

Democracy In The Ascendency

DON'T forget, you rejoicing republicans and weak-kneed democrats, the election last week was a distinct endorsement of the Wilson administration, and, therefore, of the policies of the democratic party. Scarcely a state, democratic under normal conditions was won by the republicans, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois merely returned to the republican party, and the latter was so close on national issues—electing one democratic congressman-at-large and all but defeating the republican candidate for United States senator—that such a victory furnishes very little ground for exultation.

The lower house remains democratic, the majority running 32 to 35 over all. The United States senate, which has now become a popular body, not only remains democratic, but the majority has been increased. Not a democratic senator, asking for re-election, was defeated, unless it is Senator Newlands of Nevada, and reports indicate he was leading his republican opponent. California and South Dakota each send a democrat to replace a republican, and the election in both Utah and Wisconsin is so close that it will require the official count to determine the result.

If the result of last week's election is to be the basis for calculation for the 1916 election, the democrats have little to fear. The progressives, outside of California, have practically disappeared, and the only haven for the real progressive is in the democratic party. Therefore, the democracy of the nation faced a united republican party on the 3d, and in a square, stand-up fight, based on the results of the accomplishments of the Wilson administration, won a decided victory.

On national issues, involving the election of a United States senator, the democrats won in several states, notwithstanding the republicans won the governorship and other state offices. This is true of California, Oregon, South Dakota, and apparently, true of Nevada and Utah. But allotting to the republicans the states wherein they elected governors and giving the democrats the same advantage; for conditions are reversed in some states, we have the following as a result from which estimates for 1916 may be made:

Chicago Stockyards Quarantined

Washington, Nov. 8.—An order quarantining the state of Rhode Island against interstate shipments of livestock was prepared tonight by the department of agriculture for issuance tomorrow. Cases of the mouth and foot disease were reported during the day from the vicinity of Johnson and Washington.

Rhode Island will make the eleventh state to be placed under federal quarantine in the campaign to suppress the epidemic, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Maryland, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa composing the already wide area affected by the disease.

Secretary of the Department of Agriculture Houston tonight said this epidemic was "one of the most contagious and destructive diseases of cattle, swine and sheep exceeding in area affected any of the five previous outbreaks in this country." Unless the infection can be immediately localized and quickly eradicated, he said, it threatens untold losses among livestock.

The secretary authorized the issuance of the following official statement:

"So contagious is the disease that in past outbreaks where but one animal in a herd was infected the entire herd in almost all cases later contracted the sickness. While the mortality is not high, the effects of the disease even on animals that recover are such as to make them practically useless. It is possible to cure the external symptoms, but during the process of attempting to cure one sick animal the chances are that hundreds of others may be infected."

Veterinary authorities of the United States are agreed that the only method of combating the disease is to stop all movement of stock and material which have been subjected to any danger of infection, and to kill off without delay all herds in which the disease has gained any foothold. "At present the chief danger lies in the possibility of there being concealed sources of infection. Every effort is being made by state and federal authorities not only to trace suspicious shipments but to convince farmers of the seriousness of the disease and the extreme ease with which it is communicated, and to urge upon them to report at once to state or federal authorities all suspicious cases of sore mouths or lameness."

Back from Mogollons

The hunters who left for the Mogollons on the first, going by automobile, returned Tuesday night. They were H. S. Campbell, son of Carlton, S. L. Squier and J. B. Baird. The others of the same party, who went by wagon, are not expected in until today or possibly tomorrow. They are Frank Gray, two sons, Jack McSmith, W. C. Pittman, W. M. Ferguson and S. G. Anderson. The party was fairly successful, having killed four deer and some other small game.

Killed In Coal Mine

Filadelfia Chavez, a young man about 30 years of age, was killed in a coal mine at White Oaks Tuesday morning. A falling slab struck him as he was at work. T. E. Kelley went up from here, embalmed the body, which was shipped to Willard for interment. In response to a wire, the father came and accompanied the remains home.

ocratic column. And then there is California. It appears to belong to everything and everybody, but the republicans. The progressives won the governorship, the democrats the United States senator and the G. O. P. was not known. It would be a violent assumption most assuredly to claim California for the republicans. The democrats may not get it, the republicans certainly won't and we are constrained to let our figures stand—a plurality in the electoral college in 1916 for the democrats of 52.

Great Demand for Lambs

Our sheepmen have disposed of their lambs at fancy prices, and the demand is made for more at still better prices. They have been unable to understand why buyers have offered such fancy prices for their culls, even; for they can't figure where the buyer has an out. Those who sold early received five cents per pound on board cars here; later sellers received 5 1-4 cents and right recently some of our sheepmen have been offered 5.55 for their culls. The great demand may be partially explained by the following from the Albuquerque Herald:

"Six buyers of lambs for Colorado feed lots, from Fort Collins and Lamar, Colorado, arrived in Albuquerque last night, swelling the flock of late lamb buyers who have swooped down on New Mexico during the past few days. The closing of the lamb selling season promises to be the most active in recent years, with prices generally ruling stronger."

"A number of conditions," said a well known Colorado buyer this morning, "have united to give a sudden spurt to the demand for New Mexico lambs this fall. In the summer it looked as if very little feeding would be done in Colorado this winter. But as the weeks have passed, the demand has grown until it now looks as if more New Mexico lambs would be fed up north this year than has ever been the case before. High prices for beef, and the probability of higher prices, the war and an easing up of money conditions have united to cheer up the sheep feeding industry to a marked degree. There will be nothing left in New Mexico that is worth having and that can be had at any kind of a price, two weeks from now."

Leggett Dwelling Burns

About 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, the dwelling of W. B. Leggett, located on Highland addition, was discovered to be in flames. The fire had gained such headway before it was discovered that practically none of the contents were saved.

