THE ANGORA GOAT INDUSTY IN LINCOLN COUNTY.

It has been demonstrated by various owners of Angora goat herds hereabouts that the goat industry pays. With an annual increase of 100 per cent in a flock, and the fleece selling at 30 cents a pound, the returns are quick and satisfactory. The industry has been successfully growing in the United States for over forty years, and the flocks have grown from nothing to about 400,000 animals. Last year over 1,000,000 pounds of mohair were produced, which sold for from 20 to 45 cents a pound, and the American mills consumed over 5,000,000 pounds. A California grower says "The Angora goat is not a creation of the whim of speculation, brought from distant Turkey to induce the American public to part with its hard-earned lucre, but he is a money-maker, and when the American livestock breeder prepares a proper place for the right kind of Angora he need feel no hesitancy in stocking with these silver-fleeced brush destroyers; they are an American institution and they have come to stay. —Alamogordo News.

Lincoln county is the banner Angora goat region of New Mexico, and the industry is fast becoming one of our most important reveune producers. Some of the best graded herds contain registered animals from Lake Valley, Arizona, and from the best graded Angoras of California

Among the best graded herds of this county is that of E. L. Stewart, E. T. Collier, Frank Tatti, C. H. Byfield & Co., John Hightower and others too numerous to mention. The sale of mohair from these flocks has averaged probably 28 cents per pound and 3 to 10 pounds from the goat.

The increase will average, or has averaged in this county 96 to 100 per cent. each year, and the sale of mohair is said to pay the cost of running, or caring for the flock, giving the increase as a net profit. We know of no business where profits are so sure and money made so rapidly as in the Angora goat business.

The herd shown in the cut, is that of E. L. Stewart of the Exchange Bank of this city, who began two years ago with about 200 head of nannies, and which flock at the end of this lambing season will, he estimates, number about 1,000 head, worth at the lowest market price for this grade of Angoras, $4.00 per head.

Say the 200 head cost him $3.75 each, or $750.00 and that after grading and culling, following two lambing seasons, the 1,000 head are now worth $4.00 each or $4,000, and that the cost of caring for them has been paid by the sale of mohair, which is said to be so: the investment has netted him $4,000 less $750, or $3,250: more than 400 per cent.

The figures, while only approximately correct, show the possibilities of the Angora industry in Lincoln county.

PRESS BULLETIN NO. 78.

New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts--Signs of an Over-Stocked Range.

Without doubt one of the most important industries of New Mexico is its stock-raising industry. And the same conditions which cause this to be true with respect to the past and present will necessarily continue to make it so in the future. Hence the present and future prosperity of this territory is in a very large measure affected by the treatment of our natural ranges.

The present method of management of, or rather failure to manage carefully this one of our natural resorces is a crying shame, when viewed from the standpoint of the best interests of the territory at large, both for the present and future.

Twenty or twenty-five years ago practically all the ranges of New Mexico were capable of carrying from one third to one half more stock than they will carry today. The present condition exists simply as the result of persistent overstocking of the most thoughtless and careless kind.

Particular inquirses among the older stockmen, on the question of the carrying capacity of the various ranges of the southern part of the territory have invariably received the answered that a number of years ago the range was better than at present. On several occasions the answer has been that once it was possible to cut half a ton or more of grama hay to the acre on lands now practically bare.

In reply to questions as to the present topography of a region compared with that of the same area fifteen or twenty years ago, the answer has usually been that in the past it was possible to drive over these areas in a buggy where it is now almost impossible to travel on horseback.

These two features of the roughness of a given area and the relative amount, and particularly the kind of vegetation present, tell very plainly about when and to what extent a range has been overstocked; they also suggest the kind of stock which were held on that range.

Ranges that have been overstocked with cattle and horses are full of arroyos which are stony and more or less weedy. Where the slope is too gently to produce marked arroyos, the broader, more moist; open valleys and "draws" are filled with the common "careless weeds" (Amarantue spp.) The rocky arroyos generally have a good crop of the white "prickly poppy" or "poppy thistle" (Argemone spp.) and the "wild tobacco" (Nicotiana attenuata.) The "Rocky Mountain bee plant" (Cleome serulata) and Croton Texensis may be found in either of such locations.

