Prod. mineral land (surface) " " " "	20.00
Non-prod. " " " " " " " "	25.00

and it is further ordered that there be fixed a valuation on all property above mentioned for purposes of taxation at the true valuation thereof so ascertained, and it is further ordered that the Assessor be instructed to act according to law and ascertain the true value of all property that the Board have not been able to ascertain, and that the value of town lots be made upon the basis of a list thereof heretofore approved by the Board of County Commissioners, at its meeting on February 8, 1915.

Board now adjourns until 10 o'clock a. m. Friday, February 23, 1917.

James Cooper, Jr., was here from Ancho Wednesday.

Fort Stanton

Misses Helen Thurman and Alva Beattie of the Capitan High school faculty spent the weekend the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leach at 3 A.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis visited the Rice family at Parsons Sunday.

Dr. Irby and James Hanna spent Sunday the guests of friends at Glencoe.

Father Girna of Lincoln called on the chaplain for a short visit Sunday afternoon.

Miss Helen Rice of Parsons came down Sunday to visit her sister, Mrs. Weber at 13 B.

Major and Mrs. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and Captain Van Zant motored to Parsons Sunday.

Invitations are out for the big dance and oyster supper to be given at Fort Stanton February 22d. A large attendance is expected from all parts of Lincoln county.

Mr. Purday, the contractor, with friends, motored up in the Capitan Sunday, where they visited a number of friends at various ranches.

The organ and violin duet rendered by Dr. Irby and A. Reissar during chapel services last Sunday morning was enjoyed very much by the large audience.

Miss Helen Thurman and Miss Alva Beattie have the sincere thanks of their many Post friends for assistance rendered during the non-sectarian services held in Library hall last Sunday evening.

Miss Beattie sang one of her popular solos, and with Miss Thurman sang a duet. The chaplain publicly congratulated and thanked the young ladies in behalf of the audience.

Harry Leach, with his eastern friend, Mr. Campbell, spent last week visiting at El Paso, returning to the Post Friday.

The Seamen's Social club held a big meeting Saturday evening at the hall. Five new members rode the billygoat in order to become fullledged members. Elaborate arrangements are being made for a smoker to be given by the club in the very near future.

At the non-sectarian services held in the hall last Sunday night Chaplain Frund spoke on motherhood, giving a number of impressive verbal pictures in illustration. A number of parents brought their children to the services and were highly pleased with the sermon. The hall was filled with one of the largest audiences of the season.

Next Wednesday being Ash Wednesday, the opening of the lenten season, special services will be held in the chapel both morning and evening.

Good Road Men

The following from Senator Tully, concerning an important meeting at Santa Fe, is self-explanatory:

Good road men from all parts of the State will be in Santa Fe on the 23rd day of February to discuss pending road legislation, and a joint meeting of the Senate and House Road Committees will be held on that date by request. Members of the State Highway association are particularly requested to attend.

Methodist Church

Rev. ANTHONY MARSTON, Pastor
Preaching Sunday morning and evening by Rev. George H. Givan, presiding elder.

The quarterly conference will convene at the parsonage Saturday at 8 p. m.

Preaching at White Oaks on Sunday afternoon.

The Lincoln State Bank

Opened Its Doors
MONDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 12

A cordial invitation is extended to all to come in and see us.

From Credit to Cash

On and After March 1st We Will Sell For Cash Only

READ THE REASONS

Your own welfare is always the thing that deserves your most careful consideration. Upon you, men and women, as heads of families, lies the responsibility of conducting your business in such a manner that will give to those dependent upon you the greatest possible amount of comfort.

In making the change in our business methods which we are now announcing to you we have had this thought clearly before us, and we realize that our first duty is to serve the people in this community in the best way possible. In any business there are three important and essential factors—the producer, the seller and the consumer. The most important factor in any business is the consumer—the man who uses the goods. He therefore deserves our most careful attention.

A merchant's interest is very closely associated with his customers' interests and with the general interest of the community in which he lives and earns his bread and butter. It will also be readily seen that a merchant can prosper only in proportion to the good service that he renders. After a careful consideration of the subject and a thorough investigation of the many communities where it has been tried, together with our observation of conditions extending over many years, we have reached the conclusion that:

Cash Business Better For the General Good of the Community Than Is a Credit Business

- (1) Credit has ruined more people than it has helped. This you have, no doubt, seen in this community yourselves. Men have established a reputation for good pay, have been able to buy goods on credit and as a result have overreached themselves, and have found it necessary to dispose of their produce, losing the profit thereon in order to settle their accounts.
- (2) It is very plain that a cash system places the community on a more conservative and much safer basis, prevents competition in the spending of money and encourages economy in the home.
- (3) A cash system then gives every man an honest chance and places him before the world as he really is and it gives him a feeling of independence that only the cash man can have. Many will save money and have a bank account to meet the necessities of life, whereas an easy credit system would find them with bills to pay for things they did not really need.

While these reasons show the benefits of a cash system for the customer only, it is true that from the viewpoint of the merchant the benefits are the same. The idea that many have that the merchant's interest is far from that of the consumer, and that the merchant is continually accumulating a fat bank account at their expense is far from true. The fact is that many merchants are not getting paid for the service they are rendering. They do not get the profit they are entitled to on account of the losses sustained on accounts carried too long on their books. By changing this system many improvements can be made.

- (1) It will save us a large part of the expense of doing business. It will give us more time to look after the needs of our customers. It will eliminate the necessity of presenting statements to our customers each month, a practice which has often resulted in misunderstanding and hard feeling, and we will not have to account for accounts denied or which for other reasons cannot be collected, and it must be remembered that the good customers of any firm are the ones on whom the burden of these losses fall.
- (2) It will enable us to do better buying. Cash on delivery always talks louder in the markets of the world than sixty days' time, with a request for an extension when the limit is reached. It is a well known fact that almost all wholesale houses have several prices, but the cash man gets the best one.

In making this announcement we wish to impress upon the people of this community that we are making this change in our method for the purpose of making more efficient our service, and we have not the faintest idea of discriminating against anyone. We believe that this change is for the good of the community in general. We know that it is just and right. We appeal to our many friends and customers to take the same and honest view of the question and give it your most careful consideration. We invite you to continue dealing with us as you have in the past and take advantage of even better prices and better service than we have been able to give under the old system of credit.

KELLEY & SON

Jack Peak

Mr. Ruckner returned to Elida, to bring his family the next trip.

Mr. Stoneman was hauling corn to his ranch from the lower country last week.

