Indian Richest of Americans

Three Hundred Thousand Red Brothers Own $130,000,000 of Forests and Woodlands.

ANNUAL INCOME TWO MILLIONS

Forests Conducted by Indian Forestry Service According to Advanced Principles—Administration Costs Indian Only 10 Per Cent.

Do you think Uncle Sam is making up for the past wrongs done the red brother? This story gives an interesting insight into what a paternal government now is doing for him?

Washington.—Sentimentally considered, it is generally conceded that Lo, the poor Indian, is right in the midst of the pauper class; but when his material assets are considered he becomes the richest of Americans, potentially and perceptibly speaking; indeed, the richest of all humans. If the individual Indian could cash in on an equal distribution basis his share of the lands, live stock, minerals and forests at their present valuation he would be immeasurably better off than the average white American, says the forest and lumber information service of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, which has been making a study of the Indian forests, and incidentally reports that as against the average white man's $1,600, the red man would possess about $2,400; for the total Indian estate is $727,000,000 and there are but about 300,000 Indians.

One of the richest of the Indian assets is not often brought to public attention, viz., the Indian forests. As a lumberman, the Indian is collectively an exceptional magnate. The 300,000-odd Indians own 35,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber—an important factor in the American supply of forest products—worth today at least $100,000,000; and the young growth in these forests and the land they stand on represent $30,000,000 more. If this forest wealth were divided equally, every Indian in the country would have about $450 of forest wealth.

Awake to Value of Timber.

The Indians began to realize about 25 years ago that trees represented real wealth, and the last clash of any consequence between the military and Indians was in northern Minnesota in 1898 when the Leech Lake Chippewas literally took to the tall timber in full fighting strength when they concluded that loggers who had been allowed the privilege of removing dead and down timber from the reservation were not finding anything in the woods that wasn't dead and down, at least when they got through with it. It cost the lives of eight soldiers of the Third regular regiment and the wounding of about 25 others for the Indians to impress on the government that they were right on the job of looking after their timber. This was not an Indian uprising in a proper sense but was just a resort to arms, as the Indians saw it, to protect their established property rights. Whether this demonstration of force had anything to do with it or not, it is a fact that the systematic forestry and business management of the Indian timber lands began at about that time.

The Indian bureau of the Department of Interior asserts that during the last quarter of the Nineteenth century many millions of feet of timber were removed from Indian reservations in the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota without proper supervision of the cutting and without adequate protection of the interests of the Indians. Congress provided no funds for protection or for the development of a system of merchandising timber.

The first general act of congress dealing with the timber on Indian reservations was in 1889 and authorized the sale of dead and down timber by the Indians of any reservation, and one of 1897 specially authorized the sale of such timber on the lands of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. The Indian service considers now that both were unsound in principle as they encouraged deliberate injury of the timber by fire, to make it "dead and down," and surreptitious cutting. It was not until 1909 that congress gave authority for the development within the Indian service of a regular organization for the efficient administration of Indian timber lands. At that time $100,000 was appropriated for forestry work on the reservations. In the meantime there is no doubt that a large part of the forest wealth of the Indians was dissipated. Since 1909, however, the forestry branch of the Indian service has been building up an efficient system of administering timber lands in accordance with the basic principles of the science of forestry. In 1910 congress authorized the sale of mature green timber for the first time. It then became possible not only to protect the Indian timber lands from fire and trespass, but also to derive from the forests an income that has financed much of the recent general industrial development on Indian reservations.

The Indians own altogether 7,000,000 acres of commercial forests in addition to large adjacent areas of woodland; the two classes of land including an area larger than the combined areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut. The mature timber standing on these lands is estimated at 35,000,000,000 feet with a value of about $100,000,000. The Indians own forests of commercial importance in fifteen states, but the most extensive holdings are in the far western states. Oregon is at the top of the list of Indian timber states, followed in relative order by Washington, Montana, Arizona, New Mexico, Wisconsin, California, Idaho and Minnesota.