Level flats frequently have the perennial grasses replaced by some of the annual grasses which are either of very little value as feed because stock do not like them or are of very short duration, and furnish little feed. The commonest annual grasses which replace the perennials are Aristida Bromoides Tricuspis Pulchella and one of the "six weeks gramas" Bouteloua Aristidoides. The two first named are of very little value as feed, since, for some reason not understood stock will not even eat them when fresh and green. The last is very short lived, and is poor feed when dry, as well as being quite spiny.

Overstocking by sheep and goats is not so apt to affect the topography of the range, but they eradicate the perennial grasses more thoroughly when held too long in a given place, and their effect upon the low shrubs is much more noticeable.

The degree of recovery of a range tells about how long since it was overstocked.

A noticeable amount of drying up of streams and springs, and bigger floods during the rainy season in any region, are good signs that the ranges of that region are overstocked. This is true because the grass tends to hold back the water from running rapidly off and allows it more time to soak into the soil, whence it may emerge as springs. When the water runs off the suface instead of soaking into the soil, the springs go dry and if the runoff occurs in a short time, we have a flood, even when the rainfall has been nothing more than normal. A thick sod of perennial grass will hold back surface flow as nothing else can.

Chaplain of the Senate Dead.

The death of Rev. W. H. Milburn, chaplain of the United States senate, at the advanced age of 80 years, removes one of the connecting links between the long past and the present. In 1845, 58 years ago, he was first elected chaplain of the house of representatives. He was again elected in 1853 and again in 1885, continuing from the latter date until 1893, when he was elected chaplain of the senate. Daniel Webster, John Quincey Adams, John C. Calhoun, Alexander Stephen, and the leading men of their time, as well as their successors, were his intimate friends and associates.

He was a genial companion, very dignified in his manners, interesting in private conversation and had a mind well stored with general information, which he had acquired by traveling and listening. He was very eloquent in his sermons and prayers and had a sonorous voice and impressive presence. He was a finished elocutionist and instructed many of the noted men of his day in that art.

Talk About White Oaks.

Chas Spence and Wayne Van Schoyck went to El Paso. A News reporter got the following from Mr. Spence:

The closing of the Old Abe gold mines at White Oaks, N. M., has had a great effect on the business of that city, according to Charles Spence, a miner of that place, who is stopping at the Orndorff.

"About sixty men have been let out of employment by the closing of the mines," said Mr. Spence, "and while that number is no great thing. It is a big thing for White Oaks. The company is putting in new machinery and preparing to work the mines more extensively and while these improvements are in progress the company will work only a small force.

"The Old Abe is still paying well and great prospects, and when the new machinery is in operation the company expects to get still greater profits. White Oaks will always be a good town in spite of the fact that the railroads refuse to give us a side track and it will always be a good feeder for the El Paso wholesale houses."

Portland Cement Railroad Ties.

Railroad Officials are much interested in experiments that are being conducted on the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central railroads in the use of railroad ties of Portland cement. The manufacturers claim for their invention that the cement tie is practically indestructible and therefore an assurance of a great reduction in first cost as well as that of maintenance.

Wood blocks of various thickness are shinned between the tie and the rail. These act as a cushion to receive and distribute the vibration and can be quickly replaced without removing or disturbing the tie.

The blocks are chemically treated so as to render them indestructible. They are held to the cement ties by spikes filled with wooden plugs, these plugs being inserted before the cement has set and hardened.

Dr. Crum, the Negro collector at the Port of Charlseton, S. C., is thinking of resigning his position. It is not difficult for us to understand why official life should be distasteful to Dr. Crum in Charleston, S. C. The Doctor's appointment has greatly embarrassed the President, not more by Southern criticism than by opposition which developed among his friends at the north.

Aerial Mail.

