President's Currency Message

P

RESIDENT WILSON delivered a special message to congress Monday, on the currency question, reading his message to both houses of congress assembled in joint session in the House of Representatives. The message was an urgent appeal to both houses and to all members of whatever political faith to immediately enact a law on the subject. All parties agree that currency legislation is a crying need, and has been urged for a number of years by both democrats and republicans, yet no definite agreement has ever been reached. As the matter is a most serious public question, we present the message in full, feeling that the clear, succinct and earnest manner the president has dealt with the subject is sufficiently convincing to preclude the necessity of comment. The message reads:

"It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the session lengthens and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps in the case of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequences that we know we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice. We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

"We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Never since the Civil War have they waited for this emancipation and for the opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue. There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise freshly conceived.

"It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it can not be unless the resourceful business men are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

"It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual and its origination brains. What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quiet? One kind of monopoly we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of act upon the knowledge? Do we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it? If a man can not make his assets available at pleasure, his asset of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

"The only question is, when shall we supply it--now or later? After the democrats shall have become reproached with a weak and slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff and then be laggards in making possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the changes? There is no question as to that. We must act now. It is a duty which we owe to ourselves, to our country, and to the public obligation of public obligation.

Colonel A. H. Hilton, of San Antonio, stands sponsor for the foregoing. No man in New Mexico is better acquainted with mountain, plain and stream than is the Colonel and certainly no country contains a more enthusiastic booster. Yesterday morning, in our office, Colonel Hilton exhibited a map, upon which was indicated every point of interest. The "Loop," as shown by the map, but much more interesting was the Colonel's graphic manner of description, encircling one of the most delightful and picturesque views on the American continent.

Now, our local interest in this scenic route advocated by Colonel Hilton--and which is almost completed--lies in the fact that Carrizozo and Lincoln County furnish the connecting link between the Pecos Valley and the Rio Grande Valley--the two biggest irrigated districts in New Mexico. The only link now missing is between Carrizozo and San Antonio--a distance of about 80 miles--and the state has already authorized the construction of that link as one of the state highways. San Antonio may now be reached by going around the north end of the Mal Pais, but that route is not only farther, according to Colonel Hilton, but lacks much of the scenery and verdure that is to be found by crossing the Mal Pais at the Lower Willows and going by way of Mocking Bird Gap. Besides the upper route contains much more sand. The completion of this road will place San Antonio within five hours ride of Carrizozo, and when San Antonio is reached the tourist-traveler will encounter the Camino Real, the great north and south highway of the state, and he may go north toward Albuquerque--thence west to the coast--or south to El Paso and travel the borderland route; or, if he hasn't too had a case of the California fever, he may traverse the route of which Colonel Hilton speaks so eloquently, and which he calls the most picturesque scenery in America. We are unable, however, to compete with our old friend--either in a descriptive sense or in a historical knowledge of the subject, and we gladly lay aside our pencil and quote again from the Colonel as follows:

"Veredas De Cazadores," meaning Trails of the Trappers, is the name which Col. A. H. Hilton of San Antonio, Socorro county, has given what is believed to be the most unique as well as most magnificent scenic highway in the country, laid out by him and accurately logged. Five hundred miles above the clouds, all the way, the highway runs for, according to Col. Hilton, at no point does the elevation drop below 5,000 feet, while it mounts to nearly 8,000 feet. Two hundred of the five hundred miles of the road are level, 200 miles are down hill, while the remaining stretches are hilly or rough places. However, work has been commenced to place in passable condition all those stretches now in need of attention and Colonel Hilton predicts that by July 1 the road will be ready for automobile tourists, furnishing the finest 500-mile trip to be had on the North American continent.

Colonel Hilton has been traveling over this road for twenty-five years. He has made the trip horseback, in a wagon, a buckboard and finally in an automobile. He declares that it will prove a wonderful boon to residents of the towns which it touches, since most of these are far removed from rail communication. Thus it will furnish an outlet by automobile and motor truck which will be just as good as a railroad.

Perhaps the most magnificent scenic attraction on the entire route is the famous Cooney canyon four miles in length. It is a replica of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. Here may be seen the Monk's head, the Needle's eye and the tomb of Sergeant Cooney, after whom the canyon is named. This tomb is marvelous to behold. It is blasted out of solid granite at the side of the canyon and behind its cemented exterior lie the bodies of Sergeant Cooney and his two children, ruthlessly slain by Chief Victorio and his bloodthirsty Apaches in 1880. The miners of the Cooney district built the tomb and laid the bodies to rest, and on the exterior facing they inscribed the names of the victims and the history of how they met their death.

