Scientist Calls Man, Star Alike

Harvard Professor Says People Are Made of Nothing Unusual or Exotic

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard professors have started an interesting experiment, the first symposium of a series in which speakers, after finishing their addresses in Emerson hall, repeated them to another audience in an adjoining hall. "The Origin of Life" was the subject of the symposium. The speakers were Prof. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard observatory; Prof. Edward C. Jeffrey, an authority on botany, and Prof. Kirsopp Lake, whose field is ecclesiastical history.

In opening Professor Shapley said: "Representing the diverse points of view of astronomy, biology, theology, we three are here tonight to discuss the fundamental problem, 'The Origin of Life,' with each other. You may listen in if you care to. We are not here to pretend that we know what is the origin of life—far from that. We are here to confess that we do not know.

"We are three of a kind; all interested in the relation of human life to the universe of things, each looking at the problem from his own structure of study and training, and all hopelessly futile in getting to a final answer, but by discussing the subject we may learn just what the problem is, we may clear away some of the superstitions, prejudices and weedy thoughts regarding the origin of life. We may show to each other and to you who listen in that subjects such as these gain by synthetic treatment.

"The rapid progress of the natural sciences during the last generation, or even during the last decade, has supplied abundant reasons for restating our views of the importance of life in the universe. There is one reason, perhaps, why we should consider that life now has more significance than was formerly assigned to it. The analyses of the chemical constitution of man, beast, rock and star by the chemist, the geophysicist and the astrophysicist have brought to light the remarkable uniformity of atomic structure throughout the whole universe.

Not Chemically Unusual.

"Little as we human beings are, so temporary in time and space, yet the chemical elements of which we are composed are also the predominant elements in the crust of the earth and are prominent, if not predominant components in the structure of the fiery and gaseous stars. We are, chemically, made of nothing unusual or exotic, we are a part of the general scheme of things, and we could ask for no higher immortality than to be, as we seem to be, made of the same stuff as the eternal stars. The knowledge that the same kind of electrons and protons and chemical atoms make up living organisms and the remote stars and nebulae in space seems to enhance the significance of life.

"But on the other hand, there are at least five modern products of scientific research which seem to me to diminish, almost to the vanishing point, the significance of life in the universal scheme. One of these developments is due to researches in physiology, and the others, as might be expected, are deductions from the studies of stars and planets.

"The duration of various recognizable stellar maneuvers has been found by recent research to be inconceivably greater than we previously thought. We no longer think the earth is comparable in age with the stars. We see the origin of the earth and its subsequent development of life as one detail in the recent history of the evolution of stars, and now better recognize the brevity of organic existence.

Sun Placed Indifferently.

"Astronomers now find that the solar system is not centrally situated with respect to the stars, but that the sun is indifferently placed, far from the center of the galactic system. Not only is is casually situated, but it is ordinary in size and brightness. In the same way that we had to give up the geocentric idea of the universe, we now give up the heliocentric, and with that surrender the significance of life decreases.

"But from the astronomer's point of view the most potent factor in decreasing our respect for the problem of life is the prevalent interpretation of the origin of the planetary system. The nebular hypothesis has been abandoned, and in giving that up we give up the idea that the birth of planets (that may later bear life) is the normal process in the evolution of the star. We now see in the birth of the earth a fortuitous circumstance—the encounter of our sun, some thousands of millions of years ago, with a still greater star, resulting in the tidal disruption of the outer layers of the solar atmosphere. From the debris of that encounter, the planets have formed, and because no similar encounter has since occurred the family of fragments have been maintained long enough for the development of protoplasmic chemistry, at least, on one of them."

Nature of Material Life.

In conclusion Doctor Shapley said: "To summarize the astronomer's contribution to the symposium on the 'Origin of Life,' we may ask what can he say of the nature of material life, and his tentative answer will be that it is a highly complicated ensemble of chemical actions, subject to the laws of the physical universe—an unstable and very delicately balanced chemistry.

"What can he tell of the origin of life? Apparently that is but one phase, in a natural chemical evolution—the inevitable development of matter and energy when the physical conditions in the environment are right.

"What can he say of the place of life in space? Trivial; an organic scum that for the time being coats part of the surface of one small planet that is itself a castoff fragment of a star—a star that is now indifferently situated in a system of thousands of millions of similar stars.

"What can he tell of the place of life in time? Temporary, the stars evolved and revolved for aeons before the earth was born—they will doubtless continue to fulfill their destiny, to roll on quite unperturbed long after the scum has evaporated and the terrestrial experiment is over.

"What can he tell of the significance of life, if any, in the march of sidereal evolution? What of its meaning? Nothing!"

