Our Local Ticket.

During the past week we have received assurances from White Oaks, Baldson, Penasco, Agua Chiquita, Bonito, Los Tablos, Picacho, Agua Azul, Nogal and Reventon, which seem to render it probable that the Republicans will elect the whole of their county ticket. Let the good work go on. The Republican candidates are all of them men of especial fitness for the places which they will be called upon to fill, and will give the county a clean, careful and economical administration.

Senator Hill.

Senator Hill has spoken at Brooklyn, at considerable length. He repeated, on that occasion, his old time assurances that he is a Democrat; but omitted to make any reference whatever to the presidential candidate of the Democratic party. Hill has taken care to make it apparent recently, at Brooklyn and elsewhere, that he is in absolute control of the Democratic party in New York, and has not allowed it to be forgotten that no Democrat has carried that State in a long series of years, except by the aid of D. B. Hill. He has nowhere said or intimated, however, that he has changed his opinion of May last, that Mr. Cleveland cannot carry the State of New York.

The Editor of this paper cannot, of course, say what party it may be his duty to support, as he does now the republican party. He will certainly do so unless the party departs essentially from its ancient landmarks. He is able, however, to say that, while he retains his sanity, it is very unlikely that he will be able to support any party which can secure the approval of the Eagle.

The Delegate.

The publication of Delegate Joseph's letter to Hon. T. B. Catron, effectually disposes of Mr. Joseph's recent interview with the Albuquerque Daily Democrat, and of his recent utterances on the stump.

A few weeks ago, Mr. Joseph was ready to acknowledge, and did acknowledge over his signature, that Mr. Catron had rendered very important services to the cause of statehood for New Mexico.

A simple appeal to his own handwriting convicts Mr. Joseph of willful, premeditated falsification of the facts in a vain effort to injure his political opponent.

The public knowledge of the man would sufficiently convict him, if he was not (as he is) on record over his signature.

Three years since, Mr. Catron was engaged heart and soul in the effort to obtain the admission of New Mexico; an effort which was defeated solely by the factious, selfish and malicious opposition of Antonio Joseph, W. B. Childers, H. B. Ferguson, and their henchmen. These men and their allies, who need not now be named, opposed themselves to all the interests of New Mexico and its people, because if New Mexico had been admitted, E. G. Ross and Joseph would not have been the first United States Senators. The people of New Mexico have not forgotten the slanders upon their patriotism and capacity for self-government then uttered by these men, nor have they forgotten that at the time when the Albuquerque clique of Democratic lawyers were venting their foul slanders upon the people of New Mexico, Tom Catron was the champion at home and at the National Capital of their right to self government and the earnest defender of their reputation and character, as patriotic and law-abiding citizens.

In November next, the people of New Mexico will demonstrate the accuracy of their recollection of the events of 1889, by retiring the representative of their traducers, and by sending Tom Catron, their champion, to represent them at Washington.

Mrs Julia Rhodes, wife of Col. Hinman Rhodes, late U. S. Indian agent at Mescalero, was injured in the recent railroad collision in Ohio.

Mrs. Rhodes was enroute to Washington.—Rio Grande Republican.

Hon. G. A. Richardson returned Monday eve from his wanderings abroad. He took in the Las Cruces convention, but arrived in Santa Fe one day late for the territorial convention. Then he visited the Albuquerque fair which he pronounced a great success. Now he is as busy as he can be preparing for our own Alfalfa Palace, in which he is taking great interest and for which he has worked hard and faithfully since its first inception.—Roswell Register.

J. A. Lockhart, of Deming, is operating very heavily in cattle this year. He is unloading the disgusted growers of that section, and taking his purchases to Colorado, where he is turning them loose on the range along the Arkansas. If his past good luck stays with him will make a barrel of money, as he is purchasing at a very low figures.

R. Michaelis, the Lincoln, New Mexico, general merchant, is in the city, purchasing his fall and winter stock from our whole-sale merchants.—Citizen.

Socorro county boasts of its excellent financial condition.

There have been more fine cottages built in San Marcial this year than in any town in New Mexico.

At Hillsboro the board of education enumerates over 250 children of school age, and over 250 voters have paid their poll tax.

The tax rolls will be turned over to the collectors on Monday, two months earlier than last year. They foot up almost $8,000,000, being $1,500,000 more than last year.—Las Vegas Free Press.

