County bucks new indigency rules

Commissioners risk jail time by unanimously opposing the state health care mandate

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Against the advice of their attorney, Lincoln County Commissioners Tuesday refused to adopt new state standards that would restrict reimbursement for treatment of indigent patients by physicians to hospital emergencies.

"This is dead wrong," said Commissioner Leo Martinez. "As a commission, we shouldn't stand for it."

County attorney Alan Morel warned that if federal money is improperly expended, commissioners could face criminal charges and removal from office, but the elected officials said they wanted to send a clear message of disagreement with the new law passed by the state Legislature.

However, to remove the possibility of compromising the county treasurer, who along with one commissioner must sign county checks, the board agreed that until clarification is received at next month's commission meeting, bills submitted by physicians who treat indigent patients outside of a hospital will be processed, but payment will be withheld.

"Whoever signs the checks is personally responsible," Morel warned. "The client always goes to jail before the lawyer. You could lose federal money, and if you spend federal money inappropriately, they can put you in jail."

"I think we should take the chance," Commissioner Rick Simpson said.

Commissioner Maury St. John offered amendments to a motion to adopt a revamped indigent health care ordinance that reflected changes in state law effective Friday.

The amendments:

- Removed the requirement for physician treatment to be in a hospital only.
- Changed the requirement for emergency treatment only to allow outpatient treatment for life-endangering or permanent disability-threatening conditions.

Commissioners agreed to abide by the new reimbursement schedule, which no longer will be based on actual cost, but on Medicaid's reimbursement formula.

Morel emphasized repeatedly the commission was going against his advice to exclude any of the state requirements. He recommended adopting the ordinance without changes

Wilson says intersection needs change

■ Several accidents and a fatality in recent years are a sign that the U.S. 54 and U.S. 380 crossroads are dangerous.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEW STAFF WRITER

Better signage and, possibly, a redesign is needed at the intersection of U.S. 380 and U.S. 54 in Carrizozo, Lincoln County commissioners say.

Chairman Rex Wilson asked for backing Tuesday to request the state Highway and Transportation Department to take some action at the crossroads, which is marked with flashing yellow lights east and west and flashing red lights north and south.

Highway department officials called a meeting a few years ago to talk about the two highways as they run through the county seat, "but not where they meet," he said.

Since then, the unsafe intersection saw a fatality within the past year and four accidents, Wilson said.

When Gov. Bill Richardson recently visited Carrizozo, he indicated he would like to see something done, the chairman said.

"I'd like the manager to do some research and gather statistics" to be used to bolster a request to the state for short-term and long-term solutions. Manager Tom Stewart said he'll write the state and then continue to "bug them" every month about the problem.

Commissioner Earl Hobbs said rumble strips are good at getting the attention of drivers and could be laid on the approaches to the intersection, especially on the overpass, which blocks the view of the crossroads.

Sheriff Tom Sullivan said people are confused and assume when they approach from U.S. 54 and see a red flashing light that the east-west lanes include a red flashing light too for a four-way stop.

Wilson said highway officials didn't like the idea of a stop sign in the settlement of

Board maintains wastewater cost split

■ Ruidoso Downs will check for cracks in a pipe that may be bumping up its usage numbers.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A five-mile-long, clay intercept line will be checked for cracks and breaks that may be inflating the usage figures for Ruidoso Downs at the Regional Wastewater Treatment Plant it shares with Ruidoso.

John Waters, Ruidoso Downs city manager, said at a plant board meeting Thursday that, for now, the two municipalities have agreed to continue under an 85 percent to 15 percent split on costs associated with the treatment system. Ruidoso pays the higher amount. But he questioned the accuracy of that split, saying that the city is charged for more treated wastewater at the plant than the amount of treated drinking water it produces.

That incongruity means water must be infiltrating the 21-year-old pipeline leading to the plant that is metered to track Ruidoso Downs' portion of the operation, he said.

> John Waters
> Ruidoso Downs administrator

"When the flow of the river is higher, we noticed that the amount of treated wastewater is higher and that indicates a connection with infiltration," Waters said. "It's an incentive to find and take care of any infiltration, repair it and make sure it's working properly. We want to do our fair share."

Treating extra water that has infiltrated lines reduces the capacity of the plant for actual sewage treatment and reduces its lifespan, he said. Waters recommended and the board approved hiring a company to film the inside of the intercept line to detect problems.

The easiest repair may be going to the manholes above and below a crack or gap, then filling it with a rubber material blown into the line that hardens and stops leaks and infiltration, he said.

"We could drop millions of gallons of water a day" from treatment, he said. Fixing the breaks also would reduce the amount of pollution that may flow into the river from a cracked pipe during times when the river level is low, he added.

While the inspection is underway, the two entities also may detect ille-

U.S. 70 to carry double traffic fines

Speeding, seat belts to be closely watched on newly designated safety corridor

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Double fines for speeding will be assessed permanently along U.S. 70 between Riverside and Ruidoso Downs.

Usually, double fines are imposed only during highway construction, but because of the high accident rate on that route, the New Mexico Highway and Transportation Department designated the 38-mile stretch as a safety corridor.

The action was authorized by House Bill 95, passed by the state Legislature in 2002.

A safety corridor is designed to reduce traffic accidents and fatalities on specific portions of a highway that have high accident rates. The designation allows for increased law enforcement presence and increased traffic violation fines.

"The safety corridor is designed to make the highway safe for our citizens, the road construction crew and the traveling pubic," District 2 Engineer Gary Shubert said. "In 2002, there were 12 fatalities along the U.S. 70 Hondo Valley corridor. This is a grim statistic and we need to focus our attention on reducing fatalities on New Mexico roads."

Beside raising driver awareness of safety issues, the designation carries with it a mandate for more inspections of semi-trucks and tractor trailers, as well as better signage.

The 38-mile segment east of Ruidoso Downs will see new signs installed notifying motorists of the safety corridor designation.

Besides double fines, seat belt use also will be closely monitored.

Trial date scheduled for ex-Downs judge

■ Martin Valenzuela was arrested for felonies from the 1980s.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A former Ruidoso Downs municipal judge is scheduled for trial on charges of criminal sexual penetration, a 2nd-degree felony, and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, a 4th-degree felony.

Martin Grado Valenzuela, 56, is accused of incidents in 1984 involving a child between the ages of 13 and 18, and other incidents in 1985 and 1987 with a child under the age of 18. He was indicted by a Lincoln County grand jury in April.

Valenzuela left the area in 1987 after being charged with fondling a child. He was arrested in Levelland, Texas, in September 2002 on a 15-year-old warrant from Lincoln County. Levelland, a town of about 14,000 people, lies 20 miles west of Lubbock.

He was elected Ruidoso Downs municipal judge in March of 1986, but left either in June or July of 1987, according to town records. Harrold Mansell was appointed as acting municipal judge and later was elected.

District Attorney Scot Key was working in the area as a private attorney and public defender at the time Valenzuela was charged. He made sure the warrant was kept current in the National Crime Information Center.

"We want to put together a case that we can win," Key said after Valenzuela's arrest. "He skipped because of these charges. That's fairly plain to us and we think it's an indicator of guilt."

Key will serve as prosecutor at Valenzuela's trial in the 12th Judicial District Court in Carrizozo. Awaiting the outcome of the process, Valenzuela is confined in the county detention center there.

because it reflected the new state statute.

The new state law was meant to stretch the money further for those other counties that use their indigent fund to pay the annual sole-community-provider payment for their hospitals and run out of money before the end of the year, he said. Sole-community-provider payments (to offset indigent care) are federally reimbursed to a hospital on a $3 for every $1 basis.

> "...If you spend federal money inappropriately, they can put you in jail."
> county attorney

Teresa Montoya, county indigent medical care administrator, said Lincoln is one of only three counties in the state that reimburses individual physicians. A woman who said she works for a physician asked what a doctor should do if an indigent patient is seen in the hospital emergency room and is referred to a physician for follow-up.

"Where were the doctor's lobbyists when this bill was written?" Martinez asked. "Who was watching the boat?"

He reminded Paul Vordermann, who represents the Independent Physicians of Lincoln County, that the commission fought for two years to include individual physicians on the state's eligibility list for indigent care reimbursement. He warned that hospital corporations have a strong lobby.

Under the new rules, all treatment, including dental and prenatal care, apparently must occur in a hospital.

"We feel blindsided," Vordermann said, but he asked for a month to clarify the meaning of the new law. Vordermann said he spoke to the director of the New Mexico Medical Society and "he felt this doesn't eliminate reimbursement to physicians. We're very confused. I'd like time to investigate."

County manager Tom Stewart said he faces a dilemma at the county jail in Carrizozo if county clinics aren't covered, because inmates aren't going to be driven to the hospital in Ruidoso for treatment of the sniffles, "but that's what it's coming down to."

