OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 21

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 1921

Government Not Simple

Washington, D. C.—Extravagance in appropriations, lack of a program and the failure to make good election promises are the chief characteristics of the Republican legislative situation here at this writing. The charges are:

The Republicans promised to reduce Federal taxes, but they are increasing them.

They promised to make a speedy technical peace, but the peace situation is up in the air.

They promised to revive business, but there has been a constant decline in foreign trade and continued depression of securities.

They promised a reversal of American foreign policies, but have adhered strictly to the policies of the former administration.

These charges are made and the proof furnished in large part by Republicans. Take, for instance, the statement of Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho,] in discussing the Army Supply Bill. He said:

"I wish to ask our Republican friends on this side of the Chamber what are you going to do about the question of economy? What is your program? What is your plan? There is no provision anywhere for reducing expenses or reducing taxes. There is no program to that effect."

I should like to know, in view of the constant discussion of the question upon the part of Republican leaders that the taxes are now unbearable and that they must be reduced, when and where are they going to reduce them? Where is the program?

Senator King [Dem., Utah,] interrupted to say:

"The senior Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot, Rep.,] stated that there would be an increase, so I say to my Republican friend from Idaho that his party not only will not reduce taxation and not produce economies, but increase taxation and will increase the expenses of the Government."

"That is not the kind of doctrine I wanted to hear, but I am afraid it is true," replied Senator Borah.

On the failure to keep the party's promise to make a speedy peace, Senator Borah said:

"Not only have we failed to establish a technical state of peace, but we have done that which, in my judgment, unless we surely and speedily remedy our course, was most unfortunate. We started to do it and then have failed. If there was any one distinct pledge made to the people of the United States in the last campaign which was clear and simple in its statement, easily comprehended, and which apparently a vast majority of the people understood and indorsed, it was that as soon as the party asking for power should be admitted to power it would establish a state of peace. The President in his speech of acceptance stated, in substance, that a state of peace would be established as soon as the Republican Congress could pass upon it and he could attach his signature to it.

"I venture to say that there is not a man in this Chamber or in the House who went before the people for election who did not give them to understand that one of the first and speediest acts of the Republican party would be to establish a state of peace."

"We have an overwhelming majority in the House and an overwhelming majority in the Senate, and the executive department is Republican from turret to foundation stone; and yet we stand before the country, stand before the world, as unable to pass a simple resolution establishing a state of peace. We have not only been criticized by the opposition press, but we are now being apologized for by our own press; and we have become the subject and butt of ridicule by the foreign press. The Congress of the United States is unable to formulate a proposition which restores by law that which in fact exists."

Number of Cattle in U. S. Less than in 1900

Chicago.—The number of cattle for each hundred persons in the United States is one-third less than in 1900, the sheep supply is reduced nearly two-thirds, while the number of hogs is 41 per cent smaller, according to figures compiled from the federal census reports by Herbert Myrick, a farm expert.

Declaring that this "alarming shortage" is such as to furnish a meat supply only about half as great for each person as formerly, Mr. Myrick said that "the decline in prices to producers is so utterly unjustified as to constitute the gravest economic crime ever perpetrated on the farmers."

Other figures were given to show that 20 per cent of the meat was exported during the present fiscal year over the last year, while imports totalled 176,000,000 pounds of fresh meats, or four times as much as two or three years ago.

Mr. Myrick charged that the U. S. government has underestimated the number of sheep and swine and declared that the department's estimate for January 1920 was in error 28 per cent, as he said that the census found 34,900,000 sheep, compared to the government's estimate of 48,600,000 sheep.

"The census also reveals 14,000,000 less hogs than the government's estimate, having found only 59,000,000 pigs on farms, or 19 per cent less than the department's estimate of 72,000,000. The steady decline in the number of cattle since the census is nearly 18 per cent slaughtered during the last 11 and a half months."

Building Must Not be Delayed

It would be most fortunate in view of the present labor situation if building could be revived throughout the country, and this applies with full force to every community. Recent heavy reductions in the price of building material doubtless would make it possible to erect structures at a cost which would represent a fairly staple value. While some items of building material may be further reduced, the plentifulness of labor at this time and the abundance of contractors ready to bid, probably would overcompensate any saving on material that might be realized by delay. If building projects are delayed until next summer, it will then be found that, owing to resumption of the camps and mills, the labor surplus will have been absorbed. In regard to public building plans, at least, the present unemployment should be a deciding factor. Right now, during the next two or three months, is when employment will really be needed. In view of this situation it would be very helpful if an early start could be made on proposed public buildings and other structures, the erection of which is planned for the coming year.—Anington Times.

One Optimistic Farmer

Lide a cool breeze on a hot summer day was the speech made at the convention of the International Farm Congress by John Cottrell, who lives on a farm near Irving, Kans. "I am a dirt farmer and hold perhaps erroneous, and certainly unpopular views, on some agricultural conditions," Mr. Cottrell said in beginning his speech. "But in all seriousness I want to mention some of the things I believe in, I believe, firstly, that there has been far too much advertising of hardships and losses in agriculture and too little of the other side. Nationally, as well as internationally, we are in the midst of a difficult period and agriculture must expect, and should be willing to take its share of the bumps and knocks."

Mr. Cottrell contradicted another statement which has been advanced often of late in connection with agriculture. "American agriculture is today on a sound foundation, and its future is bright. I do not deny that there are many obstacles to overcome, but do claim that some of those presented are purely imaginary."

Mexican Revolt

Laredo, Texas, June 22.—Two soldiers from the garrison at Nuevo Laredo were killed and others wounded in a fight late yesterday near Huisachito with 75 bandits under the command of Colonel Delgado and Luis Manero, according to reports today.

The bandits were said to have crossed the Rio Grande the day previous.

With the troops, reinforced by others from the Nuevo Laredo garrison, in close pursuit of the outlaws, who are reported to have fled toward Rio Salado, news of encounter is momentarily expected, the report added.

The bandit captured Monday was executed today after he refused to give information concerning the band.

Laredo, June 23.—Treasury department officials here are inclined to regard the revolutionary movement across the Rio Grande from here, in which a battle is momentarily expected after yesterday's and today's heavy skirmishing, as more serious than Mexican authorities admit. While the Mexican army leaders credit Gen. Delgado with leadership of the rebels, authorities on this side believe that the movement is the start of Murguia's long-heralded attempt to avenge Carranza's death.

Further unofficial details of a fight between Mexican federal troops and bandits near Huisachito, south of Nuevo Laredo, last Tuesday, give number of soldiers dead as 8 and 200 wounded. Bandit casualties still are unknown here and no further trace of the band has been found by pursuing federal troops.

Drilling Discontinued at Picacho Test Well

A dispatch, bearing a Roowell date line, states that the Picacho test well, in the eastern part of this county, has been abandoned, and that the machinery has been moved to Roowell. Locally, we have had no news concerning this important transaction. The report further states that when the well was abandoned the drill had reached a depth of 2,200 feet and that the last 500 feet was in a very hard formation. Samples from the bottom of the hole were sent to geologists at the university of California and Columbia University, New York, and the discontinuance of drilling is supposed to be the result of these tests.

Cowboys Reunion

Las Vegas, June 20.—Spectators at the 7th annual cowboys' reunion, held here July 4, 5 and 6 are to have the unique experience of witnessing from the grandstand the actual production of a comedy picture story. The name of the play is "Wild and Bully." It will be "shot" by the Photo Art Film Co., of El Paso. Several of the cowboys' association officials will be in the cast, and a large number of Las Vegas' prettiest damsels will be used in the society scenes.

It's the Pace that Kills

G. D. Tarbell, the venerable father of Mrs. W. C. McDonald, who has passed his 94th mile post on Life's highway, says he feels almost as strong as he did forty years ago. One day last week he walked up from the ranch, about three miles, under a warm sun, in less than an hour and a half without exerting himself. When asked to what he attributed his unusual vigor, he stated: "Regular hours, plain food, sufficient exercise to keep the sinews and joints working freely—the used key never rusts." By following this rule I expect to pass the century mark, and be as fresh physically and mentally as I am today. A reasonable amount of work is essential, but over-exertion is bad for old or young—it is not the going, but the pace, that kills. Every man has a certain amount of vitality bottled up, as it were, in his system. By using that energy economically, it will naturally last longer than if recklessly burned up by over-work, worry, irregular living, and over-indulgence in what is erroneously called "the pleasures of life." High speed may not hurt the young, but they feel its effects in later life. By running in low gear, you may avoid blowing up in middle life."

Mr. Tarbell loves to tell a good story, and no one likes to listen to one better than he.

"Just look at me at 94—my arm is as strong and my mind as long as that of some of the young cubs I know, who have not yet seen their 70th birthday."

"Moderation in eating, drinking, working and playing, is the secret of good health and long life," he said. "Tobacco, beer, wine and whiskey, are good if not indulged in to excess, and I believe I have had more experience with them than Mr. Volstead."

"The trouble with the present generation is that they travel in high gear, use too much gas, and then steal a few hours from the night, with the notion they are lengthening their days—as I said, it's the pace that kills."

Things are not as they used to be When I was a boy of sixty-three, But I maintain, and I'm not far wrong, It was a different world when I was young.

Conductor Kills Car Bandit in El Paso

On Monday night a street car conductor named Bundy Avent killed a Mexican hold-up on the Washington Park line. The robber was killed with his own gun after being disarmed.

Avent is about 25 years and married. He owns a ranch near Hillsboro, and lived on the Rio Grande in this county at one time.

No Reason to Fear

It is difficult to account for the objections that have arisen to the publication of the slacker list. No man with an honorable service record need fear having his name appear by accident in the list. Every friend of such a veteran knows he was overseas, and he can show his American Legion button and discharge papers. If the point is ever raised it serves merely to emphasize the fact that the man is a war hero. If all the remonstrances to the publication could be traced to their sources it might be found that many of them are inspired by the slackers themselves or by those who hope to embarrass the Washington government.—Ex.