The handful of Klamath Indians in southern Oregon, who are the great timber lords of the aborigines, own about 8,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber standing in one of the finest tracts of virgin timber, largely western yellow pine, in the whole of the United States. At present stumpage prices this timber is worth at least $25,000,000. As there are only 1,178 Indians, including a few Piutes and Modocs associated with the Klamaths in the ownership of this timber, a Klamath is worth in timber alone nearly $25,000 and is entitled to rank with the Osages and other plutocratic Indians of the oil land reservations. Down in the southwestern corner of the United States the Indians of the Fort Apache reservation have probably the finest body of timber in that state; and back in Wisconsin the Menominee reservation Chippewas still own a billion feet of hard and soft timber, which is recognized as the finest timber remaining in that state. The Indians of Minnesota own some of the finest stands remaining of eastern white pine, which is now nearing commercial extinction and is proportionately valuable.

Since the establishment of the Indian forestry service in 1910 the Indian lands have been administered according to a policy of reconciling forestry principles with the present economic interests of the Indians. The reservation forestry problem is not just the same as that of the national forests, for it must be remembered that the Indian forests are private property of the Indians held in trust for them by the United States government. Many of the Indians, too, own their lands in individual allotments; and in such cases their timber is held for them from much the same point of view as an individual white settler would take. If the land is adaptable to agriculture the cutting is clean and without a view to reforestation. On the other hand in the case of the tribal forests the idea is to reconcile the need of immediate revenue for the owners with assurance of future value of the property, and here the principle is one of perpetual lumbering. Only mature trees are cut, and provision is made for protecting young trees from injury during logging operations and for the cleaning up and burning of debris of logging. The timber is generally disposed of to contractors through competitive bids, the contractor removing the timber himself under the supervision of and according to the regulations of the Indian forest service.

Most Advanced Forestry Practice.

It is the boast of the Indian forest service that its regulations governing logging operations, promulgated in 1923, represent as advanced a state as has yet been made in American forestry practice anywhere.

An illustration of the public or what might be called the white man's interest in the Indian forests is found in general regulation No. 10, which provides that in the discretion of the officer of the Indian forest service, in charge, "a strip not exceeding 300 feet in width on each side of streams, roads and trails and in the vicinity of camping places and recreation grounds, may be reserved, in which little or no cutting will be allowed." This provision assures the maintenance of scenic values on the Indian reservations.

Notwithstanding forestry regulations, some of the largest timber sales ever made by the United States government and at the highest prices have been made of Indian reservation timber in the last ten or twelve years. Five sales have amounted to approximately 500,000,000 feet each and a dozen others have exceeded 100,000,000 feet each. Large units of yellow pine have been sold on the Klamath reservation at $5.50 per thousand feet, and on the Flathead reservation in Montana at $6.50 a thousand. White and Norway pine of inferior quality on the Nett Lake reservation in Minnesota have sold at $10 and $13.65 respectively, and in a recent sale of nearly half a billion feet on the Quinaielt reservation in Washington, western hemlock brought the unprecedented price of $3.00, and cedar, spruce, Douglas fir and other species were sold at $5.00 a thousand. The timber of three units of this reservation sold during 1922 totaled more than 1,000,000,000 feet. From the Klamath reservation alone more than 100,000,000 feet are being cut each year. The latest sale of Indian timber was that of the Valley Creek unit in the Flathead reservation in Montana, 130,000,000 feet, at $5.12 a thousand for the western yellow pine and $3.01 for the other timber. During the past decade the value of the timber removed from lands under the jurisdiction of the Indian service has exceeded $1,500,000 annually, and this income will presently exceed $2,000,000. The cost to the Indians of the commercial and forestry administration of their lands, including the protection of the timber from fire, insect infestation and trespass, has been less than $150,000 annually.

Indians Get 90 Per Cent.

The Indian forest service is very proud of the fact that more than 90 per cent of the gross income from the Indian forest has been placed to the credit of individual Indians or tribes for use in their support or industrial advancement.

A striking illustration of the economic salvation prudent administration of their forests has meant to the Indians in many cases is found in the Jicarilla Apache reservation in New Mexico. In 1910 the Jicarillas, exceedingly poor, broken by disease and wretched beyond belief, were apparently nearing extinction. By means of funds realized from sales of their timber they have been rehabilitated morally and physically and are now far on the road to industrial independence.

The regulations make it imperative for loggers in the Indian forests to employ Indians preferably wherever they are available and fitted for the work. Many hundred Indians thus have lucrative employment by themselves, so to speak.