Las Cruces Bepublican: Sam Lee, the proprietor of the laundry on Main street, surprised a number of the boys last night by eating 20 eggs, 2 bowls of rice, a half pound of onions, and some fish, and drinking a half pint of whisky in 40 minutes. Sam says he is willing to repeat the dose any day if some one will furnish the necessaries.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Weather Bureau,

Fort Stanton, New Mexico, September 25th, 1892.

The Chief of the Weather Bureau directs the publication of the following data, compiled from the record of observations for the month of October, taken at this station during a period of seven years.

"ALL THE RIVERS."

"All the rivers run into the sea, and yet sea is not full."—Ecclesiastes 1: 7.

The mountain torrents hasten,
With cataract and roar,
To reach the moaning ocean
And break upon its shore.
Their mystery and music,
Their laughter and their leap,
Are lost within the bosom
Of the dark and hollow deep—
Yet the sea is not full.

Athwart the purple moorland
The flashing streams go by,
Now gray beneath the storm-cloud,
Now azure as the sky.
By bracken, gorse and heather,
By crag, and rock, and plain,
They hurry to the river,
And the river to the main—
Yet the sea is not full.

Amid the quiet meadows
The peaceful rivers glide,
To meet the ocean's murmur,
The tumult of its tide.
They leave the woodland whispers,
Where summer blossoms lave,
To mingle with the ripples
Of the ebbing, flowing wave—
Yet the sea is not full.

How long, how long, wide ocean,
Shall love be lost in thee,
And strength and beauty perish
In death's immensity?
Oh, when shall ring the music
Of the promise over thee,
The blessed music of the cry:
"There shall be no more sea?"

QUINCE BLOSSOMS.

How Patty Captured a Bouquet and a Heart.

Mr. Maverick's quince trees had blossomed unusually full this spring.

Like tossing billows of pale pink, the laden boughs hung over the old stone wall, showering rosy petals down at every breeze; and Patty Price stood still with a little ecstatic exclamation of delight as she came to the turning in the lane.

"Quince blossoms!" cried Patty, clasping her hands together. "Oh, I must have some to model in wax flowers."

For Patty was a city schoolma'am, out for a fortnight's holiday, and she cried over the violet-spangled meads, laughed in sympathy with the gold-orbed dandelions, and kissed the little downy goslings in the most insane manner — or at least so her country cousins thought. And she had never seen a quince blossom before, and to her artistic eye it was like a poet's dream of beauty.

She was not unlike a human quince blossom herself, this dove-eyed, pink-cheeked young heroine of ours, as she stood there with the wind blowing back the airy folds of her white muslin sun-hat, and her rose-colored lawn dress fluttering softly.

"Now once," said Miss Araminta Allen, her cousin, who had seen the annual marvel of quince blossoming ever since she was a child, and cared nothing for it. "And they're on Mr. Maverick's land, too, and he's such an awful old bachelor."

"He could not eat me up, could he, if I stole a few?" gravely demanded Patty. "Just for my wax flowers. And there is a ladder, too, all ready for me!"

"Yes," said Araminta Allen, looking rather apprehensively around, "It's Mr. Maverick's ladder. His man is sticking broken bottles on the top of the wall."

"Horrid old savage!" said Patty.

"The children climb over so," explained Araminta, "and steal his strawberries and rare and prize strawberries, and break off his oleander boughs."

"Then why doesn't he give the poor things all they want?" indignantly demanded Patty Price. "The idea of an old bachelor living all alone in that paradise of a place, and grudging a few strawberries or a rosebud to the children! Araminta, I'll tell you what I'm going to have a big bunch of those quince-blossoms."

"Oh, Patty!"

"Why not? I can just run up the ladder and get them before your old curmudgeon comes out with his broken bottles and man-traps."

"Please, Patty, don't think of such a thing!" breathlessly remonstrated Araminta Allen, who had been inoculated from her youth up with the belief that Albert Maverick was the grand mogul of Westbrook, and Peter Mackenzie, his gardener, was his grand vizier.

"You're not—afraid?" said Patty, opening her blue eyes very wide.

"Yes, I am," acknowledged Araminta.

"I am not!" cried Patty. And, like a bird, she fluttered up the ladder, scaled the heights of the garden wall, and in another minute had both hands full of pink and white quince blossoms and buds.

"Oh, dear me!" cried Araminta. "I told you so! There's somebody coming!"