Prof. Edward C. Jeffrey, authority on plant morphology, was the second speaker. A summary of his remarks on "The Origin of Life on Land" follows:

"The biologist seems to be justified in adopting neither the mechanistic nor the vitalistic attitude in regard to the origin of life, since we know nothing whatever about the manner in which living matter made its appearance upon our earth. The best informed biologists frankly admit that they know nothing regarding the origin of life."

He then gave a definition of life, or rather of living matter, and went on:

"There are two kinds of living matter, plants and animals. The former are intimately related in their essential activities to potassium, while the latter show an equally close relation to the alkali metal sodium. Plants are and always have been much more abundant than animals and have, as a consequence, exerted a much more fundamental influence upon our earth and its atmosphere.

"The definition of life upon land," he said, "depends on organization rather than activities. Land animals are constructed to breathe air by means of lungs, while water animals respire water through their gills. Land plants are provided with an elaborate mechanism for absorbing, conducting and evaporating water, which is entirely absent in typical water plants. There are, however, many cases of land plants living in water and fewer of water plants living on land.

Similar Animal Contrasts.

"On the animal side there are similar contrasts between essential organization and the mode of life. For example, whales and porpoises are fundamentally terrestrial in their structure, yet they inhabit the sea. On the other hand, many aquatic animals, such as the crustacea, are able to carry on some sort of existence on land. It is generally conceded that aquatic forms were the ancestors of both land plants and land animals.

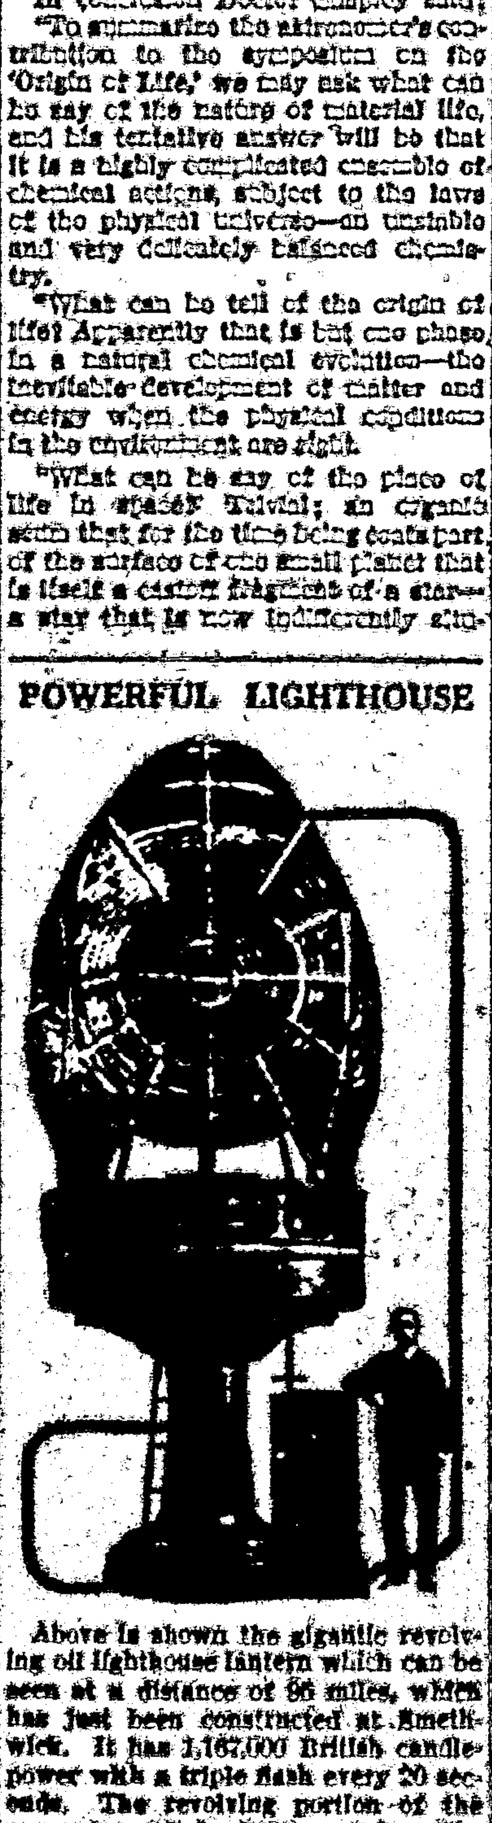
"Since it is very generally conceded that biology is fundamentally a historical science, in view of the essential characteristics of living matter, it follows that the early forms of plants and animals are of great importance. On the animal side our knowledge is greatly restricted, both by the poverty of material and also by the fact that we are, as a rule, familiar with the hard parts or skeleton only, of the earlier forms. In the case of plants, we are in a much better position, since the structural features of the earlier land plants are frequently and sometimes abundantly preserved in all their parts.

