OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 20

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1919

NUMBER 42

THE RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

Following are the local chairmen appointed by the manager of the Red Cross campaign:

Alto, Pete Phillips; Ancho, James Secrest; Arabela, Leopoldo Pacheco; Capitan, L. W. White; Carrizozo, O. W. Bamberger; Corona, E. L. Moulton; Encinoso, R. E. Ferris; Fort Stanton, Dr. Wm. A. Kern; Glencoe, H. P. Clark; Hondo, Robert Brady; Jicarilla, Geo. Weisbar; Lincoln, J. M. Penfield; Meek, J. P. Pendergrass; Nogal, J. N. Baskin; Ocuero, Chas. F. Gray; Parsons, Charlotte Rice; Picacho, B. D. Garger; Rabenton, Juan Martinez; Ruidoso, Mr. Davis; San Patricio, Leopoldo Gonzales; Spindle, W. E. Blanchard; Tinnie, Mrs. S. Raymond; White Mountain, Ben Nabours, Jr.; and White Oaks, Mrs. C. D. Mayer.

Posters have gone out to the local chairman, subscription receipts to the Red Cross magazine, literature and supplies of different kinds.

The suggestion is made that the educational campaign begin at once. If any of the local chairman want to help out their quota by giving an entertainment of any kind, that they do so. However actual soliciting for funds should not begin before the 2nd. of November, then it is hoped that we will have at least 200 men and women fully organized and ready, the people intelligently informed of the purpose of the campaign; then we expect to "hit the line" for 12 hours every day until the close of the campaign November 11th. By that time we want to be over and not going over.

Every effort should be made to get subscriptions to the Red Cross magazine, $1.00 each and to have all enroll as members of the Red Cross, $1.00 each. Neither of these sums have anything to do with your quota of the amount each donates to the general fund. Watch the local papers for further announcements.

Local chairmen are encouraged to write for instruction and assistance, if they feel they need it.

E. M. BRICKLEY,
Roll Call Chairman, Red Cross,
Lincoln County, N. M.

by people of Lincoln county. It is to be hoped that very shortly all who can will enroll. Some of the members have not yet sent in their dues. Unless these are paid one cannot remain a member in good standing in the American Legion. Every one is urged to send in their $3.00 which pays dues to Aug. 1, 1920. Watch the local papers for announcements with regard to the Legion.

Don't Be a Junker

The feeling is prevalent in some quarters that the Red Cross has had enough assistance and now, that the war is over, it deserves no further aid. Of course, there's no merit in such a suggestion and it carries its own refutation. However, there may exist some who honestly believe the time has come to cease rendering aid to the Red Cross, and to those we desire to submit the following, and ask its respectful consideration:

"The war's over; let's junk the Red Cross," was a thoughtless remark of an equally thoughtless individual.

If we can "junk" the thousands of maimed and crippled American soldiers;

If we can "junk" the other thousands who are penniless, jobless and without a future, as a result of their rallying to their country's cause;

If we can "junk" the agonizing cries of distress and suffering that reaches us from other shores;

If we can "junk" the thousands of mothers, wives, children and other dependents of American soldiers;

If we can "junk" thousands of new-born babies, whose very lives depend upon proper care (being taught by the Red Cross);

If we can "junk" the thousands of American soldiers and sailors still in service;

If we can "junk" the welfare of our own families;

If we can "junk" the spirit that mobilized 10,000,000 children under the banner of the Junior Red Cross;

In short, if we can "junk" humanity—if we can turn deaf ears to suffering the world over—Then we can "junk" the Red Cross!

Are you a junker?

CARRIZOZO SCHOOL NOTES

SUPR. R. E. COLB.

The percentage of attendance in the Carrizozo schools during the school month just closing is high. As an instance of this, Mrs. Massie's room has an enrollment of 40, and during the past week the attendance was 40 every day but one.

Columbus Day, Oct. 12, was observed in Miss Jarrett's room with the following program:

Song, "Red, White and Blue," School.

"Columbus," by Joaquin Miller, Maxine Hoffman.

"The Discovery of America," Walter La Fleur.

"This Day is Ours," Nellie Shaver.

"The Boy, Columbus," Ethel Johnson.

"Quotations from Lowell on Columbus," Miller French.

On Friday afternoons of the first and third weeks of the school month, between the afternoon recess and four o'clock, the high school, including the eighth grade, has a literary society in which all pupils must take part as they are assigned a place on the program. The following is the program of last week:

Call to order, President Linza Brannum.

Appointment of a critic for the next meeting.

Reading the Minutes of the Last Meeting, Catherine Pine.

Critic's Report of the Last Meeting, Mary White.

Debate: "Resolved, that the world is growing better."

Affirmative, Edward Corn, William Johnson; Negative, Dan Elliott, Roy Stimmel. The decision was in favor of the affirmative.

Parliamentary Talk, Ruby Smith.

Current Events, Lois Jones.

School Paper: Editors, Lillian Merchant and Grace Taylor.

President Linza Brannum asked the society to accept his resignation as president, in order to do more active literary work in the society. His purpose is highly commendable and the resignation was accepted. Sydney Hust was then elected as the new president. Parents and friends are very cordially invited to these exercises.

Miss Grace Essey visited the city schools last Monday in the interests of the Junior Red Cross. Miss Essey addressed the teachers of the city schools at 8:30; the high school, the seventh and sixth grades at 9:00 and the children of the lower grades at other times. The addresses were received with the greatest interest on the part of the students, and the pupils of the Carrizozo schools have resolved to give a hundred per cent membership to the Junior Red Cross.

Mexico's handit industry is, as usual, flourishing.

A Tribute to the Memory of W. G. Wells

By Our Favorite Correspondent

Parsons, N. M.—Wm. G. Wells who died here last week was born in Canada, in 1865, but moved with family to Manchester, N.H. when nine years old. Being subject to asthma he came west when nineteen years. He drifted around for several years, living in Nebraska, Oklahoma, Colorado and finally settling in New Mexico. He was married to Miss Emma Nichols in Denver in 1894, and he with his wife came to the Bonito Valley in 1905, and took up a homestead. Later he became interested with Mr. Grafton in a saw mill on the Bonito, and which he had just put into good running order when his call came to lay aside his work and rest. Mr. Wells had been suffering from stomach trouble for some time, but insisted on going to Capitan on the 3rd of October to make final proof on his land. After the papers were signed he became worse and Dr. Price was called and his wife sent for. Everything possible was done for him, but without avail, and surrounded by his wife and friends he passed away early Sunday morning. The remains were taken to Roswell for burial, and the funeral services were conducted by the Woodmen of the World, of which order he had been a member for many years.

The remains were accompanied to their last resting place by his wife and brother and many devoted friends he had made while a resident of Roswell.

The floral offerings were many and beautiful. Aside from his wife, the deceased is survived by three brothers and two sisters, all of whom live in the east with the exception of one brother who had made his home with him for several years.

The deceased was a conscientious citizen and was respected by all who knew him. His friends and neighbors will miss one who so lately moved among them and who always had the interests of the community in which he lived at heart.

Call for Census Enumerators

Juan J. Duran, Supervisor of the Census for the First District of New Mexico, which includes the counties of Union, Colfax, Mora, San Miguel, Guadalupe, Quay, Torrance, Curry, DeBaca, Roosevelt, Lincoln, Chavez, Otero, Eddy, Lea, states that he will need about 150 enumerators for this district. Applications, or requests for application forms, should be sent to him on or before October 20. His address is Clayton, New Mexico.

As a test of their fitness for the work applicants will be required to fill out a sample schedule and will be duly notified of the time and place for this test. So far as practicable the place selected will be one which is easily accessible.

Red Cross Election

The annual meeting of the Lincoln County Chapter A. R. C. will be held in the court house, Carrizozo, N. M., Wednesday, October 22, 1919, at the hour of 4:30 p. m. An executive committee is to be chosen, also a school committee. All members are urged to be present.

JRO. A. HALBY,

League's Senate Foes Denounced by Republican Governor

Washington, D. C.—Responsibility for the continuance of unrest and disorder is charged to the Republican senatorial opponents of the treaty, and a prediction of their party's defeat is voiced by former Governor Frank D. Jackson of Iowa in a letter he has sent to Congressman Carl W. Riddick in reply to a request that he subscribe for the National Republican Weekly.

Governor Jackson's letter follows:

"Carl W. Riddick, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir: Your letter asking my subscription for the National Republican Weekly and a donation to the Republican organization has been received.

