Mayor proposes rescinding impact fees

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Ruidoso may dump its recently imposed fees on new developments in favor of standby fees on vacant lots, Mayor Robert Donaldson announced Tuesday night.

"I have had calls, councilors have had calls, I've talked to people. And the impression people have is that this is double taxation," Donaldson said following the meeting Tuesday.

The impact fees, which were approved by the Ruidoso Village Council last summer, became effective Jan. 1. The fees were created to generate funding for future infrastructure needs. The standard impact fee for a home is $4,400, which can either be paid in a lump sum or through monthly payments added to water bills.

Residents complaints were triggered by a recent proposal by Donaldson to impose an additional standby fee of $66.96 per year on vacant lots inside village limits to offset the cost of the water lines and village services, such as fire protection, available to lots.

"People feel like this is a double taxation on them because when they build they have an impact fee," Donaldson said at the beginning of Tuesday council session.

And rather than keep the impact fee and not pursue the standby fee, Donaldson is proposing that the council consider rescinding the impact fee instead.

"I think the standby fee is really the way to go," Donaldson said. "And from the accounting stand point it (the impact fee) is a nightmare. It's just too complicated."

While the council had been scheduled to hold a public hearing and possible vote on standby fees at their March 30 meeting, they will probably postpone the hearing until the standby fees can be considered at the same as impact fees are removed, Donaldson said. He said a date for both votes would probably be set by the council at the March 30 meeting.

Responding to a question from Councilor Bob Sterchi, Donaldson and Village Manager Alan Briley said all the impact fees that have been paid into the village so far this year would be refunded if the impact fee is rescinded.

Planning Department Director Cleatus Richards said the number of building permit applications for construction inside the village limits had dropped some since Jan. 1, but Richards also pointed out that a great number of applications had been filed in December by developers to avoid the impact fees.

Another reason to rescind the impact fees is because they may prohibit affordable housing projects, Donaldson said, referring to a recent project that moved to Ruidoso Downs because of Ruidoso's impact fees.

He added that the impact fee would not generate as much revenue as the standby fees over the next 10 years. In addition, the impact fees are based on the assumption that development will occur, he said.

"We shouldn't be afraid to try things. But if you see very quickly that they are not doing what you anticipated or are not understood the way they should be, then it's time to say, 'I'm wrong,' and go in another direction," Donaldson told the council.

Campos discusses hotel funds

• This area's state senator said Ruidoso lodge owners have asked him to withdraw a $500,000 request to help the village of Ruidoso contract for a luxury hotel at the convention center.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Sen. Pete Campos, D-Las Vegas, in the past week has received four calls from his Ruidoso constituents, he said.

All the telephone calls focused on the same issue — a $500,000 request Campos has put before the Senate for the village of Ruidoso. The state money, which is expected to be whittled down some from $500,000, would be spent on infrastructure and foundation work at a site next to the Ruidoso Convention Center to prepare for the development of a 100-room luxury hotel.

"Essentially, what they indicated was that they were representing 78 lodgers (of Ruidoso)," Campos said Tuesday morning at his office in Santa Fe. "But, in essence, what they said is that they would like the withdrawal of that effort."

Last week, the Ruidoso News surveyed nine area lodge owners or managers and five of those said they were opposed to the request for state money primarily because it represented an unfair advantage for a competitor.

Marchand "Mac" McDougal, owner of Sierra Blanca Cabins, said he has a copy of the bill requesting the money.

"It's very short but it is loaded," he said. "And I object to the fact that we are using tax dollars to promote a private enterprise."

Campos said Tuesday that he has not made any attempts to withdraw the request.

"But I don't know that they have all the information," he said of the lodge owners with objections. "Because as I worked with the mayor, what he is looking for there is money to prep the infrastructure. It's not money that is going to go directly for the building of the hotel. The money would go to the infrastructure to make sure the hotel is built there."

Since last summer, Ruidoso

Film crew gets a taste of chuckwagon fare

British invade historic Lincoln

LINCOLN – First they sipped tea at the Ellis Store Bed and Breakfast, then a British film production crew headed out to a chuck wagon in Lincoln to sample chicken fried steaks, pinto beans and potatoes.

While fighting a hair-straightening wind blowing off the mountains Monday, Shane Bowen and his cooking crew from the Bowen Ranch in El Paso managed to dig a deep enough fire pit to prepare the food that will be the focus of one of 13 television episodes of "Ross on the Range," a cooking series to air in Great Britain.

"It's been a real cultural experience for us."

Emma Booth,
assistant producer

The five-member crew filmed in six different states with stops in Phoenix, Tucson, Tombstone, Sedona, the Grand Canyon, Monument Valley, Canyon de Chelly and four or five other Southwestern locations. When they left Lincoln Tuesday morning, they were headed to Las Vegas, Nev., escorted by John and Grieg Tathan of Overland Safari Adventure Tours based in Albuquerque.

The series was commissioned by a British network. The crew works for Transmédia Production, an independent production company, said Emma Booth, assistant producer.

The focus of the shows is to visit well-known locations, but to discover a different twist, she said.

A cooking segment featuring chef Ross Burden immersed in barbecue and beef was filmed on a ranch at the beginning of the tour. With that out of the way, Burden spent his time telling future viewers about the unique cultures and geological features of the sites. At Monument Valley, the crew, guided by a Navajo, visited several places not usually open to the public. At a rodeo in Tucson, Burden talked to riders and the people who put together the event.

"It's been a real cultural experience for us," said Booth, who comes from a family with television background, but tried photography first. "We haven't scripted him (Burden). He has some history on each place, but it's his thoughts and interaction."

The crew, which consists of Booth, Burden, director Sebastian Rich, cameraman Charlie Grainger and sound man Rob Campbell, filmed a few interviews with chefs in Santa Fe and experienced the Fiery Food Festival.

"We have enjoyed how everyone was willing to share," Booth said. "We weren't treated just as guests. People really were interested in giving us a feel (of a place) for the program."

A New Zealander and student of zoology, Burden emigrated to Britain in 1990, taught himself how to cook, did a project with actress Joan Collins, and starred in a cooking series called "Ready, Set, Cook" that showed in the United States, and wrote two cook books on the history of British food.

The series was his first experience in the Southwest.

"The beef here is fantastic," Burden said. He's also impressed by the chiles of the Southwest, and he loves chalupas, a flat tortilla with beans, lettuce, tomatoes and other

Fire station set for Upper Canyon area

Canyon considered vulnerable to forest fire in dry season

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Construction of a $134,000 fire station in the Upper Canyon is scheduled to start the end of April and be finished by the end of July or beginning of August.

Ruidoso Fire Chief Virgil Reynolds said the new fire station has been a goal of the fire department's for 10 to 15 years.

Because of its formation, the Upper Canyon area has always been considered particularly vulnerable during a forest fire. With forecasters predicting a very dry, warm spring following the current dry winter, Ruidoso is expected to go into fire restrictions because of increased fire dangers.

The new fire house won't be completed by this spring, when conditions are expected to be as bad as during the 1996 drought.

"But if they can get it done by the end of July, it can still be there for the summer," Reynolds said.

The fire station will be located about a third of the way up the canyon at 433 Main Road. The building will be 1,536 square feet with office space and a garage for two fire engines, according to plans.

Architect Hal E. Barnett said the exterior of the station will be a combination of cultured stone and wood siding and will blend with the architecture of the homes and lodging establishments in the Upper Canyon.

Village Manager Alan Briley said funding for the station as well as the $34,000 lot on which it will be built came from the state legislature last year. A small amount of money from the village fire department's budget will be used to equip the station, Briley and Reynolds said.

The Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Committee recently approved a commercial site development plan for the fire station. The village is expected to go out for bids on the project by the first of April.

Ross Dingman, a member of the commission, asked Barnett if landscaping around the building could be done with the more fire-resistant varieties of plants, pointing out that previously mentioned piñon trees and other evergreens were not considered fire resistant.

Campos says gaming bill amendment is no safe bet

State senator says he anticipates the legislature will go into a special session to dispense funding left by governor

by Toni K. Laxson
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Sen. Pete Campos, D-Las Vegas, on Tuesday said the New Mexico Legislature will not be able to produce an amendment to the current gaming bill before the end of the session. Campos represents Lincoln County in the New Mexico Senate.

"In my own opinion, it looks bleak," Campos said from his office in Santa Fe, where the Legislature has only 10 days left of the 1999 session.

"But don't rule anything out ... The chief executives in the Senate and the House, do work through the issues even though we continue to hear that there is no dialogue."

Both the Senate and House have bills that would reduce the percentage of slot machine revenues paid to the state. Currently, the gaming bill passed in 1997 requires gaming tribes to pay 16 percent of slot machine revenues and racetracks with casinos to pay 25 percent.

Several tribes in the state, including the Mescalero Apache, have refused to make the quarterly payments, saying the percentage is too high to meet federal guidelines

Both bills propose reducing the revenue share for tribal casinos to about 10 percent. The House bill also drops the percent required of racetrack casinos and of slot machines operated by fraternal and charitable organizations.

"Essentially, that item is still being discussed," Campos said. "I don't know if it would be part of the final negotiations by the House and Senate leadership. It could be, just knowing how things happen. But it is still alive."

Campos said he anticipated the Legislature going into a special session. At that time, lawmakers will probably dispose of the money left available by Gov. Gary Johnson's line-item vetoes of appropriations, he said.

Some of the bills vetoed by Johnson so far include part of an appropriation feed bill, the hate crime sentencing bill and proposed hearings for park fee increases. Those bills as well as others that died in committees, such as a House proposal for school vouchers, should not be dismissed as dead issues until the session and possible special session are over, Campos said.

"Any of these issues could be revived," he said.

Johnson last week vetoed a bill for stiffer penalties for hate crime offenders, a proposal that Campos supported.

"There is significant information showing there are a large amount of these crimes being committed (in the nation) that are specifically due to race or religion, ethnic background and other persuasions," Campos said.

A bill to create stiffer penalties for hate crime offenders is sure to reappear next year, and the year after that if it is again vetoed, Campos said.

Another issue before the Senate is a measure to provide relief for the oil industry in the southern part of New Mexico.

"What we are trying to do is give them the opportunity to hold onto jobs," Campos said. "The other side of it is, that when those breaks come, we also may see some increases in prices at the pump."

HOTEL: Donaldson said opposition stems from the title of the bill

Mayor Robert Donaldson and village attorneys have been working out a possible lease agreement for the hotel site with Leisure Hotels LLC, a hotel development company in the Midwest. The amenity-filled hotel, a Hawthorn Suites, represents the third and last component of the convention center area, which was approved 10 years ago by voters, Donaldson said.

Details of the lease proposal have not been made public, yet. Donaldson said the lease agreement will be reviewed at more than one public hearing before the Ruidoso Village Council votes on it. He said this week the lease may be presented in a special session this month because of the number of agenda items already on the council's March 30 agenda.

Campos said he made the request for state money following interviews with Ruidoso village leaders about community needs.

"And then from (those conversations), this is one of those private/public sector relationships that, at least to my eyes, I see is going to be an economic enhancement," Campos said.

"But in the hotel/motel business, I can also see the other side of it, where people are indicating here's some competition. But I don't know that it's necessarily the full intent to create direct competition as it is to accommodate and encourage more people to visit the community."

He said opposition to the request might be based in part on the title of the bill or its description in legislative reviews that state the money is to "plan, design, construct and equip the convention center hotel."

"When they draft different bills ... they need a title. So, in terms of a title as they dealt with this one it was for the Ruidoso Convention Center and hotel," Campos said.

"I will continue deliberations with the mayor and see how we can work through this, but we do want what's best for the community," he said. "And I do believe that if we continue to enhance that convention center, of course, that that is what is going to be best. It is my understanding that if that isn't the location for the hotel, it's going to be built somewhere else."

Donaldson this week said if the hotel isn't built at the convention center site, then it will probably be placed in Ruidoso Downs near the racetrack.

ingredients.

However, he admitted that Sunday the crew was so "beefed out," they all ordered chicken for dinner.

When they return to Britain, editing of the series will take two months, Booth said. But she expects the series to be aired for the summer.

The trip was arranged because of a meeting in London at the World Travel Market, said Mark Doth of Grindstone Graphics.

"We had been attending the show representing the village (of Ruidoso), but contracted it out to Nancy Mitchell about three years ago," Doth said, "Overland Safari was in the New Mexico booth and Grieg, who was arranging a trip for this independent film crew, asked Nancy for ideas in the southern part of the state."

When Mitchell returned, Mark and Laura Doth took the lead and kept after Overland and Transmedia.

"Originally, we were to be one little segment of a larger show, but they told us they feel confident now they will be doing a full show," Doth said. After the meal Monday, the crew was treated to a reenactment of a murder of two lawmen by Billy the Kid in his escape from the old Lincoln courthouse. Then they were scheduled to film a piece on James Hobbs and some of the other performers of the Flying J Ranch, just outside of Ruidoso on State Road 48.

Williams doubtful about passage of revisions to gaming law

• Unlike the revised casino bill that has made it out of the New Mexico Senate, the House version also would reduce revenue payments for racetracks and fraternals.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

With about two weeks of the 1999 state legislative session left, a House bill that revises the state's gaming compacts will have a hard race to make it to the governor's desk.

"If we don't get on it before this week is over and get it out of these committees, I don't see it happening," Rep. Dub Williams, R-Glencoe, this area's representative, said from his office in Santa Fe.

Early last week, the Senate passed a similar gaming revision bill that lowers the current revenue share requirements for casinos, but only those operated by tribes.

The House bill now going through committees would drop the revenue share percentages for reservation casinos as well as those for racetracks, fraternal organizations and charitable organizations, Williams said. Though the bill has several authors, it is sponsored primarily by Joe Nester Chavez, D-Bernalillo County, Williams said.

The House bill would drop the required revenue share from slot machines to about 8-10 percent for tribes and to 15 percent for racetracks, Williams said. Tribal casinos now are required to pay a 16-percent revenue share; racetrack casinos, of which only one in the state (at Sunland Park) is open, would pay 25 percent.

Tribal representatives say the current percentage is too high to meet federal guidelines for tribal gaming compacts. Neither the Mescalero nor the Jicarilla Apache have made the quarterly revenue share payments since the fall of 1997.

Other tribes have since stopped making the payments, some have reduced the percentage of their payments and a few have continued to submit the full 16-percent, Williams said.

The proposed House bill is an amalgamation of previous proposals to reduce the revenue share, Williams said. In it, the tribes who haven't been making the 16-percent payments would have to submit what they owe, but could do so under a two-year payment plan.

Under the bill introduced by Sen. Manny Aragon, D-Bernalillo, president pro-tem, tribal casinos would be required to pay an annual average of 8-10 percent of slot machine revenues. Again, the tribes who have not submitted the revenue share would have to be current on their payments to participate.

Williams said last week he thought the House bill was out of the Business and Industry Committee and on its way to the Appropriations Committee and the Taxation and Revenue Committee.

Williams said his personal prediction is that neither of the bills will make it into passage before the end of this year's session.

In other legislative matters, Williams said he was successful in getting House approval of a measure to require classes about World War II for middle school children. As a part of the curriculum, veterans of the war would come to the classes to discuss their experiences, Williams said. The measure is now before the Senate for approval.

Williams was scheduled last week to talk before House committees on his proposal for a $15,000 feasibility study on expanding and improving the Merchant Marine and Military Cemetery at Fort Stanton. Once the state approves money for the project, then federal assistance is likely to become available as well, Williams says.

Of an attempt to create school vouchers, Williams said the bill died in the House Education Committee. The issue of whether the state should pay for children who attend private schools is one that just needs more time to percolate, said Williams, a proponent of the voucher system.

"But I also thought that it might be an idea that may be ahead of its time," he said, adding that vouchers would probably have little effect on Ruidoso schools because of the lack of private schools in the area.

Williams said he voted for the hate crimes bill that Gov. Gary Johnson is expected to veto. The bill would enact tougher sentencing for crimes committed on the basis of a person's race or sexual preferences. Like Johnson, Williams said the one aspect of the bill that troubled him was the difficulty in determining a "hate" crime from any other crime.

