OLD AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO.

VOLUME 21

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1920

NUMBER 33

The Carrizozo-Socorro Highway WILL CLOSE A GAP FROM CARRIZOZO TO CANTON

It is one that has been badly needed for years or as long as the two counties have been organized. There has been no direct connection between these two sections. With this road completed we will have a direct highway between the two points. At Carrizozo the route will connect with the route to Roswell, giving the traveling public a direct route to the southeast as well as a most feasible route north to Amarilla and other Texas points. Heretofore, tourists coming into the state from Texas and other southern points to Roswell have been compelled to go south or a long distance north to make good road connections west. By coming to Carrizozo, with this route complete, they will have a direct route into Socorro, where they will connect with the Ocean to Ocean Highway, the heaviest and most direct route to the Pacific and California points.

The people of Lincoln county realize what the road will do for their section and are anxious for its completion. The county commissioners have met the situation in a business like manner and pledged themselves to constructing and maintaining that part of the route and work should start at once in this county.

Inside of thirty to sixty days we will see hundreds of southern state cars passing through Socorro and Magdalena that have been going over less attractive highways.

And besides opening this important traffic that has been hunting a good route east and west through the southern part of the state, we will have a road that will be of inestimable benefit to every portion of the state.—The Magdalena News.

Hail Storm in August

A hail storm visited the Mesa district last week, and did considerable damage to growing crops. The damage, however, was individual. M. T. Keller was hit hard, while his nearest neighbors were not touched. The farmers in that district will have record-breaking crops just the same, and if the market price remains steady they will be well ahead.

Fateful Times

(From Gen. Cox's Speech)

These are fateful times. Organized government has a definite duty all over the world. The house of civilization is to be put in order. The supreme issue of the century is before us and the nation that halts and delays is playing with fire. The finest impulses of humanity, rising above national lines, moose seek to make another horrible war impossible. Under the old order of international anarchy war came overnight, and the world was on fire before we knew it. It sickens our senses to think of another. We saw one conflict, into which modern science brought new forms of destruction in great guns, submarines, airships, and poison gases. It is no secret that our chemists had perfected, when the contest came to a precipitate close, gases so deadly that whole cities could be wiped out, armies destroyed, and the crews of battleships smothered. The public prints are filled with the opinions of military men that in the future wars the methods, more effective than gases or bombs, will be the employment of the germs of diseases, carrying pestilence and destruction. Any nation prepared under these conditions, as Germany was equipped in 1914, could conquer the world in a year.

It is planned now to make this impossible. A very important work, under its control just completed, was participated in by the Hon. Elihu Root, secretary of state under the Roosevelt administration. At a meeting of the council of the league of nations, February 11, an organizing committee of 12 of the most eminent jurists in the world was selected. The duty of this group was to devise a plan for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice, as a branch of the league. This assignment has been concluded by unanimous action. This augurs well for the world progress. The question whether war shall not join in this practical and humane movement, President Wilson, as our representative at the peace table, entered the league in our name, in so far as the executive authority permitted. Senator Harding as the republican candidate for the presidency, proposes in plain words that we remain out of it. As the democratic candidate, I favor staying in. Let us analyze Senator Harding's plan of making a German-American peace, and then calling for a "new relationship among nations," assuming for the purpose of argument only, that the perfidious hand that dealt with Germany would possess the power of influence to draw 29 millions away from a plan already at work, and induce them to retrace every step, and make a new beginning. That would entail our appointing another commission to negotiate with those selected by the other powers. With the Versailles instrument discarded, the whole subject of partitions and divisions of territory on new lines would be reopened. The difficulties in this regard, as any fair mind appreciates would be greater than they were at the peace session, and we must not attempt to convince ourselves that they did not try the genius, patience, and diplomacy of statesmen at that time. History will say that great as was the allied triumph in war, no less a victory was achieved at the peace table. The republican proposal means dishonor, world confusion and delay. It would keep us in permanent company with Germany, Russia, Turkey and Mexico. It would entail, in the ultimate, more real injury than the war itself. The democratic position on the question, as expressed in the platform is:

"We advocate immediate ratification of the treaty without reservations which would impair its essential integrity, but do not oppose the acceptance of any reservation making clearer or more specific the obligations of the United States to the league associates."

Geo. A. Titworth, of Capitan, who is being treated for a derangement of the stomach in an El Paso hospital, is reported to be getting along fine, and it is expected he will be able to return to Capitan within a few weeks, cured of the trouble.

Democratic County Convention

The Democrats of Lincoln county, pursuant to call, will convene in the court house, tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. This convention is entitled to more consideration than has generally been given it. The delegates that are to be chosen by this convention are to represent Lincoln county in the State Democratic Convention at Las Vegas, and will take part in the naming of a state ticket, from governor down. These delegates will also sit in various district conventions for the nomination of candidates for the upper and lower houses of the legislature, from districts of which Lincoln county forms a part, and also a candidate for district attorney. It is needless to say that, with such responsibilities facing the convention, the utmost care should be exercised in the selection of delegates.

Drop in Temperature

A remarkable drop in temperature occurred Wednesday night and the temperature this morning is still far below normal. A big snow is reported in the mountains of Colorado and that disseminated a little iciness over all this region. It has been one of the coolest periods ever experienced in this section for August.

Ball Game at Alamogordo

The Carrizozo ball team will go to Alamogordo Sunday for a return game. It has not been definitely decided how the team and those who accompany it will go, whether by train or auto, but many are figuring on going to enjoy the contest between these two well-matched teams. The Carrizozo team has been successful in past encounters with the Alamogordo team, and hopes to lengthen its lead when it meets its opponents on their own grounds.

Mining Company Formed

The most recent mining incorporation in Lincoln county is the Red Cross Mining Company, and the incorporators are Sabino Vidauri, J. F. Bonham and Geo. C. Hopkins. The property on which this corporation is based is located in Coyote canyon, and many years ago was designated as the "Leadville" district. Considerable work was done in that district in the early mining operations of Lincoln county, but it was then so far removed from a railroad that further development was deemed unprofitable.

The ore contains silver, lead and zinc and recent tests have given a value of $12.00 to $15.00 per ton. A large body of ore is shown there, and the indications are that it may become a very profitable shovel proposition. We hope to see early development of this property and that an other Lincoln county mine will be added to the producing class.

Testimonials for Deceased Soldiers

To the nearest relatives of the dead soldiers, testimonials from the State of New Mexico will be presented by the Local Post of the American Legion, Sunday evening, August 22, at the Lutz Hall. All ex-soldiers and sailors are urged to be present, and if possible come in uniform. Rev. Johnson of the Episcopal church will deliver the address, and all other church demonstrations will be asked to suspend service that night and attend the meeting. Everyone is invited to attend and show their respect for the soldiers who died in the service in the late war. Following are the testimonials in the hands of the Legion officers:

Pedro Analla, Benjamin I. Berry, Charles W. Beaver, Leland S. Bond, Jim Dearman, William R. Greer, Robert J. Hagee, Roy Hamilton, Harvey Hughes, William E. Knowles, Luis Moysa, Robert C. Morgan, Candido Montoya, Susano Sanchez, Gladney White.

An effort will be made to secure a testimonial for Geo. Chavez whose name was overlooked by the Council of Defense.

Barbecue at Texas Park

In order to give as wide publicity as possible to an event to be given at Texas Park the 18th inst., we have been requested to publish the following from the Capitan Mountaineer, which we take pleasure in doing:

"Plans have been formulated to hold a large barbecue and picnic at Texas Park, on the old Blanchard Ranch, at the north side of the Tison mountain on August 18th. Arrangements have been made by the committee for the regular events usually experienced at the old fashion picnic. A barbecue, horse races, foot races, bronco busting, a dance and many other attractive features have been arranged. It is expected that a large attendance of Lincoln county people will be there for the day, and every one is invited. The horse racing has been given special attention, and it is expected the running events are to be of a very high class. Even plans to carry the races over to the second day, or the 19th, are prepared in case some of the races are asked to be re-run."

Texas Park lies in a beautiful valley, between the Carrizo, Patos and Tison Mountains, and is sometimes called Paradise Valley on account of its productivity. The Carrizo mountain intervenes between it and the town of Carrizozo, and it is about ten miles northwest of Capitan.

For Assessor

We are authorized to announce the candidacy of Lon Jenkins, of Corona, for the Democratic nomination for assessor of Lincoln county. Mr. Jenkins has lived in Lincoln county for more than a quarter of a century, and, while at all times taking an active and prominent part in politics, has never before asked for a nomination.

Many of our people have known Mr. Jenkins during his long residence in the county and recognize his qualifications and have a high regard for him as a man. He is well fitted for this important office by reason of his close knowledge of county affairs, acquaintance with all sections and a disposition to impartially perform the duties of the office for which he is an aspirant.

What will you be when you are 65?