The highway traverses Sierra Socorro and Grand Canyon National Park, two towns and hills.

The Carrizozo-Tularosa Valley

T

HE immense basin, extending from the Gran Quivira ruins on the north to Tularosa on the south, almost 100 miles in length and having a width varying from 15 to 25 miles, is made the subject of a geological report by the government. The report deals with the water and soil, giving detailed information concerning each, and carries with it some valuable suggestions to those interested in the development of this valley. Herewith is presented the full report:

During the last two years the United States Geological Survey and the New Mexico Agricultural Experiment Station have been engaged in making a map and studying the underground waters of the large desert basin in south-central New Mexico known as the Tularosa Valley, through which the main line of the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad now passes. At the north end of this basin, at present far from any adequate water supply, are the ruins of Gran Quivira, where a large community of Pueblo Indians lived until 1672, when they were probably driven away by Apaches. Further south are three volcanic cones, from the youngest of which a ribbon of black lava extends 43 miles down the valley. Still farther south is a plain of drifting gypsum sand, 270 square miles in extent, which resembles a great field of snow banks. Ever since the Mexicans with ox carts made their precarious expeditions into this strange region to obtain supplies of salt, travelers have gazed at the panorama that it affords and wondered how it could be put to greater use.

The recent investigations by the Government and the State will for the first time provide an adequate map of this region and give specific data as to the location and quality of desert water supplies and the availability of underground water for irrigation. According to this survey the water table (the upper surface of the strata that are saturated with water) is within 25 feet of the surface in an area of 375,000 acres, within 50 feet in about 800,000 acres, and within 100 feet in about 1,150,000 acres. The soil of large parts of the shallow-water tracts is unsuitable for agriculture, but some parts contain loam soil that yields well when it is irrigated. In fully 100,000 acres the water table is so near the surface that underground water is escaping into the atmosphere through evaporation.

The two most serious obstacles to irrigation with underground water in this valley are the comparatively small yields of wells, and the salty character of the water. Both of these difficulties have been carefully investigated. Although it is easy to drill or bore into the valley fill it requires skill to finish wells in this material in such a manner as to develop the largest possible yields. Many of the failures in the past appear to have been due to improper methods of finishing. The water-bearing material is poorly assorted and consists largely of gravel with a sandy or clayey matrix that yields water but slowly. Every effort must be made to remove this matrix in order to develop around the well a bed of clean porous gravel that will transmit water freely.

The analyses show a great range in the amounts of salt and other mineral matter in the water. Some of the waters analyzed can safely be used for irrigation, others are too bad for any ordinary use, but the largest part are of intermediate character, containing undesirable amounts of salt and yet probably being of value for irrigation if they are skillfully used. The best general method will probably be to use the mineralized underground waters in connection with flood waters in the areas in which flood waters can occasionally be obtained. The underground waters can be applied sparingly when necessary and can be conserved by dry-farming methods of cultivation; the flood waters can be used whenever they are available and in as large quantities as possible in order to wash the accumulated salt out of the soil.

Because of the limitations in regard to both quantity and quality of the underground supply and because of the cost of pumping, it is doubtful whether heavy irrigation, such as is commonly practiced in the Rio Grande valley and other irrigation districts, will be feasible except very locally in the Tularosa Basin; but the sparing use of well water to supplement rainfall and flood waters contains more promise and should be given a thorough trial. That a small amount of well water properly applied in supplemental irrigation in connection with careful methods of farming will add greatly to the yield of certain crops has been shown in results obtained on experimental farms and on the farms of certain thrifty settlers in many parts of the Southwest. The underground supply has the great advantage of being available whenever it is needed. Of course the pumping plant should be kept in repair so that break-downs will not occur at critical times. In times of drought a plant should be operated day and night at its full capacity.

AMERICAN GIRLS WHO ARE NEAR FAMOUS THRONES

Many Prominent Philadelphia Women Have Married Into Noble Families in the Various Countries of Europe.

HAPPY MATCHES MADE

Majority of the Alliances Have Been Supremely Successful in Every Way.

