker would publish it, considering all those unsolicited manuscripts (mine included) that they must reject each week.

The importance of such an article to all of us here in Lincoln County should not go unnoticed. That is why I am writing. The continuing hubbub over the Lincoln (County) Heritage Trust and the closing of important museum buildings in Lincoln should concern every New Mexican.

The fact that such articles as this one in New Yorker magazine continue to give free publicity to one of New Mexico's premiere tourist attractions should give pause to all of those who would otherwise see no reason for supporting the continued preservation of this wonderful heritage site. The legend of Billy the Kid is alive and well and we New Mexican should do everything we can to see that it remains so. We should do everything possible to preserve the infusion of tourism cash that having The Kid's ghost running free in Lincoln means to all of us.

On losing a friend

To the editor:

Our Christmas was saddened by the death of a dear friend, Dan Storm.

We had the pleasure of meeting Dan about five years ago, and every spring and fall when we would come to Ruidoso we always called and he always wanted us to come out fir a visit.

He would pick us up at the Trading Post (Arizona Kid's place) in his Suburban, because the road was always bumpy, really bumpy to be quite honest. He always made us feel so welcome and way always eager to show us the cows, which he know all by name — one named Tex after us. The lilac bushes were blooming the first year that we visited, and he sent me home with a huge bouquet. Last September his clematis vine was blooming by the door, and we took several pictures for him. He loved that vine.

I think that he had that rare gift of making you feel like you were the most wonderful person on earth, and I never heard him say a bad word about anyone and always complimented others.

We will truly miss Dan and we will miss our chats with him under the shade tree. He was one in a million!

Collector of tokens

To the editor:

I am a lover of history and I have a somewhat unusual hobby. I collect old tokens used by stores, barber shops, pool halls, bakeries, saloons, forts, and other businesses years ago. The tokens were "good for" 5 cents, 10 cents, 12.5 cents or such in trade or merchandise or "good for" a loaf of bread, one drink, one shave, one ride or whatever. They were usually ... metal, and while having the general appearance of a coin, they were made in all shapes and sizes.

...I have reason to believe that some of these tokens were used in your area and I would be most interested in obtaining some of them for my collection.

I would like to hear from anyone...that might be able to help me...

Horse Liniment Eases Arthritis Pain

OCALA, FL – An ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreases inflammation in racehorse's legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx* and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Although the mechanism by which ARTH-Rx works to relieve pain is not totally clear, scientists suggest that pain is relieved because ARTH-Rx intercepts the messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain.

ARTH-Rx is available in a convenient roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, due to the overwhelming demand for ARTH-Rx, supplies are sometimes limited. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446. *1997 PGC

Alcohol sting nets few citations locally

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Wal-Mart and a Pizza Hut got their hands slapped again last month for selling alcohol to a minor.

Agents of the Department of Public Safety's Special Investigations Division (SID) conducted another underage alcohol sting operation in Ruidoso on Dec. 1, visiting 19 local establishments and citing two for selling to a minor.

Six were cited in a sting on Dec.13, 1997, and five on July 16, 1998.

"I'd want to say that there's been a big change," Griffin said about the reduction in offenses, "but the other thing that's lurking in the back of my mind is, how many places called up the road to let them know we were coming?"

Griffin said he saw a man talking at a convenience store on Mechem and asked a clerk what he'd said.

"He told us you guys were doing a sting operation,'" the clerk told Griffin. "So we ran back out the door and had a conversation with this gentleman."

People were overheard talking about the sting operation at Furr's and Allsup's on Mechem Drive, Griffin said, and were apparently forewarned.

"Most of the places that we went to, there didn't appear to be any indications that they were tipped off, except for a few," he said.

The sting started in Ruidoso Downs and worked its way through Ruidoso to Johnson's Village Store in Alto, he said.

An 18-year-old woman, working undercover, carried her own legitimate identification card and was required to answer honestly any questions asked her, such as, "How old are you?"

Clerks and servers at 17 establishments in the Ruidoso area asked her for identification and refused to sell her alcohol, but clerks at Wal-Mart and Pizza Hut asked for identification and sold her alcohol anyway.

"At Wal-Mart, we brought the girl back and let her (the clerk) look at the ID again and she said she just got confused with it," Griffin said.

"If you're trying to do the math in your head and you've got a long line, I can see where it could get confusing. I don't try to do any thick math," he said. "I just remember today's date (in) 1977."

"It used to be clerks and servers wouldn't even ask for identification and now they're doing that more, but some of them seem to become confused or are sympathetic to the minor," Griffin said.

This is a second offense for the Pizza Hut on Sudderth. That establishment paid a $1,000 fine and suspended sales of alcohol for one day for its first offense, said Barbara Rivera, citations manager at the New Mexico Regulation and Licensing office.

The agents issued criminal citations to the employees who sold alcohol to minors, a misdemeanor, and administrative citations to the businesses. Magistrate court decides the penalties for the criminal citations and the New Mexico Regulation and Licensing Department assesses penalties for the administrative citations.

For Wal-Mart, it was the third citation for selling alcohol to a minor, but only the second in the past year, Rivera said.

The first offense occurred Dec. 13, 1997, and therefore is more than a year before the recent Dec. 17 citation. Penalties increase "exponentially," said Griffin, with each successive citation within a year's period.

For its previous second offense, Wal-Mart paid $500 a day in lieu of suspending alcohol sales for 7 days, in addition to a fine of $2,000.

Had this recent sting taken place four days earlier, it would have been a third offense for Wal-Mart with a possible fine of $3,000 to $4,000 and suspension of alcohol sales for 14 days, according to Rivera.

A fourth offense entails a fine of $4,000 to $5,000 and suspension of alcohol sales for 30 days, and a fifth offense entails a fine of $10,000 and revocation of the liquor license.

"That hasn't happened since I've been here," said Rivera, who's been citations manager for three years.

So far Rivera hasn't received the reports on the Dec. 17 sting operation and the fines haven't been negotiated.

Wal-Mart has had five citations since the super center store opened in the fall of 1997, Griffin said.

Besides three citations for selling alcohol to a minor, Wal-Mart also received a citation for not having its liquor stock segregated from other items and a citation for 10 counts of failing to maintain beer keg registrations.

SID agents conducted "Operation Should Tap" stings in Artesia on Dec. 10 and in Hobbs on Dec. 16 in which they cited nine citizens for procuring alcohol for a minor.

