Flood victims speak up

Homeowners get updates from village officials

Dianne Stallings

One of the major worries for Bob and Kay Ruhl remains whether emergency vehicles can reach their home across a temporary replacement for McDaniel Bridge, the only access to Mountain View Drive in Upper Canyon.

The Ruhls joined about 30 other people at Village Hall Monday still reeling, effect from the record Aug. 22 flood on the Ruidoso River and wondering when road, bridge and utility repairs will be completed.

Ruidoso Public Works Director Randall Camp assured the Ruhls and Riverside Street resident James Roof that the bridge is checked daily and ambulances or fire engines could use the connection, if necessary.

The route may be closed for a day or two when the time comes to install another temporary structure, a concrete box culvert, which will be used until a span type bridge is designed, approved by federal agencies and constructed, he said.

Camp said the village will begin receiving the specifically tailored concrete box culverts in about five weeks and bridges will be replaced in priority order with the structures as temporary fixes. But the span design is the best solution to avoid debris collecting at bridge sites, causing water to backup and spill over the river banks, he said. Infrastructure damage from the last flood in the village is estimated to exceed $27 million.

Roof, who said his 90-year-old mother had to be evacuated by mule during the flood, said he's worried about getting out and fire engines getting in if a blaze broke out.

Fox TV's Willard back in Ruidoso

■ Happy Hour host blasts bailout proposal

Todd Fuqua

It doesn't take much to get Cody Willard riled up about the $700 billion Wall Street bailout package recently defeated by the U.S. House of Representatives.

"We've had 200 years of private ownership of profits and losses, and somewhere, we came up with the idea that we could never have a down year," Willard said. "Not every year will be an up year."

Willard, a Ruidoso native who co-hosts the show Happy Hour on the Fox Business Network in New York, was in town Monday and Tuesday [illegible]

As such, when Willard speaks about the state of the national economy and the government's attempt to bail out some major investment firms, his word stands to carry some weight.

If the Depression taught us anything, it's that government socialism only exacerbates the problem," Willard said. "This

Siren test

Get ready for a big blast at noon today.

Ruidoso emergency services officials will test the village's siren system to determine if they are functioning at the proper levels.

The system is designed to alert residents and visitors to tune in to local radio stations for information on emergency situations that could range from fire to flood, from evacuation to staying safe at home.

Ruidoso Downs officials will test that city's sirens at the same time.

A run of the Reverse 911 telephone message alert system also will begin today and continue for three to four more days as sections of Ruidoso's residences and businesses are dialed.

Village Emergency Management Coordinator Tom Schafer said he would like feedback and suggestions for improvements from those receiving the calls. He can be reached at thomasschafer@ruidoso-nm.gov.

Alto Lakes

The Alto Lakes Special Zoning District Commission will meet at 9 a.m., Oct. 2, in the Stag Room at the Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club, 1 Mulligan Dr., Alto.

The final agenda for the meeting will be published 24 hours to 48 hours prior to the meeting and will be posted on the bulletin board of the Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club.

Jean Coulton will share what she has learned about staying healthy and living longer through nutrition and healthful practices at the First Friday lecture series sponsored by the Capitan Public Library.

Coulton has studied the subject extensively through books and lectures and will provide simple ways to achieve a healthier body. She has discovered that there is truth in the old saying "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

The program begins at 7 p.m., Friday, at the library, 101 E. 2nd St. in Capitan.

The Capitan Library volunteers will provide refreshments after the program. The First Friday lectures are free of charge.

The meeting will be held at the Sheriff's Substation (next to the Library), Kansas City Rd., Ruidoso, New Mexico.

GOP speaker

Manuel Gonzales spoke to members of the Federated Republican Women of Lincoln County, Sept. 23, at their monthly meeting at the Ellis Store in Lincoln.

Field Deputy for Congressman Steve Pearce, who is running for the U.S. Senate, Gonzales emphasized the need for voters to become involved in the political process.

He said personal advocacy is the most effective campaign strategy and encouraged the audience to take every opportunity to talk to their family, friends, and neighbors about the issues and the candidates they support.

Gonzales discussed the importance of bumper stickers, campaign buttons and yard signs. "A bumper sticker is said to be worth $250 (campaign) dollars," Gonzales said, adding that if a supporter is concerned by poll numbers, making calls encouraging others to vote is a recommended action.

"The only poll that really counts is the one taken by ballot on Nov. 4," he added.

The Oct. 28 and Nov. 18 FRWLC meetings will be at La Quinta Inn and Suites in Ruidoso Downs.

Teague visit

The Democratic Party of Lincoln County (DPLC) welcomes Harry Teague, candidate for US Congress, 2nd District, Thursday, Oct. 2, at 5:30 p.m., at the DPLC office, 1309 Sudderth Dr.

Everyone is invited.

The DLPC will have its regular monthly meeting at 6 p.m., same location. After the meeting, there will be a party to watch the first vice-presidential de-bate between Sen. Joe Biden and Gov. Sarah Palin, from 7 - 9 p.m.

Human trafficking

The New Mexico Attorney General's office, Border Violence Division, in conjunction with the Southeastern New Mexico Human Trafficking Work Group, will stage a training workshop designed for Law Enforcement Officers and Health Care Providers at the Convention Center on Tuesday, Oct. 7.

The morning session has two separate tracks, and the afternoon presentations are of equal interest to the two groups. A working lunch will be served. All is free of charge. For those who wish to earn credits there is a nominal charge of $25. Credits are APA approved. Seating is limited, but if you register, there is still a chance. Contact Mark at COPE, 257-4946.

Until recently, little was known about "the flesh trade." It is said that knowledge about human trafficking is about where Domestic Violence was 30 years ago. The practice is extremely clandestine and more lucrative even than drug trafficking. You can only sell a drug once, but a woman, a child, or a man over and over again.

Slavery was abolished in 1863, but we often refer to what is happening today as Modern-day Slavery.

This involuntary servitude, most often in the form of forced prostitution, but also as sweatshops, household, farm or construction workers, is alive and kicking. It is the fastest growing illegal market and the greatest violation of human rights today.

Even if you are not professionally involved, anyone can benefit from learning about the methods used by traffickers who present an enormous threat to our families. Parents, teachers and others who deal with children and youth would benefit from gaining this information.

Awareness of human trafficking is minimal, and to prevent something, you have to know the nature of the beast. It is necessary that the whole community get involved. Often it is a neighbor that notices a young girl that doesn't go to school, or curtained windows in a house or someone who is never seen alone - and there are many ways citizens can become involved.

County considers procedural changes in lodgers tax requests

dstallings@ruidosonews.com

In the future, requests for Lincoln County lodgers tax money to promote tourism events may be handled differently.

County commissioners last week approved $3,000 for promotion of the annual Billy the Kid Pageant, although the event already occurred and commissioners have a policy against funding after the fact.

County manager Tom Stewart explained that at the commission's August meeting, members took independent action on six lodging tax requests, because the Lodgers Tax Committee couldn't muster a quorum that month to submit recommendations.

"It has been brought to my attention by Commissioner (Jackie) Powell that the Billy the Kid Pageant funding request was not heard by the nonquorum of the County Lodgers Tax Committee Aug. 1," Stewart said.

"In fairness to the group, I recommend funding of $3,000 for the activity that already occurred."

Stewart said he's also considering limiting committee meetings to one or two a year with all requesters appearing, instead of monthly.

"The Lodgers Tax Committee could then make a recommendation for the funding for a year, or perhaps six months, and I could program the funding," he said.

Commissioner Eileen Lovelace asked why pageant officials waited to submit a request when the event is staged annually.

Powell said they tried for action earlier, but the committee didn't meet.

"I have no problem giving them the money," Lovelace said. "But this happens year after year. For that and a lot of other reasons I don't think one or two meetings a year would work.

"When it's an annual event, they need to be put on a list where they automatically become part of the committee's considerations.

"Simply because of the (state of the) economy, I don't think one or two meetings a year would work, especially when new events come up."

Stewart said he sought input through the committee chairman on possible changes, but didn't receive any feedback from members.

Lovelace said she spoke to three committee members and they never received word he was looking for input.

"There definitely has been frustration for the last couple of months with groups trying to get on the agenda and there is no quorum [of the County Lodgers Tax Committee]," said County Manager Tom Stewart.

"Apparently, the word didn't get out," she said.

Stewart said he will e-mail each of the members individually.

Commissioner Dave Parks suggested quarterly meetings might work best. Powell said the March meeting could be designated for recurring events for the whole year and the other requests could be handle as needed.

Stewart said he'll come back with recommendations after talking with committee members.

"I sent out a letter reminding (requesting) groups of the committee schedule," Stewart said. "Let's see how that works for the remainder of the year. But there definitely has been frustration for the last couple of months with groups trying to get on the agenda and there is no quorum.That causes things to back up."

Commission Chairman Tom Battin also asked Stewart to check to ensure that each of the two motorcycle rallies in Ruidoso, one in May and one in September, were allocated $2,500 last month, not $2,500 collectively.

"I don't think it needs commission action," he said. "If it was an oversight, you could just correct it."

Battin asked if the use of lodgers tax money is limited to promotional and advertising expenses, or could the dollars be used for facilities and rent.

Stewart said permitted uses include advertising, police and sanitation.

County Attorney Alan Morel said state law contains a provision to use the tax money to build under specific circumstances to bring in tourists. Stewart gave the example of improvements at the county fairgrounds in Capitan. Morel said he will check the state statutes and bring back information on the details.

The law doesn't distinguish between profit and non-profit groups, the attorney said. The aim is to bring tourists and their money into the county.

County favors competitive garbage service

Dianne Stallings
dstallings@ruidosonews.com

Lincoln County commissioners want to ensure business owners can choose their own commercial garbage collection agency based on best price.

Commissioner Eileen Lovelace earlier this month said she fears the county's mandatory solid waste collection ordinance as written doesn't allow competition for commercial service to business owners. Commissioners agreed to put the ordinance back on the agenda for their October meeting to decide if provisions should be changed.

Trying to clarify Lovelace's issue, Commissioner Dave Parks said apparently, she thinks the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority, with whom the commission contracts to serve unincorporated portions of the county, has a monopoly.

Lovelace said Article V of the ordinance does not give business owners a choice, "and they should have a choice. We shouldn't have the monopoly, because there are private companies operating here. The authority is considered a private company too."

The LCSWA was formed in 1991 as a quasi-independent coalition of the county and its municipalities to provide garbage collection services and to create a regional landfill, which occurred with Otero County entities south of Alamogordo.

"The way it reads, roll-off service must come from LCSWA," Lovelace said.

Referring to an amended ordinance adopted about 30 days ago conveying commercial service rate setting power to the LCSWA, County Attorney Alan Morel said the law requires participation in a solid waste collection system.

The county commission sets residential fees and the LCSWA sets commercial service fees, he said. "But special services, including roll-offs and grapple trucks are not regulated services by the county. People don't have to pay for them, unless they request those services," he said. "The question you raised is if LCSWA can set commercial rates, do you want to give business owners the option to shop around."

"Apparently, they never have had that option," said Parks, who represents the commission on the LCSWA board. "That wasn't changed (in the recent amendment).

"You're right, it wasn't changed," Morel said. "But you can look to see if you want to open it up to all commercial services. That would not be contrary to any earlier actions."

OUR OPINION

A den of vipers and thieves

Bailout demonstrates the rebirth of populism

"If the American people ever allow private banks to control the issue of their currency, first by inflation, then by deflation, the banks and the corporations which grow up around them will deprive the people of all property until their children wake up homeless on the continent their fathers conquered."

– Thomas Jefferson

"Gentlemen, I have had men watching you for a long time, and I am convinced that you have used the funds of the bank to speculate in the breadstuffs of the country. When you won, you divided the profits amongst you, and when you lost, you charged it to the bank.

"You tell me that if I take the deposits from the bank and annul its charter, I shall ruin ten thousand families. That may be true, gentlemen, but that is your sin! Should I let you go on, you will ruin fifty thousand families, and that would be my sin! You are a den of vipers and thieves. I intend to rout you out, and by the eternal God, I will rout you out."

– Andrew Jackson, the seventh president of the United States, to a delegation of bankers in 1832

The sky did not fall Tuesday in the wake of a failed bailout of Wall Street. The Dow Jones Industrials gained almost 500 points.

We salute our representatives, Steve Pearce and Tom Udall, who, in their partisan ways, both voted against the $700 billion rescue package conceived by Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson, Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke and other officials.

With President Bush as the point man, and the two main presidential candidates carrying the political load, the bailout bill was presented to the American public under a scenario that, according to one opponent, was fueled by fear and hinged on haste.

Americans don't want to be blackmailed by fear campaigns into supporting bailouts of companies "too big to fail." And no sovereign nation should allow itself to be blackmailed by the crooked and the greedy, or the threat will be made again and again.

It is incredible – or perhaps it's not – that those in Washington have no clue as to the mood of the country, of an electorate moving steadily in a populist direction. They have no inkling of the anger that burns in that populism. And there's little doubt that politicos were prepared for the avalanche of outrage over a prospective bailout of the fat cats and the greedy that has poured into the capital from the hinterland.

According to a CNN story Tuesday:

"The servers hosting the Web sites of the House of Representatives and its members have been overwhelmed with millions of e-mails in the past few days, forcing administrators to implement the 'digital version of a traffic cop' to handle the overload – for the first time ever.

"The tidal waves of e-mails and page views began over the weekend after negotiators announced Sunday that a deal had been reached on legislation to enact a $700 billion bailout of the country's financial system...."

The populism sweeping the electorate is both the result of class envy fanned by Barack Obama's inflammatory campaign talking point about the "middle class" – and a burgeoning libertarian streak rising out of conservatives' alarm over the impending demise of free-market capitalism and the nation's seemingly headlong nosedive into socialism.

That nationalization could well spill over into health care – yeah, right, leave it to the federal government to manage that – and to the outstretched palms of the auto and airplane industries looking for their share of taxpayers' largess. We could wind up with a state-run oil company, state-run airline and a healthcare system with absolutely no competition or incentives to spur innovation.

If you remove profit from the equation, the stock market will build no real wealth; it will be a reflection of political maneuvering and artificial value, the likes of which both parties have allowed to fester.

The new populism results from this impending and historic transfer of wealth from Obama's "middle class" upward – with his support – and also to the cynicism and mistrust of the people toward their representatives – from Washington on down. If there are no penalties for those who skimmed investors' money or who ran their companies into the ground, that cynicism will collect and pool in the nation's psyche for a very long time – until the stench of corruption and lies from "trusted" institutions topple them in far more onerous ways than a simple bankruptcy.

This populism could well manifest itself in other areas, such as a tax revolt or an ever-louder clamor, whether in cyberspace or in the streets, for a systemic overhaul.

What Americans want is justice and fairness, common sense and decency, honesty and transparency and accountability in government. We are tired of partisan bickering. We can start with an independent commission with subpoena powers to investigate Congressional members' and appointees' roles in this debacle going back to the 1970s. We want heads to roll.

What we want is a president, not like the mealy mouthed Bush, with hands wringing, claiming the sky is falling as he bows to the fat cats, but a president like Andrew Jackson, giving them hell, blowing them down, routing them out.

YOUR OPINION

And you're blaming Republicans?

To the editor:

RE.: DORIS CHERRY'S letter, "Elect Democrats" [Sept. 26]:

Two years ago Republicans in both houses of Congress were defeated by an electorate disgusted with their free-spending, un-Republican ways. The new Democrat-led congress, headed by Nancy Pelosi and Harry Reid, promised great changes and decisive action to lead the country into a new direction.

Today, and typical for promises made by politicians – yes, on both sides of the isle – the action has largely been lacking. And this failure is glaringly demonstrated in Congressional approval ratings that have fallen into the single digit percentages, much lower even than those of the whipping boy of the Left, President George W. Bush.

Democrats will fix the financial crisis? Highly unlikely in view of the facts that underlie the Fannie Mae debacle.

Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) was originally created to increase the amount of money available for mortgages. Though government-sponsored, it is publicly traded. And like any other publicly traded company, its per-share price increases as its profits increase. According to a report released by the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (OFHEO), titled "The Report of the Special Examination of Fannie Mae", the following facts came to light:

Between 1998 and 2004, Fannie Mae was run by Franklin Raines, who was President Clinton's former Budget Director. Part of his management team was Jamie Gorelick, a former Clinton Justice Department official and considered a candidate for Attorney General, should Barack Obama win the presidency in November.

In 1999 the profits of Fannie Mae amounted to $3.23 per share. Raines set an ambitious new goal of increasing earnings to $6.46 per share. This, though by no means a realistic goal, would mean huge profits for the association and justification for top executives to pay themselves correspondingly large bonuses. Apparently, those bonuses were incentive enough for creating phony earnings by cooking the books. And cooking the books they did.

Raines's basic salary amounted to less than $1 million a year, but his total compensation for the six-year period was $90.12 million. Gorelick, who only worked at Fannie for four years, earned $14 million in bonuses for that period. There were other bonus recipients.

When, through the efforts of OFHEO, the irregularities became public, the Raines bunch tried to interfere with the OFHEO investigation and lobbied Congress to cut funds to that entity unless it fired the officer in charge of the investigation. This effort was not met with success and Fannie agreed to pay $400 million in penalties.

Top private industry executives, not too long ago, went to jail for their part in the widely and thoroughly publicized Enron scandal. And rightly so. Raines and Gorelick are still un-indicted. Raines is said to be advising Obama on economics and Gorelick is a candidate for Attorney General in a possible Obama administration.

Insolvent Fannie Mae has spent huge amounts on campaign contributions to the Democratic cause. Top recipients were Democratic presidential candidates, Senator Chris Dodd and Senator Barack Obama.

Democrats will not fix Wall Street and, likely, nor will Republicans. If there is any hope, it will have to come from the American voter. Not through partisanship, but through careful and thoughtful examination of the issues and candidates and of every member of Congress and Senate running for reelection.

To the editor:

DORIS CHERRY BLAMED Republican rule solely for the current banking and lending situation. It should be noted this problem started during the Carter administration. The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) compels banks to make loans to low-income borrowers that is not made on purely economic criterion. Liberal lobbyists such as Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) have held the CRA caretakers which are the Fed, FDIC, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Office of Thrift Supervision hostage.

The law is set up so that any bank merger, expansion, or new branch creation can be postponed or prohibited by any of these bureaucracies should a community group such as ACORN voice a CRA protest. Banks risk defaults on risky loans and they also risk that their plans for mergers, expansion, etc., can be derailed and they could also face penalties if they refuse to loan. Banks across America are forced to hold a portfolio of bad loans called "subprime loans."

The Federal Reserve, having inflated the housing market post-2002, then had low income borrowers increasingly unable to obtain traditional financing such as standard down payments, and thus many borrowers were forced to take adjustable rate mortgages they could ill afford. The pressure from groups such as ACORN have played a pivotal part in producing this subprime crisis, but the Federal Reserve and its policies are also to blame.

The Clinton years were credited with increasing the number of loans to small businesses and to low- and moderate-income borrowers for home loans. Pressure was placed by the CRA to secure CRA loans containing subprime loans. This started with Bear Stearns in 1997 and the number of CRA mortgage loans increased by 39 percent between 1993 and 1998.

The Bush administration in 2003 sought to move government supervision of Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae to an agency within the Treasury. A New York Times article called this act "the most significant regulatory overhaul in the housing finance industry since the savings and loan crisis a decade ago."

The changes were opposed by Democrats and Republicans alike. Democrats such as Barney Frank challenged the move stating, "These two entities – Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac – are not facing any kind of financial crisis, the more people exaggerate these problems, the more pressure there is on these companies, the less we will see in terms of affordable housing."

In closing, everyone had a hand in this mess. The Federal Reserve, lobbying groups such as ACORN, the financial institutions that gave the loans to people whose credit could not be verified or could not qualify for traditional loans, those charged with federal oversight, politicians from both sides of the aisle, and the blame also lies squarely on those that signed the loan in the first place.

Editor's note: According to a Sept. 11, 2003, New York Times article by Stephen Labaton:

"The Bush administration today recommended the most significant regulatory overhaul in the housing finance industry since the savings and loan crisis a decade ago.

"Under the plan ... a new agency would be created within the Treasury Department to assume supervision of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac....

"Among the groups denouncing the proposal were the National Association of Home Builders and Congressional Democrats who fear that tighter regulation of the companies could sharply reduce their commitment to financing low-income and affordable housing...."

Reactions on the bailout vote

Editor's note: The Following reactions on the bailout vote came into the Ruidoso News Monday. No responses were sent by the camps of Barack Obama or Harry Teague, who are running in races represented here. The statements are presented in alphabetical order by politician.

Pete Domenici
Retiring Senator (R, NM)

WASHINGTON – U.S. Senator Pete Domenici, former Senate Budget Committee chairman, today expressed his disappointment in the House of Representatives' defeat of a bipartisan financial rescue bill and warned of the consequences across the nation if Congress fails to act.

Domenici, who took to the Senate floor Monday morning to urge passage of the measure, expressed his disappointment with the House vote in a second floor speech this afternoon.

"I am dismayed by the failed vote in the House. This is very serious and we have to find a plan that Congress can accept. Doing nothing is not an option.

"This action will precipitate an economic catastrophe for America. The initial response to this ill-advised action has been limited so far to the equity market and the corporate bond market, but I predict that the defeat of the plan will soon permeate our entire economy. It will also have serious and not completely predictable consequences in all markets throughout the world.

"This plan included many features that those who opposed it wanted. It had many new safeguards for the taxpayer. Yet, a rigid adherence to an ideological purity on both sides that has never existed in our nation led many in the House to reject the plan.

"I do not know right now how this action will hurt the average American – higher interest rates for houses, a continued freeze in the credit markets, loss of jobs and contraction of the economy, loss of billions of dollars in pension plans. But, the consequences will come.

"This vote cannot be the last word Congress has to say. I urge everyone involved to begin work again immediately on adjustments to the plan that will at least satisfy a majority in the House. This Congress has an approval rating at an all-time low. None of us should be surprised why."

John McCain
Candidate, President (R)

"I speak to you at an hour of crisis for our nation's economy.

"I believe the crisis facing our economy could have a grave impact on every American worker, small business owner and family if our leaders fail to act.

"I share the anger and frustration that many Americans feel toward reckless and corrupt mismanagement on Wall Street and in Washington.

