

Carrizozo News

Friday, October 22, 1920

OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 21

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1920

NUMBER 43

Harding Cries "Kamerad"

Elyria, O., Oct. 19.—In a reference to Senator Harding's Indianapolis speech Governor Cox said in his address here:

"Senator Harding left his dug-out last night, held out to heaven his hands and yelled: 'Kamerad, Kamerad, I surrender to the hosts of peace.' But America has heard that 'Kamerad' before and the American soldiers grew to know that those who sing it could not be trusted and the American people will not trust any candidate with the presidency that year who has done all he could to destroy the cause of peace—and holds out his hands to high heaven and admits he was wrong and asks you to give the flag of peace to one who has done all he could by associating with its enemies to destroy it."

Referring to the German question the governor said "No man who was an enemy to Germany during the war," was going to vote for him.

"Every mother's son of the enemies to America during the war will vote for Senator Harding and you service men bear that in mind," the governor declared.

Keep Faith with Our Dead

"I promise you formal and effective peace just as soon as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican President to sign."

"This is simply a bid for the disloyal pro-German anti-American vote that favors a separate peace. This vote Senator Harding will get, but he deserves to lose the vote of every red-blooded loyal American citizen."

"One of the men who has a wooden cross in Flanders for a monument sent this challenge to you and to me just before he went down to his death:

*To you from falling heads we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.*

"Are you, as an individual, going to break the faith? On the second day of November, in the secrecy of the voting booth and in the presence of God and your own conscience, you will answer that question. Your part in the 'solemn referendum' will then be played. In the name of 81,000 Americans who gave their lives for a better world, may your voice be added to the call of humanity, justice and peace!"—Speech of Capt. Thomas G. Chamberlain, formerly of the A. E. F., Rochester, Sept. 23.

Democratic State and Legislative Candidates—Elect Them Nov. 2

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

ANTONIO LUCERO
Candidate for Congress from New Mexico, is one of the best known men in the state because of his long connection with the State Normal University at Las Vegas, his seven years as Secretary of State, and later as prohibition officer of the State of New Mexico for the federal government. Mr. Lucero is a man of wide culture and a public speaker equal to any in the state. He is a man of unusual energy and would give his whole time to looking after the interests of New Mexico as our representative in Washington.

JUDGE RICHARD H. HANNA

ROBERT C. DOW
Candidate for Attorney General, was born in 1868 at Old Seven Rivers in Eddy County, N.M. Was educated in the public schools and at the Roswell Military Institute, where he was graduated in 1900. Studied law at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, receiving the degree of LL.B. He immediately took up the practice of law at Carlsbad, where he has been actively engaged since. He served two years in the State Legislature, 1915-17. In 1917 he became District Attorney of Fifth Dist and served for four years.

HARRY SLACK
Candidate for State Treasurer, is a successful insurance man at Gallup, is a good accountant and is recognized as a careful, conservative business man.

J. D. ATWOOD
Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, has been a resident of New Mexico since 1910, opening a law office at Artesia. Served with the N. M. National Guard on the Mexican border and served during the World War with the 40th and 37th Divisions. Is now engaged in the practice of law at Roswell.

HARRY L. PATTON
Candidate for Supreme Court judge, has been a resident of New Mexico for 14 years. Has practiced law for 23 years. Was Assistant U. S. District Attorney for New Mexico, and was Attorney General of New Mexico, serving with distinction for 1917 and 1918. He is recognized as one of the very best lawyers in the state. Mr. Patton's home is in Clovis.

CARLOS MANZANARES
Candidate for State Auditor, is a native of Rio Arriba county, educated in the public schools. He is a farmer and stock raiser and a highly respected citizen of Rio Arriba.

MAL L. KERN
Candidate for Commissioner of Public Lands, has lived in New Mexico for 28 years and has been engaged during this time in stock-raising in the southern part of the state. He is now a member of the State Senate, having been elected from the 13th Senatorial District, composed of Grant, Sierra, Luna, Socorro and Hidalgo counties. Mr. Kern has also been a director of the district schools at Cambray, Luna county, where he lives. Mr. Kern is recognized as one of the most successful live stock men of the state.

GEORGE L. FERRIN
Candidate for Corporation Commissioner, is a machinist and has worked in various shops of different railroads from the time he was 18 years old. He joined the Santa Fe force at La Junta, Colo., in 1907 and has been with that road since. He is a machinist and division foreman. His residence is Vaughn, N.M.

FLORENCIO O. DE RAOS
Candidate for Secretary of State, lives in Las Vegas. He is a member of one of the oldest families in the state, is well qualified for the important position for which he has been nominated and will make a very efficient official.

R. S. TIPTON
Candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, is a resident of Otero county, where he has been actively engaged in educational work for the past 15 years. He has taught in the rural schools and city schools, was superintendent of the city schools of Alamogordo, and is now the county superintendent of Otero county. Mr. Tipton holds the degree of A. B. He is recognized as one of the best equipped educators in the southwest.

Mechem Tried to Coerce Democrat to Support Republicans

Tells Quay county man, during Statehood campaign, he must carry Democratic precinct for Republicans or resign as U. S. Commissioner, then subject to appointment and removal by territorial judges.

Judge Mechem's letter to this democrat, whose name is temporarily withheld, follows:

"Dear ———
"I never thought there could be a question as to your attitude in this election in view of the favors you have received at the hands of the Republican party. Now it is up to you to carry ——— precinct for the Republicans. If you don't I want your resignation as U. S. Commissioner, and also we will make a change in the postmaster."

"I regard you as a personal friend but I don't propose to help the best friend I ever had at the expense of the Republican party. You can show this letter if you desire, and if you do—all right, for those you show it to can always refer to the question as to whether I keep my word with you."

"I know you can carry this precinct and by its vote will be shown your attitude toward ———."

"No excuses will go. If statehood was not in the balance, I would not care so much, but in this case every man has got to quit the fence. As ever your friend,
M. C. Mechem."

Compulsory Universal Military Service

Warren G. Harding is in favor of military training, compulsory upon every American boy at the age of eighteen. When such measure was before the Senate in 1919, Senator Harding voted in opposition to killing the bill by laying it on the table. He voted against a motion to that effect made by Senator Jones of Washington. Harding is opposed to the League of Nations, and he knows that unless this nation enters the League there must be a huge army of trained men to defend this country from attack, sure to come within a few years.

The charge that membership in the League of Nations would force this country into war at the command of some foreign nation or combination of nations, is so absurd as hardly to be worthy of notice. It is being used as a smoke screen to conceal the weakness of the Republican position in the State.

Every person knows that no League of Nations can commit this country to war. Declarations of war are by the Congress of the United States. Every person knows that Congress alone has the power to appropriate money for the prosecution of war. There must be specific authorization before the President can call for volunteers or make a draft for soldiers with which to make war.

Every One of these Nominees Stand for Representative Government in New Mexico

Candidate Stumbled

A question was propounded to a Republican candidate at the meeting Friday night that caused said candidate to stammer, hum and haw and stutter in such a manner that the audience, try as it might, couldn't keep straight.

and it was this, in effect: "How would you vote on the 18th amendment with reference to the Volstead Law if a proposition was presented to increase the alcoholic contents of beverages?" Apparently, the question went over the candidate's head, and he would probably been there yet had not Colonel Richardson come to his aid.

M. E. Missionary Society

Last week the Missionary Society met with Mrs. Lemon. The meeting proved a very interesting one. Mrs. Channel attended the State Conference at Las Cruces and gave a glowing report of the meeting. The ladies planned to serve cake and coffee. This date is a long ways off, but, keep it in mind for Christmas gifts. On next Tuesday, Oct. 26, Mrs. Clarence Spence will entertain the Missionary Society. Plans will be perfected for the "Day of Prayer", a reception for the new pastor, Rev. Higbee and family and a merchants' lunch up town.

A. S. McNAMANT
Candidate for Representative from the 10th District, Lincoln county. Mr. McManant is one of the most

E. M. SPICKLEY
Candidate for Senator from the 18th District. Mr. Spickley is a native of the Old Northwest State; came to New Mexico seven years ago, the last ten of which he has lived in Lincoln county. He is a member of the First National Bank of Carrizozo, and president of the Carrizozo Normal at Willard and the Carrizozo State at Corona. He has a substantial acquaintance with interested

CROOKED TRAILS AND STRAIGHT

William MacLeod Raine

COPYRIGHT BY G.W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

"I'M GLAD YOU'RE GLAD."

Byronia, a woman of red hair, rather than a woman of black hair, as she was called by her father, Curly Flandrau and his boys, became involved in a horse-stealing adventure. "Dinner" was the name of the horse, a brown Arabian, the best specimen of the breed in the town of Saguache, Ariz. The horse was stolen by a posse and Curly taken captive, after he had shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison, a former fighting shortie. "Cullison's friends determine to track Curly as an example to settle things. With the posse around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter. Luck questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a powerful influence over the outlaws' son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes with Curly. Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap. At the Indian ranch he discovers that the outlaw is Sam Cullison's rival for Laura London's hand. Flandrau, visiting Stone's ranch, is convinced a train robbery is being planned. Sam leaves the ranch for Saguache, Curly accompanies him. Kava-dropping, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Kate Black, arrange to hold up the train at Tin Cup crossing and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly considers in Luck. Stone is forced to leave town. The express office in Saguache is robbed of $20,000. Luck disappears and is suspected by the sheriff of the crime.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

To Bolt his disappearance was as good as a confession of guilt. He searched Luck's room at the hotel. Among other things, he found an old envelope with interesting data penciled on it.

Before nightfall the word was whispered all over Saguache that Luck Cullison, pioneer cattleman and former sheriff, was suspected of the W. & S. express robbery and had fled to save himself from arrest. At first men marvelled that one so well known and so popular, one who had been so prominent in affairs, could be suspected of such a crime, but as they listened to the evidence and saw it fall like blocks of a building into place, the conviction grew that he was the masked bandit wanted by the sheriff.

Red-headed Bob Cullison finished making the diamond hitch and proudly called his cousin Kate to inspect the packhorse.

"You never saw the hitch thrown better, sis," he bragged, boylike. "Uncle Luck says I do it well as he can."

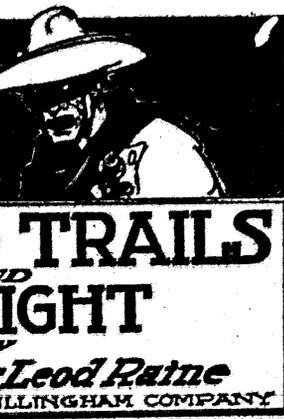

"It's fine, Bob," his cousin agreed, with the proper enthusiasm in her dark eyes. "You'll have to teach me how to do it one of these days."

She was in a khaki riding skirt, and she pulled herself to the saddle of her own horse. From this position she gave him final instructions before leaving.

It had been on Wednesday morning that Luck Cullison disappeared from the face of the earth. Before twenty-four hours the gossip was being whispered in the most distant cañons of Papago county. The riders of the Circle O knew it, but none of them had yet told either Bob or Kate.

