G.O.P. Turns Its Back on Labor

SAM GOMPERS DISSECTS THE PLATFORM PLANK BY PLANK

Montreal, June 12.—Amid tremendous applause the American Federation of Labor at its annual convention here today adopted a report condemning the republican convention in Chicago for "turning its back on labor." During the reading of the report, presented by Samuel Gompers and Mathew Woll, president and vice president of the federation, various sections of republican planks criticised by the labor leaders were hissed, while their critics were applauded.

Mr. Gompers announced that the executive council has directed that labor's demands submitted to the republican convention be presented in identical form to the democratic national convention.

The republican convention has turned its back upon labor, and has adopted a platform "defiant in its defense of the enemies of labor, and calculated to secure for them fresh advantages and greater privileges," Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared in the statement presented to the federation convention. The labor declaration of the platform as adopted, he asserted, "proposed an industrial enslavement of the wage earner and an abrogation of rights as precious as life itself."

The statement vigorously assails the republicans for neglecting anti-profiteering legislation recommendations.

"The republican platform practically ignores the profiteer," the statement added, "and while recognizing the evils of currency inflation, offers no remedy for that condition. Specific proposals submitted by labor for relief from the high cost of living and profiteering are given no place in the platform."

The Mexican plank of the platform, the labor leaders charged, "clearly aims to undermine the sovereignty of the Mexican government and to make the maintenance of order in Mexico the business of the government of the United States."

It proposes the fulfillment of what long have been the hopes and aims of those whose sole object is the exploitation of the people and boundless resources of Mexico, according to the labor chiefs. The republican endorsement of the transportation act of 1920 was declared to be a complete denial and repudiation of the demand submitted by labor, and is an emphatic endorsement of the labor provisions of the Cummins-Each railroad act.

The section of this plank referring to "peaceful arbitration on the wage disputes," was said to be a "denial of the lawful right of the workers to cease working."

"This denial of the right to strike," the labor chiefs asserted, "the party proclaims as one of its greatest achievements."

"We hold no brief for the democratic party," continued the statement, commenting on the republican condemnation of the democratic administration for failure to enforce the anti-profiteering laws; "but we call attention to the fact that specific proposals on this subject submitted by labor are ignored completely. The republican platform evades the issue and offers no remedy; it merely promises to consider the matter."

knowledge of any effective anti-profiteering laws passed by the republican congress."

"The planking regarding labor's right to strike," constitutes a denial of labor's demands and contemplates the erection of government machinery for the coercion of labor and for the suppression and limitation of its proper, lawful and normal activities."

"It proposes to erect tribunals venerated with power to compel involuntary labor. The entire plank is a denial of freedom and in addition subversive of the best interests of our republic."

The labor leaders asserted the republicans failed to mention in their platform labor's demands for a federal law for the legal right of "voluntary association," to protect itself against "unwarrantable issuance of writs of injunction."

Spanish War Veterans

Washington, D. C.—By the terms of an act of congress known as the Sells Bill, approved by President Wilson June 5, 1920, all persons who served ninety days or more in the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection and the China relief expedition, and who have honorably been discharged therefrom, and who are now suffering from any mental or physical disability, not the result of their own vicious habits, may, on making due proof, be entitled to receive a pension from date of filing application, not exceeding $30 per month, and not less than $12, proportioned to the degree of inability to earn a support.

It is also provided that all persons whose names are on the pension roll who while in the service of the United States in army, navy or marine corps and in the line of duty, shall have suffered a specific disability, may be entitled to pension as follows:

Loss of one hand or foot, or total disability, $60 per month.

Loss of arm at elbow, or leg at or above knee, or total disability of same, $65.

Loss of arm at shoulder or leg at hip, $72.

Loss of one hand and one foot, or total disability of same, $90.

Loss of sight of both eyes, $100 per month.

Mrs. J. A. Kennedy Dies

Mrs. May Kennedy died at the Padon hospital Saturday morning last from an attack of acute nephritis. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy had just come in from Arizona, and soon after Mrs. Kennedy became violently ill. She was taken to the hospital and given every care and attention but to no avail.

The deceased was the wife of Jesse A. Kennedy, and the couple had been married only a few months. The husband, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Kennedy, lived here until about four years ago, when he went to Arizona. There he met and married the woman who has now left him and joined the silent majority.

The body was entombed by the Undertaker Kelly, and later removed to Mexico, Texas, for interment.

Nogal Preparing to Entertain a Large Crowd on July 3

The local finance committee to raise funds for the Nogal celebration, made the rounds of town Wednesday, and secured over $2000 cash and a number of beavers and muttons for the barbecue. These subscriptions, combined with results from outside points should put the big event over in fine style at old Nogal on Saturday, July 3rd, the day just preceding the Fourth.

An attractive program of sports has been arranged, and Saturday being the week end assures a large crowd, especially as the other communities in the county won't hold their celebrations until Monday the 5th.

A dancing pavillion is being erected in the walnut grove, near town, for those who enjoy dancing. The Carrizozo Jazz Orchestra has been engaged for the occasion. Prizes will be awarded the winners in the athletic contests, and the breeze from the snow-capped peaks will make the walnut grove the coolest place in Lincoln county.

The Oil Situation

America has nearly reached the peak of oil production and must consider promptly "acquisition of foreign oil reserves" or face a shortage, says Chief Geologist White of the U. S. Geological Survey.

"Consumption curves is destined during the next year and probably longer, to continue its present general trend beyond the four million barrel mark, which it nearly reached in 1918," Dr. White stated. "On the whole, even with prices stimulating the driller to greater efforts, it seems unlikely that domestic production of petroleum can at best gain appreciably on the reasonably expected increase in consumption."

Compared with prices of other articles gasoline and oil are about the cheapest commodities in the market today.