"The Devonian supplies us with the earliest trustworthy evidence of plant life on land. In that period the higher types of animals were still, for the most part, confined to the waters and had made no important excursion on the lands. In other words, from the animal point of view, the Devonian was the Age of Fishes.

"Recent discoveries of Devonian land plants in both Europe and America give us for the first time a rather complete picture of the earliest high life on land. The most primitive Devonian terrestrial plants were leafless and rootless and presented a bizarre and archaic appearance, both as a result of their primitive organization, but still more because they lacked the grace of foliage, which lends charms to the denizens of our modern fields and forests.

"These Devonian plants furnish strong proof for the doctrine of evolution or descent, since they actually realize the organization, which has been theoretically predicted for the earliest land plants."

POWERFUL LIGHTHOUSE



Above is shown the gigantic revolving oil lighthouse lantern which can be seen at a distance of 86 miles, which has just been constructed at Smethwick. It has 1,167,000 British candlepower with a triple flash every 20 seconds. The revolving portion of the apparatus weighs 7,720 pounds. The light is to be used on Eclipse island, Western Australia.

William D. Fowler and Harvey Lightfoot, air reserve lieutenant and sergeant, respectively, were killed at Clover Field, Santa Monica, when the plane in which they were making a practice flight crashed to earth from an altitude of 400 feet.

What promises to be the greatest race in history—virtually a complete circuit of the world—between army and navy aviators, became a probability with the receipt by naval aviation officials at San Diego of reports from Washington to the effect that naval flyers would be selected for the round-the-world flight.

Omer R. Woods was resentenced to death for the murder of his wife in their apartment home in Salt Lake City in 1921. District Judge Ephraim Hanson ruled out a motion for a new trial and set Jan. 18, 1924, as the execution date. The condemned man exercised his right under Utah law and chose to be shot instead of hanged.

Eleven members of the crew of the steam schooner C. A. Smith of San Francisco were drowned as a result of the wreck of the big ship near Coos Bay, Ore. Captain Stromburg and six members of his crew, including A. Loland, a crippled wireless operator, after clinging to the wreck, put off in one of the ship's boats and were picked up by the tug Oregon.

R. R. Noble, former vice president of the Commercial National Bank of Great Falls, Mont., and Julius C. Peters, former director of the institution, were sentenced to serve two and one-half years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., following conviction of making false entries in the banks books. They were also fined $2,000 each. The bank closed several months ago.

One of the largest auto theft rings in the country is believed to have been broken up by the arrest in San Bernardino, Cal., of C. E. Eggers, wanted in Veblin, S. D., for stealing autos. Eggers is being held at the Los Angeles county jail awaiting his removal to South Dakota. Charles Croyden, Eggers' alleged partner in the auto thieving business, is being held at Veblin at the present time.

WASHINGTON

Automatic train control devices as installed on the Rock Island Railroad between Blue Island and Rock Island, Ill., a distance of 165 miles, have been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Train control devices are now being tested on a number of railroads, in accordance with orders issued by the commission several months ago.

Announcement that Great Britain had paid to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York $92,000,000 on interest and principal on her $4,600,000,000 debt to the United States was made last week at the Treasury Department. Of the sum, $23,000,000 was the first payment on the principal, and $69,000,000 the second semi-annual payment of interest. The payment was principally in government bonds.

Suspension of all immigration until 1925 to provide time for assimilation of aliens now in the United States is provided in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Watkins, Democrat, Oregon.

Twelve awards, totaling approximately $1,000,000, were announced recently by the mixed claims commission in favor of American claimants against Germany for property losses sustained during the war. The largest awards were to the Standard Oil Company of New York, $300,000, and the Remington Typewriter Company, $21,500. The Tahatian Trading Company was allowed $4,234.

Larger acre yields and better prices generally of most of the important farm products of the country, combined with an increase of about 000,000 acres in the aggregate planted area, lifted the total value of this year's crops $572,591,000 above last year. Value of this year's crops was placed at $9,022,693,000 by the department of agriculture in its final crop report of the year. The values were based on the farm price of the crops on Dec. 1.

San Diego naval authorities confirmed a report that Admiral Samuel S. Robinson had disapproved court martial findings holding Lieutenant-Commander H. O. Roesch guilty of neglect in permitting the destroyer Nicholas to run ashore in the Honda disaster, September 8.