The county may have to pay for inmate care from the general fund instead of the indigent fund under the new rules, he said.

But Montoya said non-profit county rural health clinics that are licensed by the state also will be eligible under an interpretation she received. Cheri Nipp, director of Central System Administration for Presbyterian Medical Services, which operates home health and hospice care services in the county, agreed that licensed clinics and institutions already on the county's eligibility list will continue to be allowed reimbursement for services.

"What is not included are physicians who don't have to be licensed by the Department of Health," she said, adding that she thinks the state will require that licensing in the future.

Nipp said the county can take inmates to the local county health clinic. Montoya said if the county continued to contract with an independent physician for inmate care, the money would have to come from the general fund, not the indigent fund.

"There has to be some way to make them go back and address this," St. John said.

Stewart said unless the governor puts the topic on his call for next year's legislative short session, it won't be considered until 2005.

The new law also will require an exact annual accounting by hospitals of all indigent and uncompensated care submitted toward collection of the annual sole-community-provider payment.

-gal connections to the system and adjust that problem, he said.

Lincoln County Commissioner Leo Martinez, the county's representative on the wastewater treatment board, suggested the entire line be replaced instead of patching, but was told that would be too expensive.

In reviewing the annual budget, Ruidoso officials had proposed increasing Ruidoso Downs' prorata share of treatment plant expenses, but agreed to stay at the 85/15 split for now, said village manager Lorri McKnight.

Bob Miller, Ruidoso Downs mayor and a member of the wastewater treatment board, questioned how administrative expenses handled by Ruidoso are allocated. The $50,000 budgeted seems high, he said.

McKnight said all of the village's enterprise funds, such as wastewater treatment, are charged for administration and finance, which also covers human resources, engineering, purchasing and vehicle and building maintenance.

"We charge for internal services through the village of Ruidoso based on actual expenditures in previous years," McKnight said. "It may go up or down."

The wastewater treatment plant pays 11.21 percent of the allocated administrative costs for enterprise funds, McKnight said.

Waters questioned if the budget could be adjusted because to date only $27,500 is shown for administration and finance as expended with nearly a full year completed. But McKnight said administrative expenses are transferred on a quarterly basis and the figures in front of them reflect the balance as of December.

Waters said he'd like to see actual tracking of the exact cost of services, but McKnight responded that she thinks all of the funds rely on the administrative services and that village officials try to keep costs down.

Bagley pleads not guilty in streaking case

The Ruidoso High School graduation ceremony May 18 was interrupted briefly by alleged streaker Darryl Bagley, who pleaded not guilty to indecent exposure and disorderly conduct charges in Magistrate Court Monday.

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A former Ruidoso High School student who allegedly streaked at the recent graduation ceremony pleaded not guilty to charges of indecent exposure and disorderly conduct Monday in Magistrate Court.

Darryl Wayne Bagley, 18, of Ruidoso Downs, who is represented by Charles Hawthorne, will be sent for a bench trial or pretrial conference for the two misdemeanor charges, according to a court clerk.

Bagley was jailed in Bossier City, La., May 8, and will be tried on charges of obscenity for allegedly masturbating within the sight of another driver for two or three miles, according to the arrest record for that city. The female driver called 911 after Bagley allegedly sped up and slowed down as she did, telling police "she saw him masturbating as he paced his vehicle with hers."

Two Ruidoso High School faculty members signed statements that during the graduation ceremony at Horton Stadium on May 18, Bagley "ran across the field wearing only boxers, sunglasses and a shirt over his head ... and at one point his penis was exposed."

After learning that an arrest warrant had been issued, Bagley turned himself in to the Ruidoso Police Department June 13. At that time, according to police reports, he said he would plead guilty to disorderly conduct but not to indecent exposure because "he didn't believe his penis was exposed."

Ex-LCDC guard gives no contest plea in sex case

A former guard at the Lincoln County Detention Center in Carrizozo pleaded no contest Friday to criminal sexual penetration, a 2nd-degree felony, according to a 12th Judicial District Court spokesman.

Robert MacKenzie was arrested in connection with a March 2002 incident involving an inmate.

Albert Venegas, a criminal investigations agent with the Las Cruces office of the New Mexico State Police conducted the investigation and obtained the arrest warrant.

The jail is operated for the county by Correctional Systems Inc., a California-based company.

According to the affidavit filed by Venegas in Magistrate Court in Carrizozo in February, MacKenzie, 56, who lives in that town, was accused of engaging in a sexual act while in a position of authority over an inmate on March 4, 2002.

Cattle board meeting here to discuss TB status

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

New Mexico soon will lose its bovine tuberculosis-free status, says Phil H. Bidegain of Tucumcari, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association.

The issue will be discussed Friday at a meeting of the New Mexico Livestock Board in Ruidoso.

Two dairy herds in Roosevelt County were diagnosed with TB, prompting the state's status to be dropped to "modified accredited advanced" under the U.S. Department of Agriculture TB rule developed in 2000, he said. The exact date of the change in designation is up to USDA officials and when they publish the information in the Federal Register, he said.

"While this reclassification will have virtually no impact on consumers of beef and/or milk in New Mexico or elsewhere, it will have tremendous impact on livestock producers in the state," Bidegain aid. "New Mexico is the fourth state to fall under the federal TB rule. Michigan, Texas and California already are working to again become TB free."

The change will require beef and dairy cattle owners transporting breeding cattle anywhere out of state to test for TB. The test requires putting each animal in a chute and giving an injection. Three days later, the animal must be put back through the chute for officials to read the test.

The process requires labor and equipment, as well as extra care for the animals, as they are held until the test is read, according to information from the growers' association. Additional costs also will include veterinary services.

"Given the declining number of large animals veterinarians in New Mexico, even finding a vet to do the testing could be a problem," Bidegain said.

Under the federal TB rule, the state Livestock Board must develop a plan on how the state proposes to regain its TB-free status. That could take a year and another 12 months for the USDA to approve the plan, Bidegain said.

The TB rule provides the option of "regionalizing" an area within the state where TB was diagnosed, allowing the rest of the state to revert back to its current system of movement, he said. The NMLB will decide whether to regionalize at the Friday meeting in Ruidoso.

Even with regionalization, for the two-year plan development and approval period, breeding cattle moving out of state will require testing within 60 days of movement, Bidegain said.

The federal government waived the rule on the movement of feeder heifers and steers when Texas lost its TB free status and filed a plan last year. But individual states are creating their own requirements. Colorado, Arizona, Wyoming and other states are requiring testing and or individual identification of heifers moving to grazing in those states.

The state tightens indigent medical care

... and Lincoln County's commissioners object

The Legislature this year "fixed" indigent medical care in New Mexico, and by so doing damaged at least one program that was working well — Lincoln County's.

Henceforth, the state says, care for indigent patients has to be on an emergency basis at the hospital if a physician is to receive reimbursement.

But county commissioners Tuesday decided they'll fight for their program, against the advice of their own attorney. The commission voted to send a message to the state, by removing the in-hospital requirement for treatment when life-threatening or permanent disability factors exist.

They did accept the Legislature's decision that the physicians will be reimbursed at Medicaid rates.

The commission is hedging its bets, legally, by delaying implementation for a month.

Anytime the state makes rules to solve problems, the result is an "averaging out" that might improve the bad, but damage the good.

It all comes down to a classic case, for our county at least, of fixing something that wasn't broken.

The real Peggy Sue was here for Bobby Vee's concert

Peggy Sue was at the Spencer Theater a recent Saturday evening.

No, wait. I don't think you are paying close attention here. I said Peggy Sue was at the Spencer Theater in Ruidoso. Not just Peggy Sue. I mean PEGGY SUE.

LOOKING ASKANCE
NED CANTWELL

As in I love you, Peggy Sue, with a love so rare and true. THAT Peggy Sue. Now there was a song, real music, long since replaced by mind-trashing hip hop rap crap.

I mean, you had to be there. Center stage was Bobby Vee, one of your teen idols who back in the '50s was just an ordinary kid like you except you were working at a one-pump gas station trying to work your way up to a two-pump gas station and he was appearing on American Bandstand and had chicks falling all over him.

And here it is 40-plus years later and Bobby Vee has come to Ruidoso and you are watching him and he does this Buddy Holly medley and just before swinging into Peggy Sue he introduces – I am not kidding here – the real Peggy Sue for whom the song was named.

Peggy Sue told me later the song was first called Cindy Lou, but it didn't work and had to be rewritten. Her then boyfriend, later and now former husband, group drummer Gary Allison, suggested the title change. So it was that Peggy Sue, a 16-year-old Lubbock kid, became part of rock and roll history.

The Spencer evening and memories roll on. Bobby croons Devil or Angel and you are dancing with your bride of 44 years and – whooeee! – was that a sigh from that lady with her head is on your shoulder? God bless rock and roll!

