CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"Do you think those devils out there will let us out of this alive? Do you think that hiding behind your skirts will save us—"

"They cannot starve us out. We are armed now, Gunga and I, and we can hold that door for longer than they will care to wait for a heavier price than they will care to pay. They are not fools. They know that. And that is the one chance for you—that they will accept the terms I have to offer."

"And I am safer here with a murderer, with an impostor who steals a dead man's name?" she asked evenly. The red flared into Wallen's face and died away again, leaving it pale and haggard. His eyes met hers and held in a long gaze. They were hard, those fearless brown eyes, cruelly hard enough; but, too, they seemed to hold a strange challenge to him to refute what she had said.

"Shall I answer you? Do you expect an answer?" he said steadily. "Then the answer is—no. You are safer here only for a little while—only for a moment."

She started back with a little cry, retreating to her cabin door. "I did not mean to frighten you," said Wallen gently. "I mean that there is another danger quite apart from any on board. You know what Laynton and the others are after, and you have been told by Gunga here that, though you may not choose to believe it, they are inviting their own destruction. In an hour, in twenty-four, there will not be a man alive aboard this ship, and—"

A terrific smash upon the door cut short his words, and, whirling around, he came to Gunga's side. The shock of some heavy object, used obviously as a battering ram, had loosened their makeshift prop, the door had yielded by perhaps an inch, and Gunga now was straining with might and main to force it back into place.

Wallen swung his weight against the door—hot an instant too soon. It came again, the smash upon the door, but with it a scream of pain above the shouts and cries. Came another scream—then again the scurrying of feet in retreat—then silence. Gunga had fired this time, but not at the door. "Bah!" said Gunga calmly, "we were in too great haste. See"—he jammed the dismantled cabin door more securely into position, wiggling it against the iron base of the chair with a piece of wood that he wrenched from the chair's back—"it will not slip again."

Wallen nodded, testing the barricade. It was firm now, and would hold as long as anything of the saloon door itself remained. He looked around. Helen MacKay had gone into her cabin—and the door was shut. Possibly half an hour passed, and they waited—Gunga on one side a little out of direct range from the door. And then Wallen distinguished a muffled sound of voices.

Life for the Miss MacKay, shall the shame come upon me if I let the sailor die alone?" "Quiet, Gunga!" Wallen commanded softly. "I cannot hear what the captain says." Then raising his voice: "What did you say, captain?" "I said you mean you'd kind of count on going along with them after leading us up to the eyes with some fake dope," Laynton flung back sarcastically. "Well, you can forget it. You'll never get away from this ship like that."

"I don't expect to get away," said Wallen simply. "They are to go. When they are safe I'll tell you every thing you want to know. If what I tell you proves to be a lie—I am still aboard."

"Well, that's fair," admitted Laynton. "I'll take you up on that, and—" His words were lost in a sudden furious altercation in which Wallen could distinguish Mott's voice. There came a bellow from the captain: "You close your jaw! What's the girl compared to the other?"

Almost a smile was on Wallen's lips—a smile that was curiously like a prayer. It was his last card, and he had played it, and it was the master trump. Gunga, in low, passionate words, was still pleading with him. Captain Laynton shouted down the companionway again: "I'll take you up on that. We'll stand in now and I'll send them ashore in a boat."

"No," continued Wallen coldly; "you'll send a boat ashore and ask MacKnight to come out here in a prop. There's a slight difference. I said I wanted to see them safe, not rowed around the ship and put aboard again on the other side."

"Well, have it your own way," laughed Laynton unpleasantly. "I'm agreeable, and that goes. Well—" It seemed to come from the port quarter—a muffled boom that rolled and reverberated over the water. And then another, and still another. And then a wild shout from the deck. Wallen glanced quickly about him. For the first time he noticed that Helen MacKay's door was slightly opened, and now stood ajar. Gunga rushed into the stateroom next to hers. Came that dull, distant boom again; then a crash, a ripping, tearing, rending of wood and steel, and the Montleugh heeled to the shock.

Then Gunga called: "Bah! It is too late! I see the flash of guns. He will come from behind one of the islands. It is Ram Gulab Singh!"