"WOLVES' HOLE"

Synopsis.—Tom Shelby, a rancher, rides into the frontier town of Ponce, looking for a good time and loneliness on the ranch. Instead, he runs into a funeral—that of Dad Calkins, a retired army man of whom little is known. A girl, still in her teens, survives Calkins. McCarthy, a saloon-keeper and Ponce's leading citizen, decides that the girl, now alone in the world, should marry. She agrees to go out a husband from the score of men lined up in her home. To his consternation, she selects Shelby, who had gone along merely as a spectator. He declines the honor, insisting, the girl dis-misses the assembly, the girl disappears into one of the streets, and in a night returns to him. He returns to the girl, determined to marry her, if she will have him. After his explanation she agrees to marry him. The wedding takes place and the couple set out for Shelby's ranch. With them is "Kid" Macklin, whom Shelby has hired as a helper. On the way the girl tells her husband her name is Erin Calkins, and also tells him something of the peculiar circumstances of her life. Upon arrival at the ranch Shelby is struck dumb, from behind and left for dead. He recovers consciousness to find that Macklin and his wife have gone. He starts in pursuit.

Yet it was actually true; impossible as it seemed, it was nevertheless an incontrovertible fact. He had never spoken to her a single word of love; he had never even kissed her, and still, before both God and man, she was his wife. The strangeness of the situation bewildered him. Why, he did not even know who she was; what right she had to claim the family name under which he had married her; what strange story of crime might shadow her history. It was all a mystery, a mystery in which he was becoming deeply involved. Calkins had evidently been hiding her from some fate, but whether of good or evil, could not yet be determined. This present abduction, beyond question, had to do with that concealed past, perhaps with some happening before she was even born. These fellows were not robbers; their raid was not intended for any such purpose; they had touched nothing, even the horses were left undisturbed in the corral, and the moment they gained possession of her they had hurriedly departed. It had all been carefully planned, with Macklin to choose the time, and then executed quietly. Their only mistake was in leaving him behind alive. But for that one error no one ever would have known what had occurred, or dreamed of her fate. And now, assured of safety, believing the dead would tell no tales, that they had left behind no evidence of their crime, the outfit was riding carelessly across the lonely prairie, seeking somewhere a safe rendezvous.

Shelby reined his horse to the left, and sought a water hole he remembered, himself drinking first, and then standing by while the animal quenched its thirst. Leaving the buckskin there, with reins trailing on the ground, he climbed the steep side of a butte, and swept the distant horizon with a field glass. It was a trackless waste, drear and deserted of all life. Not a thing that moved crossed his range of vision; and, at last, he swapped the field glasses back into their case, slipped down the steep face of the butte, and silently remounted.

The sun was some time past the meridian, and he felt convinced those he followed could not be far from the trail he was endeavoring to locate. He came upon it in less than an hour, leading straight down a narrow valley, whose general course was directly west. He dismounted, and studied the tracks with care. This was his party beyond a doubt—five horses, one with a split hoof.

An hour later he found where the party had halted, made a fire among some rocks, and prepared food. He studied every sign with care, hoping for some message of guidance from her; but there was none. Either she had been too carefully watched by her captors, or had given up in despair any thought of rescue. Doubtless she believed him dead also; and perhaps had even witnessed the blow struck, but if not would scarcely have been loitered at what had happened. The stamping of the pointer's hoofs indicated that spot for some time, in no hurry to proceed. Shelby studied the foot-prints, satisfying himself that four were Indian, and one white, unquestionably Macklin's. With only five horses this meant that the girl rode with one of the men, probably the Kid. He discovered where she probably was sitting during the meal, a torn piece of crumpled bearing bearing some testimony that her hands had been bound, and released so that she might eat. The fellows were evidently in a state of lat and laziness, and she had had her own quiet meal, the way she had taken in the light of the moon.

Shelby dropped back in the lead, his eyes coming to rest upon the party's abandoned horse, which was still facing the west. He took a quick look at the horse, and then glanced back at the party. He was within ten feet of the horse when it uttered a sharp neigh, and then turned its head to look at Shelby. up a steep bank, where the pointer's hoofs slipped in their struggle to attain the top. Shelby gave the buck-skin his head, and the game little devil went scrambling up, until they came forth on a flat plain above. Shelby dropped his rein, and climbed to a higher point of rock, lying concealed behind its summit, while he swept the scene below through the field glasses. He never had been there before; yet he knew about where he was; this must be Dragoon creek, and not far below would be Wolves' hole, of which he often had heard—a famous hiding place for cattle thieves and border outlaws. These fellows evidently were heading for there, but would they try to complete the journey? His hope centered on their camping somewhere until morning; if sufficiently assured of safety this would probably be their choice. Through the field glasses he studied the course of the stream, and the little patches of wood nearby. At last he was rewarded—a faint spiral of blue smoke arose above some distant trees, the evidence of a camp-fire. He lay there motionless, silent, his eyes glued to the glass, planning his action, and waiting for the night.

As the gloom slowly deepened Shelby was able to distinguish the flicker of that far-off fire, but the distance was too great to permit any knowledge of its surroundings. The trail leading down was narrow, and rock-strewn, and he determined to try the passage while a faint glimmer of twilight yet lingered. Leading the buckskin, and moving with the utmost caution, he began the descent.

The gloom did not greatly retard his movements, for, through the glasses, he had mapped out the silent features, and so impressed them upon his memory as to go forward now confidently. The camp fire was located in the third grove of trees, and there were no signs of human presence between. However, he took no chance, but advanced quietly on foot, leading his horse, and using every precaution against discovery.

He circled the two groves, keeping close in their shadow, and searching their depths anxiously for any sign of life. They were desolate and deserted, but, from the outer fringe of the second he could perceive plainly the dull glow of the fire a hundred yards ahead. It was no longer a flame, but a mere glimmer of red ashes, casting no reflection about, although clearly visible. He fastened the bronze to a limb, within the circle of trees, and crouched forward alone, Winchester in hand, choosing his passage beneath the bank of the stream, and advancing with every precaution, passing every few steps, to peer over the protecting bank, and then assure himself that all remained quiet. When almost exactly opposite the red glow of the coals, he lay still, endeavoring vainly to learn the situation, and becoming more and more puzzled.

The camp appeared deserted, as though the party which had halted there had already passed on. He could hear no sound, see no movement. The fire had died down into a mere glimmer of red ashes, barely perceptible amid the surrounding gloom. Shelby drove himself forward, creeping like a snake, satisfied that he was alone, yet so low and quiet and unobtrusive. His progress was up a shallow depression, and he had attained the deeper shade of the trees, when, suddenly, a voice, apparently speaking not two yards distant, gave utterance to an oath of disgust.

lazily, as evidenced by the rustle of leaves. "I reckon you're right, Hank," he admitted slowly, his speech heavy and coarse. "No leaderfoot, ain't that right? You make that trail at night. Mac's Nelly he's a sign 'er com' through the other way."

"What'll we do, then—ride up?" "After a bit; it's early yet, an' maybe it'll do no harm 'n' the quiet swill. But we kin fight up, an' be comfortable."

He struck a match, hollowing the flame in his hands, revealing the bearded face of a man of fifty, shadowed beneath a soft hat brim. Beyond him appeared the obscure outline of the other, a mere shadow. A moment the two pulled away contentedly, Shelby not venturing to move a muscle.

"Ray, Hanley, I've allers played my hand the best I knew how, but I do like to know what the game is 'n' playin' at. What do you know, anyhow?"

The other chuckled in his beard, rustling his feet in the leaves. "Easier to ask about than explain, Hank," he answered slowly, "specially as there is things I don't just cotton to myself. Mostly I pulled the facts out of that Kid Macklin when he was drunk, 'cause he wanted me to help him. But it seems he's only hired for the job; it's that you 'n' you're waitin' for who has got the real dope, and likewise the long-gone."

"Churchill's his name, ain't it?" "That's the duffer; some big fellow down East; Virginia, as I understand—Judge Cornelius Churchill; the whole story goes a h—I of a long ways back."

He leaned his head against the tree trunk behind him, puffing away at the cigarette between his bearded lips, the dull glow barely touching his face. The younger man leaned forward waiting.

"Well," he said impatiently, "that ain't all of it; what started the rum-pus? What's the idea of stealin' the girl? An' just what do you an' me come in?"

"Well, as I figure it, we've got to make our own medicine. You saw that outfit go along afore dark—Macklin an' the four reds?"

"Sure; they had a woman with 'em?" "That's the ticket, an' they was bound for Wolves' hole. I thought maybe they'd camp down here, but they didn't—just kept movin'. Well, that's one thing you an' I laid out here for, to get a line on Macklin. The nether thing is that this yer Cornelius Churchill is about due also, an' he didn't do much o' anything else for ten years, but try to get his hands on her. Old Calkins was smart enough to fool him. The colonel had money enough in the deposit box, so they could live on it quietlike, an' the sergeant never wasted a cent. He just naturally lived for that girl, till about a month ago. He was smart enough not even to trust her; she never knew what they was hidin' from."

Hank touched a match to another cigarette, impressed with the story. "Rum kind of a business, I'd say," he admitted at last, "but just where did this Devil's Imp of a Macklin fit in?"

"I ain't got that all figured out yet," admitted Hanley. "You know pretty near as much about him as I do. First time I saw the feller he rode in yere along with Cassidy's outfit, after that N. P. holdup, an' he's been trawlin' with Cassidy more or less ever since. After I had this talk with him, when he was drunk, I put him to bed, an' picked up a letter, or two, what fell out of his pocket. I got some o' this stuff out of them. One of them was written by Churchill, an' Judgin' from the way it read, the Kid ain't really named Macklin at all—he's a Churchill himself, the old case' son."