You will be ahead or behind the game. That is certain. But it all depends on what you do now.

Of the average 100 people just 1 is wealthy at 65; only 3 are well-to-do; merely 6 are living on their incomes; 54 are living on their friends and charity; 36 die before reaching their 65th birthday. It is easy to tell who had a bank account.

The odds are stacked against you—87 to 1—if you don't save a little every pay day.

PRAISES SHARK AS FOOD FISH

Bureau of Fisheries Says It Has Been Neglected Because Worth Is Little Known.

TELS HOW TO PREPARE IT

If It Has a Strong Odor, That Can Be Easily Removed—Safarling Fish Has Known of Its Value As Food.

Washington.—With the more frequent appearance of new sea foods in our markets, the truth of the old saying, "There are as good fish in the sea as have ever been caught," is acquiring a new application. This is especially true of a large family of fishes representatives of which occur on all shores of the sea and in all climates—the sharks, strong, active, gracefully shaped fishes, varying in length from a few inches to fifty feet or more, which offer a wholesome, palatable and nutritious food, comparing favorably in dietary qualities with many of the highly priced sea foods. Many people, indeed, have recognized their value and have utilized them extensively for food. In the countries bordering on the Mediterranean and in Great Britain, Norway and Sweden they are well known as valuable and nutritious foods. At Folkestone, England, the flesh of one of the small sharks, salted and dried, is marketed as "Folkestone beef." Until recently their use as a food in the United States has been limited principally to safarling people in scattered localities and to the fish markets of some of our larger cities, but with late interest aroused in new sea foods they are finding a place in our largest fish-distributing centers and have appeared on the menus of some of the leading hotels in several cities.

Of Wide Distribution. As already intimated, sharks are of wide distribution, occurring in all seas from the equator to polar waters, but in greatest abundance in the tropics. Those, however, taken in the cooler waters of the temperate zones are among the most desirable species for food, and it is from these that the principal supply for the markets of this country is obtained. Like the cod, squeteague, bluefish and other well-known fishes, sharks feed mainly on fishes, crabs, mollusks and other small forms living in the sea, their method of foraging and capture in many cases being unusual and interesting. The thrasher shark uses its whip-like tail, which is as long as its body, to splash the water as it swims round and round a school of fish in ever narrowing circles, crowding the fish closer and closer together until the moment of attack. The grayfish, sand sharks and some other species work in schools and do not hesitate to attack the fish taken in the fishermen's nets, the larger forms tearing the nets and liberating the catch. The economic uses to which these fishes may be put are somewhat varied. At one time large quantities of the hides, cleaned but not tanned, were used for polishing wood, ivory, metal and the like. With improvements in methods of preparation of sandpaper and emery, these have largely replaced animal hides. Make Excellent Leather. Within the last year the Bureau of Fisheries has interested American tanners to experiment in the production of leathers from these hides with excellent results, and there now exists a demand for large quantities of raw materials. In tensile strength leathers tested compare favorably with those made from mammal hides, and the market for these products appears assured. In addition, the livers are rich in a marketable oil, which is of value in dressing leather, soapmaking, paints and for medicinal purposes. The yield varies from less than a pint in some of the smaller sharks to about 125 gallons in some of the larger sizes. The meat of sharks is white, slightly gelatinous, resembling halibut, but somewhat less firm, and compares favorably in food value with other staple food fishes and meats. Russell J. Coles, who has eaten the flesh of many of our sharks, states that the flesh is fleshly killed examples of some species has a peculiar odor which can readily be removed by salting. After several hours the meat should be freshened, then parboiled and cooked as any other fish. The flesh of the young sharks and such small forms as the grayfish is particularly good fresh, but it is a preserved product that the meat of sharks especially commends itself. Salted and smoked or kippered it is excellent. It may also be salted and dried, flaked or shredded. In some parts of the meat the layers of connective tissue are quite close together. These parts may conveniently be run through a meat chopper and the meat used for fish balls, chowders and the like. Persons in position to smoke the fish as needed will find the mild-cured, hot-smoked product particularly appetizing.

DELAYS THE PEACE PLANS

Red Cross Official Claps Envoys Into Quarantine.

Diplomats Entering Kathonia Stripped and Scrubbed and Their Clothes Disinfected. Reval, Kathonia.—When the soviet commission to negotiate peace with Kathonia recently crossed the lines into the city of Narva on its way to Reval, its members were promptly clapped into quarantine by the American Red Cross typhus fighters, and, in spite of desperate protestations and citations of diplomatic privilege, were forcibly detained for thorough disinfection before being permitted to proceed. The Red Cross quarantine regulations at Narva prescribed that no person could leave the town without disinfection and a clean bill of health. No exceptions have been allowed to this rule since the Red Cross undertook the typhus fight here. The soviet emissaries were stopped at the railway station and asked for their Red Cross permits to travel. In answer they showed Kathonian diplomatic safe-conducts and demanded that they be passed immediately. A Red Cross officer was called. He waved away the safe-conducts without ceremony and ordered the diplomats to report at once for disinfection or prepare to remain in Narva until the lifting of the quarantine. Hot words on the part of the Russians followed, but the Red Cross official was adamant. Finally, breathing threats and protests, the emissaries marched with their luggage from the station to the disinfecting post. Lusty hands, little heedful of the diplomatic sacredness of their persons, stripped them of their clothes, scrubbed them ruthlessly, and rolled them in blankets to await the disinfection of their garments and luggage. Not until every scrap of their belongings, even to diplomatic documents, was thoroughly disinfected, were the peace envoys allowed to depart, every whisker standing on end with suppressed rage.

Street Boss Quits Job to Be Better Paid Laborer

Because laborers he employed in street work are making more than the $100 a month paid him for directing the work, John Achley has presented his resignation as street commissioner to the town council of Hackensack, N. J. In an emergency the council increased the pay for unskilled labor, but overlooked an increase in pay for the man who had to supervise the work. Achley decided it would be more profitable to quit and seek a job by the day in his own department.

Kentucky Shoot a Suicide

George town, Ky.—Cavanaugh Hughes had no idea of butchering a 100-pound sheep, but the pig picked up a butcher knife in its mouth and ran. Hughes pursued, and when the sheep dropped the knife the weapon hit the ground butt end first and the blade entered the pig's throat at the point where legs are stuck for butchering. Hughes slashed the job.

NEW HERD OF BUFFALO

Eaten on Increase Instead of Becoming Extinct.

Yellowstone National Park Authority Say There Are More Than 100 Wild Buffalo in Park. Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Convincing evidence that the wild buffalo of Yellowstone National Park, the last surviving remnant of the great herds which once roamed the western plains, are on the increase, instead of dying out, as was feared, has been obtained in the discovery of a new group in the southern portion of the park. About fifteen animals were observed, probably a part of the old herd, which is believed to have been introduced

PROPERTY WAVE IN JAMAICA

Planters Become Wealthy as Sugar Brings $600 a Ton and Potatoes Are High. Kingston, Jamaica.—There has never been so much money in Jamaica as now. The sugar and banana planters are fast becoming wealthy, and if the present wave of prosperity continues for a few more years the island will have at least a dozen millionaires. Before the war sugar brought only $200 per ton; today it is bringing $600 per ton in the English market. The island's inhabitants are experiencing great difficulty in getting adequate supplies, and it is only through the action of the local government that the price of the most necessities has been kept at a reasonable level.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

BOLSHEVIST SEEDS OF POISON

Avowed Object of the Leaders of the Movement is to Stir Up Hatred of Law and Order Every Where.

Article XXVIII.

By FRANK CONNERFORD. "The program of the communist party (bolsheviks) is the program not only of the liberation of the proletariat of one country. It is the program of the liberation of the proletariat of all countries; it is the program of international revolution. The overthrow of imperialist governments by means of armed revolt is the road to the international dictatorship of the working class." In these words, Bucharin, avowed and recognized bolshevik propagandist, set forth the object of the communists at Moscow in 1918.

Lenine, in the same year, in Petrograd, declared "that the chief task which we set ourselves at the very beginning of the war was to turn the imperialistic war into a civil war." His aim was to force upon Russia Communism, and to summon the discontented of the world to rise in revolution against their governments. All existing governments were vile, Lenine said, and they must be overthrown. Political action, parliamentary methods, peaceful voting, were worse than useless. They were inventions of the devil, Capitalism. Force must be used; the workers must arm themselves and fight; the world could not come to the light of freedom and justice except through blood. Lenine was for the great "red baptisms." It alone could cleanse the world and make it a decent place in which to live. He wrote the aim and object of bolshevism into the soviet constitution when he defined the "victory of socialism in all lands." He blazoned the war cry on the coat of arms of the bolshevik government in these words: "Workers of the World, Unite."