CHAPTER IX. The Man With One Finger. Wallen walked quietly across the saloon to his own cabin. A strange, unnatural calm seemed to have fallen upon him with Gunga's words. Too late! He could not in justice reproach himself. There had been only one chance and he had taken it—MacKnight's. Even if he had defied Laynton and his sordid crew hours earlier, the result would have been the same—it would have brought neither the land nor MacKnight's the sooner.

It was only that Ram Gulab Singh had come first. He took his reserve supply of ammunition from its hiding place, stowed half the boxes away in his pocket, and with the balance of the cartridges in his hand, returned to the saloon and gave them to Gunga, motioning the other to remove the barricade. "What are you going to do?" she had come out from her stateroom and was standing now, a straight, resolute little figure, with eyes that were very wide as they fixed on him.

The electric bulb in the saloon dimmed down and went out. The boom of the heavy gun came across the water again, and unconsciously for a tense instant Wallen waited, expectant of the shock if the shell should hit its mark. It missed.

way. It was black, empty, deserted, as he had expected. He made his way up the companionway to the little lounge room and halted in the port doorway, looking out. He could see nothing at first. It was very dark—not a light showed on the Montleugh. In that respect Laynton, taught no doubt by his experiences in the discreditable and varied trades he had boasted was the Montleugh's business, had been prompt to meet emergencies.

And then gradually, discernible only to a sailor's eye, like a dark blotch on the water, Wallen made out another steamer almost abreast. An instant later, as though in grim indorsement of his vision, from the blotch there leaped a great red flame, came the heavy, resonant roar of the gun's report, and overhead a shell whistled ominously by.

About a mile Wallen now placed the distance between the two vessels, though as to the size of the other he could form no estimate. But did it matter? She was well armed at all events; and it was Ram Gulab Singh, once a government official, always a robber and a murderer—the man who had brought his mother to her death, his father to his death, and now it was his own turn!

But he knew neither excitement nor dismay. He was only conscious of something smoldering dully within him, and that was because Helen MacKay was here. He shook his head a little. Helen MacKay, of course, would never fall into Ram Gulab Singh's hands—alive. On the bridge he could hear Laynton calling down the engine room tube, frantically imploring the engineer for speed; and then Laynton's voice was drowned out by a din from forward by the crew.

Wallen, hugging the shadows of the deckhouses, moved forward to a position under the bridge. Mott was talking excitedly overhead. "She's coming up hand over hand, I tell you. If that fellow Wallen's story is straight after all—and I guess there ain't much doubt of it now—we haven't a hope if that chap out there gets aboard us, providing he don't sink us first. I say go full astern until we get away off her, and then take to the boats. We could give him the slip in the dark if we don't wait till he gets too near to see what we're about, and—"

Another voice cut in, Larsen's, as hurrying from aft he ran up the starboard ladder to the bridge. "Help yourself, Mott," he invited sarcastically. "One boat's in splinters and the other's hoisted away; the deck aft is a wreck from that shell that struck us."

"Light that Morse lamp," ordered Laynton abruptly. "Yes, and give him our position," sneered Mott. "He's got it fast enough now," growled Laynton. "But we'll give him something else. You there, Larsen, light it, d'ye hear? And Morse, tell him that if it's that swine that's masquerading as Wallen he wants, we'll turn him over and—my God!"—with a rip and crash, staggering the ship, a shot tore the wireless house to matchwood.

"Quick!" yelled Laynton. "Tell him! Tell him, d'ye hear—tell him! He'll have us at the bottom in another five minutes!" A strange, awed silence held for an instant following the shot; and now, over his head, Wallen could distinctly hear the clicking of the Morse set. He strained his eyes seaward, watching for an answering signal, and after a moment it came—but, not in Morse. It was the belching flare of the gun again, and again the read and smash of the projectile as it tore into the Montleugh's hull.

There was no doubt about the range now, nor the tenor of Ram Gulab Singh's answer. It was as Gunga had said—the principle that dead men tell no tales. Ram Gulab Singh's tactics, from Ram Gulab Singh's standpoint, were faultless—that a ship might disappear off the face of the earth and be never heard of again was one thing, but that she or anyone on board her should return to report that she had been attacked in these waters, suspiciously those of Ram Gulab Singh, was quite another!