E. E. Wilson and Maurice Brooklin returned home from Carrizozo Friday evening, where each had an errand of business.

Some of the land seekers are failing to find a place, since it is about gone.

One man is reported to be holding down six sections, claiming to have leased same. Since these lands have been refused to some of the old settlers under the leasing plan, it savors of a "nigger in the wood pile" game, trying to be forced upon us. But it's thin, and only requires a little investigation. The last report was that he had put a squallid family of his own countrymen on each section. Which of course would confirm the belief, as at first thought, that it is not under lease. There has been some little unpleasantness over the capturing of the big prizes, just scraping enough to give zest and determination to all to locate if possible.

"Hen fruit" is abundant here in our country, and what wouldn't we give for a convenient market. Our little store can not handle the produce, or does not care to. We learn that Mr. Miller, from Joplin, Missouri, finally discovered a vacant claim, and is hard at work.

Plowing has begun in earnest with the best of conditions, both in the land and weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Fambrough expect to start right away for El Paso to take in the stockmen's convention. Miss Essie McBrayer will accompany them; we learn.

E. H. Talbert is complaining of the losses sustained daily from wandering coyotes. The poultry flocks are a picnic for these marauding pests.

We note a few early "baby calves" on the range, as playful as though it were springtime.

We see many of the early weeds peeping out, which is a delight to all stock, which have gone so long on the brown grasses.

The Burnett boys are grazing their goats on the east of Jack Peak, and report range conditions excellent.

We learn from Hecrilla that Mr. St. John is suffering from a severe cold, and is said to be threatened with pneumonia.

Lif Burnett came home Saturday very anxious to learn the progress of the war movements. So far as we know the biggest racket is under the water, as is characteristic of the Kaiser, all is sub rosa.

Dance at Oscuro

The public is invited to attend a dance at the Oscuro school house Friday night, February 23. All lovers of dancing are cordially urged to be present and take part in an occasion that will afford attendants much pleasure.

Mass Meeting Call

Upon request of ten of the leading taxpayers of the county, a mass meeting of taxpayers is hereby called to convene in Carrizozo Saturday, February 17, at 7:30 p. m., at the court house, for the purpose of organizing a good roads campaign and aiding the movement to improve all the roads of the county.

Every precinct is requested to send delegations.

THE COMMITTEE.

Ancho

A goodly number of our Ancho folks took a pleasant outing to Gran Quivira Sunday. The two Ads—Christian and Carey—and Messrs. Pat Russell and Roberts, all of them taking their families; also Miss Ethel Gaddis, the primary teacher in our public school. Most of the gentlemen mentioned above are employes of the brick and tile plant. It made it a little hard on our Sunday school, but there will be other Sundays after this and perhaps the outing will give them new and better interest for time to come.

Mrs. M. C. Duncan, of Dearborn, Missouri, was called to the home of her son-in-law, Chris Grube, at Alamogordo last week on account of severe sickness in the family. We trust that the danger point is passed ere this. Mrs. Duncan was formerly Mrs. Deel, who was formerly engaged in the mercantile business of our place.

We have had another beautiful snow during the night and early morning of today. It was about three inches deep, but at this writing, 12 a. m., is rapidly disappearing under a bright sun.

Mr. Morgan is down among us from Capitan we suppose, looking after homestead matters.

Quite a number of homeseekers have been among us the past two or three weeks to find that in our vicinity about all the smooth land has been taken already.

We are sorry to mention that Ad Carey's wife was taken quite sick night before last. We hope, however, that she will soon recover.

Mr. French is shipping out thirty cars of sheep this week.

Mrs. Eve, our accommodating landlady, has about recovered from her indisposition.

Capitan Growing

Reports from Capitan indicate that it is enjoying a season of growth and prosperity. Real estate transactions are active and all indications are that the town is getting its second wind. Mrs. Sarah Gray recently sold her old home there and in addition contracted for the disposition of fifty other lots.

Game Decreasing

Albuquerque, February 8.—Six hundred and eighteen deer, 549 turkeys, 37 bears, 1048 coyotes, 117 wolves and 48 mountain lions were killed by hunters in the New Mexico national forests during the season just passed, according to the district forester's annual report on game conditions submitted today to the state game warden.

"The number of deer killed is five per cent less than in 1915, 40 per cent less than in 1914, and 7 per cent less than in 1913," says District Forester Redington. "It is safe to assume that the number of hunters has increased. It would seem, therefore, that these figures indicate a steady decrease in the supply of deer. The number of turkeys killed also shows a decrease as compared with 1915. Some people still believe that the game protectionists are alarmists, but these figures speak for themselves, and to the contrary. They emphasize the need for game refuges, better laws, and above all better law enforcement."

The report shows that the number of predatory animals killed has more than doubled as compared with 1915. Forest officers attribute this to the work of the government trappers employed by the United States Biological survey, and regard it as about the only encouraging feature of the report.

TRAINING TODAY'S BOYS AND GIRLS

Wise-Folk Know All Rules Are Meant to Be Broken.

WHEN TO DO IT IS QUESTION

Fixed Regularly in the Daily Routine is Essential With Very Young Children—Latitude May Be Allowed the Older Ones.

By SIDONIE M. GRUENBERG.

WISE folks know that all rules are meant to be broken, but it is not safe to let the children find it out too soon. It happens that some grow up without ever finding out, and a hard time of it they have ever after.

We can understand the astonishment of Aunt Jo, who dropped in unexpectedly one evening, and found eight-year-old Marion sitting up and reading, and the hour long after the usual bedtime. "Why, I thought your children never stayed up after seven o'clock!" was her way of showing that she knew that rules were rules. That had been the rule; that was still the rule for the younger children. "But now," explained the mother, "Marion stays up a half hour later on Saturday nights, because she can sleep later on Sunday, and because father comes home later on Saturday."

These were very good reasons for staying up later; but to some people there never seems to be a good reason for breaking a rule, and that is really what bothers them—the difficulty of using discretion. Aunt Jo was one of those people, and she was one of a very large company.

With very young children it is essential to have a fixed regularity in the daily routine, if it can possibly be carried out. This is necessary, because it is the only way of getting children into the habit of disposing of the daily necessities in a routine way. In the matter of eating, sleeping and dressing, in putting away tops and clothes, in table manners and in the details of courteous conduct, the routine must be observed, with never an exception. It is apparently the only way of making sure of the habits.