"I returned to Washington last week to work on a bipartisan rescue plan. It was the only plan at that time on the table but lacked enough support to pass. It also lacked sufficient accountability and transparency to justify expenditure of the taxpayers' money.

"At the time, the concerns of all members were not being heard. My colleagues were worried about the size of the plan and the risk it posed to taxpayers. I shared those concerns and I laid out principles that I thought must be adhered to.

Those principles included responsible oversight, effective transparency, added protections for the taxpayers, and a cap on excessive salaries for executives.

"I also believe that the legislation should have no earmarks. I worked hard to play a constructive role in bringing everyone to the table. The plan is now significantly improved. We strengthened taxpayers' protections and oversight, and the taxpayers were on the hook for less money up front. Don't get me wrong – it isn't perfect. And the fact that taxpayers could have to spend a single dollar to create stability in our economy is a decision that I do not take lightly.

"I was hopeful that the improved rescue plan would have had the votes needed to pass because addressing a credit crisis is of vital importance to families, small businesses and every working American who must be assured that their assets are safe and protected and that our economy will continue to function.

"Today, I've spoken to Federal Chairman Bernanke, Secretary Paulson, Congressional leaders and now it's time for all members of Congress to go back to the drawing board.

"I call on Congress to get back obviously immediately to address this crisis. Our leaders are expected to leave partisanship at the door and come to the table to solve our problems. Senator Obama and his allies in Congress infused unnecessary partisanship into the process. Now is not the time to fix the blame. It's time to fix the problem.

"I would hope that all our leaders, all of them, can put aside short-term political goals and do what's in the best interest of the American people."

Steve Pearce
Candidate, U.S. Senate (R)

Congressman Steve Pearce voted today to protect taxpayers and opposed the $700 billion bailout of the financial sector. After the vote, Pearce released the following statement:

"New Mexico taxpayers were not protected under this legislation. I strongly disapprove of putting taxpayers on the hook in order to bailout the Wall Street firms that got us in to this crisis. Those who made risky decisions should own up to them.

"We still need solutions. This bill was not our only option. We now need to rewrite the bill to incorporate real taxpayer protections, market solutions instead of massive government intervention and correct the abuses that caused the problem.

"Going forward, legislation should include accountability for those who created the mess, transparency so investors can make informed decisions, limitations on leveraging so financial institutions are not allowed to overextend, end 'naked' short selling, and favor market principles over government intrusion.

"I have cosponsored an alternative to today's bill that more closely reflects these principles and truly protects the taxpayer, creates market incentives to create capital and reforms certain investment vehicles so we're not back here faced with the same problem."

Ed Tinsley
Candidate, NM Senate (R)

RUIDOSO, NM – Congressional candidate Ed Tinsley's campaign released the following statement in the wake of today's vote in the U.S. House of Representatives. These remarks are from Communications Director Jim Pettit:

"Congress needs to get this right and instill some level of confidence amongst the American people and the world at large which is watching closely what's going on here. Pension plans and lifetime savings are at risk as is the prospect of a downward spiral in all of the credit markets – not just home mortgages.

"As for the people in Southern New Mexico, they need to get their money's worth from any rescue plan. Somehow, left out in all of this, is how a rescue plan helps the average homeowner in Southern New Mexico, people who played by the rules, signing up for loans they could afford and avoiding reckless speculation.

"Unfortunately, however, everyone is at risk and Congress needs to step up and provide a short-term plan to unfreeze the credit markets followed up by serious, long-term reform of our financial regulators.

"We saw today how partisan attacks aren't getting the job done. Ed Tinsley challenged Harry Teague to a debate on the economy for precisely this reason. Thirty-second television commercials aren't the forum for voters deciding who is best to represent them during these challenging times."

Tom Udall
Candidate, U.S. Senate (D)

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, U.S. Representative Tom Udall, D-N.M., released the following statement regarding his opposition to the $700 billion taxpayer bailout of Wall Street:

"For eight years, the Bush Administration and its allies in Congress have allowed Wall Street to gamble with America's economy, and the results have been devastating for Main Street.

"The Administration consistently ignored the experts and failed to adequately oversee America's financial markets. Administration officials were warned that Wall Street's risky investments, combined with the mortgage industry's irresponsible practices, could produce a perfect storm that would threaten Americans' homes, jobs and life savings. Yet they did nothing.

"Unfortunately, the Administration's response was a $700 billion bailout with virtually no protections for American taxpayers. Congress made significant changes to the president's proposal, but I believe we should have taken more time to get this right. Four hundred of the nation's leading economists, including three Nobel laureates, have asked Congress to take more time to improve this proposal, and we should have heeded that advice.

"The proposal we voted on today still contains significant flaws. For example, under this proposal:

"• The Treasury is given unprecedented power to spend taxpayer money without adequate oversight or an actual plan for fixing the systemic problems that led America to this crisis.

"• Corporate executives who ran their companies into the ground can still walk away with millions in taxpayer-funded golden parachutes.

"• Taxpayer dollars are being spent to bail out foreign companies whose governments are doing nothing.

"• Little is being done to help responsible homeowners. Tens of thousands of families could lose their homes. More importantly, families who had nothing to do with failed mortgages could lose billions in assets as foreclosures continue to drive down property values.

"I believe we must take action to protect middle class families and to make our economy produce jobs again. But I cannot vote for a Wall Street bailout that does not solve the underlying problems with our economy. I will continue working with my colleagues to reform America's financial markets, so Wall Street is not allowed to make the same mistakes over and over again.

I will also continue fighting to support middle class New Mexico families that find themselves struggling in an economy devastated by the irresponsible acts of others. They are the true victims of the Bush Administration's reckless neglect of our economy. We must do what's right for them."

In a mind-boggling economy, this rate is a no-brainer.

Trip to Spain a memorable one for Ruidoso students

Editor's Note: The following was written by Soni Nocella, a speech instructor at Ruidoso High School and Ruidoso Middle School. This past summer, she and Spanish instructor Kevin Clawson took a group of students and four chaperones to visit Spain to learn the culture and history of this historic nation.

COURTESY

Ruidoso High School students visit the Spanish Square in Madrid during their trip to Spain in the summer. In the background is a monument dedicated to Cervantes, with Don Quixote and his faithful Sancho Panza in front.

Imagine if you will, 26 Ruidoso High School students and six adults from Ruidoso joining together to have a whirlwind trip to Spain. We gather together at 5 a.m. on Thursday, May 22, to get on the Warrior bus for the trip to the El Paso airport to catch a 10:30 a.m. flight. We fly to Houston then change from domestic to international on Air France to Paris then to Madrid.

We start our tour immediately by riding the Metro to the city center for a visit to the famed Prado museum. We see many masterpieces. I am in awe. However, we are all tired from our long flight and a long time since eating.

On top of that, it is raining, something for which we are not prepared. We were told it would be warm and sunny this time of year. Normally it is. This year has been the rainiest May in Spain in years. Wouldn't you know!

Most of the kids are not dressed for this. So now, we are not only tired and hungry, but we are also wet and miserable. We finally get to eat about 8 p.m. What a way to start!

Our adventure continues. The next day, we do a bus tour of Madrid and see many beautiful sights, including the royal palace, which is now just a ceremonial palace. We head for the beautiful city of Toledo in the area of La Mancha, of Don Quixote fame. It is lovely with the Tagus River surrounding it and all the old, historic buildings that have been there since the middle ages. What history abounds.

The narrow streets draw us in and the photographers among us take aim and shoot. The architecture is stunning. Toledo is the home of a famous sword factory, many of which get purchased on this day.

Our next stop is Cordoba. This city has a cathedral built inside a mosque. The mosque is intact as it surrounds a magnificent church. Again it rains, but it doesn't dampen our spirits.

We go to beautiful Sevilla, a city on the River Guadalquivir. This city is indeed lovely. It has the largest gothic cathedral in the world, which is the third largest of all cathedrals in the world behind St. Peter's in Rome and St. Paul's in London.

The bull fighting ring had a special attraction for us all even though we did not get to see a bull fight. The evening in Sevilla gave us the opportunity to see the flamenco dancers. Such drama and intensity as they move through their stories in dance.

Outside of Sevilla is the ancient Roman city of Italica. Here we get to see what life might have been like some two thousand years ago. It was amazing.

Now we on our way to Malaga on the beautiful southern sunny coast – The Costa del Sol. This is our first view of the Mediterranean Sea. The kids can't wait to get in, but the weather isn't very cooperative. It is rainy and kind of chilly. No sunbathing today. Malaga has a wonderful seaside promenade on which to walk and view the scenery, shop for souvenirs, or get a bite to eat at one of the many sidewalk cafes.

Our second day in Malaga brings some sun bathing and water play. It also brings some free time to explore as much as we wanted. That is much appreciated after several days of jam-packed touring with guides.

Next we are heading for Granada, the home of the famous Alhambra. This is a very well-preserved fortress and gardens of medieval kings and queens. It sits high on a hill above the city and is a sight to behold. We get some free time again after a tour to explore the Arab market and other shopping areas. As you can imagine, shopping is a highlight for teenagers. OK, it's a highlight for the adults too.

From Granada, we drive north to Alicante. This city is on the Mediterranean coast a bit more on the east side of Spain. It is a nice city, but the weather is not the best for swimming again. We really missed the nice weather.

NEXT WEEK, On to Barcelona

Banned Book Week at Ruidoso Public Library

Throughout the country, most children are starting a new academic year. Teachers are sending out their lists of required readings, and parents are beginning to gather books. In some cases, classics like The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, The Catcher in the Rye and To Kill a Mockingbird, may not be included in curriculum or available in the school library due to challenges made by parents or administrators.

Since 1990, the American Library Association's (ALA) Office for Intellectual Freedom (OIF) has recorded more than 7,800 book challenges. A challenge is a formal, written complaint requesting a book be removed from library shelves or school curriculum. About three out of four of all challenges are to material in schools or school libraries, and one in four is to material in public libraries. OIF estimates that less than one-quarter of challenges are reported and recorded.

It is thanks to the commitment of librarians, teachers, parents and students that most challenges are unsuccessful and reading materials like I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, The Grapes of Wrath, the Harry Potter series and Phyllis Reynolds Naylor's Alice series remain available.

The most challenged and/or restricted reading materials have been books for children. However, challenges are not simply an expression of a point of view; on the contrary, they are an attempt to remove materials from public use, thereby restricting the access of others. Even if the motivation to ban or challenge a book is well-intentioned, the outcome is detrimental. Censorship denies our freedom as individuals to choose and think for ourselves. For children, decisions about what books to read should be made by the people who know them best – their parents.

In support of the right to choose books freely for ourselves, the ALA and the Ruidoso Public Library are sponsoring Banned Books Week (Sept. 27-Oct. 4), an annual celebration of our right to access books without censorship. This year's observance is themed "Celebrating the Freedom to Read" and commemorates the most basic freedom in a democratic society – the freedom to read freely – and encourages us not to take this freedom for granted.

Since its inception in 1982, Banned Books Week has reminded us that while not every book is intended for every reader, each of us has the right to decide for ourselves what to read, listen to or view. The Ruidoso Public Library and thousands of libraries and bookstores across the country will celebrate the freedom to read by participating in special events, exhibits and readouts that showcase books that have been banned or threatened. The Ruidoso Public Library, at 107 Kansas City Rd., has a special display of banned and challenged books to commemorate this week.

The American Booksellers Association; the American Booksellers Foundation for Free Expression; the ALA; the American Society of Journalists and Authors; the Association of American Publishers; and the National Association of College Stores sponsor Banned Books Week. The Library of Congress Center for the Book endorses the observance.

FLOOD

County investigating repair process for bridges

He warned Camp that the earthen McDaniel replacement is eroding and might not hold for heavy fire engines. He also suggested when concrete culvert bridge structures are installed that safety items such as railings be added to keep vehicles from sliding off the road surface in icy conditions this winter.

Camp said McDaniel Bridge will be widened and strengthened, if needed. He must deal with a logistics problem when the time comes to install the box culverts at Second Bridge in Upper Canyon, because it provides vital access to the rest of the canyon, he said. A low water crossing may be created to serve vehicles for a few days.

Carlos Salas, village water/wastewater manager, said within the next two weeks he should have temporary water lines installed past the Upper Canyon Water plant to the storage tanks, which he must fill. Then he will flush and sanitize water lines before full service is restored.

Salas characterized the village sewer system as 95 percent connected, but that cracks, fractures and problems with manholes still are being discovered. "Upper Canyon for the most part is online," he said.

Village Manager Dan O. Higgins pointed out that earlier this month, councilors awarded contracts for engineering and construction companies to begin work on major projects and officials are coordinating with the Natural Resource Conservation Service.

Deputy Village Manager Bill Morris said as lines are connected, some brief interruptions of service may occur.

Outside of the heavily damaged Upper Canyon area, several residents who normally would reach their homes by River Trail asked village officials to place warning signs and construction cones at the entrance to the road off Sudderth Drive near River Crossing. Several cars nearly plunged into the river coming down the steep road, because drivers didn't realize the bridge was out, they said.

Camp and Higgins said that situation would be rectified immediately. But they offered no encouragement on replacement of the bridge, because it was privately owned.

"You say it was private, then how come so many people were using it before the flood?" one woman asked. "There's no way out now. Our land went to the bridge and we lost a shed. I don't know if anyone will replace the shed or the bridge."

Higgins said FEMA will not cover replacement of the shed. Brian Williams with the Response and Recovery Bureau of the New Mexico Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management, said the presidential disaster declaration only cleared funding for hazard mitigation and government infrastructure, not individual assistance.

"There was not enough here to be a national disaster, which is about 100 primary homes destroyed," he said. "Seasonal homes are not counted. Taxpayers feel if a person can afford a second home, they can afford to buy insurance on it."

Morris said representatives from the U.S. Small Business Administration are due in town and may offer another avenue of low-interest loans or funding.

Another resident from the same area questioned how sewer lines could be repaired without restoring the road and bridge. Village Project Manager Justin King said the village easement goes down the middle of the river, where sewer lines also are laid. The road is not needed for repair work.

Janice Duncan, who owns cabins in Upper Canyon, said her operation has been without water service for 60 days and suffered a 90 percent loss of business. Salas said within two weeks, service should be restored.

Tim Owens from Singing Pines asked if he will be expected to pay a $20,000 match contribution for a 75-25 percent cost split restoration program under NRCS. Higgins said the village can't pay for the work on private land, but Owens could use in-kind labor or equipment to offset his match requirement.

Morris said just an hour and a half before the meeting, he and the village attorney finished drafting final contract language for five applicants under the NRCS program. The money goes to the private contractor, who will handle each project, he said. The village only acts as fiscal agent. Before the contractor is paid, NRCS officials must inspect and approve the work.

Pam Williams, speaking on behalf of a homeowner on North Loop, asked what to do about river water still hitting the house, because the course of the river was altered in the flood.

King said the village cannot change the course of the river and the owner should contact the NRCS and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers about river bank restoration.

Camp said if the house is in danger, NRCS officials probably already know, because they walked every inch of the river.

A Fern Trail resident asked about removal of debris and boulders left by the flood on her property. Camp said the village cannot work on private land, but if the items are moved to the road, the village can pick them up. A heavy equipment operator should be hired to move boulders.

Lincoln County Manager Tom Stewart is wrestling with how to repair or replace private bridges knocked out by the July 27 flood on the Ruidoso and Hondo rivers.

He told county commissioners at their meeting this month that he and emergency managers were frustrated trying to figure out how those bridges in the valley east of Ruidoso Downs can be handled.

"They're not covered by FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) individual assistance," he said. "An organization called the New Mexico Mortgage Authority had appropriations for minor home repair, but they don't fall under that category."

He hoped a group might help called the Unmet Needs Committee, formed by several churches to try to handle issues not covered elsewhere. He later learned they are focused more on people than infrastructure.

The committee meets at the Gateway Church of Christ in Ruidoso, if anyone still has unresolved needs, he said.

Commissioner Dave Parks asked if more than one family is involved, and as access for multiple households, an agency might take another look.

"I can't think of any one of them without other ingress or egress, so they are not totally isolated," Stewart said. "But some neighbors are being a little less than neighborly in allowing them easement."

Tuesday, Stewart acquired some more loan possibilities from the U.S. Small Business Administration and from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Development programs.

According to Evonne Gantz with the Response & Recovery Bureau of the New Mexico Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management, an agency declaration was received from the Small Business Administration for individuals, both homeowners and renters, and businesses for flooding damage.

The SBA opened an office at Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso in Sierra Mall. The address is Suite 200, 709 Mechem Dr., Ruidoso, NM 88345. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, until Oct. 16.

The deadline to submit an application is Dec. 1 for physical damages loan applications and June 30, 2009, for Economic Injury loan applications.

Individuals and business owners unable to visit the SBA's Disaster Loan Outreach Center can contact SBA's Customer Service Center by calling toll-free 800-659-2955 or by emailing the SBA at disastercustomerservice@sba.gov.

would be the greatest redistribution of wealth upward in the country's history. There's nothing beneficial to anyone but the big firms on Wall Street."

Unsurprisingly, Willard isn't in favor of the proposal, which was voted down by lawmakers in Washington on Monday, but is likely to be re-introduced soon with significant changes.

"I don't think we'll be able to stop it this time," Willard said. "It will be tough to beat, but then I thought the first bill wouldn't be defeated, either."

Willard has written several articles on the proposed bill on the foxbusiness.com Web site, and has reported about 99 percent of all comments are in agreement with him against the bailout package.

His most recent post was written while in Ruidoso, in which he reported a majority of the locals are against the bill as well.

"I don't know a single person here who is for the bailout," Willard writes. "A well-off elderly couple even laughed today when I asked if they thought they'd have trouble getting a loan from the local bank if Wall Street isn't bailed out.

"I said, 'what's funny?' They said their local bank hasn't overextended itself and has prepared itself for the just-started local real estate downturn and that they've got capital to put down if they wanted to."

That comment illustrates what Willard believes about the national economy – that it runs not on the backs of major investment firms in New York, but on the hard work and ingenuity of small businesses and small investors throughout the country.

"The small businesses that are the lifeblood of small communities like this are also the life blood of the country," Willard said. "Taxing them to bail out big banks and investment firms can't help anybody."

property rights falls under the committee's scope.

Previously, County Manager Tom Stewart added agriculture under proposed public land uses.

Commission Chairman Tom Battin brought up the need to insert the private property rights language, noting a discussion last month.

"I think it is inherent in anything this commission or its subcommittees do, but it probably would be good to make reference in the ordinance, whether in the preamble or the body of the ordinance," he said.

The wording was inserted in the body.

Under public input, Pete Gnatkowski with the county Cooperative Extension Service said his reading of the ordinance seemed to restrict how people or issues could be added to an agenda.

"Can they come up with things on their own or must every issue be assigned?" he asked.

"Our intent is when they see an issue, they come to the manager or the commission," Battin said. "I see this ordinance as more clearly directing the efforts of the committee and broadening its scope to natural resources."

Lovelace interjected, "The committee can't just call a meeting. They have to go through Tom. He or the commission sets the agenda."

"That's pretty restrictive," Gnatkowski said.

"Yes, it is," Lovelace agreed.

"The word I prefer is 'focused,'" Battin said.

Oscura resident Jerry Carroll, who attends most meetings of the county commission and several of its appointed boards, said limiting public input to that committee to the filter of the manager, his designee or the commission, "almost totally negates one of the reasons (the original Public Land Use and Rural Affairs Advisory Committee) was created, to deal with the U.S. Forest Service or Bureau of Land Management directly. Because lots of time there's only a 30-day period for input. You don't have time (to go through someone else to be on the agenda), because by the time the board meets, it could be over.

"If this is what you intend, you don't need this committee except for issues so remote" that the comment period is 60 days or longer.

Members of PLURAAC would research and gather documentation, meet and come up with a recommendation and then bring an issue to the commission in a timely manner, he contended.

With commissioners appointing members and the leadership, the danger is the range of opinions may be reduced, which is not good in many issues that need expertise and independent debate, Carroll said. People may become agitated, but loud and vigorous debate won't injure them, he said.

While he understands commissioners like to appoint people with similar philosophies, dissenting opinions are vital or commissioners will experience the same phenomenon federal elected officials experience with advisors only telling them what they want to hear, he contended. Eventually, constituents may think no one is paying attention to what they say and they no longer are represented by their elected government.

He urged that two alternate members be added to the original five-member board to ensure a better chance at a quorum.

Duane Frost, chairman of the defunct Public Land Use and Rural Affairs Advisory Committee, advocated regularly scheduled meetings as opposed to meetings called by the commission or Stewart. If people can't get on the agenda quickly with a problem and it festers for a few months, the situation will get worse, he told commissioners. His previous board handled issues quickly and often didn't have to involve the commission, he said.

He reiterated the need for speed to submit comments on proposed federal laws, rules and new programs within 30 days, in most cases.

While many in the county viewed PLURAAC as a voice for rural interests and watchdog for the county, others criticized the board as over-stepping its authority and conducting meetings that subjected federal officials to verbal battering.

Carroll pointed out members of the new natural resources board that replaces PLURAAC were not given liability protection that was granted to those serving on the county planning commission.

Morel said he would insert that provision, but that he thought boards and committees acting on behalf of the county commission are covered. Commissioner Dave Parks, whose background is in insurance, agreed with adding the provision.

Battin said he believes the new approach will allow a faster response to issues, not slower, because a session can be called at any time before a county commission meeting to set up possible action by the elected officials.

Parks and Commissioner Jackie Powell also backed adding two alternates. instead of increasing the number of regular board members to seven. By keeping the membership to five with two alternates, three people constitute a quorum, Morel said.

Parks offered the motion to adopt the ordinance with the approved changes, seconded by Commissioner Don Williams

"I'm going to vote for this and give it a try, but I don't agree with the whole ordinance," Lovelace said. "I just want to state that."

"The committee can't just call a meeting. They have to go through Tom [Battin]. He or the commission sets the agenda," County Commissioner Eileen Lovelace said.

"That's pretty restrictive," said Pete Gnatkowski with the county Cooperative Extension Service.

"Yes it is," Lovelace agreed.

"The word I prefer is 'focused,'" Battin replied.

Congratulations, Susan - It's Official....

When Mayor L. Ray Nunley declared that it was "Susan Lutterman Day" at Tuesday's city council meeting, Ray noted officially what we have all known unofficially for a long time. Susan Lutterman is one special lady.