Signor piscicelli, a scientist of Rhome, has invented a mechanism for carrying letters and parcels which is so novel and promises such good results that the Italian government is seariously thinking of using it throughout the country in place of the present mail service. Two reasons are given for the proposed change, one is that mail may be transmitted at a speed of two hundred and fifty miles an hour, and the other reason is because it is calculated that the system could be established thrughout Italy at a cost of about $700 per mile, and the government would save thereby several million dollars. The scheme is to have double wires strung at a height of forty-five feet above the ground and to have as vehicles, boxes containing the mail and which are to be rolled along the wires. The boxes are to be upon rollers which will fit closely to the wires, and the posts supporting the wires are to be three hundred feet apart. Moreover, the boxes are to be made of aluminum, and when filled must not weigh more than seventy pounds each. The exact manner in which these boxes are to be propelled has not yet been divulged, but it is supposed they will be provided with electric motors. It is estimated that four thousand boxes could be started on their journey every hour, a distance of one hundred yards being left between each.

The Father of Waters.

The Father of Waters, a stream that has frequently played pranks upon various communities has once more condecended to permit the city of Vicksburg to become a river town. Vicksburg's interesting experiences with the Mississippi are related by a writer in Leslie's Weekly. This writer says that "until about the beginning of the decade, all the geography classes in our schools were taught, and correctly, that the city of Vicksburg, Miss., made historic during the civil war, was situated on the bank of the Mississippi river. This statement, however, ceased to be a fact some ten or more years ago, when the Father of Waters, in one of his erratic moods, forced a new channel for himself and left Vicksburg perched on a high bluff, several miles inland. The town, which had been one of the most important steamboat ports on the big stream, was thus suddenly deprived of much of the traffic that had caused it to prosper. Strangely enough the misfortune was an echo of the famous seige of Vicksburg, and General U. S. Grant was primarly responsible for it. In order that the union gunboats might run past the shore batteries unharmed, Grant sought to divert the waters of the Mississippi away from the city by digging a new cannal. The great river refused at the time to take the new course marked out for it, but it eventually did so, more than thirty years after such action could be of any use to the union army.

The demand for Indian curios has prompted the Pueblo Indians of this territory to begin extensive manufacture of all kinds of pottery, in fact it is possible for the tourest and traveler over the Santa Fe through the territory to buy all kinds of ancient pottery fresh from the factory of these Indians, or have it made to order if at all fastideous.

The Otero County Enterprise, the two week's-old periodical published at Cloudcroft, has reached us, and although launched under apparent difficulty, the edition has the vim necessary to success in the business and we believe he will succeed. Citizens of Cloudcroft should stay by him.

The Deming Headlight says that a great number of cattle are being driven into the PimaValley, Arizona, to fatten on the big alfalfa crop there. It is cheaper for than stockmen near that locality to drive to feed to pay the freights.

La Grippe has been a general malady here recently.

Oil Situation at Santa Rosa.

The O. C. Crude oil company of Santa Rosa, N. M., is about the only company operating in that field that is now doing any active development work.

This company is now down to a depth of 850 feet, but as yet has not struck oil in commercial quantities. Lately the company has made very slow progress in drilling and is experiencing considerable trouble in getting the machinery out of the well and several new parts have had to be replaced.

Work has been suspended on the Newman well and the machinery will be used in drilling another by another company a mile or so distant from the Newman well. The most of the companies are evidently holding off to let the present companies that are drilling explore the field.

Newspaper Proverbs.

The chap who tries hardest to work a newspaper for special favors is the one who never spends a cent with it and is not even a subscriber.

The one who demands the highest excellence in typography, subject matter and quantity of contents, does the least to help the cause along.

The man who kicks most about the inaccuracy of newspapers in general is the one who does the least to assist in getting the facts accurately when he has an opportunity to do so.

The man who has it in for newspapers in general has had the bitter truth told about him once by some unusually frank reporter and has a big sore spot.

The man who brings in the longest obituary of the late deceased was not a model husband always.

The woman who declares it's none of the public'e business and she won't talk, "so there," always winds up by giving the reporter a rattling good story so fast that he can't take it down in shorthand.

The man who begs that his name be left out of the list of drunks for fear it will hurt his mother's feelings never considered that good lady's sensibilties before in his life.

The men who spend the most money with the paper kick the least.