You know the saying about being offered an inch and taking a yard. Well, that seems to be particularly true of children on the way to learning the rules of life's game. A change from the ordinary means a license to ignore the rule. During this period, therefore, every departure from the routine involves a serious setback. When habits are being acquired, no exception should be permitted. But after habits have been formed they must not be allowed to interfere with common sense or with our happiness.

A friend out shopping with her little girl met me on a crowded street on a warm day. After talking of nothing in particular for a few moments she told me half-apologetically that they were about to get some ice cream soda, and asked whether I would join them. She explained her hesitation by saying: "I did not think you would approve of children drinking ice cream soda." And, of course, I do not—as a steady diet. There are no doubt many children who consume too much of the colored and sweetened juices that are sold under various fancy names. And there is no doubt that children should learn to quench their thirst with water. It is also true that if you give them a chance they will nag and nag until you yield the nickel or dime that the soda water man wants. But for all that it is perfectly legitimate to satisfy the taste for the cold and the sweet and the flavored confections—on occasions, and in moderation.

It is a bad rule to indulge the soda water habit; but it's also a bad rule to be absolute in our approvals or disapprovals. We are not compelled to say to a child, either, "You may always have what you wish," or, "You may never have what you wish." It is this always-or-never attitude, this inflexibility of judgment that antagonizes and estranges the growing child and makes us old before our time. And it is quite unnecessary, for it is possible to give the growing child a wholesome routine mitigated by more and more variety. It is possible for children to learn that there are justifiable exceptions to the usual way of doing things.

Children love novelty so much, in general, that they are quite eager for everything that is out of the ordinary. Sometimes, however, they quickly become attached to the comfort of fixed routine. This seems to have been the case with Alfred when his mother wanted him to go to sleep in a different room one evening, as she expected company and wished him to be farther from the noise. Alfred stuck to rules and traditions. He had always slept in that bed, and he would not change now. He was promised that he would be taken back to his own bed during the night, and would not be disturbed; but he held out against the irregularity of the proceeding—it was an unheard-of thing to go to sleep in one place and wake up somewhere else. But father called attention to the fact that people go to sleep in a railway car in one city and wake up in another city many miles away. That was interesting; and Alfred fell into the game of playing that he was to take a journey from a distant city, and was to wake up in his own bed in the morning. This worked very well as a trick; but if that were repeated too frequently it would soon break up any sense of order—or, rather, the new way might gradually replace the old order.

That is indeed the danger in making exceptions; but we must not be deterred by the danger. We must vary the routine as need arises and thus teach the children that a rule is not something absolute, but a convenience. We must teach them, also, to be the masters of their habits, and not the slaves. Children must retain as long as possible that peculiar power of youth—the ability to change from one set of habits to another. With advancing years and judgment, this means the ability to use discretion without rejecting the benefits of regularity.

REALIZED HIS GOOD LUCK

Old Man Probably Had Never Considered His Position in Just That Light Before.

A Massachusetts man who recently returned from an automobile trip through northern New England had a small mishap on the way home that obliged him to do some tinkering on the car. As the breakdown occurred in a pleasant bit of woods, the family found amusement in strolling about the neighborhood while the head of the family made the repairs.

He had been at work only a few minutes when an old man strolled up with his hands behind his back and prepared to watch the progress of the work. He asked no questions and offered no comments, but his face wore a friendly smile. After a time, having apparently grown tired of standing, he found a seat on a rock by the side of the road and continued to watch.

"Live round here?" asked the car owner at last.

"Ye-up. Lived here all my life; born here, in fact."

"Farmer, I suppose?"

"No, not now. I used to be, but I gave it up."

"Well, you don't seem to be very busy. You have plenty of time on your hands, haven't you?"

"Ye-up; lots of it."

"What do you do now, if I may ask?"

"Don't do nothing. Hain't done nothing for nearly ten years."

"So? Why, you're in luck! If I did nothing for half that length of time I should be in the poorhouse."

The old man's face beamed with a glad surprise, and then, as one who knows his rare good fortune and values it at its just worth, he cried delightedly: "That's where I be!"—Youth's Companion.

Economy.

In the third-class compartment of the city train the conversation turned on the important subject of economy. Various views were expressed. Then a small man in one corner said, slowly:

"A friend o' mine—leastways, he's more of an acquaintance like—o' ain't spent a 'penny in five years."

"Rot! What are you givin' us?" and similar remarks greeted this statement.

"Fact!" said the small one, briefly, as he lit his pipe. "But 'e'll be out of jail next week!"—London Tit-Bits.

SATIN IS USED IN WINTER HATS

More Seasonableness in Headgear Is Shown This Season Than Last.

EVENING HAT WITH LOW GOWN

New Ones Are Made of Cloth of Silver and Gold Metallic Net and Lace, the Brims Transparent—Russian Headgear Reversed.

The fact that the milliners have taken up satin for several shapes in the new millinery will contribute toward more seasonableness of headgear this winter than last. No one objects to satin, especially if it is in black or in a dark color, as a relief and offset to the black velvet hats that have been worn so unrelentingly that one began to think that the milliners had lost all power of originality in choosing fabrics.

There have been several seasons in which black velvet dominated, but there has never been anything to equal the last six months. At any gathering of women, the black velvet hat was as seemingly necessary to the costume as the steel helmet to the soldier. Shapes differed, ornamentation varied, but they hat was black velvet, and on this fabric were rung the slight changes that the milliners invented.

Women do not tire of black velvet hats any more than they tire of blue serge suits and frocks. They are the bread and water of fashions. The only time that the velvet hat grows wearisome in the eyes of the average woman is when the first snows fall and the fashionables turn their attention to the pines. Then the average woman wants to discard velvet and get anything she can as a substitute; and today, satin is wisely offered as a compromise between winter and summer millinery.

There are also satin hats in all the shades that nature gives to a dahlia, for America, as well as France, has decided that these purplish tones are excessively good-looking and is respecting them throughout costumery with excellent effect.

The brilliant purple that was advocated at the beginning of the season has been coldly greeted, but the deep purples that are almost on blue and black are found to agree with every kind of gown and coat worn.

The shapes of the new hats reveal no long-disguised secrets on the part of the millinery. The Russian turban in its original form is abandoned, but there is an undoubted suggestion from the Muscovite turban in the new hat that is a reversal of the old—meaning that the high point of the brim in front is now turned to the back, and instead of the ornament being placed against this part of the brim, it is kept in front.

Russian Style Reversed.