"Well, I'll be d—d!" "You know the rest; how he stumbled onto Calkins down in Ponce, an' what happened. You can't make no believe the old fellow killed himself; he wasn't that kind. But, however it happened, the girl was left helpless; then d—d if she didn't marry that rancher over on the Cottonwood, an' spoil the whole game."

Hank laughed coarsely. "Don't talk; but the Kid played his hand all right."

"Well, he did, but he had to bean this fellow Shelby. Except for that job it wasn't so bad, for it was kinder to get her when he wanted her. I don't know how her name managed to get out, but it did, an' that's the shape of things now."

Shelby dropped back in the lead, his eyes coming to rest upon the party's abandoned horse, which was still facing the west. He took a quick look at the horse, and then glanced back at the party. He was within ten feet of the horse when it uttered a sharp neigh, and then turned its head to look at Shelby. fore he could take any action, was shot and killed in a street fight with some roughs in Skidder. Nobody knows for sure just how it happened, but it's my opinion Churchill got up the rear just to get him out of the way. If all happened sudden, an' unexpected, the only fellow with the colonel at the time being an old sergeant, named Calkins. Calkins was shot himself, but got away, and took care of Carlyn till he had, maybe an hour later. Rayhow he kept the fellows from getting hold o' any papers, an' I reckon the colonel give him an idea of what was up."

"What makes you think so?" "The way he acted afterword. Churchill had got Carlyn out of the way, but he couldn't locate the girl. He didn't suspect the sergeant at first, see for a long time. He was a fussy guy, and stuck to the army for several years, never makin' a move, just payin' for the girl's schooling, but never got a' near her. Then, when everybody had quit watchin' him, Calkins took his discharge papers, and skipped out, takin' the girl with him."

"How could he do that?" "That's what I asked Macklin, an' he said they'd finally found out that durn' time between when Carlyn was shot, an' when he died, he'd signed a paper makin' Calkins the girl's guardian, an' gave him the key to a deposit box in Kansas City, where all his papers was. A lawyer named Weeks, at Skidder, did it for him. You see the colonel didn't have no near relatives, an' he an' Calkins had been soldiering together for years; he sorter trusted the sergeant to play square, an' he sure did!"

"The h—I he did! Never made a peep for the money, did he? An' just hid out all 'round the country with the girl. I don't call that playin' very square."

"Well, it was just the same, d—d square, if you ask me. It was what Weeks advised him to do, after he went to Virginia, an' got a peep at a copy of the will on file. This girl had no legal rights till she was of age—see! Churchill knew this, an' he didn't do much o' anything else for ten years, but try to get his hands on her. Old Calkins was smart enough to fool him. The colonel had money enough in the deposit box, so they could live on it quietlike, an' the sergeant never wasted a cent. please. Everything will be laid to the Max for a while." "It's a sure break, then?" "Sure; all the young bucks are already out. Macklin had four with him on this chase—took 'em on purpose, so if they was ever trailed they'd say it was an infam job. Oh, he's covered up things all right. You got it straight now?" Hank drew up his feet until his chin rested on his knees, the tip of the cigarette glowing.

"I got it straight enough, so far as that goes, Hanley, but I don't see what the h—I we're goin' to get out of."

"You've got the same love 'er the Kid I have, ain't yer?" "Just about, I reckon. I'd sure like to take a good swipe at the ornary case."

"That's what I thought. Well, he ain't goin' to do nothin' desperate to this young woman till he hears from the old man. This affair has been pulled off hurriedlike, an' all the Kid has got in his mind right now is to hide her away somewhere, until old Churchill shows up, and decides what to do with her."

"What do you suppose he'll decide?" "Well, my notion is that if Macklin is the old man's son, he'll try to force her into marryin' the boy. That would be the easy way, an' I believe that will likely be their scheme. My idea is to put a crimp in it."

"How?" "By getting hold of her ourselves before the old man shows up, an' then doin' business with him."

"Where'll we take her?" "Back into Wolves' hole; there's hidden places there a plenty, an' with them infam rinds' h—I up north, it'll be safe enough, until the war's over anyhow. What do you say?"

"I—I, I don't care; there ain't nothin' to lose. You got the Kid these infam, didn't you?" "Yes; he never told anybody what was up but me. All right, let's move along; there's no use stayin' here."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Trail to Wolves' Hole. Shelby lifted himself on one elbow, and ventured to breathe easily once more. The vague shadows of the two men had vanished, but their progress through the underbrush could be plainly distinguished. Feeling themselves absolutely alone in that wilderness neither made the slightest effort to proceed silently. Shelby sat upright on the edge of the gully, straining his eyes through the darkness.

A strange fortune had brought him the very information he most needed. His whole thought centered instantly on the fate of the girl. What course would she choose under these circumstances, when the facts were finally revealed to her? Undoubtedly she believed him dead; her captors would impress that fact upon her first of all, so as to make her realize her complete helplessness. Besides, she cared nothing for him; had married him in- differently, merely to thus escape from a worse fate. He could not hope that loyalty to him, under such conditions, would greatly influence her decisions. Somehow the thought hurt Shelby, and brought to him the knowledge that he did care. He cared very much indeed, and this truth colored his thought and decisions.

He dare not follow those men at present; he could only wait where he was, and plan his course of action. There was no danger of his losing them, for he knew where they were going, and, in a measure, at least, about who they were. Shelby had never been in that strange sink known as Wolves' hole, but he had talked with a man who had. An immense hole in the Bad Lands, through which flowed a branch of the Cottonwood, a strange malformation of nature, so completely concealed as to be invisible until the surprised traveler stood on its very edge, and stared down into the gloomy depths below. The walls were precipitous, impassable except on foot by daylight, and at only two points could the sink be entered on horseback; from the west beneath the protection of a cañon, where the stream plunged headlong over a high ledge of stone, and from the other extremity 'down a narrow ravine through a tunnel scooped out by some torrent in long-past ages. Originally discovered by wandering trappers, who camped there out of the winter storms, it had later become the headquarters for an illicit Indian trade in liquor, and finally the rendezvous for criminals of all kinds, eager to get beyond the reach of the law. It was rumored that there was actually a town there, with women of a class, with a certain rude attempt at government by a few self-constituted authorities.

Shelby touched a match to another cigarette, impressed with the story. "Rum kind of a business, I'd say," he admitted at last, "but just where did this Devil's Imp of a Macklin fit in?"

"I ain't got that all figured out yet," admitted Hanley. "You know pretty near as much about him as I do. First time I saw the feller he rode in yere along with Cassidy's outfit, after that N. P. holdup, an' he's been trawlin' with Cassidy more or less ever since. After I had this talk with him, when he was drunk, I put him to bed, an' picked up a letter, or two, what fell out of his pocket. I got some o' this stuff out of them. One of them was written by Churchill, an' Judgin' from the way it read, the Kid ain't really named Macklin at all—he's a Churchill himself, the old case' son."

"Well, I'll be d—d!" "You know the rest; how he stumbled onto Calkins down in Ponce, an' what happened. You can't make no believe the old fellow killed himself; he wasn't that kind. But, however it happened, the girl was left helpless; then d—d if she didn't marry that rancher over on the Cottonwood, an' spoil the whole game."

Hank laughed coarsely. "Don't talk; but the Kid played his hand all right."

"Well, he did, but he had to bean this fellow Shelby. Except for that job it wasn't so bad, for it was kinder to get her when he wanted her. I don't know how her name managed to get out, but it did, an' that's the shape of things now."

Shelby dropped back in the lead, his eyes coming to rest upon the party's abandoned horse, which was still facing the west. He took a quick look at the horse, and then glanced back at the party. He was within ten feet of the horse when it uttered a sharp neigh, and then turned its head to look at Shelby. A formal declaration was issued early in April by the old chief. It said: "On April 15, 1923, according to my own convictions, I desire to take down my tribal emblems, which are in front of my house. My purpose is to live as an American citizen. I wish every young man to see that I have started now in a new life as an American citizen. ROAD BUILDING

DURABILITY OF ROADS VARY

Classification of Passenger and Freight Highways is Predicted by Chapman Diehl.

Freight roads and passenger roads are probably of the comparative future in congested sections of the country, according to Chairman George C. Diehl of the A. A. A. good roads board, who has sent a communication to this effect to the chief of engineers of the War Department. Mr. Diehl thus comments on the up-to-date highway problem:

"There will never be a time when all roads are of equal durability and carrying capacity. Highways and railroads are analogous, in that they are both designed to carry traffic, and general rules which have been developed through scientific management of railroads apply as well almost invariably to highways. The heaviest locomotives and rolling stock are carried on roads like the New York Central and Pennsylvania and Union Pacific. Their use over lighter constructed railroads would ruin the roads in a comparatively brief period.

"There must come a classification of highways. Over class 1 the heaviest motor trucks and trailers would be permitted; such trucks should have large figures conspicuously placed on the sides to indicate the total weight that it was permitted to carry; operators and owners of trucks should be prosecuted for using the heaviest trucks on roads designed for lighter traffic. It would be comparatively simple to enforce such provisions, as there seems to be no defense of the proposition permitting one or two heavy trucks to ruin an investment of many thousand dollars on the lighter constructed highways.

"At the road intersection the highway capacity could be indicated, as the highway department should, I believe, have a traffic department under a chief traffic engineer, having to do not with construction and maintenance but merely with the control of traffic. It is extremely likely that it would result ultimately in a system of freight roads and passenger roads, and that wider and parallel roads would result ultimately in a system of freight roads and passenger roads, and that wider and parallel roads, would be found to be the most economical method of laying out the highway system.

Brick or Concrete Roads Are Economical if There is Considerable Heavy Traffic.