Now it was Friday morning and Kate was beginning to wonder why her father did not call her up. Could it be that Soapy Stone was pulling off his train robbery at Tin Cup and her father so busy that he could not take time to ride to a telephone station? She did not like to leave the ranch just now, even for a few hours, but other business called her away. Sweeney was holding down the fort at the Del Oro against Flandrau's sheepherders, and his weekly supply of provisions had to be taken to him. Stone she wanted to see with her own eyes how things were getting along at the canon, she was taking the mule-trail in person.

She rode from midnight into meadow and then shadow to midnight again, winding along the hill trail that took her toward the Del Oro. After hours of travel she came to the saddle from which she looked down to the gap in the canon walls that had been the common watering place of all men's cattle. Not only was it surrounded by her father's men, but she could see the men who had ridden the mule-trail to the canyon on the other side, some grating words, Sweeney's horse in the canon, and the mule-trail of a lone horseman.

recks in such a way that it could not be withdrawn.

Kate pulled the boulder away, and released the prisoner. She took the soft, woolly creature in her arms, and examined the wounded limb, all torn and raw from its efforts to escape. A wound, she recalled, ought to be washed with cold water and bound. Returning to her horse, she put the little animal in front of the saddle and continued on the trail that led down to the river.

Sweeney came out from the cabin and hailed her. He was a squat, weather-beaten man, who had ridden for her father ever since she could remember.

"What in Mexico you got there?" he asked in surprise.

She explained the circumstances under which she had found the lamb.

"And what you aiming to do with it?"

"I'm going to tie up its leg and take it across the river. Some of the C. F. herdsmen are sure to find it before night."

"Eh! What are you feeling with Cass Fendrick's sheep feet?" he grumbled.

"It isn't a sheep, but a lamb. And I'm not going to see it suffer, no matter who owns it. I'll just ride across and leave it outside the fence," she said.

"Lemme go. I know the river better."

Sweeney did not wait for her consent, but swung to the saddle. She handed him the lamb, and he forded the stream.

Sweeney saw some one disappear into a wash as he reached the fence. The rider held up the lamb, jabbered a sentence of broncho Spanish at the spot where the man had been, put down his bleating burden, and cantered back to his own side of the river.

An hour later, Kate, on the return trip, topped the rise where she had found the lamb. Pulling up her pony, to rest the horse from its climb, she gazed back across the river to the rolling ridges among which lay the C. F. ranch. Oddly enough, she had never seen Cass Fendrick. He had come to Papago county a few years before, and had bought the place from an earlier settler. In the disagreement that had fallen between the two men, she was wholly on the side of her father. Sometimes she had wondered what manner of man this Cass Fendrick might be; disagreeable, of course, but after precisely what fashion?

"Your property, I believe, Miss Cullison."

She turned at sound of the suave, amused drawl, and looked upon a dark, slim young man of picturesque appearance. He was bowing to her with an obvious intention of overdoing it.

Her instinct told the girl who he was. She did not need to ask herself any longer what Cass Fendrick looked like.

He was holding out to her the blood-stained kerchief that had been tied to the lamb's leg.

"I didn't care to have it returned," she told him with cold civility.

"Now, if you'd only left a note to say so, it would have saved me quite a considerable climb," he suggested.

In spite of herself a flicker of amusement lit her eyes. She had a sense of humor. "I did not think of that, and since you have troubled to return it to me, I can only say thank you."

She held out her hand for the kerchief, but he did not move. "I don't know but what I'll keep it, after all, for a souvenir."

She ignored his sardonic mockery. "I don't let live creatures suffer when I can help it. Are you going to give me my handkerchief?"

"Haven't made up my mind yet. Perhaps I'll have it washed and bring it home to you."

She decided he was trying to flirt with her, and turned the head of her horse to start.

"Now your father has pulled his freight, I expect it will be safe to exit," he added.

The bride reins tightened. "What occasions are you saying about my father?"

"No news, Miss Cullison; just what everybody is saying, that he has gone to cover on account of the holdup."

A chill fear gripped her heart. "Do you mean the holdup of the Linedale at Tin Cup?"

"No I don't." He looked at her sharply. "Mean to say you haven't heard of the holdup of the W. & S. Express company at Saguache?"

"No, when was it?"

"Monday night. The men got away with the money, but the horse was left behind."

"And you mean the holdup of the Linedale at Tin Cup?"

CHAPTER III

"Ain't she the damnest little thoroughbred?"

Kate galloped into the ranch plaza around which the buildings were set, slipped from her pony, and ran at once to the telephone. Bob was on a side perch mending a bridle.

"Have you heard anything from dad?" she cried through the open door.

"None," he answered, hammering down a rivet.

Kate called up the hotel where Mackenzie was staying at Saguache, but could not get him. She asked in turn for Mackenzie, for Yeater, for Alec Flandrau.

While she waited for an answer, the girl moved nervously about the room. She could not sit down or settle herself at anything. For some instinct told her that Fendrick's name was not a lie cut out of whole cloth.

The bell rang. Instantly she was at the telephone. Mackenzie was at the other end of the line.

"Oh, Uncle Mac," she had called him twice ever since she could remember.

He stumbled back half blind with pain.

"What is it they are saying about dad? Tell me it isn't true," she begged.

"A pack of lies, lassie." His Scotch idiom and accent had accustomed to thirty years on the plains, but when he became excited it rose triumphant through the acquired speech of the Southwest.

"Then is he there—in Saguache, I mean?"

"No-o. He's not in town."

"Hoot! He'll just have gone somewhere on business."

He did not bluff well. Through the hearty assurance she pierced to the note of trouble in his voice.

"You're hiding something from me, Uncle Mac. I won't have it. You tell me the truth—the whole truth."

In three sentences he sketched it for her, and when he had finished he knew by the sound of her voice that she was greatly frightened.

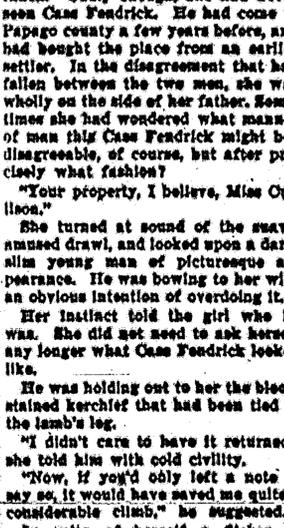

"Something has happened to him. I'm coming to town. I'll bring Bob. Save us two rooms at the hotel."

She turned to her cousin, who was making his way to her elbow.

"What is it, Kate? Has anything happened to Uncle Mac?"

She swallowed a lump in her throat. "No, not yet. Nobody knows where he is—the horse—that he rode the W. & S. Express company."

Sweeney had just rode down into the canyon on the other side and seen

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Had her father somehow got into trouble trying to save Sam?

"Oh, I'm saying nothing. But what Sheriff Bolt means is that when he gets his hands on Luck Cullison he'll have the man that can tell him where that twenty thousand is."

"It's a lie."

He waved his hand airily, as one who declined responsibility in the matter, but his dark, saturnine face sparkled with malice.

"Maybe so. Seems to be some evidence, but I reckon he can explain that away—when he comes back. The holdup dropped a hat with the initials L. C. in the band, since identified as his. He had lost a lot of money at poker. Next day he paid it. He had no money in the bank, but maybe he found it growing on a cactus bush."

"You liar!" she panted, eyes blazing.

"I'll take that from you, my dear, because you look so blamed pretty when you're mad; but I wouldn't take it from him—from your father, who is hiding out in the hills somewhere."

Anger surged within her in an inarticulate cry. He had come close to her, and was standing beside the stirrup, one hand upon the reins. Her skirt went swiftly up and down, cut like a thin bar of red-hot iron across his uplifted face. He stumbled back, half blinded with the pain. Before he could realize what had happened the spur on her little boot touched the side of the pony and it was off with a bound. She was galloping wildly down the trail toward home.

He looked after her, fingers caressing the wall that burned his cheek.

"You'll pay for that, Kate Cullison," he said aloud to himself.

CHAPTER III

"Ain't she the damnest little thoroughbred?"

Kate galloped into the ranch plaza around which the buildings were set, slipped from her pony, and ran at once to the telephone. Bob was on a side perch mending a bridle.

"Have you heard anything from dad?" she cried through the open door.

"None," he answered, hammering down a rivet.

Kate called up the hotel where Mackenzie was staying at Saguache, but could not get him. She asked in turn for Mackenzie, for Yeater, for Alec Flandrau.

While she waited for an answer, the girl moved nervously about the room. She could not sit down or settle herself at anything. For some instinct told her that Fendrick's name was not a lie cut out of whole cloth.

The bell rang. Instantly she was at the telephone. Mackenzie was at the other end of the line.

"Oh, Uncle Mac," she had called him twice ever since she could remember.

He stumbled back half blind with pain.

"What is it they are saying about dad? Tell me it isn't true," she begged.

"A pack of lies, lassie." His Scotch idiom and accent had accustomed to thirty years on the plains, but when he became excited it rose triumphant through the acquired speech of the Southwest.

"Then is he there—in Saguache, I mean?"

"No-o. He's not in town."

"Hoot! He'll just have gone somewhere on business."

He did not bluff well. Through the hearty assurance she pierced to the note of trouble in his voice.

"You're hiding something from me, Uncle Mac. I won't have it. You tell me the truth—the whole truth."

In three sentences he sketched it for her, and when he had finished he knew by the sound of her voice that she was greatly frightened.

"Something has happened to him. I'm coming to town. I'll bring Bob. Save us two rooms at the hotel."

She turned to her cousin, who was making his way to her elbow.

"What is it, Kate? Has anything happened to Uncle Mac?"

She swallowed a lump in her throat. "No, not yet. Nobody knows where he is—the horse—that he rode the W. & S. Express company."

Sweeney had just rode down into the canyon on the other side and seen

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"No."

"He rode out to camp in with you, but if he didn't meet you by ten he was to come back. You took the north road, I reckon?"

"Yes."

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her into the hotel with cheerful talk.

"Come along, Bob. We're going to tuck away a good supper first off. While you're eating, I'll tell you all there is to be told."

Kate opened her lips to say that she was not hungry and could not possibly eat a bite, but she thought better of it. Bob had tasted nothing since noon, and of course he must be fed.

Curly came into the room, and the girl rose to meet him. He took her little hand in his tanned muscular one, and somehow from his grip she gathered strength.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said simply.

"I'm glad you're glad," he smiled cheerfully.

He knew she had been crying, that she was suffering cruelly, but he offered her courage rather than maudlin sympathy. Hope seemed to flow through her veins at the meeting of the eyes. Whatever a man could do for her would be done by Curly.

They talked the situation over together.

"As it looks to me, we've got to find out two things—first, what has become of your father and, second, who did steal that money. I don't see it yet, but there's some link between the two things. I mean between the robbery and his disappearance."

"How do you mean?" Kate asked.

"Well say the robbers were his enemies—some of the Soapy Stone outfit, maybe. They have got him out of the way to satisfy their grudge and to make people think he did it. Unfortunately there is evidence that makes it look as if he might have done it—what they call corroborating testimony."

"What does Sheriff Bolt think?"

Curly waved the sheriff aside. "It don't matter what he thinks, Miss Kate. He says he thinks Luck was mixed up in the holdup. Maybe that's what he thinks, but we don't want to forget that Cass Fendrick made him sheriff and your father fought him to a fare-you-well."