Cited for her work as a moving force for more than 10 years with the Keep Ruidoso Beautiful campaign, Susan is credited with a veritable litany of participation and achievement in our community. City and civic activities, church participation, 17 years of dedicated service on the Ruidoso School Board. This list goes on, but one thing is for sure, Susan is an asset to this community, and First National Bank is proud that she is one of ours.

Celebrate Susan Lutterman's recognition with us. No flags. No hoopla. Just stop by our office and say, "Hey, Susan, great job!"

'Zozo sports programs and activities build future leaders

MIKE CURRAN
mcurran@ruidosonews.com

With a population just under 1,100, the town of Carrizozo perseveres and continues to build upon its steely grit, determination and toughness with eyes wide open towards the future.

No where else is this better epitomized than the school district itself. First-year Principal and Athletic Director Jerrett Perry, a fifth-generation New Mexico native, and former baseball, wrestling and football coach at Ruidoso High School, readily understands the value of sports programs at his school.

"Here at Carrizozo the emphasis is on academics, but sports and extra-curricular activities play a very pivotal role in what we are trying to accomplish," he said.

"We have high expectations of our students and anticipate their success. Sports can sometimes play a consequential role in the overall achievement of a student."

This article is part of a continuing series on sports programs in Lincoln County schools

Other extra-curricular activities such as FFA (Future Farmers of America) contribute important pieces to the overall puzzle, too, by their commitment to leadership by teamwork.

Carrizozo has 200 students, from kindergarten through 12th grade, which includes 106 boys and 94 girls.

The school's football teams had 25 boys come out for the squads and the volleyball program had an equal number of girls initially participate.

MIKE CURRAN/RUIDOSO NEWS

Principal and Athletic Director of Carrizozo Schools Jerrett Perry oversees Zozo's programs.

Opponents who have to face the Carrizozo volleyball, football, cross-country or track teams usually know they are in for a fight. The girls volleyball squad took first place, Aug. 22, at the Magdalena Tournament and then proceeded to reel off six straight wins before losing at last weekend's Capitan Classic. When their uniforms are not being worn, they hang from the outside of each girl's locker.

Warriors shave Hatch on gridiron

MIKE CURRAN

Web exclusive
Check out www.ruidosonews.com for video on this story

Last year Ruidoso gave up three TDs on special teams and Friday evening's game against the Bears began as a repeat when the Warriors yielded 6 points on the opening kickoff to put themselves in a 7-0 hole from the outset.

As far as the village boys were concerned, repeats are for TV, not the gridiron, and went on to win, 27-24.

A little more than six minutes later, Hatch tacked on a 28-yard field goal to go up by 10, but Ruidoso replied with a touchdown at the 1:40 mark in the first quarter.

The 2-pointer was thwarted and the Bears led 10-6. With 11:20 left in the half, Nick Smith recovered a fumble on the Hatch 22-yard line and barely two minutes later, starting quarterback Brendan Flack fired a completed pass to Keith Brower from the 9 and the Warriors took a 13-10 lead. It was a lead they would never relinquish.

"When Hatch went up by 10 our boys kept their composure and stayed with the original game plan," head coach Kief Johnson said. "As a result we ground away at the Hatch defense and eventually went on top."

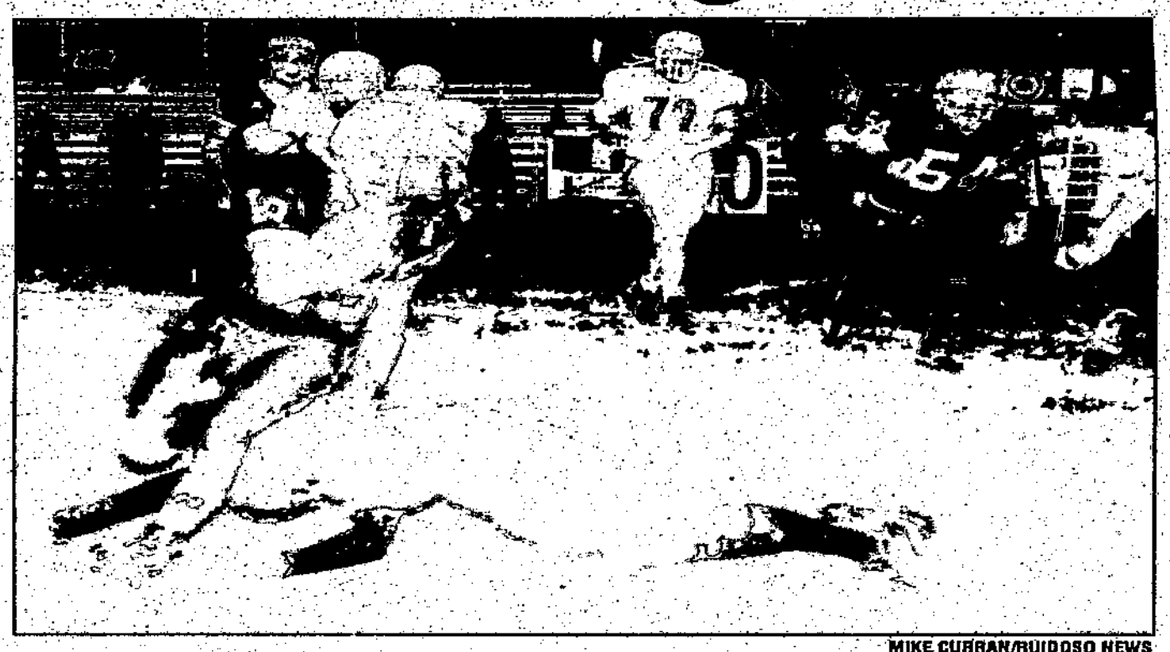
With six minutes gone in the in the 3rd quarter, Ralph Miranda took the ball across on a 35-yard sweep around the left side of the Hatch defense with key blocks by Marcos Rubio and Brower.



MIKE CURRAN/RUIDOSO NEWS

Quarterback Darrell Carr sweeps around Hatch's right side in Ruidoso's 27-24 win.

Freshman Beto Fernandez kicked the second of three successful PATs, which in the end proved to be the winning margin of victory.

The Bears countered with a TD of their own two minutes later, but the 2-point conversion was no good and Ruidoso maintained the lead, 20-16.

About 30 seconds later,

HOBBS, New Mexico (September 28, 2008) – The day after Brenda Beautiful set the fastest-qualifying time to the Grade 2, $230,650 Hobbs America Futurity, her older brother Noconi stepped forward with a fastest-qualifying win in the trials to the Grade 2, $131,000 Hobbs America Derby at Zia Park.

The Hobbs America Futurity and the Hobbs America Derby will be a stakes doubleheader on Oct. 12 at Zia Park.

The 10-fastest qualifiers from each set of trials will return for their respective finals.

Noconi raced like the 1-5 favorite he was in the first of three trials when he drew out to a two-length victory in :21.312 for the 440 yards.

The gelding has matured into the premier 3-year-old currently racing in New Mexico.

The second-place finisher in last year's Hobbs America Futurity came back this summer at Ruidoso Downs to win the Grade 1, $1,064,000 All American Derby after finishing third in the Grade 1, $461,000 Rainbow Derby and the Grade 1, $388,000 Ruidoso Derby.

The All American Derby win earned the gelding a berth in the Grade 1, $1,000,000 Champion Of Champions at Los Alamitos Race Course on Dec. 13.

Noconi and Brenda Beautiful are owned by their breeders R.D. Hubbard and Johnny T.L. Jones, Jr., and they are each trained by Paul Jones.

Their Dash For Cash daughter My Dashing Lady produced Noconi and Brenda Beautiful in successive years.

Noconi is sired by Mr Jess Perry while Brenda Beautiful is sired by the Mr Jess Perry son Feature Mr Jess.

The Hubbard-Jones combination also won the third trial with Three Past Six, who recorded the fourth-fastest qualifying time of :21.426.

The third-place finisher in the 2007 Ruidoso Futurity was returning from a layoff of more than 14 months.

Dr Proctor has been pointed at the Hobbs America Derby by trainer Carl Draper and he impressed with a troubled win in the second trial.

He got off to a tardy start, moved inward during the race and then rallied for a narrow win over El Sosio.

Dr Proctor has the second-fastest qualifying time of :21.336 and El Sosio checked in with the third-fastest time of :21.338 with an impressive finish.

Dr Proctor was not eligible for the rich derbies at Ruidoso Downs, so he challenged older horses and responded with a win in the Higheasterjet Handicap and a second as the 11-10 favorite in the Mr Jet Moore Handicap.

The complete list of qualifiers and their times are Noconi (:21.312), Dr Proctor (:21.336), El Sosio (:21.338), Three Past Six (:21.426), Rock Solid Jess (:21.430), Hawkin Had It (:21.480), Gone To The Mountain (:21.598), A Real Shaker (:21.606), White Or Wrong (:21.618) and DMNV Mountable (:21.631).

None are bothered.

The football team wears white shirts and ties as of this year, each and every game day, no matter whether it's a JV or varsity contest.

"How people perceive us is very important," Perry said. "We have an exceptional, talented group of athletes and students of both genders here at Carrizozo. And that includes our coaches, too."

When Perry came to 'Zozo, he brought RHS defensive football coordinator, Pat Ventura, along as the Grizzlies' new head coach. Ron Becker, head coach for the volleyball team, and his assistant, Pam Allen, are back for the second year. Becker will also serve as head coach for the girls and boys basketball teams this season.

"The students and our coaches are charged with implementing 'victory with honor,' " Perry explained. "We promote that motto and continue to build a bridge between the centerpiece of the community, the schools and the community itself. In order for the area to thrive, the students need to flourish, also. This is a partnership and a commitment to excellence from our students should flow directly into the community and then to the outlying areas."

A $1 million bond which was floated last year, and is now being allocated to fund beautification, maintenance and heating, venting and air conditioning systems, also figures into the mix, too.

"We don't have a big drop-out rate," Perry said. "But those that do are encouraged to come back, graduate and even enroll in dual programs, just as some of our regular students do, that offer both high school and college credit. ENMU, Corona, Capitan and Cloudcroft have partnered in this endeavor and offer live classrooms at the given high schools, via reality TV screens, for those who find the need.

"As for the sports programs we offer, we know they're an important part of the larger puzzle," Perry said.

"Sports present both success and failure to the players and teaches them to pull themselves up by their bootstraps when they sometimes fall short of achievement, and then, continue on to bigger things."

The Carrizozo kids are a resilient bunch. It's generally their nature to face some adversities others don't.

Some of their students come from as far away as near Mountainair and travel 45 minutes to the closest bus stop. They then travel another 45 minutes to school. If they participate in sports, practice adds on to their already long day. If they're ranch kids the day might not be over for them.

"Our students, and the community at large, have grit," Perry explained. "Patriotism, a strong work ethic and determination are part of the culture. They're proud of who they are."

RHS increased their advantage when Jerrid Marquez crossed the goal line after a brilliant 75-yard run. Fernandez kicked his third successful extra point and the Warriors went up 27-16.

Ruidoso appeared to continue with the momentum when Carr connected with Brower for a 67-yard pass/run play, but a 15-yard penalty nullified the play and put them even deeper into the hole.

It was one of many flags that were thrown throughout the evening against both sides.

With four minutes left in the contest, the Bears scored another TD on a 56-yard run, completed a 2-point conversion and suddenly found themselves only 3 points down.

Three minutes later the Warriors found themselves in a real nailbiter when Hatch threatened from the Ruidoso 27.

Bears quarterback Max Gillis had proven to live up to the positive scouting reports Ruidoso had on him but the Warriors turned back three Hatch passes which seemingly left them with a 37-yard field goal attempt and a good kicker, No. 22, Jeremy Lenoir, to make the try. For some reason the Bears elected to go for all the marbles and pass but it, like the previous three attempts, was negated by the stiffened Ruidoso defense and the Warriors laid claim to a 3-point win.

"After an open date last weekend we came out somewhat flat," Johnson said. "We were disappointed we let the game get as close as it did towards the end. On the positive side, Cody Campos broke up a big pass play in the first half and there were some very good blocks the boys laid down, including a huge hit on a Hatch defender which knocked out the visiting player."

Next up for the Warriors will be a trip to Robertson, their third journey there in as many years. The previous two seasons saw the Cardinals knock Ruidoso out of the the playoffs. This is the first game in some time the Warriors have played the Cardinals in a regular season contest. Last year they were runners-up at state and were the champs the previous two seasons.

This year they seem to have put the hazing adversity suffered early-on this year behind them, complete with a new head coach, Richard Martinez.

"They are a lot better than their 1-3 record shows," Johnson warned. "They returned many of last year's players, have a big offensive line and are quick. They have a quality running back, No. 27, Michael Means, and are coming off of a big 35-0 win over Taos. This will be a big test for us."

Pelletier captures his 2nd Senior New Mexico Open

Mark Pelletier, PGA Professional, became only the second Senior professional to win two consecutive Senior New Mexcio Open titles in the history of the event. And he has only been eligible for these two Senior Opens. Robert Gaona of Arizona won back-to-back in 2000 and 2001. This year's championship was held at the beautiful Inn of the Mountain Gods GC in Mescalero, and presented by the Inn of the Mountain Gods Resort and Casino.

Pelletier, PGA director of golf at the El Paso CC, overcame a 3 over par front nine in the final round with a brilliant 5 under, 31 on the back nine to tie Mesa, Ariz., PGA Professional, Larry Mackin, the 2006 Champ at 3 under par, 213. On the first playoff hole, Pelletier made a par to beat Mackin's bogey. Finishing third was 36 hole leader, Jeff Kern of Tucson, AZ who finished at 1 under par, 215.

In the over 60 group, Sedona, AZ, PGA Professional, Earl Svenningsen, 1999 Senior Open champ finished at 2 over par 218. Local favorite, Scott Roser of Ruidoso won the low amateur trophy by posting an impressive 222 total. Roser turned 50 this year. Russell Hatfield, another local, took the over 60 amateur title with a 230 total.

Pelletier now has won the Senior Open and both the Senior and Section Championships in 2008. He was also the Senior Champion at the 2008 Club Car Pro-President held in the spring. He, along with Russ Moore and Andy Boyd, will represent the Section at the 2008 Callaway Senior PNC Championship in Palm Springs in October.

Once again the Inn of the Mountain Gods GC was the shining star. The golf course was in excellent condition due to the hard work of Frizzell, golf course superintendent and his staff. The food and beverage accommodations, presented by Joe Kinnan and his staff were the best with great food and superb service. Daniel Nunez, PGA Director of Golf at the Inn of the Mountain Gods, his staff and all of the volunteers worked hard to have everything in place and ready to go.

The biggest thanks goes to the Inn of the Mountain Gods Resort and Casino led by CEO Doug Lentz. They contributed to the purse for the golf professionals as the title, and the hotel staff were accommodating hosts.

Farm Bill – a bite at a time

NRCS PUBLIC AFFAIRS
For the Ruidoso News

Like most new things, the 2008 Farm Bill has raised many questions.

How will the new Farm Bill work? There are more funds authorized, but what will that mean to me? Will I qualify, and what will I qualify for?

The rule-making process for this major piece of legislation is currently underway, and how its conservation provisions may apply to a specific situation, as always, is best answered by a visit to your local Natural Resources Conservation Service field office when information becomes available.

EQIP funding

Where Enviromental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) was funded for $4.92 billion for Fiscal Years 2002-07, funding for the 2008-2012 period is set at $7.325 billion.

That is $1.2 billion for 2008, $1.337 billion for 2009, $1.45 billion for 2010, $1.588 billion for 2011 and $1.75 billion for 2012.

Actual funding will depend on the money appropriated by Congress which may or may not be the total amount authorized each year.

Payment limitations

The overall payment limitation is reduced to $300,000 per person or legal entity over a 6-year period.

The Secretary of Agriculture may raise the limitation to $450,000 for projects of special environmental significance, including those involving methane digesters.

The 2008 Farm Bill limits payments for any practice to 75 percent of the practice costs and 100 percent of income foregone from practice installation.

Actual payments are being calculated nationwide on a schedule.

For the disadvantaged

The 2008 Farm Bill authorizes increased payments for socially disadvantaged farmers or ranchers in addition to beginning and limited resource producers – up to 90 percent.

It further allows these individuals to receive in advance up to 30 percent of the amount needed for purchasing materials or contracting.

Water conservation

Priority will be given to water conservation or irrigation efficiency applications that will reduce water use or where the producer agrees not to use any associated water savings to bring new land under irrigation production.

The 2008 Farm Bill extends cost sharing to include land or forest management practices and development of conservation or comprehensive nutrient management plans.

Conservation practices related to organic production and transition are now eligible, but payments to producers or entities are limited to $20,000 annually and $80,000 over the 6-year period.

To monitor the development of the rules guiding implementation of the 2008 Farm Bill conservation provisions, go to www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2008/index.html.

WATER BOYS

JULIE CARTER/RUIDOSO NEWS

Carrizozo Grizzlies junior high football team has a trio of sixth graders earning their stripes by serving as water boys at the games involving 7th, 8th, and 9th grade players. L-r are Gene Gore, Carlos Silva, and Erik Culley. The waterboys, as they proudly called themselves, kept the Carrizozo players hydrated during the game with the Capitan Tigers on Monday afternoon.

Farm Bill cut-off dates announced

The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service has announced that Oct. 17, 2008, is the cut-off date for sign-up for its 2009 Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program (WHIP).

"While we accept applications year around for these program, we have cut-off dates for consideration for funding in a specific fiscal year," said Bob Moorhead, district conservationist.

"We are urging local farmers and ranchers to apply as early as possible."

EQIP is available to individuals and entities with working farms and ranches (and non-industrial private forests) that face threats to soil, water, air and related natural resources.

It provides payments for cost incurred in environmental quality improvements.

Individual producers on Tribal lands, and Tribal governments, are eligible to apply.

Agricultural producers with federal land grazing permits are eligible, and if selected for a contract, may receive financial assistance to implement approved practices on their federal allotment.

The WHIP is a voluntary program for private landowners to develop and improve high quality habitat that supports wildlife populations.

The 2008 Farm Bill has changed the eligibility requirements of the program, and non-agricultural, as well as state, county or local government-owned lands are now ineligible for WHIP.

Land eligible for WHIP includes private agriculture land, non-industrial private forest land, and Tribal land.

The 2008 Farm Bill authorizes WHIP cost-share payments to be made to landowners to develop other types of wildlife habitat including habitat developed on pivot corners and irregular areas.

For more information on the Farm Bill Programs, contact Moorhead at the Carrizozo USDA NRCS Center at 648-2941 or in person at 307 12th St.

To Capitan students, teachers, staff and parents

The Capitan Board of Education wants to express how very proud we are of your accomplishments in your Annual Yearly Progress testing last year. Capitan School District is one of only 19 Districts out of the 89 in New Mexico that all the schools in the entire district made the AYP goals set by our state. You may not know that the State of New Mexico has goals that are some of the highest standards in the nation, so your meeting these goals puts you among the best in the country.

Only 245 schools of the 770 tested in New Mexico made AYP and Capitan has three of these schools. Great job! The numbers break down to: 164 elementary schools made the goal out of 448, 23 middle schools made the grade out of 144, and 43 high schools out of 140 passed to make AYP (38 alternative schools make up the balance of 770 total schools).

Capitan students, you are among the best in New Mexico and we are proud of you. Only one other district in Lincoln County successfully achieved district wide AYP, although several of our neighboring individual schools did make the mark. Capitan made AYP in all our schools. We on the school board have always known that Capitan was the best, and you have proven that we were right. So thank you for your hard work.

If you missed the article in the paper earlier, the numbers show us that we still have some room for improvement. Your successes are not unnoticed.

Capitan Elementary:
Participation = 99 percent
Math = 56.6 percent proficient AYP Goal = 44 percent
Reading = 83.8 percent proficient AYP Goal = 59 percent

Capitan Middle School:
Participation = 100 percent
Math = 35.4 percent proficient AYP Goal= 35 percent
Reading = 59.4 percent proficient AYP Goal = 53 percent

Capitan High School:
Graduation rate = 100 percent
Math = 54.8 percent proficient AYP Goal = 40 percent
Reading = 90.3 percent proficient AYP Goal = 56 percent

Our teachers and staff also deserve a great big "Atta Boy" for their hard work and innovative ideas in teaching and testing to achieve these results. Please be sure to tell the teachers you see around town how great they are doing and that you appreciate their dedication to teaching. As you know, these folks don't get the pay they deserve, so a thank you or a "Great Job" will be some encouragement.

Parents we couldn't do this without your help and support. Making sure your children are in school day in and day out is one of the biggest components of their success. It is also appreciated that your children are here during the time of testing. Participation is one area that causes many schools to fail simply because students don't show up.

If you are interested in the specific details, you can go to the New Mexico Public Education Department Web site for details on all schools. We on the Board of Education just wanted to give one big hooray for our students and teachers for accomplishing these goals.

JULIE CARTER/RUIDOSO NEWS

Junior high football doesn't get much attention because of staff and time constraints, but these Capitan and Carrizozo athletes showed fans their were just as serious about their game as any one varsity team. Left, Carrizozo's Marshall Ventura makes a run around a Tiger guard. Center, Cole Hubbard and Ventura are too late to stop a Tiger runner as he makes it across the goal line. Right, Tory Padilla holds on tight as a Grizzlie makes a hard tackle to take him out of bounds. The Tigers won the game 40-28.

Attorney General cracking down on white collar crime by public servants

SANTA FE – In an open letter, New Mexico Attorney General Gary King laid out some rules for government officials who have questions about the basic concept of not taking something that belongs to others.

"The DA's White Collar Crime Unit and my office's Government Accountability Division are working together to root out and prosecute crimes that are committed by public servants against the very people they work for – New Mexico citizens," he said.

King listed examples of a illegal activities for any state, county or local treasurer or any public officer or employee as:

• receiving a reward, consideration, or profit from loan or deposit of public funds

• using public funds for any purpose not authorized by law

• coercing employees into supporting political campaigns

• profiting through official acts, including family members

• using confidential government information for anyone's personal gain

• making a false public voucher

• offering or giving anything of value to a public officer or employee in return for official action

• selling goods or services to an employee they supervise through personal or family business; nor can they profit from or receive a commission for a sale to an employee they supervise.