"It is impossible to lay out all roads of the heavy form of construction; in the first place, the money is not available, and, secondly, too many years would elapse before the more sparsely settled sections of the country were developed. It would not be at all difficult to break bulk when leaving the heavy traffic roads, and in a comparatively brief time an excellent theory of highway construction would be developed whereby each locality would be able to determine the amount it was feasible for them to expend on each mile of highway construction."

FARMER BACK OF GOOD ROADS

Seasons Do Not Wait and Crops Must Be Sowed, Cultivated, Reaped and Marketed.

The farmer or rural dweller, in certain sections, for a long time stood in the way—he wanted the roads, but he didn't want to pay for them. He did not realize that in the long run good roads pay for themselves out of savings made in the community in haulage of people and merchandise. But the farmer today is reckoning in units of time, for seasons do not wait and crops must be sowed and cultivated, reaped and marketed at the right time. Therefore the farmer is now back of the road improvement.

Much Good Road Building

Last year recorded unthought of road building activities throughout the United States. A few years ago some narrowly bounded community might have done something to make the roads worse, in addition to that, each an act, however, and there cause for comment except locally. The possibilities, with the roads of today, had been thought within everybody's mind and had been developed and could not have been used if it had. The present day is the day of the road.

Spanish Note in Milady's Gowns

Fashion is much maligned. She ever has been reputed to be extremely capricious. Makers of fashions, observes an authority on styles, are obliged to offer their ideas and their wares many times over and in various guises in order to gain favor with a capricious public.

Take, for instance, fringes and ribbons. They have been subtly and cleverly offered in dozens of different ways over a period of two or three years, during which time they have met with but indifferent favor. Now they are shown in the most ostentatious way. Dresses bristle with bunches and rickshaws of ribbons artistically and inartistically employed. In many instances art is abandoned in the effort to pile on quantities of this trimming. The same is true of fringes.

Perhaps the liking for these modes of trimming so violently evinced at the present time has been of slower growth than appears upon first thought. Tastes are slowly developed in dress as in other things. For a long time artists and designers worked with Spanish effects and slowly the Spanish influences in dress came about. Fringes are distinctly Spanish.

Fringe on Blouses and Dresses. Attention has been gained for fringe through the vast quantities of it used. It would have to make its appeal in some such way as this, as it does not lend itself to a variety of modes of application as does ribbon.

Gabrielle Chanel, of Paris, is a maker who is a staunch advocate of fringe, and is anything but niggardly in its use. She makes a charming frock of gray crepe de chine—a silk which is still her favorite—and trims the skirt with a fashionable dressmaker and the well-dressed woman. Great must be their astonishment this spring at the avalanche of orders that pour into their offices daily.

Ribbon on Wraps and Dresses. Ribbons are something to be reckoned with when one woman will wear fifty or sixty yards of it on her simple black crepe de chine dress. At the Ritz at luncheon hour on one of these balmy spring days just before the exodus to the country, one may see several hundred yards of black ribbon in the dining room and cloak room, for wraps are just as lavishly adorned with it as dresses.

How long this craze for black clothes will last is impossible to say. The simple black dress is extremely smart, but so much of this somber hue is likely to pall in a short time. Not only will we become tired of seeing every woman walking about like a smartly-dressed widow, but we will feel the need of the cheer of bright colors in our clothes.

American women have accorded considerable favor to the ribbon-trimmed French model gown of the ever-present black crepe de chine. The ribbon is more. Innumerable little tufts are caught to the bottom of the dress to form a wide band.

Ribbons in Vivacious Effects. This frock is part of a very versatile costume, for both a cape and coat have been made to accompany it. The cape is perfectly straight, falling from a shallow yoke with a rather narrow standing collar, and the bottom of the wrap is trimmed exactly like the dress.

The coat is made like a chemise dress. It fastens down the front slightly to one side and is girdled with with three rows of wide gray fringe. The front of the bodice supports two narrow rows of matching fringe, and the neck and sleeves are finished with fringe of the same width. The treatment of the back of the bodice is quite different. Here wide fringe is used to give the effect of a deep cape collar made of these twisted, shawl threads.

Fringes are quite as much in evidence on blouses as on dresses, wraps and hats. An example of a fringe-trimmed blouse in appearance is somewhat complicated, but in reality it is not, being nothing more than a Spanish shawl slightly draped to the right. To a famous French dressmaker well versed in the art of simple drapery we are indebted for this model.

The plain crepe de chine wrap trimmed with fringe or ribbon this year vies with the summer furs of other seasons. It is a welcome change and, it must be admitted, much more sensible for a midsummer day than a wrap or scarf of fur, which, for some unexplainable reason, has held a place not only in the sun of fashion but in the hot, blazing sun of summer for a longer time than there was any reason for its so doing.

Very lovely are the fringe-trimmed hats. Tulle or crepe de chine modish eye shades with softly-draped rather high crowns and drooping brims, the latter supporting irregular tiers of fringe. There is a simple elegance to such a hat which could never be attained in a ribbon-trimmed model.

Hats have been written on ribbons, and from all indications such perfectly good white paper has yet to be consumed but the summer is advanced. Even ribbon manufacturers themselves thought last year that they were at the height of their power and that they made one of the best

THEIR ESTIMATES TOO LOW

Proof That Engineers Have Erred in Their Figures Concerning the Weight of Crowds.

Interesting experiments were made some time ago at Harvard university which seem to demonstrate that engineers usually underestimate the maximum loading caused by dense crowds on bridges, floors and platforms. Forty men averaging 103 pounds in weight placed in a box six feet square caused an average pressure of 181 pounds to the square foot on the floor.

An engineer has estimated the weight per square foot of the densest crowds on the New York elevated railways at only 45 pounds, but since the Harvard experiments the opinion has been expressed that the maximum loading on the elevated cars and platforms may be nearer 181 than 45 pounds. This applies to other close-packed crowds.

Wonderful Telescope.
The excellence of the big Lieht telescope, and the steadiness of the air when the conditions are good on Mount Hamilton, are attested by the statement of one authority that double stars, whose components are nearly equal in brightness, can be measured if the distance between them exceeds one-tenth of a second of an arc. What this means in accuracy of definition may be understood by remembering the fact that one-tenth of a second is equal to the apparent diameter of an ordinary pin, viewed by the naked eye at a distance of two miles.

FINAL TRIUMPH FOR MAURICE

Small Boy Endured Much, but in the End He Made Strong Point Over Rivals.

Ten-year-old Maurice was in love with the pretty new teacher and did everything in his power to get ahead of the others in winning her affection. Monday morning he was distinctly out of humor when he walked John and gave the teacher a ticket. "It's to the entertainment at our church," he said proudly. "I bought this ticket for you so that you could come and hear me sing."

A few days later he was more provoked when he came Helen bearing a ticket. "It's to our dancing class party. I want you to come and see me dance," she smiled.
He scowled and scowled. But later in the week his turn came to smile above all the rest. He, too, bore a ticket to teacher, but his speech was different. "Here's a ticket for you, Miss G.," he smiled. "It's to the Mason's supper, and I want you to come and eat with me, not watch me eat."

Useless Gold

While we have the largest gold accumulation in our history, its circulation is another thing—it doesn't circulate. The golden current continues to run in our direction, but useless as the gold is, valueless to the people, even this flow must soon discontinue if our government sits idly by and doesn't raise a hand to bring about a better condition. We cannot live and prosper alone—despite the bombastic and wholly untrue statements made in the last political campaign; nor can prosperity be brought about by the mere waving of a wand—even if that wand is wielded by the elect.

When the flow of gold to this country ceases—as cease it must—unless Washington awakes, it will be an evidence of the utter financial exhaustion of the east, and what then? Absolute stagnation, and a depression that will be infinitely worse than the present, if our government does not take steps to establish foreign credits, after first leading the way to a real peace, and make it possible for the war-torn countries of Europe to purchase the goods we have to sell. Gold will do us little good, should we get that of the entire world, and it remain in hiding as it now does. Gold won't help out a "home market" if it does not circulate.

But we started in to write a short introduction to an editorial in the Albuquerque Journal, which presents the case briefly and fairly, as far as it goes, but it doesn't, in our opinion, go far enough, and falls to touch the crux of the situation. However, we present the editorial:

"A Gibraltar of yellow metal has accumulated in the United States. The value of gold coin stored in America on June 1 was $3,175,037,194, and every day the pile is growing larger. It is the most colossal accumulation of record, and is $53,149,725 higher than the previous maximum altitude, that of May 1, 1917.

At the end of this year the amount of the four corners of the gold have slipped and then try. The rate of importation of gold has been in excess of $60,000,000 a month, or practically $2,000,000 a day.

Europe has contributed, so far this year, $210,000,000 to our monetary gold supply; North America, $29,000,000; South America, $11,000,000; Asia, $40,000,000; Australia, Africa and Pacific islands, $8,000,000. The totals are swelling as the eyes read these figures.

There are scores of students of finance who are offering their explanations of this phenomena and predicting its results. Of course the balance of trade is with us; that is to say, Europe is buying more from us than we are buying from her. But that general observation does not explain. The steady accretion of gold in this country during a period of declining prices and business stagnation has not occurred heretofore. The importation of gold in large amounts has usually steadied prices or sent them upward.

The present condition is not wholesome. Europe will reach the limit of her ability to export gold in payment for commodities. All the gold in the world will do us no real good. We get along better when the gold supply is well distributed.

The average man will wonder where all this gold is located. Certainly it is not in the pockets of the general public."

A Wedding

Thos. C. Ward and Miss Florence Current were quietly married at the First Methodist church Saturday, Rev. C. C. Higbee officiating. The bride and groom were accompanied by the bride's sister, Miss Maggie Current, and the groom's brother, Roley S. Ward.