Mr. Leggett was absent that night on his run to Duran, and Mrs. Leggett and children were asleep in the front room of the building. The occupants were awakened by the heat or noise, but even then the kitchen, at which point the fire originated, had fallen into the cellar. When the alarm was given and relief arrived all that could be done was to get out a few chairs and light articles and stand by and see the building and its contents consumed.

The building was an adobe, with a side room or sleeping porch, and it and contents were valued at about $2,000, with an insurance of $1,200. Mr. Leggett expects to rebuild.

Europe Still Fighting

Little change has taken place in the European conflict the past week, except that the Germans appear to have made some advance west, as a result of some terrific fighting, but appear to have been put on the defensive in the east against the Russians. Turkey's entry in the conflict, however, has caused the Russians to sit up and take notice in the Caucasus mountains. In fact reports indicate that the Turk has come back with all his fighting qualities, and in the initial engagements has beaten the Russians.

The Special Edition

As has been announced we are making preparations for the issuing of a special illustrated edition of the News. The object of this special edition is to put before the outside world some of the natural resources of Lincoln County—to state the plain facts, and show by illustrations the advantages we have to offer the homeseeker and investor. In order that those whom we would attract may be more favorably impressed with what Lincoln county has to offer, it is necessary that at least a majority of the enterprises of the entire county be represented in this special edition. We expect to make this edition the biggest and best one of its kind ever gotten out in this whole section of the state, as this special edition will be sent to every family in the county as well as having an extensive foreign circulation. It will be of much interest and value to the towns and citizens of our county, and will also be of considerable pecuniary profit to our liberal advertisers as well. We have a representative in the field and he will call and explain the proposition to you.

Methodist Church

Rev. E. D. Lewis, Pastor.

As pastor of the Methodist Church I desire to make a few general remarks. I was very much gratified at the increased attendance at both the morning and evening services last Sunday. There are several vacant seats left and it is hoped that others will come to our next service, Nov. 22nd, and claim some of them.

It is with pleasure that we state that the two new organizations, the Junior Church and the Senior Epworth League, have begun with a zeal and interest that promises for them a very successful year's work. The Junior Church is for the boys and girls under sixteen years of age. The work done by this society is the same as the Senior Church, with a few modifications suitable to the needs of child life. The purpose of the organization is to train the children in the regular work of the Church, so that when they enter upon the duties of the Senior Church, they will not be strangers to them. Already about fifty boys and girls have joined the society, and an invitation is given to all others who are not already members of a similar organization to come and join the Junior Church.

The Senior League has begun auspiciously and under the leadership of Mr. R. T. Cribb promises to be a great force in the religious and social life of the church and community. We want the young men of the town to come and see what it is, and what it proposes to do, and we feel sure that they will want to cast their lot with the League.

Our Sunday school and prayer meetings are showing signs of power and growth. Our aim is to organize the church into a working force for the salvation of souls, and moral, social and spiritual uplift of the town and community. Let every member enlist and be at his or her post! If you are absent your place is vacant and the whole line is weakened. The call is to arms! Will you enlist?

Kelley To Build Residence

Edward R. Kelley, senior member of the Kelley Furniture firm, is preparing to build a residence on Almogordo Avenue, between 2nd and 3rd streets. The building will be a six room adobe, with all modern conveniences. The stone for the foundation is now on the ground, the contract for the adobes let and work will commence at once.

Mrs. Greer Ill

Mrs. Ira A. Greer was reported to be very ill at her home this week. The attack was very sudden and her condition was very alarming up to yesterday, at which time a slight change for the better was noticeable. Her many friends hope for her early recovery.

Wins in a Pope-Hartford

A Phoenix, Arizona, man, driving a Pope-Hartford machine, won the Sunday-Monday El Paso to Phoenix automobile race. The name of the winner is H. B. Miller and he made the 533 miles in 14 hours and 36 minutes. John Hutchins, of Alamogordo, driving a Buick, was second—52 minutes behind the winner.

There were 27 entrants, 18 of the number, however, having difficulties that put them out of the race. Among the list of unfortunates were the Johnson Bros., of this place, who, despite some trouble the first day, made a splendid showing, and additional trouble the following day caused them to abandon the race. The first prize amounts to $5,000, the second $1,500, while the remainder of a total of $7,500 was divided between the third and fourth cars.

Canvassing the Vote

The state canvassing board has been busy this week canvassing the New Mexico vote of November 3d. The work has been delayed because many precincts failed to make returns as required by law, and definite results will possibly not be reached until tomorrow.

The vote so far canvassed and a fair knowledge of what remains, indicate that Hernandez' majority over Ferguson for Congress may reach 4,000. The majority of Williams for corporation commissioner over his democratic competitor, A. P. Hill, will be about half of that given Hernandez. Two or three legislative districts are still in doubt, and no absolute figures are given as to the standing of the parties in the lower house. The best figures obtainable appear to give the republicans 27, democrats 20, progressives 1, socialist-republican 1.

All three amendments, contrary to early reports, appear to have been adopted by large majorities. One calls for the election of county officers every two years and one for the election of state officers every two years and the other abolished the state board of equalization, with what is to be substituted only the future can tell.

Otero County Juries Discharged

The entire jury panel, both grand and petit, for the fall term of court for Otero county, has been discharged by Judge Medler. It is alleged that of the entire list of three hundred names selected by the jury commission only one Mexican's name appeared in the box. The question was raised by an attorney, charge discrimination against about thirty percent of the population of the county, and to avoid entanglements that might arise in the higher courts, Judge Medler decided to discharge the juries as drawn, and at the same time ordered the commission to make a new list.

JULES, EGG BOY OF ASTOR HOUSE

Story of Remarkable Rise of Young Frenchman in New York City.

Developed Great Business of Importing Delicacies From Europe and Retired a Millionaire Several Times Over.

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

In the days when that squat, gray pile known as the Astor house, in lower New York city, was more famous than it is now, there came to it from over the sea a tall, bright-eyed youth with a letter to the chef. As the big, fat and usually good-natured chef read the letter he scowled. It was the same story. Every one in France who knew him, and some who did not, seemed bent on recommending people to him for work. He was over-run with applications.