Extensive valuation surveys have been made on a number of reservations and the work is going ahead as fast as funds become available. This survey, besides furnishing data for a topographic map, gives the amount, kind and quality of timber, the soil classification and its adaptability to irrigation and farm crop production.

Importance of Surveys.

The surveys are also very important in protecting the forests from fire. On all the reservations containing timber of any importance telephone lines have been constructed from central headquarters to various strategic points such as ranger cabins in the mountains and the fire lookouts. The latter are located on high mountain points, which afford a panoramic view of the timber below. Men are stationed in these lookouts throughout the fire season, constantly scanning the forests with binoculars. If such an observer discovers a fire he immediately determines its location with an instrument known as a fire-finder and promptly telephones the information to the forester in charge, who immediately dispatches a crew with tools and supplies to fight the fire. The Indian service co-operates with the forest service (national forests) of the Department of Agriculture and other agencies in fire detection and suppression. This, with a systematic patrol of experienced rangers and guards, affords insurance against heavy losses from fire. The average cost of this insurance has never exceeded half a cent an acre.

The proceeds from the administration of the Indian forests in the last twenty-five years have amounted to about $25,000,000 and it is likely that the Indian forests will bring in around $2,000,000 a year for the next twenty years, and a smaller sum indefinitely. Moreover, the permanent Indian forests will contribute in a considerable measure to the maintenance of a certain though limited supply of timber in the future.

Seven Points of Supremacy

1. The sole leather used in "FOOT-FITTERS" is of the best quality obtainable. Even the insoles are cut from standard outsole leather.

2. "FOOT-FITTERS" are the only shoes in the world having full length vamps and sole leather box toes. This feature prevents ripping at the tip and makes a smooth outer and inner surface.

3. The insoles are shoulder channelled so that they fit tightly against the outsole. There is no need or room for a cork filler. A small piece of duck is used to prevent squeaking.

4. The Calfskin inside counter pocket is of great value, for it saves the wear on the socks. There is no rough surface to rub against.

5. "FOOT-FITTER" heels are ¼-inch longer than generally used. They give additional support to the arch and increase the comfort and wear of the shoe.

6. The vamp is reenforced with 8-oz. duck. This absorbs the moisture from the foot, this keeps the vamp from cracking and holds the shoe in shape.

7. Edmonds' "FOOT-FITTER" shoes are called "FOOT-FITTERS" because they fit the foot snugly. Built on combination lasts they support the foot like a doctor's bandage.—"FOOT-FITTERS" give Comfort, Service and Appearance.

William Harvey Fisher.

Capitan and all Lincoln county mourns the death of one of its most substantial citizens. Wednesday March 28th, William Harvey Fisher breathed his last. He was born November 5th, 1851, at Chatanooga, Tennessee, where he resided with his parents until he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Mills, of the same place. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were of the Friends Faith. They removed from Tennessee to Kansas in the early eighties. To this union were born six children, four boys and two girls five of whom survive the deceased, the mother dying the year 1884.

In the year 1888, Mr. Fisher was united in marriage to Mrs. Martha A. Burton, an estimable Christian lady, the son Carlton being the only child of this union. In 1897 he removed to Horatio, Arkansas, and from thence to Capitan, New Mexico, in 1902, residing here continuously since that date, engaging in ranching and lumber business, being still active in the latter business up to a few months before his death.

Mrs. Martha Fisher died in the year 1919. She was an active church worker, was a teacher in the Sunday school and always to be found on the side of right.

Mr. Fisher was united in marriage to Chloe May Walter in October, 1921, who, with his six surviving children sincerely mourn his loss. He suffered [illegible] from a complication of diseases involving the heart, kidneys and bladder for several months before his death, and all that loving hearts could do to alleviate his suffering was done.

Mr. Fisher was always a conscientious Christian gentleman, and fought sin in all its phases. A loyal citizen, an upright and conscientious man, has answered the last call, and the community in which he lived is distinctinctly poorer by his passing.