"I am what is known as a 'standpat' Republican and always have been, but I want to say to you in all frankness, that if the Republican party is going to stand for the 'branding iron' of opposition to the immediate approval of the peace treaty as submitted to the senate without amendment, then I want to whisper in your ear that all the subscriptions to the National Republican Weekly and all the contributions to the Republican cause will not save the party from final and overwhelming defeat.

"The people of this country are getting very tired of hearing about Republican efforts of 'organization against socialism and the increasing drift toward lawlessness' when the failure of the Republican senators to approve the peace treaty and the league of nations is stimulating, more than anything else, the increasing drift toward lawlessness and anarchy.

"The people of this country know what they want, and if I am any judge of the temper of the people, they intend to have this peace treaty approved now and without any more delay. I am disgusted with so-called Republican leaders and I am not a Wilson man, either personally or politically. On the other hand, I am not in favor of letting the country drift to the devil while Republican leaders play horse.

Very truly yours,
FRANK D. JACKSON."

A Tribute to Water

Colonel Bob Maxe was once called to respond to the toast, "Water" at an Arkansas banquet, and he thoroughly expressed his sentiments in the following:

"Water is the purest and best of all the things that God created.

I have seen it glisten in tiny drops on the sleeping lids of infancy; I have seen it trickle down the blushing cheeks of youth, and go in rushing torrents down the wrinkled cheeks of age. I have seen it in tiny dewdrops on the blades of grass and leaves of trees, flashing like polished diamonds when the sun bursts in resplendent glory over the eastern hills. I have seen it trickle down the mountain sides in tiny rivulets with the music of liquid silver striking the beds of diamonds. I have seen it in the rushing river rippling over pebbly bottoms, purling about jutting stones, roaring over precipitous falls in its mad rush to join the mighty father of waters. I have seen it go on its slow and majestic sweep to join the ocean. And I have seen it in the mighty ocean on whose broad bosom float the battle fleets of all nations, and the commerce of the world. But, gentlemen, I want to say to you now, that as a beverage, it is a damn failure."

NEWSY NEWS FROM OSCURO

The big drill has given us one week of continuous drilling. I have not been able to find out the exact depth at this writing.

We are having our usual ideal fall weather now. Cool nights and pleasant days. Jack Frost must be traveling this way.

Mr. Keeling is here to relieve Mr. Burns, the depot agent, while he takes his usual vacation.

Mr. Sutton, a rig builder of Iola, Kansas, was in town one day last week, and said, "Everywhere I have been the people seem to know all about the coming oil field in the Tularosa Basin.

Mrs. Ben Burns left Monday evening for Chicago, to spend the month with her mother and friends. Ben will join her later after he takes his little hunt up in the mountains.

It is reported that the Southwestern Tularosa Basin Oil and Refining company will spud in this week. Their location is about eighteen miles south and eight miles west of Oscuro, or about 20 miles as the crow flies. They have a big California rig and will start an 18-inch hole. They have several hundred feet of 16-inch casing on the ground.

Ed Howser received a batch of unique and artistically printed letter heads this week, which he will be pleased to show a sample of to anyone calling at his office. The design is by himself, and the printing was done at the Carrizozo News.

PARSONS NEWS NOTES

Miss Minnie Wahl is glad to get back to the mountains after a sojourn in Carrizozo.

Mrs. De Armon and children are visiting in Oklahoma. Mr. De Armon and his dog look sort of lonesomelike.

Dr. and Mrs. Blaney motored over from Carrizozo last week. Mrs. Blaney was on a tour of inspection of the rural schools, but took time while here to get a breath of mountain air and visit old friends.

Everybody be prepared for the Red Cross drive in November. We haven't fallen down before—let's not now.

Little Eleanor, late of Cloudland, decided that three boys and one girl was an unbalanced family so did what she could to make up the deficiency. She came down and found a warm welcome in the family of Capt. Henley.

The most common occurrence nowadays is the unannounced shower, and if the frost keeps off long enough we will have a crop of potatoes yet.

Having missed the early "black" frost the grass on the range as well as garden sas, keeps on growing.

Not a tenderfoot or the other, but the Almanac man predicts an open winter, but the corn husks are thick and the chickens have an extra allowance of feathers, and old timers say that is a sure sign of cold weather.

Farmers are still busy gathering in their crops and replenishing their wood piles before cold weather sets in.

Mrs. Lula Wingfield and little daughter Opal are visiting Mrs. Wingfield's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Robison.

Lord Northcliffe is drafting a home rule bill for Ireland. If he can draw one that will suit Ireland he is some statesman.

78 CONGRESSIONAL MEDALS of HONOR to A.E.F.

By John Dickinson Sherman

Oh, the Edgians an' the Irish an' the 'oblin' Scotliss, too, The Caruicks and Austriloo-uns an' the 'airy French polli The only thing that bothered us in all our staggerin' ranks Was wot in all would 'appen w'en the 'Uns 'ad 'it the Yanks.

THE United States of America is preparing an illustrated history of the great war which will tell exactly what happened when the Hun hit the Yanks. In the meantime Congress has picked out a few sample fighting Yanks and awarded them the Medal of Honor, not for doing their mere duty, but for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty." Incidentally, this list could be easily doubled and tripled. Again: The names of American soldiers who wear other American, British and French decorations are legion, six of the 12,000 Americans who fought with the Canadians were awarded the Victoria Cross, the British decoration corresponding to the Medal of Honor. One out of 15,400 soldiers in action received the Medal of Honor.

I would like to see the official citations setting forth the acts of supreme courage of each of these 78 medallists printed in full in every newspaper in the land. I would like to see these citations made into a text-book and put into the public schools. I am not bloodthirsty, but I approve efficiency, even in killing Huns. And I think such a book would be an incentive to patriotism to every red-blooded American boy and girl—our future citizens.

As it is, there is space for little hero besides the names of the medallists. Study the list and find out many interesting things for yourself. You will note, for instance, that 21 are officers and 57 enlisted men. Nineteen paid the price with their lives. New York leads with nine; Illinois is second with seven, and California, Missouri, New Jersey, South Carolina and Tennessee share third honors with six each.

Military experts have long regarded the Marines the most efficient fighting men of all the armies of the world. Nevertheless, 23 of the medals go to the men of the National Guards; 23 to men of the selective draft organizations, 13 to regular army and marine units, 2 to the tank corps and 1 to the air service.

By divisions, the Thirtieth leads with 12 medals; it is the National Guard organization of the Carolinas and Tennessee. Second honors go to the Eighty-ninth division, which is the selective draft unit of western Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, South Dakota and New Mexico. The third is the Thirty-third or National Guard Division of Illinois. Fourth honors go to the famous Second division of regulars, which includes the marines, while fifth place is shared by the two New York divisions, the Twenty-seventh and the Seventy-seventh.

Sergeant Ellis, a regular, put in a whole day far in advance of the first wave of his company reducing machine-gun nests single-handed. He killed many of the enemy and captured ten machine guns and more than 50 prisoners.

Lieutenant Woodfill, also a regular, reduced three separate machine-gun nests, killing at least 12 of the enemy with rifle and pistol and finally two with a pick.

Lieutenant Luke, an eighteen-year-old volunteer aviator, destroyed 18 enemy aircraft in 17 days. Wounded and forced to make a landing, he killed attacking Germans with his pistol until he fell.

Sergeant York was originally a sincere conscientious objector. He was convinced from the Bible that "blessed are the peacemakers." So he went over to help make peace. He killed 24 of the enemy with rifle and pistol, put a whole machine-gun battalion out of business and marched 123 prisoners back to the American lines.

Every possible kind of courage was shown by these medallists. Roberts, when his tank slid into a flooded shell hole, deliberately gave his life to save his gunner. Blackwell gave his life in a volunteer attempt to get through heavy fire with a message. Whittelsey in the "Go to hell" officer of Argonne fame, who would not surrender. Loman wears also the Victoria Cross, Legion of Honor, the Medaille Militaire and the Croix de Guerre.

Don't forget the cartoon in which the one-armed hero and the potential hero who never got to the front lines are each saying "Kod lucky guy!" And don't forget the potential heroes. Their hearts were broken.

Oregon, Ill.—"I took Lydia E. I saw the Compound advertised in our paper, and tried it. It has restored my health so I can do all my work and I am so grateful that I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. D. M. ALLEN, R. Only women who have suffered the tortures of such troubles and have dragged along from day to day can realize the relief which this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. INSISTED ON QUICK ACTION

This Father About as Genial as Many Who Expect Wonders From Correspondence School.

