Buried Treasure and Lost Mines

NEW MEXICO, in common with the States of the Rocky Mountain region, and more particularly that section of the southwest traversed by the Spanish explorers and colonized by them, has its lore of stories of hidden treasure and lost mines that, when rediscovered, will make the finder so wealthy that J. Pierpont Morgan, by comparison, would look like a pauper. Lincoln County in this as in other things is well along in the procession and not only has a cave at White Oaks containing a vast amount of buried treasure—placed there on the retreat of the Spaniards from Gran Quivera—but also the famous semi-historic Montezuma mine on Eagle Creek—lost to sight of man for centuries, but fabulously rich. All old-timers will recall how earnestly poor old Jake Miller labored to uncover the buried treasure in the cave at White Oaks and how his sublime faith in its existence induced others to join him in the search for burro load upon burro load of the yellow metal stowed there by the hand of man. Also it will be remembered how search has been made for the lost Montezuma mine on Eagle Creek, but the fact remains that the hidden treasure remains hidden and the lost mine is still lost. But more of this anon.

The foregoing thoughts are only penned as an introduction to another story—famous in all the adjoining states and with which many old miners are familiar. This particular lost mine is located in the mountains of western Socorro county, near where the Kelleys formerly lived, and have become celebrated for the reason not only because of their fabulous richness, but because of a thrilling history attached to their discovery, the subsequent loss—to the finder—of their whereabouts, and the determined efforts that have been made to relocate them. Much has been written and wide interest manifested in the story of the "Adams Diggings," of which the following article furnished us by Mrs. Ed R. Kelley and written by Mr. Spooner is considered a very good description, and for the curious it is herewith presented:

In the fall of the year 1850 while the gold fever of California was at its highest, a man by the name of Adams and his three companions were crossing New Mexico on their way to California. Late one evening they came to a path which led them up a short canyon, to where they found water, and it may be remarked here that water is scarce in that part of the country. They struck camp for the night and during the evening one of the men concluded to try a pan of dirt, and to his great surprise found gold in great abundance. After they were satisfied that they had struck it rich they went to work and built a miners' cabin and prepared to pass the winter in working their claim. In building the fireplace to the cabin they made a box of stone with the hearthrock as a covering for a place of safety to store their earnings. When they had been working the mine for about three months Adams took his gun, one evening and went out to kill a deer for meat. When he returned late in the evening he found one of his partners lying in the trail about 100 yards from the cabin, where he had been killed by the Indians. On closer investigation he found the other two killed and the cabin burned down. The first thought with Adams was to get away from there as far and as fast as possible, and as California had been their objective point he started out in that direction. As there was no one living in that country and the Indians were always on the warpath in that day and time, he traveled in the night and lay by in the day time. After two nights' travel and about 9 o'clock a. m. the third day he came to a stream of water, at which point he marked a cottonwood tree so that he might have something as a guide to assist him in locating his mines some time in the future. He then made his way in a westerly direction, traveling for days and days, or rather nights, without seeing anyone until at last he landed in California. He there was engaged in different occupations for about 25 years, but at all times with the intention of closing out his business and returning to his rich mine in southern New Mexico whenever the country was sufficiently settled to make it safe for him to return. In about the year '78 Mr. Adams sold his two farms in California which brought him $14,000. He then returned to New Mexico and began a systematic search for the mine.

On his return to the country where he thought he might be getting in the vicinity of his lost mine he found a few mining towns and also some large stock ranches scattered over the country. He informed some of the best men of the country as to his business there, which created quite an excitement. He told them of how he had marked the cottonwood tree; he also produced a nugget of gold that he had taken from the mine and had carefully kept for 25 years. He described the stream upon whose banks the marked tree was growing. Some of the old timers who had heard and become interested in his story concluded to help him look for the marked tree, thinking if they found it as described there must be something in the story. After a diligent search of a few days the stream was located—it is now known as the Negro route, or Little Black. It is a tributary of the Grand Canyon in the Dall mountains. After a

The News' Weekly Lay Sermon

MEN deserve honor only as they are faithful and honest, albeit they may have fame and notoriety as they are successful. But for a vagary of fortune the unknown sailor at the mast might have been the famed admiral on the bridge, and the obscure soldier in the ranks might have been the heralded general at the front, the sweating tailor the proud captain of industry, and the humble voter the exalted magistrate. Fortune favors, and we are famous; fortune frowns, and we are obscure. Whether fortune enables us to become famous or keeps us obscure, we have it within us to say whether we shall be honest or dishonest, faithful or unfaithful; and accordingly as we choose do we deserve the approval or the disapproval of our fellow man.—König.

A Doggone Curious Package

PARCELS POST has been the subject of many gibes since its institution January 1st, because of many suggestions as to the nature of articles to be transmitted—from babies to threshing machines—but such suggestions were not considered seriously. However, the fact remains that almost any, if not every, article under 11 pounds and not having too great a length may be sent in this manner. As a proof of this statement we only need to call attention to a local incident. John B. Baird had promised Les Harmon, of White Oaks, a pup and the easiest, most economical and most expeditious method of transmitting his gift was by parcels post. So, Monday morning last he attached a tag to the youthful canine—its weight and measurements coming within the specifications—and applied 35 cents in parcels post stamps and sent the package over the star route to its destination.

further search of a day or two the tree was found and was marked just as described by Adams, and showed to have been marked many years. Those who were present when the marked tree was found say that old man Adams was wild with joy and said, "Now if the mine can be found I will be a millionaire, and I only want what is bid under the hearth-place, and there are millions in the mines for others."