The bolshevik government has been insistent, and persistent in its propaganda, collecting and poisoning the masses for discontent in other lands. It has been a propaganda of hate. It has scattered, broadcast, poison seeds in the soil of unrest. It has played to the lowest and worst in men. It has written and spoken of the "Great War" as the enterprise of capital. It has charged the ill-effects of the war and charged them not to the war, but to Capitalism. It has pointed to the poverty and the disorganization of the world, directly caused by the war, and attributed all of these unhappy results of a four year struggle with autocracy, not to the war but to the system of so-called "Bourgeois Government." It has multiplied, magnified and intensified unrest. It hopes to bring about a great world-convulsion which will destroy all government except the government of the proletariat, the soviet plan. Its propaganda has caused many of the people of the world to think that they are still fighting the regimes of the caesars, and that reactionary governments everywhere are conspiring to bring about their downfall and re-establish the reign and rule of despots in Russia. It does not make conspicuous the fact that the czar is dead and that his regime has passed forever.

Lenine Without Tolerant. Lenine decries anyone and every one who does not accept his gospel of world revolution. He is particularly bitter towards capitalists who are opposed to his program. Writing of "the military program of the proletariat revolution" he concludes his article in the November "Class Struggle" for 1918: "Whoever, in view of this last war, is not willing to carry out this demand, let him be good enough to refrain from uttering large words about the international revolutionary democracy, about the social revolution and about the war against war." Of those who have dared to denounce militarism and demand disarmament Lenine has written: "A paper will be published which will be devoted to the 'Revolution of the Workers and Militaries.' Merely demand disarmament? Never shall the workers of an oppressed and revolutionary class resign themselves to be susceptible a role. On the contrary, they will say to their comrade: 'You will soon be grown up. You will have a gun. Take it and learn how to use it—act in order to fight your brothers, as in the practice in this war of plunder, but in order to fight the bourgeoisie of your own country.' In order to put down the bourgeoisie, let us not be misled by 'hard workers' but by overthrowing and disarming the bourgeoisie."

This "Manifesto" has been sent all over the world. It makes no bones about the plan of the bolsheviks to subject the world to disorder. On the contrary, it boasts that this is its mission. Under the caption "The Way to Victory" the manifesto declares: "The revolutionary era compels the proletariat to make use of the means of battle which will concentrate its entire energies, namely, mass action, with its logical resultant, direct conflict with the governmental machinery in open combat. All other methods, such as revolutionary use of bourgeois parliamentarism, will be of only secondary significance."

The "manifesto" further proclaims the "First International" foresaw the future development and pointed the way; the "Second International" gathered together and organized the proletariat; the "Third International" is the international of open mass action of the revolution, the international of deeds. The work of the "Third International" is mapped out in the "Manifesto" in these words: "The task of the international communist party is now to overthrow this order (present governments) and to erect in its place the structure of the socialist world order. We urge the working men and women of all countries to unite under the communist banner, the emblem under which the first great victories have already been won."

"Proletarians of all lands! In the war against imperialistic barbarity, against monarchy, against the privileged classes, against the bourgeois state and bourgeois property, against all forms and varieties of social and national oppression—UNITE! All Urged to Unite.

"Under the standard of the Workingmen's Councils, under the banner of the Third International, in the revolutionary struggle for power and the dictatorship of the proletariat, proletarians of all countries, UNITE!" I have quoted these excerpts from an edition of the "Manifesto" printed in Chicago. The copy in my possession contains the name and address of the printing company. There is an introduction to this document. It is unsigned. A few extracts from this introduction are important. Commenting on the "Manifesto," the introduction says: "It will soon become the basis of international working class action, and will become the lightning that will rend the clouds and fogs that now envelop the workers of the world."

"Comment on this manifesto would be useless, superfluous. Its magnificent language speaks the message a suffering world is eagerly waiting to hear. "It will assist the socialist movement everywhere into the path of uncompromising revolutionary action that alone can usher in the triumph of International Socialism."

If the publication of this manifesto and the introductory comment to it is not treason, then Benedict Arnold was a patriot. It is a conspiracy against the peace, health and happiness, as well as the lives and property, the liberty and security, of every man, woman and child in the United States. It is a call to lawlessness, organized crime. It might be well for the people to give less time and thought to partisan political wrangling and set themselves to silencing sedition. It should be an easy matter to discover the author of this un-American, inhuman and criminal foreword to the "Manifesto." The publishers and distributors should be brought to the bar and made answer. Let us kill this menace by destroying the need. If we do, we will save ourselves much trouble later. By such a course we will ally unrest.

Lenine has repeatedly said and written that the bolshevik government cannot last in Russia alongside of the present governments of the world. In other words, bolshevism cannot live in a world of democracy. The greater truth is that democracy cannot live in the same world with bolshevism. Bolshevism in theory is based on the ideal of socialism, communism; in methods of the bolshevism of Lenine is gross violence, supreme autocracy. (Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union)

Ellen Richards, Chemist. Intuition is the highlight put in woman's forehead uniquely for her when woman lost common sense in Eden. Just a few females have been able to clutch at the skirts of common sense, and to retain its hard pan usefulness. These have plunged into hard pan studies, and in the crucible have evolved some good things for the world. Among the number stands Ellen E. S. Richards, chemist, born in 1842, died in 1911, a skilled instructor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Not only was Ellen Richards a chemist, but she was a good food expert. Her books and papers are valuable. Among her titles are "The Chemistry of Cooking," "Concentration by Sanitation," "The Cost of Cleanliness" and "House Economics." All honor to you, Ellen Richards, who pursued the hard paths of practical experiment unaided by the jugglery of romance.

Honey Yields Higher. The average yield of honey in 1918 was 10 pounds to a colony of bees, compared with 8 pounds in 1917. This is due to the fact that the bees were kept in better condition and the weather was more favorable.

DO ALL MY HOUSEWORK

Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I could not do housework. Mrs. A. K. W. says.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered with displacement and irregularities and I did not know what to do. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and use the Sarsaparilla Wash so I took her advice and used these remedies and cured myself. I feel fine and do all my housework which I could not do before, as I could hardly stand up and I have three healthy children. You can see this letter if you wish, for your remedy is certainly wonderful for sick, run down women."—Mrs. A. K. W., 287 W. Oakdale Ave., Chicago, Ill.

For forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, depression, and inflammation, weakness, displacement, irregularities and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life. Women who suffer are invited to write for free and helpful advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

More Than She Bargained For. She had been taught to pray for the things she desired. It was very dry and hot, and everybody was looking anxiously for rain. Suddenly it occurred to the little miss that she might pray for rain, and she acted on her impulse at once. In a few minutes there came a terrific thunderstorm. Streets were flooded, trees were blown down, and other damage was done. After the shower the child's mother found her standing at the window looking out with a rueful face upon the debris, and heard her say in an awestruck voice: "Oh, Lord, what have I done?"

Imports of food products were valued at 2,063,822,000 francs; industrial materials, 3,801,384,000 francs; manufactures, 1,001,714,000 francs. ## Secretary Payne Eager to Develop Alaska

WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Interior John Barton Payne has made the development of Alaskan resources one of the chief purposes of his administration and is now making a trip to the peninsula. Accompanying him is Dr. Alfred H. Brooks of the geological survey, who was chairman of an interdepartmental Alaskan advisory committee appointed by Secretary Payne in April, which recently made a report recommending various steps for the bettering of conditions in Alaska, with a view to the development of large natural resources.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels joined Secretary Payne and Dr. Brooks at Seattle. Secretary Daniels is interested in the question of the development of coal resources of Alaska as a means of furnishing a supply for the navy.

Other members of the Alaskan advisory committee serving with Dr. Brooks were H. Y. Salat of the shipping board; Otto Praeger, second assistant postmaster general, and E. A. Sherman of the department of agriculture. The recommendations of the committee include the following:

Lowering of ocean freight and passenger rates and improvement of transportation and mail service through economies introduced by the combination of two existing steamship lines into one.

Concentration and co-ordination of federal control of Alaskan lands and resources by obtaining legislative authority for an Alaskan development board and, pending this, by the appointment of an interdepartmental Alaskan committee.

Co-ordination of federal road construction, and the development of a plan for a comprehensive system of roads and trails to serve the entire territory; also the requesting of an appropriation of at least $1,000,000 for the inauguration of this system.

Investigation of the commercial feasibility of smelting Alaskan copper ores within the territory.

The immediate development of an Alaskan pulp wood industry and additional surveys of timber and water power, looking to the largest possible development of this industry.

To Sort Out Government Departments

THE joint committee proposed for the purpose of forwarding the reorganization of the administrative branch of the government is to have considerable leeway in its work. The joint resolution is in substance as follows:

"Resolved, etc., That a joint committee is created, to be known as the joint committee on reorganization, which shall consist of three members of the senate to be appointed by the president thereof and three members of the house of representatives to be appointed by the speaker thereof.