He backed the passage of a state Megan's Law, by which communities are notified when sex crime offenders move to the area. New Mexico is currently the only state without some version of the law.

Y2K information coming up

• Two forums addressing the potential computer problems arising when the clock clicks over to the year 2000 will be conducted in the Ruidoso area before the end of March.

Convention Center

People interested in what Y2K is and why they should care about it may attend a free forum on the subject at 6:30 p.m. today in the Ruidoso Convention Center.

A local approach to the Year 2000 problem and its possible manifestations here will be explored during the forum, which is jointly sponsored by the Village of Ruidoso and Lincoln County.

Speakers at the forum will include officials with public utilities and also bank executives, said Thomas Chavez, emergency coordinator for Ruidoso.

Tom Stewart, Lincoln County manager, will host the forum.

Downs Senior Center

The village of Ruidoso Down is sponsoring a Y2K forum at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 25, in the Ruidoso Downs Senior Citizens Center. The center is located in the All American Park off of U.S. Highway 70.

The forum is free and open to anyone interested, village officials say.

The forum will focus on the so-called Y2K bug, when computers and software systems are not upgraded to adequately to process the year 2000. Speakers on the issue are to discuss the potential problems Y2K could raise for Downs' residents.

"And we need to invite the public because the public is who we really need to reach," Mayor Joe Hayhurst said.

"We need to tell people what may happen and what they need to do to be prepared."

Hayhurst said one of the worst scenarios of the Y2K bug, in which computer systems may possibly malfunction on Jan. 1, 2000, is the loss of electricity.

Information series

The Ruidoso News next week will begin publication of a series of articles concerning steps being taken by most of the utilities, companies, banks and governmental agencies that operate in the area to eliminate or reduce the impact of the Y2K phenomenon.

OUR OPINION

The third gem in the triple crown

Whether or not you agree with the way the Village of Ruidoso is throwing its weight around to bring a "high-end" hotel to the community, you – indeed, all of us – should pay close attention at the public hearing when the village reveals the proposed lease with Leisure Hotels, LLC.

Details of the lease still are under wraps concerning whether the hotel development would pay property taxes or the recently instituted impact fees.

Mayor Robert Donaldson, an unabashed proponent of the Convention Center hotel, said that one need look no further than the arrangement the village has with The Links and the collateral benefits Ruidoso gains because it has such a first-class golf course.

According to the lease agreement with the village, Jim Colbert Golf Inc., "will pay to the Village percentage rent equal to 20 percent of receipts from green fees, golfmobile and golf cart rentals, and the driving range and food and beverage sales receipts, after such time as the Gross Revenues for the Premises exceed $1.5 million per lease year."

Now, if you evenly split up the proceeds the village has gotten from this lease agreement, the "percentage rent," among five people (20 percent each) you would have five equal parts of nothing. Zip. Zero. So, you own 160 acres, which was valued at more than $2.5 million in 1989, and you get no lease income even after 10 years.

Donaldson speaks of the hotel arrangement being a "hell of a deal" for the village, and the final gem of Ruidoso's "triple crown" (the Convention Center, golf course and now the proposed hotel). But it seems like someone else besides the village got a "hell of a deal" with the last lease arrangement that was worked out.

At the time that the lease was signed back in 1989, there was a 10-year projected income statement done on The Links that predicted the golf course would generating more than $1.5 million in total revenues by 1997.

Apparently, the hundreds and hundreds of golfers that play aren't spending that much money on the green or at the club house, even if they do come to Ruidoso simply to play The Links, one of five courses in the immediate area.

There are some that will say that by the time a public hearing is held and the hotel lease is revealed there will have been so many behind-closed-door meetings with the village council that the council will have made up its mind to approve the lease. But it's also hard to imagine that the council would bring a lease out of the proverbial closet that its members wouldn't support.

That not-yet-set public hearing, it seems to us, is critical—for the public, at least.

YOUR OPINION

Tree ordinance is wrong

To the editor:

The editorial which appeared...on March 3 attempting to defend Ruidoso's tree protection ordinance is unjustified and factually incorrect. In 1996, New Mexico Forestry made recommendations toward the creation of a comprehensive tree ordinance but most of the recommendations were ignored. The existing ordinance (96-10) was not recommended by New Mexico Forestry. This ordinance is one of the main reasons we face the danger of a catastrophic forest fire today.

The original ordinance (10-5-3) required an application to cut any tree 5-inches or greater in diameter, even if dead, diseased or damaged, and imposed a $5 per tree fee. The amended ordinance (96-D-7) is equally intrusive and confusing because a homeowner must apply a complex formula to determine the "basal area" before cutting any tree. The individual must also determine if this property meets other criteria. The current ordinance allows a property owner to create a ten-foot safe zone around houses. The minimum standard recommendation for a defensible zone around a zone is 30 feet and up to 75 feet suggested for buildings on steep slopes. However, common sense would dictate that a defensible space could not be extended beyond an individual's property line. No professional forester ... would ever suggest a ten-foot fire defensible space.

In the event of a forest fire that destroys several homes, this ordinance could be found to be in non-compliance with professional recommendations and not in the best interest of the...public, with resulting liability. The concept of having to go to a hearing before the village planning board to be able to do what's right is simply wrong.

In the opinion of many people, Ruidoso's Forest Protection Code points in the wrong direction and should be scrapped and replaced with ordinances designed to reduce wildland fuel loading in the community. Removal of overcrowded and unhealthy trees must be addressed. According to forest professionals "trees are killing our forest" and threatening our lives and livelihood.

Don't block private wells

To the editor:

I recently read an article concerning water restrictions in the Ruidoso News. I was alarmed to learn that the city intends to impose watering restrictions on private wells drilled since 1996.

I drilled a well on my property in 1998 for the sole purpose of being able to water when and if I need to water. I spent a large sum of my own money for the watering system and then proceeded to spend an equal amount to landscape my property. I was issued a well permit by the state of New Mexico. There were no restrictions on the permit nor any restrictions on my lot concerning the city's arbitrary authority to limit the use of my well and my water rights.

I can prove that my use of well water has no impact on the city's supply of water. There is no harm to the citizens' health, welfare or safety, and therefore the ordinance has no validity and should be overturned.

In fact, the...council should waive the $4,000 building (impact) fee for those that want to build in Ruidoso if the builder drills a domestic well and waives his right to city water.

The ... countilors cannot defend their decision to limit the use of water from private wells. They should be spending their time and energies in the area of developing additional water capacity for Ruidoso. There should be a moratorium on new building permits, including the new hotel, until the ... council can show where the additional water will come from. I invite your readers to comment.

Man-made fire threats

To the editor:

With the threat of an extremely dangerous fire season ahead of us, it is time to face the obvious jeopardy to the community. We have read of the existing problems in our forest; i.e., the over-crowded and diseased trees, excessive underbrush and uncontrolled growth. Now it is time to identify man-made threats.

Having lived in the Upper Canyon for many years, it is obvious that the very nature of the narrow canyon acts as a flume for wind, and this area is perhaps the most volatile region in all of the village. One need only walk on either side of Main Road to realize the hundreds of cigarette butts that are thrown from cars, and the potential hazard they present. Pine needles line both sides of Main Road, and it only takes one live cigarette to set our whole canyon afire!

Smokers must make a solemn pledge never, never to throw a cigarette out of a car window, whether or not they think it is extinguished. This very small inconvenience can save our beloved forest for our children and grandchildren.

Saving our children

To the editor:

I am an agnostic, unaffiliated voter who unfortunately served at the White House during both a Democratic and Republican administration. ...I am pro-government and anti-party. I have often seen people place their political parties above the good of our nation and even above the welfare of their own children.

During my official travels, I have observed the heartbreaking atrocities that adults – to include parents – inflict on the world's young dependents. I believe that the phrase "for the children's sake" should be more than a mere slogan!

Our presidents are highly influential and our nation's youth are extremely impressionable. During the past year, why have so many children said that the President lacks character; however, he should be left alone because he is doing a good job? What happened to "character counts"?

Many adults ask "what's wrong with today's children?" The question should be "what's wrong with today's adults?"

Since New Mexico is nationally ranked as the worst state in which to raise children, I must ask the most important question — who is going to save our state's children? Not the government! Fortunately, I have no offspring.

A refresher course on the Inspection of Public Records Act

BLEEDING BLACK INK

BY TERRANCE VESTAL
EDITOR, RUIDOSO NEWS

"Why do you you want this information?" Lincoln County Sheriff Tom Sullivan asked Lincoln County Commissioner Wilton Howell in the latest clash between the two elected officials.

But, according to the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act, this question was out of line.

According to state statue 14-2-8 of the Inspection of Public Records Act, "No person requesting records shall be required to state the reason for inspecting the records."

One might think that one of the top law enforcement officers in the county should know about the Inspection of Public Records Act.

But most elected officials get caught up in just getting elected and find little time to bone up on laws, such as the Inspection of Public Records Act and the Open Meetings Act.

Oftentimes, they feel it the job of the county or municipal attorney to keep them apprised on what laws they might be skirting. And if that attorney isn't around, well ...

Under the law, a public record means "all documents, papers, letters, books, maps, tapes, photographs, recordings and other materials, regardless of physical form or characteristics that are used, created, received, maintained or held by or on behalf of any public body and relate to public business, whether or not the records are required by law to be created or maintained."

That is pretty well all encompassing and the law provides for just a few exceptions.

These include medical records, letters of reference concerning employment, licensing or permits, and matters of opinion, which include letters or memorandums that are matters of opinion in personnel files or students' cumulative files.

Also included as exceptions are law enforcement records that "reveal confidential sources, methods, information or individuals accused but not charged with a crime. Law enforcement records include evidence in any form received or compiled in connection with any criminal investigation or prosecution by any law enforcement or prosecuting agency, including inactive matters or closed investigation to the extent that they contain information listed above." However, police blotters, court records of public judicial proceedings, and records of traffic offenses and accidents are required to be available for public inspection.

And while there are exceptions to the law, according to the New Mexico Attorney General's Office, the Act "should not be interpreted as requiring that those matters be kept confidential."

"In other words," the Attorney General's Office states, "an agency may release a record covered by an exception if the agency determines that release would be appropriate and not in violation of any other law ..."

A public body that withholds public records can be fined $100 a day from the date of noncompliance.

Keep in mind that this law is for the people, not just the media. Anyone has the right to examine public records and the government is obligated to provide those documents.

Next week: "Yes Virginia, there is an Open Meetings Act."

Expect the fires come Spring

• Arbor Day has a history in New Mexico even older than statehood, but this year the trees are endangering the forests as La Niña keeps the moisture at a distance and fire threats mount.

by Jennifer A. Salisbury
Cabinet Secretary

This year, New Mexico will celebrate Arbor Day on March 12. Arbor Day has been celebrated in New Mexico longer than we have been a state. The New Mexico Territorial Legislature passed the New Mexico Arbor Day act in 1891, and we have been holding annual Arbor Day events ever since. The Arbor Day Act of 1891 directs elementary schools to celebrate the importance of trees in our community, the value of trees in our lives, and an understanding of trees with the goal of sustaining our community forests...

Arbor Day provides us with an important opportunity not only to educate our children...but also to raise our own awareness about the health of our wildland forests, what they mean to us in our everyday lives, and what we can do to protect them.

...In 1891, our forests looked much different than they do today. Then, frequent low-intensity fires were a natural part of the ecosystem, acting to remove dense underbrush, return nutrients to the soil, regenerate growth, and provide adequate space for the surviving trees to grow larger.

The results of these periodic fires were forests with an average of 30 trees per acre...In today's forest, the average stand density is more commonly 1,000 trees per acre, more than 30 times that of 100 years ago... Fire in this environment quickly becomes catastrophic, feeding on 40 tons per acre of dense fuel and reaching temperatures as high as 2,000 degrees F. Nothing survives this kind of fire, not trees, not structures, and not even the soil.

The Southwest is now anticipating a devastating fire season...the La Niña phenomenon is leaving us high and dry.... Unfortunately, the current warm and dry trend is predicted to stay with us at least until June.

These conditions have prompted Gov. Gary Johnson to issue a warning to all communities in the state about the threat...

What can be done? Our local, state and federal agencies are preparing for the worst...Individuals living in or near woodland or forest settings, called the "wildland urban interface," must begin to take defensive measures now.

Communities like Ruidoso, Angel Fire, Cloudcroft, the Albuquerque East Mountains, Los Alamos, the Jemez area and others are at extreme risk.

Individuals and communities...can take responsibility for their own protection by creating defensible space around structures and sensitive areas, by taking such steps as removing excessive vegetation and other combustible material and ensuring access for fire vehicles... Those communities or subdivisions with covenants restricting the removal of trees should make exceptions for the creation of defensible space.

Our wildland forests are much more powerful than we are. Respecting that power can help us save our forests, not to mention our lives...

The Forest through the Trees

• This article, second in a series provided by the Forest Health Coalition of Lincoln County, defines terms to be used in future articles as the fire season approaches.

Wildland/Urban Interface: A community that has developed adjacent to natural forests that are at risk from large, uncontrollable wildfires. Examples: Sudderth through Midtown Ruidoso and east to U. S. 70, through Ruidoso Downs, Alto along French Drive.

Wildland/Urban Intermix: Areas where developments are situated within native vegetation and especially at risk. Examples: the canyons in Ruidoso, the fringes of the Alto Subdivision (especially Deer Park Woods), Sun Valley Subdivision, Fawn Ridge, and other heavily treed areas.

Wildland Fuels: Natural or introduced fuels that are readily available for combustion. These include live and dead vegetation and debris such as trees, tree limbs, shrubs, brush, slash, litter, duff, cured grasses and structures.

Slash: The smaller limbs or branches trimmed off a downed tree.

Fuel Loading: The amount of natural vegetation (dead or alive) that is available to burn. Dead trees heighten the fuel loading for a given area.

Ground Fire: A lower intensity fire consuming forest floor litter, shrubs, grasses; may scorch the bark of larger trees, but does not cause them to burn or kill them.

Crown Fire: A fire that spreads into the canopies of larger trees. Running crown fires, often pushed by strong winds, are difficult or impossible to stop and can destroy everything in their path.

Ladder Fuels: Vegetation and debris (fuels) that are found near ground level, (like brush, slash, forest litter, tall grass, lower limbs of trees) that can spread ground fires into the canopy of the larger trees, causing a crown fire.

Hazard Tree: Any tree that is in striking distance of a target; i. e., a structure, power line, roadway.

Defensible Space: Any area around the perimeter of a structure or development in wildland areas that is a key point in defense/attack against encroaching wildfires or escaping structure fires.

Grindstone Lake, drought and the Rio Ruidoso

To the editor:

In the face of our on-going drought, recent reports that Grindstone Dam is still leaking at the rate of more than 400 gallons per minute could not have come at a more inopportune time. This figure, when added to the 350-gallon-per-minute consumption of the Grindstone Treatment Plant, means that it takes 750 gallons per minute just to maintain Grindstone Lake levels.

These numbers have become especially important over the past several weeks because, according to U.S. Geologic Survey measurements taken last week at the newly installed gauging station in Upper Canyon, Grindstone's only source of water, the Rio Ruidoso, is discharging water at the rate of only 1,200 gallons a minute.

Thus, under current conditions nearly the entire river would have to be diverted just to maintain lake levels at Grindstone, and probabilities are high that both are going to get worse before they get better. Under these conditions, a decision to divert what is left of the river into Grindstone Lake would not only threaten to kill the (river) but it would also fall short of maintaining the water level in Grindstone Lake. Not so incidentally, a low flow of water in the river would also preclude the New Mexico Department of Game & Fish from stocking the river.

> "...they have left the fate of the river up to God and turned instead to solving the problems at Grindstone Dam."
> Dick Wisner, River Association

Faced with this last week, village officials wisely decided to deal with one problem rather than two. By shutting off the diversion gate from the river to Grindstone they have left the fate of the river up to God and turned instead to solving the problems at Grindstone Dam.