Henry P. Davison was talking about the numerous correspondence courses in five lessons—each lesson to be mastered in one evening over the after-dinner cigar—which teach a man how to become a Napoleon of finance. "You can't learn to be a Napoleon of finance or anything else so easily," he said. "These courses remind me of the man who brought his son to the school of mines and growled: "I want you to learn this hero boy to be an expert mine engineer, but look a-here—I don't want him to waste his time over a lot of book nonsense about strata and denudations, and don't bother him with micrology and crystals, neither. What I want him to learn is how to find gold and silver and copper in payin' quantities—payin' quantities, mind you—and I'll call for him and put him in to work Monday a week."

RECOGNIZED THAT ART WORK

Profiteer Picked Out Wrong Man to Boast About Picture He Had "Picked Up."

A Kansas City profiteer moved into his study—new home last week, and last night was plotting a salaried friend around through the new art and furniture. As they entered the "library," the profiteer pointed with great pride to a lurid picture on the wall, and said: "How do you like that for art? I'm ashamed to tell you how cheap I got that down at the art shop the other day. See that torn place in the corner? That was made, the dealer said, by one of them German looters in the Thirty-Year war."

"The dealer was mistaken," observed the salaried friend. "It was another war. It was made by a beer bottle I threw myself, I never could stand that picture, especially when I was lit up. Grogan's bartender kicked me clear across the sidewalk the night I heaved that bottle. So Grogan's selling of his pictures, is he?"—Kansas City Star.

COSTLY PLACE TO MAINTAIN

White House, From Time of Its Original Building, Has Absorbed Millions of Dollars.

Just 100 years ago President Monroe indulged in a little extravagance. He "blew himself" to a bathtub. It cost $20, and for a long time thereafter was the only bathtub in the White House.

The historic mansion has been pretty expensive from first to last. Up to date considerably more than $3,000,000 has been spent on it, including repairs and refurbishing.

Its cornerstone was laid by George Washington in a bare field October 3, 1792. Since then it has been twice rebuilt—after the British burned it and again during the Roosevelt administration. It was commonly called in early days the Great House, or the President's Palace.

Recently Mr. Tumulty again gave out the announcement that the White House would be closed to visitors for some time to come, "because of necessary repairs." It seems forever to be needing repairs and refurbishing, and for the latter purpose much more than $1,000,000 has been expended since the beginning.

The original cost of the building, was $333,297. Its reconstruction after the British raid of 1814 involved an expenditure of $240,400; the house being gutted and its walls so far destroyed that the greater part of them had to be replaced above the first story with new brick and fresh cut stone.

Inevitably there will be a third rebuilding some day. Plans and a model of the White House as it ought to be with wings added, have already been made. The wings are embraced by exterior colonnades. In the east wing is to be a great reception room; in the west wing the state dining room. On the second floor of each wing are to be five bedrooms. Thus the president will have about twenty bedrooms at his disposal, and will be enabled to offer a much freer hospitality. Conservatories in the rear will complete a magnificent quadrangle, and the whole effect will be very beautiful.

The cost of rebuilding the White House in this style will be in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

Diversions That Benefit.

In an address at the Royal College of Medicine to students about to start out in practice for themselves, Dr. George Steele-Perkins of Edinburgh gave this advice:

"Also learn to play lawn tennis, golf, bridge, billiards, or whatever games most appeal to you, and among other things do not neglect the noble art of self-defense."

This advice is as sound for the young man starting out as a lawyer or a broker or a business man. For every man needs some amusement to which he can turn in order to forget the worries of his working hours. No man is ever too busy to play; an hour's relaxation makes him work better. That is why Gladstone chopped down trees and studied Homer, why Wilson plays golf, why Charles Schwab plays bridge, why Cleveland went fishing, why Roosevelt rode, boxed, played handball; why the late J. P. Morgan was never too busy to devote an hour to talking art with some one who really knew.

Such diversions keep a man from going stale.—Exchange.

Boilers Heated by Electricity.

The curious anomaly of steam boilers heated by electricity is attracting serious attention in certain localities. Such boilers have been set up of capacities up to 1,500 kilowatts, or 2,000 horse-power, taking electric current of voltages up to 10,000, and offer advantages where coal is high and water-power cheap, as in certain woodpulp and paper factories of northern Europe. Steam is generated by passage of the electric current through water. Narrow vertical tubes of insulating material contain water, and are connected at top and bottom with the interior of the boiler. Alternating current is sent through the water columns, the tubes with three-phase currents being connected in groups of three. Moving the electrodes in the tubes regulates the current strength. An efficiency of 95 per cent is claimed and one watt of electric energy is stated to produce nearly four pounds of steam.

Friend Wife Laughed.

I was motoring along one of our country roads in my trusty little bus with friend wife, who was carrying a most unwelcome bit of grudge, when I pulled alongside of a large, lazy sedan with a man trying to fix it.

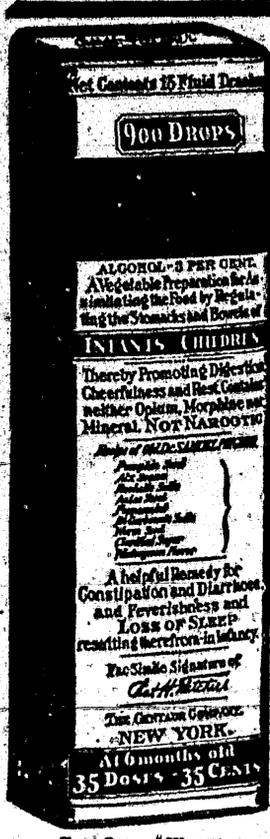

"Trouble?" I asked. "Some," was the incoherent answer. "What power car is it?" "Forty-horse," came the answer. "What seems to be the matter with it?"

"Well, from the way she acts, I should say that thirty-nine of the horses were dead."

This must have been the funniest of experiences, for my wife actually laughed—right out loud.—Exchange.

New Insurance Idea.

To stimulate marriage several insurance companies in Great Britain are now issuing what is called marriage insurance. It provides for payment of $2,500 at the expiration of 25 years or earlier, at death of the insured, and, in addition, $500 in respect of each of five children born after the date of the policy who attain the age of twelve years, payable by five installments of $100 each on the twelfth and four succeeding birthdays.

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and its prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil has been relieving the weakness and disability due to advancing years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil is included in cod liver capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease. Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

The Hope of the World

The hope of the world hangs on the League of Nations bound up in the Peace Treaty.

For the first time in the human story many diverse people have come together, and dropping their differences, have agreed upon a plan to attain and keep the boon of peace.

All the details of that plan may not be perfectly wise. In so great and so new an experiment they could not be so, or could not to all minds, seem so.

But they have agreed, these people; they have united in a solemn protest against the savagery of war, they have entered into a solemn covenant for peace, good-will and progress.

There has never been anything else so good in man's affairs, nor so full of promise. It is in effect, the formal recognition of the supremacy of love over hate, of friendship over force.

To peck and pick at this great document, to sniff and sneer, to go over it with microscopes and test tubes seeking to find flaws to shriek against, is at this juncture of the struggle for righteousness sorry business for an American.

To make of it ammunition for the miserable ends of miserable partisan politics is still worse and far dirtier.

What defects the plan may have will be developed when it is put to work. No human intellect is wise enough to say in advance what these will be. The whole thing is experiment. Changes can be made as practice shows them to be needed.

But for these days the duty is clear. If the Senate shall reject the treaty or tinker it or seriously amend it, then the United States of America stands in the position of striking to earth the aspirations of mankind for a greater unity, closer ties, better understanding, warmer friendship.

After the world's terrible travail, after all the blood and horrors, darkened homes and ruined lives that we have seen to be the product of hate, men that can lift hand against any testament of good will, no matter how defective, seem the incomprehensible marvels of the age.—Charles Edward Russell.

How Would This Work?

The Oklahoma Farmers' Union is entirely consistent in its stand concerning the railroad brotherhood's plan for government ownership of the railroads. In resolutions adopted at their meeting at Clinton, the members of the Farmers' Union put forward this proposition:

"If congress in its wisdom sees fit to give these railroad men their demands, we ask that congress should buy all of the farms in the United States with their equipment, and employ all of the farmers to operate them, paying to the farmers a wage equal to two-thirds of the hourly wage that the average railway employee receives; and then sell all farm products to the consumer at cost."