"That it shall be the duty of the joint committee on reorganization to make a survey of the administrative services of the government for the purpose of securing all pertinent facts concerning their powers and duties, their distribution among the several executive departments, and their overlapping and duplication of authority; also to determine what redistribution of activities should be made among the several services, with a view to the proper correlation of the same, and what departmental regrouping of services should be made, so that each executive department shall exercise only services having close working relation with each other and ministering directly to the primary purpose for which the same are maintained and operated, to the end that there shall be achieved the largest possible measure of efficiency and economy in the conduct of government business.

"That the committee shall from time to time report to both the senate and the house of representatives the results of its inquiries, together with its recommendations, and shall prepare and submit bills or resolutions having for their purpose the co-ordination of government functions and their most efficient and economical conduct, and the final report of said committee shall be submitted not later than the second Monday in December, 1932."

The officers and employees of all administrative services of the government are required to furnish to the committee such information regarding powers, duties, activities, organization and methods of business as the committee may from time to time require.

Farmers Resent Being Classed as Boobs

MANY a member of congress was emphatic if not eloquent over the farmer, his life, his crops and his alleged right to organize for his own protection and benefit. Representative Layton of Delaware, for example, had this to say about the farmer fixing the price of his crops:

"Hitherto, whatever the farmer grew some other power fixed the price of his crops. The commission merchant robbed him and the retailer profited selfishly from him. On the other hand, when he went to market he buy himself the things he needed the merchant fixed the price of the things the farmer bought and the manufacturer that of his plows, his harrows, his mowers, and his reapers, and every implement that he employed on his farm. And so with his fertilizer. Everything he bought he had to pay a price fixed in advance by some one else.

"Everything he sold of his own production some one else fixed the price which the farmer was compelled to take, the price fixed by another than himself.

"The time has gone by when the farmer will be content with a state of affairs in which the value of the products of his labor shall be determined by other people, while he himself takes the price as fixed by others. He is no longer content to be put in the class of boobs, to be looked down upon as of the mental class of our national life, a man fit only for raising the foodstuff and the material for clothing.

"And I venture to predict, Mr. Speaker, that if the time ever comes in our national life when the farmer is regarded as a lower order of man, if he is looked upon as worthy merely of a contemptuous consideration, and carelessly esteemed as a factor in our national life and stability, that time will mark the hour when this nation begins its downward course to extinction."

One of Reasons Why H. C. L. Waxes Fat

THERE seems to be no question that one of the remedies for H. C. L. is a better distributing method, anyway. Representative Summers of Washington told this story in the house just before congress adjourned:

"A bright young lad, the son of a well-known lawyer of White Salmon, a town of my district, was on his way home from school and stopped in at his father's office.

"Say, Dad," he said, "why are they bringing in White Salmon tomatoes on the Portland, Ore., steamship?"

"Well, well," said the lawyer, "proud of his son's perspicacity, 'that is peculiar. Let us go down and see about it,' and off they strolled to investigate.

"At the dinner table that night the result of their investigation was reported to the family and here is the story he told:

"First, the trucker's warehouse, within a quarter of a mile of White Salmon, had been visited and packed miles down the Columbia river. They were then hauled down to the dock, loaded onto the boat and shipped to Portland, where they were unloaded, hauled to a warehouse, re-packed to a merchant in White Salmon, hauled from the warehouse back to the boat, loaded thereon, shipped to White Salmon, unloaded, hauled to the merchant's store and from there delivered to White Salmon homes at heavy prices. The family had done of the very same business on the table that night, but the price had been

MacFirth of the Mounted Police

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

"Get him, MacFirth, dead or alive!" The words were crisp, final.

Alan MacFirth saluted his chief, crossed to the door with decisive step and closed it behind him. Outside in the crisp northern air he drew a deep breath, partly of relief that what he had so long dreaded had at last come, partly of resolution to put through the job as expeditiously as possible. Yet his successful accomplishment would mean, presumably, the downfall of his hopes.

For the chief had sent him after Brandon, and Brandon, in spite of the fact that he had skipped with provincial funds and was in hiding somewhere north of the circle, had chosen to cast acquisitive glances at Jeannie Bruce, the factor's daughter, whom Alan had loved ever since as a pig-caller youngster who had come to the post. And post gossip said that Jean reciprocated.

Now to say goodbye to Jeannie. He strode over to the factor's dwelling, the most pretentious of the little group of white-painted buildings, and rapped sharply on the door. A moment later, admitted by Margot, Bruce's dusky salaried housekeeper, who regarded him with the inscrutable look of her kind, he entered the long living room with its sparse yet homelike furnishings.

His entrance started a slim figure from the depths of a huge chair. As she rose to meet him Alan saw that Jean had been crying. Evidently she had heard that he was to be put on Brandon's trail. Even as he gripped lightly the two hands she held out to him MacFirth cursed inwardly. Jeannie crying over that worthless scamp of a Brandon!

"Jeannie, I've come to say goodbye, the chief—"

"I know," interrupted the girl, "you're out after Jim Brandon, and I know what you have been told. I know the chief. He always says, 'Get him, dead or alive. Oh, Alan, for my sake—' the lifted beseeching eyes. 'For my sake, Alan, bring him back alive!'"

So the rumor of the post was true, Jean cared. MacFirth swallowed hard. "Does it mean as much to you as all that?" he asked gently.

"It means more than you know," she returned so sincerely and earnestly that Alan choked back the words of love struggling for utterance.

"I'll do my best, Jean," he said sincerely, and presently after a phrase of conventional farewell set out on his long and lonely mission.

Had he known that, despite his efforts at concealment, the girl had read in his eyes his love for her, he might have found in the fact a trifle of consolation. He had heard the words she murmured when he had left her standing, watfoll, on the threshold, "Heaven send that Margot is right!" he would have had cause for wondering.

Many weeks later, in an odorous igloo not very far from the frozen arctic rim, MacFirth found Brandon, recognizable in spite of his Eskimo clothes, his growth of beard and the ravages of sickness. And Brandon, who had seen from the opening of the igloo the plodding train of sledge dogs, knew that his day of reckoning had come.

For in that vast country, with its frozen wastes and snow-bound horizon, white men respect two things—famine and the Northwest Mounted Police.

In the monotonous days which followed temptation lay heavily on MacFirth to let Brandon die. In the lonely nights in camp on the way to the post he fought ten thousand little devils which urged him on to a negative course of action—merely not to fight the fever, not to give the medicine, not to prepare the nourishing broth.

But he did not yield. The chief might be satisfied with Brandon dead—Jean would not.

Meanwhile at the post Jeannie pondered the shereghous of the two men, one of whom she knew loved her. She worried also concerning her father. John Bruce was losing furs for the company. For several seasons the value of the pelts had been decreasing. Yet the independent traders were doing better than ever. Someone had been waylaying the Indians on their return from their winter's trapping and bringing them to turn over the most valuable skins. For his thievery—and it was little else—her father would be held responsible.

Came a mild day when Jeannie laced up her walking boots and took her troubles into the open air. After a lengthy tramp she decided, like a true daughter of the wilderness, on a short but home, and thereby made her discovery.

While forcing her way through an almost impenetrable growth of underbrush bordering a muskeg swamp she stumbled over a plank. Surprised, she stopped to investigate, and found that the plank was part of a flooring which concealed a dugout of some sort.

Curiously she pried at a board until it loosened, and kneeling she gazed into the gloomy depths within. A cache of furs! Evidently cared and neatly hidden away. Wait! Something glinted in the corner. She thrust in her hand and brought out a pretty mounted hawk's foot, evidently dropped by some passing animal, and his blood home. Tired and perplexed, she did not notice the subtle air of excitement which hovered about the "post" but went straight to the door of the chief to make known her discovery.

Unaware, she opened the door, then gave a little cry. There stood MacFirth and, quite unlike his former jaunty self, Jim Brandon. Jean leaped weakly against the door as all eyes focused upon her. Then, straightened suddenly, she held out her hand with the sob.

"See what I have kept of yours!" she cried ambiguously, her eyes darting from one man to the other.

MacFirth's eyes held only a desperate yearning. But, "Hills!" said Brandon, with an attempt to recapture his former debonaire manner. Then he cringed suddenly, for Jean turned upon him, her eyes blazing.

"Then it was you who have been cheating my father! You who bribed Margot's half-wit husband to steal and hand over to you all the black and silver fox pelts! You who hid them away—the furs the Indians owed my father for supplies already charged against them at the company store! Margot is afraid of her husband, but the very day Alan went after you she came to me and said, 'Brandon—be know all about this! That was why I prayed that you might come back. Then today, quite by accident, I found your cache—and this!'"

She threw the sob at his feet and slipped out of the door.

Over Brandon's sullen head the chief gave Alan the permission his eyes were mutely begging.

"You're excused, MacFirth," he said briefly.