Construction has already begun, for example, on a pump-back system at the dam to recapture leakage, but it will not be operative until June. Teams of divers have already been dispatched to seal what leaks they can. In the meantime, village officials can alleviate the draw-down of Grindstone Lake by cutting down production at the treatment plant by drawing water instead from downstream wells.

In spite of these measures, Grindstone Lake levels are still sure to fall over the coming months until the leakage is recaptured and the summer rains come.

It is important for all to know that the village has in no way made a decision here to save the river at the expense of the local water supply; these two goals are simply not mutually exclusive and never were. Please be advised that water drawn from the river in the Upper Canyon or from the wells downstream come from the same geologic source.

More importantly, this decision not to cannibalize the river in a losing fight to make up for leakage through the dam at grindstone is a huge step in the right direction.

The Warriors play No. 1 St. Pius in the first round of Class AAA Boys State Basketball Tournament

RHS ends 18-year state tourney drought

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

While their classmates have plans to escape to warmer environs next week, the Ruidoso Warriors have no qualms about spending spring break in Albuquerque at the Class AAA Boys State Basketball Tournament.

"It's a great feeling, just great," Ruidoso senior Corey Saenz said after the Warriors secured their first bid to the state tournament in 18 years.

A 63-56 win over Hot Springs in Friday's District 3AAA semifinal game put the Warriors in the "big dance" where they will play No. 1 St. Pius in a first-round game Wednesday, March 17, at Cibola High School.

St. Pius finished the regular season as District 5AAA's No. 1-seed, but the Sartans lost to Albuquerque Academy in the 5AAA tournament final, 56-48. Hence, the 18-5 Sartans play Ruidoso, 14-12, at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in a match-up of district runners-up. The Warriors lost to Silver, 67-63, in the District 3AAA title game.

All four New Mexico Activities Association boys state basketball tournaments will be played March 17-20 at various sites in Albuquerque with the semifinals and finals slated at UNM Arena (The Pit). The boys state tournaments were scheduled originally to begin today and conclude Saturday, but in late January, University of New Mexico facilities officials met with NMAA officials to discuss possible conflicts with the UNM men's and women's basketball teams. Both sides agreed to move the boys prep tournaments back a week to March 17-20.

Indeed, those potential conflicts became a reality Sunday when the UNM women's team failed to make the NCAA Women's Tournament and, instead, will host a first-round, National Invitational Tournament game Friday in The Pit.

"I don't like it. I don't like it at all," Ruidoso interim coach Billy Page said of the delayed tournament. Page said he wished that he and other District 3AAA coaches had agreed to spread out their district tourney so there wouldn't be as long a layoff between the district championship and the state tourney.

But that didn't happen, and Ruidoso took a day off from practice Monday. Page said the Warriors will practice lightly this week, will run enough to stay in shape and will work on "getting better at what we do."

"We were pretty well drained, emotionally and physically," Page said of his team's psyche after last week's efforts in the District 3AAA Tournament.

Saenz's 35 leads RHS past Tigers

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Corey Saenz scored 35 of Ruidoso's 63 points in the Warriors win over Hot Springs Friday.

But don't let that fool you into thinking he is the only reason the Warriors will play in the Class AAA Boys State Basketball Tournament beginning March 17.

It took a team effort to deliver the Warriors to the tourney and Saturday's District 3AAA title game.

"It was definitely more than a one-man show," interim coach Billy Page said of Ruidoso's District 3AAA semifinal win. Page then noted the rebounding efforts of senior forward Garvin Grant and the Warriors' defensive team play on Hot Springs' Cody Coil.

"It was a courageous effort on our part," Page said. "They (the Tigers) pulled it back to within three and we held on."

In his pregame pep talk, Page told the Warriors that they would need a courageous effort to beat Hot Springs in Truth or Consequences. Ruidoso and Hot Springs had split two previous meetings, each winning on its home court.

"Your courage will take you to places where you've never been," Page told the Warriors.

He was right. Well, sort of.

This group of Warriors has never been to a state tournament in basketball, but Ruidoso did make an appearance 18 years ago at the "big dance." That last time was in 1980-81 when the Warriors finished 19-8 overall and took fourth place at state.

Behind the hot hand of Saenz, who buried four of six three-pointers in the first half, the Warriors forged a five-point lead by halftime against the Tigers, 30-25.

"I just started feeling it," Saenz said of his sharp shooting exploits.

Ruidoso expanded that lead to 45-37 at the end of the third quarter. Saenz scored nine of the Warriors' 15 points in that quarter, but buckets by Aaron Gillespie, Josh Varnadore and Grant solidified Ruidoso's control of the game.

Meanwhile, the Warriors' defense kept the Tigers' Coil and Ryan Showers under wraps, never giving the Tiger duo an opportunity to get into a rhythm.

"The key was controlling the tempo," Page said.

Ruidoso did so with a patient offense and solid defense. The Warriors took the fastbreak basket when it was there, and didn't hesitate to run the offense when the quick basket wasn't there.

Colts oust the weary Warriors

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Silver's Colts wore down an emotionally and physically drained Ruidoso boys basketball team for the District 3AAA title Saturday, 67-63.

Both teams will represent the 3AAA at next week's Class AAA Boys State Basketball Tournament in Albuquerque.

Ruidoso interim coach Billy Page said, " the wear and tear on us took a toll."

Saturday's game was the third in four days for the Warriors. Ruidoso defeated Santa Teresa Wednesday in the quarterfinals, and then downed Hot Springs in Truth or Consequences Friday in the semifinals. That win gave the Warriors a bid to the coveted state tourney and another shot at the Colts.

But consequences from Friday's emotionally taxing game were evident Saturday.

The Warriors stayed close to the Colts, but looked like they were hanging on by their fingertips all night.

"We tried to run on them because we thought we could, but they were just fresh. They had their legs under them," Page said.

Page emptied his bench midway through the second quarter in hopes of giving his starting rotation a breather.

"Andy was fresh. He's just as quick as Drew Price," Page said. "We knew we couldn't keep him from getting the ball, just not make it easy for him."

Ruidoso senior Corey Saenz had a tougher go of it against the Colts, who were ready for him. Four Silver coaches witnessed Saenz's 35-point performance the night before in Truth or Consequences. As a result, the Colts coaching staff rotated defensive players on Saenz, and whenever the evasive Warrior slipped his defense player, he was immediately greeted by another Colt.

Saenz still managed to score 23 to lead the Warriors, including a desperation three-pointer at the halftime buzzer that cut the Silver lead to 31-29.

The Warriors trailed 43-41 at the start of the fourth quarter when Silver blitzed the Warriors with a 12-2 run. That gave the Colts a 12-point lead at 55-43. By the 2:11 mark, the home team pushed the margin to 61-47.

Ruidoso put together a furious rally, closing to 64-60 on James Adams' bucket with 23 second to play.

But the Colts hit three of six free throws down the stretch for the win.

Complete results of the Nabisco Oreo Cup, plus results from the Ski Apache Cup and the Cross Your Heart Cup will be published in Friday's Ruidoso News.

Disabled skiers race caps off school program

Scant seconds separated racers in this year's Rick Vincent Memorial Race for disabled skiers.

The March 3 event drew 13 teams consisting of two skiers and a disabled skier. Participating disabled skiers came from the Roswell Independent School District and New Mexico School for the Visually Handicapped. The race course was East Easy Street at Ski Apache.

For a new twist, able-bodied skiers attacked the course on snow blades, donated for use by the Ski Apache Rental Shop.

"It turned out to be lots of fun. It just added a festive air and equalized everybody," said Lisa Maue, director of the Ski Apache Disabled Skiers' Program. "Rick Vincent would have been proud with all the zaniness and fun people had."

This year's race was renamed as the Rick Vincent Memorial Ski Race in honor of Vincent, the former Ski Apache Ski School director who died last year. Vincent also served as board president for the Ski Apache Disabled Skiers' Program.

The winning team of Rick Zarndt, Larry Schneider and student Steve Vegara combined for a time of 44.55 seconds. Just 33/100ths behind them were Rick Hall, Diana Person and student David Barwick.

Fastest individual times for three divisions were: men's, Zarndt, 11.35; women's, Person, 14.71; and student, Ralph Fowler, 15.56.

The race culminated the six-week disabled skier school program at Ski Apache. It also served as the the state winter games for Special Olympics. The winter games were scheduled originally for Sandia Ski Resort, but a lack of snow at Sandia moved the event to Ski Apache.

Traveling trophies were awarded in four categories. Those were: Ski Shop trophy to Steed's Ski Sports; Realtor trophy to Tall Pines Realty; Merchant trophy to Sierra Bank; and Open class trophy to Ski Apache Ski School.

Silent auction

The Ski Apache Disabled Skiers Program silent auction set a record with more than $20,000 in sales from the Jan. 30 event, Maue said. Maue hasn't finished collecting and won't know an exact total until then.

"We had a great turnout. In years past the auction usually didn't get really going until 7:30 or 8 p.m., but this year a lot of people turned out early and stayed late," Maue said.

The silent auction is the primary fund-raiser for the Ski Apache Disabled Skiers' Program. Money raised from the auction pays for student scholarships, new equipment and instructor training.

And even though Hot Springs' Chris Lucero rallied the Tigers in the final minutes, the Warriors never lost control of the game.

Saenz's remarkable shooting continued in the second half. The senior guard hit three-of-three from three-point range to finish seven-of-nine from beyond the arc. The only thing that could stop Saenz were the gym rafters. He was also seven-of-10 from the free-throw line in the final minutes.

"This is ours," said Saenz, relating the Warriors' mindset before the game. "Just like football, we can do it."

And do that, they did.

RUIDOSO POLICE

San Antonio, Texas man arrested here

Ruidoso police arrested George A. Reed of San Antonio, Texas, on an outstanding felony warrant from Bexar County, Texas, after a Ruidoso resident called the police.

The resident said he had given Reed a $1,000 down payment for work to be done on his home, and when Reed returned asking for an additional $3,000, he got suspicious and called the police.

A spokesperson from the district attorney's office said there is a fugitive-from-justice complaint regarding extradition to Texas and the defendant would appear before district court Judge Karen Parsons today.

The warrant from Texas was for something similar, said Lieutenant Wolf Born of the Ruidoso Police Department.

"Reed entered into a contractual agreement to begin the work (for the Ruidoso resident) March 29, so charges are pending but nothing has been filed," said Detective Jim Biggs, investigator of the case.

Ruidoso man charged with larceny of $155

Joshua Holmes, 24, of Ruidoso was arrested March 1 and charged with larceny for the theft of $155 from Big Tree Mechanical of 1001 Mechem Drive, according to police reports.

The owner of Sierra Glass Company, at the same address, also reported to police that money was taken between January and Feb. 26 from a job site and $85 and a billfold from the office.

Holmes, an employee of Sierra Glass, told police he was not responsible for that theft.

Juveniles arrested; curfew violations alleged

Two juveniles were arrested at 12:34 a.m. March 5 for curfew violation and one of them was charged also with unlawfully carrying a deadly weapon — in this case, brass knuckles, according to police reports.

The other juvenile was carrying a BB gun, which is legal, according to the police.

Both juveniles were released to their parents after police issued citations to the parents for curfew violation.

High school burglarized

Unknown people entered Ruidoso High School between 2:30 p.m. Friday and 8:45 a.m. Saturday, according to Ruidoso police reports.

The burglars pried open the door of an office belonging to Coach Ronny Maskew, removed keys from his desk and opened a nearby Coke machine, removing about $30, police report.

On Sunday Maskew reported other property stolen: two Sony video cameras, a starter's pistol and a Seiko stopwatch.

Monday Ron Hodges, high school principal, called to report two cash boxes missing from the cafeteria and damage to the office door of the home economics teacher, according to the report.

County submits late mid-year budget

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although Lincoln County is about two months late in submitting its $327,049 mid-year budget adjustment, County Manager Tom Stewart says it's not in trouble with the state.

"I thought it best to capture everything that occurred," he said Monday, referring to a salary settlement involving elected officials and raises for county employees.

A 5 percent employee pay raise cost the county an additional $40,001 for the remainder of the year and the settlement of a raise dispute with elected officials came to $43,350, Stewart said.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley asked for a final tally on the number of officials who signed to accept the settlement of past raises that had been rescinded and then reinstated.

Stewart pointed out that none of the four commissioners due money accepted it and neither did former commissioner Monroy Montes.

Commissioner Rick Simpson was not on the board during the affected time period.

That saved the county up to $9,000, Stewart said. The state Department of Finance and Administration recommended leaving the money in the settlement line item as a cash carry-over, he said.

Nunley pointed out that the purpose of the settlement never was to benefit commissioners, but to correct an injustice to the other elected officials, most of whom run full-time departments.

Stewart said the mid-year adjustment also allows the county to get ahead of its liability insurance premiums.

In past years, the county has been penalized for paying every six months, instead of annual payments it couldn't afford in one lump sum, he said.

"What I'm trying to do is get us out of that penalty cycle and budget for it," he said last week. "I consider this a hiccup year, because we budgeted for a full year of premiums. The problem was they charge their premiums on a calendar year and we budget on a fiscal year (July 1 through June 30). So, what we're doing is actually bringing the budget up this year to where we pay three half-year payments to bring us out to the Year 2000, so that every year we are in the calendar cycle where they want us."

Another impact was the cost of inoculating jail staff against Hepatitis B, he said.

"The jail has recently experienced an increase in the number of drug-related prisoners potentially infected with Hepatitis B," he told commissioners. "There has been no money set aside for medical protection of detention center or other administrative personnel, and such inoculations will cost an estimated $1,600."

He set up a budget line item for $2,000 for the remainder of the year.

Downs annexation offer nixed

"We do not want to be in Ruidoso Downs," was the message that nearly 100 people delivered to Ruidoso Downs Mayor Jake Harris during a public hearing Monday.

"No problem," responded Harris, apparently surprised by all the furor caused by a letter he sent to property owners living near the Downs village limits.

"I don't know why this was blown out of shape," said Harris, explaining that the only way for the properties to be annexed would be for a majority of the owners to petition to the Village of Ruidoso Downs.

Life's little instruction lab

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Students change diapers, do laundry, learn to fix healthy snacks, and deal with whatever comes up, said Julie Rigsby, co-director of the GRADS program at the high school.

"I just figured a baby was a baby," said Alicia Beveridge, a sophomore taking the daycare lab in the mobile building on the campus of Ruidoso High School.

The acronym stands for Graduation Reality and Dual-role Skills and the program is an in-school family and consumer sciences instruction and intervention program for pregnant and parenting students, but the day-care lab is available for non-parents like Beveridge as an elective.

"I've learned a lot. They have different personalities," she said.

Beveridge goes to the lab for one class period a day to get hands-on experience with childcare, which is a lot different from babysitting, she's finding out.

Rigsby, who works full-time in the day-care center, said as many as 30 to 32 students are there throughout the day and it's extra help for herself and the other daycare staff members, Melanie Bogle and Pam Robinson.

The center is free for parenting students and school staff, and it's licensed for children 0-5 years of age. The number of children in the center varies from day to day, and some of them are children of teachers and other school staff, Rigsby said.

"We don't have an educational curriculum for the babies, but we do all kinds of activities," she said. "At the same time we're teaching the high school students about what's involved in working in a day-care center and what's involved in taking care of children."

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News

Cecilia LaPaz comes to the day-care center at lunchtime to feed Calvin – as is required of all parenting students. They are also required to spend one class period with their child during the school day.

All of the day-care staff members have background in child development.

That the lab acts as a preventive measure was obvious when several non-parents explained why they took the lab and what they learned from it.

Beveridge said she wasn't ready to have a baby and took the class because she has a nephew and she likes kids.

Sophomore Tina Williams said, "Have a baby? No, not right now. It's too early. I just don't have all the experience that it takes."

Students in the child-care lab have to take a test, and one of the questions is "Why is being a teenage parent so hard?"

"Most students will say 'I'm not ready for this' after taking the lab," said co-director Gayla Stanaland, who teaches a related elective only for parenting or pregnant students.

Students in the lab also learn about physical and cognitive developmental stages of infants to age 5, sleeping habits, toilet training, teeth problems, nutrition, and toys that facilitate learning in young children.