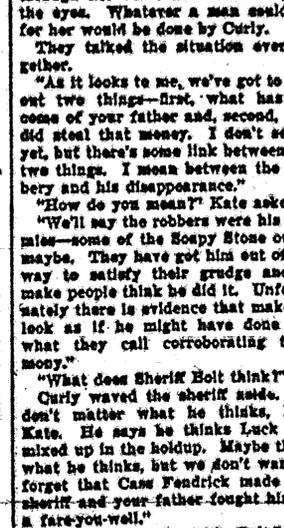

"I'd like to talk with Bolt," the young woman announced.

"All right," Mackenzie assented. "Tomorrow he's in."

"No, tonight, Uncle Mac."

The cattleman looked at her in surprise. Her voice rang with decision. Her slight figure seemed compact with energy and resolution. Was this the girl who had been in helpless tears not ten minutes before?

"I'll see if he's at his office. Maybe he'll come up," Curly said.

Uncle Luck come back. He'll make 'em sick for talking about him."

His cousin nodded, looking down her nose. "Of course. It'll come out all right—as soon as he gets out what they're saying. Saddle two horses right away, Bob."

"Sure. We'll soon find where he is, I bet you."

The setting sun found their journey less than half done. Kate was tortured with anxiety. Deep within her something desired that her father could be gone out of a world so good. And if he were alive, Curly and Dick between them, Luck Cullison had plenty of good friends who would not stand by and see him wronged.

Any theory of his disappearance that accepted his guilt did not occur to her mind for an instant. The two had been very close to each other. Luck had been in the habit of saying smilingly that she was his major dome, his right bower. Some share of his lawless temperament she inherited, enough to feel sure that this particular kind of wrongdoing was impossible for him. He was reckless, sometimes passionate, but she did not need to reassure herself that he was scrupulously honest.

This brought her back to the only other tenable hypothesis—foul play. And from this she shrank with a quaking heart. For surely if his enemies wished to harm him they would do it openly, and this was a conclusion against which she fought desperately. The place clock boomed ten strokes as they rode into Saguache. Mackenzie was waiting for them on the steps of the hotel.

"Have they—has anything been—?"

The owner of the Fiddiebeck shook his grizzled head. "Not yet. Didn't you meet Curly?"

"

Model City Being Erected for Italian Workers

San Oswald, near Udine, Italy, is to become a model city. The photograph shows permanent stucco homes being built for workmen. Wide streets and model sanitary conditions are promised for the new city. Hundreds of homes were destroyed by a recent great powder explosion, and hundreds of children are being cared for at present by the Red Cross (junior division) of America.

Boy Prodigy to Enter Harvard

Thirteen-year-Old Lad Is Proficient in French, Spanish and Greek.

IS "BABE RUTH" OF HIS TEAM

Parents as Proud of His Ability as a Baseball Player as of His Scholastic Attainments—Knows How to Concentrate.

Wapwallopen, Pa.—Frederick Santee, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Santee, who, at the age of thirteen, will leave town in a few days to enter Harvard university, is the Babe Ruth of his baseball team. And his parents are just as proud of that, if not prouder, than the fact that their son will be among the youngest regular students ever to enter Harvard.

"I'd rather play ball than eat," is Frederick's way of expressing it, showing that he reads the sporting pages as well as his textbooks in French, Spanish and analytical geometry.

Frederick is an only son. His parents are of English descent. His father is a physician, as was his grandfather. His mother was a teacher. The parents' idea is that their son is not precocious, but much like other boys, except he knows how to concentrate and is willing to work.

For instance, Frederick will play a hard game of baseball and get so tired that one would think he was about to drop. But instead of resting he will get out a French book and read, recuperating in that fashion. He likes good lectures and he can sit through an entire lecture without getting drowsy, his mother says.

When Fred was two years old he began to spell words almost as soon as he could walk," his mother said. "We encouraged him and taught him as much as we could for a child of that age. He began to spell entire sentences in a few weeks. Before he was three years old he had learned the multiplication table. Graduated when Thirteen Years Old.

"At the age of eleven he entered the Wilkes-Barre High school. He finished two years in one and then we moved to Philadelphia. He was grad-

Wore Only Shirt and Lantern to Flag Train

Winsted, Conn.—When Thomas J. Doyle of Waterbury, a New Haven railroad brakeman, stood on a grade crossing in Torrington with a lantern in his hand and nothing but a shirt on his back, some one notified the police and Doyle was escorted to the police station by Patrolman Hurbit. Then he cursed.

In court Doyle said he was in the caboose changing his rain-soaked clothes and that before he had a chance to put others on it became necessary for him to run to the crossing and signal the approach of a locomotive.

uated from the Central High school last summer when he was thirteen.

"Fred took second honors in French. Among those who came up for the entrance examination to Harvard he was the only one who wore short trousers. He was usually finished before the others and he got a good grade.

"Latin and German he began studying when he was nine years old. Since then he has learned to read French, Spanish and Greek fluently. He prefers reading French or Spanish to Finnish and he has a good French library. In the last four years he has had four years of Latin, three years of French and nearly the same amount of Spanish and German. He has never studied much Greek, but he reads it well.

"Fred expects to follow in his father's footsteps, studying the Latin-Scientific course at Harvard and upon his graduation taking up medicine."

Call Him Second Babe Ruth. That the boy's prowess is not limited to books is testified to by the other youngsters of Wapwallopen. He holds the same position relatively on the boys' team as Babe Ruth does on the Yankees. He can pitch a little, too, and on the bases he's a whirlwind. Baseball is the only sport he has taken up.

Between cries of "Atta boy!" and "Give him another!" the boy verified his mother's statement that he expected to be a doctor.

The boy is about the usual height for his age, and his lithe, well-built and muscled body shows no sign of any wearing out on account of study. Frederick does considerable work in the house, his mother says, and is never content unless he is doing something—a trait natural for a boy of thirteen.

"He has been so busy playing ball this summer," his mother said, "that he has not had much time for work. Of course, he reads French or Spanish at night or gets out his chemical outfit and does some experiment that his father pointed over in college.

SOVIET FEARS PEACE

Estonian Says Demobilized Troops Would Revolt.

Unemployment New Critical Problem Throughout the Whole of Russia.—On Last Leg.

London.—Just as imperialism killed czarism so will imperialism be the death of Russian socialism, according to a prediction made to a press correspondent by M. Phip, the Estonian foreign minister in London, analyzing the consequences of the bolshevik offensive in Poland.

While foreign minister last year M. Phip pitted his wits against the bolsheviks at Dzerpet, and he is regarded as one of the best authorities in Europe on Russian political and economic conditions.

M. Phip asserted that Russia's economic condition was rapidly getting worse, because this season's crop was a failure. He said it was not unlikely that the cities will soon be wholly depopulated.

"The soviet government dare not reduce its enormous army," he concluded. "Unemployment is now a critical problem throughout the whole of Russia, and, if the men who as soldiers are comparatively well cared for were thrown on their own resources a revolution would result. The chief terror which the soviet rulers have to face is peace and demobilization."

In common with representatives here of other Russian border states, M. Phip is watching with profound concern the developments in Poland.

"The bolsheviks are fighting Poland with the allies' ammunition which they captured from Doukha and Kolchak," he said. "This is now almost exhausted, and Russia cannot renew it."

Discussing the possibility of an attack by the bolsheviks on Estonia, M. Phip said:

"We are ready for them. The Estonian frontier is now closed by our troops, except the gates through which we are trading with Russia. The soviet government must know that if it should succeed in obtaining a foothold in Methonia the allies would instantly cut off Russia from the vitally needed supplies it is now receiving through us. We might perish, but soviet Russia would go down with us."

ITALIANS FIGHT LONG DUEL

Seek Each Other's Blood for Half a Day, Then Decide to Kiss and Make Up.

Rome.—The world's longest duel has just been fought here between Signor Giovanni Fainio and Signor Domenico Durante, who quarreled in a fashionable restaurant. This duel began at 8:30 in the morning and raged furiously under a blazing sun until noon with neither swordsman able to break his foe's defense. At noon they quit because they were hungry and thirsty, kissed each other and then, arm in arm, adjourned to a neighboring cafe.

Chick's Crop Holds Lost Diamond Ring

Macon, Mo.—While preparing a chicken for dinner Mrs. Owen Dimmick of this city found in its crop a valuable diamond ring. The ring she instantly recognized as one belonging to her neighbor, Mrs. John Thomas, who lost it about six weeks ago.

Naturally the loss occasioned Mrs. Thomas considerable worry, and she searched everywhere for it. She even consulted the fortune teller who was here with the carnival, and the fortune teller told Mrs. Thomas that she could locate the missing ring if she would go to a dry goods store and purchase $4 worth of certain goods wanted by the fortune teller. Mrs. Thomas didn't see the connection and declined to invest.

HUNT FOR EEL DATA

Danish Scientist Hopes to Gather Interesting Information.

Seeks for Spawning Eel, Something That Has Never Yet Been Seen—Quick Death After Maturity.

Copenhagen, Wales.—Dr. Johannes Schmidt, a Danish scientist, is scouring the Atlantic between the Azores and the West Indies for spawning fresh water eels, which the eye of man has never seen. This announcement was made by Dr. V. A. Lindeman, professor of oceanography at Liverpool university, in his presidential address before the annual conference of the British association.

In immaturity, at least near the end of their lives the large male and female yellow eels undergo a change in appearance and in nature. They acquire a silvery color and their eyes enlarge, and in this bridal attire they commence the long journey which ends in maturity, reproduction and death.

They migrate in the autumn to the coast, from the inshore seas to the open ocean and still westward and south to the mid-Atlantic and we know not how much farther, for the exact locality and manner of spawning have still to be discovered.

"The youngest known stage of the eel, the leptocephalus, the larval stage of eels, have been found by Doctor Schmidt to the west of the Azores, where the water is over 2,000 fathoms in depth. There were about one-third of an inch in length and were probably not long spawning fresh water eel, in the intermediate waters somewhere above the abysses of the open ocean."

RUSSIAN WOMEN PAY TO WED

Give High Prices for Finnish Husbands in Order to Leave the Country.

Viborg, Finland.—Hiring Finnish men to marry Russian women, to enable the latter to get out of Russia has become a popular and lucrative business in the border towns south of Viborg.

The Finns exact a high price, but the method is unflinching. It makes a Finnish subject of the woman, and is recognized as lawful by the two countries, which have assumed diplomatic relations. Russian trouble-makers of course, if the woman thus freed of Russia, refused to part with her pounds instead.

DYE RIGHT

Buy only "Diamond Dyes"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye worn, shabby skirts, waists, dresses, coats, gloves, stockings, sweaters, draperies, everything, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods, new, rich fast colors. Have druggist show you "Diamond Dyes Color Card."—Adv.

No Favoritism Allowed. "How much are the life guards paid at this bathing resort?" "From $40 to $60 a week, I understand."

"A soft job, eh?" "Not especially. They have to show as much alertness in saving a fat man as a slender splinter as they would a beauty in distress."

CASCARETS

"They Work while you Sleep"

Do you feel all "unstrung?"—bilious, constipated, headachy, full of cold? Cascarets tonight for your liver and bowels will have you tuned up by tomorrow. You will wake up with your head clear, stomach right, breath sweet, and skin rosy. No griping—no inconvenience. Children love Cascarets too. 10, 25, 50 cents.—Adv.

Adaptability. "Of course, you are in favor of votes for women."