It will be seen by this that the farmers are much more modest than the railroad men, who want the high wages and a share of the profits also.

Again the farmer wins, the daylight saving law having been killed by congress over the president's veto. Now the cows and the chickens can have their morning sleep in peace.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

In Italy.

Arriving at one of the most critical stages of the war, when the Teutons were forcing the Italian army back to the Po, the American Red Cross rushed emergency relief from Paris and revived the drooping spirits of the whole country. In addition to furnishing rations and comforts and medical attention to the fighting men, the American Red Cross instituted 42 soup kitchens, 50 children's hospitals, 10 children's dispensaries, 14 artificial limb factories, 500 homes for refugee children, 10 rest stations for refugees. This photograph shows a group of Italian refugee children being fed by the American Red Cross at one of the numerous relief stations.

Recreation in Hospitals.

The American Red Cross conducts its recreational work in hospitals through trained men and women, introducing a multitude of recreations suited to the handicaps of the men. The accompanying view of a hospital ward shows in operation a moving picture projecting machine, developed by a Red Cross recreational director, which throws the pictures on the wall so that the men do not have to stir from their cots.

At Saloniki.

The veritable mountains of relief supplies turned out by the millions of chapter workers during the war made the American Red Cross one of the biggest "manufacturing concerns" in the world, with great warehouse space at scores of strategic points all around the globe.

One of the biggest distribution centers was at Saloniki, Greece, and in this picture Bulgarian prisoners of war are seen there unloading a Red Cross cargo of 2,800 boxes from a French transport. At the right is seen one of the American Red Cross camions, fleets of which were used in rushing relief to points where the suffering was greatest.

LEAGUE CERTAIN WILSON DECLARES

PRESIDENT IN OPENING SPEECH OF TOUR VOICES
HIGH HOPE.

WORLD WAITS FOR US

Future Free From War If America
Carries Out Her Pledge,
Says Executive.

(By Mount Clemens News Bureau.)
Aboard President's Special Train, St. Louis, Sept. 22.—Displaying a high confidence that his fellow citizens in the great majority agree with him in his desire to end war forever, and that they will see to it the peace treaty with its League of Nations inclusion is ratified by the Senate, President Wilson is making a successful way across the country on the long journey he has undertaken for the purpose of laying before the plain people a report of his work in Paris and explaining to them just what the league means.

Thus far in his travels he has everywhere met with warm greetings, both in the great halls where he has spoken formally and in the little cross road hamlets where his train has halted at times and he has exchanged words with the villagers who pressed forward to greet him. He feels and does not hesitate to say so when chatting with his traveling companions, that the American people want no more of war and want to become part of the league so that there may be no more war. He struck the keynote when he said in his first address, in Columbus, Ohio:

"This treaty was not intended merely to end this single war, it is meant as a notice to every government who in the future will attempt this thing (what Germany attempted) that mankind will unite to inflict the same punishment. There is no national triumph to be recorded in this treaty. There is no glory sought for any particular nation. The thought of the statesmen collected around that table was of their people, of the sufferings they had gone through, of the losses they had incurred, of that great throbbing heart which was so depressed, so forlorn, so sad in every memory it had of the five tragical years that have gone by. Let us never forget those years, my fellow countrymen; let us never forget the purpose, high and disinterested, with which America lent its strength, not for its own glory but for the defense of mankind.

"As I said, this treaty was not intended merely to end this war, it was intended to prevent any similar war. I wonder if some of the opponents of the League of Nations have forgotten the promises we made our people before we went to that peace table. We had taken by processes of law the flower of our youth from every countryside, from every household, and we told those mothers and fathers and sisters and wives and sweethearts that we were taking those men to fight a war which would end business of that sort, and if we do not end it, if we do not do the best that human concert of action can do to end it, we are of all men the most unfaithful—the most unfaithful to the loving hearts who suffered in this war, the most unfaithful to those households bowed in grief and laid down his life for a great thing, and, among other things, in order that other men might never have to do the same thing.

"That is what the League of Nations is for—to end this war justly and then not merely to serve notice on a government which would contemplate the same things Germany contemplated that they will do so at their peril, but also concerning the combination of power which will prove to them that they will do it at their peril. It is idle to say the world will combine against you; but it is persuasive to say the world is combined against you; the League of Nations is the only thing that can prevent the recurrence of this dreadful catastrophe, and redeem our promises.

A League of Nations would have prevented the late conflict, the President asserted, explaining:

"I did not meet a single public man who did not admit these things: That Germany would not have gone into this war if she thought Great Britain was going into it, and that she most certainly would never have gone into it had she dreamed America was going into it. And they all admit that a notice beforehand that the greatest powers of the world would combine to prevent this sort of thing would prevent it absolutely.

He pointed out other important features of the peace treaty, how it was the redemption of weak nations, giving them freedom which otherwise they never could have won; how it says, "These people have a right to live their own lives under governments which they themselves choose," and how "that is the American principle and I was glad to fight for it. That was the very heart of the treaty," he said.

He drew attention to the section of the treaty which it Magna Charta of labor. "It forecasts the day," he said, hours, conditions and remunerations of labor. "It forecasts the day," he said, "which ought to have come long ago, when statesmen will realize that no nation is fortunate which is not happy, whose people are not contented, contented in their lives and fortunate in the circumstances of their lives."

In conclusion, the President said he felt certain the treaty will be accepted, and was only impatient of the delay. He added: "Do you realize, my fellow citizens, that the whole world is waiting on America? The only country in the world that is trusted today is the United States, and the world is waiting to see if its trust is justified."

Mr. Wilson's Indianapolis speech was like the one at Columbus, an explanation of the league, an appeal for its ratification, and a prediction that it was sure to come into being.

The Light in the Clearing

A TALE of the NORTH COUNTRY in the TIME of SILAS WRIGHT

By IRVING BACHELLER Author of Eben Holden, D'ri and L. Darrel of the Blessed Isles, Keeping Up With Lizze, Etc., Etc.

Copyright by Irving Bachelier

"Your fellow townsman, Silas Wright, is now the largest figure in Washington. We were all worried by the resolution of Henry Clay until it began to crumble under the irresistible attack of Mr. Wright. On the 15th he submitted a report upon it which for lucid and accurate statements presented in the most unpretending manner won universal admiration and will be remembered alike for its intrinsic excellence and for having achieved one of the most memorable victories ever gained in the United States senate. After a long debate Clay himself, compelled by the irresistible force of argument in the report of Mr. Wright, was obliged to retire from his position, his resolution having been rejected by a vote of 44 to 1."

With what pride and joy I heard of this great thing that my friend had accomplished!

Going out with the crowd that evening, I met Sally and Mr. and Mrs. Dunkelberg. The latter did not speak to me and when I asked Sally if I could walk home with her she answered curtly, "No, thank you."

I have got a bit ahead of my history. Soon after the opening of the new year—ten days or so later it may have been—I had begun to feel myself cramped by a new and subtle force. It was a thing as intangible as heat but as real as fire and more terrible. It seemed to me. I felt it first in the attitude of my play fellows. They denied me the confidence and intimacy which I had enjoyed before. They whispered together in my presence. In all this I had not failed to observe that Henry Willis had taken a leading part. The invisible, inaudible, mysterious thing wrought a great change in me. It followed me through the day and lay down with me at night. I wondered what I had done. I carefully surveyed my clothes. They looked all right to me. My character was certainly no worse than it had been. How it preyed upon my peace and rest and happiness—that mysterious bludgeoning!

One day Uncle Peabody came down to see me and I walked through the village with him. We met Mr. Dunkelberg, who merely nodded and hurried along. Mr. Bridges, the merchant, did not greet him warmly and chat with him as he had been wont to do. I saw that the thing—as I had come to think of it—was following him also. How it darkened his face! Even now I can feel the aching of the deep, bloodless wounds of that day. I could bear it better alone. We were trying to hide our pain from each other when we said good-by. How quickly my uncle turned away and walked toward the sheds! He came rarely to the village of Canton after that.

May had returned—a warm bright May. I had entered my seventeenth year and the work of the farm was finished.

Having nothing to do one afternoon, I walked out on the road toward Ogdenburg for a look at the woods and fields. Soon I thought that I heard the sound of galloping hoofs behind me. I looked back and I saw Sally rounding the turn by the river and coming toward me at full speed, the mane of her pony flying back to her face. She galled up beside me just as I had imagined she would do.