The classes Stanaland teaches cover prenatal care, parenting, relationships, economic independence, balancing the dual role of parents and workers, job search and career exploration and self-esteem, but not as a separate subject, she said.

"Self-esteem is rolled up in everything we teach," Stanaland said.

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News

Flor Reyes and her son, Adrian, learn how games can help both physical and cognitive development. With the gymnastic ball, Reyes said, her son learns to push off with his feet.

The GRADS Project statewide works with the Teen Parent Services Division of Children, Youth & Families Department, the Department of Human Services, the Department of Labor and the Department of Health.

At Ruidoso High School it started five years ago with Paul Wirth, director of instructional support for the district, Stanaland and Youth Empowered for Success.

"Philosophically, our goal is to shut down the program so there would not be this need," Wirth said. "The reason the program started was because there were teen parents."

Stanaland said nationwide there's a trend toward repeat-pregnancies – second or third pregnancies among teen parents.

"In our GRADS program, we have zero repeat pregnancies," she said. "The program does reduce the number of second or third pregnancies depending on when we get them (the teens).

"The cycle tends to repeat itself generation after generation. Hopefully this breaks that cycle," she said.

In the classes students talk about birth control and family planning and their success through independence, so that they're empowered to choose when they have that second child, Stanaland said.

Rigsby agrees. "We're careful not to promote pregnancy and to encourage alternative decisions among our teens," she said, referring to both parenting and non-parent students in the child-care labs.

Stanaland has seen some changes in trends in the 4.5 years she's been with the program. For one thing, in the beginning she didn't get the students until they'd already had their children – because of embarrassment, she thinks.

"I was getting freshmen and sophomores (in the classes). This year it's mostly juniors and seniors, so they're older, more mature," she said.

Welfare reform mandates school attendance for teen parents. GRADS enables school districts to assist teen parents by providing

- Instructional services for pregnant and parenting teens.
- School-based child care services.
- Employability skills training.
- Linkage to community agencies.
- Recruitment of pregnancy-related dropouts.

1997-1998 Results

- Six hundred and seventy students were enrolled in 26 GRADS programs (in New Mexico), with 78 percent graduating or remaining in high school.
- The repeat pregnancy rate for students enrolled in the GRADS program is 5 percent as compared to the national average of 33 percent.
- In New Mexico, 22.5 percent of babies born to mothers 19 years of age and younger are at low birth weight, compared to only 7 percent of babies born to GRADS students.
- The recruitment of 159 previous dropouts into the GRADS program generated approximately $394,000 for participating schools.

Carrizozo school emphasizes character

CARRIZOZO–During the month of February, Carrizozo Elementary School and the community demonstrated "caring," one of the six pillars of the Character Counts! program.

The school held its first annual Jump for Heart event on Feb. 10. Students rotated through various stations involving jumping in the new gym. The purpose of the event was to help the American Heart Association (AHA) in continuing its research to cure heart disease.

The students collected donations from family and friends throughout the community. In return, the AHA will give prizes to each student for different amounts collected.

The elementary school will also receive physical education equipment based on the amount collected from the event. Students and the community joined in supporting the event.

The students raised $2,200 for the AHA.

At the monthly Character Counts! assembly, the school also recognized students from each class who exhibited caring. Each student received a certificate, ribbon, pencil, and a free scoop of ice cream from Roy's Gift Gallery.

The students recognized are – Kindergarten: Joel Ferguson and Cheyenne Riggs; first grade: Derrick Vinson and Matthew Vega; second grade: Elizabeth Bingerman and Heili Jo Paul; third grade: Andres Garcia and Sean Babcock; fourth grade: Samantha Portillo-Narvaez and Eric Koroscil; fifth grade: Whitney Whittaker.

RMS teacher finalist for 1999 Presidential Award

The State Board of Education honored Carla D. Burns, a science teacher at Ruidoso Middle School, as a finalist in the 1999 Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching.

The State Board recognized Burns and eight other teachers at its meeting March 4.

The Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching are bestowed by the White House and administered by the National Science Foundation.

The nine New Mexico teachers are among 558 nationwide awaiting the final decision from the White House as to whether they will be among the four teachers from each state to win the presidential award.

These teachers were chosen for their up-to-date knowledge of content, their ability to help students learn, and their leadership in improving the way science and mathematics are taught in the classroom.

The White House is expected to name the four winners in each state later this month. An awards ceremony will take place in June honoring the winners, two each from elementary and secondary mathematics and science.

These teachers will receive a presidential citation and a $7,500 grant for their school from the National Science Foundation.

Parents get chance to ask 'tough questions'

For three days in March, every parent and grandparent can ask an elementary school principal any of their toughest questions on a toll-free hotline staffed by members of the National Association of Elementary School Principals and the National Association of School Psychologists.

Instead of raising the issue with your child's own principal, you'll remain anonymous while getting answers to questions such as these:

•What can I do about violence in the school and threats to my child's safety?

•Can I request that my child be put in a certain teacher's class or get my child switched to another teacher?

•How can I help my child cope with overwhelming peer pressure?

•How do I know if my child has a learning disability such as Attention Deficit Disorder?

•What can I do about disruptive children interfering with my child's ability to learn?

An informative booklet, "On Call for Kids," is available free to all callers.

The toll-free hotline is 1-800-944-1601 and will operate From 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. March 21; from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. March 22; and from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 23.

Established in 1921, the National Association of Elementary School Principals serves 28,000 educators in the United States, Canada and overseas.

Capitan students turn pages into PJs

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

CAPITAN–Elementary students here put their teachers in pajamas all day Friday – by exceeding their reading goal.

Their next goal is to make their principal, Dick Clevenger, dress up like Dolly Parton for a day.

"We earned it by reading 6,000 points," said fifth-grader Holly Boese. "The teachers had to (wear pajamas), then they said kids could too."

These are just some of the incentives the district uses to encourage kids to read more, although reading has become its own reward for many as a result of the accelerated reading program.

Holly Boese said she enjoys reading more and as she gets older she finds more books that appeal to her, so she ends up reading even more. She said her reading has doubled or tripled since fourth grade.

"In fourth grade I didn't really like reading, but this year I'm finding books I like to read," she said, such as the book she's reading now, "Little House on the Prairie" by Laura Ingalls Wilder.

Fourth-grader Christina Stevens reads four or five books a week and likes to read because she's learning about animals and people, she said.

This is the second year of the accelerated reading program at Capitan Elementary School, said Clevenger, and it's already exceeded everyone's expectations.

"The purpose is to improve reading and comprehension skills and to encourage children to have a love of reading," he said. "It's working."

Some of the other incentives include a "reader store," in which children who have accumulated reading points can buy various items, such as a radio-controlled model truck, posters or pencils once a month.

Then there's accelerated reader recess from 2:30 to 2:50 in the afternoon for students who score 80 percent or better on comprehension tests on what they've read.

Certificates go to students who pass certain reading levels, and their names go on a castle or a barn in the hallway.

"This thing has really worked," Clevenger said. "We have 100 percent of our kids participating."

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News
Betty Adcock, kindergarten teacher, sits in the back of the room in a nightgown as Cheryl Sullivan, a mom, reads to the class.

Clevenger said Capitan is about third in the state now for reading comprehension exams, and students read six to seven hours a week on average.

The children are reading so much they're keeping the administration busy thinking up labels naming new levels for them to achieve.

Some of the levels they have now are called independent, super reading, advanced, star, classic and honors. Students' names and new reading levels are announced on the intercom and their photos go up on the construction paper castle or barn on the hallway walls to the new level they've achieved.

Second grade teacher Mary Shanks said the elementary school received an $8,000 grant from the Hubbard Foundation to buy books and kick off the accelerated reading program.

Shanks said her class has an hour of silent reading in her class every day, and students are enjoying the time spent with books.

"It's great," Shanks said. "It's so exciting to see them reading. I had one student who didn't know all her letters when school started, and now she's making 100 percent in spelling."

Part of the satisfaction teachers experience from the program come at the end of the school year, Shanks said.

"You know at the end of the year that you're sending a child to third grade who knows how to read and enjoys it," she said.

Clevenger said he'll have to wear a Dolly Parton wig and dress when the kids reach their next goal of 8,000 points.

"For the final goal of 10,000 points," he said, "I'm going to allow them to wear old clothes and bring a sponge to school. Then we'll go out in the football field and throw wet sponges at each other."

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News
First-grade teacher Beverly Blank on Friday looks like she just crawled out of bed as did the rest of the Capitan Elementary School teachers who wore pajamas to reward students for waking up to the world of reading.

Our Northern Pal, Polaris

The Star of Stars

Twinkle, twinkle, great North Star,
You can tell us where we are.
From the North Pole way up high,
You're the star we're guided by.
In one spot you're always found,
Other stars, they move around.

Hurray for the great North Star, which is called Polaris.

In all of the heavens, there are 48 stars that shine brighter, but Polaris is the most useful of them all.

A constellation is a group of stars that are always in the same pattern. Thousands of years ago, stargazers made up stories and gave the constellations names we still use today.

Polaris is part of a seven-star constellation. It is the last star in the Little Dipper (also called Little Bear and Ursa Minor).

You can find it by locating another constellation always nearby, the Big Dipper. Two of the stars in the bucket of the Big Dipper are called pointer stars because they point to Polaris.

The pals of Polaris

Most other stars appear to rise in the eastern sky, right after the sun goes down. If you were to sit up all night long, you would see that, like the sun, they appear to move across the sky and set, or go down, in the west.

The constellations around Polaris don't do this. They don't rise or set. We can always see them.

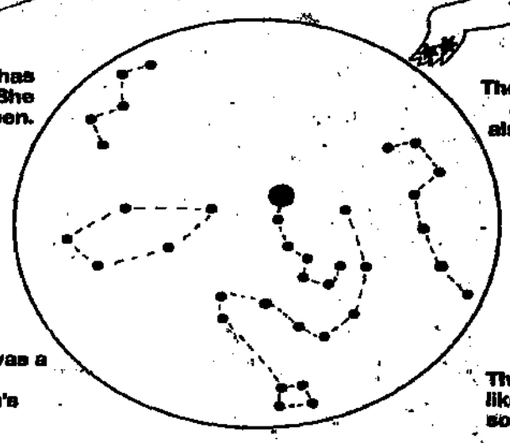
Instead of rising and setting, they circle the great North Star.

The Dragon has stars that are dim, except for a brighter nose.

Draw a line from the constellations to the star pattern.

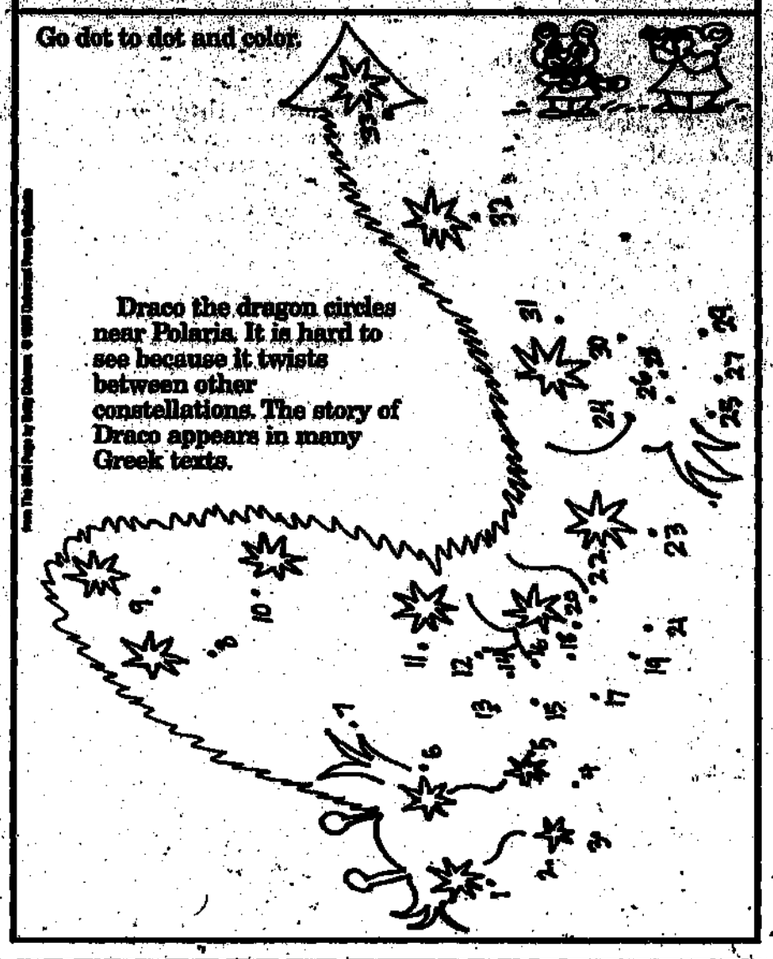
The Big Dipper is part of a bigger constellation also called the Big Bear or Ursa Major.

Cassiopeia has five stars. She was a queen.



Cepheus was a king and Cassiopeia's husband.

The Little Dipper looks like a little bear to some people.



Go dot to dot and color.

Draco the dragon circles near Polaris. It is hard to see because it twists between other constellations. The story of Draco appears in many Greek texts.

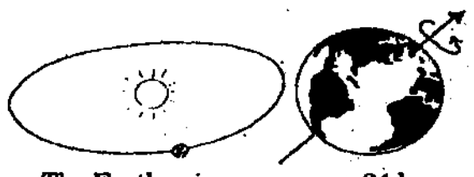
A Kid's Guide to Polaris



The Earth spins once every 24 hours during its year-long orbit of the sun. It is tilted at an angle. This rotation and spinning give us our seasons and our different views of the stars at night.

Hemispheres

The Earth is divided into four hemispheres.

We live in the Western Hemisphere.

The Eastern Hemisphere is on the other side.

The Earth is divided into Northern and Southern hemispheres at the equator.

This is the Northern Hemisphere. This is the view from the North Star if we were up there looking down. We cannot see the stars in the Southern Hemisphere.

This is the Southern Hemisphere. People who live in this part of the world cannot see the North Star.

People in the Northern and Southern hemispheres see different stars.

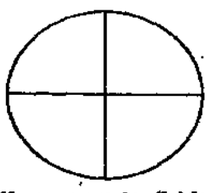
There is a link between Polaris and the parallel lines we see on our maps and globes.

This link has helped sailors and travelers for hundreds of years.

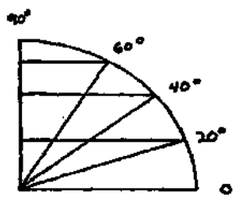
Slaves escaping to the North and to freedom used this link to help them on their way.

The further up in the sky the North Star — the further north you are.

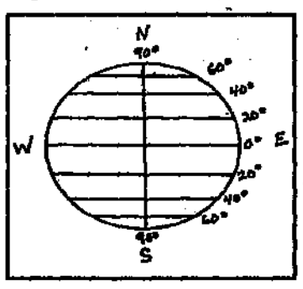
Not only does Polaris tell us which way is north, it can also help tell us where we are.



If you were to divide the Earth into quarters, or four parts, it would look like this.



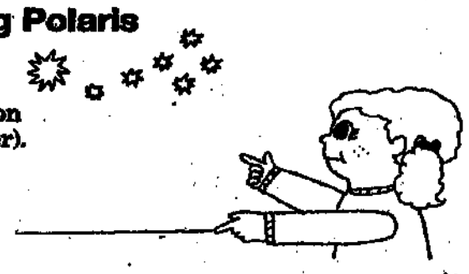
This is an angle. It has degrees. The degrees in the angle match the degrees of latitude.