• selling or being a party to any transaction to sell or receive profit or commission from the sale of any instructional material, furniture, equipment, insurance, school supplies or work under contract to the department, school district or public school with which such person is associated or employed.

"The illegal acts listed above range from misdemeanors to felonies and some are punishable by significant jail time in addition to large fines," King wrote.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT TO ALL INTERESTED GOVERNMENT AGENCIES AND PUBLIC GROUPS

In accordance with the environmental review guidelines of the Council on Environmental Quality found at 40 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) Part 1500 and with the use as guidance of the Implementing environmental review procedures of the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) found at 40 CFR Part 6 entitled "Procedures for Implementing the Requirements of the Council on Environmental Quality on the National Environmental Policy Act" the EPA has performed an environmental assessment of the following proposed action

Proposed Action Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs Joint Use Board Wastewater Treatment Facility Located in Ruidoso Downs, Lincoln County, NM

Applicant Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs Joint Use Board

EPA Project Numbers XP-97630701-4, XP-96631701-0, XP-96857101

Total Estimated Project Cost $34,000,000

Estimated Total EPA Funding $2,321,000

Estimated Local Share $31,679,000

Project Description The Fiscal Year Appropriations Acts for the EPA in FY 2002, FY 2003 and FY 2005 included special Congressional funding for water and waste water construction projects. The funding recipient was selected to receive funding through these special appropriations for construction of a wastewater treatment facility to meet the NPDES permit requirements for discharge flow to 0.1 mg/L total phosphorus (TP) and 1.0 mg/L total nitrogen (TN).

The current effluent flow from the existing wastewater treatment facility at Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, NM, exceeds that required by the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit. As part of the preliminary design process, the project engineers for the Joint Use Board (JUB) determined that the total maximum daily limit of 1.0 mg/L for TN required by the May 26, 2006, draft NPDES permit for the wastewater treatment plant, would be nearly impossible to achieve with the contemplated technology. The JUB subsequently appealed the state certification of the draft NPDES permit to the New Mexico Water Quality Commission. In May 2007, a Settlement Agreement was reached between the JUB and the New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) allowing effluent from the wastewater treatment plant to the environmentally sensitive Rio Ruidoso to have a TN limit of less than 9.0 mg/L daily maximum, if influent temperature is less than 18oC, and less than 6.0 mg/L, if influent temperature is 18oC or greater. The Settlement Agreement allowed these limits to be in force for an interim period from completion of construction of the new plant until the last day of the five-year NPDES permit. After that period, the effluent must achieve a final effluent limit of 1.0 mg/L TN on a 30-day average, and a daily maximum TN of 1.5 mg/L.

The Settlement Agreement affords the JUB the opportunity to use the first 54 months of the five-year NPDES permit to investigate and report on treatment technologies that would further reduce the total nitrogen in the effluent. It is also possible that the effluent from the new treatment facility will improve the river's health to a point that the 1.0 mg/L TN limit will no longer be required. In such case, the JUB may petition for relief from compliance to the 1.0 mg/L TN limit as provided by the Settlement Agreement. The Settlement Agreement did not call for a new preliminary engineering report, but did stipulate that the final design must incorporate a best-available-technology biological nutrient removal process. The process would be required to reduce TN and TP to the lowest possible concentrations. Construction of a new wastewater treatment plant to achieve compliance with the NPDES permit must be completed within 39 months of the date of issuance, which would make the current commissioning deadline October 2010. However, based on discussions with EPA and NMED, the JUB anticipates the actual commissioning deadline to be December 2010.

Findings On the basis of Environmental Assessment (EA), the Environmental Information Documents prepared by Taschek Environmental Consulting for the Village of Ruidoso and City of Ruidoso Downs Joint Use Board, and other available information, the EPA has made a preliminary determination that the project is not a major Federal action and that the preparation of an Environmental Impact Statement is not warranted. The project individually, cumulatively or in conjunction with any other action will not have a significant adverse effect on the quality of the environment. The JUB is the Designated Management Agency for the proposed project service area.

Comments regarding this preliminary decision not to prepare an EIS and issue a Finding of No Significant Impact (FNSI) may be submitted to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Planning and Coordination (6EN-XP), 1445 Ross Avenue, Dallas, Texas 75202-2733. All comments will be taken into consideration. This preliminary decision and the FNSI will become final after the 30-day comment period expires if no new information is provided to alter this finding. No administrative action will be taken on this decision during the 30-day comment period. Copies of the EA and requests for review of the Administrative Record containing the information supporting this decision may be requested in writing at the above address, or by telephone at (214) 665-8150.

Science-based crimes clock in at CBS' 'Eleventh Hour'

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Food that can paralyze.

Frozen bodies that won't thaw.

Cases of amateur cloning.

Such mysteries take a special detective to solve them. Played by British actor Rufus Sewell ("John Adams," "The Holiday"), Dr. Jacob Hood is the science-expert sleuth in "Eleventh Hour," "CSI" franchise mentor Jerry Bruckheimer's take on a 2006 U.K. miniseries that had Patrick Stewart in the central role.

The CBS revision premieres with the dangerous-food story next Thursday, Oct. 9, establishing Hood as an FBI consultant with an ever-present guardian in a field agent (Marley Shelton, "Grindhouse").

"I'm very prepared to go deeply into those subjects," Sewell says, "although I'm by nature a truant, and I've always tried to avoid work. I completely trust, in terms of the team of writers and their background work, that it wouldn't be a matter of checking up to find that they've got their facts wrong. I think I'm at the beginning of quite a big journey of education in many wide-ranging subjects."

That isn't disputed by the executive producers of "Eleventh Hour," longtime colleagues Ethan Reiff and Cyrus Voris ("Sleeper Cell"). "It's a science-fact show, it is not a science-fiction show," Reiff maintains. "It's (about) science that surrounds us every day of our lives already. If not every one of us, every other one of us has been directly affected in one form or another by cutting-edge breakthroughs in genetics, biochemistry, miniaturization and nanotechnology.

"I'm an insulin-dependent diabetic," Reiff adds, "and the insulin that keeps me alive is manufactured by genetically engineered bacteria. That's where this show lives and breathes, the science that's really here, and we think that's cool."

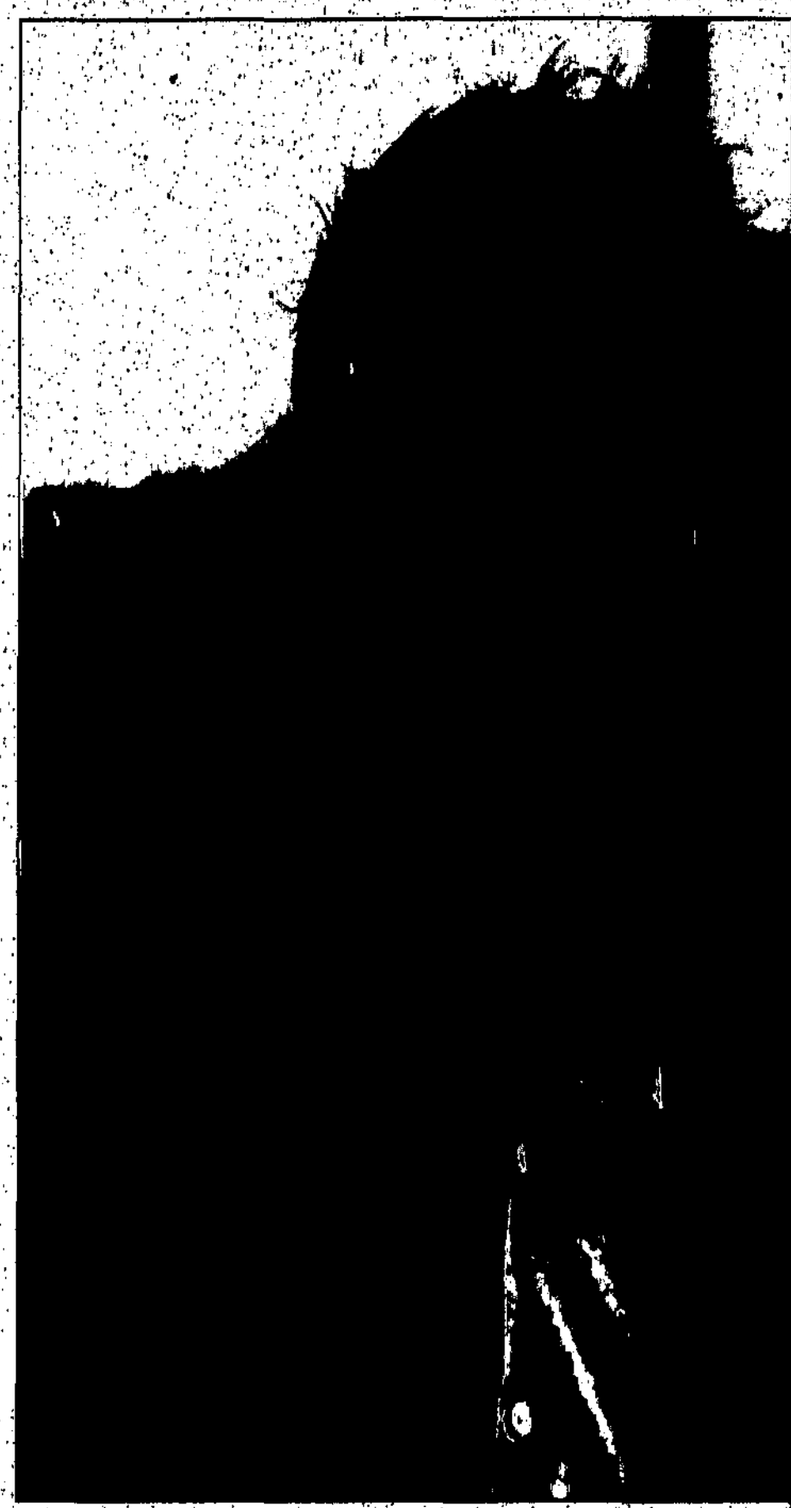
Voris agrees. "We have a full-time technical adviser who actually does have a biophysics background and is reading and vetting all the scripts," he says. "We're very conscious of trying to keep everything as accurate as possible. I think that's what separates 'Eleventh Hour' from some other shows like this, the idea that it is firmly entrenched in the real world.

"Danny Cannon (a 'CSI' veteran who's one of the show's directors) mentioned that he hopes that after every episode, people will run off and start Googling the topic and find out all this stuff."

Dropping his native accent for his new role, Sewell didn't see the original "Eleventh Hour" when it first aired in England, and he says he "studiously avoided looking at it" once he was pursued for the CBS version. "I don't need to worry about trying to be like Patrick Stewart, because obviously, you'd get Patrick Stewart if that's what you wanted.

"I really like the character, someone really smart who also has a little bit of mystery and is quirky and idiosyncratic and not without a sense of humor. That makes it not only more pleasant to film, but that's very much part of me. The show has its own character; it's very serious, but there's also a screwball element."

Indeed, Reiff confirms he and Voris were drawn to "Eleventh Hour" largely because "there's room in the show for character. It is a procedural show -- it's like a science investigation every week -- and at the same time, we're only working with two lead characters. We don't have five cops or six CSIs or four doctors or whatever. There's only two of them."



Rufus Sewell stars in "Eleventh Hour," premiering Thursday on CBS.

Lucas and the Force now with Cartoon Network

By Jacqueline Cutler

From the music's first notes, you enter a galaxy far, far away. That galaxy was once only accessible through the portal of a movie theater and for 30 years was the purview of humans and magnificently crafted aliens.

Now George Lucas has taken "Star Wars: The Clone Wars" to Cartoon Network as an animated show premiering Friday, Oct. 3, with a special one-hour block. The regular Friday series will be a half-hour, with the action unfolding between the second and third installments of the theatrical films.

Considering "Star Wars" fans are legion and that this is the most successful entertainment franchise ever, if a character were off, it'd have the blogosphere in an uproar. Lest anyone get his light saber flashing, it is safe to report that the TV show is excellent.

Once viewers become accustomed to watching digitized images, it all works. And really, was Yoda ever so much to look at?

The hero of this show, Anakin Skywalker (voice of Matt Lanter), is a young, brash Jedi, long before he becomes Darth Vadar.

"I thought it would be nice to see him as a normal Jedi and doing normal Jedi things and how he bonds with Obi-Wan Kenobi," Lucas says.

"Television allows me to tell a lot of stories and tell it on a different level than the kind of epic psychological play tragedy that the movies are. So that allowed an area I wanted to explore. And storm troopers and what it was like to be a clone and fight in the war, and I wanted to mature Anakin, and the way to do that was to give him a padawan."

The padawan, a Jedi apprentice, is Ahsoka Tano. She's pure of spirit but so impulsive she makes Anakin look meek by comparison.

"He has to behave himself a little more," Lucas says. "The best way to become an adult is to be a parent. He has to tutor her in being patient and all of the various aspects of being a Jedi."

Each episode features a self-contained story, and in the opening show, "Ambush," Yoda proves why he's a master. He may resemble a long-dead garden gnome, but his intelligence and reflexes allow him to handily beat formidable warriors such as Count Dooku's nasty henchwoman, Ventress. In the second installment, "Rising Malevolence," a Separatist weapon kills all in its path. Jedi Master Plo Koon looks like a goner, but Anakin and Ahsoka race to his rescue.

Even animated, "Star Wars" still feels otherworldly. The art is, as expected, out of this world. Mace Windu and Count Dooku look like the actors who voice them, respectively Samuel L. Jackson and Christopher Lee, but no one is too human.

Ultimately, the show manages to do what the movies do: reinforce that bravery, honesty and justice must vanquish cowardice, duplicity and evil.

It's also the sort of underpinning that can come off as contrived. Yet the textured characters and involved stories separate "Star Wars" from other series.

"A lot of people have grown up on 'Star Wars,' " Lucas says. "It's part of our culture. I didn't mean for it to be that way, but that's the way it is. It's like Mickey Mouse -- part of the culture. It was originally based on old stories, psychological motifs for thousands of years that appear in a lot of different mythology that existed around the world. That's where the magic cord of acceptance is. These are emotional issues that we all deal with."

Like most people under 40, those voicing the lead characters saw the films as kids and connected even more as adults.

Lanter, who voices Anakin, reflects on assuming an iconic role.

"Anakin is 'Star Wars,' " Lanter says. "They are huge shoes to fill. When I first got the job I was so excited and elated to have the job, and after that the worry set in. I am thinking to myself, 'This is 'Star Wars'; this is Anakin! How am I going to do this?' It really falls into place, and once I can see past this huge world I know what we are doing now. Even though it is Anakin and I do have to follow in six other actors' shoes -- in some format, whether Darth Vadar, (or Anakin) that kind of thing -- I am actually putting my own spin onto it, I am kind of making it my part."

Ashley Eckstein, who voices Ahsoka, had designs on other roles.

"I have an older brother, and I wanted to be like him desperately," she says. "I would watch all the same movies and play all the same sports. He was two years older. I would pretend to be R2-D2, and he would be C-3PO."

The franchise's message of righteousness overcoming evil never dims, she says.

"To hear the positive message that good will overcome evil, hang in there," Eckstein says, "everyone wants to hear that. I don't care how old you are."

As executive producer, Lucas is involved with each episode. As futuristic as the series is, it hearkens back to the TV of his youth.

"It's really nostalgic, back to older Saturday morning television shows," he says. "We still managed to have some very interesting stories that aren't actually comedies and have emotional content, and things to learn. We hope people enjoy it."

George Lucas is the executive producer of "Star Wars: The Clone Wars," premiering Friday on Cartoon Network.

A Closer Look

Look into the future and see the past on CBS' 'The Ex List'

Look into the future and see the past on CBS' 'The Ex List'

By Jacqueline Cutler
© Zap2it

No bachelorette party is complete without a visit to the psychic. Strippers may work for some brides-to-be and their pals, but how is it really a send-off until an ethereal woman studies a palm and sees more than the evidence of hard work?

Sometimes even the most practical woman wants a glance into the future, a glance unencumbered by logic. Such moments require walking into a storefront decorated with mystical objects, where a no-nonsense woman presides. Cross her palm with green, and if she's any good she will tell you enough of your past that you believe she sees your future.

A psychic (Anne Bedian) tells the main character of CBS' "The Ex List," premiering Friday, Oct. 3, part of what she wants to hear -- that she will marry.

The other part, though, is a condition Bella (Elizabeth Reaser, "Grey's Anatomy") would rather not know: She must marry within a year or will never know true love. Worse, the would-be groom is an ex-boyfriend. Now Bella must figure out who. The nicest way to describe Bella's past is that she was rarely lonely.

It's a terrific setup for a series, and it was one in Israel, though Diane Ruggiero, executive producer and writer, is tailoring it for American audiences. Bella Bloom owns a flower shop, and one wonders if her business were jewelry she'd be named Tiffany Gold.

The show is set in San Diego because "it's cheaper," Ruggiero says. Bella, though, is every woman, everywhere, intent on walking down the aisle.

"The message is being awake to the possibilities of life," Ruggiero says. "You don't know what's coming around the corner. You don't know what kind of magical cool thing is brewing, if you're just open to it. It's about what you are finding about yourself along the way that's important."

The show's premise allows for fun guest stars portraying Bella's former flames.

In the pilot, Eric Balfour plays a tattooed rocker with bad attitude. He is the sort of guy perfect for a spring break fling, but once final grades no longer matter, guys like this brooding egomaniac must be avoided.

He had once been a sensitive folk singer, so besotted with Bella he wanted to drink her blood, "but in a nice way," she says. Bella dumped him, on his birthday no less. He's used that pain to fuel his work, and he's a rather obnoxious and fun start to the show.

As Bella searches for her soul mate, they can represent a wide variety of men, leaving the door open for all kinds of actors. The character of Bella, however, had to be very specific, Ruggiero says.

The actress needed to be "someone who is accessible and relatable; someone I would want to hang out with," Ruggiero says. "Elizabeth is someone who is really beautiful and gorgeous, but you can hang out with and not be put out by. I would buy her having romantic turmoil and see her making a fool out of herself."

It's not something that bothers Reaser.

"I loved the idea of being able to play someone who unapologetically wants to fall in love and connect and being a total jackass and a buffoon," she says. "And it is so fun to play! She has a great spirit, and I love that about her."

What Bella lacks in romantic love, she makes up for in friends: Bella's best friend, Vivian (Alexandra Breckenridge), takes the anything-goes aspect of friendship a little too far. Her running gag in the pilot is about pubic hairstyles, and though the audience is shown nothing, she lifts her skirt to show Bella changes in her not-so-private parts. Some viewers will wish this running gag had been chased off the set. Aside from this nonsense, Bella's buddies add the dose of reality the lovelorn need.

"The aspect of friendship in the show, if we can do that authentically, it will be really great," Reaser says. "I don't have the kind of stability Bella has. I am always traveling. To see that is really cool. They are important to her."

One of her pals, Cyrus (Amir Talai), has the best lines in the pilot.

"I don't know why I spend so much time on my abs, when all I need is a little indifference," Cyrus says, as they're about to hit the surf.

"Cyrus, unlike me, is super laid-back," Talai says. "He isn't particularly interested in being employed. He has a fair amount of money in a savings account."

Augie (Adam Rothenberg) is the link between Cyrus and Bella, as he was her roommate in college and is Cyrus' roomie now.

The actors say they're having a terrific time on the set, just off the beach in San Diego. "The joy and the energy that comes across on the screen is just intensified," Rothenberg says. "I really do think it's a delightful show to just sit and watch people that you like.

Though it might initially appeal to women -- especially those who have sought psychics' advice -- there's plenty for men, as well, Talai says.

"This is fun and funny," he says. "You have jokes and people in swimwear. How can you lose?"

Elizabeth Reaser stars in "The Ex List" Friday on CBS.

An Inside Look

'Last Enemy' will have you looking over your shoulder

By John Crook
© Zap2it

During his strikingly diverse career, Robert Carlyle has played everything from a historical monster ("Hitler: The Rise of Evil") to a cheerful Scottish policeman ("Hamish Macbeth") to a James Bond villain ("The World Is Not Enough") to a reluctant male stripper ("The Full Monty") to a volatile Edinburgh psychopath ("Trainspotting").

Still, he never had tried playing someone who was a human shadow until "The Last Enemy," a crackling, politically charged "Masterpiece" miniseries premiering Sunday, Oct. 5, on PBS.

Set in England in the near future, "Enemy" opens as Stephen Ezard (Benedict Cumberbatch), a dweebish mathematician, returns from his research gig in China to London for the funeral of his brother, Michael (Max Beesley), who reportedly has been killed in a land-mine explosion in Afghanistan. Obsessively focused on his work, Stephen doesn't really care that Total Information Awareness, a new program to give authorities unlimited access to personal data, has turned Britain into what amounts to a police state. He certainly doesn't worry that there are sinister forces at work around him.

But just because you aren't paranoid doesn't mean they aren't really out to get you, and a dismayed Stephen soon finds himself swept up in a baffling series of events that suggest his very life may be in danger. Things go from bad to worse when he is kidnapped by David Russell (Carlyle), a rogue agent with startling news about Michael's death. But why is Russell helping Stephen? Do they share a common goal, or is Russell playing both ends against the middle, perhaps for his own ends?

"I don't know how much I can tell you without having to kill you," Carlyle says, laughing. "We actually felt that the more ambiguity Russell had, the better, so we trimmed and we trimmed and we trimmed (his dialogue). I don't think he says anything for the first two episodes, and all that time you're thinking, 'Who is this guy?' I think there are people like Russell in every country, although they don't often live in the country they're from."

A Closer Look

Sometimes all it takes is a pat on the back to feel good about a hard day at the office.

For ESPN's Chris McKendry, that came from an unlikely party in November 2007, after she and co-anchor Jay Harris did a live three-hour report on the indictment of Barry Bonds -- without the benefit of a script.

"To me, that was the very essence of 'SportsCenter,' " says McKendry, seen frequently these days as an anchor of its midday edition. "We went out there with wire copy of a paragraph, basically 'Bonds has been indicted.' And over the course of three hours ... we were just left out there to discuss sports, discuss Bonds' legacy, discuss the era in sports.

"I mean, it was three hours of, as we say, 'No scripts. No prompter. Go.' And thank God for, literally, the laptop, the Internet, that you can call up things. I would search my own name and find scripts I'd written on Bonds in the past, just to make sure my numbers were right. Of course, Research is throwing things at you fast and furiously.