"Hart, I hate somebody terribly," said she.

"Whom?"

"A man who is coming to our house on the stage today. Grassy Barnes is trying to get up a match between us. Father says he is rich and hopes he will want to marry me. I got mad about it. He is four years older than I am. Isn't that awful? I am going to be just as mean and hateful to him as I can."

"I guess they're only fooling you," I said.

"No, they mean it. I have heard them talking it over. He cannot marry you."

"Why?"

"It seemed to me that the time had come for me to speak out, and with burning cheeks I said:

"Because I think that God has married you to me already. Do you remember when we kissed each other by the wheat field one day last summer?"

"Yes."

"We had faced about and were walking back toward Canton. I close by the barn's side."

"May I kiss you again?"

She stopped the pony and leaned toward me and our lips met in a kiss the thought of which makes me lay down my pen and how my head a moment while I think with reverence of that pure, sweet spring of memory in whose waters I love to wash my spirit.

"I guess God has married us again," I declared.

"I know that you were walking on this road and I had to see you," said she. "People have been saying such terrible things."

"What?"

"They say your uncle found the pocketbook that was lost and kept the money. They say he was the first man that went up the road after it was lost."

pocketbook. Some money was left to him by a relative in Vermont. That's how it happened that he bought a farm instead of going to the poorhouse when Grimshaw put the screws to him."

"I knew that your uncle didn't do it," she went on. "Father and mother couldn't tell you. So I had to."

"Why couldn't your father and mother tell me?"

"They didn't dare. Mr. Grimshaw made them promise that they would not speak to you or to any of your family. I heard them say that you and your uncle hid right. Father told mother that he never knew a man so honest as your Uncle Peabody."

Just then we came upon the Silent Woman sitting among the dandelions by the roadside. She held a cup in her hand with some honey on its bottom and covered with a piece of glass.

"She is hunting bees," I said as we stopped beside her.

She rose and patted my shoulder with a smile and threw a kiss to Sally. Suddenly her face grew stern. She pointed toward the village and then at Sally.

"She means that there is some danger ahead of you," I said.

The Silent Woman picked a long blade of grass and tipped its end in a honey at the bottom of the cup. She came close to Sally with the blade of grass between her thumb and finger.

"She is fixing a charm," I said.

She smiled and nodded as she put a drop of honey on Sally's upper lip.

She held up her hands while her lips moved as if she were blessing us.

"I suppose it will not save me if I brush it off," said Sally.

We went on and in a moment a bee lighted on the honey. Nervously she struck at it and then cried out with pain.

"The bee has stung you," I said. She covered her face with her handkerchief and made no answer.

"Wait a minute—I'll get some clay," I said as I ran to the river bank.

I found some clay and moistened it with the water and returned.

"There, look at me!" she groaned. "The bee hit my nose."

She uncovered her face, now deformed almost beyond recognition, her nose having swollen to one of great size and redness.

"You look like Rodney Barnes," I said with a laugh as I applied the clay to her afflicted nose.

"And I feel like the old boy. I think my nose is trying to jump off and run away."

We were nearing the village. She wiped the mud from her prodigious nose and I wet her handkerchief in a pool of water and helped her to wash it. Soon we saw two men approaching us in the road. In a moment I observed that one was Mr. Horace Dunkelberg; the other a stranger and a remarkably handsome young man he was, about twenty-two years of age.

We Came Upon the Silent Woman sitting Among the Dandelions by the Roadside.

and dressed in the height of fashion. I remember so well his tall, athletic figure, his gray eyes, his small dark mustache and his admirable manners. Both were appalled at the look of Sally.

"Why, girl, what has happened to you?" her father asked.

Then I saw what a playful soul was Sally's. The girl was a born actress.

"Been riding in the country," said she. "Is this Mr. Latour?"

"This is Mr. Latour, Sally," said her father.

"They look hands."

"I am glad to see you," said the stranger.

"They say I am worth nothing," said Sally. "This is my friend, Mr. Barnes. When you are tired of seeing me, look at him."

I shook the head he offered me. "Of course, you can't all be good-looking," Sally remarked with a sigh, as if her statements were permanent.

a whisper what had happened to Sally—while Mr. Latour looked a little embarrassed.

"My face is not beautiful, but they say that I have a good heart," Sally assured the stranger.

They started on. I excused myself and took a trail through the woods to another road. Just there, with Sally waving her hand to me as I stood for a moment in the edge of the woods, the curtain falls on this highly romantic period of my life.

Uncle Peabody came for me that evening. It was about the middle of the next week that I received this letter from Sally:

"Dear Bart: Mr. Latour gave up and drove to Potsdam in the evening. Said he had to meet Mr. Farish. I think that he had seen enough of me. I began to hope he would stay—he was so good looking, but mother is very glad that he went, and so am I, for our minister told us that he is one of the wickedest young men in the state. He is very rich and very bad, they say. I wonder if old Kate knew about him. Her charm worked well anyway—didn't it? My nose was all right in the morning. (Sorry that I can't meet you Saturday. Mother and I are packing up to go away for the summer. Don't forget me. I shall be thinking every day of those lovely things you said to me. I don't know what they will try to do with me, and I don't care. I really think as you do. Bart, that God has married us to each other."

"Yours forever,"

"SALLY DUNKELBERG."

How often I read those words—so like all the careless words of the young!

CHAPTER XIII.

The Belt Falls. Three times that winter I had seen Benjamin Grimshaw followed by the Silent Woman clothed in rags and pointing with her finger.

The trial of Amos came on. He had had "blood on his feet," as they used to say, all the way from Lichityspitt to Lewis county in his flight, having attacked and slightly wounded two men with a bowie knife who had tried to detain him at Rainy Lake. He had also shot at an officer in the vicinity of Lowville, where his arrest was effected. He had been identified by all these men, and so his character as a desperate man had been established. This in connection with the scar on his face and the tracks, which the boots of Amos fitted, and the broken gun stock convinced the jury of his guilt.

I remember well the look of the venerable Judge Cady as he pronounced the sentence of death upon Amos Grimshaw. A ray of sunlight streaming through a window in the late afternoon fell upon his gracious countenance, shining also, with the secret light of his spirit. Slowly, solemnly, kindly, he spoke the words of doom. It was his way of saying them that first made me feel the dignity and majesty of the law. The kind and fatherly tone of his voice put me in mind of that supreme court which is above all question and which was swiftly to enter judgment in this matter and in others related to it.

Slowly the crowd moved out of the courtroom. Benjamin Grimshaw rose and calmly whispered to his lawyer. He had not spoken to his son or seemed to notice him since the trial had begun, nor did he now. Many had shed tears that day, but not he. Mr. Grimshaw never showed but one emotion—that of anger. He was angry now. His face was hard and stern. He muttered as he walked out of the courtroom; his cane briskly beating the floor.

The Silent Woman—as ragged as ever—was waiting on the steps. Out went her bony finger as he came down. He turned and struck at her with his cane and shouted in a shrill voice that rang out like a trumpet in his frenzy:

"Go 'way from me. Take her away, somebody. I can't stan' it. She's killin' me. Take her away. Take her away. Take her away."

His face turned purple and then white. He roared and fell headlong, like a tree severed from its roots, and lay still on the hard, stone pavement. It seemed as if snow were falling on his face—it grew so white. The Silent Woman stood as still as he, pointing at him with her finger, her look unchanged. People came running toward us. I tilted the head of Mr. Grimshaw and laid it on my knee. It felt like the head of the stranger in Hatterhead. Old Kate bent over and looked at the eyelids of the man which fluttered faintly and were still.

"Dead!" she muttered.

Then, as if her work were finished, she turned and made her way through the crowd and walked slowly down the street. Men stood aside to let her pass, as if they felt the power of her spirit and feared the touch of her garments.

Two or three men had run to the house of the nearest doctor. The crowd thinned. As I sat looking down at the dead man in my lap, a lawyer who had come out of the courtroom passed near me and bent over and looked at the neck of Benjamin Grimshaw and said:

"He scared him at last. I know she would."

He tried not to see her, but I tell ye that bony old finger of hers burnt a hole in him. He couldn't stand it. I knew he'd blow up some day under the strain. She got him at last."

"Who got him?" another asked.

"Rovin' Kate. She killed him pointing her finger at him—yo."

"She's got an evil eye. Everybody's afraid of the crazy 'rollope."