Evidently Not All Foreign Noblemen Are Mere Fortune Hunters—Many Matrimonial Prizes Secured by the Fair Daughters of Uncle Sam.

Philadelphia—Dwelling amid mediaeval surroundings in stately castles, secluded in vast domains or in more modern and incidentally more comfortable palaces of various cities of Europe, is quite a large group of Philadelphia women who have become the wives of noblemen and who with characteristic adaptability have become active helpmates in their husbands' interests. Rare, indeed, have these alliances between women of this city and the men of titles from abroad proved unhappy, and in the main the noblemen who have bestowed their rank upon maids of this city have proved themselves worthy of the matrimonial prizes they have won.

Some Have Succeeded in Business. In not a few instances these maids have been in business quite after the American fashion, and have made successes of their various undertakings, maintaining their personal interest in them even after their coffers had been replenished by the dowries of their wives. They have done much to change the opinion prevalent in this country some years ago that foreign noblemen were merely fortune hunters and little else, and they have reversed the disparaging dictum that "men who marry their wives for love either beat them or run away from them."

The most notable instance of a young, beautiful and wealthy Philadelphia girl marrying a man of exalted title, but who before his marriage did not deem it beneath his dignity to work in a stock broker's office, was Miss Margaretta Drexel, who was wedded several years ago to the Viscount Maitland. It was a genuine love-match, and the ceremony, which took place in London, was one of the most important matrimonial events of that season, since, aside from the distinction of the bridegroom's family, the bride's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, are among the most popular Americans dwelling in the British metropolis. An exceedingly important alliance was made by Lady Maitland's cousin, Miss Anita Stewart, who is now the Princess de Braganza, her husband being a son of the pretender to the present non-existent throne of Portugal. Miss Stewart's mother is a sister of Mrs. Drexel and the widow of James Henry Smith, the multi-millionaire, who died in Japan shortly after his marriage. The wedding of Miss Stewart and the prince took place in Scotland, and there was much discussion at the time as to the propriety of the bridegroom's attendants wearing the national Caledonian costume, with the plaid of the Stewart clan. There was also some nonsensical but romantic talk to the effect that the Smith millions would be used to finance a revolution which would have as its purpose the placing of the prince upon Portugal's throne, thus providing Europe with her first American queen.

About seven years ago there was a nuptial at St. Patrick's church, in Twenty-first street, and this was of so quiet and unostentatious a nature that many parishioners who had merely dropped into the church to offer up a nuptial prayer were unaware that by the ceremony they were witnessing a Philadelphia girl was being made the Countess Borchgrave d'Altena. She was Miss Ruth Snyder, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Alexander Rully by her first marriage, and a niece of Charlemagne Tower, former ambassador to Germany.

Practical Noblemen. Miss Rully Rarney's marriage to Baron Friedrich von Hiller was also a comparatively quiet one. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Rarney and granddaughter of Jay Cooke, the Civil War financier. The young, good-looking and most capable baron was at the time engaged in business in Mexico, and in this he has continued since his marriage. He is essentially a sensible and practical man, who, down to his heart of hearts, really doesn't care what about titles. He is much more concerned in making a home for himself as a successful business man. They have a son after the family of his wife.

Another of the leaders in the group of titled American women now dwelling in Paris is the Viscountess Helen Henri de Billehour, who is a daughter of Charles W. Billehour of 11st and De Laury streets, and who takes an active part in Parisian society. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Harrison's daughter, Miss Mildred Harrison, is now the Countess von Helmstein, but she and the count have spent most of the time since their wedding in this country. Still another Philadelphia woman of title who prefers to live in this country is the Countess Balala, the former Mrs. John B. Steison. Her home, Mrs. on the Old York road, is built in the likeness of a French chateau, and is extraordinarily beautiful.

Some Other Noble Marriages. Madam Wasmuth's daughter, Miss Fernand Wasmuth, was wedded in Paris a few years ago to Arthur de Fournon, who will inherit a title from his father. Another Philadelphia woman, although not bearing a title, is married to an English lord whose position is a most important

COUNTESS DE BILLEHOUR. (Miss Kathryn Louise Billehour.)

Mrs. Jason Waters' daughter, Miss Ellen Nixon Water, now the Baroness Jacques de Moyronnet de San Marc, is the chaste and one of the beautiful homes of Paris, and by reason of her own charm and the distinction of her husband's family she has won a high place in exclusive Parisian society.