William Gibbs McAdoo, war-time director general of the American railroads, announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination in a telegram sent from Los Angeles to W. W. Howes, Democratic state chairman, Pierre, S. D.

The belief that a dynastic crisis is imminent in Greece is expressed in some quarters of Athens and the departure of King George is regarded as among the possibilities. The Republicans are busily arranging demonstrations in Athens and throughout Macedonia and Thrace in favor of removing the dynasty.

A pastoral letter from Cardinal Begin, condemning improper dancing and declaring that moving pictures offered serious dangers "if not proximate occasion of a mortal sin" for the spectators, was read in Roman Catholic churches throughout the diocese. The letter expressly forbade indulgence in these amusements and explicitly prohibited the manufacture and clandestine importation of intoxicating beverages.

A party of 800 Russian refugees reached Cherbourg, France, late in November, only to be told that the Russian emigration quota to the United States was exhausted and a number of them decided to settle down and wait until next summer, when the new quota should become operative. Now they have received the unexpected news that the bars against their admission to the United States had been lifted and they are preparing to leave soon.

A delegation of sixteen Arapahoe Indians from Wyoming, clad in full regalia, arrived in Paris last week. Their appearance caused such a commotion in the northern railroad terminus that traffic was held up for some time. Chief Old Eagle told interviewers that the deputation intended to ask the League of Nations to intervene with the United States government so that Indians might have the same rights and privileges as other Americans.

GENERAL

The bodies of three men were recovered by firemen from the ruins of the Capitol hotel, in the center of the business section of Houston, Tex., which was destroyed by fire. The bodies were burned virtually beyond recognition. Property damage is estimated at $300,000. The flames for a time threatened the entire district.

With John Hatfield, 70-year-old feudist, and three of his companions in jail, officers have turned their efforts to pursuit of C. O. Edwards, only member still at large of the quintet that broke from the Wise, Va., jail. Hatfield, Stephens Wood, Alec Mullins and Carl Miller were captured in an abandoned mine shaft, where they had been hiding.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's tentative valuation on the railroads of the country is $3,400,000,000 too low, according to E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad and chairman of the committee on public relations of the eastern railroads. Mr. Loomis, in a detailed statement, places the rock bottom value of the railways of the country at $22,250,000,000, while the commission's valuation totals $20,884,033,000 at the end of 1919. Since then the carriers have expended $1,034,033,000, which must be added to the commission's figure.

The charge that "fixers" representing the liquor traffic, gambling, slot machines and other forms of law violation in Mobile, Ala., had offered him $150,000 as bribe money to "slow up the work of the office" was made in a public statement issued by Federal District Attorney Aubrey Boyles.

Seven persons were seriously injured and a panic among more than 150 other severely shaken passengers was narrowly averted when three Indiana interurban cars crashed in a rear-end collision on the Big Four bridge at Louisville, Ky., 100 feet above the murky, fog-enshrouded waters of the Ohio River.

The shopmen's strike on the Santa Fe, begun July 1, 1922, was officially declared off Dec. 1, it was announced in Chicago last week. It is understood that the strike has been virtually off a year, but officials of the railway employes' department explained that official notice was issued to system federation officers canceling the strike as a matter of union record, and to permit members of the federated shop crafts to return freely to the service of the Santa Fe company.

Johnny Dundee of New York, world featherweight champion, added another star to his crown by taking the American junior lightweight championship back from Jack Bernstein of Yonkers on the judges' decision after a fifteen-round bout, the feature of the Christmas charity at Madison Square Garden, New York.

Binding the driver of a mail truck to a wheel of the vehicle, two daring bandits stole a registered mail pouch at East Rochester, N. Y., containing between $10,000 and $20,000 in currency.

CAPITAN MOUNTAINEER.
Published Weekly by
SAM J. BIGGER
Publisher and Owner
SAM J. BIGGER, Editor

We undertand Mr. Larry Dow preparing to remove to Lincoln, where he and Mrs. Dow will assume the management of the "Bonito Inn." Larry is one of our best citizens and has numerous friends along with THE MOUNTAINEER who regret to see him and his estimable family leave this vicinity.

Jack Price has recently moved in from his country home for the winter.

J. E. Patterson the black smith has moved his family into town for the winter.

W. B. Payne requests us to inform the people, he is expecting a car load of corn in most any day, and that it will be considerable cheaper.

1924 will no doubt bring more joy to most of us, than did 1923.

W. A. Wunsch, manager of the Government farm and ranch interests at Fort Stanton was a Capitan visitor recently.

MARRIED—Mr. Albert E. Rohde of Capitan and Miss Carrie Roberts of Carrizozo, were married Christmas evening at Carrizozo.