Supports Harding, But—

Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, is a little sarcastic in announcing his support of the republican nominee, but gives his support nevertheless. The following paragraph is taken from his promise of loyalty:

"The most disappointing part of the republican convention was to see the delegates unable to act until they received word from a sick boss at Philadelphia. There will be a strange parallel at San Francisco when the delegates will await word from a sick boss at Washington. There never was a chance in this boss-controlled convention for a man of Hiram Johnson's type. The convention was strong for Roosevelt—he being dead. If Roosevelt had been alive he would have about as much chance in the convention as Johnson. If Johnson had been dead he would be probably would have about as much condolence as Roosevelt. The kind of men the people want are the kind of men the bosses are determined the people shall not have. The men who supported Johnson will be found working for the ticket and working for the next congress. They have in this for legislation in the interests of the people and will be found fighting against the interests of the congress."

Carrizozo Defeats Alamo in a Close Game

A number of cars returned Sunday evening from Alamo, bringing the victorious Carrizozo ball team and a bunch of loyal fans who traveled down to see the contest. They had driven down the same morning prepared to their best against a greatly strengthened team that Alamogordo had assembled. In fact, some of our regular players couldn't make the game, but additional players filled the ranks, delivered the goods and brought home the bacon, winning by a score of two to one.

Alamogordo had a splendid team and an especially good battery, but our boys soon got next to the mound and batted out a few good ones. Carrizozo's battery, the Norman brothers, was in the finest fettle and handled the sphere like veterans. The other boys did well, even though some were without practice and had never played with our team.

A very disagreeable incident occurred in the latter part of the game. Wayne Van Schoyck, who was umpiring for Carrizozo, called an Alamogordo runner out at home plate. His decision was seriously questioned by Alamogordo, and many fans ran over from the grand stand and endeavored to intimidate or browbeat the umpire. Naturally, this attracted all the Carrizozo boys to the spot, and for a brief period a riot was imminent. Cooler heads prevailed in the end, and the game proceeded to completion with the result given above.

Carrizozo.....	2	3	0

Batteries—Alamogordo—Leyva and McRae. Carrizozo—Norman and Norman.
Struck out—Leyva, 12; Norman, 10.

It is hoped the fans in the cottonwood town have cooled off ere this, and that the Alamogordo team will soon visit us for a return game. Carrizozo has gone to Alamogordo for two games, the last one because of a misunderstanding about the first, and it's now up to the Alamos to show they are good sports and come to Carrizozo.

White Mountain Lodge

The members of the Southwestern Game and Fish Association are building summer houses on Eagle Creek, at least a number of them are. A reservation of five acres has been set aside to the association by the Forest Reserve, and every available spot on that reservation promises to have a cottage on it. Several cottages, besides the commodious Lodge, have already been built, a number more are under construction and contracts let for others. It is the sportsman's paradise, the beauty spot of this country, and a most delightful place for an outing.

Mountainair vs. Carrizozo

The Mountainair baseball team will be here Sunday to cross bats with our team. They will travel by car via Gran Quivira. We have no acquaintance with the progress of the bean growers as stick artists, but if they should be as good ball players as they are bean raisers the local team

Third Party to Name Ticket

COMMITTEE OF 48 TO ADOPT PLATFORM

Chicago, June 13.—Asserting that the republican national convention "ignored most of the serious problems and mentioned others only to reveal its unwillingness to face them honestly," the committee of forty-eight, in a statement signed by Amos Pinchot and other members, said that "whatever uncertainty exists as to whether there would be a new party candidate for president has been removed."

The organization will adopt a platform and nominate a candidate for president at a convention in Chicago on July 10.

"The republican party has now driven out of representation in its councils the millions of voters who followed Roosevelt, Johnson and LaFollette," the statement said. "The new party will represent these voters and will present a definite and constructive program."

The statement said the new party's ticket would be placed on the ballot in every state.

New York, June 13.—The single tax party will hold a national convention in Chicago beginning July 10, it was announced here tonight from national headquarters.

The call for the gathering, which is signed by Robert C. McAuley, of Pennsylvania, accuses the republican party of the furthering of summary legislation involving communism and paternalism equal in effect to the program of the socialist party. Endorsement of the committee of forty-eight, which will hold a conference in Chicago at the same time, will be solicited, it was stated.

A Good Report from the Southwestern Well

Oscuro, N. M.—The following is a copy of a letter received by one of the stockholders of the Southwestern Tularosa Basin Oil and Refining Co. from Mr. F. W. Snyder, field superintendent, under date of June 7th:

"Shortly after the directors left the well Sunday night, the drill passed the shell of limestone into a grey shale for about ten feet. This shale made the best oil showing we have ever had. At 7 a. m. Monday we encountered a thin water sand, making a little new water. We are now underreaming to run the pipe down to cut off this water, which will take about 24 hours. The well is 1417 feet at this date. Things surely look good."

Recent reports show they are now drilling again, and making good progress, having passed the 1450 foot mark, with a heavier oil and gas showing as the drills descends.

New Mexico Has 1,332 School Houses and 2,616 Teachers

Santa Fe, June 11.—New Mexico's total of expenditures for public school purposes during the year ending June 30, 1919, was $2,362,929, it is shown in the annual report that has just been completed by the office of Jonathan H. Wagner, state superintendent of public instruction.

The average monthly pay of male teachers advanced from $98 to $114, while the pay of female teachers climbed from $70 to $80.

There are 1,332 school houses, having a seating capacity of $0,052 as compared with the year previous with 1,413 houses with a capacity of 89,271. This decrease is explained in part by the fact that many sections have consolidated their school districts. In one instance one large school is now serving districts where ten school houses were formerly used. There were 2,616 teachers employed, of whom 2,147 were females.

In the rural districts there were 33 schools built during the year, with 245 consolidated. Of these schools 575 rooms are well furnished, and the libraries have 24,205 books.