Undercover minors approached 72 customers at various convenience stores in Artesia and Hobbs and asked them if they would buy them alcohol.

Seven customers in Artesia and two in Hobbs agreed to do it, took the minors' money, purchased the alcohol, and were immediately confronted by plainclothes agents who seized the alcohol and issued criminal citations.

POLICE BRIEFS

Police report that Jacob Freed, 16, brown hair and eyes, 5 feet 9 inches, 140 pounds, with a scar on his right knee, and a tattoo on his right shoulder, driving a gold Volkswagen Jetta, was reported missing after he got off work at Sierra Cinema at 8 p.m. on Jan. 3.

TV, play station stolen

According to the Ruidoso Police Department, an RCA color television, and a play station "Piranha" were taken from a residence on Deck between 9:30 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. on Dec. 19.

A sober New Year's Eve

No arrests were made or tickets issued for drunk driving on New Year's Eve in Lincoln County.

Lt. William Bower of the New Mexico State Police said this is the first DWI-free New Year's Eve he can remember in the 7 1/2 years he's been stationed in the district that includes Lincoln and Otero counties.

"Everybody was real good," he said. But the honeymoon didn't last long; some DWI arrests occurred before the holiday weekend ended, he said.

BEN CHRISMAN
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The Smokey Bear Tournament in Capitan will tip off this Thursday and all signs point to a highly competitive three days of boys and girls action.

"The girls are playing really positively and are not giving up," Jackson said. "We're improving and that is what I'm concerned with."

Capitan girls basketball coach Bryan Massé said the holiday break was a much needed rest for his team and should help them out over the stretch of the tournament.

"When most of your kids do all three sports or are involved in everything, mentally the break will be good," Massé said. "But I imagine we'll be a little rusty and it may take us three games in the tournament to get it out."

Massé said his team has not practiced much, but he is still optimistic.

"We really haven't done anything. But I'm not sure that's bad. Last year we won the thing but didn't play real well after that," Massé said.

> "We really started playing some ball there in the second half. I just hope we pick up from there"
> Bryan Masse, Capitan basket ball coach

Amber Green has a sprained ankle and is questionable to play.

Ruidoso's first game is at 6 p.m. Thursday versus Hagerman.

"We really started playing some ball there in the second half. I just hope we pick up from there," Massé said. "It's not going to be a weak tournament."

Capitan plays Carrizozo on Thursday at 6 p.m.

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The holiday season did not bring the snow, but it did bring the crowds.

Ski Apache operations manager Denny Grover said the holiday was very good to the ski resort, with crowds estimated to be very close to last year's numbers.

"Last year we had lots of snow, but this year the man-made areas have been excellent and are getting better," Grover said.

Grover estimates three new trails will be open by this weekend, with 47 of 55 trails open now.

Grover said Ski Apache is holding up well compared to other ski resorts in the Rocky Mountain region.

"Nobody is fresh with snow, but we have as good of skiing as anyone in the Rocky Mountains," Grover said.

Orin Nutting, owner of Ski West Sports, said that because Ski Apache has been able to maintain man-made snow, people have decided not to drive father north to ski conditions that are not considerably better than Ruidoso's.

Nutting added the road construction on Mechem Drive has not hurt his business, and considering the weather conditions, sales are doing well.

"Last year would have been hard to beat, but we're pretty close," Nutting said.

Laurie Morrison, clerk for Rush Ski and Snowboard, said that ski rentals have been comparable to last years.

"Retail sales have not been what we expected, but other areas like snowboard sales are doing well," Morrison said.

Morrison and Grover said that a majority of customers are from Texas and Mexico.

"Since the University of Texas in Austin students don't go back until Jan.19, we have a great many of them still here skiing," Grover said.

Ronny Taylor, owner of Mountain Ski Shop said sales have not been as good as last year, but are better than he expected.

"Considering the snow conditions and the weather, we've done well," Taylor said.

Ruidoso boys fall to Canutillo

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

If it hadn't been for the last 16 seconds, the Ruidoso boys Class AAA Varsity team would have defeated Canutillo and made the finals in the Ruidoso High Country Shootout last week.

Then disaster struck. Canutillo hit a three-pointer to take the game into overtime and they never looked back, defeating Ruidoso 66-62.

Ruidoso played tough the following game and beat Lydia Patterson Institute 88-73 to take third place in the tournament. Senior Corey Saenz lead the way with 30 points. Saenz and senior Garvin Grant made the All-Tournament team.

"We finally put a complete game togther," Page said. "Everyone played four complete quarters of basketball."

Coach Page and his team face New Mexico Military Institute Thursday at 4 p.m. at Ruidoso High School. He said his team will have to improve their 45% free throw shooting if they want to win.

"We need to shoot 75%," Page said. "We also need to improve our conditioning and rebounding."

Disabled skiers program seeks volunteers

The Ski Apache Disabled Skiers' Program is seeking volunteers to work with developmentally disabled and visually impaired school children.

The children ski one day a week for six consecutive weeks beginning Jan. 26. Volunteers are needed on Tuesday and/or Wednesdays during that period.

Training clinics are scheduled for Jan. 9 and Jan. 10 or Jan. 23 and Jan. 24.

These clinics will be held at Ski Apache from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

Volunteers should be strong, intermediate skiers who are over 18 years old and have access to ski equipment.

Lift tickets will be provided for the training clinic as well as on the days spent skiing with children.

Completion of the clinic also will certify volunteers as Special Olympic coaches in alpine skiing.

Additional training clinics will be held as time demand permits throughout January.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Lisa at 336-4416 or 354-3191.

Elm research branches out to communities

A non-profit organization that focuses on elms has found a shortcut to help communities restore the venerable tree to the American landscape.

The Elm Research Institute based in Westmoreland, N.H. has come up with the concept of the instant elm nursery. The institute has offered community planting programs of its disease resistant American Liberty elms for the past 15 years. Last year, its started a Johnny Elmseed Regional Nursery program, which jump starts elm projects, because it allows volunteer groups to set up a nursery without any digging.

The elms arrive already planted in 12-inch plastic pots in specially mixed soil with the correct alkaline/acid balance and nutrient level. Each tree is protectively wrapped to guard against damage by mice and sun scald.

The start up is speedy, according to J. P. Hansel, executive director of the institute.

Volunteers take the potted trees out of shipping cartons and line up the elms above ground on black plastic mulch in a fenced nursery area. Simple boardwalks allow access to the trees for the routine of watering, weeding and pruning.