There are many who will recall the beautiful wedding in the Church of the Redeemer at Bryn Mawr, when the lovely Gertrude Herwind, daughter of the wealthy coal family, became the Baroness Becklin von Becklinen. This was an unusually important matrimonial event, for the baron's family is one of great prominence in the Kaiser's domain. The young nobleman at his wedding gave evidence of the much-discussed German "thoroughness," by replying to the clergyman's various questions in the marriage ritual in so loud and firm a voice as to be heard in all parts of the church, a circumstance which caused many to smile, since it afforded so marked a contrast to the usual tremulously whispered answers.

Two Sisters—Mary and Clara, of the famous and wealthy Roberts family, whose classic-looking home at Nineteenth and Walnut streets is such a joy to those who love the simplicity of the antique, married noblemen of much distinction. The former is the Marquise d'Eschens de Frenoy, now living in Paris, while the latter, who died last September, was the Countess Gedeone Gall, an Italian, whom she met while he was consul to this city.

Miss Myra Dick is another Philadelphia girl who chose a Frenchman of title for a husband, and now as the Marquise de Brevaliers d'Alaincourt she occupies a high place in the social life of her adopted country. Then there are the Baroness von Friesen, who was formerly Miss Florence Smith, and the Countess Georges Gineux de Fernon, who was George Cochran's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Cochran.

The Count and Countess Tracott von Bethusy Huc live in mediaeval style near Breslau, Germany, and it will be recalled that their wedding ceremony was carried out with an elaborate regard for ancient family traditions. The countess was a Miss Reddell of this city.

Another of the leaders in the group of titled American women now dwelling in Paris is the Viscountess Helen Henri de Billehour, who is a daughter of Charles W. Billehour of 11st and De Laury streets, and who takes an active part in Parisian society. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Harrison's daughter, Miss Mildred Harrison, is now the Countess von Helmstein, but she and the count have spent most of the time since their wedding in this country. BASK IN FORTUNE'S SMILES

Sailors From New Zealand Port Are Reported to Have Made Rare Find of Ambergris.

In the old days, when the sturdy men of New Bedford and Nantucket put out to sea in chase of the mighty whale, they used to dream of finding ambergris. A streak of fortune which carried a lump of this stuff across the bows of an old square-rigger might make a small fortune for all hands, even to the lowest one in a hundred laymen stowed away in the forecabin. But the streak of fortune seldom came.

However, the sperm whale continues to give us this concreted and the navigators of the far-off waters sometimes find it. The whaler Norvegia comes hooting into Christchurch, New Zealand, jubilant in the possession of ambergris to the amount of half a ton—at least the cables to the newspapers say it's half a ton. Inasmuch as ambergris has seldom been discovered in quantities exceeding 100 pounds, the accuracy of the scales may perhaps be doubted.

And here's another thing. The same dispatches place the value of the ambergris at $300,000. That is a lot of money for a crew of hard-bitten whalers, yet perhaps it would not be grudged them by a world always ready to applaud good fortune. But ambergris is usually quoted at 45 the ounce. What has caused this tremendous advance? A decline would seem more probable because the discovery of such a quantity might easily overstock the market.

It's a good yarn of deep-sea treasure. Don't let's scoff at it. It seems fairly sort of a contribution to the men of the Norvegia, and that the men of the Norvegia are joyful thereat. And my lady's next bottle of aspirator perfume from Paris may contain, under the name of some number blossom, its share of the treasure which had its origin in the bleak and arctic.—Harvard Times.

Woman Hat Catcher. One of the earliest of official hat catchers appears to have been a woman. An English warrant dated 1871 announced that "whosoever, Elizabeth Winkley is employed in killing of rats and other vermin, in and about His Majesty's Stores and Houses in the Tower of London, I have therefore thought fit to allow her the sum of eight ($40) pounds per annum." During the next century the office was inherited with great dignity, and the "Duchess's Magistrate" for 1741 recorded the appointment of Mr. Gower as hat catcher to his majesty. "A piece of $100,000 a year, an honorable office."

HANDFUL OF NEW Dainties

Ideas That May Be Carried Out When over a Particular "Spread" is to Be Served.

A new sandwich to serve with afternoon tea is two slices of hot, crisp toast, dipped on one side in melted butter and filled with iced raw oysters, sprinkled with lemon.