"I can do nothing for you, promise nothing for you," he exclaimed excitedly. "Cook? Assistant cook? Hab! We have more in America than we need. We shall have all there are in France if this thing keeps up. Every steamer brings a lot, and such cooks! Most of them cannot cook an egg."

"I can cook an egg," said the boy. "Good!" said the chef. "You know what you say. To cook the egg in a gift. Any fool can make the omelet, stir or fry the egg, but to cook the egg exquisitely, so it ravishes the eye, stirs the appetite to health and desire, brings joy to the stomach and makes man feel like a god—that that is art!"

"I can cook an egg," the boy repeated.

The fat chef shrugged his shoulders. "There are 200 ways of cooking the egg," he declared. "No man can say truly he can cook the egg until he knows them all."

"I can cook an egg," said the boy for the third time.

The calm repetition of the statement was an irritation and a challenge to the chef.

"We shall see," he declared impulsively.

He took the youth to the kitchen and left him there for trial. That is how Jules became egg boy at the Astor.

Epicures Appreciated Jules.

There used to be a democracy about the old house that was delightful. Gay boys of finance, law and the trades gathered there to feast or to frolic. They had the tastes of epicures, but, sad to relate, ordinary or much abused digestive apparatuses. Soon after the arrival of Jules they discovered remarkable merit in omelets, stirred eggs and other things that came from his department. When the palate said "No" to other food it would appear grateful in its greeting of one of his delicacies.

"Tell Jules it is for me," would be the request of a railroad magnate, a judge, the head of a hardware concern. The egg boy seemed to learn the tastes and caprices of the regular patrons of the house with wonderful rapidity. Maybe it was not so much in catering to individual appetites as in the daintiness and delicacy, not only in the cooking, but in the serving of everything he prepared. He would not let a thing go from his hands unless it was perfect.

Jules had a peul above eggs. The chef discovered after a while that the youth knew as much about boiling, baking, grilling, frying, stewing and all the other ways of cooking meats, fish and fowl as he did about a soufflé that would appeal to the appetite in a way to make the worst dyspeptic believe there still was joy in living. He could make a soup that was nectar, and sauces as prepared by him put on a new dignity.

Henri, the chef, blessed the day the egg boy came to the Astor and never could be dissuaded from the belief that it was due to his own rare judgment that Jules was secured by the famous old hotel.

Did Not Work by Rule.

Jules worked by no rule. Why should he? Back in Alsace, for hundreds of years, his forebears had been cooks. He needed none of the latter-day aids to the lords and ladies of the kitchen. He scorned the oven thermometer. He knew when all was right. He loved to teach others, but somehow the others never could get the same results as Jules. He could take the simplest of foods and do wonders with them. He delighted in making stews, piebald though they are considered. They came to think in the Astor that stewing was an art unknown until Jules came to them. He was radical. The great secret in stewing, he always declared, was in cooking the meat in its own juices.

Next to achieving miracles with the stew, he did marvels in the way of braising, which is a combination of stewing and baking. One of the peculiarities of Jules was that he rarely worked with a very hot fire. He believed that cooking at a high temperature was not only wasteful of fuel, but not good for the meats. He thought it was better and more economical to cook longer and at a lower temperature. Above all things, he was scrupulously neat. Cleanliness is desirable to a superlative degree in the handling of the things we eat.

Jules was a treasure. Every one about the Astor appreciated that fact.

It was a sad, sad day, then, when he announced to Henri that he was going to leave. The chef almost had a fit. It was unthinkable that Jules should go. The kitchen would be desolate without him. Henri would be desolated. What would the long-time patrons of the hotel, who had come to lean upon Jules, say and do? Was it money? Was Jules not content?

No, it was not money, and every one was kind and good to Jules. But his art called him elsewhere. He never would be the real master, never would know supreme satisfaction until he was in command of every branch of his glorious profession. He was going to take a post-graduate course in the pastry line. Everything else of the kitchen he was supreme in. A few years would round him out as a finished artist.

Became a Pastry Artist.

Jules went to a famous pastry cook's establishment. He went to learn and he remained to teach. Within a month he was creating things in the pastry line that the great pastry cooks perhaps had dreamed of, but never had been able to produce. There were some great pastry artists in the kitchen. They were men of Paris, Bernese, Strasburg and Berlin. No city of the world produces greater and better cooks than Strasburg.

Jules came from Strasburg. There still was another branch of the culinary art for him to take the highest courses in. It was the shellfish. Just as a student sacrifices position and time, so he sacrificed his position again and went to Glen Island to work a few years in the cooking of crabs, oysters, clams and lobsters. Those were the golden days of the most beautiful island of Long Island sound.

Each year Jules broadened in view and broadened in knowledge. He was ambitious. He was frugal, as most Frenchmen are, but he longed to be wealthy. There is a good living in the kitchen, but not riches or ease. They did not pay cooks as much in the shippers. He lived above the store—that is the way they do in the old country—and he scrimped and saved and tried to be cheerful. His friends advised him to move to cheaper quarters, but Jules was obstinate.

There were horsecars in Thirty-fourth street in those days, but before Jules had been there two years they were supplanted by electric cars. Simultaneously Thirty-fourth street was transformed. Property values jumped amazingly. Jules sold out his house at a profit of $18,000 and moved to Forty-second street, close to Seventh avenue. With the $18,000 and the profits that were beginning to come from his business he was able to buy to greater advantage, to carry a bigger stock and generally push his trade.

He got the business of Dolmonico, of Sherry, of Martin, of every big restaurant in New York. Incidentally he began to assume a new importance. Great hotel men and great restaurant men who wanted to open new establishments and to obtain the best of cooks went to him for counsel. He went abroad occasionally to look over the men of Strasburg, Bernese, Zurich and Paris. When he called them to America they came.