Receipts during the year totaled $2,909,016, of which fines, licenses and poll taxes contributed $103,800, while the receipts from special county levies amounted to $964,042.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

All Candidates Strong For Good Roads

WASHINGTON—Motorists may place their bets on at least one political certainty in the vast presidential racing field. No matter who is elected, the national good roads movement will receive the whole-hearted backing of the White House.

Without a single exception, all of the presidential candidates, whose opinions clash on most everything from the reason for 25 cent sugar to Uncle Sam's foreign policy, are in perfect accord concerning the vital issue of improved highways as a means to the future economic welfare of the country.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden declares that good roads is the one thing which will check the flow of young men and women from farms to cities. Gen. Leonard Wood believes that the good roads lesson is one of the outstanding features of the war. Herbert Hoover wants a mighty national organization for the establishment of the greater roads system. W. G. McAdoo believes good roads should supplement the railroads to keep pace with America's development. Mr. Bryan says we should celebrate peace by building it memorials in permanent highways.

"Every possible facility must be provided to encourage producers of farm commodities and merchandise to increase production," declares Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, anti H. C. L. leader. "The improvement and use of public highways, in addition to airways, railways and waterways, is vital to the progress and prosperity of the people."

"We have had a great object lesson in the paved highways of California," says Senator Hiram Johnson. "They have been a great factor in the development of the state. The improvement of the highways of the nation undoubtedly will be of great economic value to the country as a whole."

"Transportation has made every avenue of civilization," is the belief of Senator Warren G. Harding. There is no advancement in production and exchange until there are highways to facilitate the transportation involved.

"Good roads construction retarded by the war should now be pushed vigorously," declared Senator Miles Poindexter. "I favor an extensive system of national roads built by the federal government and located with a view to military defense as well as civic and commercial use, and co-ordinated with existing highways."

"Overalls" Nets Bright Reporter $10,000

DEAR, dear! Word has reached Washington from Paris that the overall movement to hand a wallop to H. C. L. is nothing more than an "advertising stunt."

And this after Representative Upshaw of Georgia has appeared in the house in overalls to receive the applause of less enterprising colleagues; and overall clubs have been formed in every nook and cranny of the land; and lawyers have worn them into court and escaped a fine for contempt; and dignified bankers have put 'em on; and a Kansas mayor has been inaugurated in 'em, and the denim parades have marched and counter-marched with the bands playing: "Overalls, overalls," and even the girls have put 'em on!

It seems too awful to be true, yet the story from Paris is circumstantial. It says that flashing like a meteor into Paris, loaded with more diamonds than the late "Jim" Brady, and scattering handfuls of bills with a prodigality of "Million Dollar" Gates, Johnny Sorenson of New York, the first overall millionaire, who has just sold out his interest in the big overall factories in Newark, N. J.; Schenectady, N. Y.; and Buffalo, N. Y., at a thousand per cent profit, arrived at Claridge's, grabbing the royal suite.

"The overalls campaign in America is the biggest publicity stunt ever pulled off," said Mr. Sorenson. "It originated in the brain of a New York reporter, who, seeing the possibilities of the 'story,' went to the biggest overall firm in the country and put the scheme in operation. He got $10,000 for the idea and was given a job at the head of the firm's publicity department.

Mr. Sorenson said the stock of his company bounded from 43 to 600 in a few days after the idea was sprung.

"No Sportsman" Is Verdict on the German

AMERICA is a nation of sportsmen, and the decision of the English and Belgian Jockey clubs to bar from participation in racing and the refusal to accept for registration in the English stud book any alien enemy horses is of great interest here. The French Jockey club has not yet taken any formal action regarding alien owned horses, but it may confidently be expected to follow the lead of its allies and neighbors. Whether the Jockey Club of America will take any action in the premises remains to be seen. The United States is so remote from the interdicted countries that there is little likelihood of any German bred or owned thoroughbreds being sent here for racing.

Sportsmen of all kinds, whether or not interested in racing, are concerned in this action. The sportsman is the gentleman of sports. He plays fair. He is a good winner and a better loser. "All men are equal on the turf and under it."

The racing sportsmen of England and Belgium have served notice on the German that by their standards he is no sportsman.

This action will be a crushing blow to the horse breeding activities of Germany, Austro-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey. Thoroughbred sires, most of them of English lineage, were the foundation of the great army and racing studs developed by Germany and Austro-Hungary. The best were none too good in the establishment of a type of general purpose horse.

The English Derby winners, Ard Patrick and Galtee Moore, each cost $110,000, and were among the fine sires that were available to farmers and breeders at a nominal fee.

Germany maintained racing on a more or less pretentious scale during the war, and there was no let up in breeding.

To Cut Soldiers' War Insurance Red Tape

WAR veterans holding government insurance will be able to pay their premiums at the local post offices if congress passes a bill which has just been approved by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. The measure revises the war risk insurance laws with a view to the elimination of much of the red tape. Representative Sweet of Iowa has served as chairman of the subcommittee which has been handling this class of legislation.

The plan as outlined in the bill has the approval of the treasury department, of which the bureau of war risk insurance is a part. It provides for the establishment of 14 regional offices in the United States.

The bureau of public health services and the federal board of vocational education have a like number of offices and an effort is being made to coordinate the work to be rendered of the cities in which they may be located. The bill also provides for the establishment of such offices as may be deemed necessary.

The bill also provides that the bureau of war risk insurance shall temporarily relieve from the payment of premiums on insurable term insurance the following paragraphs: (a) Those who are receiving hospital care under the bureau; (b) those who are receiving vocational training

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA OUT OF BALANCE

That Its Industrial Life Has Not Kept Pace With Its Agricultural Has Been Fatal to Country's Prosperity.

Article XVIII.

By FRANK OMERFORD.

Less than 10 per cent of the people of Russia permanently live in cities or towns. I write the word "permanently" to call attention to the fact that a number of peasants and villagers come to the cities and towns to work for a part of the year in the industries. They retain their peasant status and their dwellings in the villages.—In 1910 there were only forty cities in the Russian empire with a population of from 50,000 to 100,000; only four cities with a population of over 100,000.