And then to Wallen came a space of time that he could not estimate, each moment recording some wild, unreal, bewildering, kaleidoscopic change in the scene around him. Again that terrific crash from a striking shell, and then a scream, unearthly, not human, from the very bowels of the ship—a tremor of the vessel from stem to stern, a growling, screeching, wrenching of mangled machinery, a tottering thud as though the engines had collapsed upon their bedplates, a cloud of steam volleying skyward from the engine room hatch, and there was no more vibration—and the Montleugh lay a helpless thing, with only a sullen movement now from the momentum of a moment gone.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture) Among the special features of the recent federal aid road record as kept by the United States department of agriculture are three road projects to cost over $1,000,000, one of them over $2,000,000. Pennsylvania had first place in the number of statements approved during July, the amount of federal aid allowances, and the estimated cost of roads to be constructed, while Nebraska turned in the greatest mileage. Seventeen projects in Pennsylvania approved will cost $1,072,028.41 for which the federal aid is $1,988,997.49. Ohio with 12 projects came next to Pennsylvania in the number approved and in the estimated cost of the roads to be improved, and third in the amount of federal aid.

the size of a single project handled in July. It is estimated to cost $1,271,555.59 for which $990,000 federal aid is allowed. In the record of approvals for the month of August Arkansas occupies first place in the estimated cost and mileage of projects and in respect to the largest project. Minnesota is first in the total number of projects approved, namely 11, and second in the amount of federal aid allowances. Pennsylvania received the largest amount of federal aid and her six approved projects come second in the estimated cost of the roads.

On a Massachusetts project, a short concrete road, the estimated cost is at the rate of $127,864 a mile. This is the highest average cost per mile so far shown in any federal aid road. A bituminous brick or concrete road in Ohio will average $67,716 a mile and 7.14 miles of concrete or brick in Pennsylvania will average $64,015, while another project in Pennsylvania will average $55,445 per mile.

The Village Election

When the "ides of March" have passed and gone, the people of Carrizozo will be called upon to elect a mayor and council to guide the destiny of the village for the ensuing year. There is good well-seasoned material in Carrizozo for the people to choose from. Therefore, only men of sound business qualifications, who have interests in the village and who are capable of administering the business of the village, well and economically, should be considered for a seat in the council chamber, as on the sagacity, business ability and energy of the men chosen depend the vital interests of every one living here. Therefore it would be wise and timely for the taxpayers and citizens generally to do their "considering caps," and think it over, leaving politics and popularity on one side and choosing only men for the office whom they personally know to be capable, and who are sufficiently interested to infuse new life into our village, and who have the energy and ability to make Carrizozo a bigger and a better town. There is a bright future for Carrizozo, if the people choose a capable pilot and a good business crew to steer the ship the coming year.

Better See The Assessor

The article below is passed out to the newspapers of the state by the N. M. Taxpayers' Association. It is good enough that we are publishing it, and especially in consideration of the fact that a large number of taxpayers last year brought down the penalty of 25 per cent upon themselves because of tardiness in making their returns to the assessor.

The article is as follows:
 "Less than ten days remain for making a return of your property for assessment. If you have not reported all your property to the county assessor, do so at once. February 29 is the final date. After that date your property if not returned will be assessed at its full value plus 25 per cent. In other words you will have to pay one-fourth more taxes than if you make your own return before the last business day of this month.

"You want good schools, good roads, provisions for health and sanitation, law, order and efficient government. Can it be had without paying for it? Perhaps you want the other fellow to pay for it. Don't be a "piker." Make a full list of your property, real and personal, and insist on a full and fair assessment, and see to it that every other property owner does likewise. The time has come when there should be as much care in this matter as in any other that involves our common and individual welfare. If we are good citizens we will pay our share, bear our part of the burden of governmental expense. The assessment of property is the first and most important requisite toward the end.

"When a complete, equitable and full value assessment has been made, let us further see to it that taxes are properly collected thereon and that every dollar paid brings a dollar's worth of governmental benefit."