And away she ran, vanishing into the hedge just as old Mackenzie came around the corner of the wall, with a pail of steaming tar in one hand and a basket of fractured bottles in the other. And just as Patty would have withdrawn her forces in good order, he nullified her retreat by briskly pulling the ladder away.

"I've got ye the noo!" said he, exultantly. "So you're the bad little lassie on his broke all our rhododendrons off?"

"I've never touched them!" cried Patty, half terrified, half indignant.

"Remember Ananias and Sapphira," said old Mackenzie, solemnly.

"Put that ladder back!" said Patty, holding on to her blooms treasures.

"Noo," said old Mackenzie, "I will noo do that, until I've reported to my master."

And now he trudged to the house, where Mr. Maverick was reading "Carlyle" to a great hammock under the vine-shaded veranda.

"I've caught her, Meester Maverick!" said he.

"Caught whom?" said Mr. Maverick, frowning a little at the interruption, as he turned the page.

"The girl pe stealin' our flowers."

"Where?"

"Upon the garden wall."

"Why doesn't she get down again?"

"Because I've tooken the bit ladder away!" confidently answered old Peter.

Mr. Maverick smiled grimly. "Let her stay there then, until she asks pardon and promises good behavior for the future!" said he; and relapsed instantly into "Carlyle."

Old Peter went back, chuckling to himself.

"Aha, bairny," said he, "my master says ye're to open his pardon and promise never to steal flowers again!"

"I won't!" cried indignant Patty.

"Suit yourself, suit yourself," said old Peter; and he went to work at some tulip bulbs with the most barbarous indifference. And there sat pretty Patty on the wall, her little feet hanging down among wild honeysuckles and Michigan roses, her hair snowed over with the fluttering petals of the quince blossoms, for whose sweet sake she had risked so much.

"I can't jump," said Patty to herself, "it's too far; and I can't climb down, for there's a quickset hedge on one side, and a straight, steep wall on the other. And I'll never ask the horrid old bachelor's pardon, no, not if I sit here for three days!"

At the end of an hour or two old Mackenzie came toward her.

"Will ye say ye're sorry?" demanded he.

"No, I won't!" said Patty.

He went back to his master.

"She wunna say she's sorry, sir," said he.

"Let her stay there, then," said Mr. Maverick, abstractedly.

But when the level beams of the sunset peered through the wistaria leaves and danced on the pages of "The French Revolution," Mr. Maverick threw aside his book with a yawn.

"Mackenzie!" said he.

"Sir," responded the gardener.

"Is that child up on the wall yet?"

"There she is, sir," answered the old man, "and there she's like to stay. A wrang-headed, willfu' creature as ever I set eyes on."

"I'll go out and speak to her myself," said Mr. Maverick, a little impatiently.

And Patty, from her lonely height, looked down upon a handsome, middle-aged face, with dark, laughing eyes, a beard like jetty silk, and a rich olive skin. He started back in blank surprise at beholding, instead of the gawky, village schoolgirl for whom he had looked, a pretty young lady with blue eyes, floating golden hair, and a pink muslin dress.

"Mackenzie," said he, "there has been a mistake!"

"Nae mistake at a', sir, nae mistake at a'," persisted the old gardener. "I caught her a-stealin' 'em my sinsel!"

Mr. Maverick turned gravely to the dimpled captive on the garden wall.

"Are you the purloiner of flowers?" said he. "The hardened wretch that declines to supplicate for pardon?"

"Are you the flinty-hearted old bachelor?" saucily retorted Patty, who was tired and hungry and sunburned, but resolute still.

"And old bachelor—yes, but flinty-hearted—no! Mackenzie!"

"Sir!"

"Bring the ladder at once!"

"But, sir, she hasna specred pardon yet!" cried the bewildered old Scotchman.

"Bring the ladder, I say!" And then, as Patty reached the ground, he bowed low.

"Will you forgive me?" said he. "For I assure you that if I had known it was anyone but the tormenting little school children, this should not have happened."

"I—I only wanted a few quince blossoms to pattern my wax flowers after," said Patty, with crimsoned cheek and quivering lip, "and—"

Mr. Maverick glanced down at the faded flowers to which our little heroine still valiantly clung.

"And these are all wilted," said he. "Allow me to get you some more."