In the darkness Alan overtook Jeannie. With the air of one who will no longer be denied he drew her masterfully to him.

"If you don't love Brandon," he said tenderly, "perhaps—"

"I do love you!" cried Jeannie.

WIT AND HUMOR IN BIBLE

"Good Book" Replete With Lively Satires That May Be Classed as of First Quality.

A writer on this somewhat unusual topic says: "There is wit and humor of the first quality in the Bible, and to prove it he continues:

"Job in his thirtieth chapter is telling how he scorned the low-lived fellows who pretended to look down on him in his adversity. They are fools. They belong to the long-eared fraternity. Anybody with less wit might call them asses, but Job puts it more deftly (30:7): 'Among the bushes they brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.' If that is not wit, there is no such thing as wit. And yet the commentators don't and won't see it.

"Take another instance—Elijah's ridicule of the prophets of Baal. They are clamoring to their god to help them out of a very awkward predicament. And while they are at it, the prophet shows them up in a way that must have made the people roar with laughter. The stiff, antiquated style of our English Bible tames down the sallies. Take them in modern phrase. These quack prophets have worked themselves into a perfect desperation and are capering about on the altar as though they had the St. Vitus' dance. The scene (I Kings 18: 26,27) wakes up all of Elijah's sense of the ridiculous. 'Shout louder! He is a god, you know! Make him hear! Perhaps he is chatting with somebody or is off on a hunt or gone travelling. Or maybe he is taking a nap. Shout away! Wake him up!'

"Imagine the discomfiture of the priests of Baal at such witty and sarcastic comments upon their performances."

"City of Earthquakes."

The city of San Salvador, capital of the republic of Salvador, may be called a city of earthquakes, for it has been disaster as a result of many eruptions, and even today the many volcanoes that surround the little city which has been shattered so many times again threaten it. Rumbblings and grumbblings are heard, coming, it is supposed, from the Izalo volcano.

This cinder-covered peak, nearly 5,000 feet high, has gradually built itself up from what was a level plain at the base of the Santa Ana volcano. It has long periods of inactivity, throwing up clouds of smoke and steam in great puffs, and at times belching flames. Sometimes a flashing effect can be seen far out at sea, and the volcano has become known along the coast as the lighthouse of Central America.

Spanish Girl Has Attendant

The Spanish girl of any attractions is almost always attended by a young man who is known as her novice, and who has the privilege of escorting her on her walks, although, by a singular anomaly, no formal engagement exists. So long as this state of things continues the young lady has to be loyal and obedient to her gallant. But he may cease his attentions at any time, and openly transfer them to some other attractive lady. Although the advantages of such a custom are all on the side of the man, very few Spanish girls would care to be without a novice, however sickly.

ROAD BUILDING

PACIFIC COAST GOOD ROADS

Interest Centers Particularly in Highway Extending From California to Washington.

(By HERBERT MUNN, State Highway Engineer of Oregon.)

The Pacific coast is particularly interested in our national highway; that is the Pacific coast highway extending from California to Oregon and Washington. This when completed will have approximate length of some 1,400 miles, and the large part of it is now completed or nearing completion.

Mr. Fletcher of California stated to me that his state had completed 525 miles, extending from Los Angeles north to Sacramento, and we are now under contract to complete the road. Oregon now has under contract on this road some 400 miles of construction, all of which will be completed by the middle of next year, 200 miles of which will be paved and the rest macadam or gravel. Washington has completed this road to Seattle, and next year its entire length will be complete.

I am unable to say at this time just how much money was expended during the year 1919 in the three states, but in Oregon approximately $7,000,000 was expended. The three states, however, are pretty well fixed financially.

California has a new bond issue for $40,000,000 and previously has expended some $33,000,000. Oregon has some $32,000,000 available and roads to cost $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 under construction. Washington has less money. They failed to carry the bond issue there this year, but have between $3,000,000 and $6,000,000 available for next year.

The eastern connections with the Pacific highway are the Santa Fe trail, the Lincoln highway, and the Midland road. I think the Santa Fe is pretty well cared for. It connects with southern California. In Oregon we are connecting with the southern highway and with the Columbia river highway. Labor conditions on the Pacific coast are about the same as in the East.

Improved Road in Oregon.

The pay is about $4.50 with $7.50 for teams. We don't expect better labor conditions next year. Material conditions are better. In Oregon we have sufficient local material and don't require much rail transportation. Washington is fixed similarly. So is northern California. Southern California is in worse condition as to transportation.

MOTORTRUCK IS INSISTENT

War Brought It Into Prominence as Commercially Practical Form of Transportation.

The value of the motortruck as an alternative form of transportation is becoming more and more apparent. It is more efficient than the rail carrier, and, because it is, it may be taken as a permanent form of transportation and one destined to have a large influence on the movements of trade in the future.

PUSH GOOD ROADS BUILDING

Construction Work Retarded by War Should Now Be Resumed to Facilitate Transportation.

Good roads construction retarded by the war should now be pushed vigorously and nothing should be permitted to interfere with the expansion and development of these important arteries of transportation and trade which can serve to materially reduce high living costs by facilitating the movement of foodstuffs from the farm to the table.

Significant Auto Fact.

Observers are said to regard it as significant that the states which will spend most freely for better highways and which manufacturers depend upon to buy the most motortrucks in 1930 are states in which farming is the predominant occupation.

Value of Motortruck.

The value of the motortruck as an aid in marketing farm products is now well established. In bringing this

HOT WEATHER Hits the Stomach Hardest

Chicago, Ill.—Hot weather upsets the strongest stomach and causes serious trouble for the weak ones, so word is now going out to thousands of eatonic users that they should, during this hot weather, be on the safe side and take one eatonic tablet about half an hour before meals, as well as after eating. Do this and keep the excess acids and poisonous gases from forming in stomach and bowels. Eatonic acts quickly; it will help the appetite and take away the hot-weather, feverish, thirsty feeling from mouth and stomach, because it takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases and carries them out of the body and, of course, when the cause of the trouble is removed, there can be no bad feeling. Eatonic is like a bit of candy, and is recommended to all as a safe, sure remedy these hot days for stomach and bodily troubles, caused from overeating and drinking cold things. Adv.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be dependent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

Poor Policy

If the local democratic organization was desirous of killing democratic sentiment, creating discord and bringing about a general contempt for the party, no more effective means could have been employed to accomplish that end than was adopted regarding the primary in this precinct. The county chairman issued his call for the county convention, a little late possibly for some of the distant precincts, but certainly early enough for the democrats of this precinct to have been notified. But such was not the case, and the primary for this precinct became history before any reasonable per cent of democratic voters knew anything of it.

The News, the only democratic paper, in the county, which was fighting the battles of democracy before many of these self-styled democrats came to the county, knew nothing about it. But whether the action complained of was by design or neglect, it was reprehensible, and was a deep source of regret to all right-minded and loyal democrats who believe in the policies of the democratic party, are proud of its achievements and unswerving in the support of its principles. On the other hand, however, there are many independent voters—men who are undecided just which party they will support—and to whom we believe the democratic party should especially appeal, who can but regard these semi-secret proceedings as distasteful, and upon whom such actions must have an adverse effect. No party can hope to succeed by such methods, and until the democratic party takes steps to counteract the evil effects of this character of politics and places in control of the party machinery men who are devoted to party and uninfluenced by the whims and prejudices of a "close cabal" it can scarcely expect enthusiastic support from men who have no patience with the things we are condoning.

We feel grieved over the fear of the effect such tactics are calculated to have on the party in the coming election. With such tactics harmony is impossible and defeat sure.

Mr. H. B. Hamilton went to Carrizozo yesterday, and after a long stay there will go to Lordsburg, where he will stay for some time.

Highlights in Cox's Speech

Following are some of the striking points made by Governor James M. Cox in his speech of acceptance:

The Republican plan for peace, if carried out, would mean a separate peace with Germany—the most disheartening event in civilization since the Russian made their separate peace, and infinitely more unworthy on our part than that of the Russians.

As the Democratic candidate, I favor going into the league of nations.

The first duty of the new administration clearly will be the ratification of the treaty.

Our domestic problems are most pressing. One of the first things to be done is the repeal of war taxes. Federal taxation must be heavily reduced, and it will be done if a Democratic administration is chosen.

We are in a time that calls for straight thinking, straight talking and straight acting. This is no time for wobbling.

Profiteering is today the most sinister influence in American life.

It is the duty of the federal government to stimulate the work of Americanization on the part of church, school, community agencies, state governments and industry itself. We cannot develop patriotism unless we demonstrate the difference between despotism and democracy.

The child life of the nation must be conserved. If labor in immature years is permitted by one generation it is practicing unfairness to the next.

Municipalities must in large measure interest themselves in, if not directly control, community markets.

Multiply our home owners and you will make the way of the seditious agitators more difficult.