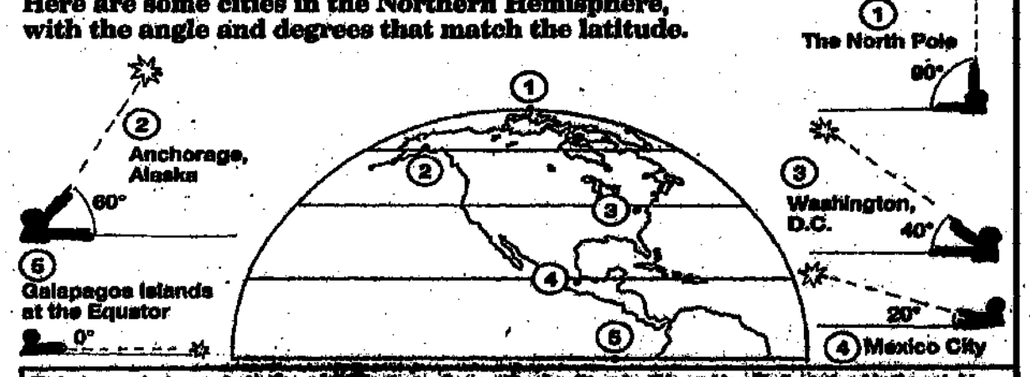
To find out where we are on Earth, we use imaginary lines. The circles that go across from east to west are called parallels of latitude. They are numbered from each side of the equator from 0 to 90 in degrees to the North and South poles.

How to find your latitude using Polaris

1. Stand outside and face Polaris. Point to Polaris.
2. With your other arm, point to the horizon (place where the sky meets the land or water).
3. Pretend your arms are measuring the degrees in the angle.
4. Estimate what the degrees would be.
5. The degrees would match the latitude.



Here are some cities in the Northern Hemisphere, with the angle and degrees that match the latitude.



This issue is based on the planetarium show "And a Star to Steer Her By" at the National Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., showing until October 2001.

GRADS: The class covers prenatal care and setting limits

Adrian, is in the day care, said the program gives her a chance to come back to school and finish what she needs to in order to graduate.

Cecilia LaPaz, also a parent, said the program helps deal with the stress of being a single mother as well as teaching about how to deal with different stages babies go through.

About the GRAD classes, LaPaz said she's learning about setting limits, how to child-proof a house, prenatal care, coping with reality, dealing with in-laws and relationships, and developmental stages.

"Mrs. Stanaland is a really great teacher. We could tell her about some of the problems we're having and she'll explain it to us so we'll understand. She encourages us.

"She's been really helpful to me during this last year of school and she's helping me get into college," she said.

High school counselor Linda Hawthorne said the value of the program is that it keeps kids who would probably drop out of school in school and gives them the support and resources they need to stay in school.

The day care is in a building on the edge of campus, she said, and since babies are not allowed in the main building, most students aren't even aware of the program and don't find out until they go to Hawthorne's office to drop out of school.

"They are not happy with the fact that they have an unplanned pregnancy," Hawthorne said, "and I tell them that I know another way you can do this so you can have some support.

"It's not a highly visible program, and yet it's kind of a safety net for those who find themselves in the position of an unplanned pregnancy and don't know how they're going to manage school anymore," Hawthorne said.

LaPaz said she never knew it was so much work to have a baby, or how much her life would be changed.

"It's really a challenge being a teen mom and trying to finish school .... You have to give up your fun times – you know, going out with other kids. I just stay home with him (Calvin) all the time," she said.

LaPaz is a senior, trying to get into a fashion design school in New York or California. Calvin now motivates her to become "somebody that my son can look up to," she said.

"He's the one that's making me finish school and push my way into the future."

Sandy Suggs/Ruidoso News

Tina Williams is taking childcare as an elective because she likes playing with children. She thinks more boys would take the class if they didn't have to change diapers, but "we're an equal opportunity class," said Julie Rigsby, co-director of the program.

Ruidoso recognized as 'up and coming'

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

While the village of Ruidoso over the last five years has appeared on numerous "great places to live" lists, the latest, and for those who are investment-minded, possibly the most impressive, is it's inclusion in "The Roaring 2000s."

The new book by economist Harry S. Dent, Jr., is published by Simon & Schuster.

Dent, a Harvard Business School graduate and a Baker Scholar, also wrote the 1993 best seller, "The Great Boom Ahead" and travels across the country lecturing. His new book describes lifestyles changes brought on by economic factors, including the growth of small-to-medium-sized companies that create new types of jobs.

The New American Dream and changing technologies could mean a return to small-town living, where people will be looking for quality of life and investment possibilities, he writes.

Under a section entitled "Identifying Up-and-Coming Resort Towns," Ruidoso is mentioned along with Bisbee, Ariz., Pagosa Springs and Durango, Colo., Moab, Utah, and Las Cruces, as towns in the early-growth phase.

"These are the type of towns that are still in their early, innovative stages and offer the highest long-term real estate appreciation potential, and the most authentic pioneering resort-town culture for the brave, eclectic and artistic," Dent wrote.

He advises looking for towns with a minimum population of 3,000 to 5,000, for eclectic populations that range from affluent to entrepreneurs and for natural beauty or recreation attractions that haven't really been discovered by the mass public.

Eva Kehoe, Dent's administrative assistant, said Tuesday the author doesn't do extensive quantitative analysis when pinpointing up-and-coming towns.

"Most of his real estate topics are based on his own personal observations and conversations with people in the industry," she said. "He has so many sources in every aspect.

He travels extensively across the country and has been in practically every small-to-middle-sized town.

Student picked for Spirit of America Band

Duane Duffy, son of June Denny and the late Shelby Duffy of Mescalero, has been accepted as a member of the 1999 Spirit of America National Honor Band for its 22nd Annual Performing Tour of Europe.

Duffy will represent the village of Ruidoso and the Mescalero Apache Tribe as an emissary to the people of Western Europe. He was chosen on the basis of maturity, performance and the ability to represent the best of American youth.

The Spirit of America National Honor Band will tour and perform in Luxembourg, Austria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Germany, Holland, France and Belgium. It also will perform for the diplomatic community as well as for thousands of people in Geneva, Switzerland, on the Fourth of July at a celebration hosted by the American Club of Geneva.

Duffy will join other selected students from across the United States, rehearse for five days in Atlanta, Ga., then fly to Europe for 14 days of touring and performing.

Duffy is a member of the Ruidoso High School 24K Gold Band directed by Robert Stephens. He is a member of the Mescalero Reformed Church youth group and the Mescalero Boy Scouts Association.

Duffy will be raising a major portion of his expenses himself. Anyone interested in sponsoring or otherwise helping him may contact his band director at 505-258-4910 or June Denny at 505-671-4423. An account has been set up at Otero County Federal Credit Union in Alamogordo under his name.

The Spirit of America National Honor Band is directed by George Naff, former conductor of the Duke University Wind Symphony and the East Carolina University Marching, Concert and Jazz Bands. George and Sue Naff and the Spirit staff are in their 22nd year taking bands overseas.

For information about the honor band, contact the Naffs c/o Spirit of American National Honor Band, P.O. Box 1249, Boon, N.C. 28607 or call 828-265-BAND.

POOP SCOOP

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

I guess I live in a cave, but the latest animal abuse campaign launched by the Humane Society of the United States blew me away.

The society is trying to make sexual abuse of animals illegal after determining that 28 states permit the activity or do not specifically outlaw sexual abuse of animals.

The proliferation of web sites related to animal sexual abuse is astounding, according to HSUS researchers. One web site provides links to almost 200 different pornographic sites that include the sexual abuse of animals. The site reports receiving about 46,000 visits each day.

The people who operate many of the web sites are aware of the criticism they engender and move or rename sites to avoid attempts to shut them down, HSUS spokemen say.

The Society hopes that measures against animal sexual abuse will be included in animal cruelty laws and is campaigning for that goal.

"The only people who would oppose a law against animal sexual abuse are those who are abusing the animals," said Ann Church, senior director for government affairs with HSUS.

Often called bestiality, animal sexual abuse is the sexual molestation of an animal by a human, which sometimes results in physical injury or the death of an animal.

While accurate statistical information on the number of animals being sexually abused doesn't exist, a 1948 study by Kinsey & Pomeroy of male sexual behavior found that in the United States, 8 percent of the total male population had sexual contact with animals.

That was 50 years ago, can you imagine what the percentage must be today!

"Many animal sexual abusers are similar to pedophiles," said Kim Roberts, manager of the HSUS's First Strike campaign against animal abuse. "They'll defend their actions by stating that their victims consent. The fact is no child or animal is capable of consenting to sexual activity with an adult human being."

Other sexual abusers of animals are opportunistic and target animals because of their accessibility and vulnerability, she said. A third type includes batterers, rapists and pornographers who may force others to perform sex acts on animals to humiliate, dominate, control and exploit them.

Just as in "straight" animal abuse, sexual abuse of animals by children is a warning sign that may indicate the child is being physically, sexually or emotionally abused, Roberts said.

Rescue 77 looks to broaden WB's audience appeal

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

It's no accident Rescue 77, about a team of paramedics at a Los Angeles fire station, is the latest drama from The WB Network.

The action series has a preview Monday, March 15, then moves into its regular time slot Tuesday, March 16.

The WB expects the show to attract 20-something viewers to the network, which has established a bedrock teen audience with Buffy the Vampire Slayer, Felicity and Dawson's Creek.

The regular cast includes Victor Browne as Michael Bell, Marjorie Monaghan as Kathleen Ryan and Christian Kane as Wick Lobo – the three musketeers of medical rescue work.

Richard Roundtree (Shaft) plays their supervisor, Capt. Durfee, and Terence Knox has a recurring role as an intense, quirky firefighter.

Rescue 77 mixes tried-and-true elements in a formula that seemingly can't miss. There are stories of peril to draw viewers in, relationship melodramas to keep them hooked and an attractive ensemble cast to carry it off.

Conceived by screenwriter Gregory Widen (Backdraft), the show comes to the network from Spelling Television, typically lightweight fare from the industry leader in soapy serials.

Network chief Jamie Kellner is pleased, saying the drama has "the potential to get the human stories and get the same action that's (been) driving shows like Cops for the last 10 years."

Producer Aaron Spelling, who loves to give actors a break, also loves to give audiences what they want. Few of his shows receive critical acclaim, so he hands out pats on the back himself. His indefatigable cheerleading would be infuriating if it were not so completely sincere. Of Rescue 77, he asks rhetorically, "Isn't it great to do a show that has action, but without killing people?"

Yes, and it's nice to know that if a boo-boo ever happens in Beverly Hills, 90210, the paramedics of Rescue 77 can be on their way just seconds after the cell-phone call comes in.

IN FOCUS

A mother (Tippi Hedren, left) helps her daughter (Mary McDonnell) recover from a cheating husband in Replacing Dad, airing Sunday, March 14, on CBS.

Word that her husband is having an affair reaches Linda (McDonnell) quickly via small-town gossip. When he moves out of their home, she retreats to the couch and TV.

TRIVIA

TRIVIA

Daniel Day-Lewis is the grandson of Michael Balcon, a longtime British studio chief. His films include The 39 Steps and Kind Hearts and Coronets.

Bee Gees: One Night Only

Bee Gees: One Night Only features Rock and Roll Hall of Fame musicians the Bee Gees performing their most popular singles from the '60s, '70s, '80s, and '90s, plus songs from their recent CD, Still Waters. Taped at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas in November 1997, the 2-hour concert features the timeless harmonies of Barry, Maurice, and Robin Gibb, and includes a special appearance by guest artist Celine Dion, performing "Immortality."

Performance highlights include "You Should Be Dancing," "How Deep Is Your Love, "Night Fever" and "I've Gotta Get a Message to You," as well as "Alone," "Massachusetts," "To Love Somebody," "Words," "Islands in the Stream," "(Our Love) Don't Throw It All Away," and many more.

The Bee Gees' first album, Bee Gees 1st, was released in the fall of 1967. With the string of hit singles that followed, the Bee Gees became pop stars. They are the only recording artists to write and produce six straight number-one singles and the first composers to have five songs in the Top Ten at the same time. Their participation on the soundtrack of the generation-defining film Saturday Night Fever shot them to mega-stardom in the mid-1970s. Featuring a roster of pop/disco standards such as "Stayin' Alive," "Night Fever," and "How Deep Is Your Love," the Saturday Night Fever album remains the biggest-selling soundtrack in history, with 40 million copies sold. In 1997, they were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

Bee Gees: One Night Only will be broadcast Monday, March 15th at 7:00 p.m.

Daryl Hall and John Oates in Concert

One of music's best-known singing duos – Daryl Hall and John Oates – takes to the stage in a new concert special, Daryl Hall and John Oates in Concert. The concert, recorded in Tokyo, Japan, features all of their biggest hits, including "Sara Smile," "She's Gone," "Rich Girl," "Kiss on My List," "Maneater," and many others.

The accomplishments of the duo, now in their 25th year of recording together, guarantee them a place in the history books: six number one hits, 29 top 40 songs in the 1970s and 1980s, and more than 40 million records sold. Daryl Hall and John Oates continue to build on their pioneering rock, soul, and pop musical hybrid by creatively blurring the lines between genres. Their most recent album, Marigold Sky, was released in 1997.

Daryl Hall & John Oates in Concert will be broadcast Monday, March 15th at 8:50 p.m.

RUIDOSO POLICE

San Antonio, Texas man arrested here

Ruidoso police arrested George A. Reed of San Antonio, Texas, on an outstanding felony warrant from Bexar County, Texas, after a Ruidoso resident called the police.

The resident said he had given Reed a $1,000 down payment for work to be done on his home, and when Reed returned asking for an additional $3,000, he got suspicious and called the police.

A spokesperson from the district attorney's office said there is a fugitive-from-justice complaint regarding extradition to Texas and the defendant would appear before district court Judge Karen Parsons today.

The warrant from Texas was for something similar, said Lieutenant Wolf Born of the Ruidoso Police Department.

"Reed entered into a contractual agreement to begin the work (for the Ruidoso resident) March 29, so charges are pending but nothing has been filed," said Detective Jim Biggs, investigator of the case.

Ruidoso man charged with larceny of $155

Joshua Holmes, 24, of Ruidoso was arrested March 1 and charged with larceny for the theft of $155 from Big Tree Mechanical of 1001 Mechem Drive, according to police reports.

The owner of Sierra Glass Company, at the same address, also reported to police that money was taken between January and Feb. 26 from a job site and $85 and a billfold from the office.

Holmes, an employee of Sierra Glass, told police he was not responsible for that theft.

Juveniles arrested; curfew violations alleged

Two juveniles were arrested at 12:34 a.m. March 5 for curfew violation and one of them was charged also with unlawfully carrying a deadly weapon — in this case, brass knuckles, according to police reports.

The other juvenile was carrying a BB gun, which is legal, according to the police.

Both juveniles were released to their parents after police issued citations to the parents for curfew violation.

High school burglarized

Unknown people entered Ruidoso High School between 2:30 p.m. Friday and 8:45 a.m. Saturday, according to Ruidoso police reports.

The burglars pried open the door of an office belonging to Coach Ronny Maskew, removed keys from his desk and opened a nearby Coke machine, removing about $30, police report.

On Sunday Maskew reported other property stolen: two Sony video cameras, a starter's pistol and a Seiko stopwatch.

Monday Ron Hodges, high school principal, called to report two cash boxes missing from the cafeteria and damage to the office door of the home economics teacher, according to the report.

County submits late mid-year budget

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although Lincoln County is about two months late in submitting its $327,049 mid-year budget adjustment, County Manager Tom Stewart says it's not in trouble with the state.

"I thought it best to capture everything that occurred," he said Monday, referring to a salary settlement involving elected officials and raises for county employees.

A 5 percent employee pay raise cost the county an additional $40,001 for the remainder of the year and the settlement of a raise dispute with elected officials came to $43,350, Stewart said.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley asked for a final tally on the number of officials who signed to accept the settlement of past raises that had been rescinded and then reinstated.

Stewart pointed out that none of the four commissioners due money accepted it and neither did former commissioner Monroy Montes.

That saved the county up to $9,000, Stewart said. The state Department of Finance and Administration recommended leaving the money in the settlement line item as a cash carry-over, he said.

Nunley pointed out that the purpose of the settlement never was to benefit commissioners, but to correct an injustice to the other elected officials, most of whom run full-time departments.

Stewart said the mid-year adjustment also allows the county to get ahead of its liability insurance premiums.

In past years, the county has been penalized for paying every six months, instead of annual payments it couldn't afford in one lump sum, he said.