Built a Great Warehouse.

One day Oscar Hammerstein came along and took a look at Jules' Forty-second street establishment. Mr. Hammerstein saw more than Jules' place. He saw a theater on its site. Jules sold the building at a price of $20,000 to the great theater builder and operator impresario. Then he went into Fortieth street. The neighborhood was not good, but that did not matter. He put up a great warehouse of about ten stories. It is the greatest of its kind in America. From the cellar to the roof, with the exception of the office and the living quarters of Jules and his family, it is filled with jolles and cheddars, cavlar and pate de foie gras, cordials and remarkable pastes, confections such as only the rich can afford, anchovies and pickled nuts, smoked and dried meats and fish that cost enough to make a person gasp, bar le due and olive oils, essences, and a thousand other things that many persons think are necessities, but which the world would be better if it did not use. Rare is the ship that comes across the sea that does not bring something to it. The money that has been made in that house is fabulous.

Jules has retired now. Only a few know him as the egg boy of the Astor. Today he stands as one of the most prominent Frenchmen of New York. He seems to have dropped into the place Henry Mallard once occupied in the French colony. Like Mallard he has been president of the Cercle Francaise Harmonie and head of the great French hospital. Wealth has poured in on him until he has become a millionaire several times over. He is vice-president of one of the uptown banks. The big dividends he gets each year from the company that now manages his business provides money enough to look after all his charities and let him do a little business on the side in real estate. He has made all his money between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets, and he has the most supreme confidence in that strip of New York. He buys and he sells, buys and sells. He never has had a loss.

America's Debt to Jules.

No man has done more to raise the art of cookery in America. There scarcely has been a great hotel built anywhere in the United States within the last twenty years whose proprietor has not consulted him about the arrangement of the kitchen or the selection of the culinary staff. With all his prosperity, with all the dignity that money and position and age give to a man, Jules still loves to cook. He has all the enthusiasm and a far wider appreciation of his art than he had when he was the egg boy of the Astor. (Copyright, 1914, by the McClure, Newspaper Syndicate.)

His One Hard Year.

There is a difference between working for one boss and fifty. Every mother's son who was a member of that association had his own peculiar ideas as to how Jules should conduct the business, and each one of them gave orders to him. It did not matter how great the conflict in orders was, Jules was to blame. He put in the hardest year of his life trying to please all the members and wound up by pleasing none. Then the association decided to give up the importing business and confine its attention to social matters.

Jules was almost heart-broken, but the trouble in that association was the best thing that ever happened to him. He determined never to work for any boss except himself. He had $3,000, a wife and child. Against the advice of his wife and friends, he risked that $3,000 by buying a house in Thirty-fourth street near Seventh avenue. The $3,000 was only a small payment on the purchase price. There was a mortgage with interest enough to swamp him unless he made money fast. But he had courage. He took over the importing business of the association and devoted all his energy and fine spirit to pushing it. Various times he had to rake and scrape and borrow to meet the interest on the mortgage, to pay duties on the goods he imported, or to meet the drafts of those days as they do now, either. When an association of French cooks was formed to raise the standard in this country, and incidentally to make some profit out of the importation of the rarest and most delightful of French delicacies, Jules was asked to take charge of the agency that the association established. He jumped at the offer. He saw in it an opportunity to do good for his fellow cooks, and at the same time get business knowledge he otherwise could not obtain. The prospect seemed excellent to him for the association to do great good. He worked hard and faithfully, much harder and just as faithfully as he had labored as a cook.

For novelty in footwear we must hark back to the sixteenth century, when the soft, high-heeled shoes worn by the women were finished with a blunt, square toe. The few imported shoes that have arrived here have the appearance of the end of the shoe being cut entirely off. They are neither pretty nor becoming to the foot.

Adornment of Slippers.

Crescent-shaped buckles, studded with rhinestones and imitating sapphires or other stones, are worn at the side of dress slippers as a finish to the narrow instep strap. They are very dainty and attractive. Another new slipper adornment is the rhinestone stud, formed of a single large rhinestone and worn in the front vamp as near as possible to the top. The stud looks particularly well with the brocade slipper, now so much in vogue.

Colors to Suit Your Eyes.

Did it ever occur to you that by a simple matter of dress the color of your eyes can be perceptibly changed? For instance, blue eyes are deepened by wearing certain shades of blue. The writer knows a girl whose innocent hazel eyes turn an unmistakable green when she wears a green blouse and so far is it from being unbecoming that her friends consider it the most becoming color.

Crocheted silk corsage flowers are not new, but they are enjoying a renewed popularity. They are used in large bunches on lace collars.

FANCIES OF FASHION

STYLE THAT HAS FOUND FAVOR IS TO REMAIN.

Organdie Collar With Attached Vest One of the Features of the Mode—Dainty and Attractive Neckwear Being Shown.

With so much approval has fashion stamped the sheer and flaring organdie collar, with the attached vest, that it is reappearing this season, reassured of its success. Many adaptations, however, are introduced in the new models. That by simply adding a collar and vest of this sort a new lease on life can be given to any garment that has once lost its first freshness has become such an assured fact with the woman of the practical mind that she is loath to set aside a fashion that has become of so much importance to her.

Never has daintier or more attractive neckwear been designed than at the present time, and whether it be domestic or imported, we care not, so long as it is modish and becoming. The models are clever versions of the new ideas in neckwear, and the magic suggestion carried out in vivid stripes marks one of the new and inexpensive variety. This vest, with collar attached, ready to baste on any frock, sells for a comparatively small sum.

Another pretty suggestion is a decided novelty of the season, made of a lightweight linen, the edges and revers being scalloped in a colored floss. The vest fastens down the front with large pearl buttons. These vests are rather expensive, but can be made very inexpensively by the woman with nimble fingers.