When the fast-growing trees reach five or six feet in height, they can be picked up easily, still in the same pots, and transported for transplanting at public sites. The caretakers sell or donate the trees for planting along streets in front of homes and business, at parks and historic sites, and around town halls and libraries.

Volunteers already have helped plant more than a quarter million elms in more than 650 communities since 1983, Hansel said. In most nurseries, volunteers planted the ERI propagated elms directly in the ground, or they planted the small trees in pots and sank the pots in trenches.

"Now we're making it easier to start nurseries and to move trees out when it's time to site them in communities," Hansel said. "From the start, the trees will have ideal soil and suffer no root shock. With proper care, you'll have everything in place for the trees to thrive."

Local start-up funding for nurseries can come from corporations, service clubs, foundations, municipalities, individuals or a combination of sources, he said. Nursery funding provides the potted trees, stakes to stabilize them, shipping, a fence allowance and consultation expenses for a local tree expert chosen by the ERI.

Participants choose from nursery sizes of 100 trees to 200, 500 or 1,000 elms, and in sizes from one to two feet, two to three feet, or three to four feet. Funding costs start at $3,700 for a nursery of 100 elms, one to two feet tall.

The nursery elms will belong to the nonprofit volunteers who care for them, such as Boy Scouts, 4-H, service clubs and garden clubs. The groups may sell their trees as a fund raising project or donate them to communities. If selling, the ERI suggests pricing five to six foot elms at $125, which would bring in $12,500 for 100 elms.

Community transplanting time comes in about one year for nurseries that start with elms three to four feet tall. The smallest elm is ready in about two to three years.

In the 1970s, ERI sponsored research to save the American elm, which was threatened with extinction by Dutch elm disease. By selecting American elm parent trees that proved their ability to fend off the beetle-borne fungus, researchers produced the disease-resistant American Liberty elm, introduced in 1983. This purebred elm, not to be confused with European and Asian hybrids, retains the American elm's classic vase-like shape and grows well in urban conditions.

ERI selects groups for participation in the Johnny Elmseed Regional Nursery program through an application process.

Water Department Superintendent Claudie Peterson in a report at the last meeting of the Village Board of Trustees said that the water department now is receiving more revenue than at any time in the department's history, and gave as one of several reasons the fact that the percentage of loss of water from the city's mains and laterals in the new system is only about 2% where once it ran as high as 20%.

Painting for peace

• Dorothy Whisenhunt painted a dove on a tree ornament as an international message of peace.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Dorothy Whisenhunt stayed up all night one day in mid-December painting a Christmas tree ornament.

Though she doesn't normally paint through the night, the part-time Ruidoso resident and longtime decorative painter had received a request from the White House for the ornament on a Tuesday.

"And it had to be in his (President Bill Clinton's) suitcase on Friday to go to the Middle East," Whisenhunt said recently from her Ruidoso home. "So, it really was a rush job."

Whisenhunt was one of 10 decorative painters in the nation asked to supply unique, hand-painted Christmas ornaments for the president to deliver to Israeli officials during his recent preholiday trip.

The ornaments featured themes of peace, Whisenhunt said. On hers, she painted a flying dove on one side of the flat, wooden ornament and a lion sleeping next to a lamb on the other.

"I heard he put the ornaments on a tree in Bethlehem," Whisenhunt said, adding that she understood the ornaments would later be given to Israeli families.

Two other ornaments by Whisenhunt were featured on a Christmas tree in the White House's Blue Room, where the decorations were supplied by members of the Society of Decorative Painters, an organization Whisenhunt has been a member of since 1974, she said.

Her White House ornaments featured a teddy bear and Santa Claus on one and Christmas bells on the other.

This is the second year that the White House has asked the Society of Decorative Painters to supply Christmas ornaments, she said.

And though hundreds of decorative painters submitted the White House Christmas ornaments, only 10 were asked to produce the "peace" ornaments. Another decorative artist, Rosemary Thigpen, nominated her for the task, said Whisenhunt.

She was unwilling to guess why she was among those chosen for the task, and modestly shrugged off a suggestion that her work stood out.

In return for her efforts, Whisenhunt was one of the artists invited to tour the White House, which she did last month with a Ruidoso friend, Camille Mansell. Mansell owns the accounting office where Whisenhunt, a retired employee of the Texas Department of Public Safety, works part-time.

Though Whisenhunt puts in long hours as a decorative painter, the part-time job allows her a chance to get out of the studio and out among people, she said.

Whisenhunt, who with her husband divides her time between Ruidoso and a home near Abilene, Texas, has been a decorative painter for almost three decades. The genre of painting encompasses the ornamental art work typically found on jewelry boxes, hand mirrors, furniture, walls and more. The subjects include but are not limited to birds, flowers and plants and ribbons.

Toni K. Laxson/Ruidoso News

Dorothy Whisenhunt, a decorative artist, recreates the Christmas ornament she made at the request of the White House. President Bill Clinton took the ornament, along with nine from other artists, to Israel with him last month on a peace-keeping mission.

Whisenhunt and other members of the society create patterns of their decorative pictures that are sold at national chains of arts and crafts shops. The patterns consist of booklets with step-by-step instructions on how to reproduce the paintings. Besides currently working on a pattern that will be published in May, Whisenhunt also teaches the painting technique in classes, she said.

Her work, such as painted boxes and clocks, can be found locally at the Colors of Nature art gallery on White Mountain Drive across from the intersection of Sunny Slopes Drive.

At her home art studio in Ruidoso, she has several projects underway, including an assignment to make 15 duplications of the Christmas ornament sent to Clinton. Though she doesn't normally create group duplications of her work, she liked the reason for the request.— a Bible school teacher in Abilene wants to give them as gifts next year to his students, she said.

Like the ornament that traveled with Clinton, the duplicates will be flat, circular, wooden cut-outs about 6 inches across. Whisenhunt doesn't cut the wood herself — Paul and Twylla Wetzel, a Ruidoso couple does her wood work for her, she said.

"Everybody (who is a decorative painter) needs what I call a good wood person," Whisenhunt said.

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The traditions that come along with the New Year are many and varied. Some people eat black-eyed peas for good luck, some take time to spend with their families, and others spend their time nursing a friendly bottle. But one tradition of the new year is held above all the others— the New Years resolution.