Poverty forced upon the Russian people the co-operative spirit. In a great, long strata people can stand up together better than alone. It is the idea of consolation in companionship. It is a principle of mass psychology that a group of men will dare to do a thing, to stand a suffering or a danger that no individual in the crowd would undertake alone. The Russians have suffered from the dawn of history, and one of the oldest institutions of Russian life is the Artel. The Artel very much resembles the co-operative society of western Europe, with this difference, that the co-operative society in Europe and America is the outgrowth of an economic trend. In Russia it was the unpremeditated result of necessity. It is the difference between one who is hungry because he is dieting and one who is starving because he is without food.

The workers of Russia have suffered the same slavery the peasants have endured. The maximum wage has been a starvation pay. So when the working men from a province come to a city to work in the textile industries or as carpenters, masons, etc., they at once unite in groups of from ten to fifty persons, rent a house, keep a common table, elect an elder of the Artel to whom each one pays his share of the expense. All over Russia one finds the Artel—in the cities, in the lumber camps, even in the prisons. When a building is to be put up an Artel is organized. When a railroad is being built an Artel is formed. In some instances the Artel resembles a labor union, in that the arrangement of the terms of employment is made by a delegate or committee appointed by the Artel.

Live in Squaller and Misery. Village life is primitive. The villagers live out of the world. The villages are very small, particularly in the extreme north. The houses are generally cheap wooden shanties. Owing to the great danger of fire, the villages generally cover a large area of ground. The houses are scattered and struggling. The conveniences found even in the American tenements are unknown. There is no chance for cleanliness. They live and sleep in crowded, smoky, unfinished houses. Furniture—they haven't what we call furniture, even what the poorest tenant in America would call furnishings. A board for a table, a shake-down for a bed.

Russia's industrial life has always been out of balance with her agricultural life. Notwithstanding her riches of raw material and her great possibilities for a successful industrial life, Russia has continued to be a nation with 81 per cent farmers, 7 or 8 per cent permanently engaged in industry, and 3 or 4 per cent of peasants who devoted part of the time to work in the industries. It has been said repeatedly that the Imperial Russian government from the time of Peter the Great has been unceasing in its efforts for the creation and development of home manufactures. All of the evidence I have examined refutes this statement. There never has been any security to the worker in Russia. The only protection he has had has been his interest in the family allotment. He could not back there and be hungry; in the city starvation was the danger.

The cars put every obstacle in the way of education and of course this prevented the growth of industry. In 1902 the principal industries in Russia, representing all of the factories throughout the empire, of which the annual production was valued at more than $1,000, were textiles, food products, animal products, wood, paper, chemical products, ceramics, mining, metal goods, miscellaneous, and all of these employed only 2,259,773 workers.

Led Up to Bolshevik Problem. This dwarfed, stunted, paralyzed side of Russia—its industrial side—has a direct bearing upon conditions in Russia today and is an important part of the problem of the bolshevik government.

A half-century ago, economically normal times have witnessed agricultural, manufacturing and commercial sides of the economic cripple. Her body is great and powerful; the physical constitution is strong. One arm, agriculture, is overdeveloped, and its overdevelopment has been at the sacrifice of the other arm, Russia, economically, in one physical respect, reminds me of Wilhelm Hohenzollern, late of Prussia, now living in Holland. I refer to his withered, undeveloped baby arm. Russia's undeveloped industrial arm is just such a crippled, useless arm. Reference to the ex-emperor, who is now sawing wood in Holland, suggests to my mind the words of a great German economist, List:

"A nation cannot promote and further its civilization, its prosperity and its social progress equally as well by exchanging agricultural products for manufactured goods as by establishing a manufacturing power of its own. A merely agricultural nation can never develop to any extent a home or a foreign commerce, with inland means of transport and foreign navigations, increase its population in due proportion to their wellbeing, or make notable progress in its moral, intellectual, social and political development; it will never acquire important political power or be placed in a position to influence the cultivation and progress of less advanced nations and to form colonies of its own. A mere agricultural state is infinitely less powerful than an agricultural-manufacturing state. The former is always economically and politically dependent on these foreign nations which take from it agriculture in exchange for manufactured goods. It cannot determine how much it will produce, it must wait and see how much others will buy from it. The agricultural-manufacturing states on the contrary produce for themselves large quantities of raw materials and provisions and supply merely the deficiency from importation. The purely agricultural nations are thus dependent for the power of effecting sales on the chances of a more or less bountiful harvest in the agricultural-manufacturing nations. They have, moreover, to compete in their sales with other purely agricultural nations, whereby the power of sale in itself is uncertain; they are exposed to the danger of ruin in their trading with agricultural-manufacturing nations by war or new tariffs, whereby they suffer the double disadvantage of finding no buyers for their surplus agricultural products and of failing to obtain supplies of the manufactured goods they require. An agricultural nation is a man with one arm who makes use of an arm belonging to another person but cannot, of course, be sure of having it always available. An agricultural-manufacturing nation is a man who has two good arms of his own at his disposal.

Poland Cited as an Example. List further points out that the relative cultivation of the agricultural and manufacturing arms of a country possessed of an ample and fertile territory will give that country a population twice to three times as large as it could secure by the development of the agricultural arm alone, and maintain this vastly increased population in a much higher degree of comfort. Surplus agricultural produce is not necessarily capital in an agricultural country. Countries which produce such a surplus and remain dependent upon manufacturing countries are often obliged to purchase these manufactured goods at an enhanced price. He points to Poland as an example. He expounded the fruits of her soil to obtain the goods which she could have manufactured from it. As a consequence she fell like a house of cards when organized nations attacked her. List considers that had Poland developed her manufacturing arm, besides retaining her national independence she would have exceeded any other European country in prosperity. He uses List's words: "Go to fallen Poland and ask its hapless people now whether it is advisable for a nation to buy the fabrics of a foreign country so long as its native manufacturers are not sufficiently strengthened to be able to compete in price and quality with the foreigners."