Bobby Vee, it turns out, was a North Dakota guy with New Mexico connections. Back in the '50s and '60s, there was a whole rock and roll culture centered on Norm Petty's recording studio in Clovis.

Remember the '50s hit, Party Doll, recorded first by Buddy Knox, then Bobby Vee? It originated in Clovis. Clovis! In the Southern California '50s, we thought Party Doll was the product of some guy out of Chicago with ties to the devil. We thought Party Doll was racy stuff. (Come along and be my party doll, come along and be my party doll, and I'll make love to you, to you, and I'll make love to you.)

Cocky young guys back in the Southern California '50s sat with their girl at the hamburger joint, gave her a knowing wink as they played Party Doll on the jukebox. And if they got a sly smile in response, they figured they were in for a big night. Back then, though, a guy's idea of a big night and a girl's idea of a big night lived in different zip codes. A fairly serious goodnight kiss was a moral victory. Literally.

This Spencer evening has been, as we used to say, too cool. And Bobby Vee was just the beginning of a smashing summer season (check out www.spencer-theater.com). Ethel Merman's Broadway, Second City comedy tour, The Diamonds, El Paso Symphony Orchestra, more.

And in August, oh boy, Connie Stevens.

Talk about your party dolls.

Out-of-town owners should help the village

To the editor:

Before you read this, please be aware that I am not affiliated with any political party, nor do I regularly enjoy paying taxes, and am only trying to offer alternative solutions.

As planning (in Ruidoso) seems to be taken more seriously now, some of the priority items appear to be infrastructure. Some infrastructure items are water, roads, and trash disposal.

As an investor in a couple of Ruidoso homes, and an out-of-town owner, I would like to suggest a solution which I am willing to pay for.

My understanding is that the city and county coffers have a difficult time in providing funding to adequately handle some of the needed improvements.

So, with affordable housing issues indicating that many trying to support the eateries, hotels, etc., are not able to pay, what about out-of-town owners? We obviously benefit from rentals and (property value) appreciation.

Arguments against are that it would detract from investment if we had to pay higher tax, and detract from future real estate demand. Also, some folks come on a fixed income to live there.

Arguments pro are that if I can afford a second or third home, I can afford the higher taxes. Also, (the higher taxes) would hopefully be monies earmarked for better roads and a good water supply, not mixed in general funds. This would help my investment in the long term. Maybe (there could be) a conversion feature: When you move there, change your (tax) status if you owned from out of town before.

This is a "taxing" idea, but if you want something to work, it has to cost someone something sometime. I say it is an investment worth paying for.

Concerned taxpayer

To the editor:

I, unlike Dr. (Roger) Beechie, have no affiliation of any sort with LCMC other than being a concerned taxpayer who has severe reservations that Lincoln County taxpayers are receiving the "greatest bang for their buck" in regard to the operation of Lincoln County Medical Center by Presbyterian Healthcare Services.

All questions in this matter could be easily resolved through utilization of RFP (request for proposals) procedures to determine that we taxpayers are receiving the greatest benefit for dollar expended. My previous comments concerning LCMC operations were derived from an analysis of the published audited financial statements of LCMC for the years 2001 and 2002.

I'm not sure how anything can be taken out of context when comparing the results of operation as reported and attested to by "independent auditors." I am at a loss to understand the statement by Dr. Beechie that the Board of Trustees as appointed by PHS has no control over mill levy expenditures when the Board determines capital improvement expenditures.

I commend the 97.9 percent approval rating based upon patient ratings. However, the 2.1 percent who experienced less than a satisfactory rating amounts to over 3,600 dissatisfied patients per year. Dr. Beechie's cost comparison, unless adjusted for the differences in illness severity, is meaningless since almost all serious illnesses are transferred to larger, better resourced facilities.

Thanks for the feedback

To the editor:

Since the May 20 county commission meeting there has been lots of ink used and press coverage on the subject of a community center for our area. For the last year, I have been a member of various citizens' committees evaluating the possibility of a community center. While there seems to be a lot of negativism around the commissioners' May 20 decision, we think we gained valuable insight from the meeting.

We learned about the state of the county's finances, plus some specific objections to our initial presentation.

Members of our committee are very appreciative of all the supporting feedback we have received... The committee is still actively trying to find the best alternative for the benefit of all residents and visitors alike. Thank you, commissioners, for your feedback.

Keep it simple

To the editor:

As someone who loves to visit the mountains and Ruidoso, I am extremely concerned about developers trying to force their way in and doing what they want — new subdivisions, a water shortage, unbelievable traffic, more and more people. I don't wish to see Ruidoso become another Branson.

The small-town charm and the friendly people are what make it so special. Until you live in the suburbs and are fortunate enough to get away from all the fast pace and madness, you don't realize how lucky you are to call this beautiful area home.

It's like pulling teeth when I come for a visit to get in the car and drive home because I live in the fastest growing county in the U.S.

I look back and remember how small the town I live in was when we came here over 30 years ago, 17,000 people; it is now about 75,000, and growing by leaps and bounds. Save as much of your green space as you possibly can and continue to let visitors and those of us who hope to live there someday enjoy the small town charm and friendliness that we enjoy so much.

Don't let Ruidoso dry up and not have enough water for the residents too. I don't believe most of you would want to live anywhere else.

For the children

To the editor:

"A society must be judged primarily by the way that it cares for its young."

Per "The New Mexico Voices For Children" organization, our state legislators aren't looking out for the welfare of our state's kids.

Per the national "Kids Count" organization, New Mexico is pathetically ranked as the fifth worst state in which to raise children.

Of course, we don't need studies to tell us that we New Mexicans screw over our youth. All one has to do is remove one's rose-colored glasses.

If I had young children, I would leave New Mexico. I feel that all parents who are truly concerned about their kids would do the same if at all possible.

Since I have no offspring, I have the following options:

First, I could run from our young dependents' rampant, but solvable, problems by leaving New Mexico.

Second, I could emulate the vast majority of New Mexicans, including our county's people and elected officials, by doing absolutely nothing to improve the conditions of our state's youth.

Third, I can continue to be a voice for our children. I prefer the third option.

Reader, please don't silently condone the plight of our young dependents. Speak out; throw all of our county's current state legislators and judges out of office and vote for child-friendly candidates. Our children deserve no less from you!

Truly blessed

To the editor:

We would like to express a heartfelt thank you to all of our friends and family for all of your support and prayers during our daughter's recent illness.

You gave us strength, hope and made a bad situation easier to endure. We are truly blessed to have all of you in our lives.

We also would like to thank Dr. Syed Hashmi and Dr. Mary Martinez, the staff of White Mountain Medical and the nurses of LCMC for their professionalism and empathy, and for saving the life of our baby girl.

Council OKs civic center policy

Tiered rental rates, more payment options among changes passed for the facility

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A new, tiered approach to rental rates, which will offer breaks to events in off-seasons, was adopted for the Ruidoso Convention Center last week by the Village Council.

Excerpting sections that deal with contractual issues, they followed the recommendations presented by a task force last March that studied the center's operation.

Mayor Leon Eggleston pointed out that no changes can be instituted in food and beverage service because it is covered under the village's contract with Hawthorn Suites, which caters the convention center.

Charles Rennick, assistant village attorney, said that doesn't mean the topic is off the table for discussion. He is talking to Hawthorn representatives about some possible changes, such as allowing groups to handle their own coffee breaks.

Councilors Ron Anderson and Ron Hardeman emphasized that under the new schedule, 10 percent of all charges at the center, not covered by a contact with Hawthorn, will be deposited into a capital outlay fund to begin to build a balance for replacement and repairs at the center.

Village manager Lorri McKnight said several revenue sources for capital outlay at the center may be needed, because 10 percent of the projected $211,150 in revenue generated by the center annually won't be enough.

Eggleston suggested reviewing the rate structure before determining the percentage to set aside, but Barbara Crane, center marketing manager, said the center can't afford to wait a year before money is generated. Although some rental rates go down under the proposal, the new policy should encourage more use and therefore, generating more revenue in the end, she said.

Eggleston said the rate can be set by resolution and lowered if it is determined later to be too high.

McKnight said from calls she's received, it seems some groups are waiting until the new rates take effect before scheduling their events.

"So we'd like to adopt them now," she said.

The center was built with lodgers tax dollars, not with property tax or gross receipt tax money, Dean Fowler, task force chairman, pointed out previously. The tax's ultimate aim is to keep lodging rooms filled, and that means bringing people into town to stay.