"Guide save us o'!" commented old Peter to himself; "here's t' master specring pardon of t' lassie, instead of her to him! Is t' world a' upsed down?"

But Mackenzie's astonishment was nothing to that of Miss Araminta Allen when she saw Patty Price come sauntering leisurely home with Mr. Maverick at her side, all laden with blossoming quince boughs, and heard him say:

"I'll bring you those maidenhair ferns and oxalis specimens in the morning, Miss Price; and if there is anything else about the place you fancy I beg you to consider my grounds as entirely at your disposal."

"How have you conquered him?" said Araminta, in amazement.

"He is an old bachelor," said Patty, laughing; "but he isn't so very dreadful, after all!"

And when the quince blossoms were all gone and the tall tiger-lilies were in bloom Albert Maverick asked little Patty Price to give up her city chases and stay at Maverick Hall altogether. And there are no more broken bottles on the garden wall, for Mrs. Maverick lets the children have all the flowers they want.—Amy Randolph, in N. Y. Ledger.

BUSINESS RULES.

Some Hints That Are Worthy a Careful Perusal.

Never sign a paper without reading it, and if, after reading it, you do not understand it, have it thoroughly explained before you put your signature to it. It is best to get some third person who is not interested in the matter at all to explain the meaning of what is not clear, or to point out words that may have two meanings in the document.

Always make a memorandum in your little book of any contract you undertake for money, or any agreement to work. It saves much trouble to keep a memorandum book, and put down the dates when you either pay or receive money. Whenever money passes on account, set it down. If any money or thing of value goes through your hands, give a receipt for it and make a memorandum. Your receipt settles the amount that passes, and that cannot be disputed. When you pass it to a third party, get a receipt and keep it. This form is as important in the transfer of income, trust money or valuables among your own family as with other persons.

Never allow any person to do any service for you without first agreeing upon the cost to you. This rule strictly adhered to will save you many annoyances.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30 1892.

THE LOCAL BUDGET

The troops who have been in summer camp returned to Fort Stanton this week.

Hospital Steward Schumacher, has been relieved by Hospital Steward Long, who with his wife arrived at the Fort a few days ago.

A large gray wolf crossed the road a few rods ahead of the stage, about a mile below Fort Stanton, last Saturday morning.

Sheriff Roberts states that so far the taxes of this county are being paid as well as, or better than last year. He has collected this month $3000 on the taxes of 1892.

Mr. Chas. Weidman of this place was elected Grand Inner Guard of the Grand Lodge of New Mexico K. of P. at the late meeting of the Grand Lodge at Raton. Mr. Weidman returned home last Saturday.

Death.

Died, Sunday morning, Sept. 25th, Mrs. Saturnina Norman, wife of Mr. William Norman, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Baca, aged 23 years. A daughter but two weeks old is left motherless by this sad event.

Mrs. Norman was born in Lincoln, and her life, except a few years at school in Las Vegas, was passed here. Her marriage to Mr. Norman took place on October 15th, of last year, all too brief was the passage from the bridal to the tomb. She was a general favorite with the young people of the place, and there are many aside from family friends, who mourn that her young life should be prematurely shortened. Much sympathy is felt for the husband whose heartstrings has so soon been made desolate, and for the baby girl who will never know a mother's love and care.

The funeral services, on Monday, were conducted by the Knights of Pythias, according to the beautiful and impressive ceremonial of the Order, and all that remained of the beautiful girl was placed beneath the sod, in the Catholic cemetery.

Mabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thornton, died Thursday morning, September 29th, of diphtheria and scarlet fever. She was laid to rest by the side of her sister, in Spring Ranch cemetery, this morning, the Knights of Pythias conducting the funeral services.

Twice in less than a month, has death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs Thornton, this time leaving them childless. The two bright little faces, which were seldom seen apart, are missed by many outside of their own home. Their playground under the trees, which was a favorite resort of the children of the neighborhood, is deserted; the swing hangs motionless; the unused playthings are scattered in the grass, and a hush is over all, where, the long summer through, were heard the music of children's voices and the sound of their merry laughter. Would that we could give some word of comfort to the stricken parents, but in trouble like theirs, words of sympathy fall upon deaf ears. The heart is alive only to a sense of its own desolation, and no attempt at consolation can "make death other than death." It is well that a crumb of comfort comes later, with the thought that the little ones have escaped the inevitable ills of life, and in the hope that somewhere in the great hereafter, the loved and lost will be found again.