Bolshevism has set out to socialize political, agricultural and industrial Russia, and as I expect to examine the effects of communism in each of these departments of Russian life I have set down some historical and economical truths which must be kept in mind when examining the Lenine panacea. Francis Needs Raw Materials. Economic disturbances in France during the period of readjustment of wages to high prices were predicted by Leon Jouhaux, chief labor representative on the French delegation to the international labor conference at Washington. "The lack of raw materials is the only thing that prevents the French workingman from going back to his job," said M. Jouhaux.

"We must have cotton and coal from the United States, for it will be from three to five years before the French coal mines can be operated. Of course, wages must go up in France on account of the increased cost of living, and it is probable that before the workman gets this increase there will be more or less economic disturbance."

Japanese Miners Strike. Miners of Japan are beginning to demand higher wages and fewer hours of employment. Seven thousand copper miners at Ashio, near Nikko, went on strike recently and in view of the gravity of the situation a detachment of infantry and a strong contingent of police were hurried to the district from Utsunomiya. The strikers formed a general procession.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET DANF, 743 N. 5th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Handicapped. "I tried to tell that lady about my new Paris gown, but she wanted to talk about the new books." "Embarrassed you, eh?" "Yes; I don't know a thing about the latest style in books."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Catarra! Deafness Cannot Be Cured if local applications are they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarra! Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY can be introduced into the blood on the mucous surface of the system. Catarra! Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation is reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are cured by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrh! Easily Passed Examination Although Previously Told Condition Was Hopeless

"I was so bad off with kidney trouble I had to give up my work as engineer," says J. H. Hagless, 210 West 60th Street, Chicago, Ill. "My back gave out completely. It was so weak as if it were broken. Often I tossed and turned the whole night long. I became dizzy and would have to grab the nearest object to keep from falling. At times the kidney secretions hardly passed at all, while again they would be profuse and oblige me to arise time and time again. The urine burned cruelly. I lost twenty-five pounds in weight; and I had taken so many things without relief I became discouraged; in fact, I was told there was no help for me. At last I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they made a new man of me. It wasn't any time before I was back to normal weight and had passed a life insurance examination, without any trouble. Over twelve years have since gone by and my case is still permanent." Story to be told me.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years

Food Would Sour and Boil—Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about KATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I need five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of KATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

Harding and Coolidge

The republican national convention concluded its labors at Chicago last Saturday, after a five-day session. The old-timers played a very smooth game, allowing Johnson, Wood, Lowden, et al., to go through a number of ballots before crowding down the bid. When the time was ripe, the delegates tired, and no candidate having a preponderance of votes, the word was passed around to support Senator Harding of Ohio for president, and he was an easy victor on the tenth ballot. Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts was nominated for the vice presidency on the first ballot.

The big fight came over the platform with reference to a declaration on the League of Nations. Finally a compromise was effected, and the declaration on the League was anyway you like to take it. In fact, the platform more or less straddles several issues, and wholly dodged others. Notwithstanding the ambiguity of the platform, the nominations were probably the best before the convention, and if the platform were as good as the nominees it would be greatly improved.

Harvest in Kansas

The Kansas wheat harvest will begin about the 20th of June in the southern part of the state, and from July 10 to 12 in the northern part. The farmers will pay seventy cents an hour, besides three meals, a lunch and a bed. A day's work will begin at sunrise and continue while till dark. The harvest lasts about a month and the threshing season continues about three months longer. The yield may exceed 93,000,000 bushels. Approximately 40,000

Health About Gone

Many thousands of women suffering from womanly troubles, have been benefited by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic, according to letters we receive, similar to this one from Mrs. Z. V. Spill, of Hayes, N. C. "I could not stand on my feet, and just melted away," she says. "As my suffering was so great, and he had tried other remedies, Dr. — had us get Cardui. . . I began improving, and it cured me. I know, and my doctor knows, what Cardui did for me, for my nerves and health were about gone."

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

She writes further: "I am in splendid health . . . can do my work. I feel I owe it to Cardui, for I was in dreadful condition." If you are nervous, run-down and weak, or suffer from headache, backache, etc., every month, try Cardui. Thousands of women praise this medicine for the good it has done them, and many physicians who have used Cardui successfully with their women patients, say: "Cardui is the best medicine for women's ailments."

What a lot of argument there used to be about a woman driving an automobile

TODAY she can "make a train" or fix a tire as well as anybody.

As soon as a luxury becomes a necessity the point of view changes.

Two or three years ago you would have listened to more varying opinions about tires than you could shake a stick at. Mileages, construction, treads and whatnot.

It's different now. Tire users are working towards a unanimous feeling.

You express it one way—the man down the street another. But sifted down it amounts to this:

That the only way to settle your tire problem is to get a tire of known value and stick to it.

We recommend and sell U. S. Tires because their value is known.

There's no guess about it.

It was the U. S. quality policy which led to the perfection of the straight-side automobile tire, the pneumatic truck tire—two of the greatest additions to tire value that have ever been made.

As representatives of the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world, we are in a position to tell you something about tire values. Come in some day and talk to us.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel: In sandy or hilly country, wherever the going is apt to be heavy—The U. S. Nobby.

For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco. For front wheels—The U. S. Plain. For best results—everywhere—U. S. Royal Corda.

"Billy, dear, do listen to reason for half a second. What are we going to do about the president? We haven't got the whole story even yet out of him—I pointed in the direction of the dining room—and there wasn't a man in it. We've got to see Mrs. Delario and get her evidence—we've got to see Claire."

"He'll make her say anything."

"You and I can break her down under cross-examination. You see, we haven't a thing but his word."