The groom is an enterprising son of Mr. J. F. Ward; has lived in the neighborhood of White Oaks since 1913; owns a ranch near that place, and is in the employ of the Light and Power company. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Current and has been reared in the vicinity of White Oaks.

They will make their home at White Oaks. Best wishes.

Explosives for Farmers

Washington, June 19.—More than 12,000,000 pounds of picric acid, one of the highest known explosives, accumulated for war purposes and made useless to the war department by the armistice, will be distributed to farmers for agricultural purposes.

When the war ended the army had on hand this immense stock of picric acid and in addition more than 26,000,000 pounds of TNT. The latter was distributed to various governmental agencies for use in railroad construction in Alaska, public roads in the national parks and various projects on Indian reservations. None of the TNT was distributed to individuals and thus far not a single accident has marked the use or transportation of the millions of pounds of the high explosive, according to officials of the bureau of mines.

The question of what to do with the 12,000,000 pounds of picric acid posed government officials for some time and the war department had almost decided to tow the explosive out to sea and dump it overboard in the interests of the public safety when it was decided to institute a series of experiments in an effort to find some safe commercial use for it. The experiments were conducted by the bureau of mines and disclosed many ways in which picric acid could be used safely and profitably on farms, such as in blasting out stumps and rocks and breaking up land. It was accordingly decided to distribute the explosive, practically free of charge, to farmers.

Do You Know the Facts about building costs?

Do you know that lumber and building material are down?

Have you talked to us lately about building?

Do you know how reasonably you can make needed repairs, build your new home, or remodel your old one?

Better get in touch with the situation at once.

The big building program that was expected in 1920 failed to develop. The manufacturers were caught with too large stocks, and were forced to turn them over at almost cost.

We can show you a substantial saving on every item in our line.

But it's only fair to tell you this condition may be only temporary. The country is short more than a million homes. Our own town is short at least ONE HUNDRED HOMES. When people begin to do this long-delayed building, demand will increase rapidly, creating another shortage of materials and prices will advance again.

If you are planning to build, remodel or repair, come in and let us give you figures. Then when we show you the actual savings over last year's prices, and show you how favorably present costs compare with the former era of low prices, make your decision.

Get in touch with us today.

It should never be used in bulk, officials say, and its use should be restricted to re-dipped paraffined paper cartridges. The 12,000,000 pounds surplus stock, located at Sparta, Wis., and Wingate, N. M., will be distributed to farmers through the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture. The only cost to the farmer, it is announced, will be freight charges and a charge of 6c a pound for placing the powder in the necessary cartridges. It will be ready for distribution about July 1.

A TEST OF FAITH

(Chattanooga News.)

We have frequent occasion to protest against the efforts of Japan to impose her domination upon unwilling peoples, yet we have thus far failed to exemplify the ideals which we recommend to Japan. If we should withdraw our sovereignty from the Philippines, in accordance with our repeated promises, we could then more competently ask Japan to follow a similar course toward Siam, Manchuria and Siberia. Our plan would have a great deal more force if we could make it with clean hands. To say that the Philippines are not ready for independence is merely to express an arbitrary, gratuitous opinion. It is perfectly easy to create conditions—in one's own mind—that no people ever could comply with. Our delay about respecting our own pledge is a reflection on our national good faith and a constant invitation to international complications in the far east.

INDEPENDENCE OF PHILIPPINES

(Atascadero (Cal.) News.)

The Philippines should be given absolute independence, which is their natural right, even if we are well aware that they have not yet reached the full stature of Americanism. We ourselves have not reached it so long as we insist upon governing other peoples against their will.

THE WAR-PROVEN IDEA in modern business is co-operation. The Merchant, the Rancher, the Stockman, the Grower, the Wholesaler and the Bank, can all co-operate, with the result that this community will be more prosperous and its finances more stable.

We are prepared to render you exactly the service your interests demand. Take us at our word—let talk over your business problems together.

BOOKS BRING AID TO SOLDIER SICK

American Library Association Serves Ten Thousand Men in Nation's Hospitals.

EFFORTS BRING RESULTS.

Works on Vocational Training Circulated Among Men Who Must Take Up New Callings Because of Their Injuries.

Hospital library service maintained by the American Library Association during the war was credited with great value in aiding in the recovery of many sick and disabled men.

There are still in our hospitals more than 10,000 former service men. Of these nearly 8,000 are in Public Health Service hospitals, the remainder in civilian hospitals. Books, magazines and newspapers are sent to these men from the American Library Association. In the larger hospitals, containing over 300 patients, special librarians are placed. To the smaller hospitals, through the co-operation of many public libraries, library visitors are sent to visit the wards once or twice a week and learn the book needs of the patients.

A special effort is made to supply to service men in hospitals the books in demand as a result of the training given by the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

More Books for Blind.

The A. L. A., in co-operation with other agencies already interested in work for the blind, is printing books in the new Braille type. Because of the newness of the revised Braille adopted for teaching to the American war blind, literature printed in it is limited to fewer than 200 books. Though the total number of blind soldiers is small, their need of books is great, and the "speck of print" can do much to restore hope and usefulness to them.

Not only for former service men who are sick or disabled is the association working. The value of books proved so great to men in camps that efforts are still being made to connect discharged soldiers and sailors with libraries wherever they may be. Hundreds of letters have reached A. L. A. headquarters from former servicemen telling of the lack of library facilities in particular localities to which those men have returned.

Direct Service Provided.

In many cases there is a state library commission or a nearby library to which a man can be referred for the books he needs, but if there is no such organization through which he can be served, books for almost any serious purpose may be borrowed directly from the A. L. A. War Service, 21 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City. The only expense in connection with these loans is prepayment of return postage on books borrowed.

The A. L. A. has published lists of books to help ex-service men who are studying to advance themselves in their work. "Five Hundred Business Books," "One Thousand Technical Books" and reading courses on practical subjects are now in preparation.

Other Work Being Done.

Other branches of work which the A. L. A. War Service is carrying on include service to the Merchant Marine, Coast Guard and lighthouses, service to industrial communities which are resultant from the war, service to United States forces overseas. This work is carried on with money received from the United War Work Funds, the use of which is limited by the conditions of the gift to these specific purposes.

The service of the Merchant Marine department provides free library service to seamen on American merchant ships in the form of "crows' libraries," bookcase boxes, each containing about 50 books. These libraries are exchangeable at principal ports. Books and magazines are sent also to men in coast guard stations, in lighthouses and on lightships.

IN BLACK AND WHITE

Specialist appears to be practicing a certain profession in the matter of color and for this reason have taken on additional capacity. For shirts necking is more in demand than black and white in both directions.

Alamogordo Took Us

Fourteen to two was the score in the game between Alamogordo and Carrizozo, played on the local diamond last Sunday, and it was not Carrizozo that had the fourteen. The early part of the game gave promise of a fine exhibition of the great American sport, as both teams played very evenly and for a number of innings scores were conspicuous by their absence. But in the eighth inning the visitors made ten runs, and that was too utterly too, too. It was ludicrous, it was so bad.

DAUGHTER OF AGUINALDO IN U. S. CAPITAL

She Meets Many Wives of American Statesmen and Makes a Hit.

When General Emilio Aguinaldo was leading the Filipino army against the American forces twenty years ago he probably little dreamed that some day a daughter of his would visit the city of Washington and would be given a great reception at the famous Congressional Club! And that the wives of 120 members of the American Congress and two wives of members of the President's cabinet would call upon her to pay their respects!

But all this actually happened when Miss Carmen Aguinaldo, his nineteen-year-old daughter, visited Washington recently. And those wives of the American statesmen expressed themselves as both charmed and surprised at the refined, tactful, college educated young miss who greeted them.

"Miss Aguinaldo was simply delightful," was the expression of one congressman's wife. "She was very modest, yet she acted so natural and theroughly at home that she captivated everybody."

On another occasion while in Washington Miss Aguinaldo was given a real ovation by a Filipino-American audience when she recited "My Last Farewell," poem of Dr. Jose Rizal, the Philippine martyr.

Miss Aguinaldo is a student at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. While in Washington she was the guest of Mrs. Jaime C. de Veyra, wife of one of the resident commissioners from the Philippines. The Capitol building and the Congressional library appealed particularly to the young Filipina, while the beautiful sights from the Washington monument thrilled her with delight. When asked how she liked America, she smiled and answered:

"It is a wonderful country. I didn't like winter at first, but since I have learned how to skate I am having fine times. All the Americans whom I have met have been very good to me. My friends in Urbana and my classmates in the university are just lovely, but I cannot help feeling homesick at times because I am missing my father. My coming here was indeed a great sacrifice for him, for we are very close. He is so good to me."

Miss Aguinaldo is intensely patriotic. She does not conceal her resentment when she hears or reads of a misrepresentation of the Filipinos. "It is unfortunate," she once exclaimed in a voice full of sadness, "that by country and my people are hardly known, much less understood, by the people of America."

Politics is tabooed in any conversation with this Filipino maid. She evades the topic by replying that she is too young to express opinions on things political. "All I can say," she declares, "is that I share with my father in the desire for independence for my native land. There is no question about our being able to govern ourselves."

Filipinos declare Miss Aguinaldo has a "genuine Filipino temperament"—that is, she does not believe in the accidental custom of "dates" between young men and women. She does not see anything wrong in it, she says, but it is such a violent departure from the custom in the Philippines that she cannot adopt it.

"You might laugh at me," she said, "but I cannot go out with one single secret unaccompanied. I simply can't. I will go back to my country with the soul of a Filipino."

A newspaper in one of the large American cities that Miss Aguinaldo visited expressed the opinion that she would be sought by greatly impressed

PRESS COMMENT ON PHILIPPINES

The Philippines! (Shenandoah (Va.) Post.) Our idea of the Philippine question is to get out as quickly as possible and stay out. What do you say?