WHY not have a home of your own? The problem isn't a big one, but it's a sane one. You can approach this question in a very practical way right now by starting a "Home Fund" in the form of a 4 per cent savings account, making the growth of that fund the paramount issue of your financial problem.

Remember the money you save for this undertaking now will have a greater purchasing power when later your "Home Fund" has reached a size to warrant the next step.

LIVER DIDN'T ACT DIGESTION WAS BAD

Says 65 year Old Kentucky Lady, Who Tells How She Was Relieved After a Few Doses of Black-Draught.

Meadersville, Ky.—Mrs. Cynthia Higginbotham, of this town, says: "At my age, which is 65, the liver does not act so well as when young. A few years ago, my stomach was all out of fix. I was constipated, my liver didn't act. My digestion was bad, and it took so little to upset me. My appetite was gone. I was very weak... I decided I would give Black-Draught a thorough trial so I know it was highly recommended for this condition. I began taking it. I felt better and in a natural way. It gave me seventy years of successful use. I made Theodor's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member of every family, at times, need the help that Black-Draught can give in cleansing the system and relieving the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, lax liver, etc. It cannot keep well unless your stomach, liver and bowels are in good working order. Keep them that way. Try Black-Draught. It acts promptly, and in a natural way. If you have a liver that is not acting, you need Black-Draught."

Will Not be One Day Without PE-RU-NA

This Lady TELLS Her FRIENDS

Mrs. Mary Fricks, 497 Borman St., Belleville, Ill., is just one of the many thousands of ladies throughout the country who, after an agony of years, have at last found health, strength and vigor in PE-RU-NA.

Her own words tell of her suffering and recovery better than we can do it: "I suffered with my stomach, had awful cramps and headaches so I often could not lay on a pillow. Saw your book, tried PE-RU-NA and got good results from the first bottle. To be sure of a cure I took twelve bottles. I have recommended PE-RU-NA to my friends and all are well pleased with results. I will not be one day without PE-RU-NA. Have not had a doctor since I started with PE-RU-NA, which was about fifteen years ago. I am now sixty-three years old, hale, hearty and well. Can do as much work as my daughters. I feel strong and healthy and weigh near two hundred pounds. Before, I weighed as little as one hundred. I hope lots of people use PE-RU-NA and get the results I did." An experience like that of Mrs. Fricks is an inspiration to every sick and suffering woman.

If you have catarrh, whether it be of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or other organs, PE-RU-NA is the remedy. It is not new; it is not an experiment. PE-RU-NA has been tried. PE-RU-NA has been used by thousands who once were sick and are now well. To prevent coughs, colds, grip and influenza and to hasten recovery there is nothing better.

PE-RU-NA will improve the appetite and digestion, purify the blood, soothe the irritated mucous linings, eradicate the waste material and corruption from the system. It will tone up the nerves, give you health, strength, vigor and the joy of living. Do what Mrs. Mary Fricks and thousands more have done—try PE-RU-NA. You will be glad, happy, thankful.

U. S. May Loan You Money on Your Liberty Bonds

WASHINGTON.—A plan by which the government can make $100,000,000 a year, protect the holders of Liberty bonds against the loss incurred in selling to profiteers, and stabilize the price of bonds has been worked out by the United States bureau of efficiency and is suggested in the annual report of Herbert D. Brown, chief of the bureau, which has just been made public.

Owners of Liberty bonds of small denominations have been liquidating them at the rate of from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a day, according to Mr. Brown, selling them in the majority of cases, to money lenders who immediately benefit by such discounts as they can exact and then pass the bonds on to legitimate investors who wish to hold them. War savings certificates also are being redeemed on a large scale.

To protect the original purchaser and correct any impression that a Liberty bond is an unprofitable investment, it is proposed that the government, through the postal savings system, make loans at post offices on bonds at a low rate of interest, with privilege of redemption limited only by the maturity of the bond.