The national Russian headdress has been worn a bit threadbare in some of the cheaper hats, but its original glory is retained by the brides who are arranging these crowns with the point in front, as a setting for the tulle veil.

There is another influence at work among some of the milliners, which suggests the field hats worn by the European armies in the early part of the nineteenth century. These turbans are of satin, with the brim turned so high that the crown vanishes, and elongated at the sides and flattened at the back. One of the best of these French shapes is made of black satin, the top of the extra high, upturned brim edged with a fringe of alpacas.

The main points to remember in the new hats are the tightness of the headband in all turbans, the over line which is carried out around the head, the elimination of more than one ornament and the tendency to hold to Slavic ornamentation instead of any other.

The Chinese mandarin turban which has come into first fashion along with the Chinese fabrics and ornaments imported to this country to fill the place of the European importations, is strangely in keeping with some of the Russian shapes, and even the colors of the Chinese ornament which hangs from the button at the top, closely resemble those used by the Slavs. Well, there were days in the formation of the races on this planet when the Mongolian and the Russian were closely mingled. Genghis Khan left many Mongolian traces in that vast bit of territory known as Russia, and it may be that the hat was one.

The Transparent Brim.

Since the advent of the evening hat as an adjunct to the low gown when one is dining in restaurants, there has come into the fashions an entirely new kind of millinery. These new things are afternoon-hats de luxe. All that the milliners wanted a woman to wear in the afternoon, and against which she rebelled for many reasons, she is happy to wear at night. It has given her a good opportunity to exploit the wide brim, which motorizing, dancing and skating have put somewhat in the background.

These brims are transparent. Cartoonists used to draw amusing pictures of women using brims of hats as a substitute for veils, and the idea was considered capricious and attractive; and, suddenly, it is taken seriously. Metallic net and bullion lace are used for these wide brims, and the hat is tilted so far forward over the eyebrows that it is an easy matter to look upward through the fabric. The fashion has also led to women doing up their eyes a bit in the Oriental manner, so as to make them more significant and expressive under the half-concealing veil tissue.

The crowns of these large evening hats are made of crystals, of closely crushed roses and of heavy metal embroidery on tulle or satin, but there are no feathers. The much-vaunted ostrich feather, which was taken up by the best of the French designers in September, did not gain a place in the affections of the public, and the minketeer hat that Talbot revived, with its sweeping plumes and its likeness to those worn by the women of the eighteenth century in England, was taken up only by the individual who wanted something different from her neighbor.

It may be safely said that in choosing an evening hat or one for the afternoon, if you have the social opportunity to exploit so ornamental an article, it is wise to just look into the metallic fabrics and go no further. The straight sailor of cloth of silver or gold is not used for the evening, but is kept for the street, sprangly enough, and is sometimes worn with severe black velvet gowns in the afternoon.

Makes Alluring Picture.

It is at its very best in the latter setting. The woman who can wear a simply cut, medieval frock of black chiffon velvet, with its slightly open neck, absence of collar and full sleeves caught in with an embroidered band at the wrist, and a straight Reboux sailor of oxidized cloth of silver, is sure of turning herself into an alluring picture.

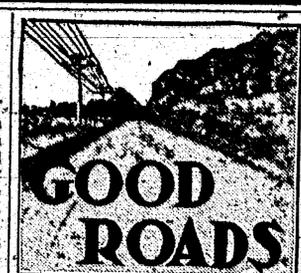

It is not within the power of every woman to look well in a metallic hat. If she will be fashionable at the cost of her appearance, let her take her courage in both hands and defy opinion; but if she will compromise with fashion and her appearance and will settle to it that flesh pink tulle is laid somewhere in the intricacies of the metallic lace or embroidery that makes up the brim, she can frankly line a wide, transparent brim with a double thickness or plaiting of flesh pink tulle. This will make a hat more striking and effective than if the harshness of its metallic threads is left untouched by a softening veil.

Probably the best of these models is one that has a crown entirely of faint blush roses mounted on gold net which is pulled in and out of the flowers, and a brim that tilts a bit in front, made of fine gold lace mounted on flesh pink tulle. Across the back of the brim there is a wide, eighteenth-century bow of blush pink velvet.

All of these evening hats are worn with low gowns more often than with high ones, but so far they have not been adopted at the theater, for few women are willing to go back to the inconvenient days of holding a large hat on their laps, or, falling in the attempt to hold it, spend most of their time frantically grabbing it to keep it from slipping, or picking it up from under the heels of the man who goes out between the acts. A Sofa Pillow for Nothing.

One of the new Jersey silks is as light and dainty as a glove silk, but has the elasticity of the jersey weaves, which makes it admirable for lingerie. There is flesh color, pink or pale white, made up into vests with bodice tops or ribbon straps, suits, bloomers and camisole.

GOOD ROAD WORK IN WINTER

Maintenance of Dirt Roads is Problem Confronting Farmer—Making Spilt-Log-Drags.

One of the problems confronting the farmer is the question of maintenance of dirt roads. Not only should dirt roads be maintained during the spring and summer months, but the winter months as well; especially is this true where there is not an overabundance of snow, which conditions exist with many of our readers.

The King road drag may be used with much benefit during the winter months, just after thaws or rains. Good work can be done at this time of the year because the soil is crumbly or mealy and pushes easily toward the center of the road.

If the road has been properly cared for during the summer and fall, it will be only a slight task to drag it during the winter when conditions are right. At that season of the year there is little for the work team to do and in early spring the roads will be in shape to turn water and permit of early drying. In fact, the winter-dragged roads will be dry and hard in the spring when neglected roads will be soft, rutty and springy. There is no heat time to drag roads. Go after the work and then drag whenever you can during the winter; then your roads will be in good shape next spring. Make a spilt-log road drag and keep it going on the highway.

D. Ward King, the inventor of the drag, gives the following directions for making a spilt-log drag: Take the two halves of a spilt log, ten or twelve inches thick and seven to nine feet long. Set the halves flat side to the front, fasten 30 inches apart with strong stakes, the ends of which are wedged in two-inch auger holes, bored through the slabs. Put a solid plank platform on the stakes for the driver to stand on. The hitch is made of strong wire or chain, the long end fastened to stake over the top of the front slab, the short end should be put through a hole made in center of the slab and near the end to prevent the back slab tilting forward. Face four or five feet of the ditch end of the front slab with iron. An old wagon tire, worn share of road grader, or any piece of flat steel will answer for this purpose.

As a general rule, always haul the drag at an angle of 45 degrees, moving the dirt to the center of the road.