Nearly everyone wishes they could change something about themselves for the upcoming year, and the New Years resolution is a promise that enables people to do just that. Several Lincoln County residents and a few visitors were asked what their New Years resolution will be come Jan. 1.

Wilton Howell, Lincoln County commissioner:

"I'm going to try to be little less bashful and a little more assertive when it comes to representing the people that elected me."

Joan Zagone, Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce executive director:

"I will try to focus on what brought me here 20 years ago, and to enjoy it more. I want to look at my mountain and smell the pines, and watch the Ruidoso River flow by my office. I also want to be more open to kindness and slower to anger."

"I want to see if I can lose another pound and make the year 2000 in one piece."

Joe Hayhurst, Ruidoso Downs mayor:

"I'm not a person to make New Years resolutions."

Robert Donaldson, Ruidoso mayor:

"I don't like resolutions because they mean you haven't done something. But I will work as hard in the next year as the last six months for the village"

Tim Wierwille, owner of White Mountain Pottery:

"I'm going to cash in all of my pennies."

Bill Schwettmann, Lincoln County Commissioner:

"We have to make the commission meeting more citizen friendly. We spend a lot of time on things we can not control. I want to personally do all I can to offer equal representation to the people paying the bills."

John Quemada, Ruidoso Postmaster:

"I want to lose weight and live a healthier lifestyle and to make myself a better person. There is more to life than all work and no play. There has to be some fun in life."

Alan Briley, Ruidoso village manager:

"I want to get in shape and I want to get the village in shape. I've read the self-help books and they haven't worked."

"I don't make them, so I don't break them."

Bruce Eldredge, Museum of the Horse director:

"On a corporate note, we resolve to operate the museum facilities to the best of our ability for the benefit of the public. I also want to spend more time with my family."

Linda Flack, Ruidoso village councilor:

"I'm pretty satisfied personally. I want to be happy and smile a lot. I want to do positive things to continue to give good service to the village of Ruidoso. I'm looking forward to working with a good council."

Tom Stewart, Lincoln County manager:

"I want to get off my crutches and get back to normal. I also want to try harder and find better ways to manage the county."

BRIDGE TACTICS

South dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

To succeed at bridge, a player most possess the capacity to shrug off an adverse development and get on with the business at hand. Lacking this capacity, the player might easily overlook a means of overcoming the initial misfortune. Consider this deal where South bid aggressively to reach a reasonable six club contract. Declarer ruffed the opening diamond lead after following low from dummy, then cashed the A-K of clubs.

When West showed out on the second trump lead, South appeared saddled with two certain losers, a club and a heart. But rather than dwell on the unfriendly trump split, declarer instead focused his attention on trying to find some way to salvage his contract. In due course, he hit on a distinct possibility, made more likely by East's overcall and the fact that he had already turned up with three clubs: If East held fewer than two hearts, the slam could still be made. Accordingly, declarer next cashed three spades, and when East followed to all three, South knew he was almost home. Now came the key play – at trick seven, the ace of hearts was cashed, setting the stage for the coup de grace. Having reduced East's hand to five diamonds and the queen of clubs, declarer exited with a club, forcing East to win and return a diamond. In practice East led the ace, ruffed by South. Dummy was then entered with the king of hearts and a heart was discarded on the king of diamonds to make the slam.

Observe that if declarer had not cashed the heart ace before putting East in with the club, East could have exited safely with a heart. Also, if South had taken the king of hearts at any point prior to throwing East on lead, there would have been no entry in dummy to reach the king of diamonds after it became established.

What's for lunch? It's something new

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Gone are the days of only one entree and a puddle of canned spinach in the school cafeteria.

The Ruidoso High School cafeteria is a food court offering up to six meal choices. Middle school students have three different serving areas, and intermediate and elementary students have two choices, said food service director, Ken Weaver.

Weaver is employed by Aramark, a food services management company contracted by the school district four years ago because of high turnover of food services managers.

"In five years they went through five different managers," Weaver said.

But there were other problems besides lack of consistency. Before contracting with Aramark, the district had to supplement the food service budget with $70,000 to $75,000 from the operational budget, said superintendent of schools Mike Gladden.

During the years with Aramark, the district has been reducing the amount supplemented by the operational budget. Last year, he said, the district had to take only $30,000 from the operational budget.

"What we're working towards is to get to the point where we break even and don't have to supplement any of he school food service and we're approaching that a little more each year," Gladden said.

Four years ago, Weaver jumped into his job as food services manager and into the school district by coaching football at the middle school and helping to coach baseball at the high school.

"I'm probably one of the few Aramark employees who has ever done that," he said. "I wanted to become a real piece of the community and it's been a blessing to me."

Then he set to work sharpening the looks of the serving areas by putting up awnings and neon signs and putting the servers in uniforms with school logos. Then he began diversifying the menus and increasing the offerings.

At the primary and elementary schools he set up an extensive salad bar/baked potato bar for the faculty, because they hadn't been participating in the school food program.

At the middle school, he went from one entree a day to about four to five.

Pizza is served every day also – baked fresh at the high school and served there and boxed up and delivered to the middle school, Weaver said.

Then there's the more traditional lunch line that serves taco salads, enchiladas, spaghetti, and chef salad, to name a few.

The high school offers at least six different menus each day: burgers and fries at the grill works, pizzas, Elodia Almager's "Esta Fiesta" – a Mexican food concession that she plans around student requests. "Expressway" offers menu items such as spaghetti, chef salads, and chicken nuggets.

The snack bar is run by members of the Distributive Education Club of America – the school business club – and serves frito pies, nachos, chili, TCBY yogurt, Coca Cola products, and French fries. The club gets 20 percent of the proceeds and the rest goes into the school food service program.

Weaver is proud of another choice he offers students at the high school, "Reality Check," a mini-convenience store that sells fruit-based drinks, pretzels, slushes, small chef salads, and deli items.

Weaver told her items stocked in Reality Check are competitively priced to similar items in local convenience stores, and students can opt to eat at the regular lunch line and have their drink included in the price of their meal.

Crystal Gheer, another student, said she eats at the school because it's cheaper on both gas and food.

Weaver himself eats at all the schools "to make sure we're doing what we're supposed to be doing." He said he sends out surveys to the students asking about the quality of the food.

"We get grades that are satisfactory or above," he said.

Another feature that's new is the Aramark/Ruidoso Municipal Schools catering program.

Weaver put together a brochure of menus and costs for catering large and small parties, that can be used as school fundraisers, and can also cater non-school functions, bringing revenue into the district's food services program.