"Of course," answered Senator Borah. "A man who hopes to hold his own in politics must do his best to be in favor of anything that anybody wants."—Washington Star.

Cataract Can Be Cured

Cataract is a local disease greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. It therefore requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is an internally used eye-wash through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE destroys the foundation of the disease, gives the patient strength by improving the general health and enables nature to do her work. All Druggists, Circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Misleading. "You call her a fair sample of the beauty of the planet?" "We so consider her." "How can she be a fair sample when she's a brunette?"

BÖCHEE'S SYRUP

A Harmless Soothing, Healing Remedy for Coughs and Colds.

Here is a remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation, and especially for lung troubles, that has been sold all over the civilized world in many thousands of households for the last fifty-four years. Its merits have stood the test of time and use, and surely no test could be more potent or convincing. It gives the patient with weak and inflamed lungs a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Try one bottle, accept no substitute. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere.—Adv.

Deused, at it Were. No man can carry water on both shoulders and make much headway. He gets cold water thrown on him from all angles and acquires the appearance of a drowned rat.

"Papa's Disappearin'" Corrects Stomach. "Papa's Disappearin'" is the quickest, surest relief for indigestion, Gas, Flatulence, Heartburn, Sourness, Fermentation or Stomach Distress caused by acidity. A few tablets give almost immediate stomach relief and shortly the stomach is corrected so you can eat favorite foods without fear. Large case costs only 25 cents at drug store. Absolutely harmless and pleasant. Millions helped annually. Best stomach corrective known.—Adv.

Best Weather Sign. Those who live by the coast do not want a better weather sign than the gulls, which in the various winds that will bring the rain collect in big flocks over the land, wheeling and screaming uselessly. They will not come in on a false alarm, and none need fear they will make a mistake.

Important to Mothers. Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, that famous old remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the signature of Dr. J. C. Watson.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria.

Master Apprehension. "That audience cheered you for at least half an hour." "Yes, but I didn't expect to hear that I was a master of my own destiny."

Southwest News

From All Over New Mexico and Arizona

Western Newspaper Union News Service. The Agricultural Agent for Pima County, Mr. C. B. Brown; the Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Hazel Zimmerman, and the President of the Arizona Farm Bureau, Mr. C. E. Brown now have their headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building at Tucson.

The Kinsore Cattle Company, one of the largest in Texas, has opened an office in Las Vegas, N. Mex. The company's main office is in San Antonio, but, owing to the large amount of business in New Mexico, it was considered best to maintain an office in the state.

Bringing added assurance that the attendance at the 1920 Arizona State Fair, November 8 to 13, will far surpass that of any previous year, railroad officials announced that a rate of one fare and a half for the round trip from any Arizona point to Phoenix would be in effect at fair time.

For the first time in the history of the institution, the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts will send stock judging teams to the Royal Stock Show at Kansas City and the International Stock Show in Chicago. These shows are to be held the first and second weeks in November.

The Western Ice & Bottling Company of Albuquerque has let the contract to Gay & Son, contractors of Los Angeles, for a $100,000 addition to its plant. The addition will more than double the capacity of the plant and will greatly increase the cold storage facilities. The work will be started in a few days and will be completed by the first of the year.

Work on the eleven-mile gap in the Colorado-Gulf Highway has been started under the management of Mr. McGuire, superintendent of the construction work for the state highway department. This part of this road has been in bad condition for the past two years and the improvement will mean much to the citizens of that section of New Mexico, as it will provide a good road all the way to Clayton from Des Moines.

Ward Shepard, forest supervisor, has announced that the gross receipts from grazing, timber sales and other resources of the Manzano National Forest in New Mexico for the past year will total more than $26,000, of which $9,000 will be turned over to the state and counties in which the forest is located. The forest pays twenty-five per cent of its receipts to the school fund of the state and ten per cent to the roads.

The population of Clovis, N. Mex., within the corporate limits, not including any of the additions, as given out by the census bureau at Washington, D. C., is 4,004 and that of Curry county, 11,826. Melrose population is given as 365 and Texico 361. Owing to the influx of people since the census was taken, it is thought that the census at the present time will run at least 5,000, and that of the entire county over 15,000.

Probably the biggest suit ever instituted in the state of Arizona involving taxes has been started by the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company and the International Smelter Company, petitioning for a refund of more than $1,000,000 paid as excess taxes in the years 1917-1918 and 1919. The Inspiration's suit alone calls for a refund of $1,204,408.44, and the suit is filed in two different complaints, calling for a refund of $904,224.44 for the year 1918, and $570,182 for the year 1919.

The sweet potato industry is booming in the vicinity of Portales, N. Mex., and the crop this year will be the largest in history. Although this industry is only about five years old, it is said to be one of the best money producers in the valley. The acreage will be greatly increased during the coming year.

Assessed valuation placed on private car lines will be announced shortly by the Arizona state tax commission. The private car lines have paid approximately $30,000 annually to the state in taxes. It was understood that the assessed valuation would be increased this year, the amount of money to be collected depending on the average tax rate of the state.

Several persons were injured in an automobile accident about a mile west of Magdalena, N. Mex. A Ford touring car, driven by Miss Beesie Craig, struck a small pile of dirt in the road and one of the front wheels collapsed, causing the car to turn completely over. Miss Craig suffered a broken collar bone and the other occupants of the car were more or less shaken up so that they required medical attention.

George Duermeyer was held to answer to the superior court on a charge of manslaughter at the end of a preliminary examination at Phoenix and his bond was fixed at $5,000. The charge related to the death of J. H. Gill, real estate agent, who died recently as a result of receiving a fractured skull when he was dealt a blow and fell, striking his head on cement curbing.

LIFE WAS A MISERY TO HER

Says this Woman Until Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

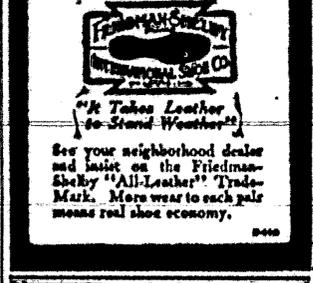

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my weakness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was a misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a state hospital and am feeling fine. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to dozens of my friends and shall always recommend it."—LILLIAN TRAPP, 234 E. 9th St., Carrollton, Ky.

If you have any symptoms about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

$5.00 Cash and a New Pair of Shoes will be given to the wearer who finds PAPER in the brock, counters, insoles or outsoles of any shoes made by us, bearing this trade-mark.

Recently at one of the towns on the Canadian border a goat severely bitten a lunchback, and a sharp-eyed customs official perceived that, succeeding the assault, the man's hump was out of place. Upon further examination it was found that the man was perfectly formed, though diminutive, and that his "hump," when detached, was a two-quart receptacle filled with whiskey.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The paid of a lost love is what many a woman has paid for a home.

Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in a rural district and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed one of his prescriptions, which he called "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores of the United States so that the public could easily obtain this very remarkable tonic, corrective and blood-maker. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks—a corrective remedy, the ingredients of which nature had put in the fields and forests, for keeping us healthy. Few folks or families now living have not at sometime or other used this "Golden Medical Discovery" for the stomach, liver and heart. Over twenty-four million bottles of this tonic and blood remedy have been sold in this country.

A Bad Cough

Carrizozo News

Oldest and Leading Newspaper in Circulation in Lincoln County, New Mexico
 Subscription, in advance, $2.00 per Year
 Advertising Rates: 10¢ per line per week
 Entered as Second Class Matter at the Postoffice at Carrizozo, New Mexico, June 2, 1906.
 JNO. A. HALEY - Editor and Publisher
 FRIDAY, OCT. 23, 1920

For President
JAMES M. COX
 For Vice-President
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

Harding Backs Down

Senator Harding made a statement in an address recently to this effect:

"France has sent her spokesman to me informally, asking America, in her new realization, to the situation, to lead the way for an association of nations."

When the Senator was taken to task by the president of the United States for the utterance of the quoted expression, the senator hurriedly responded to the communication, that he was sure that his words could not be construed to say that the French government had sent any one to him. "The thought I was trying to convey," he said, "was that there had come to me those who spoke a sentiment which they represented to be very manifest among the French people, but nothing could suggest the French government having violated the proprieties of international relations."

Of course, all are willing to agree that the French government didn't and wouldn't "violate the proprieties of international relations," but are not so sure that was what "the thought I was trying to convey" when the original statement was made.

Is it any wonder, then, that the lesser politicians, who hail the senator as chief, are so utterly reckless in the manner of statements?

When You Vote

November 2nd consider the up-standing qualities of John L. Bryan, candidate for assessor. John Bryan is an upright, honorable man, will do his duty to all and voters may rely implicitly on his integrity and fair dealing.

Articles 10 and 23

The people of this community were given an invitation, by printed dodger, to appear at Lutz Hall last Friday night and listen to a delivery of a speech by Colonel George W. Prichard. And the invitation specifically stated, "If you want to hear the TRUTH about the League of Nations and State Issues, Come out and hear him."

Article 10—"The members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

Now those present who "held the book" on the Colonel, and checked his rendition with the text, assert that he "niggered" on the last sentence. And yet he was cheered quite lustily as making a good point.

Article 23—"Subject to and in accordance with the terms of ing, or hereafter to be agreed upon, the members of the League: (a) will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions for men, women, and children, both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and for that purpose will establish and maintain the necessary international organizations;

(b) undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under their control;

(c) will intrust the League with the general supervision over the execution of agreements with regard to the traffic in women and children, and the traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs;

(d) will intrust the League with the general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest;

(e) will make provision to secure and maintain freedom of communications and of transport and equitable treatment for the commerce of all Members of the League. In this connection, the special necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914-1918 shall be borne in mind;

(f) will endeavor to take steps in matters of international concern for the prevention and control of disease."

Again the colonel "side-stepped", emaculated the article and had no interest in the article as a whole, but found a "mar's nest" in paragraph (e) relating to the traffic in women and children, drugs, and etc. Notwithstanding his failure to read the entire article, the colonel bore down with all his heavy artillery on Par. (c), and in stentorian tones asked if the good women present would support any such nefarious proposition. And again he got applause—from two classes, one of which desired a point made against the League, and the other unaware the colonel was using sophistry and was unfairly stressing one paragraph, only, of Article 23.

It would appear, from the declarations of opponents of the League, that the Covenant contained so many objectionable features that all that is necessary is to present the text without emasculation and attack it upon its demerits. And there are speakers who do that, for they are opposed to any League and are fighting it as it is written and are not pursuing an ignis fatuus, injecting something into it that does not exist, and holding that up to the public as a goblin of such hideous form that many are really frightened over the probable result.

The whole League question has been before the people so long and it has been discussed so freely that the people have become tired of it; but that does not justify misrepresentation, nor a conclusion drawn from a sentence in an article that contains only two sentences, nor from one paragraph of an article that contains six paragraphs, excluding the introduction. We wish again to call attention to the dodger which urged everybody to come out and hear the truth, but the knowing ones know that they didn't hear the WHOLE TRUTH.

Only Ask America to play fair with World

Baltimore, Md.—Europe is still unsettled and hoping the United States will play fair with the rest of the world, according to Brig-Gen. John M. T. Finney, who has just returned here from the Inter-allied Surgical Conference at Paris. Dr. Finney was the chief consulting surgeon for the American Expeditionary Forces during the war. He declares it is "a sin and a shame that America has put herself in the position of breaking faith with her allies."