CHURCH TO HELP GOOD ROADS

Isolation and Solitary Confinement of Women Do Much Toward Filling Insane Asylums.

In a lecture on "The Church and Good Roads" the Rev. James Thomas told the ministers' conference in Denver, Colo., that, "The isolation and solitary confinement of the farm wife and the farm servant girl do much toward making these women form a considerable percentage of the inmates of insane asylums."

The speaker continued, "The good roads problem is one to which the church must very soon give material attention." The church is a force in any undertaking and good roads enthusiasts will welcome its efforts in behalf of rural welfare.—Houston Post.

IMPORTANT DUTY OF PEOPLE

Prompt Repair and Careful Maintenance of Good Roads is Essential—Farmer is Interested.

The making of good roads is one of the most important duties of the American people, and their prompt repair and careful maintenance is essential.

WELL WORTH THINKING OVER

Two Machines Being Manufactured Where One Would Do if Farmer Gives It Proper Care.

A farm machinery manufacturer made the following statement: "If the farmer cared for his machinery as he should, we would have to manufacture but one machine when we are now putting out two."

Top Dressing for Roads.

A mixture of iron fibers, sand and cement is being used experimentally in France as a top dressing for highways.

Put Roads to Bed.

The farmer who "put his road to bed" for the winter in good shape, will thank himself later.

Toe III to Walk Upright. Operation Advised. Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This woman now raises chickens and does manual labor. Read her story: Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak with troubles from my age that when going up stairs I had to go my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, did all kinds of garden work, shoveled dirt, did building and cement work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and if these facts are useful you may publish them for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. M. O. ### With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of frezone, says a Cincinnati authority. At little cost one can get a small bottle of frezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding skin. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't frezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Good Health Makes a Happy Home

Good health makes housework easy. Bad health takes all happiness out of it. Hosts of women drag along in daily misery, back aching, worried, "blue," tired, because they don't know what ails them.

These same troubles come with weak kidneys, and, if the kidney action is distressingly disordered, there should be no doubt that the kidneys need help.

War Threatens

No overt act has been committed by Germany since the severance of diplomatic relations to bring about a declaration of war, and yet so many annoying things have multiplied that Uncle Sam is becoming quite impatient, and war may break upon us at any moment. Germany has declared, it is true, that she has no quarrel with the United States, and yet declines to modify her plan of submarine warfare, still adhering to her former announcement that she will torpedo vessels bound for enemy ports.

A great number of ships have been sunk since Germany entered upon her destructive submarine warfare, but few of them have seriously involved the interests of this country, although a number of irritating things have transpired that, all combined, brings the strain to almost the breaking point. The most serious, however, is the retention by Germany of Americans who were on English vessels sunk by German raiders, and who have been taken to Germany. Demands were made upon Germany for their release, and it was reported that the demand had been complied with. Notwithstanding this report, the government is now in possession of evidence which shows that if the Americans were released they have again been apprehended by Germany and are now prisoners. Germany now denies seeking a parley to avoid war with the United States, and her every action indicates that, for some unknown reason, she desires to drag the United States into the war.

Opinions are divided as to what Germany expects from her ruthless submarine warfare, but all opinions agree that she has succeeded in bringing the condemnation of every neutral nation about her ears. One opinion is that Germany really hopes to make the undersea warfare so effective that it will result in the isolation and starvation of England and bring about an easy end of the war. The other opinion is that the German civil population is now starving and that Germany is taking this desperate step with two purposes in view, viz. to cause as much destruction as possible and to fight all neutrals against her so that when she does surrender she can do so with good grace, inasmuch as she will, by this last act of fearfulness, have the combined world against her.

At any rate, we are gradually, though not frantically, drifting toward war. Congress is rushing measures for defense, and offense as well, and government officials fear the worst. Notwithstanding all this preparation and this well founded belief that war is near, the people were never more so quiet and undisturbed than now. The feeling prevails that if war does come, it will not be one of our seeking, and our entrance will be the result of violations of rights that no nation could afford to ignore.

Road Legislation

There is a well founded belief that the present legislature will enact road legislation that will result in some radical change in road government—changes that will probably bring about a different state highway organization and also probably result in the abolishment of the county road boards. In fact, some measures have been introduced already providing for a return to the old form of supervision in counties by the board of county commissioners. In the introduction of senate bill No. 157, Senator Tully of this county evidently assumes that the bill doing away with county road boards will be passed, for no mention of the county road board is mentioned, and, on the other hand, the board of county commissioners is expressly required to perform certain acts.

According to this bill the state highway commission will consist of three members—one to be appointed by the governor upon the recommendation of the state highway association, and the other two to also be appointed by the governor, one from each of the two majority political parties of the state. These commissioners are to receive $500 annual salary and necessary traveling expenses. A state highway engineer shall be appointed by the board, and upon his shoulders, under the provisions of the bill, the principal part of the load will fall. It will be the duty of the engineer to prepare a general highway plan of the state, including the several counties that report highways through the county surveyors or highway superintendents, and shall, in cooperation with the state highway board, select and designate the highways upon which work is to be performed.

Section 7 is the one relating more particularly to county affairs, and reads:

"Sec. 7. That whenever the county commissioners of any county shall desire that any main traveled road or roads in such county which are included among those adopted by the State Highway Board as a system of state roads be improved or constructed under the provisions of this act, written application shall be made by commissioners to the State Highway Engineer for the improvement of such road and for state aid therefor. If the county commissioners of any county shall fail to so apply for state aid during the year for which such aid is available, it shall thereby forfeit its right to its portion of state aid for that year, and the funds apportioned to such county under the provisions of section 14 of this act shall remain in and be a part of the 'State Highway Fund' for the succeeding year. If, upon receipt of such application, the State Highway Engineer shall be satisfied, after investigation, that the proposed improvement should be made or undertaken and that the county will be able to pay its portion of the cost thereof and that state funds will be available to pay the State's portion of such cost, he may approve the same and undertake said work of improvement in accordance with the provisions of this act; and the said State Highway Engineer, or one of his assistants, shall proceed to view said road or part thereof proposed to be improved and make all surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates of cost for its construction out of such materials as may be decided upon by the State Highway Engineer; provided, that whenever, in the judgment of the State Highway Department, it is desirable to proceed with the improvement of any road or roads comprised in the system of state roads, for the improvement of which the county commissioners of the county in which the same is located shall have failed or declined to make application as provided in this section, it will be lawful for the State Highway Engineer to proceed with the improvement of any such road or roads without application from the said county commissioners, and to pay the entire cost of such improvement from the portion of the State Highway Fund made available under the provisions of this act for expenditure wholly within the discretion of the State Highway Department and from the State apportionment of funds under the act of Congress herein-after referred to."