"But what was really rewarding; a couple of days after that, I got a letter from George Grande, the very first 'SportsCenter' anchor, saying, 'Well done. You should be proud.' I saved it. I don't save a lot of things, but I saved that because I thought, 'That's cool, like I have a connection now back to the very first guy who ever did this.' "

After graduating from college in 1990, McKendry got a job with Group W in Washington, D.C., producing sports segments for TV stations across the country.

Horoscopes

ARIES - Mar 21/Apr 20
Aries, there's more than meets the eye to that new person in your life. It could pay to get to know this person a little bit better. A great relationship may grow.

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21
Taurus, there's no easy way to address a difficult problem, so you just have to step up and be honest. Work affairs take up too much of your time this week.

GEMINI - May 22/Jun 21
Some people do not appreciate your unique take on the world, Gemini. When meeting new people, you may want to walk the straight and narrow ... at least for a while.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22
You'll dabble in a few new things this week, Cancer. Why not try cooking, most especially recipes that are normally out of your comfort zone?

LEO - Jul 23/Aug 23
Leo, a moment of weakness shows others how many sides you really have. Don't hide the real you because others are bound to embrace you regardless.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Virgo, you're just now getting used to the new facets of your life. While you often say you're open to change, deep down it takes a while for you to adjust and reach your comfort zone.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Keeping secrets from family members can only lead to trouble, Libra. Be open and honest with those around you, even if you think they're not going to be happy with your decisions.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Keep biding your time, Scorpio. Soon you'll be able to make that big announcement you've been itching to let slip. Expect confrontation when news does get out.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Sagittarius, there's not much you can do about a tricky situation at home. So lay low and wait for the storm to pass. Busy yourself with mundane projects in the meantime.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Rash decisions only end in trouble, Capricorn. This comes to a head this week when you get in over your head. Don't worry; Taurus will bail you out.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Aquarius, stop making promises you cannot keep. Write down your to-do list and mark off items as they are completed. It's the only way to stay focused this week.

PISCES - Feb 19/Mar 20
Put financial concerns at the forefront of your week, Pisces. Otherwise you'll forget and you could land in trouble.

AUTOMOTIVE FLUID REPLACEMENT SCHEDULE

Do you know how to check motor oil levels? Are you aware of what type of water to use to tap off a car battery? Could it be time to add washer fluid?

If you've answered "no" or you aren't sure about any of these questions, it might be in your best interest to learn the basics of car maintenance, which includes maintaining fluid levels to keep your car operating optimally. Otherwise you could be unnecessarily spending extra at the nearest service station.

There are a few areas of attention on a vehicle that require periodic checking and refilling of automotive fluids. These fluids include oil, transmission fluid, brake fluid, washer fluid, and coolant. The key is knowing how often the fluids should be refilled or changed.

1. Motor oil: The overall consensus is that oil should be changed every 3 months or 3,000 miles, whatever comes first. Cars that are used less frequently may be able to go 6,000 miles between oil changes. However, if you notice performance issues, such as sluggish acceleration, it could be time for an oil change.

2. Transmission fluid: Most transmission breakdowns are traced back to poor transmission maintenance. Therefore, stay on top of transmission fluid. This should be topped off whenever needed, and actually flushed and replaced once a year for optimal performance.

3. Coolant: Because engine components have become more compact to save space and weight, cars actually run hotter than they used to. This means that maintaining the cooling system is imperative. Change coolant annually, preferably before large fluctuations in weather temperature.

4. Washer fluid: This fluid is expended often, so it should be checked regularly and replaced whenever the level seems low.

5. Brake fluid: This is probably the most ignored fluid in the car, and the most important. Brake fluid is not petroleum-based, so it can absorb moisture from the air, which diminishes its effectiveness and lowers braking performance. Check this fluid with every oil change to make sure levels are adequate. Brake fluid should be replaced every two to three years so that sludge does not build up.

6. Power steering fluid: This should be checked twice a year and topped off whenever necessary.

7. Car battery: If your battery is an unsealed variety it will need water to operate correctly. The cells on the top of the battery can be opened to check the water levels. Only use distilled water to bring up the levels.

DID YOU KNOW?

While many drivers are understandably (and rightfully) concerned about the costs of fuel, those costs are largely out of their control. But not all costs associated with a vehicle are beyond driver control. Most notably, drivers can control their insurance costs not only by being a safe driver, but by choosing the right vehicle as well. While conventional wisdom has suggested that smaller cars help avoid accidents, data notes that's really not the case. Small cars get into more accidents than their larger counterparts, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS). In fact, when studying 2004-06 models, the IIHS found that of the top 10 most expensive cars to insure, only one was an SUV, the Cadillac Escalade. The Escalade is a high-end SUV with a large price tag, which no doubt inflates its insurance costs. Other vehicles among the top 10 included the Hyundai Tiburon, Scion tC, and Chevrolet Cobalt, each of which is a compact car. On the opposite end of the spectrum, seven of the 10 vehicles on the least-expensive to insure list were 4-Wheel Drive vehicles, which are typically larger automobiles. So while gas prices might be quite expensive for larger vehicles, what you spend on extra gas you could be saving on insurance.

DID YOU KNOW?

Yom Kippur is considered the most important of the Jewish holidays. Also referred to as "The Day of Atonement," Yom Kippur's importance is such that even many secular Jews, who do not strictly observe other holidays, observe Yom Kippur. Attendance at synagogue is often significantly higher on Yom Kippur, and many Jews fast throughout the day. For Orthodox Jews, Yom Kippur services typically begin around 8 or 9 a.m., and that session then continues until 3 p.m. After a brief rest period, services then begin again around 5 p.m., continuing through to nightfall. In Israel, the sacrifices made on Yom Kippur are great and widespread. In addition to no television and radio broadcasts, Israel shuts down all airports on Yom Kippur, as well as all shops and businesses. Theologians compare the importance of Yom Kippur to that of Good Friday in the Christian faith. That's largely because of the theme of atonement associated with both Yom Kippur and Good Friday. Yom Kippur is a day for those of the Jewish faith to atone for their sins, while Good Friday is seen as the event in which Jesus Christ granted humanity atonement through his blood.

When Does it Pay to Go Organic?

The organic food market is a booming industry. In 2006 alone, Americans spent $16.7 billion on organic foods, typically vegetables and fruit. An Organic Trade Association survey has discovered that organic food sales are projected to surpass $25 billion by the end of this year. According to the National Restaurant Association's 2007 Restaurant Industry Forecast, chefs ranked organic food as third on a list of the top 20 items for 2007. Today more and more chefs are including organic foods on the menu, as are individuals who are cooking at home.

Organic foods are those that are grown with little to no conventional pesticides and synthetic fertilizers, and are not boosted with antibiotics, growth hormones, genetic engineering, or irradiation, according to the US Department of Agriculture.

Little is really known about what pesticides and generic engineering of produce and other foods may do to the human body. There is some evidence that pesticide effects on humans include damage to the nervous system, reproductive system and other organs, developmental and behavioral abnormalities, disruption of hormone function as well as immune dysfunction. pregnant women can be passed on to the fetus, and breast-fed babies can also consume pesticides passed on from their mothers. Smaller children are more likely to be affected by pesticide residue. The alternative is to buy organic foods.

As anyone who has purchased organic foods can attest, they tend to cost more than conventionally grown foods. So it pays to understand what foods offer the greatest risk for pesticide residue than other foods. You can make the determination as to whether the extra cost is warranted.

In general, produce where the outer skin isn't eaten can be purchased as non-organic. Those like pineapples, onions, citrus fruits, and bananas, for example, will be cleaned and peeled before eaten. However, some produce can harbor higher levels of toxic pesticides. Here are items that you may want to select in organic forms:

* Cranberries
* Green beans
* Nectarines
* Sweet bell peppers
* Peaches
* Celery
* Strawberries
* Cucumbers
* Pears
* Potatoes
* Apples
* Tomatoes
* Cherries
* Peas
* Cantaloupe
* Lettuce

It's important to keep in mind that not all organic food is up to the same levels as others. Imported produce -- even those labeled organic -- might not be grown to the same standards as United States produce. Grapes, cucumbers, lettuce and more may have higher levels of residues than home-grown produce.

ture a large number of E85 stations, while there are those like Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alaska, and the District of Columbia that offered no E85 availability in 2007.

The list of states that have the highest number of stations (over 40 per state), include: The Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Missouri.

Presumed "green" state California only had 6 E85 pumps across the state as of 2007.

To find out what stations by you carry E85, visit e85vehicles.com

It is important to note that E85 may not offer the same amount of power as regular gasoline. In a recent study by Consumer Reports it was discovered that when a 2007 Chevrolet Tahoe was filled up with E85 it garnered 10 mpg on ethanol versus 14 mpg on gasoline. While using ethanol fuel may be better for the environment, it may require you to fill up more frequently.

Brave the new world.

New CBS series combines science with explosive drama

The new CBS series Eleventh Hour focuses on the brave new world of science fact with thrilling stories ripped from today's headlines—but each with its own dramatic twist—as viewers follow the special investigations of a brilliant biophysicist and science advisor to the government, Dr. Jacob Hood.

Hood, played by British actor Rufus Sewell, is unrelenting in his pursuit of individuals, corporations and secret societies that employ scientific discoveries meant for the good of mankind but that are being used for nefarious purposes. In the first few episodes, Hood will investigate scientific crises and crimes including illegal human cloning, "Frankenfood" (genetically modified food gone awry), drugs that are dispensed into the water system causing people to go insane, and gene doping in athletes.

"I think these are things that everyone worries about," says Sewell of the cutting-edge science of the past decade that is the result of breakthroughs in genetics, biochemistry, miniaturization and nanotechnology. "Our lives are hugely affected by them, but it is only when we suddenly realize how our lives are affected by them that we suddenly start caring about them."

In his quest to uncover the perpetrators, Hood demonstrates to his bosses at the FBI that he has no perception of when his own life is in peril. As a result, he is assigned a handler, special agent Rachel Young, played by Marley Shelton, whose job it is to keep him alive and handle any of the law enforcement elements that Hood encounters in his investigations.

"He's a great brain, but the sort of person you could tell what he had for dinner because some of it would be on his shoulder," Sewell explains. "But he also lacks a great sense of personal danger. It is not quite the same as being brave, but it has the same effect. He doesn't know when he is going to be hit on the head, so he needs looking after."

Eleventh Hour, based on a British miniseries and airing Thursdays at 10 p.m. this fall on CBS, is from acclaimed producer Jerry Bruckheimer, whose company has been behind such TV hits as CSI: Crime Scene Investigation, CSI: Miami, CSI: NY, Without a Trace, Cold Case and the Emmy Award-winning reality series The Amazing Race. The show will be executive-produced by Bruckheimer, Jonathan Littman, Danny Cannon, Cyrus Voris, Ethan Reiff and Mick Davis.

To make sure the series remains based in reality and doesn't become science fiction, the writing staff boasts a former NASA employee, who was quite literally a rocket scientist, and a former science journalist, who has written for such prestigious publications as Time and The New Yorker. When a script is written, it is sent to the series' full-time technical advisor, Andrew Bazarko, who has a background in biophysics, for review. The stories take a few liberties with factual cases for dramatic effect, which will make Eleventh Hour as much of a rollercoaster of thrills and chills as Voris and Reiff's Emmy-nominated miniseries Sleeper Cell.

AT THE

ELEVENTH HOUR

"I guarantee you that at 11 o'clock, your local news will probably have a story that is tied into whatever the theme of that week's Eleventh Hour is," claims Voris.

As for the title, Hood is brought in to save the day late in the game, at the eleventh hour. But the title is a metaphor for the fact that the world in which we now live is one in which technology has gotten so advanced that it begs the question: Has science become so advanced and exploited that mankind can't manage it anymore?

"Any time human beings have control, there's this potential for moral and ethical crisis because not every human being is an altruistic good guy," Reiff points out. "So you create these tools, devices and methodologies that have the potential for doing incredible good for mankind, but there's also potential for it to be used by somebody to do something that's damaging."

And Dr. Jacob Hood represents the world's last line of defense. His goal is to prevent mankind from reaching the calamitous twelfth hour.

"I don't think he is a crusader for any one point of view," Sewell says. "He will have surprising viewpoints that hit you at any given point, but he is not a spokesman for excessive beliefs. He has his own morality, but I like to think that is slippery."

Paula Deen oversees a food empire with her sons, Bobby and Jamie.

Q What can you tell me about Paula Deen and her sons, Jamie and Bobby? I watch them on the Food Network.
—Margaret Walker, Circleville, Ohio

Paula Deen, 61, began her culinary career in her kitchen in 1989 with a home-based lunch delivery service, The Bag Lady, and her two sons, Jamie and Bobby, distributing her homemade chicken salad sandwiches and warm cookies to local businesses in Savannah, Ga. Today, she's on top of a growing food empire that includes Paula's Party on the Food Network, best-selling cookbooks, her own magazine and a hot-spot Savannah restaurant, The Lady & Sons. Jamie and Bobby manage the eatery while working on their own food and travel show, Road Tasted.

Q I was disappointed that Mario Lopez wasn't on the Dancing with the Stars tour. What is he doing instead?
—Kendra Kendig, Easton, Md.

Even though Lopez, 34, didn't win Dancing with the Stars, it was a great showcase for his talents. It even led to the opportunity for him to fulfill a lifetime dream—on Broadway. In April, the Extra weekend co-host joined the production of A Chorus Line as Zach, the demanding director of the play-within-a-play. Lopez also has been busy hosting MTV's America's Best Dance Crew and autographing copies of his new book, Mario Lopez's Knockout Fitness.

Black Sheep actor Robert Conrad

Q What's happening with Robert Conrad, who made his start in Hawaiian Eye, went on to become the handsome hero of Wild Wild West and then play Pappy on Baa Baa Black Sheep?
—Barbara Feske, Spokane, Wash.

Conrad, 73, lives in Southern California where, except for an unsuccessful run to become president of the Screen Actors Guild in 2005, he stays mostly under the radar. His last movie role was in Dead Above Ground in 2002. More recently, he recorded audio episode introductions to the DVD release of Wild Wild West. In 2003, Conrad lost control of his car, hitting another vehicle and injuring the driver. He, too, was injured in the crash and later pleaded no contest to DUI charges.

HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS

Delighting fans with hoops and humor for eight decades

Lines form outside the Budweiser Events Center in Loveland, Colo. (pop. 50,608), looking more like a group headed to a G-rated movie than one bound for a basketball game. Inside, the sound of squeaking sneakers on hardwood reverberates around the half-lit arena. The world-renowned Harlem Globetrotters, basketball's tireless traveling ambassadors of fun and frolic, are in pregame warm-ups, wowing a handful of onlookers before the 7 p.m. show.

During a practice drill, a chalk mark—set 12 inches above the 10-foot rim on the backboard—is the object of the famed roundball troupe. Players take turns running full speed to the hoop, leaping absurdly high before either touching the mark or besting it, inching the mark higher and higher up the backboard. It is an awesome display, but then, athleticism is only a part of the package when the Harlem Globetrotters hit town.

For more than eight decades, the legendary cast of players has been crisscrossing the globe, weaving its spell in 119 countries on six continents in front of 128 million fans, with a show equal parts basketball, comedy, education and audience participation. All shows feature Globetrotter University, an interactive pregame session in which players instruct kids and adults on the Globetrotters' golden rules from their "C.H.E.E.R. for Character" program—Cooperation, Healthy mind and body, Effort, Enthusiasm and Responsibility—while teaching ball-handling skills to people picked from the audience. And, of course, it's all done with good humor.

"A lot of stuff you don't want to change," says former player Clyde Sinclair, 49, now a head coach with the team, of the venerable skits. "The Globetrotters have been around 82 years, why change it?"

Bucketfuls of laughs, literally, consist of the time-honored pail-of-water caper (the crowd is doused three times) that ends in a final bucket toss of confetti. Other frivolity includes endless baiting of the referee; encouraging the sellout crowd to sing "YMCA" between quarters; inviting a kid out of the stands to shoot a free throw (he made it) during the game; and the classic routine of pulling an opponent's shorts down. The ageless antics still ring with audiences of all ages.

The Goldings cheer for the Globetrotters.

Special K Daley hoists ball handler Scooter Christensen.

"I like the part where he pulled down the man's pants," gleefully shouts Brooklin Golding, 5, of Kimball, Neb. (pop. 2,559), attending the game with her parents and older brother. The Golding family also were the recipients of a tossed bucket of water from the Globetrotters. "Grant has their DVD, and he'd watch it all day if he could," says Gene Golding of his 8-year-old son.

From haylofts to center stage

The team's roots trace back to 1927, when a young coach and promoter named Abe Saperstein took his all-Negro basketball team to Hinckley, Ill. (pop. 1,994), for its first game. Saperstein grew up admiring the talent of black kids playing the sport on the streets of Chicago. His concept of an all-black professional touring team offered a novel contrast to the all-white teams of the time.

Saperstein named his outfit the Harlem Globetrotters, for the neighborhood in New York City widely considered a seat of American black culture. He also believed out-of-town teams carried a certain mystique. Oddly, none of the players were from Harlem, and the team would not make its first appearance there until 1968. But at the outset, with the desolation of the Great Depression looming, the business of Globetrotters basketball was hardly a laughing matter. The team, playing anywhere against all comers, barnstormed in drafty and unheated Midwest haylofts, dancehalls, warehouses and cowsheds, often traveling 250 miles over dirt roads by rickety auto to remote outposts that might net $5 total.

Through it all, they played some serious basketball. By 1940, the Globetrotters were the best team in the game competitively, winning the World Professional Basketball Championship in Chicago that same year and defeating the NBL and BAA (forerunners to the NBA) champion Minneapolis Lakers twice in the late '40s.

Clowning was first introduced to the team in the late 1930s, eventually settling at the core of the Globetrotters' successful format. Pioneers "Runt" Pullins, an expert ball handler, and center Inman Jackson, inaugurator of the team's early antics, became archetypes of the hallmark Globetrotter centerpiece: the showman and the dribbler. That surefire combo has steadfastly remained the team's nucleus, so expertly executed and re-created through the decades by the likes of transcendent dribbler Marques Haynes and showman Goose Tatum in the 1940s and '50s; the legendary 1960s-'70s-'80s duo of Meadowlark Lemon and dribbler Curly Neal; and today's reigning stars, showman "Special K" Daley and "Scooter" Christensen.

Harlem Globetrotters

Meadowlark Lemon and Curly Neal are among the Globetrotter greats.

Neal, a 22-year Globetrotter legend, sees a visible difference in today's group from the Trotters of old. "We're getting better," Neal says of today's team. "There's more athleticism, definitely." But it's the personal touch that softens the onetime wizard dribbler. "We always hug when we see each other, like we're teammates, like we've been playing together."

Both Daley and Christensen grew up well aware of the famous hoop troupe. "I saw clips of the Globetrotters growing up," says Daley, 31, the only applicant of a 2004 Trotters tryout of 300 candidates in Los Angeles to make the team, "but I never actually saw a full game until I had on a jersey and was on the bench. I was out there laughing like a fan."

Christensen's story is astounding. The dribbling ace had a good office job with the NBA's Phoenix Suns when a Globetrotters' scout spotted him practicing with the team and inquired about him. "That's our video coordinator," the scout was told. Suns players had been trying to help Christensen get a job playing basketball overseas. "Here comes the Globetrotters scout, and he's like, 'Who's this kid?'" remembers Christensen, who got the Trotters' invite and joined the squad in 2006.

Daley and Christensen are part of an all-time Harlem Globetrotters roster that includes NBA legends Wilt Chamberlain, Connie Hawkins and Nat "Sweetwater" Clifton. To Daley, joining that hallowed cast is his biggest thrill.

"Carrying on the tradition and being able to say that I was a Globetrotter, that's the best part for me," Daley says.

One tough bit of acclimation all Globetrotters undergo is the transition from competitive athlete to showman. "It takes awhile to get used to," says Christensen, 29, a standout player for the University of Montana. "Your competitive mind never leaves you, and it's still there with me now."

Treating fans like friends

The Globetrotters 2007-08 "Magic As Ever" tour of North America drew 2 million spectators to 241 appearances in 203 cities in 45 states, the District of Columbia and four Canadian provinces.

"We are the world's home team, and our goal is to be accessible around the globe," says Globetrotters CEO Kurt Schneider. "This iconic brand has been re-energized and is poised to assert itself as a dominant form of family entertainment worldwide for years to come."

At evening's end, if they haven't already wrapped the near-capacity crowd of 5,000 around their collective talented finger, the Globetrotters ensure it, inviting the entire audience down onto the court for autographs and pictures. As a lengthy line forms in front of him, "Special K" Daley marvels at the wonder of it all.

"I was always one of those players that played for the crowd, so the Globetrotters brought that out in me," he says. "Now I'm encouraged to do that; they tell me to do things that coaches in high school and college used to hate me to do! I love it, and it's strictly for the fans' enjoyment. It's not about wins or losses. It's about smiles on everybody's faces out there." ★

GET MOVING

For years, Jess Anne Cole, an elementary school principal in Clinton, Tenn. (pop. 9,409), put everyone—and everything—else first: her three daughters, ailing parents, graduate school classes. It always seemed she had a church casserole to fix, a school event to host or her daughters' basketball games to attend. "(My husband) John and I didn't have any time for ourselves," she says. "And certainly not for exercise."

But the years of selflessness had a price: extra pounds and fatigue. At school, she'd think about how long it was until bedtime. When teachers brought goodies, she'd munch mindlessly. She scolded herself for gaining weight and not exercising, but was reluctant to start because the task ahead seemed overwhelming: the diets, the food diaries, the strength-training and strenuous regimens she'd heard about but never tried. "When you're not living healthy, it seems like such a hurdle to get back on track," she says.

A lucky convergence of self-disgust and wisdom changed that. One day two years ago, just after school let out, she heard the U.S. surgeon general mention on television that everyone should "move" at least a half-hour each day. "I thought, 'Well, that's simple. Surely I can give myself 30 minutes a day.' I also knew it was important to do weight-bearing exercise to prevent osteoporosis," says Cole, who at 53 is a prime candidate for the age-related bone loss associated with declining estrogen levels.