This young couple are well known to most Lincoln county people and have a host of friends who wish them every joy in life's travel. THE MOUNTAINEER is tickled too, tee hee! Oh you Rohde!

Mrs. Grace Comery informs us it is a mistake about her, being an applicant for the Capitan Post Office, She says it does not appeal to her at all.

Men's half soles from 85c to $1.25,

Ladie's half sole from 65c to $1.00.

We Have

Again commenced the publication of THE MOUNTAINEER. As is known by most people, my father, Mr. Neil H. Bigger, Editor of this paper passed away on October 25th. The shock and grief to me was a terrible blow and still is—so I have not felt like taking hold of business matters like I would, under different circumstances, and that is why why THE MOUNTAINEER has not put in its appearance. I thought for awhile I would discontinue the publication of the paper permanently—but I have decided, that I was honor bound to complete publication on a batch of "final proof" advertisements, that I would commence the publication of the paper, and continue so long as I can obtain a living from it for the benefit of my family and myself.

I will indeed appreciate any patronage extended to me.

Very Respectfully,
Sam Bigger.

Cancel Part of the Taxes.

It seems to the Editor of this paper, that there should be a very energetic movement initiated to get at least half our back taxes cancelled by the "powers that be." Any fair minded person is bound to concede its right and just—considering the fact that we have had two successive drouths and no crops raised, most of the cattle shipped out of the country, three bank failures in Lincoln county, the merchants and other business men going on "Cash Basis." It is hard enough for many people to exist—let alone pay taxes.

The now Editor of this paper some two years ago, asserted through its columns that there could be quite a bit of expense eliminated by making "cuts" in Public Officers and School Teachers salaries and "cutting out useless offices.

In some few places here and there we have learned that a few dollars was "lopped off." Taxes are still prohibitive—it makes no difference which party in the state or even locally is in power, it seems to us at times it is little use to ride or walk to the polls and vote. John Smith he is running for Governor and he and his "stump speakers" raise particular Hell with the opposing party and charge them with all manner of misdeeds—but just listen to Johnny and his boosters sing their sweet little song entitled "State Wide Primary," Material Tax Reductions, Etc." When candidates for the different offices promise relief and reform and fail to do so—there is in reality just one conclusion—they are just simply embezzlers of power and the confidence of a trusting people.

Scool teachers in a sparsely settled state like this could have from $10 to $30 trimmed from their salaries and not retard the development the schools. In my opinion that if every expense in governmenal affairs throughout the state was carefully scrutinized by competent investigators focussing through frugal eyes, the taxpayers of the Sunshine State could be saved a tremendous sum of money through the mediums of reduction in expenditures and elimination of expensev that could dispensed with as entirely unnecessary which would assist very materially in helping us to "get by."

We want to see the country succeed—live and let live is a fine motto—it will apply other places too—the war ceased five years ago—every body aro'nt fools.

The Storms Toll.

Report has it, that W. R. Lovelace, the well known sheesman of Corona, lost three of his sheep herders and also a large amount of sheep.

News has reached here that a prominent sheep man living on the Gallo, but whose name we have forgotten was out in the storm and has not been seen or heard of since.

Fred Braun a traveling salesman for the Ilfeld Company is reported frozen to death, which occurred in the Duran-Naughin country. Two other drummers who were with him came near losing their lives also.

Then a man was found dead leaning up against a tree, frozen to death some where up the country—we did not learn the locality in which this occurred.

We also hear that two men were found frozen to death out some distance from Corona, and were brought into Corona for identification—so it is reported.

With members of the Montoya and Martinez familes of Encinoso, freezing to death while traveling near Blue Water in Valencia county and the elder Montoyo so badly frozen that it was [illegible] his life, it appears the storms toll is terrible.

"The Magnolia Oil Company have signs up in the offices of their various agents which read like this:

"Smile, damn you, smile." So let us relegate the "grouch" from our system and insert "a smile."

MOVEMENT AWAY FROM FARMS IS HALTED IN COLORADO

Denver.—Reports received by the State Immigration Department indicate that the movement away from the farms, which did not become acute in this state until 1923, has been halted and that there will be an increase in the number of farms operated in 1924 over the number for 1923.

The season has been very favorable for sowing winter wheat and at least a normal acreage has been sown, perhaps 400,000 acres more than was harvested last summer. Winter wheat has been down on many farms that were not operated at all for the 1923 harvest and plowing has been done for spring crops on several such farms. Most of the winter wheat has come up and is in fine condition, with plenty of moisture in the ground to carry it through the winter.

