Unique Feat of Bridge Engineers

When the bridge across the Mississippi river at Hastings, Minn., was built it was found there was not space for the usual long approach. So the engineers designed a spiral approach, as shown in the photograph.

Angora Plans Islam's Reform

New Turk Leaders Realize That Modern Economic Existence Makes Changes Necessary.

Constantinople.—Five times a day, above the modern tumult of the Grande Rue de Pera, Constantinople's most Europeanized thoroughfare, there rises in monotonous recitative a shrill, far voice. "Come to prayer," it chants, "Come to prayer, come to prayer! I bear witness that there is no God but God! I bear witness that Mahomet is the prophet of God! Come to salvation! God is great!"

The voice is all but drowned in the clanging of electric cars, the tooting of automobile horns; the crowds that press along the narrow sidewalks—Armenians, Greeks, Jews, Russians, Western soldiers and civilians of all nations—heed it not; and you may pass the place a hundred times without ever noticing the minaret of the little old mosque, dwarfed and hidden between tall new houses, whence the muezzin sends forth his exhortation.

Between this voice with its spiritual message and the unheeding multitude bent on the business and pleasures of modern life lies all the depth of the apparently unbridgeable abyss that divides Islam as hallowed by the traditions of centuries from Western civilization. Five times a day the Moslem is commanded to interrupt his daily work to say his prayers and perform the prescribed ablutions that precede them, losing in the process, at a moderate estimate, five out of the ten hours of the normal working day.

Teachings of Priest.

In the mosque the priest will teach him that it is a mortal sin to lend money at interest, in other words to engage in any kind of banking business, and that all the future events of his life, whether fortunate or unfortunate, are preordained by God, thus stifling whatever spirit of enterprise he may possess.

It is the realization of the fact that the precepts of Islam in their present form have become irreconcilable with the conditions of modern economic existence which has inspired the leaders of new Turkey with the great plan of religious reform they are at present engaged in carrying out at Angora.

Islam still represents a tremendous political force, and Mustapha Kemal and his associates are keenly alive to the great future possibilities which lie open to Turkey as the strongest independent Mohammedan power. They know perfectly well that the extraordinary successes they achieved in their struggle against the allies at Mudania and Lausanne were not due to fear of their little army in Anatolia, however excellently led and organized it might be, but to the far greater menace exerted by the solidarity of the Moslem world against the colonial interests of England and France.

The British dared not risk war with Turkey because of the effect on India and Egypt, on the Afghans and Arabs. This dread of the European colonial powers, and particularly of Britain, has dominated and will for a long time to come continue to dominate the entire situation in the Near East, and the Turkish leaders naturally wish to exploit it to the utmost by infusing fresh blood into the veins of Islam and welding the Moslem world as closely as possible together under Turkey's leadership. The reform they contemplate has therefore a threefold aim: To bring Islam into harmony with modern economic civilization, to intensify its spiritual influence by restoring it to its original purity and to consolidate its political prestige and power.

Reforms Cause Anxiety.

It is not surprising that the European powers with colonial interests in Africa and Asia are inclined to view this reform of Islam with extreme anxiety and to attempt to discredit it. Officially inspired prophets have darkly predicted that it must infallibly sow incurable dissensions among the Moslem world—as if this were not exactly what European diplomacy is most anxiously hoping will happen! As a matter of fact the modernization of Islam has been authorized by Mahomet himself, who expressly says in the Koran that the time may come when it will be necessary to modify his precepts in order to suit altered conditions!

Furthermore, many of the changes advocated by the reform committee constituted by the grand national assembly at Angora are not innovations at all, but merely a restoration of the primitive doctrine of Islam, which, like other religions, has suffered in the course of time through the interpretations of zealous theologians.

Thus the first important measure taken by the Angora reformers, the election of the Caliph by the representatives of the people after the deposition of the ex-sultan, is entirely in accordance with the democratic conception of the Caliphate as held by Mahomet and his immediate successors. It has, therefore, completely failed to awaken that storm of protest so eagerly anticipated by the ex-sultan's European protectors and has been accepted and recognized as a legal act by the Moslems of all lands.

Similarly, the ban against taking interest for loans, which has paralyzed Turkish business activity in the past, appears to be based on an erroneous interpretation of the Koran, which in reality only prohibits usury. It is certain that this interdiction will be eliminated by the reform committee, and there are already today three purely Turkish banks operating in Constantinople.