A variation of this filling is to stew the oysters until they curl slightly, remove the oysters, chop rather coarsely with a silver knife, and mix with mayonnaise.

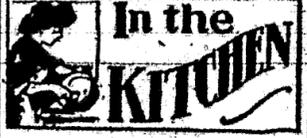

Another good toast mixture has the toast prepared in the same way and filled with finely scrambled egg, sprinkled with finely chopped, crisp bacon. Both of these sandwiches must be eaten immediately or they are not good.

Instead of serving lemon with tea, have on the tray a jar of grapefruit marmalade—in a silver holder or crystal jar if you have an eye and pocketbook for effect. Put a teaspoonful of the marmalade into the tea instead of the usual slice of lemon. Queer, but good.

Orange marmalade is used in the same way; so is preserved ginger and branded fruit. The latter must be chopped into quite small pieces if the fruit is whole.

The Russian uses preserves of all kinds in their tea, but the marmalades and preserves that have a slightly acid or pungent tang are less cloying.

A sweet toast is made by cutting small squares or oblongs of toast. This is dipped into a mixture made from a pint of hot milk, into which has been stirred the grated rind of a lemon and four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Flavor with a dash of brandy. Dip the soaked toast in beaten egg and fry quickly in hot butter, or bake on a well-greased griddle. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve immediately.

In the KITCHEN

Homemade cakes will be nicer if the flour is put in last.

Whole peppers are better for seasoning soups and sauces than ground pepper.

A teaspoonful of vinegar put into home made candy keeps it from being sickly sweet.

Faded plush may be brightened by brushing it lightly with a clean sponge dipped in chloroform.

Chopped preserved ginger added to the sauce served with cottage pudding is a delicious accompaniment.

Corks may be kept in bottles when traveling by sticking them in with adhesive plaster such as surgeons use.

Gold-edged glassware should not be washed in strong soapuds. The soap will in time make inroads upon the gilt.

When cooking tomatoes to strain and use for tomato jelly, the flavor will be improved by a bay leaf and a piece of mace added.

A small quantity of carbolic acid added to paste, mucilage and ink will prevent mold. An ounce of the acid to a gallon of white wash will keep cellars and dairies from the disagreeable odor which often taints milk and meat kept in such places.

Spider Johnny Cake. One and two-thirds cups cornmeal, one-half cup flour, one-fourth cup sugar, one teaspoon salt. Mix together and add two eggs which have been beaten together with one cup of sour milk and one of sweet, in which one teaspoon of soda has been dissolved. Stir thoroughly. Put one tablespoon of butter into a hot spider. When melted, pour in the batter and place the spider on the lower shelf of the oven. Pour over the batter another cupful of sweet milk without stirring. Bake from twenty minutes to half an hour.

Cocoanut Buns. One pint flour, one-half cup shortening, one-half cupful sugar, one teaspoonful baking powder, one egg, one-half cupful finely chopped cocoanut, one-quarter teaspoonful salt; milk to make a stiff batter. Rub the shortening finely into the flour, add the baking powder, salt, sugar, cocoanut, the egg well beaten and the milk. Place in small pieces on a greased baking tin, brush over with milk, sprinkle with chopped cocoanut and bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes.

Macaroni and Peach Cream. Boak two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatine in one-half cup of water. Make a custard of one pint of milk, yolks of two eggs, three tablespoonfuls sugar, a speck of salt. Add gelatine and strain. Set in ice water and stir until it thickens. Add whites of two eggs beaten stiff, also macaroni broken into pieces, one teaspoon vanilla. Line a mold with peach, turn in mixture, chill and serve with plain or whipped cream.

Tomato Soup. One quart sea of tomatoes, one pint of hot water. Let come to a boil. Melt one tablespoon of butter, blend with five teaspoonfuls of flour, stir into boiling mixture and add seasoning. Boil for fifteen minutes and strain.

Flourishing Arrangement. An excellent way to finish a centerpiece in a large dinner is to use the flowers in by themselves; then but touch them around the edges with white or cream colored or soft blue.

Many Biblical scholars place the Garden of Eden between the Euphrates and the Tigris. This is now to be reclaimed and once again made fertile. English engineers have already invaded the region, and are building a great dam across the Euphrates, not far from Baghdad by which water will be carried over the land as is done in Egypt and India. That the soil is exceedingly rich there is no denying.