Weather conditions have been unfavorable for farm work during the past month and a large amount of ground has been broken for next years crops. In the non-irrigated districts a considerable amount of new land has been broken and present indications are that much more raw land will be put in crops in 1924 than in 1923. Though the acreage planted to spring crops will depend very largely on the weather conditions prevailing from now until next July, it seems fairly certain that a larger acreage will be planted for the 1924 harvest than was planted for harvest this year. This will not necessarily mean a record acreage for the state, for the acreage under cultivation in 1923 was smaller than that for 1922.

Some fear is expressed by experienced agriculturists that farmers may permit themselves to be too much influenced by the exceptionally fine corn crop grown this year and may increase their acreage of corn beyond justification, sacrificing diversity for large production in a single crop. It should be remembered that Colorado has not had such a season as that of 1923 in the previous twenty years. The rainfall between June 1 and Nov. 1 was almost double the normal rainfall, and corn and sorghums attained a growth which can not be expected again in Colorado for a good many years. These crops, however, are among the most dependable crops grown in the state, and though it is not safe to build hopes for the future on the yields of 1923, it is generally conceded that the two crops should continue to account for one-third or more of the cultivated acreage in the state one year with another.

Utah Seeks Injunction Against U. S.

Washington.—Suit for an injunction to prevent issuance of a federal permit to private interests to prospect for oil on a tract of 1,070,720 acres in the state of Utah was filed by the state in the District of Columbia Supreme Court against Secretary Work of the interior department and Commissioner Spry of the general land office. The state claimed in its suit that the tract, known as San Rafael Swell, belongs to the state by right of a grant made for school purposes when Utah was admitted to the Union.

German Commercial Pact Signed

Washington. — Announcement was made at the State Department last week that a commercial treaty had been signed with Germany to replace the similar convention abrogated at the time of the war, and that instructions had been sent to the minister at the Hague, Richard M. Tobin, to begin negotiation of a similar treaty with the Dutch government. The action marks a forward step in the purpose of the Washington government to make over all of its general commercial agreements with other countries.

Irrigation License Application Made

Washington.—The Federal Power Commission has announced that applications for permit or license under the federal water power act include an application by A. D. Humphreys for a license for a small project in Goose Creek, in Mineral county, Colo., in the vicinity of Del Norte. He plans to construct an 85-foot dam and a power-house with a capacity of 130 horsepower. The stored water will later be used for irrigation purposes in the vicinity of Wagon Wheel Gap.

Denver.—The marble industry of Colorado should employ 20,000 persons, according to W. J. H. Dorsh, who made an appeal for the patronizing of home industries at the meeting of the Retail Credit Men's Association here. The Denver postoffice and the Lincoln memorial in Washington, D. C., were built of Colorado yule marble, said Mr. Dorsh, showing that it is worthy of the finest buildings. Yet there are many new buildings going up in Denver which are using marble from other states.

A VERY OLD GENTLEMAN wearing a long, white toga and carrying a scythe sat down on a stone. It was exactly five minutes before midnight on December thirty-first. The very old gentleman seemed to be waiting for somebody.

"Where is that young rascal?" he murmured to himself. "I have a few words to say to him, which ....ah....I see him coming now."

A rosy cherub of a youngster ran laughing to the old man's side. The elderly fellow patted him on the head and said: "Listen to me, my boy. I'm leaving now for good. In five minutes I must step out forever, and you must take my place. It's a job—a man-sized job.

"I began as young and eager as you. Look at me now! People are never satisfied. But you must not let their grumbling disturb you. If it's winter, they want you to hurry the months towards spring. In summer they cry for fall. The nights are too long and the days too short. What makes happiness for some brings distress to others. But this is not your job. All you have to do is to keep steadily on schedule. Minute by minute, hour by hour, never varying a second through storms and sunshine, heat and snow. Your responsibility is for the correct passage of time. This is your sole duty. Joy and sorrow may not change for a second the law you keep. This is the way of life. 'Hew to the line, my boy, and never give up.'

The old gentleman smiled, arose from his seat and disappeared.

The rosy cherub of a youngster danced into the New Year to the ringing of bells. There was a great welcome for him and he determined to fulfill his duty to the very last second.

The Resolutioners

By Clara Delafield

"WHAT do you suppose can be the matter with the Noggitts?" asked Charley Fitchmond of his wife.

"They must have had a dreadful quarrel."

"Something's gone wrong. I never saw such a pair of down-in-the-mouths as when we were over there last night. They hardly said a word to each other."

"And they used to be such an affectionate couple."

"Um—more or less, yes. By the way, did you notice Will didn't smoke?"

"Yes. He told me he'd give up smoking for the New Year."