Adams and his party then began searching for the mine proper. They thought the mine would be some 40 or 50 miles from the marked tree, so they began the search on that theory, supposing that Adams would have traveled 20 or 25 miles in a night. Adams continued the search for about 12 or 14 years and squandered the whole of his $14,000 long before he gave up the search; in fact he never quit searching for that mine until death claimed him. He died a poor, old heart-broken man, always saying, that there were millions in the mine if it could be found. Mr. Kenock foreman of the Y Cattle company, who is now a resident of that part of New Mexico, where the mine was generally supposed to be, took his outfit of 25 or 30 men and put in two weeks looking for the lost mine. Mr. Patterson, who is an old time miser and western man, and is now postmaster at Patterson, near where the mine is supposed to be, has spent about $5,000 looking for the mine and he is perfectly sure in his mind that the lost mine does exist somewhere in that part of the country.

Adams said that when they discovered the mine the grass was waist high all over the country, so it is generally supposed that fire has long since destroyed all the signs of the ax made in building their cabin.

In conclusion, I will say to all those who may chance to read this that the facts herein contained are the solemn truth, as there are men now living in southern New Mexico who were well acquainted with old man Adams and who helped him to hunt the lost mine.

The Major Boils Over

THOSE who have kept up with the little squibs in the Santa Fe New Mexican concerning the writing of a telegram—a member doing it himself—alleging it to be from his constituents, and the resolution in the house calling for an investigation, will have to smile over the Major's indignation, which is portrayed in the following in the Santa Fe New Mexican:

PUSILLANIMOUS PUPS

Discussing a resolution introduced Thursday afternoon in the name of the author of a certain telegram alleged to have been written by a legislator to himself, Major Llewellyn remarked: "I would have voted for that resolution myself had I been in the house. I defy anyone to connect ME with that telegram and you may tell Mr. Cutting that I will gladly give him $100 if he will print in his paper MY name connected in any way with such a telegram. The trouble with Mr. Cutting is he has placed himself in the hands of a pack of pusillanimous pups."

"Of what?" asked the reporter. "Pusillanimous pups," snorted the Major. "That's just what I mean, sir. And you may tell Mr. Cutting that for me, sir, I will give him one hundred dollars if he will print my name in his paper in connection with any improper telegram."

When informed of the major's message Mr. Cutting expressed surprise and said: "Why, what has my good friend, Major Llewellyn, got to do with this telegram?"

FOUND WORKS OF STEVENSON

Manuscripts and Works of Popular Writer Unearthed in Samoa and Hawaii, by an Admirer.

It is learned that a number of new and relatively important manuscripts of Robert Louis Stevenson have been discovered in Samoa and in Honolulu by an ardent admirer of the great novelist, who had been for some time in both Hawaii and Samoa seeking such writings of the famous Scotsman as might possibly be found in the possession of some of the many friends of Stevenson during his years in the Pacific.

The result of this research has been the finding of an essay, said to be highly poetical in character, written by the novelist after witnessing a volcano in action, supposedly either the famous crater of Savali or the pit of Kilauea in Hawaii; a piece of fiction dealing with South Sea life, and a number of smaller verse compositions.

Still another manuscript, a blank verso relation of a well-known legend of Maui, of considerable length, but unfinished, has also come to light, and the enthusiastic admirer of Stevenson feels highly rewarded for his month of effort.

SKIN ERUPTION ON CHEEK

Kingsley, Mich.—Last May my thirteen-month-old baby had a sore come on her cheek. It started in four or five small pimples and in two or three hours' time spread to the size of a silver dollar. It spread to her eye. Then water would run from the pimples and wherever that touched it caused more sores until nearly all one cheek and up her nostrils were one solid sore. She was very fretful. She certainly was a terrible-looking child, and nothing seemed to be of any use.

TURKEY BAKED WITH MILK

Recipe of French Chef Declared to Be the Finest Method of Cooking the Bird.

The following recipe has been handed down in our family for five generations. A noted French chef, when in Edinburgh, Scotland, was prevailed upon by some of the wealthy families to give their daughters a series of cooking lessons, writes a correspondent of the New York Press. The most delicious of all the recipes was for turkey baked in milk. It was brought to this country by them and has been used ever since by all the offshoots of our family. I have never seen it anywhere excepting in families who have eaten it at our table.

Make a stuffing of one-third potato finely mashed and seasoned, two-thirds bread crumbs, one cupful of raisins or one and a half cupfuls of turkey is large, one-half cupful of butter, about one-half cupful of sugar, cinnamon, salt and pepper to taste, and last, two well beaten eggs stirred in lightly.

When the turkey is properly prepared and stuffed with this mixture, heat a pint of new milk and put in the dripping pan with the turkey and bake, basting every 15 minutes with the milk. Keep milk in the top of the stove to replenish the supply in the pan as needed. It will take from one to two quarts of milk.

When done remove the turkey and set the pan on top of the stove to boil a minute. The gravy will then have a curdled appearance, and is the most delicious gravy ever tasted. If the cooking has not been just right, and the cooking has not thickened, add a little cornstarch and boil.