"Nonsense! She isn't half as crazy as the most of us," said the lawyer. "In my opinion she had a good reason for pointing her finger at that man. She came from the same town he did, over in Vermont. Ye don't know what happened there."

The doctor arrived. The crowd made way for him. He knelt beside

"Go 'Way From Me. Take Her Away," the still figure and made the test. He rose and shook his head, saying: "It's all over. Let one of these boys go down and bring the undertaker."

Benjamin Grimshaw, the richest man in the township, was dead, and I have yet to hear of any mourners.

Three days later I saw his body lowered into its grave. The little, prokammered wife stood there with the same sad smile on her face that I had noted when I first saw her in the hills. Rovin' Kate was there in the clothes she had worn Christmas day. She was greatly changed. Her hair was neatly combed. The wild look had left her eyes. She was like one whose back is hollowed as she scattered little red squares of paper into the grave. I supposed they thought it a crazy whim of hers—they who saw her do it. I thought that I understood the curious bit of symbolism and so did the schoolmaster, who stood beside me. Doubtless the pieces of paper numbered her curses.

"The scarlet sins of his youth are lying down with him in the dust," Hackett whispered as we walked away together.

CHAPTER XIV.

Uncle Peabody's Way and Mine. It is a bad thing to be under a heavy obligation to one's self of which, thank God, I am now acquitted. I have known men who were their own worst creditors. Everything they earned went swiftly to satisfy the demands of vanity or pride or appetites. I have seen them literally get out of house and home, throw neck and crop into the street, as it were, by one or the other of these heartless creditors—each a grasping wretch with unjust claims.

I remember that Rodney Barnes called for my chest and me that fine morning in early June when I was to go back to the hills, my year's work in school being ended. I elected to walk, and the schoolmaster went with me five miles or more across the flats to the slope of the high country.

"Soon the senator will be coming," he remarked. "I have a long letter from him and he asks about you and your aunt and uncle. I think that he's read of you, boy."

"I wish you would let me know when he comes," I said.

"I am sure he will let you know, and, by the way, I have heard from another friend of yours, my lad. Ye're a lucky one to have so many friends—over ye are. Here, I'll show ye the letter. There's no reason why I shouldn't. Ye will know my written, probably. I do not."

Without Men to Handle. There is no class of men so difficult to be managed in a state as those whose intentions are honest, but whose consciences are bewildered.

Back Given Out?

Housework is too hard for a woman who is half sick, nervous and always tired. But it keeps piling up, and gives you kidney trouble, rheumatism, if you look so lame and sohy and your kidneys irregular; if you have "blue spells," sick headaches, nervousness, dizziness and rheumatic pains, use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have done wonders for thousands of worn-out women.

A Colorado Case

Mr. Dean, of Denver, says: "I had a steady mis-erable ache in my back and dragged along day after day feeling too tired and discouraged to do my housework. I had a lot of dizziness and felt very weak and caused me a great deal of distress. My hands and feet became bloated. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended and I tried them and soon the swelling had all gone and I felt as well as ever. I credit Doan's with saving my life."

Experts or Theorists—Which?

The packing industry is intricate, complex—far more so than the railroads or the telegraph. Every day multiplying needs of society increase its problems and multiplying responsibilities demand more of it.

Highly trained experts, specialists of years' experience, thinkers and creative men, devote their lives, their energies, their activities, to solving the problems of the packing industry and meeting its widening duties.

Swift & Company is not a few dozen packing plants, a few hundred branch houses, a few thousand refrigerator cars, and a few million dollars of capital, but an organization of such men. It is the experience, intelligence, initiative and activity which operates this physical equipment.

Can this intelligence, this experience, this initiative and creative effort which handles this business at a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources, be fostered through the intervention of political theorists, however pure their purposes? Or be replaced by legislation? Does Congress really think that it can?

Let us send you a Swift "Dollar." It will interest you. Address Swift & Company, Union Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill.

Safe Drinking Water from Cisterns

When Well Constructed, Well Operated and Equipped With Filter, They Furnish Valuable Supply for All Household Use

(By United States Department of Agriculture.)
Notwithstanding the serious objections to cistern water for all household use, thoroughly well-constructed, well-operated cisterns are a boon, and their more extensive use is urged.

Vital features of a cistern from which the water supply is obtained are: Absolute water-tightness, top, sides and bottom, and close screening of inlet and waste pipes; provision for excluding from the cistern the first portion of each rainfall until the roof or other collecting area has become rinsed thoroughly; a first-class filter of clean, well-selected sand and thoroughly burned charcoal. The flow in the filter should be downward, and the top area of the filter bed and the rate of flow to the bed must be so harmonized and regulated that slow, effective filtration (not rapid straining) is secured. A waste pipe should be provided which removes surplus inflow from the bottom of the cistern where impurities tend naturally to settle. Periodic and thorough cleaning of the cistern and filter is necessary. From time to time the clogged sand should be raked or removed from the filter and the dirty charcoal replaced.

The practice of throwing charcoal into cisterns to absorb the odors of decaying organic matter is of little advantage. Boiling cistern water, or "boiling" it with chemicals to sterilize it, although safe precautions, injure the wholesomeness of the water and should be regarded as emergency measures—never as suitable substitutes for the best possible construction and operation.

Cistern filter—Cost, $100. A, hoghead or large tank; B, tight cover; C, wire screen; D, 1/2-inch two-way rain cock; E, 1/2-inch union; F, 1/2-inch brass or galvanized pipe, perforated; G, tight overhanging cover; filter box may be wood, iron, brick or concrete, or four feet of large-size vitrified pipe; H, 1/2-inch layer fine sand; I, six-inch layer well-burned charcoal; J, two-inch layer of gravel; K, two-inch layer of gravel; L, 1/2-inch layer of gravel; M, 1/2-inch two-way rain cock with one branch piped to waste; N, suction pipe; O, cistern, side walls six to ten inches thick; P, one-inch overflow; Q, sump or catch basin; R, emergency overflow; S, screw cap (removes cap and attach hand pump when cleaning cistern); T, waste pipe; U, swing-check valve; V, screened ventillator. When starting operation waste the first water filtered; throttle cocks D and K to give the desired low rate of filtration; maintain water level above sand layer, thus protecting the surface film of mud.

If rain water is filtered effectively, the keeping qualities will be improved and large-sized cisterns may be used. That method of filtration which resembles most nearly the slow percolation of rainfall into the ground will give the greatest degree of purification. Such a filter can be constructed with a barrel of large galvanized iron tank, placed above the ground so it can be easily cared for, and filled with some suitable filtering material. The water as it drains from the roof should pass through this material before it enters the cistern, the rate being kept down to one pint in four minutes (45 gallons in 24 hours) for each square foot of area in the filter bed.

Sand is one of the best and most available filtering materials, and well-burned charcoal is most useful in removing color, taste, and odor. Fine sand removes particles to a greater extent than does coarse sand, but on the other hand it clogs more quickly. Crushed quartz and thoroughly clean pit or beach sand, such as is used in mixing mortar, are employed extensively. The size of the grains should be quite uniform and should be such that all could be sifted through holes made in a sheet of paper by a medium-sized awl or knitting needle. A depth of two feet of carefully selected sand free from clay, loam, and vegetable matter, is preferable to a greater depth of sand of indifferent quality. As the thin surface layer becomes clogged with continued use, it may be scratched or furrowed or a half inch or so may be scraped off with a trowel, until eventually the bed is reduced to 12 or 15 inches in thickness. The sand removed either should be washed and returned, or be replaced with new sand. It is advantageous to place about six inches of well-burned charcoal under the two-foot bed of sand. Triple-burned, triple-ground wood charcoal, the pieces averaging the size of wheat grains, has given excellent results and costs normally about 80 cents a bushel, in sacks, at kilns in eastern states.

1,353,792 Babies Born in 1917

Government Figures Reveal 14,394 Pairs of Twins, 153 Sets of Triplets

Complete statistics for 1917 show 1,353,792 babies were born in the states comprising the birth registration area. The birth rate exceeded the death rate by 74.4 per cent, the United States public health reports show.

Data published in the report shows: Mortality rate among infants under one year 103.8 per cent a thousand, a total of 0.88 per cent of the total born. Total death rate for 1917 (all ages and all causes), 13.7 among white, 22.5 among negroes. Twins born in 1917, 14,394 pairs. Triplets born same periods, 153 times.

The report says that courts are strictly upholding local ordinances governing health and sanitation.