Every family without exception should keep this preparation at hand during the hot weather of the summer months. Squaring a Triangle

CAN you square a triangle? It's easy when you know how, but do you know how?

For instance, here is a triangle: The base is the shipment of oranges and lemons from Italy to other European countries and the desire for lower tariff to enable them to be shipped more freely to America.

The altitude of the triangle is the claim of American growers that lower tariff would destroy the American citrus fruit industry, as Americans cannot compete with Italian cheap labor.

The hypotenuse of the triangle is an agitation begun by California citrus fruit growers to special vessels to carry their fruit to Europe to sell there in free trade countries in competition with Italian fruits.

Now, sonny, just for the fun of it, sit down and square that triangle.

THE foundation of knowledge must be laid by reading. General principles must be had from books, which, however, must be brought to the test of real life. In conversation you never get a system. What is said upon a subject is to be gathered from a hundred people. The parts which a man gets thus are at such a distance from each other that he never attains to a full view.—Sam'l Johnson.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers.

Forest Fires

THE Supervisor of the Lincoln National Forest, Jas. H. Kinney, has furnished THE NEWS with the following article on "Forest Fires," which shows the care the government is giving the question and the splendid results that have been obtained: From the latter part of April to the 25th of July is usually the driest season and for lack of a better term the Forest Service has designated this period as the "Fire Season." From the beginning of the fire season there have been but six small fires on the Lincoln National Forest, covering a total area of 28 acres, and costing, exclusive of the Forest officers' time, less than $11.00 for extinguishing. Practically no merchantable timber was destroyed.

These fires all occurred in, or adjacent to, heavily timbered areas and would undoubtedly have been quite serious had they not been promptly suppressed.

Since the commencement of the fire season the Forest Service has placed seven fire guards, in addition to the regular District Rangers, at most dangerous points in the forest. These men daily patrol high ridges and visit prominent peaks and keep a sharp outlook for fires, and to them and the District Rangers, together with the hearty cooperation of the settlers, is due the so far excellent fire record.

Death in a Strange Manner

FROM Rev. Herbert Haywood, the Baptist minister, who conducted the funeral service yesterday over the remains of Theodore Meitelle, we secured the following circumstances surrounding the strange manner in which the latter met his death.

Mr. Meitelle was loading a wagon with hay at his home southeast of town Tuesday evening, about 6 o'clock. His wife, it appears, became uneasy at her husband's prolonged absence and went to the hay yard to investigate, and there found the body of her husband hanging by the side of the wagon, a hay hook having penetrated his breast. Mrs. Meitelle succeeded in lifting the body to the ground and did all in her power to restore life, but her efforts were vain.

She then hurried to her nearest neighbor, Mr. Geo. W. Hughes, related the circumstance to him and he hastened to the scene. Finding his efforts unavailing, Mr. Hughes hastened to town and had Dr. Walker there in a very short time. Death, however, had claimed his toll, and the doctor could render no assistance. The supposition is that Mr. Meitelle either suffered a heart attack and fell, or slipped and fell, and received a stroke that rendered him unconscious and was caught on the hay hook and suspended, lifeless, between heaven and earth.

The remains were interred yesterday afternoon in the local cemetery, Rev. Herbert Haywood conducting the funeral service. The sorrowing widow has the deepest sympathy of many friends.

Enjoyed Socorro Trip

IT was a jolly crew that Chaufeur Smith drove to Socorro last week, returning Saturday. Primarily the trip was made by Deputy Roberts to bring back Felipe Chavez, who was wanted in this county for horse stealing. This was done and Chavez is now in jail at Lincoln, awaiting the action of the next grand jury. John Gallacher, the complaining witness, went along to identify the prisoner, and Joe R. Adams and Horace French made the trip to see the country, view the road and to fill the auto. The trip was made via the head of the Malpais, Guy Hill's ranch, Carthage and San Antonio.

The road traversed was the old stage road between San Antonio and White Oaks, long since abandoned for that purpose and only occasionally now used; but despite that fact, they found the road in fair condition, the main difficulty being encountered at the Carthage coal camp, where one road is dove-tailed into another—or, at least, this auto bunch so reports it—and the circuit of the camp was made several times before a road was discovered that led them to the banks of the Rio Bravo and the bridge leading to San Antonio.