SEWING MACHINE NEEDS CARE

Much Trouble May Be Avoided if the Simple Precautions Recommended Here Are Taken.

The best way to finish off a machine seam is to turn the material and stitch back for an inch. This does away with the necessity of tying the thread, which, if forgotten, often causes trouble in the finished article.

Sewing machines should be treated with great care if you would have them last a long while and do perfect work. After every two days of steady work oil the machinery thoroughly, but be careful to wipe away all superfluous oil. Run the machine rapidly but steadily, without any thread, for five minutes after oiling. This will cause the oil to scatter and the superfluous drops can be wiped away and none will be left to stain the material you are working with.

When much machine work is to be done, fill several shuttles with cotton fiber than that used on top. An ordinary shuttle will hold a great deal of fine cotton and you will not be annoyed by having to stop and wind a bobbin when you are right in the midst of a long seam or a difficult bit of work.

Quilt Protector.

Procure the best quality white or cream cheese cloth, about two and one-quarter yards. On one side put a three-inch hem, stitching it neatly. In the center of this, just above the hem, embroider a monogram or one large initial. This is to be folded over the top of quilt or comfort and sewed on to protect it, as this is where they always show soil first, says Harper's Bazar. The hem on the under side may be small and hem-stitched or plain hemmed. The ends should be hemmed. Lawn may be used instead of cheese cloth.

Nevel Shoe Case.

A woman who is hard on her silk stockings has learned to utilize the tops for bags for her shoes and slippers. When the runs and holes get undarnable the tops of the stockings are cut off midway of the leg and the lower edge sewed across in a French seam.

A shoe is kept in each of these stocking bags, which take up no room, cost nothing and act as an absorber of dust. Sometimes the kind of shoes is outlined on the hem to make them more easily distinguishable.

Gumbo Soup.

Take a couple of nice small chickens, divide them as for fricasees; dredge with flour; brown in frying pan, using butter instead of lard; then let them boil very gently two hours; salt and pepper to suit taste, add strained juice from a quart of oysters, put in two slices of fat boiled ham; let this boil for one-quarter hour, before putting in the boiled oysters; put in a few leaves of some pleasant herb, then simmer for ten minutes.

Finnan Haddie and Cream.

One pound smoked finnan haddie, remove bones and skin, then cut up very fine. One-half pint of milk, one-half pint of sweet corn, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Mix all this with pieces of fish and boil for ten minutes. This makes enough for three.

When darning a rent in woollen goods and it is impossible to travel out the goods for thread, try using long strands of your own hair. The loose waves of the wool loose the hair in its meshes and as the hair becomes visible.

Brand Whitlock, the mayor of Toledo, was talking about discontent. "It is our discontent, our divine discontent," he said, "that will make a great nation of us. I believe in discontent. He's Not a Chicken Fancier.

Speaking of chickens, a funny man writing in Puck says: "They are the most dabbled, uncertain creatures that walk the family acres. Almost everybody tries to raise chickens at one time or another. Looks easy—that's the deceiving part of it. 'And it is easy after you learn one thing. Little chickens don't know anything, medium sized chickens don't know anything, if there is any change of an intellectual nature as the size increases the big ones know less if possible than the little ones. 'If there is a wire partition in your pen with an open door at one end the chickens will try to plunge through the wire instead of gox around and walking through the door.'"

Billie Ferguson reports the loss of two dogs—evidently their deaths resulting from poison. The dogs were valuable, as most dogs are, because they were pets of the children—and it is difficult to understand why any one would deliberately commit such a deed.

Fred Beitter was down Monday from the crest of the continent, where he has, perhaps, the highest farm in Lincoln county. His home is on the divide between the Salado and Bonito and, while now covered with snow, his land produces excellent crops.

Plastering is now in progress on the club building. The wiring has been placed for the lighting, while the piping for the heating will be in position possibly by tomorrow. The roofing, which has been delayed for lack of material, will soon be on, as the shipment arrived yesterday.

At the Junior Civic League meeting Tuesday afternoon the enrollment was so large, that there were not sufficient buttons to supply the members. Mrs. Hamilton has ordered an additional supply and wishes those who did not get buttons to know that every member will receive one when the next consignment comes.

The local committees received some good news from the railroad company this week, whereby the company proffers its services to help push a matter of public interest to a satisfactory conclusion. It was a generous act and will only be another step toward more pleasant relations between the company and the community.

Two Girls Win Prizes

TWO girls won the prizes in the Junior Civic League Tuesday. They were, Mary Adams, in the class between the years 9 to 12, and Mona Lane, between 12 and 16. Each prize was $2.50, for which about forty of the school children competed. The subject was, as announced last week, "What Can I Do to Improve Carrizozo?"

CONGRESS has passed a law known as the Webb bill, prohibiting the shipment of intoxicants into a territory where prohibition is declared to exist. It is now up to the president, but it is believed he will sign it. The advocates of the measure claim that the shipment of liquor into "dry" territory annulled the action of the people, who could not stop its use as long as shipments were permitted from the outside.

The subject of ways and means for starting a city park was discussed, and a committee was appointed to look into the matter of location, water supply and to secure trees and flower-seeds.

A special meeting will be held at the school house Friday afternoon, Feb. 14, at 3:30. All are invited to attend.