"In the United States," remarked the man who can remember figures, "there are 12,357,000 motorcars, according to the automotive division of the federal Department of Commerce. Do you realize what that means? I've done a little figuring and I ascertained that it means that out of every six motorcars operated in the world five of them are to be found within the United States of America. The world's motorcars total 14,622,000. About 2,000,000 of this number are trucks. In Europe, according to the same authority, motorcycles, without side cars, are taking the place of the low-priced car. Over there are more than 680,000 motorcycles about three times as many as are registered in this country.

And the softer the road the harder it is to travel.

AFTER THE FLU

If the Flu Left You Weak, or You're in Need of a Tonic to Build You Up, Take This Advice

Houston, Texas—"I was in a terribly run-down condition of health after a siege of ptomaine poisoning, and then the influenza. I could not seem to regain my strength and was really not able to do my housework. I knew I needed a good tonic and builder and remembered how my folks used to regard Dr. Pierce's remedies in my girlhood days, and then I decided to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking the second bottle I found it was doing me a world of good, strength returned rapidly and I felt better in every way. I am glad indeed to recommend the medicine that did me so much good and do not hesitate to give this statement."—Mrs. Gertrude Sell, 1230 Rutland St.

Cutting through the alley the late worker figured that he could just about reach the front door of the cafe before they closed. And, as he passed, he noticed a waiter coming to the alley door with a platter of remnant toast. He made the front door. They were not overglad to see him, but took his order. He asked for a club sandwich.

The waiter plodded to the rear, and pretty soon the customer heard the cook growling: "Say, where did you throw that toast?"

SAVED LIFE SAYS MRS. WAGENAAR

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 268 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well.

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away.

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now, I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

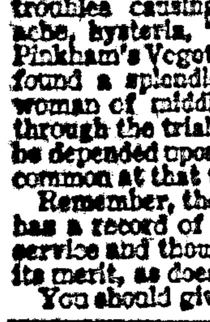
"Since the Tut-Ankh-Amen affair," said the attendant at the Detroit Institute of Arts," "there has been a positive rush for Egyptian relics. I firmly believe that more people have assiduously read books and articles dealing with ancient Egypt since this Luxor affair than ever before."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am taking it now for the Change of Life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter-box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives."—Mrs. ENGLEMANN, 2032 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N.Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Englemann. You should give it a fair trial now.

Cost of Education in Colorado.

Denver.—The average annual cost of education per pupil in Colorado public schools, based upon average daily attendance, is $120.08, according to compilations made by the State Immigration Department for use in the Colorado Year Book. The average cost based upon total enrollment in the schools is $91.10. These averages are for the school year ending July 1, 1922, and are calculated from data contained in the records of the state superintendent of public instruction. They are based upon total expenditures for school purposes for the year and may include some expenditures for permanent improvements which are not properly chargeable to the cost of education for the current year. Total expenditures reported for the year were $19,570,543.

Costs in Denver are above the average for the state, being $102.25 and $150.20, respectively. Highest costs, however, are found in rural districts, where attendance is comparatively small. In San Juan county for example, the average cost based upon attendance is $210.63, and in Saguache county, where many of the children are transported long distances to school, and where excellent facilities are provided, the average cost based upon attendance is $223.44. In Park county, where average attendance is very low compared with enrollment, the average annual cost based upon attendance is $283.49, which is the highest for any county. Total school expenditures reported for the county, however, are only $41,600.

The lowest average cost based upon attendance reported is for Baca county, being $41.07. Attendance in this county is rather large compared with the school population, which reduces the average cost. Total expenditures reported for the county are $142,540. Conejos county ranks next to Baca, with an average annual cost based upon attendance of $53.20. The percentage of attendance here is low in comparison with the total number of children of school age, perhaps because of the very considerable number of Mexican children in the county. The percentage of attendance based upon enrollment, however, is comparatively high.

Average costs of education per pupil has been advancing rather rapidly in Colorado for the past few years, but the increases for the past year were not so great as for several previous years.

Babe Given Name of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

St. Augustine, Fla.—A new and modern angle on the stories of old King "Tut" is found in the christening of a small "king of Egypt" born in St. Augustine to Mr. and Mrs. Salem Mussallem, the baby being given the full name of Tut-Ankh-Amen. The baby's father was born in Alexandria, Egypt, and believing in reincarnation, the old faith of the Egyptians, he has named the boy for the great Pharaoh whose tomb was recently discovered near Luxor.