Important Events of the New Year

A Kid's 1999 Calendar

This year we will be celebrating the bicentennial of George Washington. Throughout 1999, people will be honoring his many achievements. He died at his home, Mount Vernon in Virginia, on Dec. 14, 1799.

Looking to a new era

You probably will always remember the celebrations of New Year's Eve, 1999. People will be celebrating the end of a century, or 100 years. Many will also be celebrating the start of a new millennium, a period of 1,000 years.

The first year of the new millennium won't really come until 2001. But most people will start celebrating it in the first minutes of 2000.

Year of Older Persons

The United Nations has named the year 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons. People today are living and working longer. The United Nations is honoring all the older people who give so much to their communities and families.

This Year of the Older Person would be a good time to ask your grandparents or older friends more about their lives. Write down or tape-record their memories.

Ask about their favorite childhood memory, or how they met their husband or wife. Think of some questions of your own.

Look through your newspaper for important dates to your family, your community and your country. Why are those dates important?

Next week The Mini Page learns about the coming millennium.

DID YOU KNOW CAPITAN AND CARRIZOZO THAT ZIA NATURAL GAS COMPANY HAS OFFERED UP TO $614,000 TO BUY YOUR UTILITY COMPANY?

Offer has been extended to January 12, 1999 at the request of the Mayor of Capitan and the Mayor of Carrizozo

Mayor Manuel Hernandez
Town of Carrizozo

Dear Sirs:

Zia would be willing to purchase your gas system for the sum of $614,000.00. The monies paid, $307,000 per community, could be used by your communities for badly needed street, water and sewage projects, while your citizens and customers of your gas company could receive savings of over $190,000 annually in their gas bills, in my opinion.

I would be willing to offer employment to your gas company employees, and would also suggest that your town halls be used for local customer payment centers, which at this time is not available in Carrizozo. For this service by your town halls, Zia would pay each town $700 per month, which we believe are funds which could be used to support their operation.

Zia as a non-municipal entity would be paying property tax which would support your schools, county and city governments. We would also pay franchise fees which could aid in your community finances.

Our offer is based on a $125,000 bonus payment above that provided for contractually in our 1992 Purchase and Sale Agreement with CCNG. The contractual amount should total $489,000 based on 878 customers.

We would propose an effective date of January 1, 1999 with all payables and receivables incurred prior to that date retained by you. Gas billing to the customers after that date would be at Zia's rates, with the resulting savings to them for the remaining heating season.

Zia's offer shall remain open until January 5, 1999, at which time our bonus offer of $125,000 would be withdrawn. I feel we should be able to draft and sign a purchase and franchise agreement in a short time period after your town councils have agreed to exercise your put rights.

I feel our offer is very generous, would resolve the conflicts between us, and Zia would be proud to be a part of your communities. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Very Truly Yours,

David L. Hamilton

Each year the Humane Society of the United States promotes National Farm Animals Awareness Week.

The thrust of the campaign is to recognize the value of farm animals as individuals and to encourage that they live "normal" lives, even if you're a meat eater and know someday they'll head to market.

The three points of emphasis are to:

– Replace animal products with other foods. "Good for You!: Choosing a Humane Diet," is available from the HSUS and can guide consumers to make more humane choices when shopping.

"These animals are interesting, intelligent and social individuals known to be inquisitive and courageous," said David Kuemmerle, program manager for farm animals and sustainable agriculture for HSUS "Documented cases show how farm animals protect not only themselves, but also their families and even people from danger. Many people are unaware that today's society has moved from family farms to factory farms where intensive confinement is the norm and animals are denied many of their most basic needs.

"We highlight individual farm animals each year to remind people how affectionate and endearing our farm friends are, so consumers of meat and dairy products will seek out products that do not come from factory farms."

Some of the interesting facts cited by Kuemmerle are:

– Did you know chickens ballroom dance? When a hen and rooster are courting, they dance around each others in a ritual known as "waltzing."

– Did you know cows are music lovers? They have been shown to give 35 percent more milk when listening to Elvis Presley.

– Did you know pigs love to bowl? They enjoy playing with bowling balls, old tires and many other toys, and especially playing with other piglets.

– Did you know sheep can forecast the weather? Sheep are sensitive to changes in air pressure and tend to gather together to keep warm as a cold front passes.

– Did you know President Abraham Lincoln had a pet turnkey? The turkey was proposed by Ben Franklin to be the national bird of the United States.

AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

"Race for the Superbomb"

"It is still an unending source of surprise to me to see how a few scribbles on a blackboard could change the course of human affairs."

—Stanislaw Ulam, mathematician

On August 6th, 1945, a single atomic bomb dropped from a B-29 destroyed the city of Hiroshima. This new "weapon of unusual destructive force" soon ended World War II and forever altered modern warfare. Before long, scientists in the United States and the Soviet Union began a frantic race to build an even more terrible weapon of virtually unlimited power — the hydrogen bomb, known as "the Super" or "H-bomb."

The American Experience "Race for the Superbomb," a two-hour special, tells the story of the spies, scientists, intrigue, and deception that marked the race to develop the hydrogen bomb.

In an atmosphere of crisis, several U.S. scientists argued for an all-out effort to build the H-bomb. The Atomic Energy Commission named a panel of scientists headed by Robert Oppenheimer to study the feasibility of an H-bomb.

Building an H-bomb raised ethical questions, too. "It is not a weapon which can be used exclusively for the destruction of material installations of military or semi-military purposes," Oppenheimer wrote in his final report. "Its use therefore carries much further than the atomic bomb itself the policy of exterminating civilian populations." Oppenheimer's advisory panel voted overwhelmingly against a major effort to develop the H-bomb.

Military and political leaders took a different view. As the wartime alliance between the Soviet Union and the United States was turning cold, the Joint Chiefs argued that a bomb could act as a "possible deterrent to war," or in the case of hostilities, "might be a decisive factor if properly used." By the summer of 1948, the United States and the Soviet Union appeared headed for war when Stalin cut all road and rail links to the Western sectors of the divided city of Berlin.

"Race for the Superbomb" recounts the efforts of Andrei Sakharov, a brilliant young Russian physicist who had been given the task of designing a fusion bomb for the Soviet Union; the setback for the United States when a Soviet spy provided exact plans for the American atomic bomb; and the complex calculations of the Polish-born mathematician Stanislaw Ulam, a key member of the Los Alamos team.