"What I'm trying to do is get us out of that penalty cycle and budget for it," he said last week. "I consider this a hiccup year, because we budgeted for a full year of premiums. The problem was they charge their premiums on a calendar year and we budget on a fiscal year (July 1 through June 30). So, what we're doing is actually bringing the budget up this year to where we pay three half-year payments to bring us out to the Year 2000, so that every year we are in the calendar cycle where they want us."

Another impact was the cost of inoculating jail staff against Hepatitis B, he said.

"The jail has recently experienced an increase in the number of drug-related prisoners potentially infected with Hepatitis B," he told commissioners. "There has been no money set aside for medical protection of detention center or other administrative personnel, and such inoculations will cost an estimated $1,600."

He set up a budget line item for $2,000 for the remainder of the year.

Cheers, Boos Greet Merger Idea

The proposed merger of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs into one city met with mixed reaction from a sampling of Ruidoso Downs citizens.

However, most of those who are now opposed to the proposed merger believe it will eventually come to pass.

Strong opposition to the proposal was voiced by Roland T. Parker, dry goods merchant.

"It would be a very poor thing to do and would mean higher taxes for Ruidoso Downs residents," Parker declared.

Downs annexation offer nixed

"We do not want to be in Ruidoso Downs," was the message that nearly 100 people delivered to Ruidoso Downs Mayor Jake Harris during a public hearing Monday.

"No problem," responded Harris, apparently surprised by all the furor caused by a letter he sent to property owners living near the Downs village limits.

"I don't know why this was blown out of shape," said Harris, explaining that the only way for the properties to be annexed would be for a majority of the owners to petition to the Village of Ruidoso Downs.

Life's little instruction lab

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Students change diapers, do laundry, learn to fix healthy snacks, and deal with whatever comes up, said Julie Rigsby, co-director of the GRADS program at the high school.

"I just figured a baby was a baby," said Alicia Beveridge, a sophomore taking the daycare lab in the mobile building on the campus of Ruidoso High School.

The acronym stands for Graduation Reality and Dual-role Skills and the program is an in-school family and consumer sciences instruction and intervention program for pregnant and parenting students, but the day-care lab is available for non-parents like Beveridge as an elective.

"I've learned a lot. They have different personalities," she said.

Beveridge goes to the lab for one class period a day to get hands-on experience with childcare, which is a lot different from babysitting, she's finding out.

Rigsby, who works full-time in the day-care center, said as many as 30 to 32 students are there throughout the day and it's extra help for herself and the other daycare staff members, Melanie Bogle and Pam Robinson.

The center is free for parenting students and school staff, and it's licensed for children 0-5 years of age. The number of children in the center varies from day to day, and some of them are children of teachers and other school staff, Rigsby said.

"We don't have an educational curriculum for the babies, but we do all kinds of activities," she said. "At the same time we're teaching the high school students about what's involved in working in a day-care center and what's involved in taking care of children."

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News

Cecilia LaPaz comes to the day-care center at lunchtime to feed Calvin – as is required of all parenting students. They are also required to spend one class period with their child during the school day.

All of the day-care staff members have background in child development.

That the lab acts as a preventive measure was obvious when several non-parents explained why they took the lab and what they learned from it.

Beveridge said she wasn't ready to have a baby and took the class because she has a nephew and she likes kids.

Sophomore Tina Williams said, "Have a baby? No, not right now. It's too early. I just don't have all the experience that it takes."

Students in the child-care lab have to take a test, and one of the questions is "Why is being a teenage parent so hard?"

"Most students will say 'I'm not ready for this' after taking the lab," said co-director Gayla Stanaland, who teaches a related elective only for parenting or pregnant students.

Students in the lab also learn about physical and cognitive developmental stages of infants to age 5, sleeping habits, toilet training, teeth problems, nutrition, and toys that facilitate learning in young children.

The classes Stanaland teaches cover prenatal care, parenting, relationships, economic independence, balancing the dual role of parents and workers, job search and career exploration and self-esteem, but not as a separate subject, she said.

"Self-esteem is rolled up in everything we teach," Stanaland said.

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News

Flor Reyes and her son, Adrian, learn how games can help both physical and cognitive development. With the gymnastic ball, Reyes said, her son learns to push off with his feet.

The GRADS Project statewide works with the Teen Parent Services Division of Children, Youth & Families Department, the Department of Human Services, the Department of Labor and the Department of Health.

At Ruidoso High School it started five years ago with Paul Wirth, director of instructional support for the district, Stanaland and Youth Empowered for Success.

"Philosophically, our goal is to shut down the program so there would not be this need," Wirth said. "The reason the program started was because there were teen parents."

Stanaland said nationwide there's a trend toward repeat-pregnancies – second or third pregnancies among teen parents.

"In our GRADS program, we have zero repeat pregnancies," she said. "The program does reduce the number of second or third pregnancies depending on when we get them (the teens).

"The cycle tends to repeat itself generation after generation. Hopefully this breaks that cycle," she said.

In the classes students talk about birth control and family planning and their success through independence, so that they're empowered to choose when they have that second child, Stanaland said.

Rigsby agrees. "We're careful not to promote pregnancy and to encourage alternative decisions among our teens," she said, referring to both parenting and non-parent students in the child-care labs.

Stanaland has seen some changes in trends in the 4.5 years she's been with the program. For one thing, in the beginning she didn't get the students until they'd already had their children – because of embarrassment, she thinks.

"I was getting freshmen and sophomores (in the classes). This year it's mostly juniors and seniors, so they're older, more mature," she said.

The hows and whys of GRADS statewide

Welfare reform mandates school attendance for teen parents. GRADS enables school districts to assist teen parents by providing

- Instructional services for pregnant and parenting teens.
- School-based child care services.
- Employability skills training.
- Linkage to community agencies.
- Recruitment of pregnancy-related dropouts.

1997-1998 Results

- Six hundred and seventy students were enrolled in 26 GRADS programs (in New Mexico), with 78 percent graduating or remaining in high school.
- The repeat pregnancy rate for students enrolled in the GRADS program is 5 percent as compared to the national average of 33 percent.
- In New Mexico, 22.5 percent of babies born to mothers 19 years of age and younger are at low birth weight, compared to only 7 percent of babies born to GRADS students.
- The recruitment of 159 previous dropouts into the GRADS program generated approximately $394,000 for participating schools.

Carrizozo school emphasizes character

CARRIZOZO–During the month of February, Carrizozo Elementary School and the community demonstrated "caring," one of the six pillars of the Character Counts! program.

The school held its first annual Jump for Heart event on Feb. 10. Students rotated through various stations involving jumping in the new gym. The purpose of the event was to help the American Heart Association (AHA) in continuing its research to cure heart disease.

The students collected donations from family and friends throughout the community. In return, the AHA will give prizes to each student for different amounts collected.

The elementary school will also receive physical education equipment based on the amount collected from the event. Students and the community joined in supporting the event.

The students raised $2,200 for the AHA.

At the monthly Character Counts! assembly, the school also recognized students from each class who exhibited caring. Each student received a certificate, ribbon, pencil, and a free scoop of ice cream from Roy's Gift Gallery.

The students recognized are – Kindergarten: Joel Ferguson and Cheyenne Riggs; first grade: Derrick Vinson and Matthew Vega; second grade: Elizabeth Bingerman and Heili Jo Paul; third grade: Andres Garcia and Sean Babcock; fourth grade: Samantha Portillo-Narvaez and Eric Koroscil; fifth grade: Whitney Whittaker.

RMS teacher finalist for 1999 Presidential Award

The State Board of Education honored Carla D. Burns, a science teacher at Ruidoso Middle School, as a finalist in the 1999 Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching.

The State Board recognized Burns and eight other teachers at its meeting March 4.

The Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching are bestowed by the White House and administered by the National Science Foundation.

The nine New Mexico teachers are among 558 nationwide awaiting the final decision from the White House as to whether they will be among the four teachers from each state to win the presidential award.

These teachers were chosen for their up-to-date knowledge of content, their ability to help students learn, and their leadership in improving the way science and mathematics are taught in the classroom.

The White House is expected to name the four winners in each state later this month. An awards ceremony will take place in June honoring the winners, two each from elementary and secondary mathematics and science.

These teachers will receive a presidential citation and a $7,500 grant for their school from the National Science Foundation.

Parents get chance to ask 'tough questions'

For three days in March, every parent and grandparent can ask an elementary school principal any of their toughest questions on a toll-free hotline staffed by members of the National Association of Elementary School Principals and the National Association of School Psychologists.

Instead of raising the issue with your child's own principal, you'll remain anonymous while getting answers to questions such as these:

•What can I do about violence in the school and threats to my child's safety?

•Can I request that my child be put in a certain teacher's class or get my child switched to another teacher?

•How can I help my child cope with overwhelming peer pressure?

•How do I know if my child has a learning disability such as Attention Deficit Disorder?

•What can I do about disruptive children interfering with my child's ability to learn?

An informative booklet, "On Call for Kids," is available free to all callers.

The toll-free hotline is 1-800-944-1601 and will operate From 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. March 21; from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. March 22; and from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 23.

Established in 1921, the National Association of Elementary School Principals serves 28,000 educators in the United States, Canada and overseas.

Capitan students turn pages into PJs

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

CAPITAN–Elementary students here put their teachers in pajamas all day Friday – by exceeding their reading goal.

Their next goal is to make their principal, Dick Clevenger, dress up like Dolly Parton for a day.

"We earned it by reading 6,000 points," said fifth-grader Holly Boese. "The teachers had to (wear pajamas), then they said kids could too."

These are just some of the incentives the district uses to encourage kids to read more, although reading has become its own reward for many as a result of the accelerated reading program.

Holly Boese said she enjoys reading more and as she gets older she finds more books that appeal to her, so she ends up reading even more. She said her reading has doubled or tripled since fourth grade.

"In fourth grade I didn't really like reading, but this year I'm finding books I like to read," she said, such as the book she's reading now, "Little House on the Prairie" by Laura Ingalls Wilder.

Fourth-grader Christina Stevens reads four or five books a week and likes to read because she's learning about animals and people, she said.

This is the second year of the accelerated reading program at Capitan Elementary School, said Clevenger, and it's already exceeded everyone's expectations.

"The purpose is to improve reading and comprehension skills and to encourage children to have a love of reading," he said. "It's working."

Some of the other incentives include a "reader store," in which children who have accumulated reading points can buy various items, such as a radio-controlled model truck, posters or pencils once a month.

Then there's accelerated reader recess from 2:30 to 2:50 in the afternoon for students who score 80 percent or better on comprehension tests on what they've read.

Certificates go to students who pass certain reading levels, and their names go on a castle or a barn in the hallway.

"This thing has really worked," Clevenger said. "We have 100 percent of our kids participating."

Sandy Suggitt/Ruidoso News
Betty Adcock, kindergarten teacher, sits in the back of the room in a nightgown as Cheryl Sullivan, a mom, reads to the class.

Clevenger said Capitan is about third in the state now for reading comprehension exams, and students read six to seven hours a week on average.

The children are reading so much they're keeping the administration busy thinking up labels naming new levels for them to achieve.

Some of the levels they have now are called independent, super reading, advanced, star, classic and honors. Students' names and new reading levels are announced on the intercom and their photos go up on the construction paper castle or barn on the hallway walls to the new level they've achieved.

Second grade teacher Mary Shanks said the elementary school received an $8,000 grant from the Hubbard Foundation to buy books and kick off the accelerated reading program.

Shanks said her class has an hour of silent reading in her class every day, and students are enjoying the time spent with books.

"It's great," Shanks said. "It's so exciting to see them reading. I had one student who didn't know all her letters when school started, and now she's making 100 percent in spelling."

Part of the satisfaction teachers experience from the program come at the end of the school year, Shanks said.

"You know at the end of the year that you're sending a child to third grade who knows how to read and enjoys it," she said.

Clevenger said he'll have to wear a Dolly Parton wig and dress when the kids reach their next goal of 8,000 points.

"For the final goal of 10,000 points," he said, "I'm going to allow them to wear old clothes and bring a sponge to school. Then we'll go out in the football field and throw wet sponges at each other."

First-grade teacher Beverly Blank on Friday looks like she just crawled out of bed as did the rest of the Capitan Elementary School teachers who wore pajamas to reward students for waking up to the world of reading.

Our Northern Pal, Polaris

The Star of Stars

Twinkle, twinkle, great North Star,
You can tell us where we are.
From the North Pole way up high,
You're the star we're guided by.
In one spot you're always found,
Other stars, they move around.

Hurray for the great North Star, which is called Polaris.

In all of the heavens, there are 48 stars that shine brighter, but Polaris is the most useful of them all.

A constellation is a group of stars that are always in the same pattern. Thousands of years ago, stargazers made up stories and gave the constellations names we still use today.

Polaris is part of a seven-star constellation. It is the last star in the Little Dipper (also called Little Bear and Ursa Minor).

You can find it by locating another constellation always nearby, the Big Dipper. Two of the stars in the bucket of the Big Dipper are called pointer stars because they point to Polaris.

The pals of Polaris

Most other stars appear to rise in the eastern sky, right after the sun goes down. If you were to sit up all night long, you would see that, like the sun, they appear to move across the sky and set, or go down, in the west.

The constellations around Polaris don't do this. They don't rise or set. We can always see them.

Instead of rising and setting, they circle the great North Star.

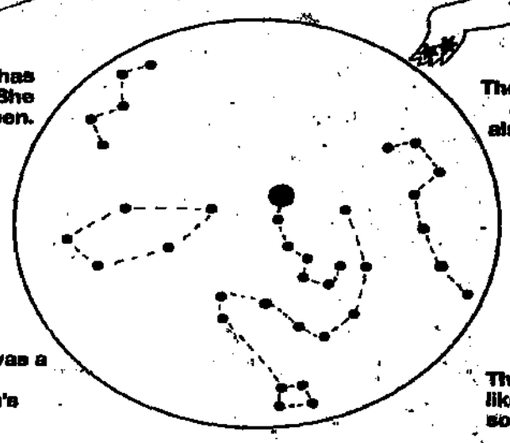
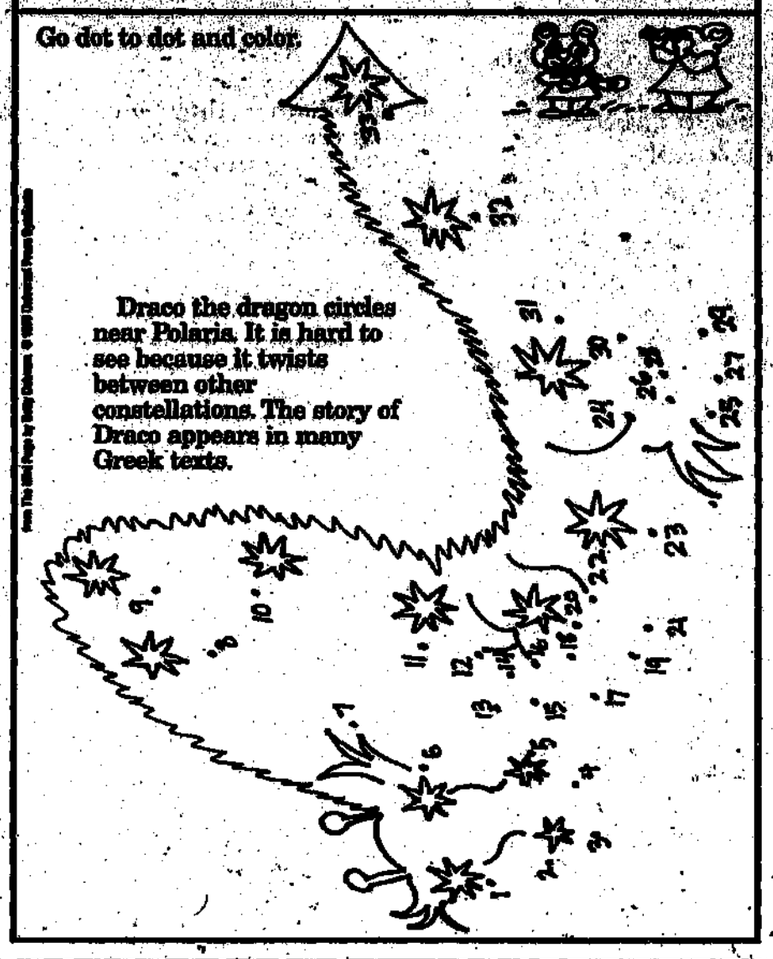
The Big Dipper is part of a bigger constellation also called the Big Bear or Ursa Major.