Among the neckwear we also come across a novelty in the way of neck ruffa. It is by such name this little collarette can be styled. In reality it is merely a little choker collar of ribbon covered with plaited chiffon, while the top is finished with a narrow edging of ostrich plumes. This collar, which is carried out in the prescribed colors of the season, fastens on one side with a coquettish little bow.

Gay Roman stripes still play a prominent part in the season's fancies, as illustrated by one of the new belts, which show a combination of leather and brightly colored striped silk. The belt and buckle are of silk, while tabs of the leather are suggested for ornamenting the front. The new belts continue to be extreme in width, but are soft and pliable, crushing into graceful folds.

Whenever lace figures in neckwear it is more desirable than in almost any other feature of dress that it should be real. There is so little of it required that it is a pity to mar any of its effectiveness by resorting to imitations, although of these there are many extremely clever ones just now.

ROSE AT PRESENT IN FAVOR

Fashionable New York Women Wear That Flower Until the Chrysanthemum Appears.

Fifth avenue and Riverside drive are one in favor of the rose on the shoulder as a feminine conceit. It's the new fall style. The rose may be a teeny-weeny bud for buds and a full-blown flower for girls who have made their debuts. The fashion provides that the flower shall be pinned a trifle forward of the top of the right shoulder. The color scheme is left in individual taste, although the pale pink tint has been adopted along the avenue.

Later on, when the chrysanthemums are in bloom, it will be entirely proper to fasten a massive bloom in the proper anatomical zone. Shoulder buds can be bought at all florists. Artificial buds will do.—New York World.

HANDY LITTLE WALL POCKET

Special Feature Makes It More Useful Than the Ordinary One We Are Accustomed To.

A wall pocket of a very pretty and quite a new design may be seen in the accompanying illustration, and a special feature about it is that any letters, visiting cards, invitations, etc., that it may contain cannot well slip out of place.

A good size in which to make it is about twelve inches in length and eight in height, and for the foundation a piece of stiff cardboard of those dimensions must be procured. This card is covered on both back and front with cream-colored satin, sufficient material being left over on both sides to form the pockets. Diagram B on the left explains this, the dotted line indicating the point at which the material is sewn together at the edge of the card; and C shows the shape of the piece of satin that is turned over and sewn down at the lower edge and forms one of the pockets. These pockets are, by the way, finished off at the openings with a pink and white silk cord, which is carried into three loops in the center, and the whole thing is outlined with more of the same silk cord carried into two loops at each of the lower corners. The upper corners are ornamented with little bows of pale pink ribbon, and a long loop of ribbon is provided for suspending this decorative little article from the wall.

The design which appears upon each of the pockets consists of a pale pink blossom, with a yellow center, and nine leaves embroidered in various shades of green. Diagram A gives this design very clearly in outline, and it can quite easily be worked from our illustration.

Adornment of Slippers.

Crescent-shaped buckles, studded with rhinestones and imitating sapphires or other stones, are worn at the side of dress slippers as a finish to the narrow instep strap. They are very dainty and attractive. Another new slipper adornment is the rhinestone stud, formed of a single large rhinestone and worn in the front vamp as near as possible to the top. The stud looks particularly well with the brocade slipper, now so much in vogue.

Colors to Suit Your Eyes.

Did it ever occur to you that by a simple matter of dress the color of your eyes can be perceptibly changed? For instance, blue eyes are deepened by wearing certain shades of blue. The writer knows a girl whose innocent hazel eyes turn an unmistakable green when she wears a green blouse and so far is it from being unbecoming that her friends consider it the most becoming color.

Crocheted Flowers.

Crocheted silk corsage flowers are not new, but they are enjoying a renewed popularity. They are used in large bunches on lace collars.

around the neck. The set to the left of this is in firm white linen, with a finished edge cut out in tiny saw teeth.

Whenever lace figures in neckwear it is more desirable than in almost any other feature of dress that it should be real. There is so little of it required that it is a pity to mar any of its effectiveness by resorting to imitations, although of these there are many extremely clever ones just now.

ROSE AT PRESENT IN FAVOR

Fashionable New York Women Wear That Flower Until the Chrysanthemum Appears.

Fifth avenue and Riverside drive are one in favor of the rose on the shoulder as a feminine conceit. It's the new fall style. The rose may be a teeny-weeny bud for buds and a full-blown flower for girls who have made their debuts. The fashion provides that the flower shall be pinned a trifle forward of the top of the right shoulder. The color scheme is left in individual taste, although the pale pink tint has been adopted along the avenue.

Later on, when the chrysanthemums are in bloom, it will be entirely proper to fasten a massive bloom in the proper anatomical zone. Shoulder buds can be bought at all florists. Artificial buds will do.—New York World.

properly adjusted, express a carefree grace combined with a certain precision—a most satisfactory partnership.

In the sketch are depicted a few of the newest models. The central collar and the cuff shown just below it make a set in sheerest batiste with hemstitched edges and tiny embroidered flowers as a trimming and a black satin ribbon run through the cuff and but are soft and pliable, crushing into graceful folds.

For novelty in footwear we must hark back to the sixteenth century, when the soft, high-heeled shoes worn by the women were finished with a blunt, square toe. The few imported shoes that have arrived here have the appearance of the end of the shoe being cut entirely off. They are neither pretty nor becoming to the foot.

Information comes from Arizona that since woman suffrage has been granted, the hens put in their time crowing.

The Ottoman empire has finally cast its lot with Germany. As a result, the crescent will cease to float west of the Bosphorus.

When the other Balkan states enter the war, practically all of Europe will be an armed camp. The few remaining little nations just as well make it unanimous.

What General Winter will do to the contending European armies remains to be seen. It is generally predicted that he will be more successful than any general heretofore named. His destructiveness will be general and his activities will cover a large area.

Of course, the people of New Mexico have spoken, but it seems too bad they didn't realize the necessity of representation in congress.