The American Experience "Race for the Superbomb" will air Monday, January 11th at 8:00 p.m. It repeats Sunday, January 17th at 10:00 p.m.

Hung gets new kicks practicing Martial Law

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Meet America's newest cop hero: He doesn't talk a lot, he carries a green card, not a gun, he furnished his apartment with the contents of a Price Is Right showroom, and, at over 200 pounds, he's probably not a candidate for one of those NYPD Blue drawer-dropping scenes.

But Sammo Law (Sammo Hung) and his Martial Law cohorts are bringing home the ratings for CBS.

The Saturday series has undergone a major amount of retooling (one character dropped, another added) since it premiered in September. Audiences get where it's going, and they're climbing on board fast. In December, Law was winning its time period and improving on the previous year's ratings for that time slot by 20 percent.

The key to the success of Law is a combination of the right time period (pairing a new martial-arts cop show with Walker, Texas Ranger was a no-brainer) and the je ne sais quoi of a Hong Kong superstar with a sense of humor.

The series is the first in recent memory with two Asian leads: Hung and co-star Kelly Hu. And the recent addition of Arsenio Hall as LAPD spin doctor Terrell Parker means Martial Law now has the gift of gab.

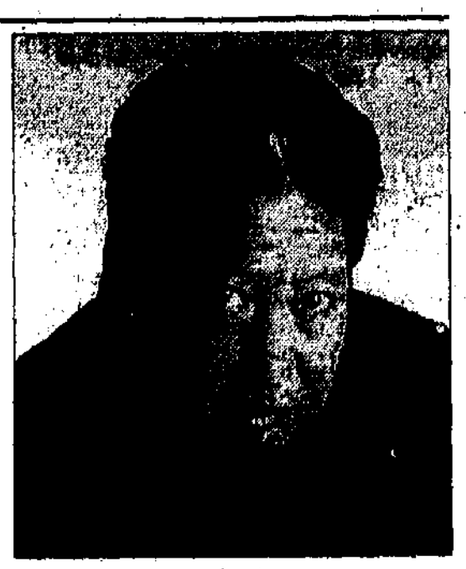
Creator Carlton Cuse (Nash Bridges, The Adventures of Brisco County, Jr.) knows what audiences are looking for in a West Coast action show: fun. Andre E. Morgan, producer of Bruce Lee's Enter the Dragon and co-creator of Walker, knows how to make the genre work for American audiences. And director and martial-arts choreographer Stanley Tong (First Strike, Mr. Magoo), a longtime friend of Hung's, is rarin' to make his first series a success.

"We're trying to do an action show with a lot of fun and stunts," Tong says, "but not always come out with a gun. What's most important is the character himself. He never wants to fight. What he's trying to do is use his bare hands to solve the crime."



Sammo Hung

The man with the crime-solving hands is Hung, an easygoing veteran of 138 Hong Kong action films who directed Jackie Chan in Mr. Nice Guy and played Lee's young opponent in Enter the Dragon.

Taking that success in a new direction, Hung came to grips with his girth in Enter the Fat Dragon, establishing himself as a physical comic.

While Hung made his film debut at the age of 12, his performing career didn't begin with martial-arts flicks on the streets of Hong Kong.

He began his training as a child with a master from the Beijing Opera School who taught many forms of movement.

As a result of his travels, Hung can speak Cantonese, Mandarin, Korean and Thai, which he says he learned by haggling with Bangkok taxi drivers.

The action emigre says he likes the opportunities offered by the film industry in Los Angeles. "In Hong Kong," he explains, "their fantasies aren't very big."

While Hung is a student of American films (Speed, Die Hard and Rocky are favorites), in his spare time, it's a Scottish game he likes to play.

"When I first came here, it was Christmastime, and there was nobody in town. So I played golf every day," he confides.

Hung says he wants his viewers to stop and enjoy life, too. "People work hard all week at their jobs," he says. "I want people watching TV to have a good time."

The case of Clarence Aaron, a college student and athlete serving a life sentence based on no evidence, is chronicled in the Frontline episode "Snitch," airing Tuesday on PBS (check local listings).

Frontline reveals unintended consequences of drug laws

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Is the war on drugs eroding the foundation of freedom in the United States? Before you answer, watch "Snitch," this week's Frontline report, airing Tuesday, Jan. 12, on PBS (check local listings).

The tougher drug laws passed by Congress in 1986 were intended to send a message to drug dealers with stiff minimum sentences ranging from 10 years to life in prison without possibility of parole.

In the 90-minute film, producer Ofra Bikel (Hillary's Class, Innocence Lost) examines the laws' alarming unintended consequences for the operation of the criminal justice system. Now, anyone charged with a drug-related offense faces penalties that no judge or jury can mitigate. The message police and prosecutors often deliver is that the only way out is to turn witness against someone else.

"These laws came about in an incredible conjunction between politics and hysteria," says Eric Sterling, who helped draft the legislation. Today, he calls that work "probably the greatest tragedy of my professional life."

Bikel uncovers astonishing cases, such as the tale of a middle-class teen whose father mortgaged his home and spent $110,000 in an effort to enter the drug market himself, entrap a dealer and turn that person over to authorities in order to reduce his 18-year-old son's 30-year sentence.

Sometimes, as "Snitch" details, the testimony of a single witness is sufficient for prosecution, and often this witness has a long criminal record. At other times, several people involved in a single case are held together in a jail cell where they can converse freely, getting their story straight before facing authorities.

Under conspiracy law, no hard evidence ever need be presented. It's almost unheard of for an accused criminal to pass up the opportunity to turn snitch – regardless of the veracity of the testimony. As this Frontline effort shows, one federal prosecutor calls it "arrogance" not to "take a deal."

Does it still behoove an honest citizen to insist on a fair hearing by a jury of his or her peers? Watch "Snitch" and decide.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: How, if in any way, is Walker, Texas Ranger executive producer Aaron Norris related to the show's star, Chuck Norris? –Hazel Distelmeier, Lena, Ill.

A: They are brothers.

Q: Could you give me some background on Garrett Wang (Star Trek: Voyager)? Is he married? –Dawn A. Schrader, Montezuma, Ga.

A: Wang, who plays Ensign Harry Kim on Voyager, is married to actress Taylor Bernard (Phantasmagoria). The 30-year-old actor was born in Riverside, Calif., and has appeared in the movies Hundred Percent, Ivory Tower and Angry Café. He also made a guest appearance in the Margaret Cho sitcom All-American Girl.