Our Little Brown Cousins (Argus, Rock Island, Ill.) There is no mistaking that Filipinos want their independence. And it is just possible, as they insist, that they in the islands, better than we Americans over here, are the best judges of whether they are fitted for independence. The United States wants no outburst in the Philippines as England faces in Ireland. The easiest way to head off a rebellion is to give the islands their independence before they have cause to rebel.

Shall We Let Philippines Go? (Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Republican-Now.) The United States cannot continue to hold the Philippines unless this nation wants to give the life to its own professions in the matter. The United States must keep faith with the world. The American people do not want the Philippine Islands to become their Irish question.

Filipinos Are Making Headway (Mt. Vernon (O.) Republican-Now.) The Filipinos are making an intense and intelligent campaign for independence. They are urging their claims with shrewdness and vigor. They declare that they have proven beyond question that they are capable of self-government, and they believe that with independence the Filipino will so conduct himself as to gain the respect of the world.

For Torpid Liver

"Black-Draught is, in my opinion, the best liver medicine on the market," states Mrs. R. H. White, of Keota, Okla. She continues: "I had a pain in my chest after eating—light, uncomfortable feeling—and this was very disagreeable and brought on headaches. I was constipated and knew it was indigestion and inactive liver. I began the use of Black-Draught, night and morning, and it sure is splendid and certainly gives relief."

Theford's BLACK-DRAUGHT

For over seventy years this purely vegetable preparation has been found beneficial by thousands of persons suffering from effects of a torpid, or slow-acting liver. Indigestion, biliousness, colic, coated tongue, dizziness, constipation, bitter taste, sleeplessness, lack of energy, pain in back, puffiness under the eyes—any or all of these symptoms often indicate that there is something the matter with your liver. You can't be too careful about the medicine you take. Be sure that the name, "Theford's Black-Draught," is on the package. At all drugstores.

Once a Porter, Now Millionaire

E. Howard Cadie Becomes Christian When He Receives Warning From Doctor.

WAS BUTT OF SALOON JOKES

Today He Has a Six-Figure Income, Beautiful Home, Servants and Everything—Spends Part of His Time in Evangelical Work.

Indianapolis.—If you had "gone broke" and worked as a porter in a saloon and on the "mop gang" of a janitor's force and then in a few years had made a million dollars, how would you enjoy it?

E. Howard Cadie of Indianapolis is the man who was the saloon porter and the mop handler.

Something like five years ago Cadie and his wife and children were living in poverty in Orleans, Ind. He was the object of the rough humor of the men who patronized the saloon where he worked.

Today Cadie has a six-figure income and a fine home and servants; and already is planning how to spend the coming winter.

He has decided to go on the road with Gypsy Smith, the evangelist, and Mrs. Cadie will accompany him.

To Tell Life Story.

The Gypsy Smith meetings will begin at Omaha and Mr. and Mrs. Cadie will continue with the evangelist throughout the winter.

"I will make all the necessary arrangements for the meetings and will talk to overflow meetings, telling them the story of my life," says Cadie. He already has been foremost in promoting Gypsy Smith meetings at Louisville and in Indianapolis.

After the Louisville meeting Cadie bought ground and built a permanent tabernacle in that city. On the wall is a tablet bearing the following inscription: "Erected by E. Howard Cadie in honor of his mother, whose prayers saved him from a drunkard's and gambler's grave."

Cadie was born thirty-seven years ago at Salem, Ind. He made money rapidly at intervals, and lost it just as rapidly.

His mania for gambling was so strong, he says, that he would bet on any chance. For instance, with two raindrops running down a board, he would bet which would reach the bottom first.

He was receiving $5 a week for his work as saloon porter when a doctor told him he had only four months to live. Cadie says this was his first real awakening.

Becomes Auto Salesman.

He went back to his mother's home and there he told her he had decided to live a Christian life.

and Mrs. Cadie now are happy in giving their time and their money to the cause of evangelism.

Cadie's slogan befits his business: "It's never too late to mend!"

BEAUTY OF HOLLAND

Helen Victor, photographed in her boudoir with her favorite wolfhound, is rated the most beautiful woman in the Netherlands. She is the arbiter of fashion and elegance in the land of the Dutch.

After ups and downs, he sought employment as an automobile salesman. In this job he achieved the record of selling a car a day for a year.

Finally, after he had paid off his debts he had $300, and with this he started in the shoe repair business.

After a little while he organized a company, then found himself in disagreement with others in the company, and it was necessary for him to get out or buy the others out.

But he had nothing like the amount of money required for the purchase. He happened to think of James P. Goodrich, whom he had seen when the latter was governor of Indiana and Cadie was on the janitor's force at the statehouse.

He went to Goodrich and told him of his predicament. Goodrich wrote out a check to Cadie for $25,500. Cadie then became president of the company and Goodrich vice president.

Today the concern has 15 establishments in the following cities: Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, Ind., Terre Haute, Ind., Columbus, O., Fort Wayne, Ind., Indianapolis and Dayton.

It is not an easy task for Cadie to tell his life story. There are tears in his eyes when he frankly says that in the old days he was not worthy the unstinted devotion his wife gave him. But the old days are gone and Mr.

Peril in the House Fly

Is Allowed to Spread Bacteria Over Food Supplies.

Duty of Every Community to Spend Money in Warfare Against This Enemy of Mankind.

Washington, D. C.—"The danger of the typhoid or house fly in the carriage of disease has been abundantly demonstrated, and yet it is allowed to breed unrestricted all over the United States; it is allowed to enter freely the houses of the great majority of our people; it is allowed to spread bacteria freely over our food supplies in the markets and in the kitchens and dining rooms of private homes."

Thus writes Dr. L. O. Howard in a communication to the National Geographic Society. He continues:

"Even if the typhoid or house fly were a creature difficult to destroy, the general failure on the part of communities to make any efforts whatever to reduce its numbers could properly be termed criminal neglect; but, since it is comparatively an easy matter to do away with the plague of flies, this neglect becomes an evidence of ignorance or of a carelessness in regard to disease-producing filth which to the informed mind constitutes a serious blot on civilized methods of life.

"If we allow the accumulation of filth we will have house flies, and if we do not allow it to accumulate we will have no house flies. With the careful collection of garbage in cans and the removal of the contents at more frequent intervals than ten days, and with the proper regulation of abattoirs, and more particularly with the proper regulation of stables in which horses are kept, the typhoid fly will become a rare species.

"We have shown that the typhoid or house fly may carry typhoid fever, Asiatic cholera, dysentery, cholera morbus and other intestinal diseases; it may carry the bacilli of tuberculosis and certain eye diseases; it is everywhere present, and it is disposed of with comparative ease. It is the duty of every individual to guard so far as possible against the occurrence of flies upon his premises. It is the duty of every community, through its board of health, to spend money in the warfare against this enemy of mankind. This duty is as pronounced as though the community were attacked by bands of ravenous wolves."

them in any way to leave the field against their own better judgment." The statement concludes with a summary of the record made by Eversole while in the air mail service, which, the pilots hold, explains the fact that he is no longer in the service.

BOY IS LIGHTNING READER

Twelve-Year-Old School Pupil Read Twelve Books of Average Size in Single Day, and Wanted More.

Raleigh, N. C.—Raleigh claims to have, in the person of Louis Silver, twelve years old, in the seventh grade of the public schools, one of the fastest readers for his age in the country. The boy a few days ago read 12 books of the average number of pages in a single day, and declares he could have read several more "if I could have gotten them."

In a last speech given by his teacher, Miss Florence Fitzgerald, Silver read the words in a hurry and surprised many of the pupils. The boy's reading speed is a record for his age.

Southwest News From All Over New Mexico and Arizona

(Western Newspaper Union News Service.)

Altogether, N. M., is making plans for a big celebration for the Fourth of July and a subscription is now being taken up by the business men to raise the funds. A feature of the program will be wild west events.

In order to boost the tourists travel over the route through Socorro, N. M., several of the business men of the city have subscribed the money to erect a filling station at Los Lunas. The roads in the Socorro district are said to be in good condition.

While cleaning a double-barrel shotgun, Dr. W. J. Lee, well known physician of Las Vegas, N. M., accidentally discharged one of the barrels which had been left loaded, the full force of the shot taking effect in his left foot, necessitating amputation.

The New Mexico law imposing an excise tax upon distributors of gasoline was held valid and the imposition of an occupation tax by the same law partly valid by the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision of the lower federal courts was reversed.

Fifteen miles of standard graded road will be added to the route between Espanola and Chama, N. M., according to a report of the headquarters of the forest service. The new road will extend south from the settlement of Cebolla through Canjilon, and when completed will cost over $100,000.

There is no destitution among the Mexican miners at Jerome, Ariz., despite the fact that between 150 and 200 mine workers have been discharged there. P. H. Milnes, state immigration commissioner, declared on his return to Phoenix from a trip to Jerome and other points in the northern part of the state.

State Water Commissioner Norviel of Arizona has accepted for filing the application of the Southern California Edison Company to develop hydro-electric energy from the Colorado river. Promoters of the project say it involves an ultimate expenditure of about $300,000,000, or twice as much as the sum spent on the Panama canal.

The possibility of opening up an aerial passenger service through the Grand Cañon of the Colorado is being considered by the War Department. Lieut. Alexander Pearson, Jr., transcontinental flier, has been ordered to make an investigation to find landing fields and then make an aerial observation trip to ascertain air conditions at different times of day and note emergency landing fields.

The local troops of Boy Scouts of Gallup, N. M., will have a fine weekend camp ground if the present plans of the business men of the city are carried out. A splendid camp ground has been selected about twenty miles north of the city in the tall pines, and this will be equipped with a real log cabin which will have all the comforts of a home and will provide the boys with a fine place to spend the weekends during the hot weather.