'The Eyes of the World'

The great film production, depicting Harold Bell Wright's great story, "The Eyes of the World" was twice presented at the Crystal Wednesday—afternoon and night to crowded houses. It is a wonderful production of ten reels, depicting scenes of beauty, grandeur, as well as clearly portrayed licentiousness, envy, intrigue and revenge. An orchestra of three pieces accompanied the production and was one of the most attractive features.

Contest No. 1029
Department of the Interior
United States Land Office
Roswell, New Mexico.

February 3, 1917.

To Fred Hughes of Carrizozo, New Mexico, Contestee:
You are hereby notified that George W. Higgins, who gives Carrizozo, New Mexico, as his post office address, did on January 22, 1917, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead Entry, Serial No. 024577, made October 10, 1911, for SW 1/4, Section 20, Township 8 South, Range 10 East, N. M. P. Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that you have wholly abandoned said claim for more than one year last past; that your absence therefrom is not due to your employment in military service rendered in connection with operations in Mexico, or along the borders thereof, or in mobilization camps elsewhere in the military or naval service organization of the U. S. or in the National Guard of any of the several States.

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be canceled thereunder without your further right to be heard thereon, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FORTIETH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person, proof of such service may be either the said contestant's written acknowledgment of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed, stating when and the post office to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter. You should state in your answer the name of the post office to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

SYNOPSIS.

Kenneth Griswold, an unsuccessful writer, because of socialistic tendencies, holds up Andrew Galbraith, president of the Bureau of State Security, in the private office and escapes with the stolen money. By original methods he escapes the hotel and goes aboard the Belle Julie as a stowaway. Charlotte Farnham of Wahaska, Minn., who had been his cash Galbraith's check in the bank, recognizes him and sends a letter of betrayal to Galbraith anonymously. Griswold is arrested on the arrival of the Belle Julie at Wahaska, Minn., and escapes from his cell. He hides in a rooming house, and after a while properly takes the train. Griswold falls ill on the sleeper and is cared for and taken to her home in Wahaska by Margery Grierson, daughter of Jasper Grierson, the financial magnate of Wahaska. Margery finds the stolen money in Griswold's suitcase. Broffin, detective, takes the trail Margery asks her father to get Edward Raymer into financial hot water and then help him out of it. Griswold recovers to find the stolen money and forms a friendship with Raymer, and the iron manufacturer. Broffin comes to Wahaska in search of the woman who wrote the anonymous letter to Galbraith. Margery takes Griswold to the safety deposit vault and turns the stolen money over to him.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

"You still think I could tell you that, if I chose?" she said, willfully misleading him, or at least allowing him to mislead himself.

"I don't think anything about it—I know! You'd met him somewhere before that day in the bank—before you knew he was going to turn gentleman holdup. That's why you don't want to give up his real name."

She had risen, and in self-defense Broffin had to grope on the floor for his hat and stand up too.

"Wait a minute. I'm an officer of the law, and I could arrest you and take you to New Orleans on what evidence I've got. How about that?"

There was good fighting blood on the Farnham side, notwithstanding the kindly Doctor Bertie's peaceful vocation, and the calm gray eyes that met Broffin's were militantly angry when the retort came.

"If I had a brother, Mr. Broffin, he would be able to answer you better than I can!" she flamed out. "Let me pass, please!"

It was not often that Broffin lost his head or his temper, but both were gone when he struck back.

"That'll be all right, too!" he broke out harshly, blocking the way to force her to listen to him. "You think you've bluffed me, don't you?—what? Let me tell you: some fine day this dock whose name isn't Gavitt will turn up here to see you; then I'll nab him. If you find out where he is, and write to him not to come, it'll be all the same; he'll come anyway, and when he does come, I'll get him!"

"I Am an Officer of the Law."

When Miss Farnham had gone in and there was nothing left for him to do but to compass his own disappearance, Broffin went away, telling himself with many blandishments that for once in his professional career he had made an ass of himself. The doctor's daughter knew the man; she had known him before the robbery; she was willing to be his accomplice to the extent of her ability. There was only one explanation of this attitude. In Broffin's wording of it, Miss Farnham was "gone on him," if not openly, at least to such an extent as to make her anxious to shield him.

That being the case, Broffin set it down as a fact as good as accomplished that the man would sooner or later come to Wahaska. The detective's knowledge of masculine human nature was as profoundly acute as the requirements of his calling demanded. With a woman like Miss Farnham for the lure, he could be morally certain that his man would some time fling caution, or even a written prohibition, to the winds, and walk into the trap. This misdeed of Broffin's happened upon a Wednesday, which, in its calendar placing, chances to be three weeks to a day after Griswold had been arrested in the safety deposit vault.

In two quiet upper rooms in the Widow Holcomb's house in upper Shawnee street.

That it was also a day of other coincidences will appear in the casting up of the items on the page of events. For one thing, it marked the formal opening of the De Soto Inn for the summer season. For another, the special train from the far South arriving at noon and bearing the first detachment of the inn's guests, had for one of its Pullman-passengers an elderly gentleman with a strongly marked Scottish face; a gentleman with the bushy white eyebrows of age, the long upper lip of caution, the drooping eyelid of irascibility, and the bearing of a man of routine; in other words, Mr. Andrew Galbraith, faring northward on his customary summer vacation, which—the fates intervening—he had this time determined to spend at the Wahaska resort.

For a third item, it was at three o'clock of this same Wednesday that Raymer came out of Jasper Grierson's bank with his head down and a cloud on his brow; the cloud dating back to an interview just closed, a short and rather brittle conference with the bank's president held in Jasper Grierson's private room, with the president sitting at one in his huge armchair, and his visitor standing, quite destitute of ease, at the desk-end.

Raymer's horse was only a short half-square away, hitched in front of the Winnabago house, and he went to get it. But at the instant of unhitching, Miss Grierson's trap was driven up and the untying of knots paused while he stepped from the curb to stand at the wheel of the modish equipage.

"You are getting to be as bad as all the others," was the greeting he got from the high driving seat. "You haven't been at Moreside for an age—only once since the night you took Mr. Griswold away from us. By the way, what has become of Mr. Griswold? He doesn't show himself in public much oftener than you do."