If you expect a man to find a compliment about himself, you must put it on the front page in boldface type.

If you put in a one-line roast in nonpareil between two patent medicine ads. on the 'steenth page, he'll find it and come hunting the man who writ the piece.

The tale of woe of the returning territorial Congressional Delegates about statehood is just about as Interesting to the average citizen as a crop bulletin from the Los Cruces Agricultural Collage is to a Lincoln County miner.

Our Statesmen.

Speaking of the Hearst touring party that is soon to visit New Mexico, the Albuquerque Journal-Democrat remarks as follows:

"Let the visitors look at our magnificent mountains, with their inexhaustible stores of the precious and useful metals; let them view our teeming valleys, with a fertility greater than that of the Nile; let them see our dreaming magicians, the annual product of our vast plains when the magic of irrigation shall transform them into field; let them bask in our perennial sunshine; let them breathe new life with our bracing air; let them see our people, take them to our hearts, let them see our land, take them to our hearts, let them see our land, take them to our hearts, let them see our land

LOCAL and PERSONAL NEWS.

Silas May went to Capitan yesterday.

J. B. Rice, San Francisco, was in the Baxter list.

B. Goodin, registering Carrizozo, was in the burg.

C. W. Wright, Albuquerque, is at the Baxter Hotel.

There is another month of the public school. Mrs. Jno. A. Hollars will join her husband in Los Angles, California as soon as the term is ended.

Thomas E. Keith, brother of Jno. M. and Charles Y. Keith, an attorney at law, at Curtis, Texas, is expected here this week to visit a short time with his brothers.

H. Biggs has his saw mill in the Lake mountains, about ready for business. The Lincoln forest reserve has given him one of the Capitan mountain timber belt.

Judge Hewitt did not go to Socorro as he expected to last week, owing to the fact the hearing in the sheriff contest case, in which he represents the defence, was again put off.

CADET APPOINTMENT.

Delegate Rodey Provides for Examination of Applicants.

In this Delegate Rodey [illegible] to parents and guardians [illegible] New Mexico that there is now [illegible] from this territory for the position of cadet [illegible] at the National Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., which the delegate is required to fill.

It has been determined that the selection of the cadet from New Mexico will be made by competitive examination, so that all New Mexico boys may have an equal chance. The one standing highest in the examination will be nominated as the cadet, and those standing next highest will be named, respectively, as the second, third and fourth alternates. The successful candidates will have to be present at Annapolis, Md., on June [illegible], 1903, to stand an examination there.

The local examination will be held at the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque, N. M., at 10 o'clock a. m. on Tuesday, May [illegible], and will continue as long as may be necessary. The examination will be conducted by Professor Tight of the University of New Mexico, as chairman of the board, and by Professor Wilson of the Military Institute, and Professor Keyes of the School of Mines, under rules and regulations to be previously promulgated by them.

Candidates to be eligible must be in perfect physical health, actual bona fide residents of the Territory of New Mexico, and must be upon the age of [illegible] and [illegible] years.

Printed copies of the regulations can be had on application to Delegate Rodey, at Albuquerque, N. M.

Doin's of the Knights.

The Knights of Pythias, Baxter Lodge No. [illegible], of this city, will give an informal reception to a limited number of friends at the Castle Hall on Friday evening, May 1st. The program will, among other social features, consist of a short address by Chancellor Commander, A. H. Harris; [illegible] music and song, various kinds of household games, a lap supper, etc. These informal gatherings of the members of this lodge were originated for the entertainment of the families of the membership, but it has now been decided to allow each member to bring one or more friends with him should he so desire. However, a special fund has recently been created for the purpose of conducting public entertainments and a committee, whose life is twelve months, selected to have entire control of all features of this character, and the general public will probably soon hear from them.

Methodist Church.

Subject Sunday morning: Instruction by Faith. Sunday evening: No Room for Christ. This is Mr. Hamilton's last Sunday in White Oaks as pastor, and for the reason he prefers the interest on account of Presiding Elder Tallman will preach on Wednesday evening, the 27th, and immediately afterward hold the session of the third quarterly Conference for the current year.

Screen Doors.