Arriving at Socorro, the autoists were royally entertained by the big-hearted people of the Gem City, and a trip was made to Magdalena over one of the finest roads in the state—a road running through a beautiful mountain country and so well constructed that autos have no difficulty in making the distance in a shorter time than does the Santa Fe train which has a branch line to that point.

Our boys were further enthused over good roads by meeting and talking to Colonel A. H. Hilton, one of the earliest inhabitants of the Rio Grande Valley, and the prince of road boosters. The Colonel injected a good dose of good roads high life into their system and they have been good roads enthusiasts since their return. The cordial reception given them and the systematic road work they witnessed make them declare Socorro county a progressive community, full of royal good fellows.

did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence. "The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly now than it ever saw it before—much more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of every day transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings. Our banking laws must mobilize reserves, must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses. And the control of the system of banking and issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

The committee of congress to which legislation of this character are referred have devoted careful and dispassionate study to the means of accomplishing these objects. They have honored me by consulting me. They are ready to suggest action. I have come to you, as the head of the government and the responsible leader of the party in power, to urge action now while there is time to serve the country deliberately and as we should, in a clear air of common counsel. I appeal to you with a deep conviction of duty. I believe that you share this conviction. I therefore appeal to you with confidence, I am at your service without reserve to play my part in any way you may call upon me to play it in this great enterprise of extending reform which it will dignify and strengthen us to perform and discredit us to neglect.

NEWS and GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON

Apollo Is Dead Again; Overzeal Was the Cause

WASHINGTON—Apollo is dead again. And buried. His funeral obsequies were in classic keeping with his standing as the handsomest god in the mythological output—though, incidentally, it was his standing that caused his downfall, and he now lies under the campus grass of a gray stone college on Brooklyn way, with spring blossoms on his grave.

A tragedy, filtered through hearsay channels, is apt to be diluted in its facts, and watered as to poignant details, but even the weakened flavor of the incident is worthy a sip, because Apollo is always interesting—say nothing of pretty girls.

The students gave a Latin play at the college a little while ago, and a statue of Apollo, on a pedestal, gleamed white and classic in one corner of the dramatic atmosphere. Apparently, he was as safe from harm as his original in the belvedere of the Vatican museum, but you never can tell! Most anything is liable to happen in the danger zone of an amateur play.

Worn-Out Flags Destroyed by the Government

WORN-OUT national flags used by the United States government in the army and navy, on public buildings, etc., never become mere pieces of waste rag. The government sets an example for the whole country by requiring that worn-out flags shall be burned. Whether or not any special regulation covers the disposition of old flags, the universal practice of the army and navy whenever a flag is no longer fit for service is that it shall be destroyed.

When a flag used at an army post or on a naval vessel is no longer serviceable, requisition of the quartermaster is made for a new one and the old one is burned. The same disposition is made of flags from public buildings. Whether or not custodians of buildings outside of Washington follow the official plan of destroying flags is not known.

Two "Bill" Murrays, Each With the "Hon." Prefix

HERE are two William Murrays in the house of Representatives, and each one is known among familiar as "Bill" Murray.

One is "Alfalfa Bill" Murray of Oklahoma, and the other is "Boston Bill" Murray from the Hub. Each one is famous.

How Townsend Interviewed Wm. K. Vanderbilt

REPRESENTATIVE TOWNSEND of Michigan, author of "Chambers' Fables," served his apprenticeship on a New York newspaper. Mr. Townsend says that it was hearing a service's "Aw, wat vell?" that gave him the inspiration for "Chambers' Fables."

"The city editor called me and told me to go to William K. Vanderbilt's house and get an interview. With a gulp in my throat I listened as he rasped out the questions I was to ask the New York millionaire.

UNIQUE CASE OF FILIAL LOVE

To Help His Mother a Penniless Nobleman "Tries" a Clown Act in Paris Theater.

Visitors to Paris who have recently wandered by chance into one of the "cave concerts," which are mostly frequented by that class who neither toil nor spin, must have been amazed and saddened by a very unusual music hall turn, writes the Paris correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle.

He sings, or tries to sing, a sentimental ballad and a comic song. He also imitates animals, the noises of tools and the whistling of locomotives. The effect is so deplorable that the audience recently insisted on the "noble clown" apologizing for his lack of skill. He humbly advanced to the footlights and bowed to right, left and before him. Then in a voice choked with sobs, he began to express his regret. With pathetic resignation he went down on his knees, offered profuse apologies for his lack of skill and promised to do his best to please them in the future.