The changes include:

- Restructuring the rental rates with the aim of attracting additional use of the center, particularly in low-utilization periods. The prime season is considered Thursday through Sunday from April through October, with no discounts, Level 2 covers Monday through Wednesday, April to October with a 25 percent discount; Level 3 will be all days November through March for a 50 percent discount. Events previously sanctioned by the council would receive a 75 percent discount and are considered big draws to the community, such as the annual motorcycle rally and the Christmas Jubilee.
- Revamping the deposit policy to eliminate some non-competitive pricing issues between Ruidoso's centers and others across the state.
- Charges for audio visual equipment will be based on actual replacement cost with an aging factor.
- Customers of the center will be able to use all credit cards in direct payment. McKnight said that service currently is not available, but can be set up.
- Marketing efforts will be redirected to larger groups.

Some way to fix Ruidoso's water shortage and thereby escape the fire danger?

Maybe a small bus to run along the main roads of the village on a regular schedule?

Encouraging younger people, those under 40, to take a large role in community life.

Public mural projects to enhance the downtown area.

Those were just a few of the hundreds of ideas jotted down by residents and visitors who took part in Saturday's public input day for Today, Tomorrow & Beyond, a Comprehensive Plan for Ruidoso's long-range future.

Plan committee members set up stations at the car show, Blues Festival and downtown kiosk to pass out surveys and talk with passers-by. The main station was at the Kidz Konnection, where those who wanted to discuss Ruidoso's future met with experts on water, transportation, arts, recreation and other aspects of community life.

Saturday's event was just the first of several opportunities for area residents to give their input to the plan which will be completed by early next year and serve as a guidepost to Ruidoso's growth for the next decade and beyond.

Councilor Deborah Marcum-Byars, chair of the Comprehensive Plan Steering Committee, said she was grateful for those who took the time to give input.

"Any single idea is one more building block in this important foundation for Ruidoso's future growth," she said.

Richardson pledges support in Billy the Kid case

BY LIONEL W. LIPPMANN .com
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson announced his full support of Lincoln County Sheriff Tom Sullivan and Capitan Mayor Steve Sederwall's investigation into the life and death of Billy the Kid at a press conference June 10.

"This is an important day in the history of New Mexico and the American West," Richardson said. "I am announcing my support and the support of the state of New Mexico for the investigation into the life and death of Henry McCarty, also known as William Bonney.

"To millions around the world he was called Billy the Kid. How he captured the world's imagination is well worth exploring. His life, although it ended at the age of 21, is part of what makes New Mexico, and the American West, unique."

The governor went on to say, "My goal is to shed new light on an old story."

Richardson's support for Sullivan and Sederwall's reopening the case of Billy the Kid's life and death came about after Sederwall and Sullivan contacted him last month.

The approach to the case, something that has never been tried before, will use state of the art forensic equipment and techniques to attempt to reveal the truth about what has for 122 years been the subject of historical controversy.

The governor has contacted both the Los Alamos and Sandia laboratories to ask them to use the experimental equipment that they have developed to locate bullet fragments and ground-penetrating radar to locate graves.

Richardson has authorized the State Police to supervise the investigation and crime scene analysis. Paul Hutton, Ph. D., and executive director of the Western History Association, will serve as historical advisor to the case.

Richardson also intends to hold hearings at the sites of the investigation once evidence is obtained. Presumably, these hearings will occur in Lincoln in much the same manner as Territorial Governor Lew Wallace held hearings in Lincoln during the Lincoln County War.

Richardson intends to examine events surrounding the alleged offer of a pardon to Billy the Kid by Wallace and, if the evidence justifies it, he will decide whether or not to pardon Billy the Kid.

More than 20 media outlets from New Mexico to Taiwan, and including CNN and The New York Times, have carried stories on the investigation, attesting to the interest piqued worldwide by the Sullivan/Sederwall case.

They're reading for radio at the library

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Children are producing a "radio play" on Thursdays in June for the Ruidoso Public Library's summer reading program.

The six children rehearsing last week had to take on extra roles because half of the original crew didn't show up the second week, and because the goal is to give practice reading their lines and projecting their voices, children can show up at any session.

The young thespians will perform "Marvin Mouse," a simulated radio program complete with announcements from sponsors about Nibble-Nibble Cheese and Mousetrap Insurance Company for other children and staff at the library the last week of June.

Brad Payne, 7, who plays the announcer and Jerry Mouse, said he likes the play "because it has little mice in it," and Aaron Winson, 11, who plays Marvin Mouse and Mr. Watson, said he thinks the play is cute.

"It teaches you to listen to your mother," Cheyanne Lanik, 8 1/2, said.

Workshop instructor Julia McGill, who has taught theater arts to kindergarten through sixth-graders for five years, said librarian Linda Bowman wanted to develop some new ideas for the summer reading program, and she volunteered.

A search for new ideas led to some unusual library classes this summer such as Kids Yoga, taught by Myra Romero of The Yoga Studio, at 2 p.m. Wednesdays in June, and Tae Kwon Do for Kids, taught by black belt Sarah Haynes of Joe Dan Yates' School of Tae Kwon Do at 2 p.m. Thursdays in July.

"Our whole program this year has much more of an enrichment focus," Bowman said. "That's why we're offering yoga, Tae Kwon Do and plays, to give kids some experiences they might not normally have."

The theme for this year's summer reading program is "Magical Mystery Tour: Every book is magic ... Every book is a mystery ... Every book can take you somewhere."

Children can sign up anytime during the summer to receive a reading log, bookmark and membership sticker, and as they read books, they add them to their log. When the log is full, they get Magic Money to buy fun toys in the Magical Mystery Shoppe at the end of the program. Even children coming only for a short time can participate, and the library will mail their toys to them, Bowman said.

So far about 175 children have signed up, but more are expected before the summer's over, and sponsors are still sought to provide a child with a book. The $10 donations are tax deductible.

Most of the classes and performances are given by volunteers who approached Bowman about helping out.

"It says a lot about our community; I feel really proud about that," she said.

Some special performances scheduled throughout the summer include strummer and singer Treefrog Blake and the Fabulous Foamheads' singing puppet show at 6:30 p.m. June 27.

Chataqua performer Bill Martin from Belen, will perform as the Great and Magnificent Swami Salami, magician, at 2:30 p.m. and as Harry Houdini at 6:30 p.m. July 11 — including some of Houdini's escape tricks. The Friends of the Library provide the fees for Martin's performances, with a subsidy from the New Mexico State Library, and the Houdini performance is sponsored by New Mexico Endowment for the Humanities.

Besides these activities, from 2-3 p.m. on Tuesdays in June and July there's Awesome Arts and Crafts — with puppet-making, cooking, quilling and other fun events, and all summer Preschool Storytime for children 2-5 years of age from 10:30-11:15 a.m. on Thursdays.

After the story, preschoolers go into the classroom for an activity or craft based on that day's story, said Sheila Fajardo, an assistant in the Children's Department. Sometimes that means a game or singing or dancing.

For more information on the summer reading program, call the Children's Department at 258-3704, extension 5. The library is open from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Thursday, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday.

NEA-NM supports governor's drive to change state education

Favorable September vote urged

SOCORRO – New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson will present the keynote address for the National Education Association's Summer Leadership Academy today, at New Mexico Tech's Macey Center in Socorro, to rally support for two public education constitutional amendments the voters will consider in September.

Question 1 would establish a new position, the secretary of education, who would sit as a member of the governor's cabinet. Question 2 would increase the Permanent School Fund's annual contribution from 4.7 percent to 5 percent and provide for an additional annual distribution over the next 12 years, adding more than $700 million into public education. NEA-NM has officially come out in support of both measures.

Richardson believes that state government, as presently constituted, doesn't provide a viable spokesperson with the authority to accomplish the goal of significantly impacting the state's schools. A secretary of education would become the chief education officer and leader, in conjunction with an elected 10-member Public Education Commission, if the voters agree.

Question 2 will fund critical measures by way of the School Permanent Fund.

Established in the New Mexico statehood act and passed by the U.S. Congress, lands and mineral rights were designed to produce income for education of the state's young people, by way of the School Permanent Fund. The fund has grown to $6.8 billion today. Of this, the fund distributes 4.7 percent annually.

Eduardo Holguin, president of NEA-NM, said the increase in distribution will enable the state to raise teacher salaries and the standards for teachers to attract and retain the best educators possible and to implement the new student assessment program and provide remedial assistance for students who need the help.

The governor said additional revenue is necessary to pay for the teacher salary minimums set forth in the new three-tier licensure system and mentoring program for new teachers, which is designed to recruit and retain the quality teaching professionals essential for school reform to work.

Revenues are also needed to implement federal mandates (largely unfunded) from the No Child Left Behind Act that requires new testing for students and additional help for schools and students not meeting minimum standards.

Participants in NEA-NM's Summer Leadership Academy will discuss a wide range of subjects in Socorro throughout the week, including "The N.M. Education Landscape after Reform: Challenges and Opportunities" and the effort to "Stand Up for Public Schools: Ensuring Educational Excellence."

Coming to the Hubbard Museum in 2004...