The plan provides that loans be made in two amounts only—$45 on a $50 bond, and $90 on a $100 bond, the limit of the amount which may be loaned to one person being $300. The post office will then accept maturing coupons in lieu of interest, and charge on payment a fee of $1 on a $45 loan and $2 on a $90 loan. The borrower may sell his bond to the government with the privilege of redemption any time before maturity.

His Memory Faulty.
A good working memory is no trick, providing you have a good memory for association, which is really the trick. A Kansas City man planned out an infallible method for remembering his wife's birthday. It comes on the 7th of the month. "Now, I'll remember that," he said, "by associating it with dice—think of dice, then 'Come seven!' Ah, that's it—seven. I can't forget it." The next year passed and his instinct told him his wife's birthday was imminent. "Now, what's that date?" the husband asked himself. "Oh, yes, I was to think of dice. Dice—craps—eleven! That's it—December 11." And that's why his wife's crying spell which began on the 7th didn't end until the 11th.—Kansas City Star.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschee's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

How True!

The mathematics teacher was trying to impress her class with the necessity of putting more time on mathematics. "You must all know arithmetic if you want to be successful," she told them. "All our public men should be good mathematicians. Can anyone tell me why?"
Up went little Max's hand. "So that they can keep their accounts straight," he answered.

Reasoning.

Mother was telling Cyril of some occurrence in the neighborhood in which a man had been cruel to his dog. "He ought to be arrested and fined," Cyril said hotly, when the story was finished. "Mother, don't you think we ought to have him arrested?"

Mother shook her head. "We'll just wait and let God punish him," she proposed.

Cyril thought a little while. Then he came back to his parent. "Mother, why not wait after this when I'm naughty and let God punish me, too?" he asked.

"He stuns a man's mind, he can second the motion all right, and will be as useful as anybody else to count on when the cholera breaks out. He might possibly do well managing a small farm. In short, he has never really accomplished anything except to work me so deeply that he is able to keep better dressed than I can afford to, and by that means maintain a higher standing in the community than I enjoy. Just how he manages it I do not exactly understand, but somehow he keeps right on putting it over me. I cannot kill him, and he will not leave. When he broke into the family I thought I was getting a son-in-law, but now it looks painfully like my son-in-law has got me."—Kansas City Star.

Learning About Nitrogen.

Recent experiments with the "alpha" ray have led to the discovery, says the English Mechanic and World of Science, that nitrogen, which for a century and a half has been regarded as an element, may not be an element at all, but a compound of hydrogen and helium. It is an interesting coincidence that Doctor Dalton, according to the now accepted account, was led to his theory of the atomic structure of matter by a study of the physical properties of the atmosphere. Sir Ernest Rutherford, by experiments on the same gases, now sees in such of Dalton's atoms of nitrogen an atomic system in which two distinct elements play a part, and nitrogen itself apparently is to disappear as an element. —Youth's Companion.

Conversation.

This business of conversation is a very serious matter. There are men that it weakens one to talk with an hour more than a day's fasting would do. Mark this that I am going to say, for it is as good as a working professional man's advice, and costs you nothing: It is better to lose a pint of blood from your veins than to have a nerve tapped. Nobody measures your nervous force as it runs away, nor bandages your brain and marrow after the operation.

Compulsory Military Training in the U. S. Senate

LEGISLATION which would amount to a virtual reorganization of the army with protection from outside attack as a primary purpose and with compulsory military training for boys from eighteen to twenty-one years of age as a leading feature has been agreed upon tentatively by the senate military subcommittee considering a permanent military policy for the nation.

While various minor details of the plan remain to be worked out, the committee's present agreement, Senator Wadsworth said, calls for a permanent standing peace army of 250,000.

One big army composed of the regular army as now organized and a reserve or citizens' army is provided in the tentative legislation. Of the latter army the National Guard would be a part, although the details of the organization of that service remain to be worked out.

Youths within the prescribed age limits would be required to take four months' military training with provision made for either the regular army or the National Guard of the various states being used in furnishing this training.

The youths, however, would be given an opportunity to elect either taking this training in a lump or of joining the National Guard for a fixed period, during which they would receive the same amount of training as prescribed for the four-month period.