When the Turks of all classes realize that it is no longer incompatible with their religion to engage in banking business they will be better able to compete with their Greek and Armenian neighbors, and the chief source of racial strife in Turkey will be gradually removed.

Another less vital but equally significant transformation has been effected as regards the Moslem interdiction of representing the human face or figure, which was inspired by Mahomet's dread of idolatry, but is absolutely out of date now. Even Turks of the lowest classes no longer evince any dislike of being photographed, and the national assembly has stamped its approval on their tolerance by decreeing the erection of an equestrian statue of Mustapha Kemal in Angora, the first monument of its kind in Turkey, though several already exist in Egypt.

May Heal Old Feuds.

The measures taken by the Nationalist leaders to restore the primitive austerity of Islam, far from creating dissensions among the Moslem races, are calculated to heal many old feuds. The introduction of prohibition in Turkey, which is entirely in accordance with the teaching of the prophet, has made a deep impression on the Wahabis and Senussis, the two great puritanical and warlike Arab nations, who until now hated and despised the Turks as "bad Mohammedans." The antiliquor legislation of Angora cannot fail likewise to appeal strongly to these puritans of the desert, who do not even smoke or drink coffee and among whom even the wearing of silk and of gold or silver ornaments is forbidden.

A great step toward the reconciliation of Arabs and Turks, whose enmity has so far been the cornerstone of European diplomacy in the Near East, has thus been taken by the Angora government, and ere long its consequences may become alarmingly apparent.

The pan-Islamic movement, inaugurated by the astute Abdul Hamid, has found a new center in Angora, and it is being now conducted by young, ambitious men with modern ideas, who have all the daring courage inspired by their conviction that their country has emerged victorious out of a ten years' struggle.

The great sheik of the Senussis, whose power is a serious menace to Italy's colonies in Africa, is the constant guest of Mustapha Kemal, upon whom he conferred a sword of honor after the victory of the Sangarios, and is now on the borders of Mosul, using his influence over the Arabs of Mesopotamia to pave the way for a Turkish invasion in case of war. Ambassadors from Persia and Afghanistan have been accredited in Angora, and delegations representing the various nationalist parties of India and Egypt have made it their headquarters.

The ambition of all these Eastern patriots is to follow Turkey's example by setting up "national pacts" of their own and forcing their acceptance upon the European powers in the same manner as the successful Turks. Already it is reported that the Arabs of Tripoli have adopted a national pact after the Turkish pattern, by which they pledge themselves to free their country absolutely from Italian domination.

Where Diplomacy Fails.

To meet this menace of rejuvenated, modernized Islam, European diplomacy has so far proved impotent to invent any new method of defense. It is following its antiquated policy of seeking to divide the Moslem world by subterranean intrigues. England, after staging the deposed sultan's flight from Constantinople to Malta, has sent him on a British warship to Mecca, where it appears that the refugee has been received with all the honors due to the true caliph by Hussein, king of the Hedjas and guardian of the Holy Places of Islam.

Both Hussein and the emir of Nedj, the ruler of the Wahabis, are recipients of large "subsidies" from the British treasury, which accounts for the ready hospitality they have afforded to the discredited, half-witted ex-caliph. It remains to be seen, however, how long they will be able to conceal from their ignorant subjects the fact that all the rest of the Moslem world has recognized and pledged allegiance to the new caliph, Abdul Medjid, in Constantinople, elected by the national assembly of Turkey.

Most Eastern experts with whom I have spoken are of the opinion that when the truth dawns upon the Arabs of Nedj and the Hedjaz, as it already has upon the Senussis, this astute scheme of setting up a rival caliph will come to naught and the whole of Arabia will once more look toward Constantinople for spiritual, and inevitably also political, guidance.

While the Turkish leaders have divested the caliphate of its temporal power, they are making every effort to enhance its popular prestige as an important factor in the revival of Islam. With Oriental pomp, unseen since Abdul Hamid's time, the new caliph goes to pray every Friday in a different mosque, driving in an open carriage with four horses and outriders, preceded by his bodyguard in splendid uniforms and followed by a brilliant suite, keeping in the public eye as much as possible in order to revive the religious fanaticism of the multitude. The decrepit ex-sultan, hidden among his women in the unapproachable palace of Dolma-Bagtche, was a tragic-comic figure, held up to ridicule by Turks of all classes.