A T-Rex Named Sue

The Hubbard Museum of the American West has announced perhaps the most sensational exhibit ever booked at the museum or in New Mexico.

The exhibit, titled "A T-Rex Named Sue," is the largest and most complete skeleton ever discovered of a Tyrannosaurs Rex. The dinosaur will be on display at the Hubbard Museum in Ruidoso Downs from May through July of 2004.

"We are very excited about Sue's arrival at the Hubbard Museum next year," museum co-founder and vice president Joan Dale Hubbard said. "This is going to be a great opportunity, particularly for school children, to see a special part of history that we believe they might never be able to see."

The May 2004 opening will allow many school children to take advantage of the exhibit and come on school tours to see the most complete skeletal remains of a T-Rex ever found. The Hubbard Museum is releasing information about the exhibit early so that schools can contact the museum to schedule tours for next May. Space will be limited, so those interested in bringing students on a field trip need to reserve space as soon as possible. Information can be obtained from the Hubbard Museum by calling (505) 378-4142.

"This is going to be a great opportunity ... to see a special part of history"

Joan Dale Hubbard
museum co-founder

On loan from the Chicago's world famous Field Museum, Sue was discovered in 1990 on a South Dakota Indian reservation by Sue Hendrickson, a paleontologist working for a private company. She gets her name from her finder, even though experts are not sure whether the dinosaur was a female.

A long custody battle ensued involving the government and a rancher on whose reservation land she was discovered to determine ownership. Eventually, the Field Museum bought Sue at a 1997 Sotheby's auction for $8.4 million, the most money ever paid for a fossil.

The exhibit weighs 35,000 pounds, requiring the Hubbard Museum to reinforce the floor to accommodate the massive dinosaur. The fossil, which was more than 90 percent complete when discovered, is 42 feet long, 13 feet high at the hip and requires head room of more than 23 feet. Sue's skull is five feet long. The Hubbard Museum narrowly met the size requirements for the exhibit.

The exhibit includes seven interactive displays as well that will allow visitors to experience what it might have been like to have been Sue. Visitors will see the way Sue might have by looking through two viewers which compare Sue's range of eyesight with that of her prey, a triceratops. Another allows visitors to maneuver Sue's tiny forelimbs with the movement of your own hands and arms.

The exhibit and school tours are being funded in part by the R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard Foundation. For additional information concerning Sue and her visit to the Hubbard Museum of the American West, contact the museum office at (505) 378-4142.

NMMI alumni gather in county for annual trail ride

■ More than 100 former cadets met and camped near the Carrizo Mountains last week.

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The 14th annual NMMI Alumni Trail Ride returned to Lincoln County this past week, bringing more than 100 people to the area. Hosted by Alumni member and ranch owner Stirling Spencer, the NMMI group set up camp at the foot of the Carrizo Mountains for a four-night stay.

This yearly event is held on private ranches in New Mexico or a bordering state. The ride was held on the CS Ranch in Cimarron the past two years, the Block Ranch at Capitan in 2000 and in Quemado in 1999.

This year's event, held June 10-13, had 110 alumni members in camp, with 55 of those riding horses on the trail rides. Those that chose not to ride played golf, hiked and explored surrounding towns. Lincoln County had much to offer in the way of diverse opportunities.

Camp consisted of individual tents and RV's for campers as facilities for dining, entertainment and showers. The Garcia Tent company was hired to set up a large cook/dining tent and a tent for socializing and musical entertainment. A 4,000-gallon water tank was brought in to provide water for the crowd for the stay.

Morris and Terry Brown, architects from El Paso and Albuquerque respectively, enjoy a moment in White Oaks.

Kitchen staff from New Mexico Military Institute was hired to prepare and serve the meals. A dry, dusty, juniper-covered hillside became an oasis of camaraderie and reunion for the duration of the event.

Arriving on Tuesday, the trail riders set up camp and enjoyed the evening catching up on the year's events. Wednesday activity options included a short trail ride, a golf tournament that took place in Ruidoso, and a tour of the lava beds.

The actual trial rides had some guidelines: No cell phones, no radios and boom boxes and no smoking while on the trail. The time spent on horseback is meant not to be interrupted by civilization.

Thursday was the long trail ride, with lunch along the way. Riders ended their journey in White Oaks, tying up horses to the hitching rail at the No Scum Allowed Saloon and partaking in some shade and cool beverages. The flavor of the Old West was everywhere and the cadets of days past were enjoying every minute of it.

Golfers played the Rattlesnake Roundup golf match at the Carrizozo golf course. As a joke, a dead rattlesnake frozen in the shape of a coil, and rather large by the stories told, was placed at the fourth hole awaiting the unsuspecting players. It was the talk of the evening when stories unfolded about the dash to kill the snake with a golf club by one brave golfer.

On Friday the "cowboy" group of alumni gathered at a set of the Bar W ranch corrals and helped with a branding. For many it was the first time to see such an event. For many more it was the first time to participate in the actual work of the ranching tradition.

More than 50 NMMI alumni tied their horses at the end of their trail ride to the No Scum Allowed Saloon in White Oaks Thursday.

This year's participants came from Florida, California, Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico. One guest was a native of Hungary. The western life and the history of the area had him mesmerized. "I feel like I'm dreaming on a cloud," said Andor Abonyi.

Bill Brown, at 77 years of age, rode for the first time at an alumni event. As he leaned heavily on the rail at the end of the ride to White Oaks he said, "I haven't been on a horse in over 20 years. I'm feeling this, but wouldn't trade it for anything."

Carrizozo students feel artistic inspiration at summer camp

Jewelry, drawing among subjects taught

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

With the music of Mozart setting the mood, eight students enrolled in the Integrated Art Camp begin their action drawings under the tutelage of instructor Jamie Gieb. Gieb's husband, Mike, will be assisting and teaching throughout the week.

Using music to create the feeling for the action, students create abstract drawings in colors ranging from blacks and grays to the brights and everything in between. The Lord of the Rings soundtrack joined Mozart to evolve emotions onto the paper with crayons and colored pencils.

Day two of camp continued with another art medium called block printing. Students carved a picture into a 4" x 6" block of rubber to later be inked and stamped onto paper.

The designs began with simple lines and symbols. As students became more comfortable with their skills, more shading and shaping took place. Each student carved two blocks and two prints were made of each one.

Tufa carving is next on the camp schedule. A traditional southwest method of casting for jewelry, lava rock is carved into a mold for casting molten metal into shapes. Students will be pouring pewter into their carved molds to make pins and pendants.

Pewter is molten at 450 degrees as opposed to the 2,000 degrees it takes for silver, making it not only simpler to work with, but less expensive. Within five minutes of the pouring, the pewter items can be handled, making it ideal for a time-constricted art class.

The week will culminate with metal fabrication classes. Students will make jewelry from sheets of copper and nickel silver.

They will personalize designs by piercing the metal in a pattern or picture shape. A limited amount of appliqué will be included where design items are soldered on to the jewelry piece.

The jewelry-making techniques are an art form, but the fundamentals of it are the same as those used for making dental pieces like crowns and caps.

The class teaches a craft that is enjoyable as well as something that later could become a career choice.

Local 4-H members shine at Torrance County judging

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Six Lincoln County 4-H members attended the Torrance County Invitational Horse and Livestock Judging contest held in Estancia on June 6.

The novice horse and livestock teams were: Novice (9-12) Marshal Wilson, Shandy Grider, Jordan Grider; Junior (12-13) Kendal Wilson, Tyler Shropshire, Erin Hightower.

All are members of the Mal Pais Colts 4-H Club in Carrizozo.

Judging contests are used extensively in 4-H and FFA as teaching tools. Youth learn critical thinking and decision making skills as they rank four animals in order of desirability based on important traits. They also learn speaking skills as they orally defend the ranking or placing they have chosen in a given class of animals.

In livestock judging, meat production is emphasized. Muscling, size and fat composition are important in meat-producing animals. In horse judging, factors that emphasize the usefulness of the horse as a working animal are noted.

The Novice team placed first in both livestock and horse judging. Junior team members placed first in the horse judging contest and second in the livestock. In both contests, Lincoln County team members were the first, second, and third high point individuals.

Relay for Life deadline for teams approaching

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The deadline is approaching for teams to order T-shirts and to list sponsors for the Fourth Annual Relay for Life in Lincoln County in conjunction with the American Cancer Society.

Organizer Carole Benham has shifted her attention temporarily to lining up a roster of cancer survivors to participate in the Victory Lap around the track at Ruidoso High School July 11.

The lap is a chance for survivors to be honored for their battle with cancer and to be special guests at the opening ceremonies. Participants don't have to be a member of one of the relay teams, Benham said.

Forms to be included in that special recognition group are available from Benham by calling (505) 257-5310. She also will be at the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to answer any questions from prospective sponsors, individuals or team members.