The Mexican situation, trying our patience for years, begins to show signs of improvement. Not the least of the things that have contributed to it is a realization by the people of that country that we have neither the lust for their domain nor a disposition to disturb their sovereign rights. Peace smiles on the border.

Oil News

The oil equipment in Tuckercari has died, and oil development in Quay county is practically shut down. The equipment for the McGee is not setting, and it is rumored that the derrick will be pulled, and the derrick moved to a new location. That sounds bad. Another rumor is that the well will be shot at different depths before abandoning the hole. Drilling has ceased in the Eudee well, in the same district, and the derrick is to be moved to another location, and a new hole spudded in.

Gallup, N. M.,—Otto Fellis of Duran, was in the city recently to meet with the directors and stockholders of the Corona Tularosa Basin Oil Association. The showing about the well is very encouraging just at present. The well is down 900 feet. A 30 foot vein of water sand was struck a few days ago and it is necessary to case the water off to keep the well in proper condition. There have been many visitors at the well recently who have visited all of the prospects in the Tularosa Basin lately, and all are of the opinion that the Corona well is making the best showing and the best progress.

Gov. Cantu May Start Something

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 10—The rebellion of Esteban Cantu, governor of the northern district of Lower California, is being used by that official to camouflage a revolution throughout Mexico, today was charged by Eduardo Ruiz, agent in Los Angeles of the Mexican provisional government, and former governor of the Mexican state of Colima.

Cantu, Ruiz declared, was so confident he eventually would become "first chief of Mexico," that he already had appointed prospective high officers of his proposed government and even named many to occupy lesser federal posts.

Senor Ruiz said centers of Cantu's plot were Mexicali, Lower California, the governor's capital; Mexico City, Los Angeles, Washington, D. C., and San Antonio and El Paso, Texas.

"As soon as the baron asked me where De Ravelot was I saw the chance to get rid of him so he wouldn't be peering around any more. I said yes—I knew about where he was—on the train—he went to California in the morning."

"California!" I gurgled. "On the train! Not for a mile! He's downstairs in this house, hiding—he was here when your baron came with a warrant to arrest him!" And punctuated with Billy's astonished exclamations, I poured out my own tale of woe and romance and wound up with Monsieur's explanation—that it was a plot of the French government to hold up the Mexican deal by keeping Claire's father from going to Mexico and putting it through.

"Don't believe it," cried Billy. "Monsieur's made a mistake—he didn't see the man. Why, old fellow—up admitted to me he was working for the baron William! De Ravelot's got the wrong man. But say—we must see him right off and put him wise to this, say—it's awful tough—her father in such a hole. It most looks as if we ought to give him back the diamonds."

Before we could discuss it and how to communicate with the gentleman himself, he appeared at the front door. He'd gotten out in the basement, instead of his own flat, because he'd heard voices and had taken his chances on slipping upstairs unobserved.

I hurried him to a chambered spirit, and Billy plunged into the recital of his interview with Baron von Follow-up and the clever way he thought he had got rid of him by saying Monsieur had gone to California.

I thought I had seen Monsieur at the top notch of emotionalism already, but I was mistaken. He actually tore his hair—not a great deal, but enough to see.

"My life is ruin with this revelation," he wailed. "Without to obtain some diamonds immediately—without to be able to return them to their owner when he comes for them—am I not? Monsieur! I am regarded as same as a robber."

"And how do I tell him say get lost!—it is my young beautiful daughter Claire who lets get lost some diamonds? Good-forbid—I tell him that!"

"But how does he answer when I tell him so (trust)? Does he say, 'De Ravelot, I am sorry you lose some most precious diamonds, but accidents will happen and I know you are a good man?'"

He passed for a bitter laugh and to wipe his face with his handkerchief.

"Perhaps you sink he says so. No! He tells me—'De Ravelot, I know you are some diamonds while you pretend say are lost things like say don't come say no say as you say. So I punish you for a robber and see you gain something from stealing my jewels!'"

Monsieur heaved a great sigh. "Zis morning, if I have some diamonds, I am already on my way to Mexico, but how?"

"Hide away, hide away for a couple of days," urged Billy, trying to cheer him up. "We'll help you. I think you ought to be down in your den now—I'm afraid every minute that man may turn up here again."

Later, I remembered the alacrity with which Monsieur accepted the offer, assuring us fervently, "Only to hide away me and my child from disgrace. I show myself on your mercy—I trust you with my honor—wis what is dearest to me—wis my life!"

Billy was deeply affected. I could see, and hurried Monsieur off, returning in about half an hour to report, "All secure."

I fell asleep and was dreaming that the dome of the national capitol was tottering over on all of us when I was awakened by the ringing of the front bell.

I saw by the dim light it was early—too early for anything but a fresh calamity—and I hopped out of bed and ran to the door.

"Who's there?" I called through.

"Billy. Open quick."

Billy tumbled in. "Claire's kidnapped!" he shouted in my face.

I don't know whether I put my arms around him, or he put his around me. Both, probably; but the next minute we were clinging together and his chest was heaving with hard dry sobs. When I finally got a coherent account out of him he told me that Claire had been a "little light-headed" through the evening.

"Then she's just wandered off in a bad-dreaming way?" I stammered anxiously.

"No," Billy answered. "Old Follow-up has noticed her but on the pretext of being her father and now he'll see her all right to get him out. I can't decide whether to see him and tell him how she was."

"Don't tell him that!" I opposed. "You're not to see him. You're to stay here. You're to stay here. You're to stay here."

through my simple breakfast when George came up.

"Why, that boy's—the one sent the note—you wouldn't see yesterday—he say he got an appointment with you for nine o'clock."

The very man Billy believed had kidnapped Claire!

"Show him up," I instructed with alacrity, and when he came I greeted him as skilfully as I looked afraid to enter.

"I almost sang the question at him—'Where is Miss de Ravelot?'—before I thought, but saved it just in time. He sat down in the chair I pushed forward; I sat opposite. He seemed at a loss to begin; I said not one word.

He opened fire on me then: "I feel I owe you an apology for my unceremonious call yesterday—"

I merely bowed in acknowledgment.

"I shouldn't have insisted, you know, only we had traced the man to the house, and since he had called on you the evening before, it was a natural conclusion that he was calling on you then, also. They drove from their hotel to the Grand Central station, dismissed the carriage there and I have not sight of their combined movement for about an hour."

"And you don't know where the girl is?" I asked, trembling a little and trying to control my voice.

"No—not yet. There is no chance of her hiding—or of her being hidden—for more than a few days—a few hours. No chance. Most natural that she should have gone in search of her father. He has not left the city—I am positive on that score. It is probable the girl has joined him by a preconcerted plan—or was meaning to when she left the house. I'll find her, I promise you!"

"And nothing is going to happen to her after you find her?"

"Happen to her! What could happen to her? I have nothing to do with her—my business is to locate her father and arrange a matter with him—quietly, I hope."

"And will the emperor imprison him if the diplomatic matter isn't satisfactorily arranged?"

"The emperor? I'm sure I can't say—I don't know anything about the emperor's diplomatic affairs."

"Then what are you after, De Ravelot?"

He reflected a few moments, and then with one of his funny looks, he remarked: "I'd rather have you for a friend than an enemy. It appears that De Ravelot carried off a million dollars' worth of diamonds in Paris the moment they were returned from the diamond cutter's in Antwerp where he had induced the owner to send them for recutting."

"Oh, never!" I exclaimed, shocked, and at the same time appreciating how Monsieur had foreseen this very accusation. "I can't believe he's a thief—it's impossible."

"I don't wonder you doubt it," he replied. "I did myself for a while—his what gave him the start of me."

And with that, off he went.

Poor Monsieur! Accused of stealing the emperor's diamonds! And suddenly the words, "They were stolen the moment they were returned from the diamond cutter's in Antwerp."

"I feel I owe you an apology."

Reached over me and with perspective, and with them, the thing I tried all along to remember and couldn't—Monsieur's slip when he said of the legend of the diamonds; he said they were cut in Venice in the sixteenth century and they were cut in Antwerp in the seventeenth. The next morning, out he went. The baron came down and I saw him. He was in a bad way. He was in a bad way. He was in a bad way.

"Van Rosten's most important work of recent years was the cutting of a collection of seven diamonds worth at a rough estimate five million francs, which an American millionaire purchased in Paris from an Indian rajah."

De Ravelot stole the diamonds from the millionaire and told Billy and me a pleasing yarn to account for his possession. Of course he wouldn't dare mention when the diamonds were last cut!

CHAPTER XX.

All is Kismet.

The credit of Claire's discovery falls first to her and second to me—she found herself at my door late in the afternoon.

"Claire!" I cried, and at the same moment she cried, "Have they arrested papa?" and collapsed into my arms.

"They haven't arrested him—he's perfectly safe," I assured her. "Let me take off your coat and then I want you to lie down at once."