An acre of land has been presented to the Lodge of Knights of Pythias, of this place, to be used as a burial ground for members of the Order and their families, by Francisco Romero y Valencia. The plat lies nearly a mile from town, and just below the farm of Mr. Ellis. It will be fenced immediately, and trees set out and other improvements made.

Educational Progress in New Mexico.

BY H. O HOVEY.

Organized as a Territory in 1850, New Mexico has knocked in vain for admission to statehood, although other Territories have been admitted with a third her population and with inferior natural resources. Her singular loyalty to the Union during the last war, her rapid development of mines and agriculture, the unanimity of her citizens for recognition in the sisterhood of States, and other arguments that might be mentioned, have thus far been outweighed by the alleged illiteracy of her people. Without taking sides in the controversy, it is but fair that I should give certain facts, recently gathered from the most authentic sources, and that may be new to some of my readers.

The tourist finds, to his surprise, at Albuquerque, Raton, Eddy, Deming, Springer, Roswell, Silver City, Kingston, and Hillsboro, many of the best elements of American society, such as he would expect to find in cities of the like size in Ohio or Indiana. He dines at excellent hotels, on whose tables not one Mexican dish appears; finds business blocks as pretentious as those in similar Eastern cities; handsome churches, club houses, and charming modern residences with the latest conveniences. At Santa Fe, Las Vegas and Socorro, the old and new are strangely intermingled. But a short ride from any of these places brings one into what is practically a foreign country. Stately country seats, whose inmates boast true Castilian aristocracy and refinement, are surrounded by mud cottages occupied by peons, too contented with their ignorance and poverty. Then, there are the romantic Pueblos remnants of an ancient pagan civilization, dwelling in miniature villages, and owning 900,000 acres of farm land, a peaceful, home-loving race, ruled by officers of their own choosing, just as they were when the country was discovered. The total population, American, Mexican and Indian, amounts to only 160,000, in a territory of 122,444 square miles. It is as though the citizens of Hartford and New Haven were scattered abroad through New England, New York and New Jersey, the only denizens of that broad area, in settlements as widely apart as Cape Cod and Malone, Hoboken and Eastport. What a task to unify, govern and educate such a people!

All legal business, every lawyer's plea, the testimony of every witness, and the findings of the courts, must be rendered into Spanish in order to be understood by the common people. Until very lately Spanish was the only language used in three-fourths of the schools of the Territory. And yet, amid this anomalous state of affairs, there are signs of evident progress. This forward movement is largely due to the work done by what is known as "The New West Education Commission," having its headquarters in Chicago, but extending its operations for the upbuilding of non-sectarian schools throughout all the Territories. The honor must be shared, of course, with the various denominational schools. There are 600 students in the Catholic colleges at Santa Fe, Las Vegas, Taos and Mora, and about 2,000 more in their parochial institutions. There are 9,375 pupils in the various Protestant schools and academies.

Amado Chaves, the superintendent of public instruction, is a native Mexican, but highly educated, and enjoying the confidence of all sects, races and parties. He requires the English language to be taught in all common schools, and he insists that no teacher shall be employed who has not been previously examined and declared to be competent. The new legislation was originated as long ago as 1884, but was inoperative for lack of funds. This defect was remedied in 1890, and ample provision made for supporting an efficient system of public instruction, which went into actual operation last November. Since then, as officially reported, there have been enrolled 45,775 children of school age, of whom 22,599 are in the public schools and 6,137 in those that are denominational or private. The first public school in the Territory was erected last year at Las Vegas, at a cost of $20,000; another has been built at Raton, costing $7,000; other expensive ones are being erected at Deming and Albuquerque. Besides the government training schools, of which it is not my purpose to speak more particularly, there are four Territorial institutions, viz., the University at Albuquerque, the Agricultural College at Las Cruces, the School of Mines at Socorro, and the institution for the deaf and dumb at Santa Fe. It must be added that in many of the public schools the terms are short and the salaries inadequate. But the outlook is extremely hopeful, and the general sentiment seems to have incarnation in the noble words of Amado Chaves, who says: "The public school is the greatest product of the four centuries of American civilization. No other institution is so universal, and no other lies so close to the hearts of the people." All this is highly encouraging, and if the educational work now begun should be diligently pressed forward, it cannot be long before New Mexico will gain a worthy place in the sisterhood of States.