Wildly Insane

REGORIO JIRON was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Roberts and held on an insanity charge. Jiron, wildly insane, became dangerous, and was locked up to await a hearing. However, the officers communicated with the authorities at the State Asylum this morning and discovered that Jiron had recently been paroled from that institution and that he could be returned without an additional examination. Mr. Roberts took Jiron to the asylum last July, and will probably now duplicate the job.

Mexican Capital Shell-Torn

SUNDAY marked the beginning of a revolt in the City of Mexico that has caused much destruction of property and the loss of many lives. The beautiful capital city of our sister republic is the hotbed of a seething revolution that has racked the city from center to circumference, and the end is not yet. A revolt in the regular army occurred, Generals Felix Diaz and Bernardo Reyes, who were being held as prisoners, were released and immediately placed at the head of the revolutionists. Gen. Reyes was killed early in the conflict, but General Diaz succeeded in capturing the arsenal, from which the government has since been unable to dislodge him.

Fighting, in which heavy guns have been brought into play by both sides, has been fierce at times, and a number of non-combatants, including Americans, have been killed. It is estimated that something like 500 have, all told, been killed, and 1500 wounded. Reports are quite conflicting one being to the effect that the revolutionists under Diaz will soon have control of the city; the other that President Madero has sufficient men and arms to put down the revolt and that peace will follow soon.

That the situation, be it what it may, is considered more serious by Americans and our government itself than at any time during the various revolutions that have been in progress, is evidenced by the fact that American soldiers—to the amount of 35,000 have been placed on the border, awaiting an expected order to cross over the boundary and to restore peace. Also a number of ships have been ordered to Vera Cruz—all tending to show the anxiety of our government over a situation that grows more serious with each moment.

What today, tonight, tomorrow, or even what each passing moment will bring forth is only a matter of conjecture. The sentiment of our country is not strong for interference, especially if a stable government can be maintained in Mexico, but the destruction of property, the loss of life and what appears to be the utter inability of the Madero government to bring about a semblance of peace has almost strained the patience of Americans to the breaking point. Caution is urged in official circles—the fear having been expressed that once we cross the Rio Grande it will be most difficult to retire gracefully and honorably. But, regardless of that feeling, there is a deeper feeling that peace must be established, even if it has to be established at the price of intervention.

St. Valentine

CUPID is burdening the mails today with missives of sentiment in honor of St. Valentine. This day is the most sentimental in the entire year and the little god does some queer stunts on this recurring annual event. We cannot agree with Bailey that "Poets are all who love—who feel great truths and tell them" or, if so, St. Valentine's day makes poets of us all.

These prospects are that the incoming administration will have no serious financial difficulties, as the income tax amendment will make possible a good income from individual sources. Under these conditions, a liberal reduction of the tariff can be made without danger of upsetting financial conditions.

Telephone Company Elects Officers

THE Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company, which operates in five states, New Mexico being one, including the long distance and local lines in this county, elected officers at Denver this week. The old officers were re-elected, and in submitting their report to a directors' meeting it was shown that the earnings of the company the past year had been quite satisfactory.

Arrested for Burglary

BURGLARY was the charge, but the crime was not committed here. However, Deputy Sheriff Roberts arrested Anastacio Mendez here on a wire from Sheriff Lucero of Dona Ana county. Mr. Lucero came in last Friday evening and returned the following morning with his prisoner.

The Home Mission Tea

UNDER the auspices of the Ladies' Home Mission Society a delightfully pleasant tea was served at the office of District Attorney Hamilton. The room was crowded from 3:30 to 6:00 Wednesday afternoon, and this first of a series of down town teas to be given monthly was a decided success. The net receipts were in excess of $20.

The table was decorated with carnations, ferns and shrubs of the genus syringa, and taken together with the music dispensed by the Carrizozo string band, gave an additional flavor to the refreshments. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Mesdames F. W. Jones, James E. Farley, H. S. Fairbanks, Clarence Spence and H. B. Hamilton.

Salary Bill Passes House

ONE of the most important measures to come before the legislature at this session is the county salary bill. Various bills have been proposed, as a rule, unsatisfactory to either taxpayer or official. Finally the Finance Committee agreed upon a measure and put it through the house, but cut out the emergency clause. So that if this particular measure runs the gauntlet in the senate and escapes the veto of the governor, it will not be effective for ninety days.

The salary bill as passed by the house divides the twenty-six counties of the state into five classes, the basis for classification being the assessed valuation for the year 1912. The basis is absolutely unfair; for it is evident to those who have made a study of conditions that some officials in counties of the second, third, fourth and fifth classes will have more to do than similar officials in first-class counties, and yet receive much less for the service rendered. However, it is useless to discuss any other method at this time, as the legislature seems to be obsessed with the idea that a valuation basis is the only true one.

Lincoln county falls into the third class, under the house bill, and the following salaries are provided:

Commissioner, $500.00; treasurer $2,500.00; assessor $2,500.00; sheriff, $2,000.00, with deputy allowance of $1,000.00; clerk $2,500.00; probate judge $500.00; surveyor $10 a day when actually engaged.

The district attorney bill is handled in a separate measure.

It is said that president-elect Wilson boiled over the other day, and in response to some suggestion that he ought to do so and so, replied, "I'll be damned if I will." Now, since he has shown that he is human—intensely human—there will be little tendency to criticize him.

PASQUALISTAS, Zapatistas, Diazistas and Reyesistas have joined in one mighty shout of "Down with the Maderistas." This ought to bring 'em.