Included in the report are health hints warning the public against a recurrence of the "flu" epidemics which swept the country last winter, and which may, in many cases, be forestalled by vaccination. The danger of smallpox is also pointed out.

How Sharp Soft Pine Stick May Be Used for Lettering

A storekeeper, who wished to make some large signs with heavy letters, whittled one end of a soft-pine stick down to a sharp, broad edge, and used it to letter the cards. A foot made of this kind of wood works equally well with ink or paint and, in the hands of an amateur, will make a much cleaner letter than a brush. The whittled end resembles the chisel edge of a red-wood lettering brush, so that the ordinary methods are made in using it; but, being more rigid, it demands less skill on the part of the workman.

Eighty Thousand Words Is About the Average Number in Short Story or Novel

Nowadays the short story novel is in vogue as well as the short story. Occasionally a novel runs to 100,000 words, and sometimes a little over, but 80,000 is about the limit as a rule. "Martin Chuzzlewit" and "Dombey and Son" probably run to 400,000 words. The longest novel in the English language is Richardson's "Clarissa Harlowe," published in 1749. It was originally issued in eight volumes. It runs to over 800,000 words. But even this is far surpassed by Mile. de Saudery's famous novel of the seventeenth century, "Le Grand Cyrus." This ran to ten volumes, and was translated into English and appeared in five folios of 500 pages each. Yet it was read widely. Then there was La Calprenhade, who wrote "Cleopatra." This novel which found hosts of readers, actually ran to 23 volumes.

HIT AND MISS

When it comes to speaking ill of their neighbors most people are there with the goods. Somehow a girl always imagines that her piano playing sounds good to the neighbors. Fortunate is the man who acquires his knowledge from the experience of the other fellow. This is indeed a dirty looking old world to the man who is too lazy to clean his spectacles. If you would have a peaceful home all you have to do is to pay the freight and let your wife run it.

Variety of Uses for the 3,000,000,000 Bushels of Corn Cobs Wasted Annually

It is estimated that 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn cobs are thrown away every year in the United States, although they can be turned to useful account in a variety of ways.

The cobs may be cooked in a closed tank with water at about 100 degrees above the boilingpoint. After an hour they are thoroughly softened, and when pressed yield a fluid that is evaporated in an open-kettle to a thick syrup. This syrup is an excellent adhesive gum, suitable for use in the paper box industry, in the manufacture of fiber board, for bill posting and for gumming labels. Its employment in place of starch, dextrine and flour paste would make an enormous saving of foodstuffs. The solid material left from the pressing is mainly cellulose, and may be ground coarsely, mixed with molasses and dried for stock feed. Or, by simple chemical treatment, it can be made to yield 75 per cent of its weight in pure glucose. If yeast is added and fermentation allowed, it will produce alcohol. The cob cellulose may also be used in the manufacture of artificial silk and leather, or may be employed as an absorbent of nitro-glycerine in the manufacture of dynamite.

LOVE

If somebody loves you,
You cannot be sad,
You've cause for rejoicing,
You've cause to be glad,
You're a subject for songs,
As you journey your way,
If somebody loves you,
You ought to be gay.

If somebody loves you,
You're bound to get gay,
And blow in the cash
In a wild, reckless way.
If somebody loves you,
You'll part from your pet
And make quite an all-around
Fool of yourself.

If somebody loves you,
You'll write foolish notes
In lovey-dovey language
Upon which she dotes.
She'll save them and use you
And wed you by force.
The jury will find for
The plaintiff, of course.

William Penn, the Founder of Pennsylvania, Died at the Age of Seventy-Four

In 1718, on July 30, William Penn, the Quaker founder of Pennsylvania, died at the age of seventy-four. Penn received the charter for the territory from Charles II in 1680. He was granted almost sovereign powers of government. Immediately upon taking office he pledged to the people freedom to form their own laws and protection and security against oppression. During his long governorship his pledges were amply sustained. He organized a free society of traders and under his wise and beneficent control the prosperity of the colony grew rapidly. Penn's treaties with the Indians secured his settlement from the invasion that so retarded the development of the other colonies and enormously facilitated the increase of its population.

WASHINGTON CITY SIDEWALKS

Mexican Bandits Raise Nice Question of Ethics

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson's cabinet split wide open on the following question: Was Captain Matlack justified in beating the Mexican bandits out of $4,000 of the ransom for the two army aviators? With the professors of ethics who supervised military morals during the war demobilized, there have been no authorities to turn to for a ruling, and it looks as if President Wilson, who instructed the senate committee on the difference between a moral and a legal obligation, would be called upon to decide this moral issue for the cabinet.

One group of cabinet members condemns the cheating of the bandits as dishonorably declaring it reprehensible to break a promise made even to a criminal. Another group contends that the breaking of a promise made under duress is justifiable.

Then there is a utilitarian school of thought maintaining that the bargain ought to have been carried out implicitly because the impairment of our reputation with the bandits for good faith may embarrass future negotiations to ransom our citizens.

The Mexican border's contribution to the controversy was that General Dickman was seeking ways and means to pay the remainder of the ransom to the bandits.

The sportsman, who has a nice sense of honor in disputed questions of this kind, will unhesitatingly say that General Dickman is right.

The average American will probably say: "Pay the bandits the money and then shoot 'em."

Yankee Saleswomen to Sell Goods to Harem Women

THE American women's chamber of commerce, the first organization of its kind having national and international scope, is trying to do these things: Prevent compulsory physical examination of American school teachers by man surgeons; extend through the Southwest and middle West a truck delivery of fresh vegetables, eggs, milk and other farm products, with girl drivers in charge of the trucks; popularize American lingerie and toilet articles among the sultan's daughters, and popularize American shoes among the women of China.

Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould, a founder and past president of the organization, who recently returned from a business trip to China, tells all about it. First attention is to be paid to the Smith-Towner senate bill for physical examination of women teachers. The chamber will insist that the examiners be women. And, while they are on the subject of teachers, the women of the chamber of commerce will fight to obtain for them a higher rate of pay.

"We first had to educate the women of China," said Mrs. Gould, "who formerly believed that it was sinful to permit their feet to develop naturally. In many Chinese cities we have persuaded merchants to handle American-made shoes for women, and as the Chinese women gradually adopt the western custom a great field for the American shoe industry will be opened."

Saleswomen have been sent to Turkey with a line of toilet articles and apparel and have had tremendous success. Here men, she explained, cannot even approach the feminine Turkish customer.

Navy Aviators Fight Unifying of Air Service

NAVY aviators are against the proposal to concentrate the air service of the navy, navy, postoffice and coast and forest fire patrols under a single executive, probably a new cabinet member. Differing kinds of service, with special qualifications for each, make it necessary to keep the branches separate, they believe.

Capt. G. W. Steele, Jr., of the U. S. S. Shawmut shows the attitude of the navy flyers in the form of some manuscript prepared by him as commander of the work of the air fleet of the Atlantic squadron, department of navy aeronautics.

Captain Steele and the Shawmut are now at Newport, R. I. Previous to his assignment there the boat was a mine sweeper on the Irish sea, but returned to American waters in time to handle the testing of the navy airships prior to their transatlantic flights, and later in Lisbon, where they landed.

"There are reports," says Captain Steele, "that the proposed congressional legislation to consolidate the air services will provide for a separate cabinet officer as head of the department of aviation, and others that say the head of the aviation department will merely be a chief, such as the various bureaus of the army and navy have.

"Either of these plans, or any other plans which take aviation for the navy out of complete control of the navy department will mean the service will suffer, and such legislation should be opposed.

"A navy flyer has to know how to navigate, either from the flimsy cockpit of an airship or from the bridge of a vessel. He has to know how to do navy scouting, bombing and torpedoing, coast patrol work, and finally the spotting of shots and regulation of navy fire."

Captain Steele's conclusion is that the army aviator cannot know the difficulties of the navy flying game and it takes him years to learn his own.

Uncle Sam Wants a Purchaser for a Model Town

IF ANY one is in the market to buy a town the war department has one for sale. In advertising this fact to the public the government said in an official announcement, among other things: "The war department is offering for sale the town of Nitro, W. Va., a complete industrial community embracing 757 manufacturing buildings, housing accommodations for 20,000 persons, and the utilities and civic improvements that constitute the conveniences of a modern city.