Q: How did Roxie Roker (The Jeffersons) die? –Marion Miller, Chicago.

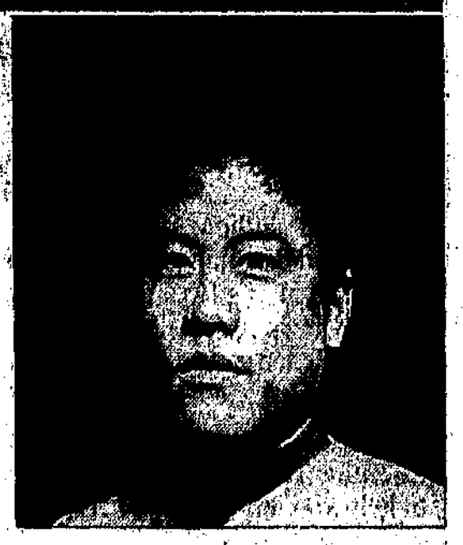
A: Roker, who played Helen Willis on The Jeffersons, died of breast cancer on Dec. 3, 1995. She was 66.

Q: As an early "Boomer," I recall a series called Hey, Jeannie about a young Irish immigrant woman who came to live in the United States. Can you tell me anything about it? –Craig Reid, Charlottesville, Va.

A: English actress Jeannie Carson played naive Scottish immigrant Jeannie MacLennan, who quickly made friends with New York cab driver Al Murray (Allen Jenkins) and his sister, Liz (Jane Dulo). The situation comedy, which focused on Jeannie learning the strange (to her) customs of her new country, ran on CBS during its 1956-57 season; ABC aired reruns during the summer of 1960.

Q: Recently I saw the movie Running on Empty on TV. What other movies has River Phoenix been in, and what is he working on now? How old is he? –Brian, Mankato, Minn.



Garrett Wang

A: One of the most promising actors of his generation, Phoenix died at 23 of heart failure brought on by a drug overdose outside a Hollywood nightclub on Halloween 1993.

If you want to catch highlights from his film career on home video, check out Stand by Me, The Mosquito Coast, A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon, Little Nikita and, if you're old enough, My Own Private Idaho, among several others.

Q: I noticed a notation at the end of a recent Promised Land that the episode was dedicated to the memory of Richard Thomas, who played Joe, Russell's brother. Is "John Boy" dead? Also, they didn't cancel Trinity, did they? –Pat, Rutland, Vt.

A: Thomas is alive and well. The note was in memory of a Promised Land crew member's relative, Richard Greco – not to be confused with actor Richard Grieco.

NBC has put Trinity on hold at this writing due to poor ratings.

MANAGED CARE AND VISION BENEFITS

Over 148 million Americans are currently enrolled in managed care plans. Understanding such terms as HMO, PPO, Point of Service, self co-ordinated, in-plan and out of area can make a significant difference in your financial responsibility for the services you receive. Understanding how your plan works plays an important roll in ensuring that you get the care you need and the coverage to which you are entitled.

To find out exactly what your plan covers, read your benefit manual carefully. Your plan's Member Services Department should be available to help you understand all areas of your coverage. Routine vision benefits are not covered by all plans. Preventative eyecare is usually covered only every 12 or 24 months. Do you need authorization before seeing an eyecare professional? Some plans cover a percentage of your services and materials while others pay a flat allowance on exam, frame, lenses or contact lenses. Co-payments, deductibles and other patient responsibilities should be fully explained in your manual or by your plan's representative. It it also very imponant to make sure that your eyecare professional is participating in the plan you wish to select.

Maximizing the value of your vision benefits will make quality eyecare affordable and accessible. We invite you to stop by FAMILY VISION CENTER, 159 Mescalero Trail. By educating patients we can help balance your managed care benefits and provide greater flexibility in making choices. Scotti leaving Young & Restless

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Fans of The Young and the Restless are in for a big disappointment. Nick Scotti, who plays Tony, is leaving the show to pursue opportunities in prime time and film. Executive Producer William Bell says Scotti is "a fine actor and will be missed by everyone at Y&R." It is likely the part of Tony will be recast.

Dear Candace: OK, so like the last thing I want to see during the holidays is soap opera characters turning into dried-up mummies. What were the writers on Sunset Beach thinking? I like the characters, but the stories are so ludicrous. If this show were to disappear I don't think anyone would care. –Samantha in Florida.

Dear Reader: SB is trying to be different from the competition, and it is succeeding to a certain extent. Unfortunately, if the writers don't create characters and stories viewers can relate to, it won't be around very long.

Dear Candace: What is going on with Luke (Anthony Geary) on General Hospital? One minute he is there, and the next he is gone. Is he leaving the show? –Pam in New York.

Dear Reader: Geary is not leaving. He took a long vacation last summer. Now he's off due to lack of story line.

Dear Candace: My friend is a big comic-book fan. He watches the show Spawn on HBO. He says that the voice of Wanda Blake is done by a soap opera star. Could you tell me if he is right and who the actress is? –Beth via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Dominique Jennings provides Wanda's voice and stars as Virginia Harrison on Sunset Beach.

Dear Candace: I was wondering why we never get to see Port Charles. It airs so early in the mornings. Usually you can find it around 2 a.m. Why is ABC doing this to what could be a hit soap for them? –Kammie via the Internet.

Dear Reader: It isn't ABC that is scheduling it so early; it's your local affiliate. Write to them and let them know how you feel. If enough people complain, they might change it.

January Is National Eye Care Month

REGULAR EYE EXAMINATIONS are important because they enable your optometrist to diagnose serious health problems, like diabetes and hypertension, even if you display no visible or obvious symptoms.

Look in the Eyes First for Signs Of General Health Problems

(MS) — Diabetes and high blood pressure are serious health problems that don't necessarily display obvious symptoms. Even so, an optometrist will be able to "see it in your eyes," says Lesley Walls, O.D., M.D., president of the Southern California College of Optometry, Fullerton.

"The old adage that the eye is the window to the body is absolutely true. A lot of diseases will manifest themselves first in the eyes," Walls says.

Diabetes and high blood pressure are two health problems optometrists can pick up on early during an eye exam. "People who have early signs of diabetes and hypertension already have changes going on in their eyes that their optometrist would notice. The optometrist would know that person would be at risk of blindness, strokes or heart attack if the underlying condition was not treated and corrected by the primary-care doctor," he says.