Jess Anne Cole took the U.S. surgeon general's advice two years ago and started moving. Today, she works out each Saturday with the "Go-Go Girls," an all-female exercise group that she helped organize in Clinton, Tenn.

Cole dusted off a treadmill she'd bought years earlier, vowing to walk 30 minutes a day for 30 days. If she stuck to the routine that long, she thought, she'd have adopted the exercise habit. Dressed in pajamas and tennis shoes, she hopped on the treadmill every evening after school, walking at the machine's slowest speed.

"It was so hard. I felt like I was hauling logs," she recalls. "I didn't know a person could sweat so much. But I took the decision-making out of it. I thought, 'It's like going to work every day: you just have to.'"

To her surprise, the drudgery of walking started getting easier: she wasn't sweating so much and she could go faster. For 30 days she never missed a day—and she noticed she was feeling better, was less tired and was losing weight. She began exercising 30 minutes outside each day, mixing walking with a few minutes of jogging. Within several months she started entering organized runs and walks, culminating in a half-marathon that her husband ran with her. "I'm often the last one, and I can tell the officials want to go home," Cole says. "But my husband says, 'Jess Anne, you're off the couch.'"

Besides, she knows she's done her body a favor. In two years, she's lost 40 pounds, and stronger bones are a less visible byproduct of her new healthy lifestyle.

"Exercise like walking or jogging is particularly important for women as they age, since the loss of estrogen is associated with a rapid loss of bone tissue," says Dr. Kerry J. Stewart, director of clinical and research exercise physiology at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore.

Studies have shown that weight-bearing exercise can markedly reduce bone loss in postmenopausal women—or even build bone and make them stronger as they adapt to the stress of exercise.

Although Cole still takes blood pressure medication, she says walking up stairs isn't as difficult as it used to be. "I haven't turned into a runway model, but I feel younger and stronger, and have tons more energy," she says.

Homesick for the camaraderie she missed when her half-marathon training was over, Cole and a friend started a local exercise group that now numbers 40 members. The "Go-Go Girls" walk and run at 8 a.m. each Saturday, followed by a coffee hour. "Now I try to surround myself with people who are moving," she says, noting that she can't return to her sedentary ways.

"Moving affects everything," she adds. "It does as much for your head as your body. It keeps you balanced, with an I-can-do-it attitude. I can't sit and knit the rest of my life. I've got to keep moving."

Actonel is a prescription medication to treat and prevent postmenopausal osteoporosis.

Important Safety Information for Actonel® tablets.
You should not take Actonel if you are allergic to any of the ingredients, if you have low blood calcium (hypocalcemia), have kidneys that work poorly, or cannot stand or sit upright for 30 minutes. Follow dosing instructions carefully to lower the chance of these events occurring. Side effects may include stomach pain, upset stomach, or back, muscle, bone or joint pain, sometimes severe. Tell all your health care providers, including your dentist, about all the medicines that you take. Contact your doctor for medical advice about side effects, or if you have questions about Actonel.

NEW Actonel
(risedronate sodium) tablets
Once-a-Month

Please see Actonel Patient Information on the following page. Actonel.com 1-877 Actonel

Patient Information: ACTONEL® (AK-toh-nel) Tablets

ACTONEL (risedronate sodium) tablets 5 mg, ACTONEL (risedronate sodium) tablets 35 mg, ACTONEL (risedronate sodium) tablets 75 mg, and ACTONEL (risedronate sodium) tablets 150 mg for Osteoporosis.
Read this information carefully before you start to use your medicine. Read the information you get every time you get more medicine. There may be new information. This information does not take the place of talking with your healthcare provider about your medical condition or your treatment. If you have any questions or are not sure about something, ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist.

What is the most important information I should know about ACTONEL?
ACTONEL may cause problems in your stomach and esophagus (the tube that connects the mouth and the stomach), such as trouble swallowing (dysphagia), heartburn (esophagitis), and ulcers. You might feel pain in your bones, joints, or muscles (See "What are the Possible Side Effects of ACTONEL?").
You must follow the instructions exactly for ACTONEL to work and to lower the chance of serious side effects. (See "How should I take ACTONEL?").

What is ACTONEL?
ACTONEL is a prescription medicine used
- to prevent and treat osteoporosis in postmenopausal women
- to increase bone mass in men with osteoporosis
- to prevent and treat osteoporosis in men and women that is caused by treatment with steroid medicines such as prednisone
- to treat Paget's disease of bone in men and women. The treatment for Paget's disease is very different than for osteoporosis and uses a different dose of ACTONEL. This leaflet does not cover using ACTONEL for Paget's disease. If you have Paget's disease, ask your healthcare provider how to use ACTONEL.

ACTONEL may reverse bone loss by stopping more loss of bone and increasing bone strength in most people who take it, even though they won't be able to see or feel a difference. ACTONEL helps lower the risk of breaking bones (fractures). Your healthcare provider may measure the thickness (density) of your bones or do other tests to check your progress.

Who should not take ACTONEL?
Do not take ACTONEL if you:
- have low blood calcium (hypocalcemia)
- cannot sit or stand up for 30 minutes
- have kidneys that work poorly
- have an allergy to ACTONEL. The active ingredient in ACTONEL is risedronate sodium. (See the end of this leaflet for a list of all the ingredients in ACTONEL.)

Tell your doctor before using ACTONEL if:
- you are pregnant or may become pregnant. We do not know if ACTONEL can harm your unborn child.
- you are breast-feeding or plan to breast-feed. We do not know if ACTONEL can pass through your milk and if it can harm your baby.
- you have kidney problems. ACTONEL may not be right for you.

Tell your doctor about all the medicines you take, including prescription and nonprescription medicines, vitamins and herbal supplements.
ACTONEL can interact with other medicines. Keep a list of all the medicines you take. Show it to all your healthcare providers, including your dentist and pharmacist, each time you get a new medicine.

How should I take ACTONEL?
The following instructions apply to all patients taking ACTONEL:
- Take ACTONEL exactly as prescribed by your healthcare provider.
- Take ACTONEL first thing in the morning before you eat or drink anything except plain water.
- Take ACTONEL while you are sitting up or standing.
- Take ACTONEL with 6 to 8 ounces (about 1 cup) of plain water. Do not take it with any other drink besides plain water.
- Swallow ACTONEL whole. Do not chew the tablet or keep it in your mouth to melt or dissolve.
- After taking ACTONEL you must wait at least 30 minutes BEFORE:
  - lying down. You may sit, stand, or do normal activities like read the newspaper or take a walk.
  - eating or drinking anything except plain water.
  - taking vitamins, calcium, or antacids. Take vitamins, calcium, and antacids at a different time of the day from when you take ACTONEL.
- Keep taking ACTONEL for as long as your healthcare provider tells you.
- For ACTONEL to treat your osteoporosis or keep you from getting osteoporosis, you have to take it exactly as prescribed.
- If you miss a dose of ACTONEL, call your healthcare provider for instructions.
- If you take more than your prescribed dose of ACTONEL, call your healthcare provider right away.
- Your healthcare provider may tell you to take calcium and vitamin D supplements and to exercise.

What is my ACTONEL schedule?
ACTONEL tablets are made in 4 different dosages (amounts). How often you should take your tablet depends upon the dosage that your doctor has prescribed (recommended) for you.
- 5 mg tablets are yellow. One tablet should be taken every day in the morning.
- 35 mg tablets are orange. One tablet should be taken once a week in the morning.
- 75 mg tablets are pink. One tablet should be taken in the morning two days in a row every month.
- 150 mg tablets are blue. One tablet should be taken once a month in the morning.

If you miss your dose in the morning, do not take it later in the day. You should call your healthcare provider for instructions.

What should I avoid while taking ACTONEL?
- Do not eat or drink anything except water before you take ACTONEL and for at least 30 minutes after you take it. (See "How should I take ACTONEL?")
- Do not lie down for at least 30 minutes after you take ACTONEL.
- Foods and some vitamin supplements and medicines can stop your body from absorbing (using) ACTONEL. Therefore, do not take anything other than plain water at or near the time you take ACTONEL.

What are the possible side effects of ACTONEL?
Stop taking ACTONEL and tell your healthcare provider right away if:
- swallowing is difficult or painful
- you have chest pain
- you have very bad heartburn or it doesn't get better

Possible serious side effects may include
- esophagus or stomach problems, including ulcers, pain, or trouble swallowing. Tell your healthcare provider if you have pain or discomfort in your stomach or esophagus.
- low calcium and other mineral disturbances. If you already have one (or more) of these problems, it should be corrected before taking ACTONEL.
- pain in bones, joints or muscles, sometimes severe. Pain may start as soon as one day or up to several months after starting ACTONEL.
- jaw-bone problems in some people, which may include infection and slower healing after teeth are pulled. Tell your healthcare providers, including your dentist, right away if you have these symptoms.

Common side effects include the following:
- back and joint pain
- upset stomach and abdominal (stomach area) pain
- short-lasting, mild flu-like symptoms, which are reported with the monthly doses and usually get better after the first dose.

Other possible side effects may include:
- Allergic and severe skin reactions. Tell your healthcare provider if you develop any symptoms of an allergic reaction including: rash (with or without blisters), hives, or swelling of the face, lips, tongue, or throat. Get medical help right away if you have trouble breathing or swallowing.
- Eye inflammation. Tell your healthcare provider if you get any eye pain, redness, or if your eyes become more sensitive to light.

Call your doctor for medical advice about side effects. You may report side effects to FDA at 1-800-FDA-1088.

How should I store ACTONEL?
- Store ACTONEL between 68°F to 77°F (20°C to 25°C).
- Keep ACTONEL and all medicines out of the reach of children.

General information about ACTONEL:
Medicines are sometimes prescribed for conditions that are not mentioned in patient information leaflets. Do not use ACTONEL for a condition for which it was not prescribed. Do not give ACTONEL to other people, even if they have the same symptoms you have. It may harm them.

What if I have other questions about ACTONEL?
This leaflet summarizes the most important information about ACTONEL for osteoporosis. If you have more questions about ACTONEL, ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist. They can give you information written for healthcare professionals. For more information, call 1-877-ACTONEL (toll-free) or visit our web site at www.actonel.com.

TURNING HEADS WITH WOODEN HATS

Master wood turner Chris Ramsey, 45, balances a large piece of maple on a lathe in his Somerset, Ky., workshop. As the wood spins, he uses a cutting tool to shape the outside of a wearable work of art—a cowboy hat.

Satisfied with the exterior, Ramsey begins shaping the hat's inside. After hollowing out some of the wood, he turns off the lights and places a low-wattage light bulb inside the hat. The wood glows a soft red, becoming brighter as Ramsey pares the hat's crown by hand to within a sheer fraction of an inch.

"When the wood is thin enough, it becomes translucent," Ramsey says.

The wood is then sanded, before clamps and rubber bands are used to gradually bend the hat from round into a head-friendly oval shape. "The trick is getting it to bend and not to crack," he says. "You can go from having a $700 hat to having a really expensive piece of firewood pretty quick."

Ramsey devotes about 40 hours to create a wooden hat, which weighs 7 to 10 ounces, from a 120-pound solid block of hardwood.

Ramsey began turning wood as a hobby in the late 1990s, primarily making bowls. He stumbled onto his hat-making business by accident. While making a planter for his wife in 1998, he noticed that it looked a lot like a bowler hat and he began experimenting.

"My first tries weren't much to write home about," says Ramsey, who's since made more than 1,200 hats, from woods such as ambrosia, maple and cherry.

Eventually he perfected hats of all kinds—10-gallon cowboy hats, top hats, fishing hats, and even baseball caps—and started a business, fittingly named Knot-Head. "My granddad used to call me that when I was a boy," Ramsey says. "So when I started turning hats, it somehow seemed appropriate."

To devote all of his attention to Knot-Head, Ramsey sold his successful fiber optics communications company in 1999. "The company made a lot of money, but, as the old adage goes, money cannot buy happiness," he says. "Turning is what brought me happiness. I closed the company, gave my accounts to a friend who was in the business and began turning full-time. I've never looked back."

He began selling his hats at craft fairs and during the annual Kentucky Derby in Louisville. Business boomed as celebrity customers such as President George W. Bush, singer Charlie Daniels, and NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt Jr. were spotted wearing his creations. "George Bush wore his wooden cowboy hat to the Houston Rodeo once," Ramsey says. "He can step out of the car, walk around wearing it for 15 minutes, and I get 100 orders."

Most of his hats are custom-made, but some are exhibited and for sale at art galleries and folk art centers around the nation. That's where Willa Brigham, host of the kids' TV show Smart Start Kids, first spotted Ramsey's work.

"I saw it at the Folk Art Center in Asheville, N.C.," says Brigham, who saved for four years to buy one of Ramsey's hats. "Every year for three years I stopped by to see the hat. On the fourth year, I had saved my money . . . and I left with a wormy wood maple cowboy hat."

Brigham is pleased with her purchase. "It's Ramsey still is a bit surprised by the reaction to his wearable artwork. "When I started turning, it was a hobby," he says. "It was something that made me happy, very happy. HEARTY FARE

Appetites crave heartier fare as cooler autumn weather arrives. This week, American Profile offers two recipes perfect for brisk fall evenings.

Bernadette Swancer sent in her recipe for Ben's Swiss Steak. "My son, Ben, loves Swiss steak. He's always asking for it and enjoys it with a big helping of mashed potatoes. For his birthday, he always says, 'Skip the cake and bring on the Swiss steak,'" the Medina, Ohio, resident says.

The recipe calls for cube steak, a cut of beef taken from the top or bottom-round steak and run through a butcher's tenderizing machine. If you use round steak instead, cut it in pieces, place the pieces between sheets of wax paper, and pound with a meat mallet.

The recipe for Creamy Beef Burgundy, from Juanita Barnhart of Greenfield, Ind., is great served over cooked rice, wide egg noodles or mashed potatoes. "My family was tired of the traditional ham or turkey for our holiday dinner, so I decided to fix this recipe for our celebration. It was a big hit and I have been preparing it each year by request," she says.

BEN'S SWISS STEAK

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Coarsely ground black pepper
- 2 pounds cube steak, cut into 8 pieces
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- 2 large green bell peppers, chopped
- 1 (8-ounce) package sliced mushrooms
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 jalapeno chilies, finely chopped
- 2 large tomatoes, chopped

1. Place flour, salt and pepper in a large zip-top plastic bag. Add some of the steak pieces and coat evenly with flour mixture; shake off excess. Transfer to a platter. Repeat with remaining steak.
2. Heat oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Working in batches, add 2 pieces of meat and brown 3 minutes on each side. When browned, transfer to a Dutch oven. Repeat with remaining pieces of meat. Add additional oil if needed.
3. Add 1 cup water to pan drippings. Bring to a boil, scraping bottom and sides of skillet to loosen brown bits. Pour over meat. Top with peppers, mushrooms, onions, jalapenos and tomatoes.
4. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover tightly, and simmer 1 hour and 45 minutes, until meat is very tender when pierced with a fork. Rearrange meat occasionally to keep pieces from sticking to the bottom of pan. Serves 8.

Tips From Our Test Kitchen: The cube steaks will break down as they cook and create a thick, rich gravy. Remove seeds from peppers for a very milder dish.

Nutritional facts per serving: 300 calories, 10g fat, 26g protein, 28g carbohydrates, 2g fiber, 370mg sodium.

- 6 cups cooked egg noodles, rice or mashed potatoes

1. Preheat oven to 250F.
2. Combine meat, soups, wine, mushrooms and soup mix in a Dutch oven. Cover and cook 4 hours, or until the beef is very tender. Serve over cooked egg noodles, rice, or mashed potatoes. Serves 12.

DVD bonus features include a look at how Disneyland decks out its Haunted Mansion for Christmas. (Rated PG, $32.99)

In the early 1960s, Casper, "the friendly ghost," made the leap from comic books to a series of TV adventures. Casper Classic Collection, Vols. 1 & 2, each with a dozen 5-minute episodes featuring Casper and sidekick Wendy, "the good little witch," make for a nostalgic visit with the sweetest little spirits to ever haunt your television. Surgery Can't Fix Dark Circles!

Finally, researchers have developed the first product to combine a clinically proven compound to reduce those dark under-eye circles and simultaneously reduce fine lines and wrinkles, resulting in noticeably younger looking eyes.

—By Sarah Tucker

I can't tell you how often I'm told that I look tired because of the dark circles under my eyes. I guess some people don't realize how embarrassing this is...I have been plagued with dark circles since my early 20s! But finally I don't have to worry about them anymore since I found Hydrolyze[H].

Solves Two Beauty Problems At Once!

Hydrolyze[H] was created by one of America's premier anti-aging skin care companies. They have succeeded at creating the first intensive eye cream to effectively combat not one but TWO of the most aggravating beauty problems... under-eye dark circles and wrinkles.

BENEFITS	Hydrolyze	Hylexin™	StriVectin-SD®™
HELPS DIMINISH DARK CIRCLES	✓	✓
REDUCES WRINKLES	✓		✓

Contains Haloxyl™ AND Matrixyl™ 3000

Hydrolyze[H] works so well at making your eyes look younger and brighter because it combines the most effective leading ingredient for reducing serious dark circles and bags, Haloxyl™, with Matrixyl 3000, the most advanced anti-wrinkle ingredient known to science, proven to reduce visible deep wrinkles by up to 68%. You can't help but see and feel a noticeable difference after just a few weeks.

Why Dark Circles Form In The First Place

Despite what most people think, deep, dark circles under your eyes are not primarily caused by being tired or stressed. Instead, dermatologists and plastic surgeons agree that dark circles are caused by capillaries that leak blood close to the skin's surface. When this blood begins to oxidize, it turns a bluish red color, similar to an ugly bruise. And since the skin under the eyes is very thin, this leads to the appearance of those embarrassing bags and dark circles. The more transparent your skin and the more blood that pools under it, the darker the circles appear. And what's worse, this discoloration over time can become permanent!

Helps Reduce & Prevent Dark Circles

In scientific studies, Hydrolyze's main active ingredient, Haloxyl™, has been shown to help reduce the leaked blood under the skin (or "hemoglobin degradation by-products" as the plastic surgeons say) by using a series of natural enzymes that break down the blood and cause the dark circles to fade. In fact, Haloxyl™ is so effective because it actually helps strengthen the capillaries to help prevent them from leaking in the first place.

Need Proof?

In a double-blind clinical trial more than 72% of women who had serious dark circles and used Haloxyl™ saw an obvious visible reduction in the dark color under their eyes. These findings were confirmed using high-speed laboratory photography that clearly showed a significant reduction in the appearance of the blue and red color that make up dark eye circles.

Due to its advanced wrinkle fighting technology, this clinically proven compound actually stimulates collagen production to help reduce the appearance of visible deep wrinkles by 68% and increase the firmness of your skin after only two months. All natural Hydrolyze[H] was designed to be safe and gentle enough for everyday use.

"The skin around the eyes is thin, and thus susceptible to dark circles. Surgery can not eliminate dark circles. Hydrolyze not only reduces the appearance of dark circles and bags but also helps prevent them."

—Dr. Michael Fiorillo is a world renowned board certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon.

How Hydrolyze[H] Under Eye Treatment Reduces Dark Circles

Before – Dark circles form under the eyes due to weakened capillaries that leak blood close to the skin's surface.

After – Hydrolyze's active ingredient, Haloxyl™, uses natural enzymes to help break down leaked blood under the skin and strengthen the capillaries to help prevent further blood leakage. Eyes appear brighter and younger.

With Matrixyl™ 3000, The Most Advanced Wrinkle Reducer Known To Science

Hydrolyze[H] is so effective at making your eyes look so much younger because it also includes one of the most effective wrinkle reducing compounds ever produced, Matrixyl™ 3000.

Having A Hard Time Finding Hydrolyze[H] Under Eye Treatment ?

Until now Hydrolyze[H] has only been available through plastic surgeons' offices in New York and Beverly Hills. But now you can experience first hand the unique results of Hydrolyze[H] in combating both dark circles and wrinkles without a visit to a doctor.

The makers of Hydrolyze[H] are so confident in their anti-aging technology, they're offering a 30-Day Risk Free Trial...because seeing is believing! To get your 30-day supply of Hydrolyze[H] risk free, for just a small s&h fee, call now. Our operators are ready to let you try one of the greatest breakthroughs in fighting dark circles and wrinkles.