"Um—um!" Charley reached for his pipe. "I guess his wife made him, and that's at the bottom of the trouble."

Now, this is what had really happened: On the thirty-first of December Will Noggitt broke his new pipe in two. "Dear," he said, "I'm never going to smoke again, and that's my New Year resolution."

"And I hope you'll keep it," said Dorothy. "You know you've said that every New Year's eve for the past nine years."

"I know I have, Dorothy. But this time I mean business. And now, what are you going to resolve?"

"I don't know what there is for me to resolve," said Dorothy. "I'm perfect."

"You've got a perfect nerve. I'll say that for you."

"Oh, but my dear, you told me so yourself before we were married. Don't you remember?"

"A man isn't responsible for what he says in a condition of mental aberration. Didn't you know that, my dear? See here, I'll make a compact with you. I'll stop smoking just as long as you stop nagging."

"I don't nag."

"You do."

"Now, Will Noggitt, you stop making unfounded charges against me, because I won't stand for it. I've been a good wife to you and looked after you like a slave while you've been indulging in your extravagances and filthy tobacco, and leaving about the house and at your office, and never a word out of me, because I'm the most long-suffering woman alive and now you tell me I nag you and I'll never open my mouth again."

"All right, Dorothy, as long as you keep your mouth closed in anger I'll keep mine closed to tobacco."

Will thought he'd have an excuse to start smoking again the next day, but that was where Dorothy fooled him. She suddenly turned into a model wife. To his most petulant outbreaks there came no reply. And Will became more and more petulant as the days went by and his coveted smoke failed to materialize.

She had always wanted to cure him of his filthy habit, and it was now or never.

Will's pride kept him to the fulfillment of his vow. A week passed.

He got up one morning feeling desperate.

"What's—mean by giving me this nasty coffee?" he growled. "Haven't you got sense enough to clarify it with an egg? I don't care if eggs cost a thousand dollars a dozen. I'm not going to drink bilge."

Dorothy said nothing, but smiled sweetly upon him.

"For the Lord's sake, can't you make toast without burning it? And where did you get this grapefruit? Grapefruit? Huh! I'd like to see the parent tree; I guess it's a cannon-ball tree more likely."

Dorothy went softly out of the room. Presently, as Will beat over his meal two soft hands were placed over his eyes.

"Open his mouth and shut his eyes and sto—"

"Oh, for heaven's sake quit your foolish tricks. I'm not a kid. Hey, what's this?"

"It's your pipe, you wicked mocker!" sobbed Dorothy. "And now I can tell you what I think of you, you fiend in human form, before I go home to mother. I've stood for all I'm going to stand from you. I hate you and I wish you'd never been born. Of all the wretched, worthless loafers who ever encumbered the face of the earth you take the cake—is your pipe alright now, darling?"

Dorothy perched herself upon his knee.

"Aren't we happy?" she cooed, as the fragrant fumes floated into the air.

"Um—um!" said Will. "What delicious coffee. Give me another cup. Say—I guess I've been pretty rotten to you."

"Oh, Will, you're always lovely. I've had that new pipe waiting for you for days, but I tried not to give it to you till you started nagging at me, and then it was either your smoking again or me doing so. Will, darling, we mustn't make any resolutions next New Year."

A NEW YEAR'S SONG

On New Year's eve in England,
All in the olden day,
The children went a-carling,
All in the olden way!
And ever as they journey'd on,
This chorus would you hear:
"God send you happy, God send you happy,
Pray God send you a happy New Year!"

Our days are sadly modern,
Our ways are modern, too;
But hearts still beat as high with love
As once they used to do—
So take the old-time message,
Good friends, both far and near:
"God send you happy, God send you happy,
Pray God send you a happy New Year!"

—Nora Smith.

NEW YEAR FRUIT CAKE

Ten eggs, five level teacupfuls of brown sugar, one-half pint of molasses, three cupfuls of soft butter, one lemon, one pound of figs, one pound of citron, two pounds of seedless raisins, three and a half pounds of raisins (seeded), one heaping teaspoonful of cinnamon, one small teaspoonful of cloves, one small teaspoonful of mace, one nutmeg, grated, one-half teaspoonful ginger, one-half teaspoonful soda, one-half pint of cherry juice, one quart flour.

Put citron, seedless raisins and raisins seeded into a double boiler. You can use a few orange peelings, also cherries if you wish. Bake an hour until done.

WHAT HAPPY SURPRISES?

There is a man who is fond of saying: "I wonder what happy surprises tomorrow will bring?" A good idea.—C. C. Harard.

MORE LIKELY.

Her: These New Year resolutions make me sick.

She: Are you sure it isn't the celebrating last night makes you sick?