Referring to America's leadership, in establishing a concord of peace, Gen. Finney said:

"The Europeans cannot understand the position America has taken and, indeed there was very little that could be said by way of explanation. America is placed on the defensive without much of a defense."

Mrs. Wilbur Coe

the Democratic nominee for County School Superintendent is one of the most polished school women in Lincoln county, and possesses splendid executive ability. Her qualifications are: College education; three years in rural schools; one year in Lincoln High School; at present Principal of one of the consolidated schools of the county. Don't forget Mrs. Coe's superior merits on election day.

A Photographer

A first class photographer will be here next week, for a limited time only, prepared to do all kinds of Photo work. advt.

Thanksgiving Turkeys

Place your order at once for a fine Thanksgiving Turkey with
C. A. EDWARDS
 WHITE MOUNTAIN, N. M.

Delivery will be made on all orders at your homes. File your orders on time for delivery before Thanksgiving with

C. A. EDWARDS
 White Mountain, N. M.

ROLLAND'S DRUG STORE

PRESCRIPTIONS

CAREFULLY COMPOUNDED BY REGISTERED PHARMACIST

Noyal's Toilet Articles and Medicine

Ice Cream SODA FOUNTAIN
 Soft Drinks. All Flavors at the

BOOKS MAGAZINES STATIONERY ETC.

Rolland Bros.

FROM the great plains of the Southwest comes a large part of the Nation's meat supply. Many thousands of head of sheep and cattle are shipped from this section of the country each year to the packers, where they are slaughtered and dressed, which helps make up the world's meat supply.

For many years this Bank has assisted this great industry with dependable financial service. To-day we are co-operating actively for its further development.

Stockmens State Bank, CORONA, N. M.

Special Facilities
 For Banquet and Dinner Parties.

Carrizozo Eating House

F. W. GURNEY, Manager.

Table Supplied with the Best the market affords.

FEED YARD

HAY AND GRAIN IN CAR LOTS

All Competition Met in Prices on These Commodities

Roomy Yard - Stalls - Water

Coal and Wood

Wm. Barnett EL PASO AVENUE

Phone 86

The Titsworth Co., Inc.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

We carry in stock—

Kansas Blackleg Serum

Blackleaf "40"

Studebaker Wagons

Barbed Wire

Hog Fence

Dynamite and Fuse

Blasting Caps

Grain Bags

Dry Batteries

Patent Medicines

Toilet Articles

Hot Water Bottles

Rubber Syringes

Mellins Food

Horlick's Malted Milk

Eagle Brand Milk

Nursing Bottles

Toys, Etc., Etc.

Our prices are reasonable

The Titsworth Company, Inc.

CAPITAN, NEW MEXICO

What is a Check?
 A SCRAP of Paper, yet; but more than that: It represents the square deal. It is an expression of business confidence.
 That confidence is shown whenever a check is accepted.
 Your checks will create a feeling of double security if they are drawn on the LINCOLN STATE BANK. To do this will be added a tribute to your judgment in the selection of a bank.

The Lincoln State Bank
 CARRIZOZO, N. M.

RECEIVING TELLER

Messages to Seekers of Success

To Save Your Money and Make Your Money Safe
BANK WITH US

Carrizozo
Transfer and Storage Co.
 Phone 140 for ICE Delivered Daily
Flour, Grain, Hay and Feed
 TRANSFER AND TRUCKAGE

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES
 We are fully equipped to handle your needs in
LUMBER
 Lath, Shingles, Roofing, Paints, and Glass
 Everything for the Builder
Foxworth-Galbraith
 Carrizozo Lumber Co.

Catechism on League

We reproduce below a catechism on the League of Nations presented recently by Judge Holt to a West Virginia audience. It deals with the League in a most comprehensive manner, and yet it is handled in such a simple manner that it may be understood by all. The following is the catechism:

Q. What Nations have adopted the League?

A. All of the principal Nations, forty-one in number. We stand outside with revolutionary Mexico, Bolsheviki Russia, and barbarous Turkey.

Q. What will be the result if we do not go into the League?

A. We will have to establish and maintain a military and naval force sufficient to withstand the world. To do this will cost billions of dollars, entailing excessive taxation upon generations yet unborn; compulsory military training must be had and we lose incalculable productive power from men thus in the army who ought to be pursuing peaceful vocations.

Q. How do the respective candidates stand with regard to this question?

A. Governor Cox stands for the League—Senator Harding stands against it.

Q. What else does the Republican platform propose?

A. A decrease in the amount of money in circulation, thus increasing the value of the dollar in the pockets of the rich, decreasing the wages and increasing the amount of the indebtedness of the laboring man. The Republicans also propose to relieve the capitalist from the payment of income tax, and Excess Profit tax, thus increasing the taxes to be paid by the laboring man.

Q. Is the Monroe Doctrine destroyed by the League of Nations?

A. It is not. The Monroe Doctrine is specifically recognized by Art. 21 of the League of Nations as a required understanding for securing the maintenance of peace and is not to be interfered with by the League.

Q. Does Great Britain have six votes to our one?

A. In the Council, Great Britain has one vote and the United States has one. In the Assembly Great Britain and her dependencies each have a vote. But under Art. 4 decision of the Council or Assembly must be unanimous, so that the one vote of the United States is as effective as though she had a thousand votes. If a dispute should arise between the United States and Great Britain, under Art. 13 it is to be arbitrated. Each would select an equal number of arbitrators, so that is not true that Great Britain has any advantage over the United States in the matter of voting or arbitration.

Q. Is the Constitution of the United States impaired or suspended by the League?

A. It is not. The Constitution of the United States protects American lives only within the territorial limits of the United States. It does not and can not prevent war. The League prevents war and protects American lives anywhere and everywhere on the face of the globe.

Q. What would prevent one Nation from going to war with another?

A. First, it has solemnly agreed not to do so. Second, under Art. 8, it has been agreed to disarm except so far as to keep order within its own borders. Consequently, it would not be in a situation to go to war.

Q. If some Nation in violation of the solemn covenant under the League should declare war against another Nation, what would the League do? Declare war?

A. No. Under Art. 16, every national or social intercourse with it. And this offending Nation would be politically, socially and commercially ostracized—it could neither buy nor sell anything anywhere in the markets of the world; nor would it have any political or social recognition from any of the other Nations of the earth.

The Proof of the Pudding is in the eating, and the people of Lincoln county who know Ralph M. Treat the best are his strongest supporters for county clerk. He was given the nomination for clerk by the Democratic party, but in addition to this he possesses qualifications and a training that makes his candidacy appeal to all parties, and when he enters the office of county clerk he can assume and perform its duties efficiently. He has an experience and knowledge of that office that will be valuable to the people and that he will render that service acceptably to all is denied by none.

School Notes

(By E. E. Cole.)
The art work, by Miss Layer of the seventh grade, is beginning to attract a good deal of attention. The pupils are interested because they see results. It is the same all through life. We are encouraged and built up in our ambitions when we see desirable results. When you come to the High School building go into the seventh and eighth grade room and look at this work.

On the 13th of this month, the barometer at the High School building indicated the true state of the weather. It fell 53 hundredths of an inch. At a quarter of twelve, it made a small jump up, and the wind went down. At one o'clock, it went down again, indicating a light air, and the wind and dust rose at once. When the barometer goes down a great distance and very rapidly, it is an almost absolutely sure sign that a great change in the weather is about to take place, and a storm follows. Many a stockman keeps such a barometer and gets in his cattle before the storm breaks.

One of the most important accomplishments in the schools is penmanship. It is vastly more important than most people think. On receiving a letter, many a person has thrown into the waste basket because he is disgusted with the unreadable stuff. A good position is often gained because the applicant writes a readable hand. During the past week, the superintendent has especially noticed the fine work done in writing in the fifth grade. Mrs. Vaughn writes a fine paper hand as well as a good blackboard hand, and is exciting a desire on the part of her pupils towards good penmanship.

L. L. Ernst Dies

The report reached here Wednesday of the death of L. L. Ernst at Tucumcari. Mr. Ernst was a well known jeweler at Tucumcari and watch inspector for the E. P. & S. W. He often visited Carrizozo and had many friends here who regret to hear of his death. John K. Such, local jeweler and watch inspector at this point, went to Tucumcari upon receiving notice, and the vacancy thus caused may result in a change of his plans.

What's the Matter With

Ben F. Nabours for county surveyor? He is well qualified for the position and will render valuable service to the people in that capacity. Give Ben the once over, and when you have done so bid him with your vote.

Put Our Bread on Your Table

and everybody will be satisfied. White as snow, light as a feather, toothsome as cake, it is bread that adds to the enjoyment of every meal. And it is always the same. Day in and day out our bread is the same perfect article. Because we always use the same fine materials. Why not try it

It's dollars to doughnuts—

no man ever smoked a better cigarette at any price!

CAMELS quality, and their expert blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos hand you a cigarette that will satisfy every smoke desire you ever expressed. You will prefer this Camel blend to either kind smoked straight!

Camels mellow-mildness will certainly appeal to you. The "body" is all there, and that smoothness! It's a delight!

Go the limit with Camels! They will not tire your taste. And they leave no unpleasant cigarette aftertaste nor unpleasant cigarette odor!

Just compare Camels with any cigarette in the world at any price!

Camels are sold everywhere in scientifically sealed packages of 20 cigarettes for 20 cents, or ten packages (200 cigarettes) in a glassine paper covered carton. We strongly recommend this carton for the home or office supply of when you travel.

E. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO CO., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Service Station

Ira O. Wetmore has the material on the ground to begin the erection of a service station. The site is at the end of Alamo-gordo avenue, joining Main street, and almost in front of the postoffice. The station will be one of a series of the Wetmore service stations, one already in operation at Roswell and the next one, following the erection of the one here, to be at Socorro. Besides supplying gas, there will be two rooms in the building—one for oils and one for accessories.

Ed W. Harris.

since receiving the nomination for Sheriff of Lincoln county at the hands of the Democratic party, has gone among the people of all parts of the county and has been given a hearty reception at every point. He quietly visiting the people, making no promises, except the one that he will serve the people, irrespective of party or condition, justly and fairly; and those who know Ed Harris know he will do that; hence he has a strong following throughout the county. A vote for Ed Harris can mean nothing but a vote for good government.

Republican Speakers Here

Senator A. B. Fall, Judge M. C. Mechem, Republican candidate for governor, H. H. Williams, corporation commissioner, and Nestor Montoya, candidate for congress, arrived last evening on a trip through the county. They had addressed meetings at various points in the county during the day and addressed a good audience here last night. They go to Otero county today.

THE "OLD RELIABLE"

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

White Haired Alabama Lady Says She Has Seen Medicines Come and Go But The "Old Reliable" Theford's Black-Draught Came and Stayed.