"And the diamonds?" Billy interrupted. "I'm taking your word for these—you didn't see fit to show 'em to me."

His tone was a trifle sarcastic, indicating that there might still be some legitimate doubt as to the existence of the stones in question, in spite of all the adventure over them; but I ignored it and went on: "He made one slip—I saw it at the time, and now I can't remember what it was. It went slip out of my head and it was important—something about . . . No, I can't remember. It was sort of key to something else—"

"Can't you think?" urged Billy. "Every little detail's important now. And lordy-lord—what a story, and my scoop!"

The reporter was romping around in Billy's inside, determined to push the story to a finish; while romping around in my inside was my natural caution. Why should we do anything to warn the Emperor William? He might deny everything and say he never even heard of the diamonds! Yes, one false step would make Billy and me the laughingstock of diplomatic circles throughout the world. We must get all our proof before we divulge the secret on which the fate of our nation depended.

The net result of our hurried colloquy was that we returned to the dining room and silently relieved the still-sorrowing monsieur of his handcuffs. Which done, Billy presented him with leave of absence from our society in the words:

"Monsieur, you are free to go," and added a courtly bow.

I bowed also. Thus we signified with all the manners we possessed that the interview, pleasing as it had been, was at an end.

Our action—simple enough to us and in line with the plan we'd just mapped out for getting at the truth—left monsieur as dazed as anything we'd done; inexplicably, without threats or explanations and without—the diamonds. I smiled and said, quite as though he'd been drinking tea with me: "I'll say good night to you, monsieur." With that, I held out my hand.

Monsieur did not rise. He did not take my offered hand. He stared—a really frightened, childish stare, first at me, then at Billy. He had been dismissed—every second he longer re-never-ending wrath, whether the diamonds were lost, strayed, stolen from me, or drowned in the sea; wrath that would follow me and my name forever, world without end, amen.

"All right, let it," I replied curtly.

"But would it not be better to consider?" urged monsieur. "Ze wraas of ze emperor is terrible. Consider, madame, I beg you to consider. Zea diamonds zat you have found in zat slipper you have so misfortune to carry off. Consider to give zem back."

"They were not in the slipper I carried off."

Monsieur positively jumped. "Zey were not in zat slipper?"

"No—on my word of honor as a gentleman, monsieur, I tell you these diamonds were not in the slipper I carried off."

"Mon Dieu!" he said under his breath. "Madame Delario must have zem—in spite of her denial—in spite of zat I search ze entire house—and herself—and find also ze slipper in her wardrobe as she would not leave it if she find zose diamonds."

"But she may not have found them—they may have fallen out and got lost—"

"Impossible—impossible," he interrupted. "I have examine zose zose slippers—you see it is zis way: My daughter have give ze box in one, safe, and on an evening you tell Madame Delario to wear zose slippers and Claire have but just time to remove ze box and she returns it to ze zuse slipper. It is zat little accident—and some words from yourself—zat convince me it is yourself who has found zose diamonds—"

"No, monsieur. When you accused me of robbing Claire of jewelry I hadn't the least idea what you meant. I suppose you accused Mrs. Delario of the same thing? Didn't you accuse her of taking jewels from Claire—just as you did me—without specifying what kind of jewels?"

"Out—yes. Naturally, I do not specify, for ze reason if she find ze diamonds, she know ze what I refer; but if you have find zem, I do not tell for what I seek."

"Well, that's it, I do believe!" I exclaimed in the tone of having discovered the key to the whole difficulty. "You said jewels and she thought you meant what we should mean by it—as we use the word, we think of pins, bracelets, pendants, made-up articles, you understand."

"Ah, so zat is ze way of it!" he cried, popping off his chair in a hurry. "I see it is some error of idiom of ze language zat cause all ze trouble. I go immediately to ze estimable Madame Delario and explain all to her."

He took up his hat, which Billy had picked up off the floor after the scrimmage and laid on the dining-room table.

"Oh, monsieur—you a diplomat!" I slipped off. "And you think you can go to an American citizen after such accusations as you've made and say: 'It was all a mistake, and settle everything!'"

"But I apologize for ze mistake," he urged, as though his sweet apology paid for everything he'd done and brought forth a box of diamonds on a salver, here they are—thank-you-for-taking-them.

I laughed. "Suppose she won't accept your apology?" I asked, and before he got a reply, I added: "She probably won't even see you—not after the way you treated her."

"I bet she doesn't even see you," Billy supported, seeing my drive.

"What are you going to do?" He was anxious to make monsieur commit himself.

Monsieur twisted his hands nervously and I kept the ball rolling by observing slyly: "You have just told us that the most profound secrecy must be maintained, so you cannot call in the police. But there is one thing you can do—"

He asked breathlessly, "And zat is—?"

"Go straight to the president and lay the whole case before him."

Monsieur looked as if he'd fall in a faint at my feet.

"Ze president—mon Dieu!" He used his handkerchief over his face. "Madame—in pity—out of ze kindness of your so kind heart—I sew myself on your mercy—I, De Ravenol—and I ask you to help me in ze recovery of zose diamonds in secret. I ask it for ze sake of Claire. I ask on my knees—"

And the man was actually preparing to do it, too! But I, not being used to that sort of demonstration and seeing it as anything but a compliment that he felt he had to go such lengths to propitiate me—for I like to think myself at least decently approachable on common human grounds—reminded to his knees with a parody on "Don't do it!" and I took my leave that evening. "You can't see me," I said.

"I have placed myself in your position as an American and I appreciate your feelings," he began, and he went on to tell me as a man he believed for me; how as a woman he would be glad to be ordered for me; how as the emperor's messenger he would be glad to be ordered for me.

the interview was that monsieur promised to relieve both Mrs. Delario and me of all espionage immediately—dismiss his solitary detective who was shadowing me—bring Claire to the house the next evening for a full confession of her part of the smuggling; while I promised to see Mrs. Delario the first thing in the morning and use all my influence with her.