It is a good thing the "close" season is in effect at Washington, else on the 4th of March, a terrible slaughter of Jamie ducks might shock the country.

If president-elect Wilson delays much longer in announcing the personnel of his cabinet, a number of prognosticators are likely to suffer from nervous prostration.

How Is Your Boiler?

It has been stated that a man's stomach is his boiler, his body is his engine and his mouth the fire box. Is your boiler (stomach) in good working order or is it so weak that it will not stand a full load and not able to supply the needed energy to your engine (body)? If you have any trouble with your stomach Chamberlain's Tablets will do you good. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to do its work naturally. Many very remarkable cures of stomach trouble have been effected by them. For sale by all dealers.

The water in the experiment well has risen to within fifty feet of the surface, and apparently there is quite a supply. As soon as casing can be secured and a pump installed a thorough test will be made.

Approval of the anti-vivisectionists fight against the Nobel prize award to Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, Prof. Herbert Satterley said the other day in Jacksonville:

"These anti-vivisectionists themselves tremble when they try to prove that animal research is useless and futile. They just put themselves in the position of one of their number whom I met at my hotel the other day.

"As this anti was dining I bent forward and said to him:

"Payton me, but you are, I believe, both an anti-vivisectionist and a vegetarian?"

"Then," said I, "you will probably be shocked to learn that you have just eaten a live caterpillar with your lettuce salad."

Fire in Bank of England.

The first fire within memory occurred at the Bank of England, London, a few days ago. A fire broke out in the southeastern portion of the building. The flooring and joisting were considerably damaged. The outbreak was discovered by the Bank of England authorities, and subdued by their own appliances in 20 minutes. A lieutenant and a dozen men of the Irish Guards on duty at the bank, with fixed bayonets, assisted the police in keeping the crowd back from the building.

Shopper's Cramp.

Simon Ford, a diner of hotel men in New York, discussed a new disease.

"There's a new disease called shopper's cramp," he said. "It appears early in December, becomes violently epidemic about the middle of the month and ends suddenly on the evening of the 24th.

"Women feel shopper's cramp in the arms, the limbs, everywhere; but it attacks the husband only in one place—the pocket."

INDUSTRIAL AND MECHANICS

GRAVITY FOR FUEL FEEDER

Coal Slides Down Pipe into Back of Stove or Body of Furnace—Saves Much Hard Labor.

The labor of coaling the furnace or stove has been simplified by the invention of a North Dakota man. This invention is known as the gravity fuel feeder and the coal merely flows into the stove as a valve is opened. To do this, of course, the coal bin or hopper that holds the fuel must be located above the furnace or stove. A pipe then leads down from this source of supply into the back of the stove and the weight of the fuel above keeps this pipe always filled. A cut-off at the bottom of the valve holds back the avalanches but when more coal is needed this cut-off is opened and there is a rush which fills the furnace in an instant, without the back-straining labor of carrying shovelfuls or scuttelfuls to it.

STRAW AND GRASS FOR WOOD

Englishman Has Invented Efficient and Economical Substitute Material for Matches.

The annual consumption of wood in the manufacture of matches is almost incredible. In view of the scarcity of lumber and its consequent high prices, Carre, an Englishman, offers, says America, what he claims to be an efficient and economical substitute. It is a composite made of straw and dried grass and is called artificial wood.

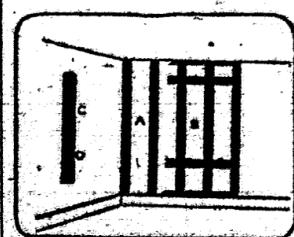

The straw is passed through crushing rolls, thence through cylindrical cutters which divide it into strips, afterward supplied with an adhesive. The strips, inclosed at both ends with layers of paper, are forced through other rollers and through linked molds in the form of a chain, where they are subjected to heat and pressure, when they emerge in the form of round splits and are then cut to the proper length for matches.

It is thought that this product may be used for building purposes.

PANEL WITH STRIPED PAPER

Method Shown in Illustration Whereby Stripes Can Be Made as Desired and in Divisions.

A method of hanging striped paper so as to give a panel effect is shown in the accompanying sketch, writes Milton W. Eddy of State College, Pa., in the Popular Mechanics. The striped paper is first hung in the ordinary manner, as shown at A, and then the stripes are cut out from a piece of the paper cut on a miter, as at C and D, and pasted across between the vertical stripes to form the panels as shown at B. These can be made up as desired and in divisions suitable to the paper design.

Making Chocolate Creams.

A Trinidad firm that has been engaged in some lines of confection manufacture, to meet the local demand, has recently commenced the manufacture of chocolate creams. It is said that the product compares favorably in quality with the best imported. The bonbons are put up in neat packets, which sell at 5 and 12 cents each, or 2 shillings (48 cents), a pound, and there are special wholesale quotations. The creams are made in several flavors. If the success which seems to be promised to this new manufacture is realized and a large development of the industry follows, it may in time practically stop the large importation of such goods from the United Kingdom, France and the United States.

GASOLINE IS RENDERED SAFE

Methods Employed by French Government Makes Accidents Improbable—Rules Are Severe.

Places where inflammable liquids are stored are classed by the French government with establishments which must conform to the most severe rules. In order to satisfy conditions imposed by the prefecture of the police a new apparatus invented by Marini and Huneke was adopted. This apparatus includes no complicated mechanism, it is automatic in its operation and independent of the workmen.