The new caliph, a highly educated, aristocratic prince in the prime of life, and of austere morals, thoroughly in accordance with his elevated religious dignity, is rapidly becoming a really popular spiritual leader. It is not impossible that his seat may soon be transferred from Constantinople to Angora, whither the "sacred relics" and other treasures of the seraglio have already been secretly removed, and if so, measures will probably be taken to have his election by the Turkish national assembly ratified by a special congress of delegates from all Moslem countries.

Islam a Political System.

Islam is not merely a religion, but also a political system. All modern investigators of Eastern unrest agree that Moslems are better fitted to embrace and put into practice the precepts of democracy than other Orientals, because the principles of democratic government are contained in the Koran.

It would be difficult indeed to find, outside of the United States, a more democratic regime than that prevailing in Angora today, where the deputies of the national assembly have refused the ratification of the peace project elaborated by the cabinet after weeks of stormy debate. Under the same circumstances any European parliament, and particularly the British house of commons, would have blindly indorsed the treaty submitted to it in a few hours. True democracy has its diplomatic drawbacks, but it seems unfair to accuse the Turks of Oriental procrastination because the national assembly of Turkey happens to be acting very much like the American senate.

In Sentari, on the Asiatic shore of the Bosporus opposite Constantinople, there is a celebrated "tekke" or monastery of howling dervishes, which in pre-war days used to attract large crowds of foreign tourists. Tourists don't go there any more now, because they fear their presence may awaken the fanaticism of its devotees—an entirely groundless apprehension, for the dervishes, being really ecstatically sincere seekers after the divine spirit, are the most tolerant of all Moslems.

Not long ago the writer was a spectator at their weird service. By the constant and ever increasingly violent repetition of the name of God the dervishes had worked themselves up as usual to the highest pitch of religious exaltation, when a nationalist officer in full uniform, who was standing beside me, suddenly rushed into their midst with a wild "Allah-hoo-ooo" and joined in their exercises, outyelling the loudest, until he collapsed on the floor with the rest, foaming at the mouth, in an autohypnotic trance.

The scene was a revelation of the immense spiritual force yet dwelling in Islam, and of the strange things we may live to see if the nationalist leaders of Turkey succeed in using it to shape the economic and political destinies of the East.—New York Herald.

Broken Ankle Is Only Result of Long Fall

New York.—Joe Viola, five years old, fell five stories from the roof of his home at 223 East Ninety-seventh street with no more serious results than a fractured ankle. The child lost his balance while playing on the roof. He struck four sets of clothelines while falling, bounding from one to the next, and landed on his feet.

The owners of two-thirds of all of the radium in the United States were in attendance at the seventy-fourth annual convention of the American Medical Association at San Francisco. The nation's supply is estimated at 100 grams, having a value of $8,000,000. The radium owners are included in the American Radium Society.

Application of the Golden Rule in all relations between governments and institution of a closer brotherhood among all humanity was the theme of a sunrise sermon delivered by President Harding from the rear platform of his train in Colorado Springs. The "sermon" was heard by several hundred persons of Colorado Springs, where a brief stop was made.

Governor Richardson, of California, allowed the bill to raise the legal age of girls from 18 to 21 years to die by pocket veto because, he said he believed girls between these ages not only should have the opportunity to marry but he thinks early marriages promote better home life and improve citizenship generally. "To prevent a girl 18 years of age from marrying," said the governor, "would be contrary to the laws of nature and science."

The President, in his address in Salt Lake City, declared no other country in the world has been able to make such a record in public debt reduction as had the United States. Pointing to a reduction of more than one-half in federal taxes during the past two years as compared with the war load peak in 1920, he declared this was the "record of business administration to which the party now in control of the administration feels justified in referring with no small measure of satisfaction."

Each member of the Republican national committee was requested by Chairman Adams to appoint a woman in his state to serve on an associate member of the committee.

Ignoring the recent rebuke of the United States Railroad Labor Board directed against the Pennsylvania railroad because of the carrier's defiance of one of the board's decisions, the Northwestern region of the road completed election of employee representatives of the shopmen and miscellaneous forces under the road's employee representation plan, railroad officials announced. Although the appeal of the Pennsylvania system to the United States Supreme Court resulted in the court upholding the boards' right to rebuke the road, the board had no power to enforce its ruling.