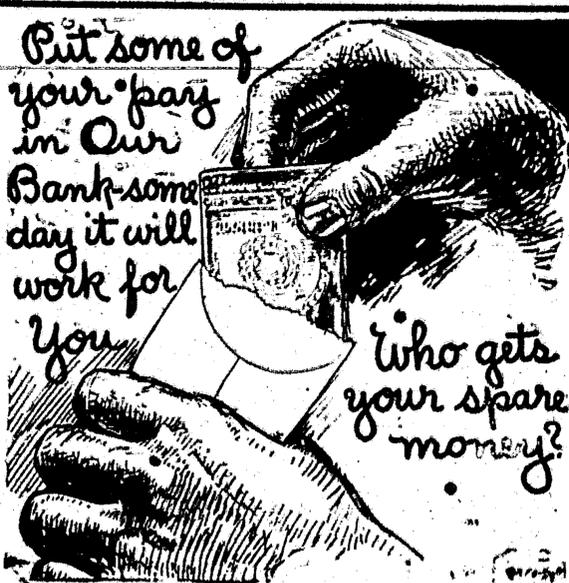

Dutton, Ala.—In recommending Theford's Black-Draught to her friends and neighbors here, Mrs. T. F. Parks, a well-known Jackson County lady, said: "I am getting up in years; my head is pretty white. I have seen medicines and remedies come and go but the old reliable came and stayed. I am talking of Black-draught, a liver medicine we have used for years—one that can be depended upon and one that will do the work."

"Black-Draught will relieve indigestion and constipation if taken right, and I know for I tried it. It is the best thing I have ever found for the full, uncomfortable feeling after meals. Sour stomach and sick headache can be relieved by taking Black-Draught. It aids digestion, also assists the liver in throwing off impurities. I am glad to recommend Black-Draught, and do, to my friends and neighbors."

Theford's Black-Draught is a standard household remedy with a record of over seventy years of successful use. Every one occasionally needs something to help cleanse the system of impurities. Try Black-Draught. Insist upon Theford's, the genuine.

At all druggists. G. 753

What is the use of working unless you bank part of your earnings so that it will some day work for you? He who spends all has nothing; he who banks a part of his earnings regularly must prosper. That's arithmetic.

Let our bank have your spare money on deposit. It piles up as if you leave it in the bank and keep adding to it. It pays.

WE INVITE YOUR BANKING BUSINESS

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Keep the Record Straight

Our attention has been called to a published statement by Sheriff R. A. Duran in which he gives the expenses of his office for the past 21 months to have been $245 02, expenses during two terms of court $893.90. And the statement asks the voters to consider the saving that has resulted to the county.

So far as the statement goes we are quite willing to accept Mr. Duran's figures and to allow him all the credit he deserves; but, in order to put the records straight and place before the people the reasons why the expenses of the sheriff's office have been small, compared to those of the past, we wish to add to that statement:

A law now exists which permits the sheriff to make his summons in court matters by registered mail, and the cost of making service is almost wholly confined to postage. In other words for 12 cents Uncle Sam carries a letter to the remotest parts of the county, whereas, under the old system of personal service it would, or might, cost $12 00

We commend Mr. Duran for his practice of economy, but must insist that powers beyond his control made it possible for this saving and any other incumbent in that office, as such services are now rendered, can do likewise.

WEEKLY BULLETINS

Compiled by

Lincoln County Abstract Co.

A complete list of instruments filed for record

PRICE PER MONTH $2.00.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

Geo. D. Barber B. F. Bonham
BARBER & BONHAM
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Carrizozo : New Mexico

R. E. BLANEY

DENTIST

Office in Exchange Bank Bldg. Upstairs
Carrizozo - - New Mexico

E. L. WOODS, M. D.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON

Wetmore Bldg., Carrizozo, N. M.

Geo. W. Prichard W. G. Merchant

PRICHARD & MERCHANT

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW

Lutz Bldg. : Carrizozo, N. M.

GEORGE SPENCE

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Rooms 1 and 6, Exchange Bank Bldg.

CARRIZOZO, : : New Mexico

T. E. KELLEY

Funeral Director and

Licensed Embalmer

'Phone 96

CARRIZOZO : New Mexico

FRANK J. SAGER

FIRE INSURANCE

Notary Public

Office in Exchange Bank, Carrizozo.

Carrizozo Lodge
No. 40

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Meet every Monday evening at K. of P. Hall

Lutz Building

Visiting Brothers cordially invited

LOUIS ADAMS, K. of P. & U.

I. O. O. F.

Carrizozo Lodge

NO. 30

Carrizozo, N. M. Regular meeting

nights, 1st and 3rd Tuesdays in each month.

J. B. DENAVIDDIE, N. G.

WM. J. LANGSTON, Sec'y.

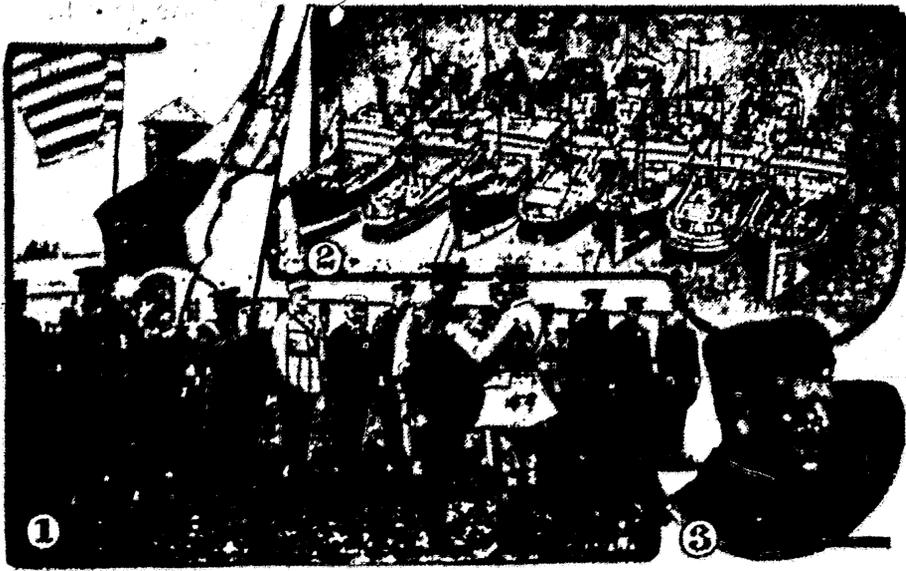

Carrizozo Lodge,

No. 41,

A. F. & A. M.

Regular Communication of Carrizozo Lodge

No. 41, A. F. & A. M., for 1905

1—General Fayolle conferring the Medaille Militaire of France on General Pershing at Fort Myer. 2—Some of the wooden ships built by the shipping board during the war and now rotting in the James river. 3—Col. Frederick W. Galbraith of Cincinnati, new national commander of the American Legion.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Russian Reds, Whipped in the Field, Agree to Armistice With the Poles.

SUBMIT TO ALL DEMANDS

Soviet Forces May Concentrate Against Wrangel—Peace in Ireland Nearer—Some Late Developments in Our Presidential Campaign.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.
Thoroughly whipped by the Poles, the Russian Bolsheviks have signed an armistice with their opponents, and on October 14 hostilities are supposed to cease. The full terms agreed upon at Riga have not yet been given to the public, but enough has been told to show that Poland has won virtually all her contentions. M. Joffe, head of the Russian delegation, was in no position to refuse anything within reason, and indeed he had been instructed to accept almost any terms the Poles might offer.

The western boundary line of soviet Russia was the main matter under discussion, and this was settled entirely in favor of the Poles, according to reports from Riga. The line is placed so far east that Lithuania is cut off entirely from Russia, and Poland is given a corridor between those two countries. The boundary agreed upon begins east of Dvinsk, runs south through Baranovitchi, Linninets and Karry, and virtually along the German line of 1915 to the Romanian frontier.

The Poles have asserted repeatedly that the Lithuanians have been fighting alongside the Russians, and this boundary settlement should, therefore, go far in bringing about a peaceful agreement between Poland and Lithuania; when that is accomplished the Poles will be free to turn their attention to the establishment of their own government and the development of their country. They have agreed to be neutral in the Ukraine, where the Soviet and Peleura forces are fighting, and Russia gives up all claims to eastern Galicia.

It is asserted by some correspondents that Dombaki, head of the Polish mission at Riga, was moved to hurry up the agreement with the Russians by the admittances of the British ambassador in Warsaw and also by the movements of his political opponent, Prince Sapieha. In addition, say these correspondents, the liberal Dombaki element in Poland, is somewhat alarmed by the successes of Baron Wrangel in southern Russia; considering that the restoration of the old Russian empire would constitute a great danger to Poland. Many experts believe that a Russo-Polish peace will result in the crushing of Wrangel and his armies. It is taken for granted that the soviet government will at once concentrate its efforts on the Chinese front.

However, Wrangel has been making such progress in his campaign that his chances still seem good. In his advance northward he has taken many thousands of prisoners and vast quantities of material, and his forces also pushed along the coast of the Sea of Azov northward toward important cities on the lower Don. Early in the week it was said that Malen, the Ukraine insurgent leader, had formed a junction with Wrangel's troops and in a flying raid had seized Kharkov. Later a wireless dispatch from Moscow asserted that Malen had joined the Bolsheviks and had been given a command under Wrangel. It was said his shift was due to the refusal of his troops to fight against the Bolsheviks. Malen's past history inclines one to doubt the truth of this report. According to a Copenhagen newspaper, General Wrangel, who succeeded the Poles, has gone to South Russia to the fact that the Russian crop outlook is the worst ever experienced and that in consequence the country faces starvation during the coming winter. Lenin and the other leaders have been making desperate efforts to re-open commercial relations with Great Britain and Italy and to make peace with Roumania, but these efforts have been fruitless so far. The Red soldiers are mutinying and assassinating their officers, and the Russian people generally are in despair.

In Petrograd especially the conditions are terrible, and all the inhabitants who can are fleeing from the city. The Finnish Red Cross has just issued an appeal to the Red Cross Societies of the World describing the shocking state of affairs in the former capital. The population has shrunk to about 600,000, and thousands are dying every month of various kinds of epidemics. There is no fuel, no hot water for baths, no street cleaning or removal of garbage, and the streets are becoming impassable because the paving blocks are being burned and the water pipes are bursting. The hospitals are overflowing with patients and their equipment is wretchedly inadequate.

"Death," says the report, "stalks on every side, waiting for winter to aid in the grim work of mowing down the silent, hungry sick, and dying thousands. With streets and houses choked with filth that is already spreading spotted and intermittent typhus, the cold weather will finish the task with pneumonia and abdominal typhus."

The allied mission named to handle the dispute between Poland and Lithuania arrived at Suwalki Tuesday to begin work, and on the same day, it was announced, the Poles and Lithuanians stopped fighting.

The Adriatic dispute between Italy and Jugo-Slavia is in a fair way of settlement, for cabinet members of both nations met Friday in Venice and resumed direct negotiations. Some time ago Lloyd George and Millerand, then premier of France, said if the Jugo-Slavs and Italians got together it was nobody else's business, which was taken as a warning to the United States government to keep its hands off, whatever may be the disposition of Fiume.

If it were not for the people of California and a few Jingoists on both sides of the Pacific, the threat of unpleasant relations between America and Japan would quickly fade away. The American associations of Tokyo and Yokohama have cabled to Secretary of State Colby a set of joint resolutions urging that Americans "act with sober deliberation and patience, trusting the respective governments to find a solution satisfactory and effective without affronting Japan or sacrificing the principles of equity on either hand."