According to the census report of 1920, Union county leads all the counties of New Mexico in agriculture, there being 2,615,522 acres in farms in the county. There are 2,308 farms in the county operated by the owners and only 344 by tenants. The nearest approach to this record is Colfax county, where 850 of the farms are operated by the owners and 202 by tenants. The report shows that out of the 2,648 farms in the entire county only four of them are operated by colored farmers.

William H. Evans, 40 years old, of Los Angeles, Calif., died in a hospital at Phoenix as a result of a broken neck, which he suffered in an automobile accident. The accident occurred four and one-half miles east of Phoenix, when the automobile in which Evans was riding collided with a milk truck from the state hospital for the insane.

An address by Governor M. C. Mechem of New Mexico will be a feature of the celebration to be held on the Fourth of July at the official opening of the new highway over the Black Range. A big meeting of the chambers of commerce of Silver City, Hillsboro and Hot Springs will be held shortly, when the plans for the celebration will be completed.

As previously announced, Whiteco, Ariz., will have a Fourth of July celebration to begin Saturday, July 3, and last until Monday evening, July 4. During the celebration a number of real sports will be featured, including horse races, baseball games, foot races and other sports, with dancing Saturday and Monday nights of the celebration and a big free barbecue.

Several people were injured, none seriously, when the northbound train on the Deaver & Rio Grande, leaving Santa Fe, N. M., went into the ditch at Espanola, thirty miles north. Such a wreck as a result of the terrible rattle is supposed to have been the cause. Andrew Strang of Albuquerque, N. M., has been appointed superintendent of the prohibition agent for the New Mexico department, with headquarters at El Paso, Texas. Dudley W. Spitzer of Phoenix, N. M., was named deputy superintendent of the prohibition agent for the Arizona department.

FROM REMOTEST PARTS OF GLOBE

Tanlac Elements Come From Many Lands Far Away From Here.

The ingredients from which the celebrated medicine Tanlac is made, come from remote sections of the earth, and are transported thousands of miles over land and sea to the great Tanlac Laboratories at Dayton, Ohio, and Walkersville, Canada.

The Alps, Apennines, Pyrenees, Russian Asia, Brazil, West Indies, Rocky Mountains, Asia Minor, Persia, India, Mexico, Columbia and Peru are among the far away points from which the principal properties of this remarkable preparation are obtained.

What is sold to be the largest pharmaceutical laboratory in the United States has been completed at Dayton, Ohio, for the manufacture of Tanlac, which, according to recent reports, is now having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world, over 20,000,000 bottles having been sold in six years.

The new plant occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space and has a daily capacity of 50,000 bottles. Uniform quality is guaranteed by a series of careful inspections by expert chemists from the time the roots, herbs, bark and flowers are received in their rough state from all parts of the globe, until their medicinal properties have been extracted by the most approved processes. The finished medicine is then bottled, labeled and shipped out to tens of thousands of druggists throughout the United States and Canada, to supply a demand never before equaled by this or any other medicine.

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

MERELY CHANGE THEIR TUNE

Members of Great and Noble Army of Creakers Are Never Permanently Discouraged.

Orville Wright was talking at a Dayton dinner about the new Caproni biplane which carries 100 passengers. "What will the scientists say now?" he laughed. "When my brother and I were trying to fly the scientists proved time after time that flight was impossible to man. Afterward, when flying was actually accomplished, they proved that airplanes would never be more than dangerous toys—big, stable ones couldn't be made—they'd be too heavy to rise. "Those scientists were like the old lady who was taken to see the first trolley car to start in her village. She looked at the car and sniffed: "It'll never go." "But the car did go. It went beautifully. Then the old lady, starting after it shrieked: "It'll never stop!"

Pilots Deny Charges

Accusations Against Aerial Mail Men Are Disproved.

Accidents in Flight Due to Obvious Beyond Control of Executive and Mechanical Forces.

Chicago.—The Chicago members of the Air Mail Pilots' Association of America have issued a formal statement in reply to charges against the officials and others connected with the aerial mail field near Maywood, Ill. In this the pilots deny that the accusations made by ex-pilot C. C. Spence, who conducted the double of several pilots and mechanics were due to actual negligence and insubordination of the crew and pilot-in-command of the airplane. The pilots of this association in Chicago which is representative of the entire country, have issued a statement in which they deny that showing they were due to causes beyond the control of the executive and mechanical forces.

"The Maywood field," say the pilots, "has always possessed an excellent reputation among the pilots of the association from coast to coast for being its ships in the best possible condition under all circumstances and for fair and conscientious executives who have on every occasion permitted them to use their own judgment as to when and how to get the mail through. That their methods were successful is attested to by the fact that this field, now so much under discussion, maintained an average of 85 per cent throughout the winter just past, which, due to frequent fog was the worst in the experience of the pilots.

"The pilots of this association in Chicago which is representative of the entire country, have issued a statement in which they deny that

Admiral Sims Stirs Up Hornets' Nest by His London Speech About the Irish.

SECRETARY OF NAVY AGTS

Mexico Told She Must Sign Treaty to Obtain Recognition—Futile Raising From Flood Disaster—New Parliament of North-ern Ireland Meets.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Some of our eminent Americans have a positive genius for saying the wrong thing when they are abroad. Closely following the extraordinarily tactless utterances of Ambassador Harvey in his first address in London comes the speech of Admiral Sims at a meeting of the English Speaking union in the British metropolis. He is quoted in the press as saying: "I do not want to touch on the Irish question, for I know nothing about it. But there are many in our country who technically are Americans, some of them naturalized and some born here, but none of them Americans at all. They are Americans when they want money, but Sinn Feiners when on the platform. They are making war on America today. The simple truth of it is that they have the blood of the British and American boys on their hands for the obstructions they placed in the way of the most effective operation of the allied naval forces during the war. They are like zebras, with black horses with white stripes or white horses with black stripes. But we know they are not horses—they are asses. But each of these asses has a vote and there are lots of them."

Of course the numerous friends of "free Ireland" in the United States were enraged by these words, and Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois went to the front promptly, denouncing the admiral's speech as "reprehensible and disgusting." He called the attention of Secretary of the Navy Denby to the address and asked that Sims be disciplined if it developed that he had been correctly quoted.

Without bothering the President with the affair, Secretary Denby cabled to Admiral Sims the substance of the press reports and ordered him to inform the department immediately whether or not he had used the language attributed to him.

The senate, taking to itself some of the admiral's harsh expressions, unanimously adopted a resolution ordering the naval affairs committee to make a thorough investigation of the matter.

Forecasting his reply to Secretary Denby, Admiral Sims declared he would not repudiate a single word of his speech.

penation valid titles which have been obtained by American citizens under Mexican laws. A confiscation policy strikes not only at the interests of particular individuals but at the foundations of international intercourse, for it is only on the basis of the security of property validly possessed under the laws existing at the time of its acquisition that commercial transactions between the peoples of two countries and the conduct of activities in helpful co-operation are possible.

"This question is vital because of the provisions inserted in the Mexican constitution promulgated in 1917. If these provisions are to be put into effect retroactively, the properties of American citizens will be confiscated on a great scale. This would constitute an international wrong of the gravest character, and this government could not submit to its accomplishment."

The Republican majority in the house took steps to discard the Borah amendment to the naval bill, and to substitute the idea of the Porter joint resolution, which concurs in the expressed purpose of President Harding to call a disarmament conference but refuses to tie his hands with instructions or requests, as does the Borah plan. The Porter idea, it is said, is the more pleasing to the President, but he will not directly intervene in the controversy. The house Democrats are almost solidly in favor of the Borah amendment.

The senate performed a peculiar flop last week in dealing with the army bill. On Tuesday, by a vote of 34 to 30, it rejected the drastic army reduction voted by the house, adopting the plan of the senate military committee for an army of an average strength of 180,000 during the next year, with a reduction to 160,000 by February 15, 1922. Next day the senate returned itself, deciding 36 to 22, to reduce the army to 120,000, which would necessitate the discharging of about 75,000 men before the middle of next February. The entire bill was then passed without a roll call. It carries an appropriation of $323,000,000 for the army for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

President Harding announced to congress his selections for the reconstructed United States shipping board. A. D. Lasker, a well-known advertising man of Chicago, was appointed chairman. The other members are: T. V. O'Connor of Buffalo, N. Y.; former Senator Chamberlain of Oregon; Edward C. Plummer of Maine, E. I. Thompson of Alabama, Meyer Lisener of Los Angeles and Rear Admiral Benson of Georgia. The selection of Mr. Lasker was criticized sarcastically by certain Democratic congressmen and warmly defended by Illinois representatives.

The Republican national committee, in session in Washington, accepted the resignation of Chairman Will Hays and elected John T. Adams of Dubuque, Ia., to succeed him. Mr. Adams has been vice chairman, and that position was given to Ralph E. Williams of Portland, Ore. A new basis of representation at national conventions was adopted by which the Southern states will lose 23 delegates from the number accredited to the Chicago convention of last June. The old system allowed for one delegate from each congressional district, but under the new plan a district must have cast 2,500 Republican votes in the last preceding election before it may send a delegate to the convention. To have two district delegates there must have been cast 10,000 Republican votes, or a Republican representative must have been elected to congress. Under the former plan 7,500 votes gave two delegates.

Just before the committee met, one of its most prominent members, Alvin T. Hart of Kentucky, died suddenly in a Washington hotel. Mr. Hart was very active in the last campaign and President Harding offered him an ambassadorship and other high posts. He was a leading business man of Louisville.

disappeared, and Henry Ryan, director of Americanization in the Legion, and Col. Milton J. Foreman of Chicago narrowly escaped death at the same time.