The overnight event starts at 6 p.m. July 11 and runs through 10:30 a.m., July 12 at the high school track on Warrior Drive.

Under this year's theme of "United We Stand, team members can walk whenever they want with breaks, Benham said.

"A few years ago someone asked why we walk all night and the answer was because cancer never sleeps," she said.

Teams can be as small as four or as large as 60, there's no limit, she said.

T-shirts for the team cost $10 each. Booths will be decorated based on the theme.

"Even if you're not participating, stop by and cheer your friends, family and neighbors," Benham said. "We'd love to have the public watch. There's no admission charge at the gate."

No animals, liquor or smoking are allowed in the fenced area, she said.

Security will be provided. The area where tents for camping overnight are set up will be illuminated.

Carrizozo officer involved in wreck

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A Carrizozo police officer was injured about 6 p.m. Saturday when he attempted a U-turn to apprehend a speeder on U.S. 380.

Police Chief Angelo Vega said Officer Johnny Rivera was heading east on U.S. 380 when he passed a speeding vehicle in the other lane. While turning to pursue the speeder, his 2002 Chevrolet Impala patrol car collided with a 1994 Ford just below the railroad overpass at the U.S. 54 intersection.

The four people in the Ford refused treatment, Vega said. Rivera was transported to the Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso, where he was treated and released later that night.

"He was bruised up and is on medical leave," Vega said Monday. "The case currently is under investigation by Officer Jose Salazar with the New Mexico State Police."

Rivera was hired by Vega about 18 months ago.

Volunteers needed to build rock steps

BY DIANNE STALLINGS .com
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The New Mexico Volunteers for the Outdoors will be building rock steps and railroad tie erosion controls along the Rio Grande at Quartzite north of Santa Fe.

For those who enjoy working outside and are interested in seeing what it's like to join a dedicated group, this may be the time to try the organization on for size.

Sign up deadline is June 24. The project is scheduled for June 28-29 and will be led by Sally Porter.

She warns that poison ivy is plentiful in the working area south of the visitor's center by a launching pad for rafters. Waterproof footwear will be needed.

Camping will be available at Petaca campground, about 116 miles from Albuquerque off U.S. 85/285, and three miles north on State Road 570.

The fireside program will focus on the Camino Real, the royal road from Mexico to San Juan. Barbara Hoehne will prepare the Saturday evening meal with assistance. Sunday breakfast also will be provided.

Only eight volunteers are needed. Contact Porter at (505) 298-5197 or sport60@msn.com to add your name or for more information about the organization.

Recycling programs starting for old cell phones

BY DARREN MARCY
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

FARMINGTON – Consumers get a new phone every 18 months to two years on average. Usually, there is nothing wrong with their old cell phone, but a newer phone will offer more bells and whistles, such as a color screen, e-mail capability or better reception.

The old phone typically goes into a drawer or, sometimes, to the landfill if it can't be given away or sold.

Selling a used phone, particularly one that is a couple of years old, is difficult because new cell phone service generally comes with an offer for a new, technologically current, phone for free or a small cost.

The result, nationwide, is an environmental impact that will only grow in the coming years.

There are more than 135 million cell phone users in the United States, according to the Cellular Telecommunications and Internet Association, and more than 1 billion worldwide.

In an exhaustive look at the growing problem of out-of-date cell phones, an environmental organization called Inform published Bette Fishbein's "Waste in the Wireless World: The Challenge of Cell Phones," where some startling numbers were unveiled.

It is estimated there are 250 million old cell phones stashed away and 55 million of those could show up in landfills or incinerators this year alone, a number expected to double or triple by 2005.

A single cell phone doesn't take up much space, but it's estimated that in three years those little digital communication wonders will account for 65,000 tons of plastic and environmentally hazardous materials.

Toxins and health hazards such as arsenic, lead, cadmium, antimony, beryllium, copper, nickel and zinc are at risk of escaping into the atmosphere or groundwater.

Another problem is brominated flame retardants used in cell phone housings.

Since consumers aren't likely to quit upgrading their cell phones every couple of years, an effort to recycle many of these older phones is under way.

That plain cell phone in your desk drawer might not be useful to you, but it could help a woman in an abusive relationship reach 911, a poor family in a developing country, or even a charity looking for donations.

A plethora of organizations has sprouted to collect these old phones and get them, if still usable, into the hands of a person who needs one, or disassemble them for recycling.

A quick search on the Internet reveals the multitude of organizations willing to take your old phones off your hands.

One organization, CollectiveGood International refurbishes cell phones and then resells them in third-world countries, proving the old standard "one man's trash is another man's treasure."

CollectiveGood also allows people to donate their phones and choose from a list of more than 100 charities that can benefit from the donation.

The National Wildlife Federation Web site (nwf.org), for example, can receive a donation for every phone sent to Charitable Recycling, one of the companies specializing in recycling old cell phones.

A mailing label can be downloaded from the NWF Web site.

Sprint stores will take used wireless phones, which will be refurbished and resold, donating a portion of the proceeds to Easter Seals or the National Organization on Disability.

The Wireless Foundation's Donate a Phone Call to Protect campaign collects old cell phones to benefit victims of domestic violence.

Some phones are sold with proceeds being used to fund agencies that fight domestic violence, while other phones are refurbished and become lifelines for victims of domestic violence, giving them a way to call for help.

More information: can be found on the Web at collectivegood.com, donateaphone.com, or by telephone at Call to Protect, (888) 901-SAFE.

International scientists gather at Carlsbad Caverns

BY VICTORIA PARKER-STEVENS
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

CARLSBAD – From China and England, they came to spend time in a place known worldwide — Carlsbad.

As part of a karst conference, a handful of geologists spent the week visiting southeastern New Mexico public lands, with the assistance of Carlsbad's National Cave and Karst Research Institute.

About 100 people from 20 countries attended the International Conference on Karst Hydrogeology and Ecosystems in Kentucky, held about every five years. "Karst" refers to areas with ground erosion, caves and subsidence.

"(Carlsbad) makes sense, with this as one of the frontiers of cave science," said Alan Glennon, a conference organizer and assistant director of the Hoffman Environmental Research Institute at Western Kentucky University.

"To the international community, it's a place to envy in terms of its significance," he said at a barbecue dinner Wednesday. "The best international cave scientists want to come to Carlsbad. Everyone (at the conference) would have known a detailed history of the area. And caves are everywhere you turn here."

"Carlsbad is always right up there on the list," said John Gunn, Ph.D., director of the Limestone Research Group at the University of Huddersfield in England, who has caved in 35 countries. "So when the opportunity came, I took it."

"My friend in Canada said, 'You must visit this area,'" said Song Linhua, Ph.D., karst director of the Institute of Geographical Sciences and Natural Resources at the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

Group members said they found Carlsbad's weather hotter than home, but organizers noted they remained very focused and eager to see as much as possible.

With land agency representatives, they toured Carlsbad Cavern and Slaughter Canyon Cave on National Park Service land; Parks Ranch Cave – the second longest gypsum cave in the United States – on Bureau of Land Management land; and caves on U.S. Forest Service land near Sitting Bull Falls.

They also looked at features in the vicinity of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant and at Bottomless Lakes State Park in the Roswell area.

The area has a great variety of karst, which "only a mother (or a geologist) would love," Glennon chuckled, noting there were three types of cave/karst — limestone (Cavern), gypsum (near WIPP) and travertine (Sitting Bull Falls).

For the geologists, it was more than a scientific trip, Glennon said.

"Sure, you're trying to understand why a rock is in a certain spot," he said, "but you're still a tourist when you come to this place. You're awestruck."

"...You're still a tourist when you come to this place. You're awestruck."

Alan Glennon
conference organizer

And for cavers, visits often become the beginning of a scientific quest, Glennon said.

"Things here are so fantastic, you have to learn how did it get to be this way, what's behind it," he said. "That's how strange and beautiful it is. There are new things around every corner."

In addition to new formations, microbes are being found that scientists hope can solve some of the world's problems, Glennon said. For example, some in the Carlsbad area may eat contaminants, which could help clean up oil spills.

A relatively new theory that sulfuric acid dissolved the rock to form the Cavern also intrigues scientists, he said.

"You want to come again because new theories have shed light on the entire development of the cave, and there are more world-class resources yet to be found here," Glennon said.

"The way the (Cavern) is formed is so different, and then there's the sheer size," Gunn said. "Russia and China have large caves, but not like this."

Gunn said he was also interested in seeing the progress of Carlsbad's cave and karst institute, as it would serve as a model for a national cave heritage center in the United Kingdom he is involved in forming.

Gunn mentioned a national institute has clout with agencies such as the United Nations and the World Bank, said Louise Hose, Ph.D., the director of Carlsbad's institute, noting that idea had taken her by pleasant surprise.

Gunn said he was impressed with how the Caverns – a U.N. World Heritage site – is managed, and he was pleased with the natural lighting inside the cave.