In view of the fact that New Mexico's two senators have accomplished nothing, it does not require a stretch of the imagination to reach the conclusion that, in the next congress, the result in the lower house can be summed up as 0.

Remedial legislation will proceed at Washington, regardless of the stumbling block New Mexico has put in its way.

That New Mexico went republican is not the most unfortunate thing. The most unfortunate thing and one that will return to plague some so-called good citizens, is the part race cut in the recent election.

We are proud that we live in a county that is practically free of the baneful influence that control many of the northern counties of the state.

Nothing can prevent the development of New Mexico. It's progress may be retarded by recent events, but it's growth will continue.

Taxation is the real big question before the coming New Mexico legislature. That the question will be handled wisely is to be hoped; that it will not be feared.

Good government means the most benefits the people can secure for the least money. That is how the legislation enacted by the New Mexico Legislature will be judged—in spots.

School Notes

The Nogal-Mesa school opened last Monday with Miss Blanche Garvin as teacher.

Oscuro is planning to have a new school piano in time for the meeting of the County Teacher's Association, holiday week.

Miss Sallie Ackerman has been elected to the primary room of the Corona school, made vacant by Miss Livingston's resignation.

The schools of Nogal, Mesa, Angus, Parson, Little Creek and Alto are being visited this week by Mrs. W. L. Gumm, County School Superintendent.

Attendance in all the districts is excellent. Many monthly absent reports are, "no pupils absent more than four days."

Most schools are preparing exhibits for the Albuquerque meeting. The county committee for exhibits consists of Supt. C. L. Schreck, Principal A. McGurdy, Geo. E. Cardwell, Mrs. C. L. Blaney and Mrs. Grace Taylor.

Great souls are always loyally submissive, reverent to what is over them; only small, mean souls are otherwise.—Heroes and Hero Worship.

Successful Trustbusting

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 7.—Success in several eastern Ohio and West Virginia coal companies valued at $3,750,000, passed into the hands of John S. Jones, a coal operator of Chicago, today as a result of an entry made by United States District Judges Warrington, Knappen and Denison in the suit brought by the government against the New York Central and the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad companies, their subsidiary lines, and various coal companies controlled by them. The case was brought by the government under the Sherman anti-trust law and officials declared it to be the most sweeping victory that has ever been accomplished under the act. The price was fixed at $3,750,000.

Out of Danger

The peace treaties this country has entered into bind 980,000,000 people to peace, so far as the United States is concerned. This number includes most of the world's civilized population. So that, should a dispute arise between this nation and any other, the matter will be referred to a tribunal made up of delegates from other nations, and that tribunal shall have a year in which to examine and report. During that year the excitement is expected to cool and by then a solution be reached. As a general thing arguments do not decide an issue. This is attended to by events, and during a year many of these happen that reflect upon the issue. It is hoped that the rest of those 980,000,000 people will go into agreements of this kind. It will establish the World's peace.

In the present European tumult the treaty, so far as this country is concerned, will act like a charm. Should a question arise, we would wait a year before the slaughter began. In that time we could get cool, and become impressed by the horrors of war. So we can go on with our business and other earthly affairs feeling sure that no bloody war will intervene to obstruct or disperse our purposes.—Ohio State Journal.

The glamor about statesmanship is misleading. Because a man holds a high office it doesn't follow that there is anything in his methods beyond the reach of the average mind. When all is said it reduces itself to the methods of every day business life—attention, industry and common sense—virtues which we some times deprecate. The men who do great things stick to the job more closely than their fellows. They concentrate their energies and do not become distracted from the main point, and thus achieve greatness.

COULD SCARCELY WALK ABOUT

And For Three Summers Mrs. Vincent Was Unable to Attend to Any of Her Housework.

Pleasant Hill, N. C.—"I suffered for three summers," writes Mrs. Walter Vincent, of this town, "and the third and last time, was my worst. I had dreadful nervous headaches and prostration, and was scarcely able to walk about. Could not do any of my housework. I also had dreadful pains in my back and sides and when one of those weak, sinking spells would come on me, I would have to give up and lie down, until it wore off. I was certainly in a dreadful state of health, when I finally decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I firmly believe I would have died if I hadn't taken it.

After I began taking Cardui, I was greatly helped, and all three bottles relieved me entirely.

I fattened up, and grew so much stronger in three months, I felt like another person altogether."

Cardui is purely vegetable and gentle-acting. Its ingredients have a mild, tonic effect, on the womanly constitution.

Cardui makes for increased strength, improves the appetite, tones up the nervous system, and helps to make pale, sallow cheeks, fresh and rosy.

Cardui has helped more than a million weak women, during the past 50 years. It will surely do for you, what it has done for them. Try Cardui today.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE And is Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 18 years old."

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years."

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one else the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it."

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADLER STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (consultant) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE SILTING OF THE DEAD SEA.

(By G. FREDERICK WRIGHT, LL. D., F. G. S. A., Geologist; Author of "The Ice Age in North America," "Man and the Glacial Period," Etc.)

In Joshua 15:25 and 18:19, the boundary of Judah is said to start from a "bay" at the south end of the Salt sea, and after proceeding westward to the top of the mountain ridge of Palestine to run north to Jerusalem, and then east down to the "north bay of the Salt sea, at the south end of the Jordan," at Beth-hoglah.

But now there is no bay at either end of the Dead sea, and Beth-hoglah is several miles distant from the north end of the sea. The explanation of this description is found in some most interesting geological facts.

At the present time the Dead sea is 47 miles long, with an average breadth of five or six miles. Its surface is 1,300 feet lower than that of the Mediterranean, so that it has no outlet, and its area is determined by the equilibrium between the rainfall of the valley draining into it and the evaporation from its surface.

I have estimated that since Joshua's time two cubic miles of gravel, sand and mud have been deposited around the shores of the sea. There is a well defined delta of the Jordan extending from Beth-hoglah to the present head of the sea.