Immune-system malfunctions also show up in the eyes, Walls says. Rheumatoid arthritis and lupus are just two conditions that have ocular manifestations easily detected by the O.D. Vascular diseases like atherosclerosis that can put a person at risk for heart attack or stroke also can be detected via an eye exam, even when a patient doesn't have visible symptoms.

Walls says that no matter what one's age, the following symptoms are red flags that require an immediate visit to the optometrist:

- fleeting loss of vision
- fluctuating vision
- one or both eyes turning red
- soreness and inflammation of one or both eyes
- worsening vision

How to Get the Best Buy in Eyeglass Frames

(MS) — To get the best buy in eyeglass frames today, consumers need to look at more than frame fashion, says an optometrist.

Fashion is important, but the nation's 147 million eyeglass wearers also need frames that fit properly and are comfortable, durable and in tune with the wearer's lifestyle, says Irwin Shwom, O.D., Everett, Mass.

Shwom recommends starting with the basics, that is, selecting frames you like and then asking the optometric assistant or optician if they will work with your lenses.

"You want a frame that will hold your prescription lenses in the proper position so that you get the maximum benefit from them," he says. For example, today's high-tech lenses — the very light, very thin aspheric lenses or, in multifocals, progressive addition lenses — need a frame that can be adjusted precisely.

Frames also need to be suited to a person's work and lifestyle. Titanium or stainless steel frames, for example, are good choices for people who work with chemicals or in a corrosive environment. Plastic frames are needed by electricians. Nylon frames are the right choice for adults and children who play sports. For hockey and football players, the glasses must fit inside the helmet. Some people may need more than one pair of glasses for work, play and general wear.

Stainless steel frames with spring hinges are a good choice for reading glasses. They will stand up well to the wear and tear of being put on and taken off a lot.

"If you are tough on frames, ask about frame warranties and frame durability. Also consider the higher priced frames," Shwom says. "You'll save money in the long run because, in general, they are made of better materials and will help you get by a major trauma that would destroy a lesser frame."

Additionally, he says not to panic if your frame is damaged. Gently put the pieces in a container that won't scratch them and take them back to the optometric assistant or optician, who can determine if they can be repaired or need to be replaced.

Today's frames are a lot easier to repair than those of the past. In the hands of someone skilled in frame repair, even those that have been sat on, chewed by the dog or pulled off by a child often can be repaired and readjusted to factory specifications, Shwom says. Most frame repairs can be done while you wait, unless parts need to be ordered. Usually, the only charge is for parts.

To avoid problems with loose, lost or broken frame screws, Shwom recommends buying frames with nylon "bushed" screws. They fit snugly into silicone or nylon inserts, similar to the sleeves used for drywall screws. Nylon "bushed" screws come standard on better quality frames and often can be added to other frames.

Inexpensive do-it-yourself eyeglass repair kits are worth having, but, Shwom cautions, if the kit's screws don't easily go into the frame, don't use them. If the screw strips the threads inside the frame or it snaps off inside the frame, "you may have taken a previously valuable frame and turned it into junk," he says. An alternative, he suggests, is to ask for a couple of spare screws when you get your new glasses.

It's also a good idea to ask if six-month eyeglass tuneups are available and what the cost is, if any. With a tuneup, frames are disassembled, electronically cleaned and refitted with pads. The lenses then are remounted and the glasses readjusted on the wearer.

EYEGLASS WEARERS NEED frames that fit properly and are comfortable, durable and in tune with the wearer's lifestyle. CU997182

Special-Effects Contacts Need Special Care

(MS) — The latest contact lenses dramatically can change one's appearance, however, people who choose to wear them need to remember that these special-effects lenses need special care, according to the American Optometric Association (AOA).

Long a movie staple, special-effects or costume contact lenses now are coming into their own as an appearance-altering accessory for the general public with designs like flames and spirals. However, they're not toys, says Barry Weiner, O.D., chair of the AOA's Contact Lens Section. "These new lenses may look as fun and different as some of the fashions children enjoy today, but they're still medical devices. They aren't for everyone — certainly not for children — and they definitely shouldn't be swapped as if they were baseball caps, not even for a special occasion like a school dance."

Contact lenses require a prescription that's individually determined after a thorough eye examination, even if the wearer doesn't need vision correction. Regular professional optometric care also is important because, treated improperly, lenses can cause problems both with vision and eye health. As with all types of contact lenses, listen and watch carefully as the optometrist or a contact-lens technician demonstrates care instructions for costume lenses. Follow them to the letter, and let your doctor know if you have difficulty with your lenses. CU997184

How to Judge Eye-Exam Quality

(MS) — It can be difficult to judge the quality of health care, but it is possible for consumers to determine if they are getting a quality eye exam.

The exam's thoroughness is the key, says the American Optometric Association. A thorough eye exam, the association says, includes:

- a review of your family and personal health history;
- an examination of your eyes' exterior and interior for signs of eye disease or general health problems, like diabetes or hardening of the arteries, that may show up in the eyes and, for adults, eye-pressure and field-of-vision tests to diagnose glaucoma;
- tests of your ability to see sharply and clearly at near and far distances;
- tests to diagnose nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism, depth-perception problems and, in people older than 40, presbyopia (an age-related condition affecting reading vision);
- a check of eye coordination and eye-muscle function to be certain the eyes are working together as a team;
- a test of the ability to change focus easily from near to far and vice versa;
- a discussion of the exam's findings and any treatment the optometrist prescribes, as well as personal advice about matters like good vision on the job, eye safety and maintaining eye health.

Additional tests for young children are:

- a check for any indications of crossed-eyes or that the child is not using one eye;
- tests to check eye-hand-foot coordination;
- if necessary, a series of tests to determine how well the child's vision skills are developing.

When making an appointment, consumers should ask about the eye-care services provided in the examination fee quoted, the association says. During the exam, people can ask the optometrist what each test covers as it is done. CU997185

WHEN SHOULD YOU GET YOUR EYES EXAMINED?

(MS) — The American Optometric Association recommends that people with no previous history of eye-health or vision problems should be evaluated:

- at 6 months of age
- again at age 3
- then before first grade
- from ages 6 to 18, every two years
- from ages 19 to 40, every two to three years
- from ages 41 to 60, every two years
- from ages 61 and older, annually

Symptoms that call for an immediate visit to the optometrist include double vision, sudden blurred or distorted vision, suddenly seeing floaters or flashes, eye pain, or redness.