"No—I must stop a minute—take me to papa."

"Listen to me, Claire," I expostulated a bit sternly. "I can't take you to your father now—it isn't possible."

She obeyed like the sick child she was and then the bell rang and there stood Billy and Mrs. Delario—Billy white and weeping. Mrs. Delario white and distracted.

"She's here," I whispered, pointing in the direction of the study.

Billy stood on no ceremony—he swept both of us aside and romped through the hall and I heard one glad cry, "Claire!" and found him on his knees by the divan.

My only comment was a maidenly smile that went over his head—or under his feet, perhaps, for he was in too lofty a state at having found her to notice such trivial details as that he "found her" in my flat.

Later he drew me to one side while Claire and Mrs. Delario were bubbling together and told me: "Say—I think I've made Mrs. D. understand about those things—I simply had to—it was getting too serious for everybody. But one funny thing—nothing I can say can shake her that our foreign friend is a thief—says she 'sees' it too plainly and she can't be mistaken."

"I'm afraid she's right," I whispered back. "The Great Unknown was here this morning—he says the diamonds belong to an American millionaire."

Things were happening that day exactly like a story-book plot—before I could get out another word of explanation the bell rang and the Great Unknown came in! I was too much astonished at having him pop up in answer to my speaking his name to keep him out, and he reached the room and saw the object of his search reclining on the divan with Mrs. Delario sitting beside her.

"Well—you've found yourself, I see," he said pleasantly to Claire after nodding casually to Mrs. Delario and Billy. "I've been hunting you all day and now, if you'll be so good as to tell me where your father is—I have business of great importance to him."

"I don't know where he is!" Claire cried, and then appealing to me, she blurted out: "But you do. Oh, tell him and let him save papa."

Tableau!

The cat was out of the bag! Everybody looked at everybody and the Great Unknown snatched his eyes and said, "Ah!" staring very hard at me.

"An accomplice!" And he gave the word a horrid twist as he said it, and I felt I was proving it by my cheeks.

"Say—look here! Accomplice in what?" Billy demanded fiercely.

"Accomplice in what? In the great, set diamond robbery of modern times," he replied imperturbably.

He stretched the story rapidly: An impetuous Indian rajah visiting Paris owned the stones and through De Ravelot, an impetuous nobleman and an diplomat who'd run through his own money and his wife's dowry, sold them to a Pittsburgh millionaire—name not mentioned—who intended them as a gift worthy himself and a certain lady of the operatic stage. The stones were so badly cut that De Ravelot indeed his friend to send them to Antwerp for recutting by Van Rosten. On the day of their return they mysteriously disappeared, as did also one of the rajah's retainers, who knew about the stones and had himself taken them to Antwerp. Suspicion fell upon him and the case was put in the hands of the Great Unknown.

"It is true," said Mrs. Delario correctly, "every word of it. I see it—I hear it—I know it. We must get back the diamonds at once."

Her "we" gave us away completely! I saw the detective's eyes jump, but he said nothing. "I shall be thankful for your co-operation in recovering the stones—particularly if we can keep the matter quiet. You see, there is but one in Pittsburgh."

"The story—very simple—last night I saw the detective's eyes jump, but he said nothing. "I shall be thankful for your co-operation in recovering the stones—particularly if we can keep the matter quiet. You see, there is but one in Pittsburgh."

He drew off and looked at Claire steadily and thoughtfully. I took the hat and asked:

"Will you promise me that if I succeed in getting him to return the diamonds the case will be dropped?"

"Steadily. I have explicit instructions on that head."

"Billy, you see what he's done—let him know what he's wanted for."

Five minutes later he and Billy were in the room. When Monsieur saw the Great Unknown he almost had a fit of hysterics; when Claire saw her father she did.

"Now, Monsieur," said I coolly, when he had done with his "Mon Dieu" and "What does this mean?" and a few more exclamations, "We'll help you out of your difficulties if you'll confess the truth. Did you steal these diamonds from the Pittsburgh gentleman?"

Monsieur clasped his hands and turned to me. "It was at impulse of a moment—a temptation of a single instant," he whined. "I have regret it every hour—I am justly punished for my sin. I take you—I know not for what—to make sport with me—and I seek to hide some jewels, to bring you to

Chic Gowns for the Warm Days

The first warm days often find us quite unprepared in the matter of clothes. This is especially true after a cold, late spring such as the one just passed, which offered little incentive to buying this frocks. So, if we have delayed in our shopping, writes a prominent fashion correspondent, it means that we confront a real problem—that of getting a suitable wardrobe together quickly. The difficulty is to get clothes that will give service for the greatest number of occasions. In the summer we frequently face the unpleasant fact that we have not the right dress for the occasion, and nothing is more discomforting than the feeling of being unacceptably dressed.

We are realizing more and more the need of the practical combined with beauty in our clothes. The sensible woman, however, never sacrifices beauty to the purely practical. In the dark georgette crepe frocks we have this combination. No fabric has yet been able to supplant the good, substantial navy blue georgette crepe for wear on hot days, offering as it does the advantages of coolness and lightness.

There are those who, in their desire to help reduce the high cost of living, talk of the economy of gingham, but a gingham dress is never an economy—rather it is a luxury to be enjoyed in the country. In the first place, gingham is anything but inexpensive, and, furthermore, frocks made from them require frequent and careful laundering, which under existing conditions means constant additional expense. Even with the best of care they never look quite the same after a visit to the laundry.

Real Organdie Flowers.

Although we have seen a great deal of taffeta during the last year, its glory has not yet been dimmed. We have had it combined with organdie in an infinite number of ways, but no lovelier union of these two has appeared than is seen in the models made entirely of silk and decked with huge white organdie flowers applied with long, loose stitches of dark thread. The flowers are not cut from flat pieces of the muslin, but are twisted deftly and slanted so that they are big and puffy. The pieces, simulating leaves are veined with the dark thread. In a dress of this sort the white appears also in the bodice in the form of a front which extends over the skirt and is bound with the dark-blue taffeta. A white organdie bow at the back of the neck also is bound with blue. The short sleeves have a tiny turned-back cuff of organdie worked with blue in a loose, long and short stitch.

To wear in the late afternoon or as an informal summer evening dress nothing could be more suitable than the embroidered batiste robes which have again come into fashion. We have seen these both sold and custom embroidered. The frocks themselves are waiflike and continuing down either side of the front until they are caught under the hem.

Another frock shows ribbon again returning as the distinctive note. This is interesting as a simple adaptation of the Egyptian style, which many people have been inclined to think of as representing elaboration only. Here a beautiful brocaded ribbon—dull red and silver—is used to give an Egyptian effect to the simplest and most practical sort of chiffon frock.

Lace With Batiste or Organdie. It is interesting to observe another way in which lace and batiste are combined. Brown lace is used for a chemise top cut just like a long smock reaching to a low hipline. A double piece of ecru batiste is attached to the bottom of the smock to make a straight skirt. Where the two are joined a garland of batiste flowers veined with brown is applied. A wash of narrow brown ribbon girdles the waistline.

The same idea might be carried out in lace and organdie. Brown lace with organdie of the same color but slightly lighter in shade is effective, or lace may be dyed any color and used with white organdie. With the wonderful choice of ribbons that we have now a very distinctive effect may be given by the wash.

Still another pleasing use of brown is seen in an evening frock. This is one of the dancing frocks, made with a somewhat high neck and cap sleeves, which are beginning to take the place of the extreme décolletage—another instance of the turning away from extravagance toward simpler things. The bodice and tunic of the skirt are composed of brown taffeta and the trimming is tiny bows of the silk. The taffeta petals have an inch-wide edging of lighter brown tulle. Beneath the tunic are three tulle skirts, also cut in the form of petals. The first is of a very dark shade of brown overlaid with dull orange. There is a narrow foundation skirt of silk, making in all four skirts, one above the other.

Evening Frock With Blistering Skirts. Black taffeta and black tulle are used in a similar way, the only real difference being in the skirt, which consists of four tiers of black tulle petals, so that the idea of the four skirts is carried out, but entirely in the net. The bodice is plain almost to the point of severity. It is cut to fit the figure rather snugly and crumple at the waistline. As in the black lace dress brought out earlier in the season and which still enjoys considerable prestige, a bit of bright color is introduced by pulling scarlet sleeves with net. The bodice boasts of no trimming other than a quaint little cocoon bouquet, also bright red.

Only the wonder woman may suppose the Cherrie dress, which is the offering of the season, to be a simple affair. It is a masterpiece of design and construction. The bodice is of a dark shade of brown overlaid with dull orange. There is a narrow foundation skirt of silk, making in all four skirts, one above the other.