Throughout the apparatus in which the fuel is stored or handled air is replaced by carbonic acid gas, says the Engineering Magazine. This gas not only serves as a protecting agent but its pressure determines the movement of the liquid. Furthermore, the gas fills all the pipes and valves and acts in such a way that liquid can circulate only when the system is absolutely free of leaks. For instance, if a leak occurs at any point in the system the pressure of the gas will disappear and the liquid will remain in the reservoir, where there is no danger of explosion, since air is necessary to the formation of an explosive mixture. In fact, all danger which comes from external fire or even from sparks within the tank is removed.

The principle of operation of the Marini and Huneke apparatus as installed in the garages of the Compagnie des Omnibus de Paris consists of a storage reservoir or heavy sheet metal completely buried in the ground, an inlet panel and an outlet panel, a cylinder of compressed inert gas, and jacketed pipes joining the different parts of the system. A reservoir covered with asphalt is buried in the ground sufficiently to escape all danger of fire. To charge the tank with liquid fuel it is first filled with the inert gas, then connected to the fuel tank by two pipes; one siphons the liquid and the other permits gas from the reservoir to replace it as it runs out. By means of this system the small quantity of liquid which is left on the wall of the tank cannot form an explosive mixture as it never comes into contact with the air.

doors, and thereby to save time in opening and closing the door.

The device can also be used successfully in holding doors shut on pieces of furniture such as bookcases, sideboards and dressers. In the illustration shown herewith a straight magnetic bar A is set in the casing of the door.

A small square piece of iron B, is fastened in the door. When the piece of iron in the door comes in contact with the magnet A the door is held shut; but it can easily be released with only a slight push. Any kind of knob or handle on the door will answer the purpose.

Her Ship Came In.

The mother, a widow with six children, had more energy than money. Little Dot asked frequently for things which her mother could not give.

"Just wait till my ship comes in," she would say assuredly.

One day the mother gave Dot a nickel. It was an unheard of happening.

"Has your ship come in?" the little girl asked eagerly.

Self-Appreciation.

"How do you know your speech made such a profound impression?" asked a doubting friend. "There was not much cheering."

"That's just the point," replied Senator Borghum. "I am one of the orators to whom my constituents would rather listen than hear themselves applaud."

Mayor Gynour, discussing city government in his wonted illuminating and brilliant way, said in New York: "We must not have one reform law for the rich and another for the poor. "To many reformers, so-called, think that when a man is drunk on Fifth avenue he is ill, and when a man is ill on Third avenue he is drunk."

Every noble activity makes room for itself.---Emerson

Taft on the Mexican Situation

TH E recent disturbances in Mexico have led to numerous statements concerning the attitude of this government. Assertions have been made that our government would intervene if peace was delayed, and President Taft has been criticised quite sharply for failure to intervene. This has been true particularly in the southwest. But, as a matter of fact, notwithstanding a deplorable condition exists in the Mexican republic, wise heads shake when the question of intervention is mentioned. Intervention, to many means a long drawn-out conflict, with little to be gained in the end and the whole thing fraught with consequences of dire results. It would seem that President Taft is right after all and much of the protest against his inaction in the Mexican matter has been by those who have kicked about everything he has done.

President Madero has, apparently, feared intervention from the beginning, and unquestionably the hope of intervention has kept alive the rebellious feeling in his country. Now, that his capital has become the scene of carnage and destruction his fears have increased, and rightly, too, for we are probably nearer intervention now than at any time since President Diaz was forced to resign. With this fear uppermost in his mind, Madero appealed to President Taft to keep hands off and permit the Mexican people to fight it out. President Taft responded to the appeal and asserted that reports of intervention were inaccurate, but hinting that a failure to establish an early peace might produce what the Mexican president dreaded.

And the long continued turmoil, the president concluded, culminating in a most disastrous situation in the Mexican capital, creates an extreme pessimism. The appeal and the reply are herewith given and are worthy of careful study, and we are firmly of the opinion that when that is done President Taft will stand in much better light with his own people.

Madero's appeal:
"I have been informed that the government over which your excellency presides has ordered to set out for ports or Mexico war vessels with troops to disembark and come to this capital to give guarantee of safety to Americans."

"Undoubtedly the information which you have and which led you to take this action is inexact and exaggerated, for the lives of Americans in this capital are at present in no danger if they will abandon the zone of fire and concentrate in certain points of the city or its suburbs where tranquility is absolute and where the government can give all classes guarantees."

"If you order American residents here to do that, following the precedent established by your own orders previously issued, danger to the lives of Americans and other foreigners will be obviated."

"Regarding what material damages may be suffered by foreigners, this government is ready to accept all responsibility, according to the obligations of international law."

"Consequently, I ask your excellency to order your men-of-war not to disembark troops in Mexico, as this act will cause a conflagration and terrible consequences of more extent than the ones we have to contend with at present."

"I assure your excellency that this government is taking all measures necessary in order that the rebels in the arsenal will do the least harm possible to lives and property in the capital and I have hopes that everything will be peacefully arranged in a very short time."

"It is true that my country at this time is passing through a terrible crisis. The disembarkation of American troops would only increase the dangerous situation and would do a great harm to a nation which has always been a loyal friend to the United States, as well as contribute to the dangers surrounding the establishing of thorough democratic government similar to that of the great American nation."