Cassiopeia has five stars. She was a queen.



Cepheus was a king and Cassiopeia's husband.

The Little Dipper looks like a little bear to some people.



Go dot to dot and color.

Draco the dragon circles near Polaris. It is hard to see because it twists between other constellations. The story of Draco appears in many Greek texts.

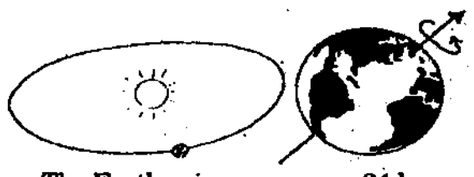
A Kid's Guide to Polaris



The Earth spins once every 24 hours during its year-long orbit of the sun. It is tilted at an angle. This rotation and spinning give us our seasons and our different views of the stars at night.

Hemispheres

The Earth is divided into four hemispheres.

We live in the Western Hemisphere.

The Eastern Hemisphere is on the other side.

This is the Northern Hemisphere. This is the view from the North Star if we were up there looking down. We cannot see the stars in the Southern Hemisphere.

This is the Southern Hemisphere. People who live in this part of the world cannot see the North Star.

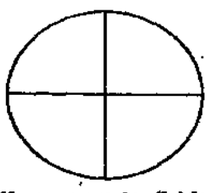
There is a link between Polaris and the parallel lines we see on our maps and globes.

This link has helped sailors and travelers for hundreds of years.

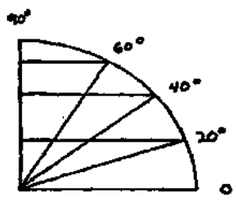
Slaves escaping to the North and to freedom used this link to help them on their way.

The further up in the sky the North Star — the further north you are.

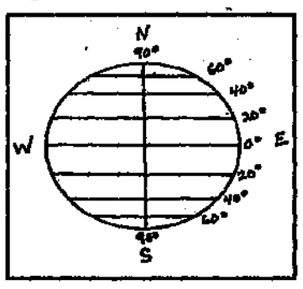
Not only does Polaris tell us which way is north, it can also help tell us where we are.



If you were to divide the Earth into quarters, or four parts, it would look like this.



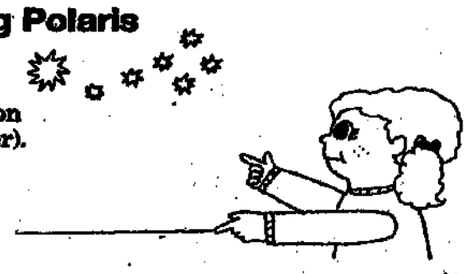
This is an angle. It has degrees. The degrees in the angle match the degrees of latitude.



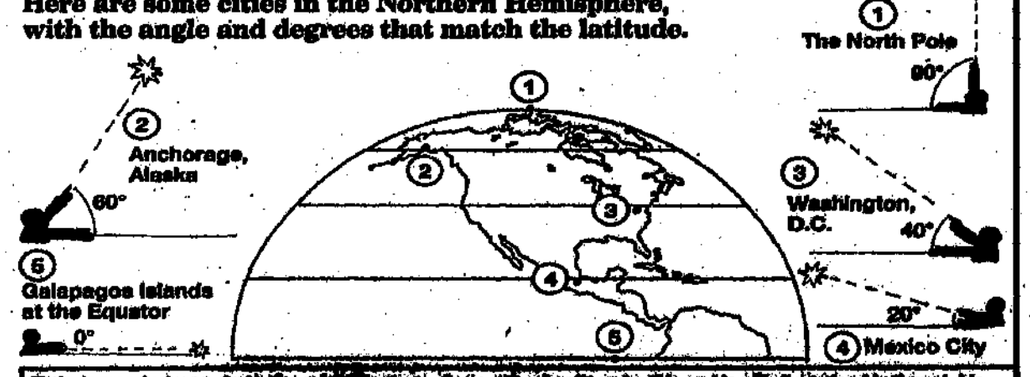
To find out where we are on Earth, we use imaginary lines. The circles that go across from east to west are called parallels of latitude. They are numbered from each side of the equator from 0 to 90 in degrees to the North and South poles.

How to find your latitude using Polaris

1. Stand outside and face Polaris. Point to Polaris.
2. With your other arm, point to the horizon (place where the sky meets the land or water).
3. Pretend your arms are measuring the degrees in the angle.
4. Estimate what the degrees would be.
5. The degrees would match the latitude.



Here are some cities in the Northern Hemisphere, with the angle and degrees that match the latitude.



This issue is based on the planetarium show "And a Star to Steer Her By" at the National Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., showing until October 2001.

Adrian, is in the day care, said the program gives her a chance to come back to school and finish what she needs to in order to graduate.

Cecilia LaPaz, also a parent, said the program helps deal with the stress of being a single mother as well as teaching about how to deal with different stages babies go through.

About the GRAD classes, LaPaz said she's learning about setting limits, how to child-proof a house, prenatal care, coping with reality, dealing with in-laws and relationships, and developmental stages.

"Mrs. Stanaland is a really great teacher. We could tell her about some of the problems we're having and she'll explain it to us so we'll understand. She encourages us.

"She's been really helpful to me during this last year of school and she's helping me get into college," she said.

High school counselor Linda Hawthorne said the value of the program is that it keeps kids who would probably drop out of school in school and gives them the support and resources they need to stay in school.

The day care is in a building on the edge of campus, she said, and since babies are not allowed in the main building, most students aren't even aware of the program and don't find out until they go to Hawthorne's office to drop out of school.

"They are not happy with the fact that they have an unplanned pregnancy," Hawthorne said, "and I tell them that I know another way you can do this so you can have some support.

"It's not a highly visible program, and yet it's kind of a safety net for those who find themselves in the position of an unplanned pregnancy and don't know how they're going to manage school anymore," Hawthorne said.

LaPaz said she never knew it was so much work to have a baby, or how much her life would be changed.

"It's really a challenge being a teen mom and trying to finish school .... You have to give up your fun times – you know, going out with other kids. I just stay home with him (Calvin) all the time," she said.

LaPaz is a senior, trying to get into a fashion design school in New York or California. Calvin now motivates her to become "somebody that my son can look up to," she said.

"He's the one that's making me finish school and push my way into the future."

Sandy Suggs/Ruidoso News

Tina Williams is taking childcare as an elective because she likes playing with children. She thinks more boys would take the class if they didn't have to change diapers, but "we're an equal opportunity class," said Julie Rigsby, co-director of the program.

Ruidoso recognized as 'up and coming'

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

While the village of Ruidoso over the last five years has appeared on numerous "great places to live" lists, the latest, and for those who are investment-minded, possibly the most impressive, is it's inclusion in "The Roaring 2000s."

The new book by economist Harry S. Dent, Jr., is published by Simon & Schuster.

Dent, a Harvard Business School graduate and a Baker Scholar, also wrote the 1993 best seller, "The Great Boom Ahead" and travels across the country lecturing. His new book describes lifestyles changes brought on by economic factors, including the growth of small-to-medium-sized companies that create new types of jobs.

The New American Dream and changing technologies could mean a return to small-town living, where people will be looking for quality of life and investment possibilities, he writes.

Under a section entitled "Identifying Up-and-Coming Resort Towns," Ruidoso is mentioned along with Bisbee, Ariz., Pagosa Springs and Durango, Colo., Moab, Utah, and Las Cruces, as towns in the early-growth phase.

"These are the type of towns that are still in their early, innovative stages and offer the highest long-term real estate appreciation potential, and the most authentic pioneering resort-town culture for the brave, eclectic and artistic," Dent wrote.

He advises looking for towns with a minimum population of 3,000 to 5,000, for eclectic populations that range from affluent to entrepreneurs and for natural beauty or recreation attractions that haven't really been discovered by the mass public.

Eva Kehoe, Dent's administrative assistant, said Tuesday the author doesn't do extensive quantitative analysis when pinpointing up-and-coming towns.

"Most of his real estate topics are based on his own personal observations and conversations with people in the industry," she said. "He has so many sources in every aspect.

He travels extensively across the country and has been in practically every small-to-middle-sized town.

Student picked for Spirit of America Band

Duane Duffy, son of June Denny and the late Shelby Duffy of Mescalero, has been accepted as a member of the 1999 Spirit of America National Honor Band for its 22nd Annual Performing Tour of Europe.

Duffy will represent the village of Ruidoso and the Mescalero Apache Tribe as an emissary to the people of Western Europe. He was chosen on the basis of maturity, performance and the ability to represent the best of American youth.

The Spirit of America National Honor Band will tour and perform in Luxembourg, Austria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Germany, Holland, France and Belgium. It also will perform for the diplomatic community as well as for thousands of people in Geneva, Switzerland, on the Fourth of July at a celebration hosted by the American Club of Geneva.

Duffy will join other selected students from across the United States, rehearse for five days in Atlanta, Ga., then fly to Europe for 14 days of touring and performing.

Duffy is a member of the Ruidoso High School 24K Gold Band directed by Robert Stephens. He is a member of the Mescalero Reformed Church youth group and the Mescalero Boy Scouts Association.

Duffy will be raising a major portion of his expenses himself. Anyone interested in sponsoring or otherwise helping him may contact his band director at 505-258-4910 or June Denny at 505-671-4423. An account has been set up at Otero County Federal Credit Union in Alamogordo under his name.

The Spirit of America National Honor Band is directed by George Naff, former conductor of the Duke University Wind Symphony and the East Carolina University Marching, Concert and Jazz Bands. George and Sue Naff and the Spirit staff are in their 22nd year taking bands overseas.

For information about the honor band, contact the Naffs c/o Spirit of American National Honor Band, P.O. Box 1249, Boon, N.C. 28607 or call 828-265-BAND.

POOP SCOOP

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

I guess I live in a cave, but the latest animal abuse campaign launched by the Humane Society of the United States blew me away.

The society is trying to make sexual abuse of animals illegal after determining that 28 states permit the activity or do not specifically outlaw sexual abuse of animals.

The proliferation of web sites related to animal sexual abuse is astounding, according to HSUS researchers. One web site provides links to almost 200 different pornographic sites that include the sexual abuse of animals. The site reports receiving about 46,000 visits each day.

The people who operate many of the web sites are aware of the criticism they engender and move or rename sites to avoid attempts to shut them down, HSUS spokemen say.

The Society hopes that measures against animal sexual abuse will be included in animal cruelty laws and is campaigning for that goal.

"The only people who would oppose a law against animal sexual abuse are those who are abusing the animals," said Ann Church, senior director for government affairs with HSUS.

Often called bestiality, animal sexual abuse is the sexual molestation of an animal by a human, which sometimes results in physical injury or the death of an animal.

While accurate statistical information on the number of animals being sexually abused doesn't exist, a 1948 study by Kinsey & Pomeroy of male sexual behavior found that in the United States, 8 percent of the total male population had sexual contact with animals.

That was 50 years ago, can you imagine what the percentage must be today!

"Many animal sexual abusers are similar to pedophiles," said Kim Roberts, manager of the HSUS's First Strike campaign against animal abuse. "They'll defend their actions by stating that their victims consent. The fact is no child or animal is capable of consenting to sexual activity with an adult human being."

Other sexual abusers of animals are opportunistic and target animals because of their accessibility and vulnerability, she said. A third type includes batterers, rapists and pornographers who may force others to perform sex acts on animals to humiliate, dominate, control and exploit them.

Just as in "straight" animal abuse, sexual abuse of animals by children is a warning sign that may indicate the child is being physically, sexually or emotionally abused, Roberts said.

Rescue 77 looks to broaden WB's audience appeal

The action series has a preview Monday, March 15, then moves into its regular time slot Tuesday, March 16.

The WB expects the show to attract 20-something viewers to the network, which has established a bedrock teen audience with Buffy the Vampire Slayer, Felicity and Dawson's Creek.

The regular cast includes Victor Browne as Michael Bell, Marjorie Monaghan as Kathleen Ryan and Christian Kane as Wick Lobo – the three musketeers of medical rescue work.

Richard Roundtree (Shaft) plays their supervisor, Capt. Durfee, and Terence Knox has a recurring role as an intense, quirky firefighter.

Rescue 77 mixes tried-and-true elements in a formula that seemingly can't miss. There are stories of peril to draw viewers in, relationship melodramas to keep them hooked and an attractive ensemble cast to carry it off.

Conceived by screenwriter Gregory Widen (Backdraft), the show comes to the network from Spelling Television, typically lightweight fare from the industry leader in soapy serials.

Network chief Jamie Kellner is pleased, saying the drama has "the potential to get the human stories and get the same action that's (been) driving shows like Cops for the last 10 years."

Producer Aaron Spelling, who loves to give actors a break, also loves to give audiences what they want. Few of his shows receive critical acclaim, so he hands out pats on the back himself. His indefatigable cheerleading would be infuriating if it were not so completely sincere. Of Rescue 77, he asks rhetorically, "Isn't it great to do a show that has action, but without killing people?"

Yes, and it's nice to know that if a boo-boo ever happens in Beverly Hills, 90210, the paramedics of Rescue 77 can be on their way just seconds after the cell-phone call comes in.

IN FOCUS

Word that her husband is having an affair reaches Linda (McDonnell) quickly via small-town gossip. When he moves out of their home, she retreats to the couch and TV.

Her mom arrives to find Linda and her children dealing badly with their grief and takes it upon herself to help them get their lives back on track.

TRIVIA

TRIVIA

Daniel Day-Lewis is the grandson of Michael Balcon, a longtime British studio chief. His films include The 39 Steps and Kind Hearts and Coronets.

FESTIVAL '99 March 6th -21st

Bee Gees: One Night Only

Bee Gees: One Night Only features Rock and Roll Hall of Fame musicians the Bee Gees performing their most popular singles from the '60s, '70s, '80s, and '90s, plus songs from their recent CD, Still Waters. Taped at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas in November 1997, the 2-hour concert features the timeless harmonies of Barry, Maurice, and Robin Gibb, and includes a special appearance by guest artist Celine Dion, performing "Immortality."

Performance highlights include "You Should Be Dancing," "How Deep Is Your Love, "Night Fever" and "I've Gotta Get a Message to You," as well as "Alone," "Massachusetts," "To Love Somebody," "Words," "Islands in the Stream," "(Our Love) Don't Throw It All Away," and many more.

The Bee Gees' first album, Bee Gees 1st, was released in the fall of 1967. With the string of hit singles that followed, the Bee Gees became pop stars. They are the only recording artists to write and produce six straight number-one singles and the first composers to have five songs in the Top Ten at the same time. Their participation on the soundtrack of the generation-defining film Saturday Night Fever shot them to mega-stardom in the mid-1970s. Featuring a roster of pop/disco standards such as "Stayin' Alive," "Night Fever," and "How Deep Is Your Love," the Saturday Night Fever album remains the biggest-selling soundtrack in history, with 40 million copies sold. In 1997, they were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

Bee Gees: One Night Only will be broadcast Monday, March 15th at 7:00 p.m.

Daryl Hall and John Oates in Concert

One of music's best-known singing duos – Daryl Hall and John Oates – takes to the stage in a new concert special, Daryl Hall and John Oates in Concert. The concert, recorded in Tokyo, Japan, features all of their biggest hits, including "Sara Smile," "She's Gone," "Rich Girl," "Kiss on My List," "Maneater," and many others.

The accomplishments of the duo, now in their 25th year of recording together, guarantee them a place in the history books: six number one hits, 29 top 40 songs in the 1970s and 1980s, and more than 40 million records sold. Daryl Hall and John Oates continue to build on their pioneering rock, soul, and pop musical hybrid by creatively blurring the lines between genres. Their most recent album, Marigold Sky, was released in 1997.