This and That

OCTOBER 2008

My friends think I'm a good cook, but what most of them crave is my husband's popcorn. He's made it the old-fashioned way for years (which amazes our kids' friends). It's so much his trademark, my mom bought him one of those big ceramic bowls that says "Earl's Popcorn." (He can't bring himself to use it, though, as the corn has to go in a very specific metal bowl) What's his secret? Could be the heavy pan (Calphalon), the oil (canola) or the type of corn (Orville Redenbacher). The only other popcorn that stands up to his is the sweet and salty kettle corn found at fairs and flea markets If you like that flavor, you'll love our Cashew Butter Crunch Popcorn (page 9) It's great to have around this time of year what with Halloween and the holidays coming up In the meantime, pop up your own corn, whichever bowl you serve it in, it will be a treat and a trick for your kids' friends

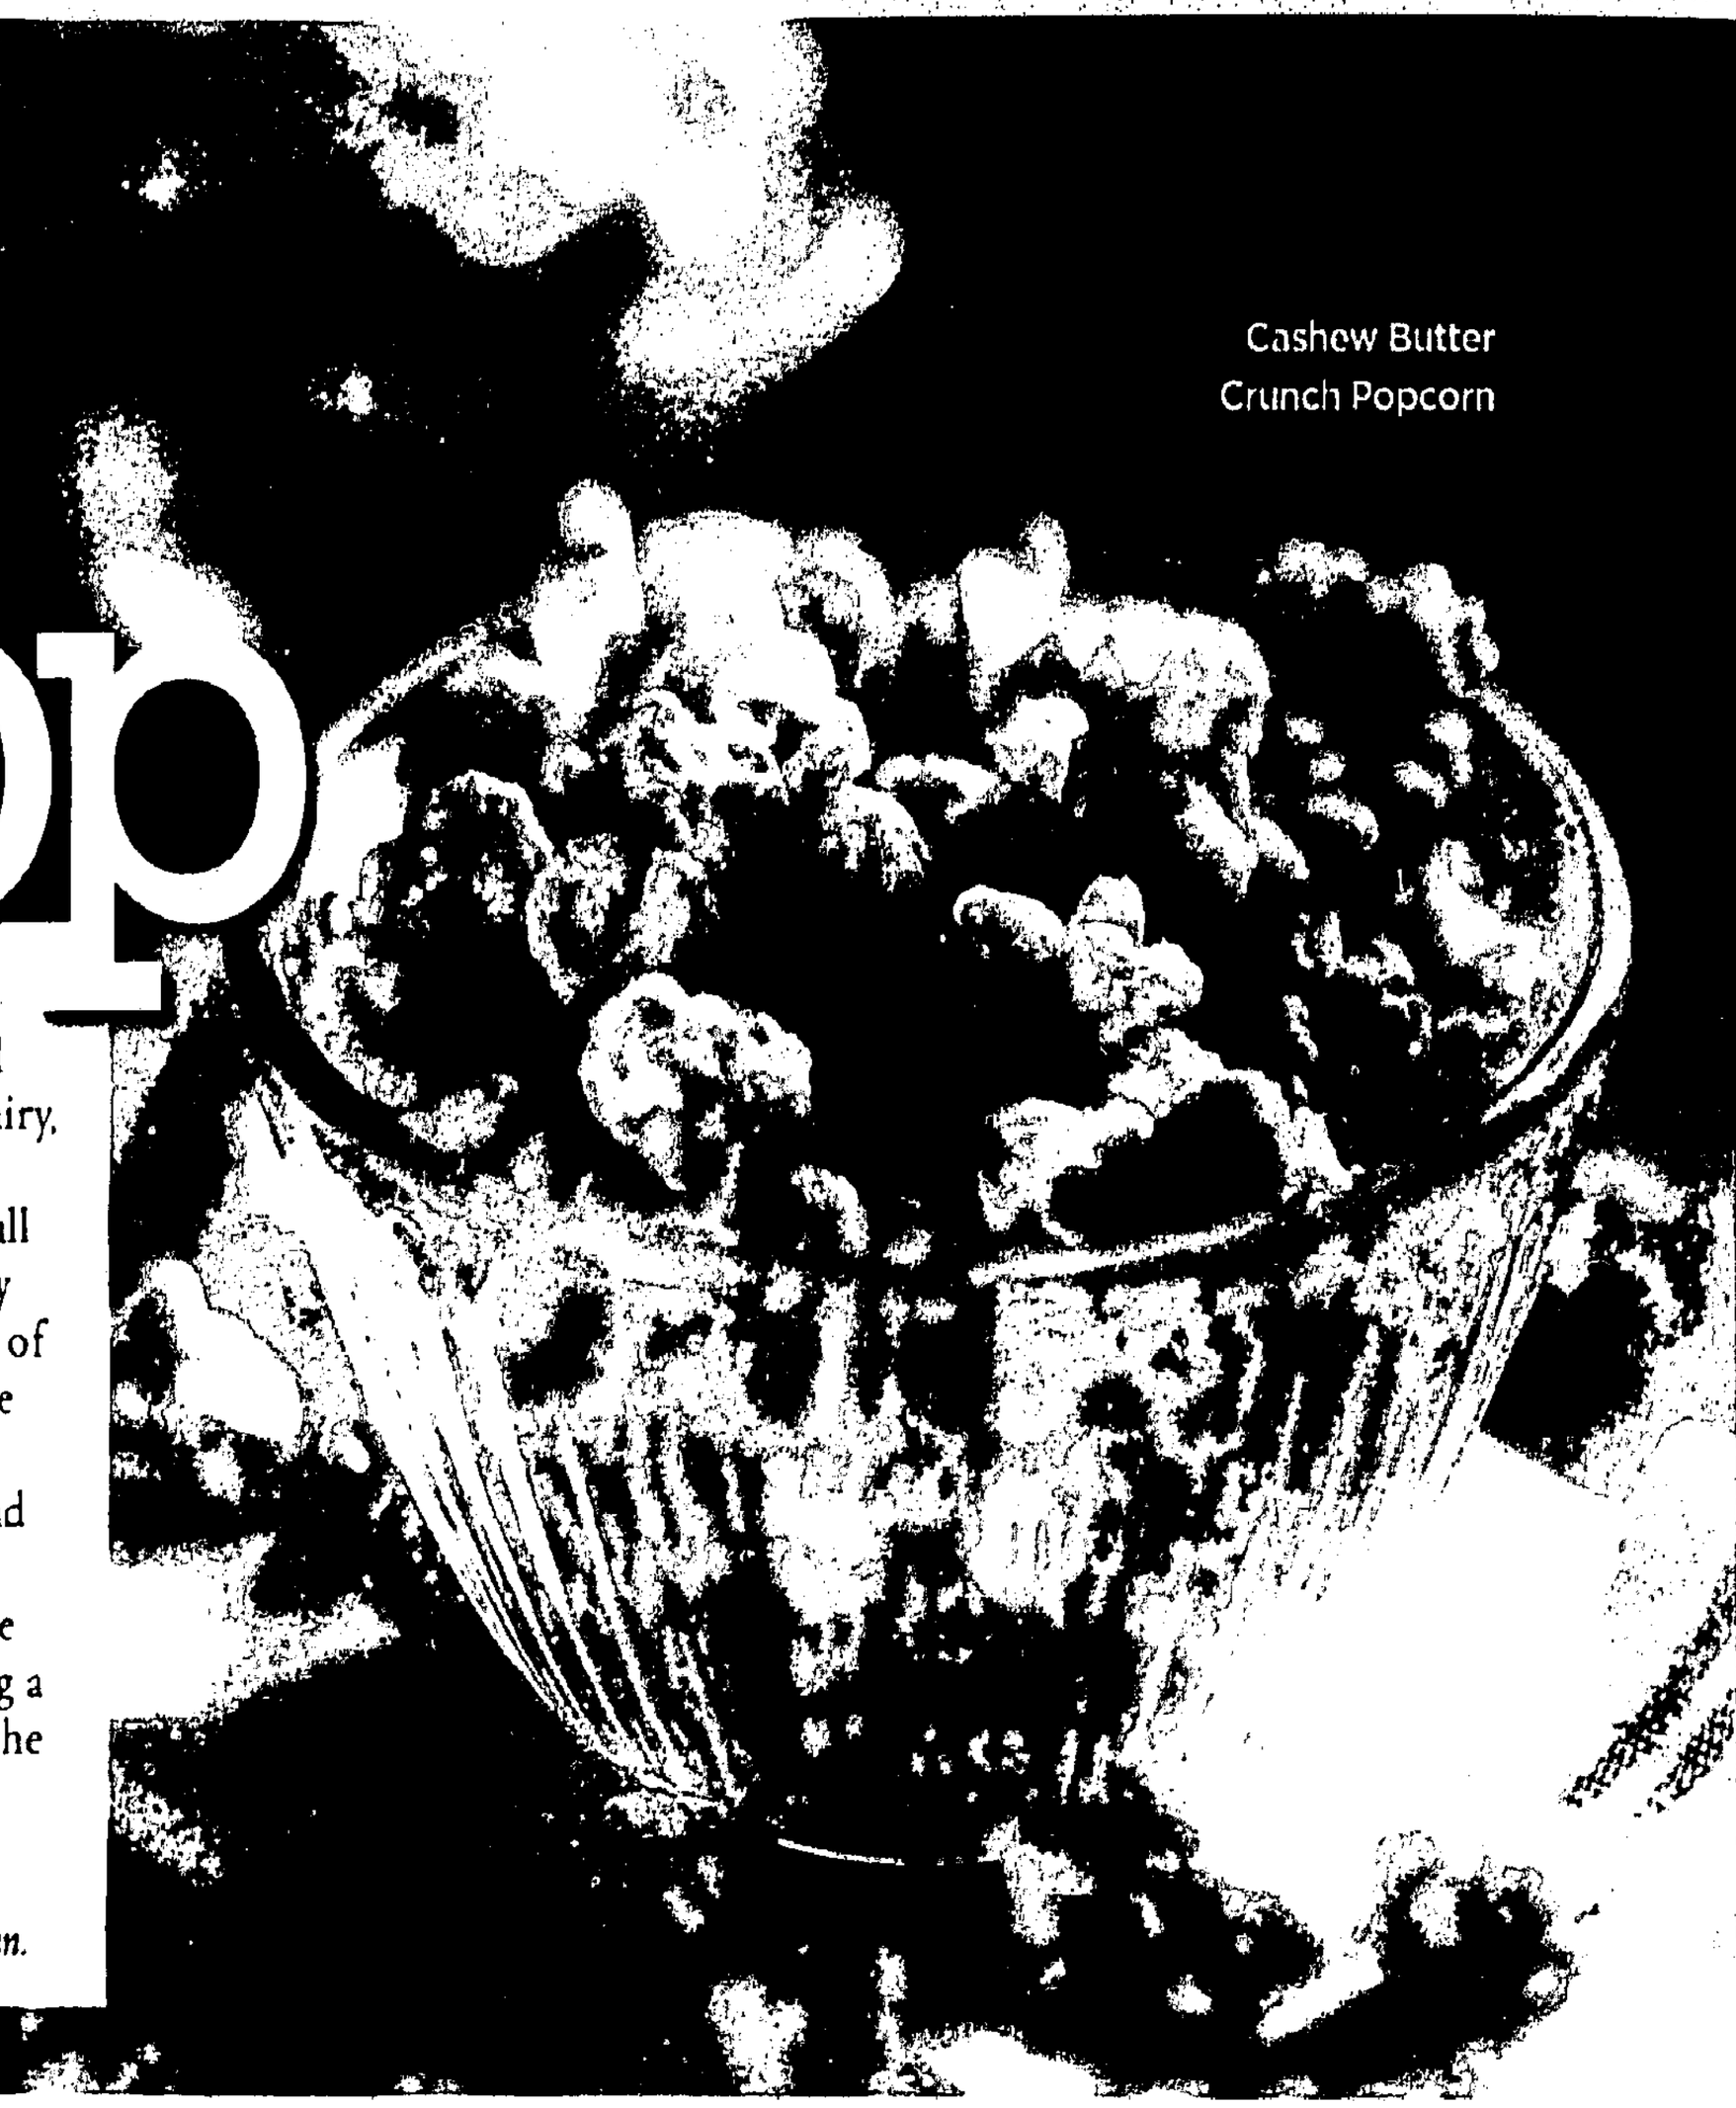
Spiffy Pop



Cashew Butter Crunch Popcorn

Who doesn't love the miracle of popcorn—dried kernels that build up steam until they explode into airy, sweet and nutty nothingness? It's just too cool. And it's perfect for all sorts of flavors. While you can buy just about every imaginable flavor of the microwave stuff, why not make your own? Popping up kernels the old-fashioned way is great fun (and depressingly novel) for most kids. The only tricks in these recipes are handling the sugar syrup and using a candy thermometer to cook it to the specified temperature.

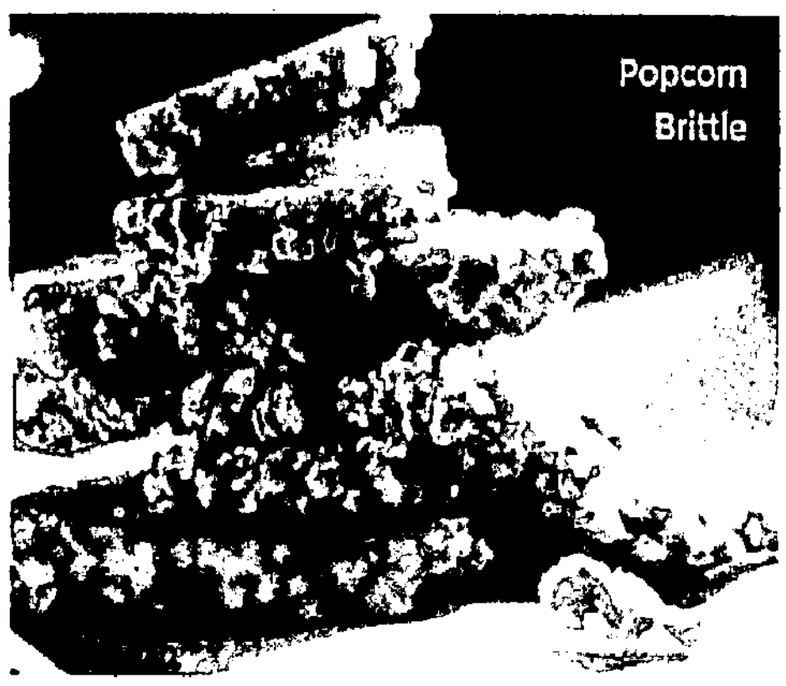
Recipes by Bruce Weinstein and Mark Scarbrough, food writers in Colebrook, Conn.

Popcorn Brittle

This snack combines the sweet crunchy texture of brittle with the airy saltiness of popcorn. Great as a gift for the holidays or for the kids to munch on Halloween.

- 14 cups freshly popped popcorn (made from ½ cup popcorn kernels and 2 tablespoons canola oil)
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 1 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter, plus additional for greasing
- 1 tablespoon unsulfured molasses
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Lightly butter 2 large (15 x 11-inch) baking sheets and a rubber spatula or wooden spoon.



Popcorn Brittle

2. Working in batches, place 2 cups popcorn in food processor. Pulse until crushed into small pieces. Do not overprocess. Repeat with remaining popcorn.

3. Stir sugar, corn syrup, water and salt in a medium saucepan over medium heat until sugar dissolves and mixture is simmering. Clip a candy thermometer to the inside of the pan and continue heating undisturbed until temperature reaches 270F (about 10 to 15 minutes). Mixture will boil vigorously.

4. Stir in butter, molasses and vanilla. Continue heating until temperature reaches 290F (between soft- and hard-crack stages).

5. Remove pan from heat; stir in crushed popcorn. Working quickly, pour mixture over prepared sheets. Using the buttered rubber spatula, press evenly to flatten like peanut brittle. Cool to room temperature on a wire rack and break into chunks. Makes 1 pound. Serves 16.

Cashew Butter Crunch Popcorn

Consider making this for the kids' Halloween party: a big bowl of crunchy, buttery kettle corn. Better yet, save it for the adults' party later on.

- 14 cups freshly popped popcorn (made from about ½ cup popcorn kernels and 2 tablespoons canola oil)
- 1½ cups salted roasted cashews
- 8 tablespoons (1 stick) butter, plus additional for greasing
- 1 cup packed light brown sugar
- ¼ cup light corn syrup
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda

1. Preheat oven to 250F. Lightly butter a large baking sheet; spread popcorn and cashews on sheet. Keep warm in oven.

2. Mix butter, brown sugar, corn syrup and salt in a small saucepan; stir frequently until simmering and sugar dissolves. Clip a candy thermometer to the inside of the pan and continue cooking undisturbed until temperature reaches 248F (firm-ball stage).

A candy thermometer takes the guesswork out of making syrups.

3. Remove from heat and stir in baking soda. The mixture will roil vigorously; continue stirring until smooth.

4. Drizzle sugar mixture evenly over popcorn and cashews; toss well with flat metal spatula or spoon.

5. Bake 45 minutes, tossing every 10 minutes. Cool on baking sheet, then store in a covered container at room temperature up to 3 days. Makes about 15 cups.

Per (1-cup) serving: 230 calories, 13g fat, 15mg chol., 3g prot., 28g carbs., 2g fiber, 190mg sodium.

Striking Oil

Just down the road from the two dozen wineries of Southern California's Temecula Valley sits a different kind of tasting room. Here, co-owner Thom Curry mans the bar, answering questions about the characteristics of his many varietals. But he's not talking about grapes. Instead, he's selling artisan olive oils made from fruit grown at his nearby ranch. Though most Americans associate olive oil-making with Europe, U.S. production is on the rise, thanks to an influx of California-based producers like Curry's Temecula Olive Oil Company. What's the benefit of buying oils produced stateside? These oils make it from the press to your kitchen faster than their internationally made counterparts.

"That makes a big difference. It's much fresher," says Curry. "When someone comes in, the first thing they say is, 'Wow, this tastes like olives!' That's what olive oil should taste like."

Over his decade-long wine sales career during the 1990s, Curry often traveled abroad, where he fell in love with the olive oils made in Spain, Italy and France and was impressed with the pride producers took in their craft—so much so he decided to turn his new passion into a new career.

Thom Curry

"When someone comes in, they say, 'Wow, this tastes like olives!' That's what olive oil should taste like."
–Thom Curry

"I started visiting small olive oil production facilities to try to learn how olive oil was made, about the different trees, basically any information I could glean from anyone," recalls Curry.

The more he learned, the more excited he was to get started making and selling his own olive oil. First, Curry and his wife, Nancy, imported Tuscan olive trees and planted them in their backyard in Temecula (60 miles northeast of San Diego), where the climate (warm days, cool nights, little rain) couldn't be better for growing olives. Then, he enrolled in a class at the University of California at Davis to further study the process. When the couple's good friends, Catherine and Ernie Pepe, learned of the plan, they jumped on board too. In 2001 the foursome opened their dream shop and have happily watched business boom. "We have a hard time keeping up with demand," Curry reports.

Last year the company unveiled its very own stainless steel olive press, designed by Curry. Modeled after the old-fashioned presses he saw in Europe, the contraption squeezes oil from the olives similar to the way you'd get juice from an

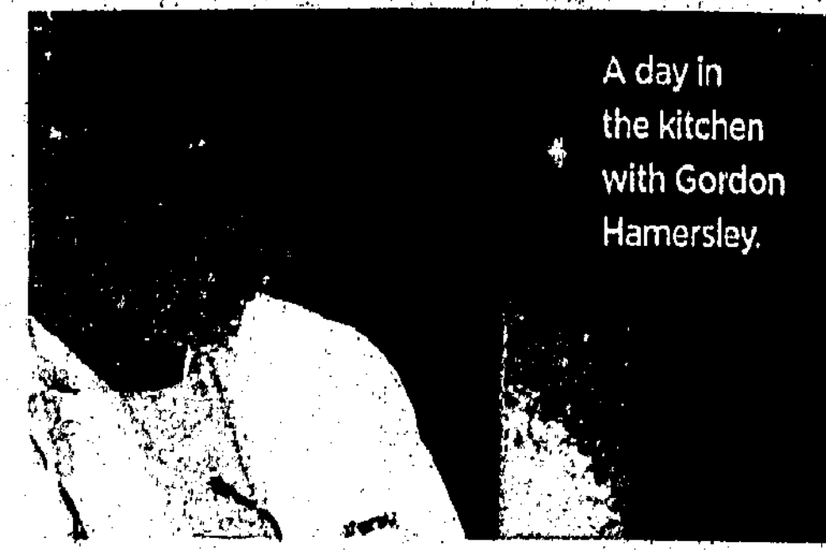
Bistro Chicken



A day in the kitchen with Gordon Hamersley.

In the summer of 1987, late in the afternoon before opening day of Hamersley's Bistro, in Boston's South End, Gordon Hamersley was still up in the air about his menu. He knew roast chicken in one form or another belonged on a bistro menu but had trouble coming up with a recipe. He tried herb butters and bacon wraps, but nothing seemed to work.

Finally, Hamersley and his sous chef had an idea. They made a parsley paste, rubbed it on the birds and set them aside to marinate overnight. The next day, they broiled the chicken until the skin was crisp and brown so that when it arrived at the table, the herby paste was transformed into a delectable crust.

Two months after Hamersley's Bistro opened, a restaurant critic ordered the Roast Chicken with Garlic, Lemon and Parsley and was so carried away he telephoned Hamersley to prepare him for the response to his rave review. "Go and buy more chickens," he told Hamersley. The rest, as they say, is history.

Over the last 20 years, Hamersley figures he's served more than 280,000 roast chickens. Some customers order it every time they eat at the restaurant. Occasionally Hamersley talks about taking it off the menu, but whenever he does, people complain. "All hell breaks loose," he says. ❦

Baked Rigatoni with Sausage, Butternut Squash and Kale is rich in calcium and loaded with vitamins and antioxidants.

Baked Rigatoni with Sausage, Butternut Squash and Kale

Everyone will love this casserole—full of sausage, pasta, cheese and squash all rolled into one yummy dish, perfect for Halloween.

- 1½ pounds butternut squash (2 medium), peeled and cut into 2-inch chunks
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 6 to 8 sprigs fresh thyme
- ½ teaspoon salt, divided
- Coarsely ground black pepper
- 1 pound Italian sweet sausage, removed from casings
- 1 teaspoon fennel seeds
- 1 bunch of kale, washed, tough stems removed and roughly chopped
- 6 garlic cloves, chopped
- 8 ounces uncooked rigatoni
- 2 cups half-and-half
- ½ cup low-sodium chicken broth
- 1½ cups finely grated Pecorino Romano cheese
- ½ cup breadcrumbs
- Additional cheese for topping (grated Pecorino Romano or mozzarella)

1. Preheat oven to 400F. Bring a large pot of water to a boil. Lightly oil a 13 x 9-inch baking dish.

2. Toss together squash, olive oil, thyme, ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper on a large baking sheet. Roast 20 to 25 minutes, until squash is tender, but not mushy. Discard thyme.

3. Place sausage and fennel seeds in a large Dutch oven; cook over medium-high heat, stirring frequently to break up sausage, until meat is no longer pink. Remove sausage and drain most of oil. Return pan to stove; lower heat to medium. Add kale and garlic; sauté until kale is wilted, 3 to 5 minutes. Add ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper. Turn off heat and return sausage to pan.

4. Reduce oven temperature to 375F.

5. Cook pasta in boiling water, 2 minutes less than package directions. Drain well. Toss with sausage mixture. Add half-and-half, chicken broth and half the cheese. Gently toss. Transfer to baking pan, top with breadcrumbs and remaining cheese. (If making in advance, allow mixture to come to room temperature, cover with plastic wrap and place in refrigerator.)

6. Bake 25 minutes, until thoroughly heated and crusty on top. Serve with additional cheese. Serves 8.

Read this information carefully before you start to use your medicine. Read the information you get every time you get more medicine. There may be new information. This information does not take the place of talking with your healthcare provider about your medical condition or your treatment. If you have any questions or are not sure about something, ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist.

What is the most important information I should know about ACTONEL?
ACTONEL may cause problems in your stomach and esophagus (the tube that connects the mouth and the stomach), such as trouble swallowing (dysphagia), heartburn (esophagitis), and ulcers. You might feel pain in your bones, joints, or muscles (See "What are the Possible Side Effects of ACTONEL?").
You must follow the instructions exactly for ACTONEL to work and to lower the chance of serious side effects. (See "How should I take ACTONEL?").