Viscount Ishii, the new Japanese ambassador to France and one of his country's wisest statesmen, is quoted as saying: "War will never come between the United States and Japan, unless the United States seizes Japanese territory or Japan seizes American territory. Japan has not the remotest intention of ever attempting to appropriate any American territory." He says there is no trade war on between the two countries, and that labor and land problems cannot be permitted to be magnified into questions where war might be even envisaged. He and other Japanese leaders assert that most of the talk of international trouble is due to the fact that the United States is in the throes of a presidential election.

The efforts of the Irish peace council, made up of moderates from all parts of the island, are slowly leading to a settlement of the Irish problem. The council has completed its plan for demilitarization of the island, and its members say the leaders of the Sinn Fein have intimated that, though of course they still desire entire independence, they will not oppose the plan if it can be shown that a majority of the Irish people desire it. Premier Lloyd George also said the this support, and it may send a deputation to Lloyd George this week. The first step in the plan is the creation of a constituent assembly in Ireland in which Ulster will be represented.

President Wilson got into the presidential campaign at the beginning of the week with a long letter addressed to his fellow citizens, urging them to place the seal of their approval of the League of Nations covenant by their votes at the polls in November. He said: "The chief question that is put to you is, of course, this: Do you want your country's honor vindicated and the treaty of Versailles ratified? Do you in particular approve of the League of Nations as organized and empowered in that treaty? And do you wish to see the United States play its responsible part in it?"

He said the opponents of the league had misled the voters and had displayed gross ignorance and impudent audacity in their "attempt to invent an 'Americanism' of their own, which has no foundation whatever in any of the authentic traditions of the government."

Following this lead, Governor Cox and Franklin Roosevelt in their campaign speeches are now making the League of Nations the great issue and are devoting to it most of their arguments. Homer A. Cummings, former Democratic national chairman, also has been called on and will speak for the league in Ohio, Kansas, Indiana, Kentucky, New Mexico and California.

Senator Harding abandoned his porch again for a quick speaking tour through part of the Middle West, and in his address at Des Moines he accepted the direct issue of ratifying or rejecting the League of Nations covenant. He declared flatly he would favor staying out of the league as formed at Versailles; he said he wanted no acceptance of the league with or without reservations to clarify America's obligations, and that he thought the proper thing to do was to reject the covenant altogether. As for what he does favor doing in the way of an association of nations, he said: "I shall not risk embarrassing the final solution of a problem so momentous by undertaking to lay down in advance specific details or plans. As soon as possible after my election I shall advise with the best minds in the United States and especially I shall consult in advance with the senate, with whom, by the terms of the Constitution, I shall indeed be bound to counsel and without whose consent no such international association can be formed. I shall do this to the end that we shall have an association of nations for the promotion of international peace, but one which shall definitely safeguard our sovereignty and recognize our ultimate and unsharpened freedoms of action."

An acrimonious controversy has arisen between President Wilson and Senator Spencer of Missouri. The latter, in campaign speeches, asserted that the President during the peace conference promised Roumania and Serbia that if needed the American army and navy would be sent to their aid. This charge Mr. Wilson branded as absolutely false. The senator reported that the alleged promise was to be found in the stenographic report of the eighth plenary session of the conference, in which Mr. Wilson was reported to have said to Premier Bratianu of Roumania: "You must not forget that it is for the sake of the small guaranty of the public peace. If the world is again troubled the United States will send to this side of the ocean their army and their fleet."

Spencer asked the President to produce the report, but Secretary Taft said on Thursday the President had no stenographic report of the eighth plenary session and, so far as the President knows, there is no such record in this country.

Unless the Supreme court of the United States says no, "Big Bill" Edwards and the 98 other I. W. W. members who were tried some time ago before Judge Landis will have to go to

OCCUPATION FOR THE BORED

To Those Who Find Time Hanging Heavy on Their Hands Writer Recommends Washing Dog.

Those who find the days tedious may discover a diverting hour in the back-porch sport of washing the dog. After an hour of this, persons who have been bored to extinction have been known to feel real pleasure in just sitting still for two whole days, with hands folded and eyes closed—just sitting.

The hard part is to catch the animal. Somehow that jolly instinct which Mother Nature has given dumb brutes seems to inform him that all is not well. He who usually leaps forward with wagging tail at a friendly lift of the eyebrow will at this important moment regard his owner with a reproachful look that is quite beyond description. You have to see the look, and try to catch the hound, in order to appreciate it. Some favor the seductive smile and the velvet voice as the best means of coaxing the creature to draw near. Personally, I favor the ever-ready appeal to the stomach. Dogs may be long on sentiment, but they are never so emotionally inclined as when in full sight of a piece of juicy meat.

We will assume that you have caught him, however, and have started to drag him toward his doom. Here it is that one notices for the first time the strange relation of the canine species to the mule family. If your dog has long ears, you will detect no difference whatever. Some dog fanciers declare that even the bark sounds brayish, a fact for which the author cannot vouch.

When the hound has at last been dragged to the edge of the tub or basin, the best advised move is to tackle him around the waist and jump in with him. You'll get drenched anyhow, so what does it matter? The real sport begins at this point, and usually continues until friend dog playfully swirls his soapy tail in your eyes. Authorities agree that this is the best time to capitulate. You may not have succeeded in washing him, but, by thunder, you have showed him who's master here, and that's something, anyhow.

Besides, when the family gathers about and asks you if the hound actually got a bath, no one will dare dispute your word for it that the operation was signally successful. In spite of all evidence to the contrary—and I say evidence advisedly—all will agree that Rover is clean as a whistle. Otherwise someone might have to try it again.—Boston Herald.

"Gentleman?"
The Romance languages each have a word for "gentleman," but it does not express the meaning with which we invest the term. Larousse defines "gentilhomme"—tout homme de race noble; any man of noble birth. The Spanish dictionary gives it "Gentilhombre—hombre de buena familia que servia en casa de las reyes"; a man of good family, who serves in the house of kings. The Italian dictionary has it: "Gentiluomo—ben nato"; a well-born man, a nobleman; a knight. None gives the fine delicate flavor to the word that we do when we say: "He is a true gentleman." We neither ask nor care about his family; we only know that he possesses the very flower of courtesy; that he is the soul of honor. Bearing a title of nobility does not of itself make a man a gentleman as we use the word. Shakespeare's old enemy was a gentleman in one sense, yet one of his remote descendants once said to me: "I never thought much of Sir Thomas Lucy. He used to go to the tavern and come home drunk and beat his wife." Fall many a "gentilhomme" has failed to prove himself a gentleman, yet there are many French citizens of today, just as there was a host in the past, who live up to its true meaning, and they certainly have a right to incorporate "gentleman" into their charming language.

Edison's Paper Shirt.
Importation of paper suits from Germany by the department of commerce of the United States, which are heralded as costing about sixty cents a suit, brings to mind an even more economical invention at one time announced by Thomas A. Edison, according to an exchange.

Mr. Edison several years ago, in an interview on great inventions, which he had perfected or was about to perfect, went into great detail concerning a paper shirt. This shirt, made of very thin but durable paper, was to be composed of 365 layers. The highest degree of sanitation could be preserved by its wearer without the expense of a single laundry bill.

The idea was to make a new shirt every day by tearing away the layer which had seen service the day before. It was not reported that Mr. Edison ever put his garment on the market, or whether it turned out to be a failure.

Farm Women's Working Day.
The state college authorities of North Dakota made a survey of the state to get certain information, and found, among other things, that the average working day of the farm woman was twelve hours in winter and fifteen hours in summer.

Spencer's Dog.
"It's not to blame that a man

Uncle Walt's Story

Walt Mason

THE UNATTAINABLE

"THERE'S a spot on my back, about the size of a postage stamp, that has been itching all day," said the retired merchant, "and it has caused me more grief than the last attack of rheumatism. I can't reach it with either hand, and I have been backing up against every telephone pole and gatepost, rubbing like a horse with the mange. A man of my social and commercial standing doesn't look dignified while thus engaged, but when a man's back itches, he has to do the best way he can."

"I can understand just how it has worried you," said the hotelkeeper. "The fact that you couldn't reach around and claw the itching place with your fingers kept the matter fresh in your memory and got on your nerves. The pursuit of the unattainable always is more interesting to us than the easier work close to hand. You had your whole person to scratch, and might have bought a currycomb for a quarter, and had a good time, but you couldn't be happy until you had reached the one inaccessible spot."

"A while ago I imagined I had heart disease, and went and saw the doctor. He knows I have money in the bank, and am considered good pay, so he confirmed my worst fears, and made up his mind to have me for his star patient, until one of us perished out. He threw an awful scare into me, so that I went home sweating like cold circus lemons."

"He gave me some medicines and a lot of instructions. Among them was one to the effect that when I went to bed I should always sleep on my right side. He cautioned me over and over again against laying on my left side, and left the impression that if I disobeyed him, I'd wake up some morning to find myself a candidate for a floral horseshoe."

"That matter looked easy at the time, and I assured the doctor I'd follow his bylaws to the letter. When I went to bed that night, I stretched out on my right side, and in ten minutes I was just suffering to roll over. I don't believe I ever had such a hankering for anything. It seemed to me the height of human happiness would lie in sleeping on one's left side. I followed instructions for two nights, and then I decided that life wasn't worth such sacrifices, and I rolled over and slept on my left side, and nothing happened. I was feeling better than usual next morning when I got up.

"Of course this experience lessened my confidence in the doctor's instructions, and I concluded that if I was going to sidestep the medicines, too, for they tasted like low life in a Chinese alley, and I threw the whole lot out of the window. Thus the sawbones lost his most promising patient because he handed out a rule that wasn't strictly necessary."

"Speaking of the unattainable, do you know what the matter with Silas Furbelow? He has everything a man could ask, a stranger in the town would say. He has a beautiful home and a wife who would be considered a success anywhere, and he has fortunes of money where it will do the most good."

"Yet he has a secret sorrow. I think he's the most melancholy man I ever saw, and his trouble is that he can't raise a good stand of whiskers. Nowadays, when whiskers are considered an infirmity, it seems strange that any man should grieve over such a matter."

"He sends all over the United States for hair growers, and half the time his face is blistered or swollen, and still the whiskers won't grow on him. If some miracle happened, and he woke up some morning to find his countenance all covered with whiskers, he'd probably have them shaved off within a week; but because they won't grow, he won't be happy till he gets them."

Wary of Whirlwinds.
"You don't seem to like the idea of a whirlwind campaign."
"I hate the mere mention of it," replied Farmer Coratassel. "Maybe you'd find it hard to understand, never havin' lived, as I did, in a part of the country where every once in awhile you have to get out and run for a cyclone collar."

Plenty of Time.
Teacher—What, Bobby, you say you don't want to be president of the United States?
Bright Lad—Not just now, thank you. It'll all be the same to you I'd rather wait until after a couple of more elections.—American Legion Weekly.

Weak and Miserable?

Does the least exertion tire you out? Feel "blue" and worried and have daily headaches, lumbago, backache, dizziness, and kidney irregularities? Sick kidneys are often to blame for this unhappy state. You must act quickly to prevent more serious trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy recommended everywhere by grateful users. Ask your neighbor!