New Mexico State Items

G. W. Carr, of Fort Sumner, has purchased 150 feet frontage on the main street of Portales and will soon open one of the best lumber yards in the valley.

United States District Judge O. L. Phillips at Santa Fe ordered John P. Looney of Rock Island, Ill., removed to the jurisdiction of the Federal Court in Peoria, Ill., to face a charge of violation of the Dyer automobile theft act, preferred against Looney by the federal grand jury in Illinois.

The Kiwanis and Rotary clubs of Raton, held a conference at the Elks' club last week to discuss the building of a sugar beet factory in Raton. Officers of the Midwest Sugar Company have been in the county for some time going over the situation and the outlook for the plant is reported now to be encouraging.

The four-year-old child of True Brewer, of Aztec, was almost instantly killed when struck by the auto driven by the Rev. Mr. Masterson of Farmington. The little one was playing in the street with some other children and owing to the blinding sun in his eyes the driver of the car did not see her until too late.

Development of an oil structure within 20 miles of Las Vegas will within 90 days after drilling is commenced bring in a gusher, according to the officials of the Santa Fe Petroleum Company, who recently divulged their first public information concerning the survey and prospective development in the vicinity of Chapelle.

Luis Romirez, a native resident of Roswell, was found dead near the offices of the Pecos Valley Lumber Company with a bullet through his head. Policeman Donahoe heard the shot and started at once for the scene of the shooting but failed to capture the assailant who evidently made his escape under the cover of darkness.

The Weather Bureau Office at Santa Fe reports that November in New Mexico averaged far above the normal in precipitation and considerably below in temperature. The month in other years has been colder but only once in the last 23 years has it been wetter. In the year 1905 there was an average of 8.03 inches, more than twice that of the last month. Practically all parts shared in the excess.

Judge Reed Holloman of the district court in Santa Fe has overruled the demurrer filed by counsel for Carl C. Magee, editor of the State Tribune, to the indictment returned against him by the last grand jury in Santa Fe county. Magee's trial will be called Jan. 3. The indictment was the result of an editorial in Magee's newspaper under the heading "Roberts, C. J." which referred to Clarence J. Roberts, former justice of the Supreme Court.

The annual motor car show of the Automobile Traders Association will be held in Albuquerque February 7, 8 and 9, in the armory. About 25 different makes of cars will be represented and many accessories will be on display by the various dealers of the city. Big entertainment programs are being planned for the three days and there is every indication that the show will be the biggest affair of the kind ever held in the state.

A petition by a depositors' committee for the sale at public auction of the assets of the Colfax McKinley County Bank was denied by Judge Reed Holloman at Gallup a few days ago. The judge said he turned down the petition because it was an "unheard of proposition" and he feared if private individuals obtained possession of the assets they might push debtors to the bank for immediate payment of their obligations which, he said, would practically "bankrupt the town."

If the present plans of the Chamber of Commerce of Artesia are carried out, that city may have one of the finest cotton seed mills in the Pecos valley during the coming year. The matter has been taken up with oil mill companies of Texas and an expert has been looking over the ground to give advice to the chamber.

Judge M. E. Hickey of the District Court of Albuquerque decided in favor of the defendants in suits brought by H. Charles Mobil and Jesus Romero to enjoin them from holding an election December 18 on the question of issuing bonds to build a new courthouse in Albuquerque. The present courthouse is located at Old Albuquerque. It was built 65 years ago.

The big herds of New Mexico cattle now on the ranges in Chihuahua are not in danger as the result of the new revolution that has broken out in Mexico, according to H. V. Watson, chairman of the New Mexico Loan Agency of the War Finance Board. The revolution so far has not affected the state of Chihuahua, he said. Adolfo de la Huerta, one of the chiefs of the uprising, has the reputation of being favorable to foreign interests.

According to official announcements made in Aztec, the Gipsy Oil Company has purchased a standard drilling rig and will soon move it to the Tocito Dome structure, where the development of the leases of the company will be started. Camp houses for the crew have already been erected and as soon as the machinery is installed actual drilling will begin. Geologists predict that the Tocito dome will prove a rival for the Hogback structure in the way of production and that the pay sand will be found at a lesser depth.

The death toll in the snowstorm and blizzard which swept New Mexico last week stands at 10. Highways are being reopened and stranded tourists are again moving. Seventy-two automobiles were stranded on the road between San Marcial and Hot Springs.

Fire was discovered in the cotton yard at the Portales gin one day last week and before help arrived six bales of fine cotton were destroyed. The cotton belonged to the buyers and was partly covered by insurance, however the loss will run into several hundred dollars.