Making a new departure in the field of railway regulation the Interstate Commerce Commission held that there already are enough coal mines in the country and solely on that ground refused to permit the Virginian railway to build a one mile branch in West Virginia to serve mines being opened by the Pocahontas Fuel Company.

Fraud orders were issued by Postmaster General New against the Shallcross 500 per cent syndicate and the Stanglover 500 per cent syndicate oil companies at Fort Worth, Tex., and Eldorado, Ark., and against S. Shallcross, S. Shallcross, Trustee, and S. Shallcross, bonded trustee. The order charges that the syndicate promised 500 per cent dividends at 100 per cent monthly.

Railroads operating in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast states were in effect authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase by 10 per cent their freight rates on corn and cereal products usually classified as "coarse grain." The increase, which does not affect wheat, is authorized in shipments from Mississippi valley points to the Rocky Mountain-Pacific Coast area.

While both the United States and Canada increased their exportations of flour during the war, the Canadian gain has been well maintained since the war, with the United States tending to lose the increase, it is shown by an investigation conducted by the Commerce Department. Before the war the United States exported on the average of 10,678,000 barrels of flour a year, while Canada exported 3,832,000 barrels. At present Canada's exports average 7,585,000 barrels a year, while exports from the United States are averaging 15,707,000 barrels.

It is reported that 9,000 Wahabi warriors have attacked and annihilated the garrison at Kariatlimih. Dispatches say the trans-Jordanian government requested the Beni-Sacher tribe to attack the Wahabis, but that the tribesmen refused to act unless the government forces co-operated with them.

Lord Astor, speaking before a charity organization on the subject of prohibition, said that ever since the United States had inaugurated its great experiment that British liquor trade had been carrying on anti-American propaganda. He objected to the deliberate attempts to misrepresent everything associated with the United States.

Prohibition will not be an issue in the American presidential campaign next year because both the Republican and Democratic parties are afraid to make an issue of it, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall of New Mexico declared recently. Mr. Fall, at one time United States senator from New Mexico, is in Europe on his vacation.

Mt. Etna's fury has so much subsided that many peasants in the threatened districts are returning to their homes, according to dispatches received in Rome from Catania. The flow has lessened to about sixteen yards an hour. Premier Mussolini announced that plans were under way for the rebuilding along modern lines of the city of Messina which, with Reggio and other towns, was destroyed by the earthquake of 1909.

Canada, within the next two weeks, will enter into negotiations with the United States to consider the possibility of co-operation to check rum smuggling over the border, it was learned at Ottawa from an official source. Down flag-draped Nicollet avenue in Minneapolis, disabled American veterans of the World war marched, greeted with the same fervor that attended their departure for France six years ago. Nearly 3,000 veterans were in the line of march, and those whose disabilities prevented them from joining in the procession on foot, rode on automobiles close on the heels of their more able buddies.

Members of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, which ended its session in Indianapolis after more than ten days deliberations on the affairs of the organization have returned to their homes. One of the most important developments of the meeting, it was said, was the instructions to bring to trial any members accused of spreading "red" propaganda within the union.

Fourteen armored cars, each carrying six armed men and a machine gun, passed through the streets of New York in pairs recently with $200,000,000 in securities and cash which was being moved from the Bowery Savings Bank to its new branch in Forty-second street, opposite the Grand Central terminal. Detectives were stationed at strategic points along the route, uniformed police kept the line of traffic open, and each pair of bullet proof cars was preceded by a motorcycle policeman.

In Road Interest.

The Capitan Commercial Club sent a committee to Socorro last Saturday, consisting P. G. Peters, W. B. Payne, Jack Price, Albert Rohde, Wm. Titsworth C. H. Patterson, Perry Sears, Fred Pingston, L. O. Hulbert and several others to confer with the county commissioners and business men of Socorro with a view of improving the highway between that town, Carrizozo, Capitan and on to Roswell. At Carrizozo they were joined by a committee committee consisting of E. H. Sweet, T. E. Kelley, Sheriff Harris and Robert Taylor. The arguments were presented and proved successful, and the work will be commenced as soon as the Highway Commission can get a force of men to work on the job. Mr. Peters informs us that the road is in very good condition, with the exception of one or two places of a hundred yards or a little more in length where the sand is rather deep, and that there is an appropriation of $10,000 to be expended on the road. This road is a direct route to the state line, through Arizona and on to California. It means a great deal to this section of the country as much of the travel can be turned over this route that has heretofore gone in other directions on account of the bad condition of the highway.