A Wyoming Case

Mrs. Annie W. Carpenter, 2405 Evans St., Wyo., says: "Some years ago I used Doan's Kidney Pills and from the benefit received I think they are a well-merited remedy. My kidneys were weak and sluggish and my back ached. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved the pain in my back quickly."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 66c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
Foster-McClellan Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

SQUEEZED TO DEATH

When the body begins to stiffen and movement becomes painful it is usually an indication that the kidneys are out of order. Keep these organs healthy by taking

GOLD MEDAL MARMON OIL

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles. Proven since 1866. Takes regularity and keeps in good health. In three sizes, all druggists. Guaranteed. Ask for the Gold Medal on every box and insist on getting it.

Keep Your Skin Pores Active and Healthy With Cuticura Soap

Soap 25c, Ointment 25c and 50c, Tablets 25c.

Vaseline Carbolated

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

PETROLEUM JELLY

An antiseptic dressing for cuts, sores, etc.—A necessity where there are children.

AND SUBSTITUTE
CELESTINE OILS MFG. CO.
State Street New York

No More Misery After Eating

Just Take An Entonic

"The first dose of Entonic did me wonders. I take it at meals and am no longer bothered with indigestion," writes Mrs. Ellen Harris.

Thousands of people, like this dear lady, gratefully testify about Entonic, which does its wonders by taking up and carrying out the excess acidity and gases which bring on indigestion, heartburn, bloating, belching and food repeating. Acid stomach also causes about seventy other non-organic ailments. Protect yourself. A Big box of Entonic costs but a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

Mitchell-Cars-Mercer

Graham 1 1/2-Ton Speed Truck
High grade lines of low depreciation.
LINCOLN MOTOR & SUPPLY CO.
DENVER

You Save From $15 to $25 on every Saddle and Harness

Free from our catalogue. The First Saddle Sells. The First Harness Sells. W. H. B. Co.
1234 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

PATENTS

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Wm. Riley and party got three turkey the first day of the season. Come in, Be Convinced. We can save you 50 per cent on your coal bill this winter.—Carrizozo Trading Co.

Mike Doering, of the Adams rooming house, left Wednesday on a months' visit to his former home in Evansville, Ind.

United States Tires are the best tires.—Western Garage.

The people of New Mexico want a new deal and are going to have it by electing the democratic ticket—state and county.

Call in and see the new Fords with self starters.—12-19-19

Brickley and McCamant possess every qualification to ably represent the people of this part of the state in the New Mexico legislative assembly.

Cola's Hot Blast Heaters are the best money can buy—Come in see our line. Carrizozo Trading Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Grafton of Bonito were here the best part of the week. Mrs. Grafton was being treated for tonsillitis. They returned home Wednesday.

Norfolk Inner Tubes and Republic Casings. Both guaranteed. The Western Garage.

A couple of young fellows who have been working on the streets here for several days, were arrested Monday as deserters, and taken to Fort Bliss.

If its anything for a Ford, we have it.—Western Garage. d19

Young Willis Jennings of Parsons left Wednesday for Bisbee, Arizona, where he will join his brother, Buck, who is an employe of the Copper Queen Company.

Drs. Swearing & Von Almen, eye, ear, nose, throat and fitting glasses, 414 Trust Building, El Paso, Texas.—Dr. Von Almen will be at Dr. E. L. Woods' office, Carrizozo on the 15th of each month. 4-30-19

Mr. and Mrs. Benson Newel were here Tuesday night from Alamogordo. Mr. Newel is a candidate for district attorney of this district on the Republican ticket.

Miss Carrie Roberts went to El Paso Monday for a two weeks vacation. She will be the guest of the Lacy girls during her stay.

Albert Farley is home on a furlough visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Farley. Albert was a soldier in the great war and was discharged after its close, but later reenlisted and again wears the kahki.

Joe Cochran was down yesterday from Nogal. Joe says he hasn't gone after his annual deer yet, but that his gun is ready and it is so trained that any man could go out and get a deer with it.

A field clerk from the recruiting station, El Paso, will be in Carrizozo on Oct. 22 to 25, to receive applications from ex-soldiers for the Victory Medal. For further information see Post Commander, American Legion.

The season for deer and turkey opened Wednesday. Quite a number of autos from outside points passed through here the previous day, and were headed for the hunting grounds. Some sports from here left early Wednesday, others will go later.

A report from the Upper 'Dosa states that Harry Little intends to winter in the mountains, and put in his time hunting and trapping for pleasure and profit. He had three bears to his credit up to the last week besides lynx, and other fur-bearing animals.

Jack Hulse, of Aacho, while repairing the boiler of a well-drilling outfit, about six miles west of here, dropped a wrench had taken up winter quarters there. It was in a semi-comatose condition, or Jake might have a different story to tell. It took a fire of bush and weeds to awake the reptile, when it was dispatched. It measured six feet and had 13 rattles.

John L. Bryan, the popular democratic candidate for assessor, left for Capitan Tuesday, after several days campaigning in this district. Mr. Bryan will make a very capable assessor if elected, and we believe he will. He was accompanied by Newt Kemp, candidate for county commissioner. Both men deserve election.

Tom Bragg has more bear scalps on his belt than any one we know of. Coming across the hills from Parsons Monday with Wm. Riley, he bagged a couple of bear. He stated that there are plenty of deer and turkey in the mountains, but they are hard to get, except by those acquainted with the habits of the game.

"If you don't see his horns—she hasn't got any," is the slogan of safety of the New Mexico game Protective Association. The law prohibits the killing of any deer with horns less than six inches long. Many does are illegally killed yearly, and most shooting accidents are caused by too much haste in shooting at everything that moves.

Vote for Brickley

for State Senator. His election will mean an additional people's representative in our legislative body that will not have to be told by a few men how the laws of this state should be made. Legislation in the past should be sufficient to cause voters to consider this most important matter. Men should be sent to Santa Fe who will not require the services of a "Third House."

Methodist Church

Rev. C. C. Higbee reports an increase in the Sunday school attendance and in the evening congregation. He is anxious that all get back into their regular places now that the summer outings are over.

The subjects for next Sunday are: 11:30 a. m. "The Magnetic Christ." 7:30 p. m. "The Lord is my Shepherd." Sunday school 9:15.

A. S. McCamant for Representative. If you can remove the scales from your eyes long enough to take a peak at legislation in New Mexico, and how and for whom it has been put over, you ought to see your way clear to support A. S. McCamant for the legislature. It is the system that too many Republicans have permitted to govern them that the people are opposing, rather than the Republican himself. Republicans in New Mexico, however good they may be as men, have never been able to successfully combat the power centered in a few men, nor will they now. Support Eck McCamant and have a man there who owes nothing to a small cabal behind the interests.

An Open Letter

We have been requested by A. S. McCamant, Democratic nominee for representative from Lincoln county, to give space to the following letter:
Corona, N. M., Oct. 21, 1900.
Editor News,

My attention has been called to a report that is in circulation to the effect that I favor county division, and I desire to correct that report and state the facts as they are.

Two years ago there was a move on foot to form a new county out of portions of Socorro, Torrance and Lincoln counties, with Corona as the county seat. I signed the petition calling for the formation of a new county from the three counties named, as did all, or nearly all, the people of my section. It was discovered later, however, that a different plat was submitted, changing the boundaries in such a way that Corona would be left off in one corner, but the same names appearing on the first plat, it seems, had been detached and attached to a new one. This new proposition was entirely unsatisfactory to the people of Corona; we opposed it and asked the representative from Lincoln county to oppose it in the lower house, which he did successfully, to his credit and to the satisfaction of our people.

I do not favor a division of the county of Lincoln, nor will I, should the people select me for a representative, support a proposition for a division of the county during the life of the coming state legislature. Respectfully,
A. S. McCamant.

For Six Years

the Democratic nominee for treasurer has been associated with the collection of taxes and handling the funds of Lincoln county. During that period he has acquired a most thorough knowledge of the duties and responsibilities of that office and no man in Lincoln county could better fill the position. Harry G. Norman is one of our most worthy young men, deserves the support of the voters for this office and will discharge the duties faithfully and ably. He is worthy of confidence and support, and voters will be justified in giving him the position when they go to the ballot box on the 2nd of next month.

At All Times

the county should have a good board of county commissioners, for upon the actions of the board of county commissioners depend very largely the economical handling of county affairs and the prosperity of its people. The names of John C. West, John W. Owen and Newt Kemp appear on the Democratic ticket for members of the board from the three districts. These men have made Lincoln county their home for many years, and are well and favorably known throughout the county. To those who do not know them we would say make an investigation, and when that is done they will not suffer.

In Hotel Diet

Mrs. Frank E. Mudge, who has been in Carrizozo all summer, is now in Hotel Diet, El Paso, looking for an

QUALITY FIRST—THEN PRICE

OUR PRICES ON COTTON PIECE GOODS

Have been revised to conform with the new price levels.

Below are only a few items we offer at new low prices:

GINGHAM New Fall Patterns. Sold for 50c a yard. Now 3 yds for $1.00	PERCALES, light and dark patterns, 27 ins. wide. Only 20c a yd.
Special low price on SILK HOSIERY 80c, $1.39 $1.95	CALICOS at a very low price 13c a yard
Extra Heavy OUTING FLANNEL. Sold for 50c a yard Reduced to - 35c	All-Wool STORM SERGE, 36 in. wide, in all colors Per yard - $1.75

Outing Flannel Gowns
All colors, and plain and white, a regular $3.00 Gown
Reduced now to $1.95

CARRIZOZO TRADING CO.

QUALITY FIRST THEN PRICE

20 per cent Reduction on BOYS' STEEL FIBRE SUITS

MOTHERS whose Boys wear these sturdy suits do not worry about the results of hard play, because every Steel Fibre Nick Suit has an extra thickness of fabric in seats and knees and between knees, reinforced by patented interweaving stitches. They wear longer and are stylish too.

Come in all sizes from 6 to 18 years

Our Special for this week will give 20 p. c. Discount

Ziegler Bros.

REDUCTION IN PRICES FORD CARS

The War is Over and Prices Must Go

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE—Ford Cars, Trucks and Tractors will be sold f. o. b. Detroit, at the following prices:

Touring Car (Regular)	-	-	$440
" " (Starter)	-	-	510
Runabout (Regular)	-	-	395
" (Starter)	-	-	465
Chassis	-	-	360
Coupe (Starter and Dem.)	-	-	745
Sedan (Starter and Dem. Rims)	-	-	795
Truck (Pneumatic Tires)	-	-	545
Tractor	-	-	790

We are at your command with a regular force for efficiency in service and eagerness to fill your orders.

Western Garage, Inc.

You Will Save Money by Trading at the SANITARY MARKET

Fresh and Cured Meats
(Try some of our fine cuts)

Fresh Fruits & Vegetables

Groceries

WE maintain an excellent supply of Fresh Fruits and Vegetables. Give us your orders for Meats and Groceries. If you have not been one of our customers in the past let us have a trial order to convince you of the excellence of our goods.

THE SANITARY MARKET

REMY & LUJAN, Props.
Phone 46-65 and your order will be attended to.

WE ALL BLUNDER ON TO SUCCESS

IF WE MAKE THE MOST OF OUR BLUNDERS

The one preventive that covers every financial blunder is THRIFT. By saving a part of your earnings you are preparing to withstand the shock of financial misfortune. Place your savings where they will be well protected. The service and protection of this bank are yours for the asking.

Open that Checking or Savings Account to-day

W. S. S. offer opportunity unequalled for the small investor.

EXCHANGE BANK