"I think that is all—this evening," said I sweetly, giving him the hint to go.

I at once got Billy's coat and hat from my wardrobe, where they were hidden, and coming through the hall I managed to signal him to go along with monsieur.

They left together—apparently on the best of terms.

"Tomorrow I'll decide about going to the president," thought I, turning out and whirled me into the scene room and locked the door on us before we exchanged a syllable.

We sank into chairs. I felt as if a tidal wave had swept from under me and left me not even hanging up in a coconut tree but sitting still in peaceful security. It was she who got us down from the high peaks to the levels where conversation can go afoot without falling off, by asking, "And how are you—after it all?" to which I replied, "But how are you—after it all?" and we both laughed.

Her laugh died away into an indignant frown. "You never heard anything like it," she cried. "He came here with a detective—and it wasn't five minutes after you got out of the house, Monday—and accused me—of stealing Claire's bracelets!"

"Bracelets?" I echoed.

"Yes—me."

I said "Oh," slowly. I hadn't expected she'd gripe the word jewels quite so fine.

"Did you ever hear anything quite so outrageous?" she rashed on. "Ze come here and say I robbed his child of jewelry! I don't believe she had any jewelry, anyway—it was all a trumped-up story to get something out of me; but I was so indignant—" and she poured out the whole tale.

"Well, it's all over," she concluded. "I didn't care how much monsieur searched—I knew I hadn't robbed Claire, and I knew that so long as you had my diamonds they were safe. I didn't worry after the first day or so."

She said "my diamonds," and now I had to tell her!

"Mrs. Delario there seems to be a misunderstanding about those diamonds," I began suavely.

She gave a start and asked, "How, misunderstanding? You mean they're not worth all you said? Well—you didn't tell me positively they were worth—that." She seemed to hesitate at "a million dollars," which is what I said.

"Oh, yes—I still stick to that—that's the worst of it; they are worth it—that's what made them shining targets for that thief."

"Thief!" she cried. "You say 'thief'! too! Then he was, after all!" She was very much excited, and repeated the word several times with a kind of joy and ran on rapidly: "I wouldn't tell you what I thought about him, but I knew he was a thief. I knew it in Paris—I knew it in Antwerp—it was in Antwerp—after I'd made all the arrangements to bring Claire over—that I heard it clairaudiently, 'De Ravenol is a thief.' I knew it here—in this very room—the first time he came." And then she smiled at me benignly: "And thanks to you he didn't get my diamonds, so we're safe—Claire's safe—she'll never know the truth about her father's from me."

"Claire never had any jewelry—the whole accusation was trumped up to get the chance to rob me. But how under the sun did he know I had those diamonds?"

"He says he put them there—or at least Claire did—in your slipper," I blurted.

Her hands flew to her heart. "Never!" she cried. "Never in the world!"

"And he says they're his," I persisted, feeling I'd got my opening at last. I put it that way partly to disabuse her mind of the idea that monsieur was a thief; partly to save her from the too sudden shock of the Emperor William. I saw I'd have to let her down gradually.

"They're mine," she returned vehemently. "I swore to you again—now—here—in the sight of God—they are mine. Consider—" her tone was all appeal now, "if they had not been mine—if I had stolen them from Claire—would I have shown them to you? Would I have asked you to help me dispose of them?"

I was forced to admit, "No—of course not—I had already taken that into consideration."

"Yes—I grant you that you honestly believe they're yours," I admitted. "But what I've got to know is, how they came to be yours."

She told me then, hesitating no longer, the unbelievable story—unbelievable by every modern standard and from every scientific point of view, explaining why she'd prevaricated in the first instance about her uncle. It wasn't, after all, quite what you'd call by so harsh a name as lying.

CHAPTER XIV.

"The Jewels Are Mine." To this day I've never quite recovered from the astonishment and change when on waking up in the morning I reviewed the case with a refreshed mind and realized with what ease De Ravenol had imprisoned both Mrs. Delario and me in our own homes and had us quaking in our boots in fear of our very lives!

Monsieur had managed Mrs. Delario even better than he had me—he had merely left a detective in her house to watch her by day and lock her up by night. In fact, she'd actually invited the detective in proof of her innocence; for when monsieur had accused her of stealing jewels she saw in her mind's eye—just as I did—trinkets, jewelry, and the idea that he was referring to seven unset diamonds caged in her slipper never entered her head.

"You have accused me of a shocking crime—a crime that offends every principle of decency as well as morals," she told him with spirit, "and I now insist that you convince yourself of my innocence before you leave the house. Here is the key to my bedroom—here is the passkey to all the other rooms. Have your man watch me while you examine everything—everything—and then you must get a woman to search me."

This unsolicited action, her flat denial and his finding the slipper where she'd carelessly dropped it in her wardrobe threw the scent on me. In two hours monsieur convinced himself that she did not have the diamonds and knew nothing about them, and he then requested her—as the proof of her noncomplicity—to let him lock her in her room and send for me! And she didn't dare to refuse!

And there you have, simple as a wimple could be, the whole of it. I had her side of the story when I saw her Sunday morning as monsieur's messenger. But I had enough of the story before I went to her to feel pretty well obnoxious; yet sad, too, as I thought of the disappointment I had in store for her when I told her that Emperor William owned her "diamonds" and how the diamonds came to be in her slipper.

When I didn't like very much the way she'd lied to me about the jewels she'd hidden, had left them to be found by the detective, and how she'd lied to me about the diamonds coming to be in her slipper.

In Spain, and particularly in the province of Andalusia, families are so large that even Theodore Roosevelt would have been appalled.

At dinner over his hominy soup, Mr. Fyfe was amazed to see the multitude of daughters that the innkeeper possessed.

"You have a fine, a very fine family of daughters there," he said.

"Ah, Señor," said the innkeeper, "we've been very unfortunate with our daughters. During a 1917 terral, the chimney fell in and killed all but eleven of them."