G. B. Greer is Dead.

News reached us today that Mr. G. B. Greer died yesterday in Carrizozo, of goat fever, after an illness of about two months, and was buried at Angus this afternoon with Masonic honors. Mr. Greer was an old resident of Lincoln county and had many friends. He had a nice home on the upper Bonito, but he spent a good portion of his time at his ranch in the San Andres mountains, which is largely stocked with Angora goats. He was a good citizen and his death will be greatly regretted by a host of friends.

L. L. Beard and D. Frank Harbour two Dallas, Texas, soldier boys who have settled on the Macho below Shindle, were here last Saturday. Mr. Harbour was making application to make final proof on his homestead, and Mr. Beard will make proof on his claim a little later. He is a printer by trade and we are guessing he will get back to it sooner or later. He is an up-to-date young and to keep up with the affairs of the world he has established a radeo in his Macho home and gets the news from all parts of the country. He will get the report of the Dempsey-Gibbons prize fight, to take place at Shelby Montana, on the 4th of July, and will be able to furnish it to his friends by rounds as the fight progresses.

SNAKE MAKES FINE MOUSER

Boa Constrictor Takes Place of House Cat in Some Mexican Households.

Hard Does Well.

In Sinaloa, on the west coast of Mexico, is the old town of Mazatlan, which, because of its position as a port of entry, has an interesting history of various numerous bombardments which it took during the never-ending revolutions in Mexico.

Mazatlan, translated, means the "place of the deer." It could well be called the "place of the parrot." For the beautiful birds are sold along the waterfront by peddlers. On the polished floors of the hotel—if one can dignify the lodging house with such a name—is invariably seen a gravely dignified, sitting, likeness magistrate, and passing judgment on the passers-by.

But this is not the only representative of the animal kingdom in the house. For it boasts of a 10-foot boa constrictor, which hangs lazily from the ceiling or is curled up in a corner. Here the boa constrictor is the mouser. The Mexicans use it with great success in this place of the ordinary mouse cat. And it is no more dangerous than pussy herself. The snakes are faithful in their work and take the entire responsibility themselves of killing off rats. For as a cat is found in their territory they take the precaution of removing any rivals in their art by first eating the cat.

Pity the Modern Baby.

Despite the fact that the modern baby thrives on what science does for him today it's a big job to be a baby.

Just when baby is kicking his little pink toes and making an effort to count the funny stitches on his new white crib quilt some one comes along and says: "It's time to take the baby to the doctor," or "It's time for his weighing and measuring," or "It's time to take his temperature," or "It's time to try out his new diet," and just when he's getting ready to close his eyes for a nice long nap some one comes along and says: "It's time to give the baby his tomato juice," and what baby in the world ever likes the taste of tomatoes?

There's a million things science puts over on the baby today. The baby is absolutely helpless to prevent the experiment. He may holler his little lungs out, but it doesn't do a bit of good, as crying causes much less concern than it used to for the baby these days needs exercise for his lungs and he needs much more discipline than he used to. That's what science thinks.—Minneapolis News.

Eclipse of Sun Coming in September.

Darker than a cloudy day, but lighter than moonlight, will be the light that will suffuse the earth at certain points for a short time Sept. 10. Dogs will growl, chickens will go to roost. Creatures will feel a sense of impermanence as an immense black ball passes over the face of the sun. There will be a total eclipse of the sun on that day, the first visible to the inhabitants of North America in five years.

The total eclipse of the sun always has stirred the imagination of mankind and made men act in unwonted ways. The first record of an eclipse tells us that a Chinese Emperor relieved two of his ministers of their heads because they had not foretold the eclipse that came in B. C. 2158. So great was the effect on the Medes and Persians B. C. 585, that they quit fighting when the heavens darkened suddenly. Ancient races believed a dragon was eating up the sun.

The effect on the modern scientist is almost as great as on the primitive races. Try as they will to make mathematical notes during an eclipse, they forget the task and are carried away by the sight that confronts them.

Leaves become flecked with images of the sun in its crescent shape. From the top of a mountain the shadow of the moon may be seen sweeping across the landscape with almost terrifying rapidity. There is a feeling as if some gigantic object is swooping down on the earth. Weird lights of pearl flare from the rim of the sun when the moon has darkened its face.