PROFILES

WHEN a girl tells me her profile is bad looking, I usually tell her to change the way she dresses her hair. This is the simplest, easiest way to improve the appearance of the side face. Indeed, the way the hair is arranged makes a tremendous difference in the profile. A thin face can be made to seem more rounded if the hair is pulled over the face, a high forehead can be eliminated by pulling the hair down over the brows, a prominent a perfect face can stand the general style, while a fat face needs the hair soft around the edges and fluffed only a trifle. Of course, a deformed face can be improved by neoplasia treatment. And a profile that shows the mouth line out of harmony, can be improved by dental treatment. But a rearrangement of the hair will do wonders in many cases.

HEAD-ON-THE-HAND PICTURE

When he had his picture taken with his head upon his hand, we were good and proud of Billy—he was looking something grand! He had started in to selling and was tagged for father's frog. Or some other great achievement quite as wonderful as that. So we were impressed with Billy and were proud to beat the hand. When he had his picture taken with his head upon his hand.

That is, all we kids felt that way. Father seemed to like it too. For he said, "Good Lord!" when shown it, and he seemed in deep distress. Mother grinned a bit and giggled, and somehow it wasn't joy. Of the kind we had expected, for the honor of her boy. And she said, "Remember, father!" "Yes," he said, "I cannot stand to recall MY picture taken with my head upon my hand!"

About Advertising

Advertising is what nothing was ever sold without.

If a loaf of bread is sold in a shop, it had been advertised by the tramp's hunger and by somebody who told the "be" where the bakery was. Or by the window of the bakery itself.

There isn't a human being who doesn't believe in advertising.

And that will give him a lot of publicity that nobody can cash in on. The man who claims not to believe in advertising is a—well, let somebody else say it. This book is anxious for everybody to tell other people that his place is a good one to trade.

The man who puts on good clothes advertises his own respectability, and expects results in the shape of the respect of others.

The man who dresses poorly because of necessity or purposely, advertises his poverty and expects results in other people's help or contempt.

In fact, every honest person wants advertising. Only dishonest people are afraid of it, and they get it anyway.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

Soup is reasonable the year round in any climate. The following will be found on quite a wide range of soups.

Royal Soup.—Spice one cupful of bread crumbs in one-half cupful of milk. Add the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs rubbed through a sieve and the breast of a stewed chicken, also rubbed through a sieve; add three and one-half cupfuls of stock, highly seasoned, one and one-half cupfuls of scalded milk, and two and one-half tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked together. Season with salt and pepper.

Pressed Beef Flank.—Wipe, remove superfluous fat and roll a flank of beef. Put into a kettle cover with boiling water and add one tablespoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of peppercorns, a small piece of bay leaf and the bone of a shank of veal. Cook slowly until the meat is very tender. There should be very little liquid in the kettle when the meat is done. Arrange the meat in a deep pan, pour over the liquor, cover and press with a heavy weight. Serve cold.

Chicken à la Stanley.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one large onion thinly sliced and two broilers cut in pieces for serving. Cover and cook slowly for ten minutes, then add one cupful of chicken stock and cook until the meat is tender. Remove the chicken, rub the stock and onions through a sieve and add one and one-half tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour cooked together. Add cream to make the sauce of the right consistency. Season with salt and pepper. Arrange the chicken on a serving dish, pour around the sauce, and garnish the dish with sliced bananas dipped in flour and sautéed in butter.

Baked Dressing.—To one cupful of beaten eggs, a mixture of white and yolk, add an equal quantity of mild vinegar. Cook over hot water until thick. Season when ready to use. Will keep for weeks in a jar well sealed and placed in a cool place.

If we have whispered truth, whisper no longer; speak as the trumpet does, stern and stronger. —John G. Whittier.

SUMMER MEATS

Chicken, veal, sweetbreads and lamb are the summer meats most commonly liked and served.

Broiled Chicken.—Clean a tender chicken and split it down the back. Break the joints, take out the breast bone, wipe clean, sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub with soft butter. Broil and serve with melted butter.

Breaded Veal Cutlet.—Have the cutlets less than an inch thick; parboil and drain, then cool. Season with salt and pepper, dip in beaten egg and crumbs and fry until brown. Serve with tomato sauce or with a border of green peas.

Chicken Galleesh.—Cut into dice two medium sized raw potatoes. Put into a fryingpan two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and when hot add the potato dice. Stir to keep from burning and cook five minutes. Then add a dash of paprika, a cupful of boiling water, a crushed bean of garlic, a cupful of cooked chicken chopped fine or a can of boned chicken; salt to taste. Cover and cook until the potatoes are done, stirring frequently.

Mayonnaise dressing, using olive oil, is the most excellent, but a tasty substitute can be prepared from corn oil, using the same method of mixing. The secret of a good mayonnaise is freshness of the egg and well-chilled ingredients and utensils. Drop a fresh egg yolk into a well-chilled bowl placed in a pan of ice water; add a half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, a pinch of mustard, a dash of cayenne and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Beat well before adding any oil, then beat a few drops at a time, beating well between each addition. Thin the mixture with vinegar or lemon juice, adding more oil until three-quarters of a cupful has been used. Mayonnaise to be good should be thick and creamy. When serving it in the salad it may be thinned with cream.

Wood Fibers. The common ideas concerning wood fibers are not justified by the extended tests of the United States forest products laboratory. Each species of wood does not have its characteristic fiber length, but a greater length may be found between the fibers of the original tree than between the fibers in different species.

WILL HONOR EARLY PRINTER BOUND TO DELIVER SPEECH

Anniversary of Birth of Christophe Plantin to Be Appropriately Commemorated in August. Guest at Banquet Must Have Something Astonished the Rest of the Gathering.

The four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Christophe Plantin, the noted French printer of the sixteenth century, will be commemorated with appropriate ceremonies in Antwerp during August. Plantin was a son of Belgium only through adoption. He was born somewhere in historic Touraine.

It was the peculiar achievement of Plantin to bring honor and glory to the printer's trade in the days of its infancy. With a keen appreciation of the beauties of literature, Plantin delighted in perfecting his workmanship in order that these beauties might be published in the most attractive form possible, although his tools were those of a common workman. His chief oeuvre was the famous Biblia polyglotta—published in 1569-1573—an attempt at a scientific revision of the text of the Old and New Testaments. It was published in the Greek, Hebrew, Syriac and Chaldean languages. As a result of this monumental work Plantin received from King Philip of Spain the title "prototypographus regius" and the right to print all the liturgical books for the states embraced in King Philip's far-flung empire.

Aids in Fighting Forest Fires. Fifty of the 84 forest-fire stations of the state of New York are equipped with steel towers to facilitate the operation of quickly discovering and locating fires in the woods. During the last year as a result of the operations of this department, the number of fires and the extent of the damage was greatly reduced in that state.

Electrical Sterilization. In a new report on electrical sterilization, Professor Beattie and Lewis of Liverpool university, concluded that milk can be freed from disease germs without heating above 145 degrees to 147 degrees Fahrenheit. At this low temperature, the state of the milk is not altered and its properties seem to be in no way impaired, while the electric treatment greatly increases the time of keeping. The tests were made with two types of apparatus, differing degrees of current and several qualities of milk.

MR. FOX THE WINNER

MR. BLACK FOX who has been having some interesting experiences with an old witch, in which his desire to be changed into a turkey at will got him into some bad predicaments, one of which resulted in his being changed into a frog, is happy once more now that he is a fox again. He had promised the witch to bring some pieces from a pool; he forgot to make good his promise; seeing there was no other way out of the predicament he concluded it was best to do as he promised and he brought the stone to the witch, carrying it in his mouth.

The Witch smiled when she saw the stone. "This is one of many which I want," she said. "Hop away for another if you wish your own form again."

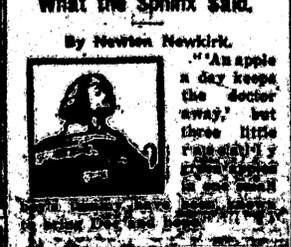

Back and forth, back and forth each day went the poor frog, hopping all night for a long time, and then one night just as the frog was taking a stone from the pool he came from the bottom a terrible rumbling noise.

Up to the top of the pool went the frog, but he held the stone, although he was badly frightened, but when he saw the head of a big Dragon, with two tongues and four eyes, leapt up from the middle of the pool, "splash!" went the stone into the water, and the frog leaped behind a stone more dead than alive.

"My son, my son," said some one, and when the frog looked out there was the old witch holding out her long lean arms to the Dragon, who still stood in the pool.

"Mother!" bellowed the creature. "You have saved me," and out of the pool he jumped right on the bank beside the witch.

"Now, where is that ungrateful creature who helped me, I wonder?" said the witch. "I promised to give him some pieces from a pool, but perhaps he would rather be a frog than a fox. So let us go home."

What the Sphinx Said.
By Newton Newkirk.
"An apple a day keeps the doctor away," but three little foxes said they would try to eat an apple a day.