Upon completion of this training, the recruits would be placed in a reserve army for a period of five years, but under no conditions, Senator Wadsworth said, could the reservists be called upon to perform military service except in case of declaration of war.

"While the bill will provide for compulsory military training," Senator Wadsworth said, "there will be no provision made for compulsory military service."

Virtue Its Own Reward, Even in the Wilderness

NATIONAL park and national forest rangers are usually picked men. It's a right they should be. They represent the federal government. Recently a party of tourists was motoring along a forest road in a lonely region not far from the Grand Canyon in Arizona.

The big car was passing a tiny brown cabin, trimmed neatly in white with a green roof, set in a clump of juniper and pine near the road, when one of the party pointed to the cabin and explained to the man at his side: "One of our ranger stations."

"Fine!" the man returned. "Suppose we stretch our legs a bit and go over and look around."

On his order the car stopped and the party, consisting of four men and several women, passed through the two tall posts at the gateway, supporting the neatly painted sign bearing the name of a national forest and of this particular ranger station.

Late that day, a tired man threw himself wearily from his horse at the corral gate. His horse rubbed down and turned out to pasture, the ranger reached the back door of his cabin, entered and started his preparations for supper.

There was no indication of the unexpected visit his cabin had been given in his absence. But as he turned to his kitchen table his eye caught sight of two white bits of cardboard lying there.

The first had written across it: "I am sorry I missed you. I congratulate you on the immaculate condition of your station." Embossed on the card was the name "David F. Houston," and in the corner "The Secretary of Agriculture."

The second card had written on it: "I, too, congratulate you on the fine appearance of your cabin." Printed on the card was "Dr. Hans Sulzer," and in the corner was "Ambassador from Switzerland."

Michigan Establishes Victory Highway Memorial

MICHIGAN has jumped ahead of the other states in providing a memorial for its sons who served in the European war. The Michigan idea is a Victory highway, a paved road running across the state in a north-easterly direction.

The Michigan State Good Roads association started to work out the plan several months ago, but nothing much was said about it until it was assured that there would be no hitch in carrying it out. The contracts are now being let.

In Michigan the road is to run from New Buffalo, near the Indiana line to Port Huron. It will be 848 miles in length and will traverse 12 counties. It will pass through St. Joe, Kalamazoo, Camp Cass, Battle Creek, Charlotte, Lansing, Owosso, Flint, and La. Pave, where will be a northern branch, starting from Owosso, through Saginaw to Bay City, where the Dixie highway can be picked up.

The various counties along the proposed route have pledged their road funds to build the highway. The counties also plan to erect memorial buildings and monuments, also to be erected. The names of the men who served in the European war will be inscribed on a special pavilion for them.

How Competition Helps You

The competition that exists among the hundreds of meat distributors, large and small, means

- Rivalry in Prices
- Rivalry in Service
- Rivalry in Economy
- Rivalry in Quality

Swift & Company sells meat at the lowest possible price, consistent with quality and service. Our profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound on all products is evidence of keen competition.

Swift & Company must provide the best service to your dealer or he will buy from our competitors. This means a supply of fine fresh meat always on hand for you at your dealer's.

Swift & Company must keep down manufacturing and selling costs, and use all by-products to avoid waste, or else lose money meeting the prices of competitors who do.

Swift & Company must make its products of the highest quality, or see you turn to others. This means better meat for you and a greater variety of appetizing, wholesome food.

We are as glad for this competition as you should be. It helps to keep us on our mettle.

R. Brockman and Wallace Brockway came over Saturday from Fort Stanton and returned Monday morning.

George Wieshar, the merchant, at Jicarilla, stopped off at Carrizozo Monday, on his way to El Paso on a business deal.

F. C. Grey, E. G. Raffety, Ed Howser and many others, motored up from Oscura Sunday afternoon to take in the motion pictures.

S. F. Fambrough was in from his cattle ranch yesterday. Range conditions, he stated, were better than ever he remembers, and live stock in finer shape.

J. M. Rice, of Parsons, came up from El Paso Monday evening, where he had been on a business visit, and left the following morning for his mountain home.

John H. Phillips and son Pete were here Monday from their ranches near Alto. They formerly ranched on this side of the range but sold out here and began ranching anew in Alto.