The axis of the moon's shadow cone will strike the earth at sunrise in Asia Sept. 10. From there the path of total eclipse, 150 miles wide, will sweep across the Pacific Ocean, reaching Southern California early in the afternoon. The partial phase of the eclipse will be visible over all of North America. At central points along its path the total eclipse will last for three minutes and thirty seconds.

The paramount interest in the eclipse will be to test Einstein's theory: The point involved is whether gravity bends light out of its natural course. Already tests have been made on two eclipses and results were said to substantiate the theory of relativity.—Great Divide.

The Roswell U. S. Their promptness in dispatching business is a great convenience and a relief, to claimants making proof for title to their homestead claims, as well as to persons who have other business which goes through the land office. No mistake was made when Miller and Lutz were selected to fill their respective offices.

RIO GRANDE MERGER PLANS APPROVED BY STOCKHOLDERS

New York—Formal announcement has been made of the detailed plan of reorganization for the Denver & Rio Grande Western railroad system. The plan has the approval of three bondholders committees and the board of directors of the Missouri Pacific and Western Pacific systems.

Under the plan, the $31,114,000 outstanding refunding bonds of the Denver & Rio Grande and the $10,000,000 adjustment bonds are to be exchanged for new general mortgage 5 per cent bonds bearing interest from Feb. 1, 1923, and [illegible] in 1953, and new 6 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock at the rate of $[illegible] of general mortgage bonds and $100 of preferred stock for each $1,000 principal amount of outstanding bonds with the coupon maturing Feb. 1, 1923, and subsequent coupons, and for each $1,000 adjustment bond with the coupons of Oct. 1, 1921 and subsequent coupons.

The common stock of the new company is to be vested equally in the Missouri Pacific and the Western Pacific.

The new company is to receive $10,000,000 in cash for which no securities other than common stock are to be issued, the funds to be used to make payments contemplated by the plan of reorganization, including provision for immediate capital requirements.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the Equitable Trust Company, as reorganization managers, made the plan public. It was stated that the plan, of course, is subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that stockholders of the Western Pacific would be called into special meeting to ratify the plan.

Denver.—The approval or disapproval of the reorganization plan of the D. & R. G. W. rests entirely and finally with the Federal Court in Denver inasmuch as the road is in the hands of a receiver, appointed by the Federal Court. Denver, the plan will have to be approved by the Federal Court before it can become effective.

ACREAGE IN CORN IN STATE THIS YEAR EXCEEDS WHEAT

Denver.—Reports of about 25,000 farmers to the State Immigration Department indicate that the acreage of corn grown in Colorado this year will be greater than the acreage of winter wheat, for the first time in about eight years. The acreage of corn this year will be the greatest ever grown in the state, while the area of winter wheat to be harvested will be below 1,000,000 acres for the first time since 1917.

Acreages reported 1,101,000 acres of corn in 1922, the largest acreage ever grown in Colorado. Reports from 25,000 farms this year show over 700,000 acres, and while the remaining farms will not report as large an acreage as those from which reports already have been received, it seems safe to estimate that the final report will show at least 150,000 acres more corn than was reported in 1922. The reports also indicate an increase of at least 20 per cent in acreage of sorghum crops.

Outlook for Crops Bright

Washington.—Spring grains are generally up to a good stand and vigorous growth may be expected with the advent of warmer weather, according to reports of the United States division of crop and livestock estimates. Moisture conditions are unusually favorable, the subsoil moisture is still deficient in the south and southwest, and frost damage to fruit or other crops is almost negligible. Farm labor is scarce in some districts and high wages demanded.

Lazy Life in Navy Stunt

Washington.—Six children, ranging in age from 6 months to 10 years, are fatherless because Aaron T. Hossignol, a machinist, wanted to show that he had nerve. Hossignol hired a commercial airplane to take him on a flight over the Potomac river. While sixty feet above the water he crawled out on a wing and, with a cry, "I have plenty of nerve!" he swung clear and dove. His body hurtled over and over as its downward plunge. He struck the water with terrific impact, breaking his neck.

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, 55 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine.

Many times they state in their letters their willingness to answer women who write them. It is an offer dictated by gratitude and a desire to help others.

Nature's Warning of Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale
BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

NATURELAND NEWS

"I am going to read you the latest copy of the Natureland News," said Billie Brownie to the other Brownies. "All of the most interesting items are in it, I believe."