Daryl Hall & John Oates in Concert will be broadcast Monday, March 15th at 8:50 p.m.

Larroquette's return to TV is a dull Payne

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

The name is Payne. Royal Payne.

John Larroquette's latest character lives up to his name in Payne, a comedy premiering Monday, March 15, on CBS. The show moves to its permanent home on Wednesdays beginning March 17.

Payne is based on the 20-year-old British farce Fawlty Towers, starring John Cleese as belligerent, put-upon (and very funny) innkeeper Basil Fawlty, inhospitably disdainful, it seemed, of all staff – and guests. Prunella Scales played Basil's wife, Sybil, the much-maligned power behind the throne. Payne casts Larroquette in the Cleese role and JoBeth Williams as Payne's wife, Connie.

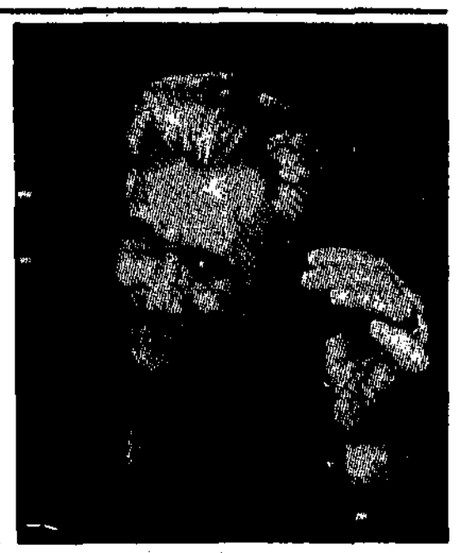
Rick Batalla co-stars as the Paynes' waiter-bellman-valet, Mo, imitating the Fawltys' Spanish bellman, Manuel (Andrew Sachs), cringe for cringe. Mo's country of origin, in a bow to political correctness, is not defined. The Paynes' maid, Breeze O'Rourke (Julie Benz), is a spineless wonder who is no match for the acid-tongued Royal, unlike the Fawltys' maid, Polly (Connie Booth).

Payne isn't the first time Hollywood has tried to scale Fawlty heights. An adaptation starring Harvey Korman never passed the pilot stage, and Amanda's, a distaff incarnation with Bea Arthur, folded in three months.

Though Larroquette and company hope the third time is the charm, this latest hommage seems halfhearted. Every show needs its own motivation – something the members of this creative team haven't come to grips with. They're still looking over their shoulders at Basil Fawlty.

"We can't do what Cleese did," Larroquette says. "We don't have the time to do what Cleese did." Instead, Payne appears to be saving energy for a possible five-year run rather than making the first six episodes good enough to keep the show on the air.

With the exception of Batalla's Mo, the performances in the first two episodes are restrained and uninspired, as the actors insist on their dignity at the expense of physical humor and character definition.



John Larroquette

Cleese spotted the problem when he read the first script as a favor to the producers. "His only real note," producer John Peaslee recalls, "was, 'You're not taking enough time to set up the farce.' And we said, 'John, you had an extra seven minutes that we just don't have.' "

As Mrs. Payne, Williams' reluctance to plunge in speaks volumes. Looking at her 1970s British counterpart, she saw only a battle-ax.

"I don't think (their) relationship would ring particularly true in the United States in this day and age," Williams says. "I said, 'If I do this, I want to create a very different kind of character from the woman Prunella Scales (played).' "

In doing so, Williams misses the quiet core of a woman who could run the hotel better as a solo act but keeps her incorrigible husband around anyway. The most interesting thing to say about Connie Payne is that she's glamorous.

British comedies can be adapted and succeed on this side of the Atlantic; All in the Family and Sanford and Son are two examples. But the people who produce them must believe in them, or no one else will.

It would be terrific to see a well-done American Fawlty Towers. And if the frenetic pace of first-rate farce were a drain on the cast's energy, the producers could guarantee CBS a set number of superior episodes for a limited run each year.

That's one British notion that is definitely overdue on U.S. TV.

TV PIPELINE

Q: Is Catherine Hicks (7th Heaven) married to Michael E. Knight (All My Children)? –M.E. via e-mail.

A: No, but your confusion is understandable. Knight is married to actress Catherine Hickland (One Life to Live). Hicks is married to makeup designer Kevin Yagher (Face/Off).

Q: My husband and I enjoy Jackie Chan movies. I say the lip movements of most of the actors don't match the dialogue because they are dubbed by other, English-speaking actors. My husband insists that the original actors can speak perfectly good English and the producer runs the film a little faster to achieve a "signature" kind of effect. Who is right? –Dianna K., APO address.

A: Read my lips: Chan's command of English is far better than my Chinese (which is nonexistent), but you are correct, Dianna.

Q: In what soap did Ethan Wayne once work? And in John Wayne's movie Big Jake, what part did veteran actor John Agar play? I have watched the movie 20 times and I can't recognize him. –Skip Freeman, New Bern, N.C.

A: Ethan Wayne – who played "Little Jake" in Big Jake, by the way – originated the role of Stephen "Storm" Logan Jr. in The Bold and the Beautiful in 1987 and has returned to play the role intermittently over the years.

Next time you watch Big Jake, watch for Agar as a character named Bert Ryan.

Q: I have been watching reruns of The Dukes of Hazzard. Why did two actors playing Coy and Vance suddenly replace John Schneider and Tom Wopat for a while? –W. Mayer via e-mail.

A: In the spring of 1982, Schneider and Wopat walked off the show in a contract dispute. Byron Cherry and Christopher Mayer were hired to fill in as Bo and Duke's cousins the following fall. Viewers were not pleased, and Schneider and Wopat returned in February 1983 after a settlement was reached.

Catherine Hicks

Q: The guy who plays Del in Caroline in the City looks remarkably like Matt Lauer on Today. Are they brothers? I notice there is a Lauer in the cast. –D. Holland, San Francisco.

A: No. Eric Lutes, who plays Del, isn't related to Today co-host Lauer. Neither is Andy Lauer, who plays the dimwitted Charlie on the sitcom.

Q: Whatever happened to Debbie Matenopoulos of The View? I missed the show for a week or two, then she was gone. –M. Hays via e-mail.

A: The official story is that Matenopoulos wants to try other things, such as acting. The persistent rumor, however, is that producers decided that her often ditsy attitude, mercilessly lampooned on comedy shows, just didn't fit the show's mix.

ATWT actor moving closer to daughter

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

It was a tough decision, but Nick Kokotakis, who plays Brad, is leaving As the World Turns.

Kokotakis wants to spend more time with his daughter, who has cerebral palsy. His daughter and her mother live on the West Coast, and ATWT is filmed in New York. "She is so happy there (in Los Angeles)," Kokotakis says. "She has a wonderful school, and it is the best place for her."

The actor says he knew when he took the job that he would have to fly back and forth between New York and Los Angeles a great deal, but it isn't enough. "My daughter needs a great deal of care, and it is just too hard for me to be away from her," he says.

Kokotakis will remain on ATWT until the role can be recast.

In other news: Bradley Bell, head writer and executive producer of The Bold and the Beautiful, has created a role for Andrea Evans (ex-Tina, One Life to Live). The actress will play Tawny Moore, Amber's (Adrienne Frantz) mother, on a short-term basis starting at the end of March.

Dear Candace: There seems to be a striking resemblance between the characters Paul and Carl Williams on Y&R. Am I on to something or just imagining things? Are they really father and son? –Steve via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Doug Davidson (Paul) and Brett Hadley (Carl) are not father and son. They are great friends on the set.

Dear Candace: I heard Sunset Beach was going to be canceled. Is it true? I'd like to put in a good word for Sunset Beach. It is the best daytime show out there. –Renee Bauman, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dear Reader: Despite the cancellation rumors swirling around both Sun and Another World, no announcements had been made at this writing. NBC receives a share of the profits from Sun, which makes a lot of money overseas. On the other hand, AW is owned by Procter & Gamble, one of NBC's largest advertisers. It is anyone's guess what happens next.

AMC's 'From Grit to Grace' celebrates role of leading men

By Jacqueline Cutler
©TVData Features Syndicate

How many dead men make you swoon? Truly lose your head and heave that deep, longing sigh?

Impossible? Take a good look at Cary Grant.

The gentleman who wore a tuxedo the way the rest of us fit into our skin died in 1986, yet he remains active in the pantheon of Hollywood leading men. Most are the quintessential American hero type: James Stewart, John Wayne, Gregory Peck and Henry Fonda.

But not all of the heartthrobs were good guys. Steve McQueen, Robert Mitchum and even Paul Newman played their share of men Mother wouldn't want you to bring home – but boy, did you ever want to.

This month, American Movie Classics remembers these celluloid heroes in "From Grit to Grace: A Celebration of Hollywood's Leading Men." The movies made by these screen legends are paired so each double feature takes the audience from an intense role (the grit) to a romantic one (the grace).

Jeremy Irons hosts. And as the celebrated actor says: "There are different types of leading men." Nevertheless, Irons notes, they all share one crucial aspect. "They have to have a particular quality which allows the audience to identify and empathize with them.

"They have to be channels for the audience's emotions. I think a leading man is someone we either want to be with or want to be."

Peck exemplifies Irons' description in The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit (1956), airing Sunday, March 21. Each time life throws Peck's young advertising executive a curve, he manages to do the right thing. Even at his own expense.

Sometimes, however, what draws the audience in is men who choose a darker path. But because these movies are so good and the actors so believable, we root for such antiheroes even when they are up to no good.

"Part of their ability to draw an audience to identify with their characters is to show them something in the character that the audience recognizes in itself, admirable or not," Irons explains.

In Firecreek, also airing on March 21, Fonda plays the leader of a gang of heartless outlaws. Fonda's unmatched virtuosity managed to make him the only actor in the series also to star as a good guy. In 12 Angry Men (1957), he plays a righteous juror who attempts to convince his colleagues they don't have enough evidence to send a troubled youth to the electric chair.

Sunday, March 14, AMC airs The Parallax View (1974), in which Warren Beatty plays a reporter investigating an assassination. Beatty is followed by Gary Cooper in Love in the Afternoon, Billy Wilder's 1957 comedy pitting Cooper's aging playboy against Audrey Hepburn's lovely young French lady.

On Saturday, March 20, Pocket Money (1972) offers Newman as a cowboy and Lee Marvin as a swindler working on getting themselves out of a tough situation with a cattleman. The second half of the double feature is Love Is a Many Splendored Thing (1955), with William Holden as a Korean War newspaper reporter and Jennifer Jones as the doctor who falls – hard – for him.

The last weekend of the series includes The Molly Maguires (1970) on Saturday, March 27, with Sean Connery as a radical labor leader in 1870s Pennsylvania, and The Prince and the Showgirl (1957) with Laurence Olivier and Marilyn Monroe.

"From Grit to Grace" airs its final double feature Sunday, March 28. In Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison (1957), who else but Mitchum's gritty Marine, cast ashore on a small Pacific island, could try to force himself on the island's resident nun (Deborah Kerr) and still end up playing the hero?

The series concludes, appropriately, with 1964's My Fair Lady, in which Rex Harrison's gentlemanly Professor Henry Higgins labors to instill his own version of grace in Hepburn's cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle.

Despite the decades and cultural changes since many of these movies were made, Irons says the emotions portrayed remain true.

"Fashions change, superficial things in life change because we move on and we like to feel we are progressing," he says. "We're not. Human nature has remained the same through the ages. The great ideals – morality, good and evil, humanity – all those things remain unchanged."

What Does Medicare Cover?

Medicare is designed to cover the cost of health care for senior citizens and the permanently disabled. That includes eye health care, too. Each year, the patient must pay an annual deductible, currently $100, before Medicare will pay for any services. After the annual deductible is satisfied, Medicare will pay up to 80% of the doctor's covered services when the care of a licensed optometrist is necessary for a health related condition, symptom or complaint. The patient is responsible for a 20% co-payment plus any charges not covered by Medicare. If the patient has supplemental insurance, such as Blue Cross/Blue Shield, AARP, or Medicaid, it may cover the cost of the deductible and co-payment. Our office will bill Medicare and accept payment directly from them if the services qualify for Medicare coverage. We will also bill the supplemental insurance company.

Anyone with a history of diabetes or headaches, for example, would be covered for 80% of the cost of a comprehensive examination and diagnostic testing. Medicare will also cover services for medical eye problems such as blurred vision, clouding, spots or flashes of light, glaucoma, cataracts, macular degeneration, eye injuries, eye pain, eye infections and other eye disease. Medicare will cover 80% of the cataract surgery and one pair only of glasses after cataract surgery. Medicare will not cover routine vision analysis, eye glasses or contact lenses not related to cataract surgery.

At the Family Vision Center our doctors treat eye conditions as well as diagnose them. Medicare also approves these expenses. If you have any questions about what eye health expenses Medicare will cover just call us at 257-5029 and we will be happy to discuss them.

Discovery Channel makes history with Cleopatra's Palace

By Cynthia Werthamer
©TVData Features Syndicate

An archaeological first is combined with a television first in Discovery Channel's Cleopatra's Palace: In Search of a Legend, airing Sunday, March 14.

Finding the palace of the legendary Egyptian queen who ruled more than 2,000 years ago in Alexandria has been the passion of French underwater explorer Franck Goddio. Before our eyes, Goddio's international team of divers and experts uncovers artifacts that haven't been seen by humans in nearly two millennia.

Viewers in the 142 countries where the special is airing will be able to see its awe-inspiring discoveries on the same day.

The event marks the first time in Discovery Channel's history, and perhaps the first time ever, that such a program will have a prime-time premiere around the world on the same date.

Cleopatra's Palace is the centerpiece of Discovery's "Watch With the World" initiative, which includes complementary programming airing during the week before the broadcast on the Travel, Discovery Science and Discovery Civilization channels.

Narrated by Alexandria-born screen legend Omar Sharif, the program explains the state-of-the-art methods Goddio and others used to pinpoint the ancient dwellings destroyed by earthquakes and covered by tidal waves.

Their destruction meant looking for "a massive underwater jigsaw puzzle," as Sharif puts it.

Goddio spent years researching with sonic resonance and a global positioning satellite, which resulted in the creation of a map of the underwater city. Between this high-tech research and ancient writings describing its layout, the underwater city was so well-documented that it was "hidden in plain sight" in a square-mile area of harbor, Goddio says.

Divers had no way of knowing whether they would uncover treasures or rocks once they reached the objects covered by centuries of silt and hardened grime.

Their discoveries are remarkable. Jewelry in pristine condition is recovered from a ship wrecked around the time of the great queen. One gold braided ring bearing the seal of a bird is so dazzling in the underwater gloom, it's as if we're uncovering it ourselves.

A poignant statue of a priest holding a holy vessel indicates a private chapel for the cult of the goddess Isis, whom Cleopatra worshipped. Cleopatra herself may have prayed there. It's chilling to realize those in Goddio's crew – and by extension, we viewers – are seeing these buried treasures for the first time in 1,600 years.

"The thing that's extraordinary is the state of the ruins is very, very good," says Emily Teeter, a noted Egyptologist from the University of Chicago who is featured in the documentary.

Modern society's entire idea of Cleopatra – her world, her famous conquests, both strategic and amorous – was "primarily legendary until Goddio's work," Teeter says. "We really didn't know what the topology of the city was. Now we can really begin to work with the archaeology, rather than just the legends of the city and the woman."

Goddio's divers use a new method of silicon sheeting to lift hieroglyphs and other messages off massive underwater tablets, which otherwise remain undisturbed.

Environmentally conscious viewers also will be reassured to learn that the magnificent statues, once raised to the ship for examination, are returned to their underwater beds. The Egyptian government will determine their ultimate fate. Goddio says he hopes one day to see an underwater museum where visitors may look through glass windows and see archaeologists at work, rather than dolphins at play.

Through its Expedition Adventure programming, Discovery funds and films breakthrough expeditions that uncover lost worlds and develop important findings such as Goddio's.

"We finally have a reconciliation of the myth and the reality of Cleopatra," Paleau says. "She is such a figure of legend, and we have found her palace. It's extraordinary."