Miss Minnie Hall, of White Mountain, passed through Carrizozo Monday, enroute for Lexington, North Carolina, where she will visit for several weeks. Miss Hall has been postmaster at White Mountain for several years.

Pop Martin, formerly clerk for agriculturalist Webber at Fort Stanton, spent several days in Carrizozo this week. Mr. Martin is now dealing in oil stock and leases, and is said to be getting rich at the game.

Mrs. Leggett (nee Whittingham) of Tucumcari, stopped off here Wednesday on her way to Roswell to visit her father who is reported to be quite sick. Mrs. Leggett will be remembered by many as the cashier at the R. R. Eating House, previous to her marriage last summer.

Allene Haley, daughter of the editor of this paper, who is being treated by an oculist in El Paso for an eye affection, came up last week for a few days visit, and returned Monday. The oculist expects that the eye will perfect in a few weeks more. She was accompanied by her papa on her return.

Miss Betty Holmes will leave for home the first of the week. Miss Betty is one of the better students of the R.R. Eating House, and she has liked for some George E. Sligh, an old-time citizen of Lincoln county, was here the first of the week from Cutter, Sierra county. Since leaving here a number of years ago Mr. Sligh has lived in Arizona, but recently went to Cutter where he is interested in oil leases. He was here to purchase a rig with which to begin drilling operations.

Albert Ziegler returned this week from the New York markets where he has been for almost a month. He states he found the markets glutted with buyers from all parts of the country, and merchandise scarcer than ever before. However, he was successful in purchasing what he wanted, and at more reasonable figures than he expected—especially in ready-to-wear garments. The goods will begin arriving the first of the week, and he believes they will be eye-openers for his customers.

Next Saturday morning a basketball team from the local schools will journey to Capitan to enter the lists with a school team in the mountain town. A number of interested boosters will leave the same morning to witness the contest and "root" for the Carrizozo team. Of course we expect to see Carrizozo bring home the bacon, but the mountaineers believe victory will perch on the Capitan banner. The drive over the hill is a beautiful one, and, apart from the game, will repay those who make it.

Jicarilla parties who were in Carrizozo this week report very little doing in that mining camp, apart from a few prospectors developing claims. However they expect business will pick up soon again. The tramway, or narrow gage road, to the iron mines has been completed, and the Beeth Brothers intend to ship a standard carload of ore a day to the smelter. The ore is said to run from 56 to 66 per cent iron. As development continues they hope to increase their shipments. Only one of the mines is being worked at present.

Passed Away

Mrs. O. P. Humphrey, who had been a resident of Lincoln for more than thirty years, passed away Monday morning at the age of 76 years. The deceased suffered from cancer for several years, which, combined with her advanced years, was the cause of death. The family settled on Little Creek this county in '88, and moved to Carrizozo in 1910, where they lived until three years ago, when they moved to Tularosa. The deceased is survived by her husband, and one son, Perry, besides some relatives in Arizona. Interment was in the local cemetery Tuesday, and the funeral was attended by many who knew her in her early days in this county.

Roswell Woman Dies in El Paso

Mrs. Minnie Ballard, wife of Chas. Ballard, formerly of Roswell and widely known in the southwest, died in El Paso hospital last Friday night. The funeral was held in El Paso Monday afternoon and was attended by a large number of Roswell friends of the family, including Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Ballard, Mr. J. C. Peck, and many more whose names we failed to learn, who passed through Carrizozo Tuesday morning, returning to Roswell. The Ballards are numbered among the early settlers in Chaves county.

Well, the special session is over—we feel like something ought to be done about it. What it was called for, and what it was for, is a question that is being asked by many.

the home of Mrs. Stimmel this week Tuesday. There was a good attendance. After the business session and program, the hostess served light refreshments. The afternoon was a very enjoyable one. A report made by the treasurer, Mrs. Lamm, showed that the sum of $15.00 was taken in at the Colours' Tea, Saturday night. Thanks are due to the Misses Hilary Cooper and Clarie McQuillen who were appropriately attired in colonial costumes and met guests at the door.