The clock chimed the four-quarters to nine and then the hour. Monsieur spoke.

"I have placed myself in your position as an American and I appreciate your feelings," he began, and he went on to tell me as a man he believed for me; how as a woman he would be glad to be ordered for me; how as the emperor's messenger he would be glad to be ordered for me.

Milady Goes In for Accessories

The accessories of dress play no small part in the fashions of the moment. Along with the high cost of living a reckless expenditure of money for every detail of a woman's toilette has developed. One would think observes a prominent fashion writer, that money had no value whatever in the eyes of the world and that woman's supreme desire was the possession of everything that is beautiful and flattering, regardless of cost.

This craze, as it were, for spending money is psychological. It is commodities that the world lacks now and not money. Therefore, the value of all material things is enhanced in the eyes of the prospective purchaser. There is an avarice for the possession of articles of adornment rather than for money.

Many of the most reckless spenders are those who before the war did not have great fortunes. Money has come easily and it goes quickly. This is why a woman will pay as much today for some dainty nonessential accessory of the toilette as she paid yesterday for a bundle necessary. Apparently, she does not care that her veil costs as much as her hat, her purse as much as her dress, her fan as much as a coat and her hair ornaments as much as she once spent for real jewels.

Nothing Too Extreme.
No evening toilette is complete without some form of headpiece or hair ornament, and nothing seems too extreme or fantastic to find favor. The hair is dressed very simply and close to the head. All extravagance of outline is given, therefore, by ornaments or garnitures of the most striking sort.

The interest in Spanish fashions manifests itself markedly in the high back Spanish comb, delicately carved and set with real or imitation jewels and sometimes with the high open back holding a panel of priceless lace.

There are also Egyptian hair ornaments of Egyptian and Greek types. In fact, almost every source of inspiration has been drawn upon to provide designs. The antennae of the butterfly are worked out in fine gold wires springing from a jeweled pendant adorning the forehead.

Even the crude art of the American Indian has been resorted to in this mad rush for ornamentation. Like the wife of an old-time Indian chief, the woman of today wears headpieces of dyed feathers and necklaces of wooden beads. To keep the latter from being inexpensive a costly ornament of some sort, such as a piece of carved jade with a brilliant pendant, is attached.

Tortoise Shell Vogue.
The new purses are either ample sacks, which serve for both day and evening affairs, or small, flat effects; divided into two compartments; one of suede is used for money, while the other, of white kid, is intended for trinkets or jewels.

A new bag is of pale gray doekin mounted on a tortoise shell frame, the shell clasp being in the form of a spread fan. The handle or pendant for opening the purse is also of shell.

Raspberry Red Seal.
A distinctly new vanity case is of carved ivory. The plaques forming the body of the case are of ivory mounted in a gold frame and the be-lows are of gray doekin. The monogram is of Japanese character carved and picked out in black.

A fascinating little vanity case is made of raspberry red seal in oblong design with slightly rounding corners. The handle consists of four straps ending in a silver medallion inserted with Italian mosaic. On the outside of the case is a handkerchief pocket. Cases of this sort should carry the initial of the owner in silver or gold, according to the mountings of the purse.

Flat folded purses in billbook form are receiving considerable attention. These are quite different from the usual commonplace leather ones. They are developed both in leather and in satin with inset panels of rare needlework tapestry which are often tiny bits cut from historic pieces torn apart in the devastation of the war.

Carried on Bracelets.

When silk is used for the flat bags it is of the heavier type, such as faille, the softer silks being reserved for those of the puffy type.

Gallith, dyed in all colors, is used on bags. It takes the form of bracelets, dangling ornaments, chains, tops and cuplike bottoms of bags, to which silk tops are attached. This is a good way to introduce a bit of color into a costume, and is at the same time a less expensive mode than the beaded bag, which, when beautiful in color, is quite expensive.

A bag on which gallith is used is in melon shape, with the cuplike bottom just described and a silk pouch top gathered by a drawstring. There is a cap of the gallith with holes in the top, through which the drawstring slips. The cap is pushed down to form a cover for the top of the bag.

Ever so many of the new bags are carried on bracelets. It may be just a bright colored gallith bracelet or one of solid gold, or even of platinum set with precious stones. This fashion for bracelet handles furnishes an excellent opportunity for introducing costly effects in bags. This, unfortunately, seems to be one of the present-day demands.

Before passing from the subject of bracelets a description of a new novelty gallith bracelet in bright coral color may be interesting. It is made in small rectangular pieces about 1 inch long and 1/2 inch wide. These are strung in the gallith and through College professors are proverbially absent minded and many stories are told along this line. One is told about the late Professor Cleveland, beloved of all Newbold men of several decades ago. One day the professor had a powerful electric current running over an insulated wire in the class room.

Then, beamingly absent mindedly upon the nearest student, he said: "Now, Mr. Smith, will you kindly touch that wire!"—Portland Express.

Held to All Superstitions.
When the first missionaries visited Marsovan, Turkey, the old Armenian church members were Christians in little more than name. Their beliefs were a mixture of superstitions with a suggestion of a Christian origin. They feared the evil eye, and were charms to break its power. They put branches of a thorny plant over their chimneys in the form of a cross to prevent witches from coming down and strangling their little children. They visited the graves of saints and offered prayers for relief from sickness, tying a rag on a bush nearby with the hope of returning home leaving their disease tied to the holy spot.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

Memorial to Norwegians.

Nearly five centuries before Columbus sailed to America, according to some historians, a party of Norwegians landed on the northeastern coast of the continent, and a few years later established a colony. As a memorial to these early explorers a park and tower has been erected at Aurundale, Mass., a town that is believed to occupy the same site as the "legendary settlement." Investigation has failed to reveal any traces of building ruins in the vicinity, but has resulted in the finding of several old stone walls, which are thought to have been constructed by the inhabitants of the ancient village.