"I think he has been getting to work on his writing," said Raymer, good-naturedly apologizing for his friend. "He'll come down out of the clouds after a little. I understand he dined at Doctor Bertie's tonight."

The young iron founder was looking up into the eyes of beguiling when he said this, and, being a mere man, he wondered what made them flash and then grow suddenly fathomless and brooding.

"When you see him, tell him that we are still on earth over at Moreside," said the magnate's daughter portly; and a moment later, as Raymer was turning out of Main street into the dark face and drooping mustache; a pedestrian whose preoccupation seemed so great as to make him quite oblivious to street crossings and passing vehicles until Raymer pulled his horse back into the shafts and shouted.

One more small coincidence will serve to total the items on the Wednesday page. If Broffin had not stopped to look after the man who had so nearly run him down, he might have been crossing Main street in front of the Winnabago at the precise instant when Miss Grierson, with young Dahlgren in the second seat of the trap, came around the square and pulled up to let her horse drink at the public fountain.

"Who is that bitter-croakish-looking man crossing over to the Winnabago house?" asked Miss Grierson of her seatmate, indicating Broffin with a wave of the whip, and skillfully making the query sound like the voicing of the faintest curiosity.

"Fellow named Broffin, from Louisiana," said Dahlgren, who, as assistant editor of the Daily Wahaskan, knew everybody. "Says he's in the lumber business down there, but I doubt it," said the carpenter, and shed a bitter tear.

"Why do you doubt it?" queried Miss Grierson, neatly flicking a fly from the horse's back with the tip of the whiplash.

"Oh, on general principles, I guess. You wouldn't say he had any of the earmarks of a business man."

"What kind of earmarks has he got?" poraled Miss Grierson—merely to make talk, as Dahlgren decided.

"I don't know. We were talking about him at the club the other night, and Sheffield—he's from Kentucky, you know—thought he remembered the name as the name of a 'moonshine' raider he'd heard of down in his home state."

"A moonshine raider? What is that?" By this time Miss Margery's curiosity was less inert than it had been, or had seemed to be, at first.

"A deputy marshal, you know; a sort of government policeman and detective rolled into one. He looks it, don't you think?"

Miss Grierson did not say what she thought, then, or later, when she saw Dahlgren stare at the top of the highway from the portion of the State Highway Fund made available under the provisions of this act gave a brief sentence in the library to a small, barefoot whose occupation was sufficient dictated by the bundle of spectacles under one arm.

"Well, Johnnie, what did you out?" she asked.

"Ain't had time," said the boy. "I ain't no millinaire lumberer. I'll bet a nickel. I sold him a yard, and I sat him what kind of beer that was in the pile by the He didn't know, no more'n a goat. Miss Margery flipped a coin at air and the newsboy caught it ferously.

"That will do nicely for a ning, Johnnie," she said as "Come and see me every-ounce while, and perhaps there'll be little white cartwheels for you. Don't tell, and don't let him catch That's all."

CHAPTER XVII.

The Forward Light.

During the days which follow, settling up of the standard of independence in Mrs. Holcomb's floor front, Griswold found himself toring upon a now field—a world responding with gratifying side that presaged future which struck out in the waking hours first night on the main-deck of Belle Julie.

Wahaska, as a fortunate del the post-graduate course in mental Humanity, was all the fancy had pictured it. When he to go about the town, as he did after the pleasant occupation furnishing his study and bedroom a pleasure past, he found that in mysterious manner his fame had ceded him. Everybody seems know who he was; to be able to him as a New Yorker, as an au search of health, or local color, environment or some other to quality not to be found in the cities; to be able to place him, as Miss Margery Grierson's friend, beneficiary—which last, he sur was his best passport to the graces of his fellow-townsmen.

Coincidentally he discovered in the same mysterious manner, body seemed to know that he was the Wahaskan phrase, "well! Here, again, he guessed that thing might be credited to Marg. As to the manner of conducti war against inequality and the of plutocracy, the plan of cam had been sufficiently indicated in white-hot moment of high reno; the cargo-dock of the Belle Julie, the propaganda, there was his for the demonstration, he would the sacred fund into some ind where the weight of it would give the casting vote in all questio volve the rights of the worker.

With the rewriting of the boog ly begun, he was already looking for the practical opportunity wh growing friendship with Edward mer promised to offer an openlly fulfilling the experimen requirements Raymer had en larged his plant and was needin capital; and some of Raymer, confidences had led him to susp the need was, or was likely to be imperative. Griswold waited ly; he was still waiting Wednesday afternoon when R called him over the telephone made the appointment for a me at the house in Shawnee street.

forgetting, Turkey-broden, some along village of the Reuben Yapt?

Griswold, waiting on the porch while Doctor Farnham fitted his key, had a nerve-tingling shiver of apprehension when the latch yielded with a click and he found himself under the hall lantern formally shaking hands with the statuesque young woman of the many imaginings.

"You are very welcome to Home Nook, Mr. Griswold; we have been hearing about you for many weeks," she was saying when he had relinquished the firm hand and was hanging his coat and hat on the hall rack. And then, with a half-embarrassed laugh: "I am afraid we are dreadful gossip; all Wahaska has been talking about you, you know, and wondering how it came to acquire you."

"It hasn't acquired anything very valuable," was the guest's modest disclaimer, its readiness arising out of a grateful easing of strains now that the actual face-to-face ordeal had safely passed its introductory stage. "And you mustn't say a word against your charming little city, Miss Farnham," he went on. "It is the friendliest, most hospitable."

The doctor's daughter was interrupting with an enthusiastic show of applause.

"Come out to dinner, both of you," she urged; and then to Griswold: "I want you to say all those nice things to Aunt Fanny."

In the progress to the cozy, home-like dining-room Griswold found the contrast between the Farnham home and the ornate mansion three streets away on the lake front strikingly apparent; as clearly marked as that between Margery Grierson and the sweetly serene and conventional young person who was introducing him to her aunt across the small oval dining table.

So far, all was going well. But a little later, in the midst of a half-uttered direction to the serving maid, Miss Farnham stopped abruptly, and Griswold could feel her gaze, wide-eyed and half-terrified, seemingly fixed upon him.