What is ACTONEL?
ACTONEL is a prescription medicine used:
- to prevent and treat osteoporosis in postmenopausal women
- to increase bone mass in men with osteoporosis.
- to prevent and treat osteoporosis in men and women that is caused by treatment with steroid medicines such as prednisone
- to treat Paget's disease of bone in men and women. The treatment for Paget's disease is very different than for osteoporosis and uses a different dose of ACTONEL. This leaflet does not cover using ACTONEL for Paget's disease. If you have Paget's disease, ask your healthcare provider how to use ACTONEL.

ACTONEL may reverse bone loss by stopping more loss of bone and increasing bone strength in most people who take it, even though they won't be able to see or feel a difference. ACTONEL helps lower the risk of breaking bones (fractures). Your healthcare provider may measure the thickness (density) of your bones or do other tests to check your progress.

Who should not take ACTONEL?
Do not take ACTONEL if you:
- have low blood calcium (hypocalcemia)
- cannot sit or stand up for 30 minutes
- have kidneys that work poorly
- have an allergy to ACTONEL. The active ingredient in ACTONEL is risedronate sodium. (See the end of this leaflet for a list of all the ingredients in ACTONEL.)

Tell your doctor before using ACTONEL if:

- you are breast-feeding or plan to breast-feed. We do not know if ACTONEL can pass through your milk and if it can harm your baby.
- you have kidney problems. ACTONEL may not be right for you.

Tell your doctor about all the medicines you take, including prescription and nonprescription medicines, vitamins and herbal supplements.
ACTONEL can interact with other medicines. Keep a list of all the medicines you take. Show it to all your healthcare providers, including your dentist and pharmacist, each time you get a new medicine.

O is for Orzo

We loved this casserole when we saw it at taste testing. We loved it even more when we read the story accompanying it by senior center volunteer Henrietta Jachlewski of West Seneca, N.Y. Seems she got the recipe "handed up" from her granddaughter, who is vegetarian. Henrietta loves it and says it's a hit at parties. We agree. With its hip combination of orzo, peppers, feta and pine nuts, it's just what we'd like to find at our next "covered dish" or potluck supper. We look forward to our next hand-me-up, as does Henrietta.

Wine columnist Wini Moranville guides you to the best bottles for the money.

What gives wine a "wow" factor? Sometimes it's about balance and finesse, with no one aroma or flavor jumping out, but with each flavor gradually revealing itself to you, layer upon layer, as you sip. Other times it's all about personality – compelling up-front flavors that continue to linger on the palate and in the memory long after the sip is swallowed. These bottles punch above their weight, giving you lots of "wow" for your dollar no matter what style of wine you enjoy.

◀ Lost Angel 2008 Muscat Canelli (California; $16): A lightly floral white wine for those who love ripe, voluptuous fruit in their glass.

Jekel Vineyards 2006 Pinot Noir (Monterey County, CA; $18): Those passionate about Pinot know just how hard it is to find that truly great under-$20 pick. Savor bright berry and baking spice notes in this richly opulent bottle.

J. Lohr 2006 "Seven Oaks" Cabernet Sauvignon (Paso Robles, CA; $17): For those who love their Cabs on the deeply fruity side. The warm vanilla and toast notes make it more than just an easy sip.

Rosemount 2006 Show Reserve Chardonnay ▶ (Mudgee, Australia; $15): A great combo of creamy roundness and citrus-pear refreshment.

EOS 2005 Zinfandel (Paso Robles, CA; $18): With hints of spice and chocolate mingling among bright and jammy cherry-berry flavors, this one's for lovers of fruity red Zins.

Ask the Wine Geek

Wine expert Charles Smothermon answers your questions.

Q. Any advice for figuring out how much wine to buy for a dinner party?

A. Here are a few hints and tips to get you in the ballpark.

- A standard 750-milliliter bottle yields four to five glasses. Planning for up to one bottle per guest for dinner parties with multiple courses isn't off the mark.
- The more types of wine you serve, the less of each variety you'll need. So, if you're serving two different wines with dinner, figure one bottle for every two guests. For three different wines, figure one bottle for every three guests, and so on.
- Very large wine glasses can lead to excessive pours. Never fill glasses more than one-third full.
- Finally, offering plenty of water—along with encouragement to use a designated driver or taxi—is essential for every party featuring wine.

Moroccan Stew

A tagine (TAA-jeen) is a conical-shaped dish used to make the Moroccan stew, also called a tagine. Fortunately you don't need a tagine to make a tagine, just a large pot, Dutch oven or a slow cooker. In fact, one of the best ways to make a tagine is in the slow cooker, which allows all the flavors to mix and mingle and . . . well, stew. While many tagines contain beef or lamb, this one is vegetarian, with garbanzo beans taking center stage. Served over couscous, what a fine stew you'll be in.

Harvest Tagine

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1½ teaspoons butter
- 1 large onion, coarsely chopped
- 3 garlic cloves, pressed
- 1½ teaspoons tumeric
- 2 teaspoons cumin seed
- 2 teaspoons coarsely ground black pepper
- ¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1 (14-ounce) can whole tomatoes, with juice, coarsely chopped
- 6 cups low-sodium vegetable broth
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 (20-ounce) can garbanzo beans, drained
- 2 large sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch cubes
- ¾ cup golden raisins
- ½ pound green beans, cut into 2-inch pieces
- 1 zucchini, quartered lengthwise and cut into 2-inch pieces
- 1 eggplant, skin on, coarsely chopped

1. Heat olive oil and butter in a large nonstick skillet. Add onion; sauté 3 minutes. Add garlic, tumeric, cumin, black pepper and red pepper; sauté 3 minutes.

2. Transfer onion mixture to a slow cooker, along with canned tomatoes, vegetable stock and salt. Cover and cook on high 1 hour.

3. Add garbanzo beans, sweet potatoes, raisins, green beans, zucchini and eggplant. Continue cooking on high 1½ hours or on low 2 to 3 hours, until vegetables are tender. Serve over couscous. Serves 6.

Nantucket Bay Scallops

From spring through fall, the charming and tiny island of Nantucket is a tourist paradise, packed to the gills with beachgoers, cyclists and urban refugees from nearby Boston and New York. Come Nov. 1, the crowds disappear and the ferries connecting the island to Massachusetts's mainland are virtually deserted, but the waters off Nantucket are busier than ever. Nov. 1 is the opening of scallop season, which runs through the end of March, and no scallop found anywhere in the world is more highly prized than the unique Nantucket Bay Scallop. Roughly twice the size of the average bay scallop (30 to 40 vs. 60 to 100 per pound) and half the size of larger sea scallops, this shellfish offers the perfect combination of texture and sweetness, so much so that many fans eat them raw right out of the shells.

"Because they are so sweet and delicate they really stand alone and are great for sashimi, ceviche or tartare preparations," says Neil Patrick Hudson, former chef at Nantucket's most famous luxury hotel, the White Elephant. Hudson has become a culinary champion of the tiny crustacean since moving to Nantucket seven years ago. When Hudson gets off work he throws on waders and heads out in the bay himself, rake in hand, to catch his own scallops for personal consumption, up to the residents' five bushel annual limit. He likes them raw with black pepper and lemon juice but suggests sautéing them very quickly.

"Once they hit the already hot pan, they are almost done. Don't move them, and in literally 30 seconds when you have caramelized one side, they are ready. You don't really want to cook them so much as sear them so they are still opaque in the middle."

Nantucket restaurants consume almost the entire harvest at $20 to $25 a pound wholesale, and you will pay $40 to $50 a pound for the small quantity exported to the mainland. Fans think they are worth every penny.

By Larry Olmsted, a food writer in Hartland Four Corners, Vt.

Although there are many species, you'll generally find two types of scallops in the market: Bay scallops and sea scallops. Bay scallops are the smaller of the two, measuring only ½ inch in diameter. They're also sweeter and more expensive than sea scallops. Both types of scallops should be moist and sweet-smelling when purchased.

Bay Scallop Sauté

Serve with crusty French bread for dipping in the sauce. Because scallops contain a lot of water that gushes out as soon as they are hot, they need a lot of heat applied quickly. It's important to pat the scallops dry and get your pan (and the oil mixture) very hot—this ensures the scallops brown and not water out. Also, make sure the scallops aren't crowded in the skillet, as that will cause them to steam.

- 1 tablespoon canola oil
- 2 tablespoons butter

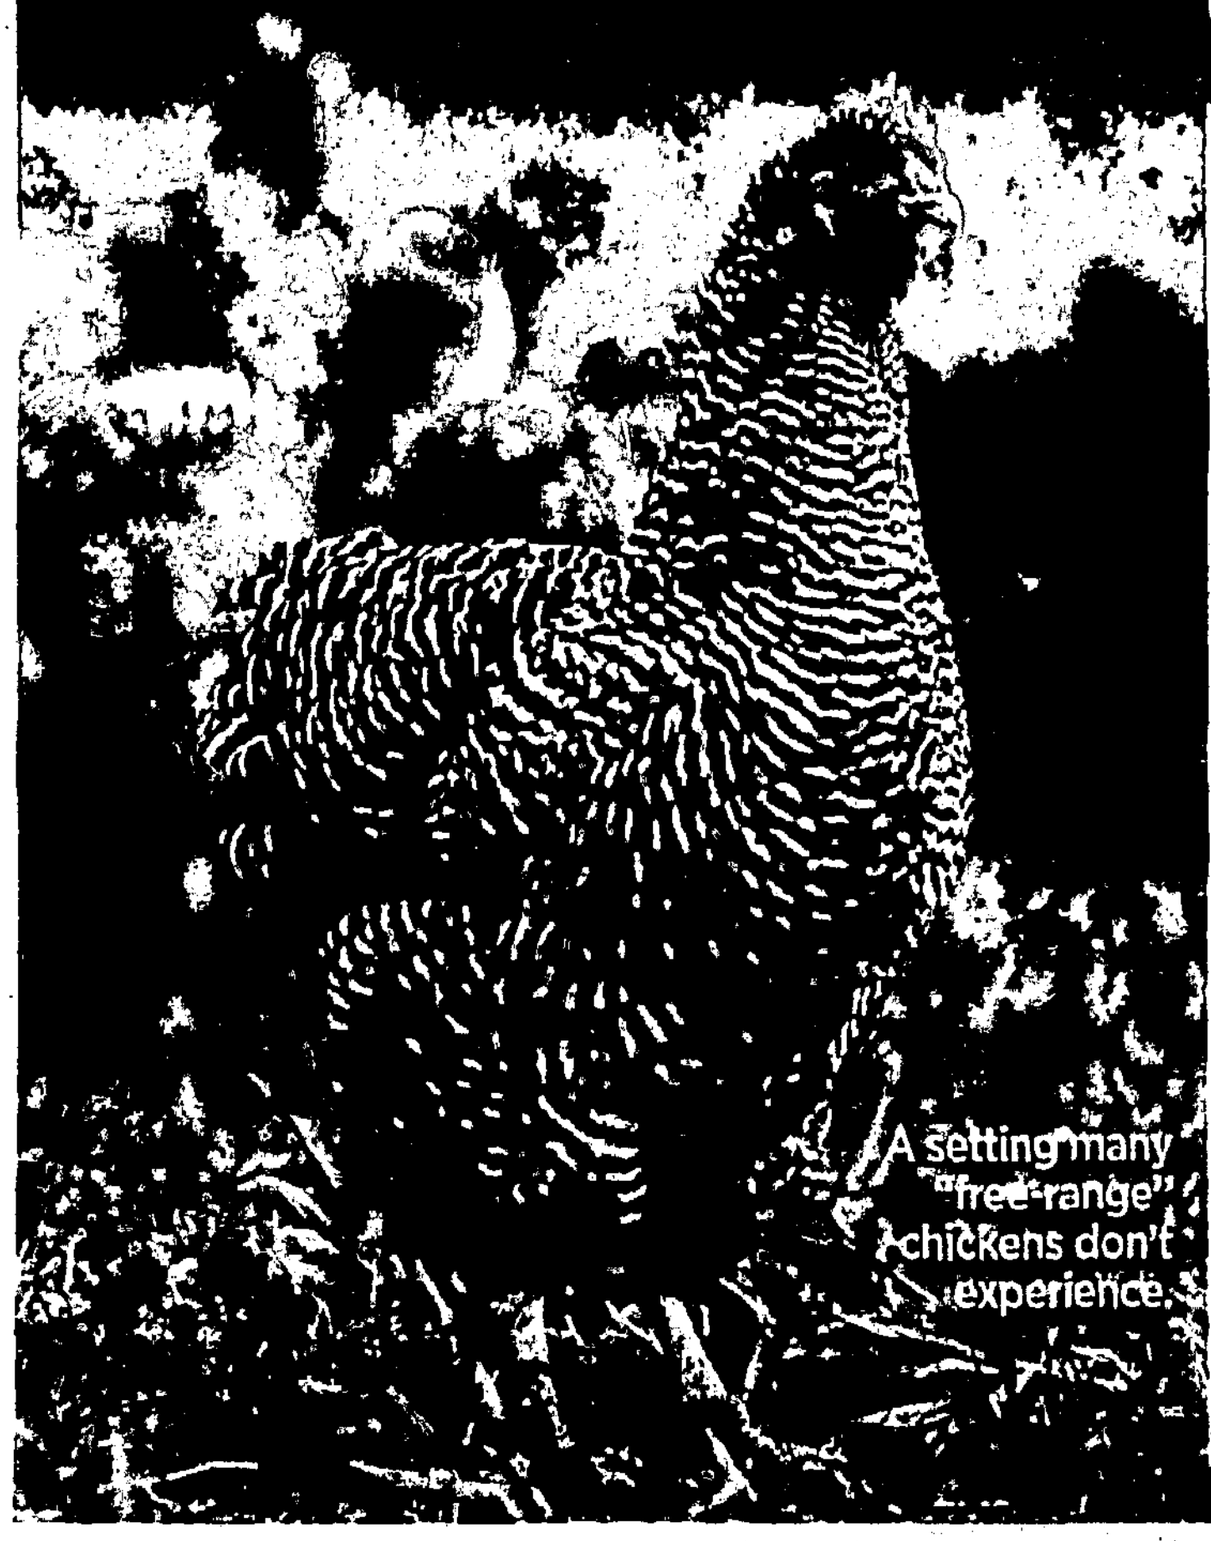
relish | a dictionary for cooks

Cook-cab´-u-lar-y



A setting many "free-range" chickens don't experience.

Free-range (Poultry)

The term "free-range" brings to mind verdant pastures, blue skies and chickens happily milling about. In reality, it can be a very different picture.

The term was originally used in ranch country as a legal description of areas where herds could be grazed without fences. While beef, bison and other meat may show up in the store as "free-range," the USDA sets free-range standards only for poultry. These standards require only that birds have some access to the outdoors. On some farms, they're given access to grasslands and unlimited exercise. But in large-scale operations (including organic ones), they may be kept in the coop for the first five weeks of their lives, by which time feeding routines are firmly established. Since they're often slaughtered at seven weeks, the birds never develop the habit of stepping out the door.

If you do find an artisan farmer whose chickens actually roam around eating what chickens were intended to eat (grass, grubs and insects), the meat can be remarkably different from that of their cooped up cousins. It may be higher in healthy Omega-3 fatty acids and can be so much tastier than your run-of-the-mill roaster that you may swear you're eating a different animal. Finding pastured poultry may take some pecking around. Farmer's markets are a great place to get to know local producers and find out what your dinner had for dinner. ❦—Jo Marshall

Nature's Majesty Takes Wing at Dawn's Early Light

Day breaks in the wilderness with a stunning splendor. The rising sun blazes through the clouds to coat each wild creature with shimmering light. Eagles stretch their wings wide to grasp the day's warm energy, then push off from summit perches to soar above deep green valleys and rushing waters, the winged monarchs of nature's majesty.

TREASURES OF PORTRAITURE AND SCULPTURE BATHED IN SOFT LIGHT

Now an illuminated sculpture of striking contemporary design brings this glorious morning in the wilderness to life. Artist Ted Blaylock's thrilling eagle vistas beckon from a sleek tower of lustrous acrylic that lights up from within at the flip of a switch, its crystal clear beveled surface reflecting all the majesty of the wild. Rich walnut-stained wood supports and crowns the artwork, which is topped by a handcrafted sculpture of two eagles riding a lighted gust of crystalline.

AS HEARD ON PAUL HARVEY NEWS

New advanced portable heater can cut your heating bill up to 50%

Heats a large room in minutes with even heat wall to wall and floor to ceiling

Does not get hot, cannot start a fire and will not reduce humidity or oxygen

A new advanced quartz infrared portable heater, the EdenPURE®, can cut your heating bills by up to 50%.

You have probably heard about the remarkable EdenPURE® as heard on Paul Harvey News and on television features across the nation.

The EdenPURE® can pay for itself in a matter of weeks and then start putting a great deal of extra money in your pocket after that.

A major cause of residential fires in the United States is portable heaters. But the EdenPURE® cannot cause a fire. That is because the quartz infrared heating element never gets to a temperature that can ignite anything.

The outside of the EdenPURE® only gets warm to the touch so that it will not burn children or pets. Pets can sleep on it when it is operating without harm.

The advanced space-age EdenPURE® Quartz Infrared Portable Heater also heats the room evenly, wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling. And, as you know, portable heaters only heat an area a few feet around the heater.

Unlike other heating sources, the EdenPURE® cannot put poisonous carbon monoxide into a room or any type of fumes or any type of harmful radiation.

Q. What is the origin of this amazing heating element in the EdenPURE®?

A. This advanced heating element was discovered accidentally by a man named John Jones.

Q. What advantages does infrared quartz tube heating source have over other heating source products?

A. John Jones designed his heating source around the three most important consumer benefits: economy, comfort, and safety.

In the EdenPURE® system, electricity is used to generate infrared light which, in turn, creates a very safe heat.

After a great deal of research and development, very efficient infrared heat chambers were developed that utilize three unique patented solid copper heat exchangers in one EdenPURE® heater.

Q. How can a person cut their heating bill by up to 50% with the EdenPURE®?

A. The EdenPURE® will heat a room in minutes. Therefore, you can turn the heat down in your house to as low as 50 degrees, but the room you are occupying, which has the EdenPURE®, will be warm and comfortable. The EdenPURE® is portable. When you move to another room, it will quickly heat that room also. This can drastically cut heating bills, in some instances, by up to 50%.

Never be cold again

Cannot start a fire; a child or animal can touch or sit on it without harm

The EdenPURE® comes in 2 models. GEN3 Model 500 heats a room up to 300 square feet and GEN3 Model 1000 heats a room up to 1,000 square feet.

End of interview.

The EdenPURE® will pay for itself in weeks. It will put a great deal of extra money in a users pocket. Because of today's spiraling gas, oil, propane, and other energy costs, the EdenPURE® will provide even greater savings as the time goes by.

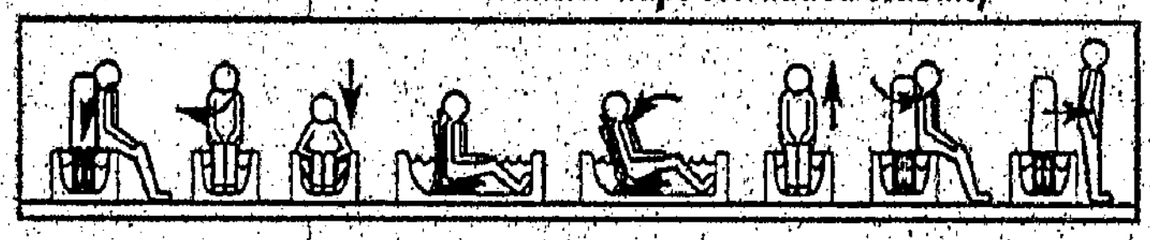
Introducing the Neptune™ Reclining Bath Lift



Innovative technology allows anyone with mobility issues to take a bath safely. It's a fact, Americans are living longer than ever. For many people, living longer doesn't mean living better, as they lose their independence, dignity, and quality of life. Many have to move out of the home they love because they can no longer do simple things... like taking a bath... without someone's help. Now, an innovative product has used the latest technology to help millions of Americans stay safe, stay in their home, and enjoy a better quality of life. It's called the Neptune™ Reclining Bath Lift, and it's changing the way older Americans live.

Remember when taking a bath was something you looked forward to, not something you avoided?

Revolutionary Technology...A Simple Solution. The Neptune™ Reclining Bath Lift is designed to help millions enjoy one of life's simple pleasures... a warm, comfortable bath. Using a powerful, 12-volt NiCad battery, its powerful motor raises and lowers the seat so that anyone, regardless of mobility issues, can get in the tub easily, comfortably, and without the fear of slipping and falling. There's no danger of being shocked because the remote is waterproof, double sealed, and detaches from the chair so you can take it to another room for charging if you wish. The battery can be fully charged overnight and, once charged, provides enough power for 7 up/down cycles. There's an indicator light that lets you know the battery needs to be charged, and if there is not enough power for a full up/down cycle, the seat will not go down.

Sit Back...or Lie Back...and Relax. One of the special features of this remarkable product is that it allows you to bathe in a reclining position. Once you lower yourself into the tub, you simply push the button and the back reclines.

Call Today...and Try Neptune With Our Exclusive In-Home Trial. Are you tired of taking sponge baths at the sink, sitting in the shower, or... worse yet, having a friend, relative, or caregiver help you take a bath? Why not try Neptune in your own home and see for yourself. If you are not satisfied for any reason, simply return it during the trial period for a full refund of the product purchase price less shipping and handling. Don't wait, call today, our product experts are standing by to answer any questions you have.

PORK & BOWLING

I maybe step inside a bowling alley once every year or two, if that. But whenever I do, I always think, "Wow, this is so much fun. I ought to do it more often." Then I leave, get caught up in life, and never think about it again.

Unfortunately, I'm the same way with The Other White Meat.® Whenever I order carnitas at a restaurant or fix a pork roast on Sunday, I always think, "Wow, this is great. I should have pork more often." But then I forget and go back to the same old meals I always make. My cooking's in a rut. Make that a gutter. I think it's time to go bowling again.