"I appeal to the equitable, just sentiments that have been the criterion of your government and that undoubtedly represents the sentiments of the great American people whose destinies you have guided with so much skill and patriotism."

The reply:
"From your excellency's telegram which reached me the 13th, it appeared that your excellency was somewhat misinformed as to the policy of the United States toward Mexico, which has been uniform for two years, or as to the actual measures thus far taken, which are measures of national protection. The American ambassador telegraphed to me when you were good enough to show him your telegram, and he pointed out the fact."

"You must be aware that reports that appear to have been given to that orders have already been given to send troops to the border. From assurances of friendship to Mexico are necessary after two years of proof of alliance and good will."

"The New York City special commission, which is now in the city, has been strongly impressed with the importance of early establishment of a government in Mexico, and the government has been asked to send American troops to the border."

Insist on Full Valuation

FULL VALUATION of taxable property appears to be the slogan of the state board of equalization. A report of the meeting Friday by the Santa Fe New Mexican we believe will be of interest to our readers. The following is the article:

The state board of equalization yesterday adjourned its meeting and will assemble again on Friday, February 21 at which time it will proceed to adjust the taxation matters of the corporations with which it has to deal. So said Frank W. Clancy, president of the board last evening.

Nearly all day yesterday, the board sat in solemn silence while a whole flock of corporation attorneys poured forth oratory. Now and then some member of the board propounded a question or two and as a rule the questions were like explosive shells and served only to bring forth the more oratory.

Judge Israel of the Colorado Southern, was the last speaker. He pleaded for the board to rule that assessments should be made on the returns of 1912 and apparently President Clancy took it that he thought the board was antagonistic to corporations for the conclusion of his remarks. Mr. Clancy said that the board did not intend to discriminate against corporations but that it did intend to insist upon a square deal as between all taxpayers in the state.

But it was Governor McDonald who finally told the attorneys just what his opinion of taxation was. The governor said that it was too, often the case in this state where a small property owner's holdings being apparent, to all, returned his property at its full value and paid taxes thereon. He said he took the position that if one man did this, then all ought to do it. He said it plainly and openly and thereafter, there was a cessation in oratory.

The board then went into executive session and announced at the conclusion thereof, that it would adjourn until February 21. The board has been making strenuous endeavors to get the corporations doing business, and having holdings in New Mexico to return their holdings at their full value. The board, it appears, has not met with a large proportion of success. Most of the attorneys took the position that they could not give the actual value of the holdings. This especially, was true of the railroad men, who made specious pleas as to why it was almost impossibility. Most of them held out the hope that in the course of time, they might be able to comply with the requests of the state board. The board, it is said, is inclined to insist upon its order issued at the January session and Mr. Clancy openly informed the corporation attorneys that a bill would be introduced before the present session of the legislature, giving the board power to name agents who would undertake to determine for the board, the actual value of corporate holdings where the concerns themselves did not seem able to give the information.

The session as a whole, appeared to be rather a gloomy one for the attorneys who sat in a circle about the supreme court was held and held conferences between themselves while the hearing was in progress.

In addition to all this, it was the first session under statehood, plays were made for partisan advantage and the purposes of the session were largely overlooked. The people, while disappointed, exercised considerable charity in dealing with the shortcomings of the 1912 session, and expressed the hope that the session now in progress would make amends, and now, notwithstanding almost two-thirds of the constitutional time has expired, a feeling of charity still exists and the hope is expressed that much beneficial legislation may yet be accomplished, but to do so, bickerings and plays for advantage must be foregone and all get into the harness and pull in unison.

Most serious criticism has been leveled at the failure of the assembly to enact a salary law and to provide the proper means of taxation. The house has passed a salary bill and the senate has it under consideration as well as two others, with doubtful results as to either. For more than a month both houses have been considering the salary bill and it is not very good ones, but all still hangs in the balance. Criticism certainly is justified in this case, for little reason can be advanced for such lengthy operations on a single bill. However, if a good salary bill is enacted, the problem of taxation is properly met and a few minor, but necessary, laws passed the people may still throw the mantle of charity over much of the inaction, and commend the legislature for the good.

Legislature Making Slow Progress

THE New Mexico legislature has been in session for a period of thirty-eight days and there yet remain twenty-two, if the full period allowed by the constitution is utilized. During this period not one general act has become a law, if we do not count the income tax amendment, which is national rather than local. Many good measures have been introduced, and others not so good; some of these have passed either the house or the senate, but there seems to be a general inability to get a substantial effective measure through both branches.

Last year's session was not productive of any great amount of substantial, beneficial legislation, and what was enacted, in different or otherwise, was hastily rushed through during the last forty-eight hours and, of course, illy considered. There are some reasons, however, to account for last session's failures considering the salary bill and it is not very good ones, but all still hangs in the balance. Criticism certainly is justified in this case, for little reason can be advanced for such lengthy operations on a single bill. However, if a good salary bill is enacted, the problem of taxation is properly met and a few minor, but necessary, laws passed the people may still throw the mantle of charity over much of the inaction, and commend the legislature for the good.

their property must be protected and respected, and also because this nation sympathizes deeply with the afflictions of the Mexican people.