It was all over in the turning of a leaf; there had been no break in the doctor's genial rally, and the breathless little pause at the other end of the table was only momentary. When the dinner was over the doctor, in the act of filling two long-stemmed pipes for his guest and himself, was called away professionally. Miss Gilman, least obtrusively of chaperons, had been peacefully napping for a good half-hour in her low rocker under the reading lamp, and the pictures in a thick quarto of Gulf Coast views had pleasantly filled the interval for the two who were awake, when Griswold finally assured himself that the danger of recognition was a danger past. As a mental analyst he knew that the opening of each fresh door in the house of pre-empt familiarity was automatically closing other doors opening upon the past; and it came to him with a little flush of the seer's exaltation that once again his prognurings were fitting their exact fulfillment. In a spirit of artistic daring he yielded to a sudden impulse, as one crossing the simplest of bridges may run and leap to prove that his theory of safety stresses in a sufficient guaranty of his own immunity.

"You were speaking of first impressions of places," he said, while they were still turning the leaves of the picture book. "Are you a believer in the absolute correctness of first impressions?"

"I don't know," was the thoughtful reply; but its afterward was more definite: "As to places, I'm not sure that the first impression always persists; in a few instances I am quite certain it hasn't. I didn't like the Gulf coast at all, at first; it seemed so foreign and different and unhomelike. As to persons, however—"

She paused, and Griswold entered the breach hardily.

"I know," he affirmed. "There have been times when, with every reasonable fiber in you urging you to believe that you are a good impression, I have been by the back of my head."

DRUGGISTS IN EVERY STATE RELY ON THIS KIDNEY MEDICINE

For about nine years we have been selling Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and it has given utmost satisfaction to our customers according to the words of praise received from those who have used it and proved its value. We are satisfied that Swamp-Root has high curative value and we recommend it whenever we can.

We sell more of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root than any other two preparations of its kind on the market, and our store has been selling it ever since it came out. Those who have used it speak in the highest terms of its curative value, and if it was not a medicine of merit our customers would not continue to buy it and new patrons ask for it.

NEWS and GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON

High Cost of Twine Has Hit U. S. Post Office

WASHINGTON.—New spare-time employment has been found for the workers of the post office department in the unraveling of ends of odd bits of twine that come in the post offices throughout the country, and in tying the ends together to form balls of twine for tying purposes.

This is the result of a wave of economy in the post office department. In calling attention to the fact that such spare-time employment is given to idle men in some of the post offices the department states: "It is desired that this work is to be followed throughout the service and that excess twine which is accumulated be sent by mail to the nearest large post office or division headquarters of the railway mail service." The department officials state that owing to the abnormal increase in the price of jute twine, a contract for the supply of which has just been made for a period of one year from November 1, 1916, it is necessary to emphasize previous appeals that care and economy be exercised in the use of twine, and that it be saved and reused when possible.

President Wilson Thinks and Writes in Shorthand

FEW persons perhaps know that among his varied accomplishments President Wilson combines a complete knowledge of shorthand. Mr. Wilson writes shorthand with such great accuracy, legibility and skill that almost anybody with an elementary knowledge of shorthand can read his outlines.

Many of Mr. Wilson's most famous speeches and most notable state papers have been thought out first in shorthand on paper and later written on the typewriter by the president's own hand. His recent message to congress was first prepared in this way.

Consider Form of Government for New Possessions

CREATION of a form of government for the Danish West Indies is a legislative task which will confront congress after ratification of the treaty providing for their acquisition have been exchanged between the United States and Denmark. Congress will await, however, a note from the secretary of state announcing the completion of diplomatic exchanges before undertaking to appropriate the money. Administration leaders expect that the state department will conclude the negotiations in time to include the purchase price in the general deficiency appropriation bill at this session. But they doubt that any effort will be made by this congress to create the permanent form of government to be provided for this important territorial acquisition to the United States.

"Little White House" Headquarters of Suffragists

THE Congressional union recently celebrated its first anniversary in its new home, Cameron House, 21 Madison place, opposite Lafayette park, the building which is now the national headquarters of the movement to enfranchise women through the passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment.

The name "Little White House" by which this stately residence is familiarly known, has not been bestowed upon it by chance, for during its nearly 60 years of existence it has been the center from which have radiated many a plan and program affecting the nation's destinies. Built in 1828 by Benjamin Ogle Tayloe, the house is filled with the traditions of its many occupants—traditions which have become a vital part of Washington's history.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make It Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove Dandruff—Real Surprise for You.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Dandarine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Dandarine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Dandarine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Books in Prison. Prison literature has many fine productions to its credit in prose as well as poetry. In his prison at Athens, Socrates completed his great argument for immortality; in a Roman dungeon Galileo made some of his greatest discoveries. In his prison in Wartburg castle Luther translated the New Testament into the German language. During his twelve years in Bedford jail Bunyan dreamed his immortal dream of the "Pilgrim's Progress." Sir Walter Raleigh wrote the fragmentary history of the world to beguile the long years of his imprisonment in the Tower of London. Much of the New Testament also is prison literature. Some of the finest of the epistles of St. Paul were written during his imprisonment at Rome, and the Book of the Revelation of St. John was written while he was an exile on the island prison of Patmos.—London Chronicle.

A Pertinent Query. "Can't you spare me a dime, mister?" "Not today." "I ain't had a bite since yesterday." "Can't help it." "Why can't yer do a little fer me?" "I haven't any change." "No change?" "That's what I said." "Den why ther dickens don't yer go to work?"—Boston Evening Transcript.

Might Get His. "Guess Fluddub won't apply for country board next summer." "Why not?" "He was too prominent in the egg boycott to take chances on getting into the clutches of a farmer on the latter's native beach."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ENDS DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, GAS

"Pape's Diapepsin" cures sick, sour stomachs in five minutes—Time It!

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars worth of satisfaction. It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.—Adv.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today cures a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

To Make Dirty Water Clean. When we started for our trip to Mt. Kilimanjaro I had told Jeremiah, one of our African boys, to fix six barrels with water and have it clean. But when I opened the first barrel, it was covered with soap-suds. I asked the boy what was wrong with the water. He said: "Very clean water, master. I put soap in every barrel to make it clean." So we drank soap-suds all the way.—Peter MacQueen in World Outlook.

The PERUNA Family

has three members you should know if you desire to enjoy life.

1. The popular liquid form of Peruna—the reliable tonic of the American household, with a long history of success in treating all catarrhal diseases.
2. The tablet form, which is made after the same formula and is more convenient for many.
3. Mannin, the ideal laxative, by the regular use of which constipation may be overcome and natural action restored. Mannin has no habit-forming effect, but is an aid to nature.

Your druggist has all three. So many thousands have received benefit from the use of one or both of these remedies that they are a recognized part of the equipment of every careful household.