Few who have seen this lamentable exhibition know its origin and excuse. This subject burlesqued is inspired by one of the noblest motives—filial love. This descendant of one of the oldest and noblest families in Venice was left alone, when very young, for his infirm and penniless mother. For many years they lived on the charity of friends, but the old woman is now in such health that admission into an almshouse would be the only means of saving her life. But this cannot be obtained without the payment of a certain sum, and her son is now employing the only means of procuring it open to him.

RASH WAS MASS OF SPOTS

St. Washington St., Salt Lake City, Utah—"I was first alarmed by an itchy feeling all over my arms and a rash of tiny spots came out. The rash was a mass of spots like measles and developed into running sores. The itching was terrible and I would scratch something awful. I tried a treatment but it availed not. I then decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application the itching stopped wonderfully. The cure which followed was a marvel to me for I thought I never would get better. This was three years ago and I have as clear a skin as any one may wish. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me entirely." (Signed) Miss Kate M. Dobson, Mar. 18, 1912.

Conquest of Disease

The wonderful achievements wrought by bacilli cultures and the preparation of preventive serums placed modern physicians in a position surpassing that of the ancient magi or medieval alchemists and render their services to mankind more striking than the proudest exploits of Alexander or Cyrus. In the campaign against virulent diseases the quiet microscopist in his study, be he a Pasteur, Flexner or Carré, is unconsciously warring with armies the military tents of which outnumber the military tents of a Caesar or a Charlemagne.

Some of us hand out advice only when we have an ax to grind.

IN GIRLHOOD OR WOMANHOOD

The women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will tell you that it freed them from pain—helped them over painful periods in their life—and saved them many a day of anguish and misery. This tonic, in liquid form, was devised over 40 years ago for the womanly system, by R. V. Pierce, M. D., and has been sold ever since by dealers in medicine to the benefit of many thousand women.

After Long Suffering

Women Are Constantly Being Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Worth mountains of gold," says one woman. Another says, "I would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all the other medicines for women in the world." Still another writes, "I should like to have the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound thrown on the sky with a searchlight so that all suffering women could read and be convinced that there is a remedy for their ills."

We could fill a newspaper ten times the size of this with such quotations taken from the letters we have received from grateful women whose health has been restored and suffering banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound accomplished such a universal success? Why has it lived and thrived and kept on doing its glorious work among the sick women of the world for more than 30 years?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has ever approached its success is plainly and simply because there is no other medicine so good for women's ills.

Here are two letters that just came to the writer's desk—only two of thousands, but both tell a comforting story to every suffering woman who will read them—and be guided by them.

FROM MRS. D. E. BROWN.

Iola, Kansas—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken 12 bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others." Mrs. D. E. Brown, 909 North Walnut Street, Iola, Kan.

MRS. WILLIAMS SAYS:

Eikhart, Ind.—"I suffered for 16 years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 435 James Street, Eikhart, Indiana.

Los Cerrillos Coal Output

FROM the government geological press bulletin we take the following interesting coal statistics:

New Mexico is now accounted one of the important coal-producing States of the West, much of her output being 'distinctly' of high grade. In the Raton field, which furnished about 75 per cent of the production in 1912, the coal is a true coking coal and most of the operations are conducted on an extensive scale. In 1912 there were 11 mines that produced each over 100,000 tons, and two of these produced over 400,000 tons. Nearly 840,000 tons of coal was made into coke.

In point of area the San Juan River field, in the northwestern part of the State, is the most important. It has in New Mexico an area of about 13,000 square miles and contains both subbituminous and bituminous coal. In McKinley County in the San Juan River field three mines produce over 100,000 tons each, and one of them over 200,000 tons.

The Los Cerrillos field and the White Oaks field are relatively small in area but contain true bituminous coal. In the former some of the coal has been locally altered into anthracite, of which 32,411 tons was mined in 1912.

The output of coal in New Mexico in 1912 was the largest ever made, the production increasing from 3,148,158 short tons in 1911, valued at $4,525,925, to 3,536,824 tons in 1912, valued at $5,037,051, a gain of 12.3 per cent in quantity and of 11.3 per cent in value.

The first record of coal production in New Mexico was published in 1882, when the production amounted to 187,092 tons, about 4 per cent of the annual output at the present time.