So the Brownies all sat about while Billie Brownie perched himself upon a mossy stump and read the newspaper of the Nature world.

And this is what he read:

"The Prairie Horned Larks first came from the Prairies but now are spending most of their time further North. They like the ground for they say it makes a good dining room, a good walking place and altogether the ground has its uses.

"Some dear little boa constrictor snakes have recently arrived in the zoo. This is the way they wished the item about themselves to appear and the Editor of Natureland News is always ready to oblige."

The Brownies laughed at this for they thought the editor had been pretty wise to please the snakes and at the same time to let others know that he hadn't been the one to word that item.

"Pigeons living in a city, who have made their homes under some friendly eaves, are very careful to fly out into the open air every time they feel the tremor which comes from some nearby blasting.

"They are quite sure that nothing will happen to them, yet at the same time they remember that centuries ago pigeons were always told to leave their rocky homes when there was any shaking of the rocks for the air was safe and sure.

"Mrs. Charles Camel of the zoo has a daughter one week old. She felt so jealous because of Mrs. Camel's son who was born in a nearby zoo some time before that she wasn't happy until a little daughter made her appearance and said that she had come to stay. Both mother and daughter are well and happy. And many congratulations are being received.

"Mother and Daughter."

"A baby Barasingha fawn has also just been born in the zoo. If you can't pronounce the Barasingha part never mind. The fawn can't either!

"News has been received that the Prong-Horn Antelopes are to be protected. This is good news indeed. They are greatly admired by the Editor of Natureland News. Some of their ways are particularly interesting. But their beauty and grace is especially worthy of notice.

"The Frogs are giving a course of lectures on 'Successful Frogs and How They Become Successful.' The Frogs are of the opinion that the more they study upon this subject the more successful they will be.

"They feel success is mostly hard work and it is all they can do to keep from talking of their work too much for it interests them more than anything else. In this way, they say, they are like many people.

"Many find the Frogs tiresome these days, talking so much of their work and of their course of lectures. But the Frogs do not mind.

"They insist upon their rights in and out of season. They feel that they are all-important and they also feel that hard work and taking pains will make them good at their work. Also they will be very patient but from much experience they will, they feel, be very excellent by the time they are finished with their course and their studies.

"The work they speak of and about which the lectures are centered is 'The Work of Being a Successful Bug Stamper.' Some do not think it should be called work. A most interesting experience was had recently by a black-headed Albatross who followed a ship for seven days. The ship threw out bread crumbs and bits of fish and other delicacies to the bird who ate them and then continued his journey following the ship.

"At the end of seven days he went back home. The ocean voyage had done him much good, he reported, and the food he had been given had been of the best. Even when the storms had been at their height he had not minded. He said the people were impressed because he could pick up his food off the waves without moving his wings but leaving them the way they were.

"Black-headed Albatross has handsome black feathers upon his head and silver white upon his body and he was called a storm bird by the people on the ship.

"This is one of the interesting bits of foreign travel news which the Natureland News is glad to publish."

Victim of Circumstances.

"How old are you, Edna?" asked a visitor.

"I'm only five," replied Edna with a deep sigh. "I should like to be six, but I suppose somebody has to be five."

WAS FORCED TO LIVE ON MILK

Mrs. Baker Praises Tanlac for Remarkable Recovery of Her Health.

"Tanlac built me up and restored my health when everything else failed and I had lost hope of ever being well again," is the statement made the other day by Mrs. Maria Anita Baker, residing at 707 S. Edith St., Albuquerque, N. M.

"A year ago I was terribly run down from stomach trouble and couldn't eat anything without suffering agony afterwards. My heart palpitated until I could barely get my breath and for several months the only nourishment I could take was milk. I had awful dizzy spells, and was so weak I had to have a servant do my housework.

"Tanlac helped me so wonderfully that five bottles ended all my troubles and made me feel like a different person. I haven't been bothered since and go from morning till night without feeling unduly tired. Tanlac has certainly been a blessing to me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Investigation revealed that the organization last named was the Laymen's league.

In the Health Swim.

Two plunges daily in a swimming tank keeps the doctor away, is the belief of Fred L. Eaton, assistant United States district attorney, who says that he practices his preaching by a morning and evening swim in a tank at a hotel where he resides, the Detroit News reports. Mr. Eaton says that real comradeship is found among those who frequent the swimming tank—a comradeship more fraternal and lasting than that of golf enthusiasts.