It is clear, therefore, that in Joshua's time the north half of the sea was both wider and longer than now, so that its level was considerably lower, and that a bay extended up to Beth-hoglah and another at the south end, thus verifying the description given in the boundaries. But as the sedimentation narrowed the area at that lower level it compelled the water to rise and overflow the land at the south end where now the sea is shallow, and where probably the ruins of Sodom and Gomorrah are submerged.

Among the other places where extensive deltas have been formed we may mention that the city of Adria, on the Po in Italy, which in classic times was a seaport, is now left at the head of a delta 14 miles inland. Tientsin on the Gulf of Pichili in China, was a seaport 200 B. C. Since then sediment from the Chinese rivers has pushed the shore line into the sea 30 miles, making Tientsin an inland city.

THE DIVINE MONITOR.

(By STANTON J. PEELE, Chief Justice—Retired—United States Court of Claims.)

"I look upon the Bible as the source from which those who study it in spirit and truth will derive strength of character, a realization of the duty of citizenship, and a true apprehension of the power and wisdom and mercy of God."—Grover Cleveland.

The Bible is the word of God, otherwise its teaching would add no more permanency to the uplift and betterment of men than other books teaching morality—morality too, based on the varying and provincial rules of men. The verity of its teaching has time and again been demonstrated in the lives and characters of men, who, with unflinching trust in its old-time truths, not only suffered and died in defense of their faith, but laid the foundation for higher Christian civilization, out of which have come our asylums, hospitals, homes for the aged and the young, as well as other charitable and benevolent organizations without number for the care and uplift of the poor and helpless.

God works in a wondrous way to fit men to consciously recognize His indwelling. The purpose of the Bible is to make known the sovereignty of God and man's free agency. To harmonize man's will with God's, the Bible teaches that God is love, the greatest need of man and the only influence that conquers pride and selfishness, and without which man drifts from doubt to despair and hopelessness.

It was this same Monitor that guided holy men to record, not their knowledge of God, but his knowledge of them, that they might thereby know in whom they live and move and have their being; and thus knowing might be able to spiritually recognize him as their fadwelling unerring life partner.

THE PURIFIER OF LITERATURE.

(By HENRY AUGUSTUS BUCHTEL, Chancellor University of Denver, Former Governor of Colorado.)

"In regard to the great book, I have only to say that it is the best gift which God has given to man."—Abraham Lincoln.

It is the Bible which has made our modern literature pure. The oldest English literature, made before the Bible was universally read, is filled with ideas and words which are never used now in conversation among refined people.

spoken an impure word in my hearing either in public or in private.

The Bible has not only purified the speech of men, but also the best literature of our times. A father cannot read old literature aloud to his daughter. If he attempts it he is sure to stop short. One can, however, read all the immortal literature which has since been produced since the beginning of the Victorian age. You can read aloud in the family, every number of such magazines as the Atlantic and Harper's and the Century. Consider Browning and Tennyson and Longfellow and Whitlitter and Bryant and Emerson and Lowell and Holmes and Hawthorne and all the immortals. What pure fountains of intellectual refreshment are these.

What has made this amazing transformation? It is the wide use of the Bible. The two great Bible societies which have brought the Bible to every home in civilized lands were organized in 1804 and 1816. The fine editions of the Bible which have been circulated in unreported millions of copies have for the most part been made within the last fifty years. The Bible calls on men to think on "whatsoever things are pure." The wide reading of it has so filled the hearts and minds of men and women with noble aspirations that our speech and our literature are now wholesome and pure.

Jackal Flies of India.

There are certain Indian flies, several varieties of them apparently of similar type to our own house fly, Musca domestica, that have developed a rather ingenious, if somewhat disreputable, way of making a living. This is the story told by Captains Patton and Craig in the Indian Journal of Medical Research. The proboscis of these flies is soft and not suitable for piercing the skin of man or the lower animals. So they hang around some one of the several types of biting flies, and when the latter pierces the skin of a victim they crowd him away and use the incision for feeding themselves. If the biter happens to be too large or fierce thus to be driven from his prey, the fly stalks wait until he is finished, and then take his place. In view of these observations it seems quite possible that the so-called non-biting flies may play a hitherto unsuspected role in the transmission of disease.

Could Stand a Lot of That.

The friend of a debtor appeared in the Bow county court, London, England, and produced a doctor's certificate to say he was suffering from an incurable disease.

Plaintiff—When I served him with the summons he was just playing a game of billiards at the club, smoking a big fat cigar, and looking very happy; in fact, in the very pink. It takes a lot of that to make you ill."

ROAD BUILDING

CONSTRUCTION OF A CULVERT

Consideration of Economy and Safety Demands Employment of Other Material Than Wood.

By far the greater number of culverts and bridges on our public roads have a span of less than fifty feet. In the past these structures have, in general, been built of wood, but lumber so exposed in this dry climate is subject to rapid decay, writes Walter Graham in Denver Field and Farm. Consequently these structures require a great deal of repair and frequent renewals. The ever-increasing price of lumber is making the further use of wood for this class of structures more and more indefensible.

Durability is of the greatest economic importance. In many sections a large proportion of the annual road levy is expended in repair and renewal of wooden culverts and minor bridges, and it is not unusual to find this practice defended on the ground that the county or district cannot afford to build the higher priced permanent culverts. This notion is simply a false sense of economy. True, the first cost of the permanent structure is greater, but there the outlay ends, while with wooden culverts there is a large annual outlay for repair, as well as frequent renewals. Anyone interested in road improvement will find it most interesting to secure the following data for his own county or district: The number of culverts, cost of labor and material for repair and renewal each year, average life of wooden culverts and the ordinary life of wooden bridge floors. Then he could compute how long it would be before the actual present expenditure would pay for permanent culverts.