"Nitro, built by the government at a cost of approximately $70,000,000, is the site of the second largest smokeless powder plant in the world. The site must cover not only the powder plant and the other industrial units which were erected to prepare the ingredients essential to powder making, but the civic community as well.

"The industrial community of Nitro stretches for more than four miles along the east bank of the Kanawha river. Here are to be found a sulphuric acid plant in seven units, the capacity of which is 700 tons per day of 24 hours; a nitric acid plant of four units, the capacity of which is 800 tons per day; a cotton purification plant of standard pulp mill design in four units, the capacity of which is 225 tons per day; a nitrating, colloidizing, and drying plant; 15 shipping houses, or magazines, segregated for the storage of powder; etc.

"Set upon the foothills, overlooking the industrial area with its bustling smokestacks, stands the civic community—more than 1,500 furnished portable houses, homes for the workmen who will make the manufacturing units producing institutions; 78 permanently constructed executive residences, hotels, boarding houses, dormitories, clubhouses, general and special stores, canteens, and moving picture houses, etc., etc., etc."

"See 13, 14th and 15th streets. How much are we offering?"

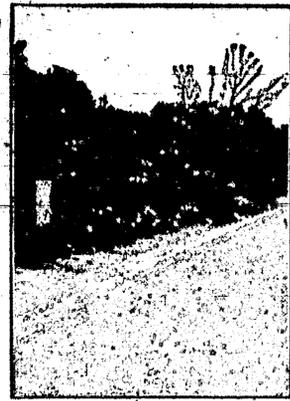

GOOD ROADS

KEEP ROADS IN GOOD REPAIR

Concrete or Special Road Brick Set in Cement Over Concrete Foundation is Favored.

The war and the consequent railroad congestion imposed heavy traffic burdens upon our highways; burdens, in fact, much greater than the roads were built to sustain. To make matters still worse, labor and repair materials were scarce during the war, and many roads as a result are now in deplorable condition. As the preacher would say, they are "more holy than righteous."

The year 1919 is going to witness an immense road repair movement. And the work should be at least fairly permanent. Merely throwing dirt or loose stones in the holes is a sheer waste of time, because after a few automobiles and trucks go over the roads these loose materials are pushed out again and conditions are as bad as ever.

Broken stones and tar binder are the only satisfactory repair materials for macadam roads, and many improved country roads are of that type.

It is beginning to be realized that concrete or special road brick set in cement over a concrete foundation must be used for truck roads designed to carry heavy truck traffic. Anything cheaper and less stable simply means bad roads and constant repairs.

For laterals or main roads in sparsely settled countries where traffic is not heavy and when the amount available for road construction is not large, tar macadam highways are quite satisfactory.

PLAN HONOR TO ROOSEVELT

Suggestions Have Been Made to Name Transcontinental Highway After Former President.

Memorials to the dead and tributes to the living in the form of highways is a plan which is catching the popular fancy everywhere. Since France christened a street in honor of Wilson, Tientsin, China, has done the same thing, and elsewhere suggestions have been made that a transcontinental highway be named in honor of Roosevelt. Louisiana is planning a Victory oak way and sentiment is reflected by movements to rename streets and highways after heroes of the war in other states.

DURABLE ROAD SAVES MONEY

Saving of Eight Cents Per Ton Mile Can Be Effectuated in Transportation Costs Alone.

The report of the joint congressional committee which investigated highway economies in 1914 shows that a saving of eight cents per ton mile can be effected in transportation costs when a road is lifted from the dirt to the durable class. This does not take into account increased real estate valuations or social advantages resulting from the improvement.

IMPROVE ROADS FOR TRUCKS

Bureau of Markets Arrives at Conclusion Motor Vehicles Have Passed Experimental Stage.

Inadequate highways are one of the penalties with which the user of highway transportation must contend, says Bulletin No. 770, recently issued by the bureau of markets. The department arrives at the conclusion that the motor truck has passed the experimental stage, but says that before it can attain its fullest usefulness the highways must be improved.

Good Drainage Necessary. The most necessary requirement of a good road is a solid, bone-dry foundation. This means good drainage first, last and all the time.

Trees Along Highways. Trees at a distance of 50 or 60 feet apart along the highway add to its comfort and pleasing appearance.

E. G. Raffety, of Oacuro, was circulating in Carrizozo several days this week, and incidentally dispensing literature of the Tularosa Valley oil region. The drill is going down steadily at Oacuro, and a log is being kept of the strata it penetrates for comparison with producing wells in other regions.

Lee Prude was here Monday from the Mesalero reservation, and spent a day or two looking over his ranching interests at his ranch—this side of Nogal. In addition to his ranch and cattle interests here, Mr. Prude has a large area of the reservation leased and is running about 3,000 steers on his lease. He reports his stuff in prime condition and that he expects to put some of his big steers on the market soon.

John W. Norton passed through Monday on his return to Chicago from Capitan. Mrs. Norton, who has been visiting her father, P. G. Peters, and family, was very ill recently, and Mr. Norton was called to her bedside. She is now very much improved and Mr. Norton returns to his duties in Chicago.

E. E. Cole, school superintendent, who was on the sick list several days last week, is himself again and attending to his educational duties. Mr. Cole's trouble was similar to that of a great many others—a cold on the chest, caused evidently by the multifarious kinds of weather we have been getting for the past several weeks.

Ed. F. Comrey Injured

Ed F. Comrey came in Sunday night from his ranch near Ancho and suffered a fall that has caused a slight paralysis. He was crossing the street in front of the court house, after dark, on his way to the Warden home where he was to spend the night. He slipped while crossing a ditch and fell to the ground, striking his head. He was rendered unconscious and remained there some time before recovering consciousness. Finally, when his consciousness was restored, he found that he was unable to move, the fall having partially paralyzed him. The Wardens heard him shouting, went to his assistance and called in a physician. Mr. Comrey is slightly improved, but still lacks the full use of his arms and his entire system has been more or less affected by the fall.

A Big Killing

Coyotes, wolves and other predatory animals are becoming so numerous that stock-growers are becoming alarmed at their losses and the increasing boldness of the varmints. Last week poisoned bait was laid on the Lutz ranch near Ancho, with the result that there are 40 less coyotes and four Mexican dogs in that neighborhood. It is said that one dog with the sheep-killing mania is more destructive than a dozen coyotes. Arrangements are being made to organize a "drive," and rid the county of both species of sheep-killers. One sheepman estimates his loss in sheep and lambs as 3000 a year, killed by coyotes and dogs.

Red Cross Worker

Miss Grace Epsley, chief of the Junior Red Cross, Mountain Division, was here Sunday night and delivered a splendid address at the Crystal Theatre. The following day she visited the schools, and gave interesting talks to teachers and pupils. She left Monday evening for Roswell. Miss Epsley's visit was very encouraging, not only to the Junior Red Cross, but also to the Chapter and will very materially aid the committee in the big drive scheduled for next month.

A New Minister

Rev. A. C. Douglas, of Floydada, Texas, is the name of the new Methodist minister, who takes the place of the Rev. R. H. Lewelling, who has been transferred to Tucumcari. Services will be held Sunday at the usual hour, and all affiliated with that church are requested to hear him and get acquainted.

To Meet Royal Pair

Lieut. Henry Lutz has received an appointment on the Legion of Honor, the appointment coming from Governor Larrazolo and Colonel B. M. Cutting. He leaves today for Albuquerque in response to the command of his superior officer, where he with two other overseas officers of New Mexico will represent the Legion at the reception of the King and Queen of Belgium which will take place in Albuquerque tomorrow. Only three officers of the state are entitled to this distinction, and Lincoln county has one of them in the person of Lieut. Lutz who carries the honorable scars of battle received on the fields of France.

Good Mining Claims

Numbered among many promising mineral deposits in the hills southeast of Carrizozo are a group of six claims in Tuttleite Canon, about three miles from Walnut station on the Capitan branch. Assays from these prospects show silver values from 100 to 250 ounces, and are believed to carry sufficient gold to pay for the smelting, as the ore is refractory in character. The claims have been on record for many years, but little more than the annual work has been done on them, owing to lack of capital. Some of the veins are four feet wide and in place between walls of porphyry and phonolite. The claims are adjacent to the American and Helen Rae mines, and are believed by some to be on the same lead. They are held by Grant and Amos Gaylord. A 70-foot tunnel has been driven on one of the claims, the work done on the others consist principally of shafts.

Free Vegetable and Flower Seeds

The following letter has been received by this office from Senator A. A. Jones, of Washington, D.