"In reciprocating the anxiety shown in your message, I feel my duty to you, and without reserve, that the course of events during the past two years, culminating in the most disastrous situation in your capital, creates in this country extreme pessimism and the conviction that the present paramount duty is the prompt relief of the situation."

Memories of Vergil

IN cultivating a love for the ancient muse, one must study the times incidental to the age in which the learned man lived, and most assiduously follow the thesis of his trend of thought. And learn to differentiate between the specific purpose of such customs as were then practiced and those of our own age. In other words, draw a rigid comparison in the mind, and there will result so complete a change, that the variety and novelty of thought lends great diversity, and delineates all the force and pathos of the writer. One must bear in mind that, mostly, Vergil's creations were inceptions from traditional lore, handed down from epochs even more remote than the age in which he lived. The crudeness of all that pertained to primitive man, the disparity of his morals, the defective training, all must be palliated with sympathy. Even the Rome of today is not in any sense the Rome of ancient times. Al-be-it, there are in its time-defaced thoroughfares, its sea-girt, wave-washed shores, its everlasting hills, its splendid Apollo, its Venus, its Diana, a reminder to quicken the memory of those austere days.

Hitherto there had been great chaos and irregularity of thought, and an evil propensity to imitate rather than cultivate originality of style. About the time of Vergil's great denouement there was an awakening of the lethargy in which the world had so long slumbered. The mental forces of man strengthened, his intellectuality broadened, and he grew away from his stoicism, his brutality, his savage spirit of retaliation, into the magnanimity befitting the dawn of a new era. The excellence and stability of literature was now assured. We may contend with some surety of truth that the inspiration of the approaching epoch, which ushered into the world the Christ-child, was felt long before the appointed hour of the fulfillment of the prophecy. Those unseen, but potent forces have left a confirmation of the idea, by the sudden change in the life of man, from then on. Though Vergil, with rare intuition, and advanced thought, was but a unit in the signal reformation, yet he did nobly well, the part he played and left the world a theorem of form and an originality of style far exceeding the anticipation of the age. Fortune placed him at the "parting of the ways," when the old was worn to shreds, and the new methods were applied to all things. The world was moulding its shape in a crucible of modern potency. And lovers of the chaste, the beautiful, the brave and true, will never ignore his ample gift of altruistic thought. And from the unceasing tumult of the Aegean sea, to the softly ebbing tide of Latinus the waves murmur a dirge to his memory, and under the glow of the setting sun, the light lingers while the soft twilight tranquilizes the unrest into a solemn requiem. Phantom-like the mirage of his life haunt the shores; where his journeys often led.

Born near Mantus, in the year B. C. 70, Vergil fulfilled his span of years just as the dawn of Christianity arose over the submerged world of paganism—and died in the year 19. Along with such contemporaries as Horace and Ovid and many others of equal note, Vergil is conspicuous as breaking the common trend of thought and creating diversity of bucolic verse. He tired of the monotony of the style, borrowed, or perhaps plagiarized from the Greeks, and sought to train the thought in the mysteries of the esthetics. From the inexhaustible, but untouched resources of Nature's grand display, Vergil transcribed the melody of verse that will reverberate through the spaces of all time. Ambition led him to the attainment of rhetorical verse, humility aided him in his preference for the lowly, but the true, warm heart unsullied by the world's praise, led this most prolific age, out of its commonplace incongruity into the unrestrained freedom of thought. Vergil, was for a while under the Augustan eye, but his large mind was under constraining efforts to escape the small proportions under which it was cramped. He longed for the expanse of Nature's broad fields, its grandeur of woods, its immensity of sky and sea, and he gave the world in return the ethical force of the "divine afflatus" as it had yet never dreamed. He probably reached the zenith of fame when the "Eclogues" came out, then followed the "Georgics" (the Four Books). But he had yet to give birth to the grandest conception of his mind, and in the epic, the "Aeneid," he surmounted all the altitudes to which fame had led him. And now as his labors of love and mercy are moving back with the receding years into the mystery of the past, and the events of the world come and go in unceasing tread we feel with Omar Kayhan that

"We are no other than a moving row
Of magic shadow shapes that come and go."

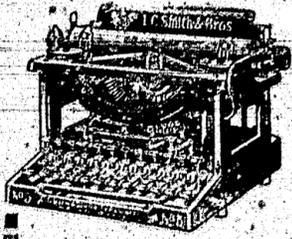

—By JICARILLA.

When They Fired Bryan

Early last spring a town in Missouri, full of the champions of culture, and Champ Clark, engaged William Jennings Bryan to deliver a lecture under the bigest tree within the corporation limits. Then came the Balfour convention at which Bryan and Clark he could force the

Sensible and Complimentary

THE Colfax County Stockman, published at Springer, and one of the oldest and strongest weeklies in the state, has a short paragraph concerning our county seat fight, in which it makes some sound suggestions and incidentally gives Lincoln county an excellent boost. The paragraph reads:

"The county seat war in Lincoln county which has waged in the courts and the opinions of the people of that county for several years has been settled by the supreme court ruling favorably for Carrizozo. Lincoln loses the fight, and now the people of that good county should all get together on all things and look to the development of its resources, forgetting the differences of the few years past. Lincoln is a rich county in many respects, but her fierce fight over the location of the county seat has injured her and the people of the county have nothing to gain in keeping up turmoil and contention that has so long existed."

The Best Cough Medicine