Later improvements in the manufacture of iron have made this material more generally available for use in culvert construction. A special quality of iron very low in carbon resists corrosion so well as to make its use advisable in many cases, and this is an important point for the irrigated districts. The cutting away of the soil by the water at the inlet or outlet of a clay or cement pipe is often responsible for its progressive breakdown and partial exposures of this character are extremely dangerous in time of freshet to any form of construction. It is doubtful whether the majority of practical roadbuilders have given consideration to the fact that by building suitable wing walls for any bridge or pipe they can very largely increase its carrying capacity. A V-shaped entrance-way so increases the velocity of the water as to enable a given culvert to perform the work of one of much larger diameter which has an end wall at right angles to the flow.

BAD ROADS VERY EXPENSIVE

Value of Horses and Mules in One County in Missouri Deteriorated 3 Per Cent Annually.

From the 1910 United States census reports it is found that the value of horses and mules in one county in Missouri was $831,089. The value of farm vehicles, harness and other equipment was $375,000, making a total of $1,206,089. The present roads of the county cause all animals, vehicles and harness to deteriorate three per cent per annum faster than they would on improved roads. Three per cent of $1,206,089 is $36,182. This is only one source of loss which the county must bear every year on account of bad roads. Again, the cost per ton mile for hauling on the roads in the county is 20 cents, while the cost on good roads is only 14 cents per ton mile, thus saving 16 cents per ton mile.

There are about one hundred thousand tons hauled an average of five miles in the county; 75 per cent of this amount would be over improved roads provided the present bond issue carries.

Seventy-five per cent of the 100,000 tons equal 75,000 tons. This amount hauled five miles represents 375,000 ton miles; 375,000 tons multiplied by 10 cents equals $3,750,000 plus $36,182 equals $3,786,182 total annual loss on account of present roads as compared to improved roads. This annual loss would be eliminated if the main or heavily traveled roads of the county were improved.

New Roads for New York State.

New York will construct during the current year nearly four hundred and thirty miles of improved roads of the best types under the direction of the state highway department. Of this aggregate about one hundred and twenty-six miles will consist of concrete roads, 42 miles of brick roads, 229 miles of bituminous macadam roads, 220 miles of waterbound macadam road, and about six miles of miscellaneous types. This mileage comprises the roads which have been put under contract to June 1.

Speaking of humorists brings us to the fact that no man living can look quite so solemn when producing humor as Irvin S. Cobb, the well known comedian of the Saturday Evening Post. When Cobb was on the staff of one of the big New York newspapers he did various news assignments, some of them mighty serious and others that gave him a chance for comedy. It was a standing joke about the office that anybody could look at Cobb as he bent over his typewriter and tell which kind of yarn he was writing. If his face was all wrinkled up with solemnity like a bloodhound's, with a sad look about the eyes such as one rarely sees except in an undertaker's hoister, Cobb was preparing something that would make hosts of people laugh.

They say it's good luck to pick up pins, but you can't make the boy who works in a bowling-alley believe it.

Nervous Emotional Dizzy Depressed ?

Mrs. Addie Covinger of Cedar St., Cairo, Ill., writes Dr. R. V. Pierce as follows: "I send 8 cents for your 'Common Sense Medical Advice' for my daughter who has recently married and I know the book will be of much value to her. I have read and used for 25 years the valuable treatments contained in the 'Medical Advice' and have taken many bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have restored to health each time I used it. It is a great remedy for women as a strength builder for the nerves and general health."

Peruna Cured This Man Of Catarrh.

Mr. J. B. Reese, Habnab, M a ryland, writes: "Two years ago I became a sufferer with catarrh, which continued to grow worse and made me miserable. I could scarcely smell at all, and my taste had almost left me. My head ached constantly, and at times had high fever and bleeding at the nose. I was a perfect wreck."

"I tried several doctors, but derived no relief. I read in one of your little booklets, called 'ills of Life,' of Peruna being a remedy for catarrh, and procured a bottle at once. After the use of one bottle I felt some better, so I tried the second and the third, and now I am a well man."

Buzzard Carries Off Dog. Eagles are said to be game enough and strong enough to carry off almost anything from a man to a cat, but the first instance known when a buzzard carried off a dog was witnessed on a recent afternoon. The incident happened a few miles from Hereford.

A very brave little fox terrier was endeavoring to chase off a large buzzard that had alighted on the ground. He only succeeded in making the buzzard fly close to the ground for a short distance. The buzzard stopped on a short stump and waited for the dog, which came barking around the root of the stump.

The buzzard seeing his chance, jumped from the stump seized the dog in its mouth and claws and flew to a thicket near by—Birmingham (Ala.) Dispatch to the Atlanta Journal.

His Jargon in Doubt.

"That your cart outside?" asked the chauffeur. "Ay, it be," replied the village grocer.

The chauffeur gave a superior smile. "I wonder you fellows don't get tired," he said, "joggin' along in them old, ramshackle carts." "What pleasure one doesn't please nother," replied the grocer philosophically. "Should rather say not," exclaimed the chauffeur. "I s'pose you get used to it. But look at my car outside! I can drive that car over sixty an hour!" "Which—dogs or chickens?" asked the grocer.

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Discovered Its Effect. No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse in Pa. writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion." "While on a visit to my brother I had a good chance to try Postum, for they drank it altogether in place of coffee. After using Postum two weeks I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion."

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used."

"I observe a curious fact about Postum when used by mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness. I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. But when it is prepared according to directions on package and served hot with cream, it is certainly a delicious beverage."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 20c packages. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, made a delicious beverage instantly. 20c and 50c tins. The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same. "There's a Reason" for Postum.—sold by Grocers.

IOWA MAN STUCK

WITH PITCHFORK

A farmer living in the Northern part of Iowa stuck himself in the leg with a pitch fork. The wound would not heal and for two years he had a running sore. He tried all the common salves and liniments and sometimes the sore would heal, but it always broke open again. Finally he healed it up to stay healed with Allen's Ulcerino Salve.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allen's Ulcerino Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one-third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar.