Linhua is involved in the selection of sites in China for recommendation as World Heritage sites. Karst formations are very different there, he said, and include mountain-like features.

Linhua said he was interested in seeing how caves here are managed and how the environment is protected.

"The (Cavern) is magnificent," he said. "It is beautiful and has scientific value."

Linhua was also impressed with the lighting, which comes from hidden lamps, and the trails, which are narrower and don't have steps, unlike in China.

The rangers also give visitors scientific information, while in China they only tell stories — for example, "that looks like a dog," Linhua laughed.

"This is a wonderful time to talk to prestigious scientists from around the world," said Hose, who also attended the Kentucky conference with two other institute representatives and hosted the barbecue. "The (cave science) community is small, and there are many international friendships."

While scientists have been visiting the Carlsbad area for years, they don't always get into the city, she said, adding, "Hopefully, with the institute, we can incorporate them into the community."

Also, once the institute – currently located in the Carlsbad Environmental Monitoring and Research Center – has a permanent home, scientists can spend sabbaticals in town doing research.

"Our problems are the same — subsidence, ground water contamination, resource protection," Hose said of forming alliances with groups around the world. "There's no sense reinventing the wheel."

Congress created the national institute in 1988 to further research, education and management of cave and karst formations. The National Park Service is the lead agency, but other partners include the city of Carlsbad and New Mexico Tech.

The city of Carlsbad is planning to include the institute in its Cascades development along the Pecos River.

Substance, note found at airport

FARMINGTON – Several hundred feet from where friends and loved ones unloaded luggage and said goodbye to travelers at the Four Corners Regional Airport Friday morning, law enforcement and fire authorities worked diligently to secure and inspect a suspicious fluid found with a threatening note inside the lobby of the Mesa Pilot Development Center.

Farmington Police Detective Sgt. Ken Walker said that shortly before 8 a.m. a green backpack, which contained a brown cardboard box, a jar of liquid and a note, was found by a member of the pilot program. Walker said the note indicated "the contents were more hazardous than anthrax."

Although Farmington and state emergency teams responded to the incident, the case was handed over to the FBI.

Program designed to help loved ones of inmates

BY PEGGY NAJAR
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

This is a continuing series of health-related columns from the Lincoln County Health and Wellness Council.

Health and Wellness

Kairos Outside is a program designed to support women impacted by the incarceration of their loved ones. This is done by providing a safe environment for a short time with Christian people and the opportunity to interact with women in similar situations.

We at the program believe that the wives and mothers of the incarcerated are "doing time" right along with their loved ones. We want to let them know that there is a Christian community who cares about them and their needs. The weekend process will provide an opportunity to not only explore one's relationship with God, but to also experience a time of fun, music, great food and community.

Q: What happens at a Kairos Outside weekend?

A: The weekend is a series of talks by women sharing their life journey. Each participant has the opportunity to review the talk in small groups. However, sharing in the small group is voluntary. The program is interspersed with music, prayer, fun activities and general pampering. We expect the women in attendance to stay for the entire program. The weekend is Christian in nature, although no religious affiliation is necessary to attend.

Here are some frequently asked questions and answers to them.

Q: Who may attend Kairos Outside?

A: Wives, mothers and other adult female loved ones of men, women or youth who are currently or formerly incarcerated in any state or federal correction facility may attend.

Q Who presents the weekend?

A: The team members are active in the Kairos Prison Ministry in the various institutions through out the U.S. They come from many different Christian denominations and are committed to ministering to the inmates and their families. Several of the members are wives and mothers of inmates. The team is made up of approximately 28 women, several men (in the kitchen) and at least two clergywomen.

Q: How long is the Kairos Outside?

A: The program starts on Friday at 6 p.m. and continues until Sunday between 5 and 6 p.m.

Q: How much does it cost to attend?

A: There is no cost to the participants. The funds are raised by Kairos Outside and local Christian communities.

Q: Where do I stay during the retreat?

A: The weekend is held at a retreat center. The participant will need to bring bedding, towels and personal articles. Dress is casual and comfortable. A light jacket or sweater is a good idea.

Q: What about child care for my children while I am at the weekend?

A: Since we want the participants to enjoy the weekend and be worry free, we urge them to arrange childcare with their regular sitter or a family member; however, the cost can be subsidized by Kairos Outside upon request, depending on individual needs.

Q: What is the role of the men on the team?

A: The men are present to prepare and serve the meals. They do not participate in the meeting room activities.

Q: Why should I give up a weekend visit with my loved one to come to Kairos Outside?

A: The journey as a loved one of an inmate is difficult. Many of the people in the outside world do not understand your position and may reject you. This weekend is designed to give you support from Christian people who care about you and your loved ones inside. Many of the women on the team may be or have been in the same situation.

Q: What if I don't live in the New Mexico area? Can I still attend a Kairos Outside weekend?

A: Kairos Outside is currently in 15 states and four countries. Please contact us for further information or visit the Kairos Web site: www.kairosprisonministry.org

For more information call: Rev. Johann Anderson (505) 648-2846 or Peggy Najar (505) 648-2126. The next weekend is scheduled for Oct. 3-5.

Snow Skier just fast enough in Bayer Derby

BY TODD FUQUA AND KRISTAIN LOVELACE
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

TODD FUQUA/STAFF

Snow Skier jockey Juan Vasquez shakes hands with trainer Robert Cappellucci following their win in Sunday's Bayer Legend Derby at Ruidoso Downs. With the victory, Snow Skier is eligible for the national finals November at Los Alamitos race track in Los Angeles.

After the running of the Bayer Legend Derby Sunday at Ruidoso Downs, no one was very sure who had taken the trophy.

It was a photo finish at the end, with Bourbonstreetchick making a strong challenge against pre-race favorite Snow Skier.

In fact, Bourbonstreetchick jockey James Gonzales had ridden the filly to the winner's circle, hoping his charge had had enough speed to take the crown.

But when the totalizator board flashed the official results, Snow Skier and jockey Juan Vasquez had just enough speed to win the derby by barely 1/100th of a second for trainer Robert Cappellucci and owner George Dennison.

"We knew this would be a close race, every horse in here could have won it. We'd seen all of them run, and you could tell by the form that any of the horses could outrun them," Dennison said. "You always feel lucky when you're running a quarter horse."

Dennison said he purchased Snow Skier at the Ruidoso Super Select sale in 2001 based on his family connections.

"I also have his sister, a cross-out paint," Dennison said. "As a four-year-old, she's run 11 times and been in the money 10 times. When he (Snow Skier) came into the sale ring, I figured if he was anything like her, he'd be a fantastic horse."

Snow Skier was already paid up in the Rainbow and All American Derby trials before Sunday's race, and Dennison was merely using the Bayer Legend Derby as a workout.

Now, with a national race date at Los Alamitos looming in November, Snow Skier will use the Rainbow and All American as some possibly lucrative prep races.

Snow Skier's earnings of $22,453 Sunday brought his lifetime earnings to $91,319.

Runawayfun takes First Lady

Runawayfun staked the pace through the backside before making her move in the First Lady Handicap Saturday.

The 5-year-old gray mare won the 6 furlong race for trainer Henry Dominguez and jockey Mark Villa. After playing possum through much of the race, Runawayfun rallied through the final turn to win by a length over Respectmyauthorita.

"I figured we had a real good shot coming out of the turn because I kept looking for Take Out The Trash and he was nowhere in sight," said Dominguez, who had three horses entered in the race. "I figured we were going to win, but I wasn't sure with which of the three horses."

Runawayfun will next run in the Fern Sawyer July 6 and used the First Lady Handicap as a conditioner race.

"I think she will like the distance better in the Fern Sawyer," Dominguez said. "She is a better mare on more ground and wants to run longer."

Runawayfun's earnings of $18,840 Saturday brought the mare's lifetime earnings to $96,902.

They just want a place to play, is that too much to ask?

ON THE DDOT .com

BY TODD FUQUA
SPORTS EDITOR

A common concern about the youth of today generally involves their lack of activity — or general lack of enthusiasm to do anything active.

But there is a growing community of youngsters that do indeed enjoy the great outdoors — just not in the manner that some would like.

The activity is skateboarding, and while some Ruidoso residents would rather see this activity disappear altogether — one does have to admit the kids are actually outside doing something.

They've even got their own place to do it — thanks to the Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department — and now have a bit more equipment to do it on — thanks to the Ruidoso Optimists.

I won't lie to you, I happen to be an Optimist. In fact, I happen to be the treasurer for the Optimists, so I know good and well how much we've just spent on this little enterprise. I believe it was worth every penny.

On Wednesday of last week, I personally handed Parks and Recreation director Rafael Salas a check for $7,745 to purchase a pre-fabricated single pump hump/three-sided pyramid with curb rail two-by-four bank to bank.

In English, all that basically means just one of about 20 different components to an ever-growing skate park off of White Mountain Drive on the north side of town.

"We're hoping to get the total project done in about a year," Salas said. "We have a few avid skaters looking to do another fundraiser."

Salas said the reason the skating facility at North Park is so important is that skaters would otherwise ply their trade downtown on benches and sidewalks — breaking a village ordinance passed in 1996.

Running a park where skaters — and bikers, for that matter — can have their fun without harming public property is Salas' goal.

"We're getting a lot of support from the midtown merchants to put this together," Salas said. "They've donated a few item for raffles we've run for fundraisers."

One of the youngsters working toward a skate park reality is 16-year-old Tyler Barretta, who attended our weekly meeting with Salas and explained exactly what they're trying to procure.

"It took us about two to three months to figure out what would work," Barretta said. "We've got about 150 people involved."

That's 150 people from ages 12 all the way to 25. Skaters (both skateboards and in-line skates) and bikers all use the facility and all had some input into what kind of modules they wanted for the park.

Oh, there are some modules there now, made out of plywood and looking worse for wear just because skating is a hard activity, both on the obstacles and the skaters themselves.

That's why this new equipment is so important. It's made out of coated steel and will last a whole lot longer than wood, screws and nails.

And if they start looking scruffy after a while, what does it matter? It's equipment the skaters worked hard to raise money for, after all. It's their time they invested to get this equipment.

What's more, all of this is in a controlled environment. Because the park is Ruidoso property, all insurance applies, and park rules and regulations are prominently displayed. Anyone using the park comes in knowing the risks involved.

But the risks are better than possible arrest for crimi-

Four other county residents made the trip the Virginia to compete: Christopher Carson, long jump; Galen Farrington, cycling; Cindy Sanchez and Martha Chavez, doubles bowling.

McDougal finishes second in division

TUCSON, Ariz. — Ruidoso High School junior Heather McDougal braved 100-plus-degree temperatures and a round of 23 players to win the second-place trophy in the girls 16s Silver Division at the 2003 Southwest Junior Closed tennis tournament June 6-10 at the El Conquistador Tennis Resort.

McDougal

McDougal, the No. 5 seed, drew an opening round bye prior to beating Tiffany Robb of Phoenix 6-1, 6-1 to advance to the quarterfinals. She then faced Amanda Lewis of Prescott, Ariz., the No. 4 seed. Lewis captured the first set in a tie-breaker 7-6, but lost the next two sets to McDougal 6-4, 6-0 to end the 2 1/2-hour match.

In semi-final play, McDougal played Courtney Littlepage of El Paso, the tourney's No. 2 seed. McDougal continued her strong and aggressive style of play to defeat Littlepage in another 2 1/2-hour match, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The championship match of the tournament was not intimidating, but the efforts of the previous day — three matches, six hours of play — were factors. McDougal lost to the No. 1 seed, Hannah Johnson of Los Alamos. 0-6, 1-6.

In doubles play, the team of McDougal and LaFerriere defeated Cox and Raghaven of Tucson 8-5, but then lost to Federgreen and Adewimi of Phoenix, 8-2.

McDougal plays this weekend at the Hobbs Dust Bowl Tournament in preparation for the USTA National Open Championships in El Paso June 28-July 2 at the El Paso Youth Tennis Center.

"The kids have got to have a place to go," said Optimist president Phil DiPalo. "If they don't have something to do, they'll find something to do most people won't like."

True, most still don't like skating and the culture surrounding it, but I'd like to think most of the kids involved in building this park are good, hard-working individuals. They're working to create someplace positive for active kids to go and I, for one, applaud them for it.

After all, we Optimists wouldn't have handed over that big check if we didn't think this wasn't a good idea.

POOP SCOOP

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Sometimes one size doesn't fit all when it comes to training dogs.

Author Judith Halliburton in her "Raising Rover" book takes a look at different breed personality characteristics based on their original purposes and offers some advice about the best training approaches.

For the next few weeks, I'll pull some examples from her book, which was published by St. Martin's Press in New York.

• Airedales

Bred to hunt and kill otters, wolves and wild boars, they have a fearsome history.

Halliburton points to their versatility, which includes carrying messages for the military and working as a police dog.

They tend to focus intently on one thing at a time, she warned. That may lead to accidents in the house while trying to train them, if something else is more interesting. They're extremely playful as puppies.

"Take advantage of that," she writes. "When play stops, scoop him up immediately and get him outside. He'll have an elimination almost as soon as you get him out."

Airedales can be serious fighters, she said.

If you have multiple dogs, you must be the undeniable leader to prevent confusion and maintain control, she emphasizes. Halliburton doesn't favor direct eye contact.

"Whether Rover is an eight-week-old puppy or a two-year-old adult, the instant you avert your eyes, it's Round One for Rover," she writes. Halliburton doesn't recommend having more than one dog if you own an Airedale because they fight for real. On the flip side, they can be gentle and patient with children.

An owner should show an Airedale plenty of affection, because he could become visibly depressed and possibly destructive without love.

She describes Airedales as workers and proud dogs, who will throw themselves into their training.

"Train Rover with a firm, but kind hand and a show of respect," Halliburton writes. "You're going to come up against a strong will, and you may see out-and-out defiance. Hang in there....once he accepts the fact that you're serious, he'll come along just fine."

Remember, they like to have a job to do.

• Siberian Husky

They're bred to race sleds, not pull heavy loads over long distances, Halliburton writes

They also aren't particularly easy to housetrain, but naturally prefer to eliminate outside. Don't spend a lot of time praising or disciplining, she recommends.

Her big warning is that a Husky loves to dig and that often leads to the dogs losing their homes. She advises that his ancestry and instinct tell a Husky to dig in the dirt to cool off and dig in snow to stay warm.

"The more emphasis you place on digging, the more it will go on," she writes. "If you don't make a big deal out of it, he'll dig a few holes, keep a couple of favorites and grow out of it."

She describes young Huskies as hyper and loving. They don't know a stranger and often exhibit that acceptance physically, she writes.

"Huskies do everything with a passion," she writes, but adds with age, that unbridled enthusiasm will be tempered a bit. Two summers usually takes care of the hyperactive behavior, she writes.

He will focus his loyalty on one person and by about 18 months should become a wonderful companion. Huskies are good with children "old enough to hold their own against his activity level," she writes.

To train a Husky, be ready for your patience to be tried, she warns. Stay calm no matter what. The first try with a collar and leash may be a battle. Getting to the front door may be enough for the first round, she advises.

Stay in charge and allow him the time necessary to learn, which may not be the same as a neighbor's dog. Blue-eyed Huskies will be light sensitive, she notes. Don't try to train him when bright sun is in his eyes.

PSYCHIC PREDICTIONS

Judith L. Christopher

Week of June 18 - 24

GEMINI:
(May 21 - Jun 20)
It's your time to rock and roll. You can either lay there like a rock, or roll out, and get moving with the flow! A great time for starting something new.

CANCER:
(Jun 21 - Jul 22)
Beware of what you don't know. Don't assume that you know everything there is to know about what you should know already! Know it all.

LEO:
(Jul 23 - Aug 22)
Take a trip. Not just a business trip, but something that will get you out of what you call Normal Life, as you know it now. Think out of the box.

VIRGO:
(Aug 23 - Sep 22)
Now where did you lay down your life? Oh yeah, that something you call a job? You can do better, even if it's doing the same thing. Ask for a raise.

LIBRA:
(Sept 23 - Oct 22)
You can call the shots, if you know where to aim, and how to hit the arrow in the heart! With love. You're in the drivers seat now, so drive on.

SCORPIO:
(Oct 23 - Nov 21)
When it comes to love, sometimes you just want to give up, instead of changing things that could help your love life. Don't give up. Talk about it.

SAGITTARIUS:
(Nov 22 - Dec 21)
You're trying to cut the pie into too many pieces. Find three things that you are good at, or you really want to do. You could make a lot of money.

CAPRICORN:
(Dec 22 - Jan 19)
You've got it. Now what? You have always had it, you just didn't know how to use it. Use it or lose it. What are you waiting for? Just go do it.

AQUARIUS:
(Jan 20 - Feb 18)
Are you going to rust out, or wear out? Either way you're wasting time and money by not doing what you're supposed to be doing. It's time for it now.

PISCES:
(Feb 19 - Mar 20)
You have no excuses to stop yourself, except that you are scared of the unknown. Have faith, and you'll be able to climb any mountain. Hike on.

ARIES:
(Mar 21 - Apr 19)
Your money can go further, when you plan ahead and make sure you don't spend anything that you can't afford to lose at this time. It'll get better.

TAURUS:
(Apr 20 - May 20)
People don't understand you half the time, because you're trying to do for them, and not for yourself. It's time you take the bull by the horns.