With what we like to consider the true American spirit, the people of Pueblo already are at work restoring their city after the devastating flood that swept through that part of Colorado. The National Guard is policing the area of destruction, which embraces about 298 square miles, and all week supplies of food and clothing were being rushed in by all possible means of conveyance. It is not likely the number of dead over will be known accurately, but it probably reached 500. In addition to the immense property damage in Pueblo and other towns, much of the crops and the live stock in the food area was destroyed. Fears of an epidemic due to the utter disregard of sanitation of the region were allayed by the prompt work of the medical corps. The American Red Cross has undertaken the complete rehabilitation of the flood-stricken sections, and it has issued a national appeal for funds that is meeting with the generous response always given in such instances. The railways, of course, are carrying the relief supplies free.

The British troops in Upper Silesia are making quick work of pushing the insurgent Poles back out of the disputed region and, according to reports, they are doing it without any fighting, for Korfanty's men know resistance would be worse than useless. The French are looking on, hoping that the interests of the Poles, with whom they sympathize, will not suffer. Meanwhile the German defense forces, which are under the command of General von Hofer, have ceased their advance in one sector, but have kept going forward in another, taking Blawentz, Kandrain and Ujest after bloody fights with the Poles and approaching close to Olschwitz, which is called the key to industrial Upper Silesia. Gross Strahlitz, which is held by a French garrison, was surrounded by the Germans on three sides.

After the German high court had convicted two minor defendants of cruelty to British prisoners during the war and given them jail sentences, it took up the case of Submarine Commander Neumann, accused of sinking the British hospital ship Dover Castle. On his plea that he was merely obeying the order of his superiors he was acquitted, and consequently, it is now reported, the court intends to bring to trial the admiralty chief of chiefs who gave the orders to Neumann and the other submarine commanders whose cases are pending.

The allied council of ambassadors has sent to Berlin a letter taking cognizance of the "good will of the German government in its efforts to fulfill its undertakings under the peace treaty, and granting a delay until September 30 for the transformation of the Diesel submarine motors to civilian industry. From Munich came the word that the Bavarian citizens' guard has decided to disarm voluntarily by June 30, in compliance with the ultimatum of the allies. This relieves Berlin of one great worry.

The new parliament of northern Ireland—or Ulster—met in Belfast on Tuesday and was formally organized. Maj. Hugh O'Neill, descendant of the famous O'Neills of Irish history, was elected speaker and six of Ireland's thirty-two counties were put on a self-governing basis. Viscount Fitzalan, the British viceroy and a Catholic, opened the proceedings. Of the 52 members elected 40 were present. The others are nationalists and Sinn Feiners, who refuse to recognize the partition of Ireland and who will sit on Dail Eireann, the revolutionary parliament which claims to represent all of the island. The expenditure of the British government in their divided Ireland will be watched with intense interest by the world.

Bonds of men supposed to be Sinn Feiners were held and ingenuously attempted Wednesday night to locate London by cutting off the telephone and telegraph wires, but they got out.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Another Amendment to the Constitution?

WASHINGTON.—A new constitutional amendment which would make it compulsory for the President to appoint a woman to the United States Supreme court bench is under contemplation. A measure drafted for the reorganized National Woman's party has been submitted to legal authorities, to ascertain whether it can be made a part of the Constitution as a woman's bill of rights.

As it now stands, one of its sections provides that women shall sit on every board, commission and court whose membership is appointed by the President or other federal official.

One section deals with the rights of wives, providing that every married woman shall have the right to retain her maiden name, choose her own domicile and to "enjoy all other privileges" she possessed as a single woman.

The measure also establishes the right of women to sit on juries in every state and federal court.

The protection of illegitimate children is provided in another section, requiring the father of a child born under the banner to contribute to its support and to give it the protection of his name.

By another section, the measure would write the "single moral standard" into the Constitution.

"Equal pay for equal work," the removal of all discriminations from women in the civil service, the right of women who marry foreigners to retain their American citizenship and equal opportunities for women in all educational and medical institutions which are supported in whole or in part by state or federal funds are also provided in the measure.

If it is decided not to submit it as a constitutional amendment, the measure will be introduced in congress. Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican whip of the senate, will introduce it in the upper house and Congressman Fess of Ohio in the lower house.

Federal Law on Automobile Stealing

UNCLE SAM evidently wants to tighten up on the automobile thieves. The senate has passed an amendment to the act of 1919. Senator Nelson of Minnesota said of the amendment:

"The only amendment proposed to be made in the law is to put in the word 'embezzlement,' so as to include not only cases where the automobile is stolen, but as well cases of embezzlement. The distinction is very well put by the Supreme court of the United States in the case of Moore vs. The United States (100 U. S., 200), where the court says:

"Embezzlement is the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come. It differs from larceny in the fact that the original taking of the property was lawful or with the consent of the owner, while in the case of larceny the felonious intent must have existed at the time of the taking."

"This bill simply proposes to amend the law so as to cover those cases where a man may have hired an automobile or may have come into possession of an automobile and afterward concluded to embezzle it."

The act, as amended, reads as follows:

"Sec. 5. That whoever shall transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce a motor vehicle, knowing the same to have been stolen or embezzled, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

"Sec. 4. That whoever shall receive, conceal, store, barter, sell or dispose of any motor vehicle, moving as, or which is a part of, or which constitutes interstate or foreign commerce, knowing the same to have been stolen or embezzled, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both."

Senator King of Utah argued that it was the duty of the states rather than of the federal government to handle the situation. He finally withdrew his objection.

Congress Worried Over Our Agriculture

CONGRESS appears to be worried over the agricultural situation. At any rate a congressional investigation is quite possible. Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin sponsors the following resolutions:

"Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That a joint commission is hereby created, to be known as the 'Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry,' which shall consist of five senators to be appointed by the president of the senate and five representatives to be appointed by the speaker. Said commission shall investigate and report to the congress within 90 days after the passage of this resolution upon the following subjects: (1) The causes of the present condition of agriculture, (2) The cause of the difference between the prices of agricultural products paid to the producer and the ultimate cost to the consumer, (3) The comparative condition of industries other than agriculture, (4) The relation of prices of commodities other than agricultural products to such products, (5) The banking and financial resources and credits of the country, especially as affecting agricultural credits, (6) The marketing and transportation facilities of the country.

"The commission shall include in its report recommendations for legislation which in its opinion will tend to remedy existing conditions, and shall specifically report upon the limitations of the powers of congress in enacting relief legislation. The commission shall elect its chairman, and vacancies occurring in the membership of the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments. The commission is authorized to sit during the sessions or recesses of congress, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, and to employ such personal services and incur such expenses as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this resolution."

"Who's Who" in the Washington Lobby

THE senate may get at the facts concerning the lobbying situation in Washington. Anyway, Senator King of Utah has introduced a resolution with many a whereas which reads in part:

"Resolved, That a special committee, to consist of five members of the senate, be appointed by the vice president, which committee is hereby authorized and instructed to investigate the charges that various corporations and associations, organizations and combinations of corporations engaged in various lines of trade, commerce and industry are and have been carrying on an extensive propaganda throughout the country, and are and have been maintaining offices and lobbyists in the city of Washington for the purpose of influencing tariff, revenue and other legislation pending in congress; the charges that the dye industry is controlled by a combination of corporations which is in fact a monopoly and have employed agents, attorneys, lobbyists to influence congress and to secure special legislation."

eral government have engaged in propaganda throughout the country, seeking additional appropriations and other legislation for the extension of their authority; and to investigate generally the expenditures made in behalf of such propaganda and for the maintenance of lobbies in Washington, to ascertain the names of persons who are engaged in such activities and the nature and extent of their activities, and report its findings to the senate.

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would fester and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered every day that a woman could suffer. Then I read one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."

—Mrs. J. H. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

It is quite true that such troubles as Mrs. Meyer had may reach a stage where an operation is the only recourse. On the other hand, a great many women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Bachelor's Prayer

Backward, turn backward, O
Time, in your flight,
Give us a maiden with skirts not so tight;
Give us a girl whose charms,
many or few,
Are not so exposed by much
peek-a-boo;
Give us a maiden so matter what age,
Who won't use the streets for a vaudeville stage;
Give us a girl not so sharply in view;
Dress her in skirts that sun
won't shine through,
Then give us the dances of days long gone by;
With plenty of clothes and steps
not so high;
Oust turkey-trot capers and butter-milk glides,
The hurdy-gurdy twist and the
wiggie-tail slide;
Then let us feast our tired optics
once more
On a genuine woman as sweet as of yore,
Yes, time please turn backward
and grant our request
For God's richest blessing—but not one undressed.

CLEANING THE DOG

"THIS is the most wonderful soap ever offered the public," explained the visible agent, as he opened his grip. "It will clean anything under the sun. It will remove grease spots, polish furniture—"

"Oh, I have no doubt it will restore hair to hold heads and make chickens lay eggs," said Mrs. Curfew, sarcastically. "I feel quite satisfied it's made of bark and buds and healing herbs, but I don't want any of your marvelous soap, having had experience with other marvels of the same kind. Last fall an agent came along, selling a soap that would do everything you can think of, from beautifying the female complexion to chasing the crows out of the corn. The agent talked as though he had eight-day works in him, like our old grandfather's clock, and he didn't make any impression until he said the soap would heal all skin diseases of man or beast. It happened at that period that Mr. Curfew had an imitation bird dog that he traded a good watch for, and gave a dollar to boot, said dollar having been extracted from my private savings, and never returned.

"This dog had the mange or some disagreeable disease that caused him to itch in the most reprehensible manner. He was always scratching and rubbing against everything he could find, first and last. One day he upset my parlor table and broke all my best china, which I had placed on the table a few minutes before. He also upset the sewing machine and the churn, and I don't know what else.

"So when Mr. Curfew heard that the agent's soap would cure skin diseases, he insisted upon buying a cake, and after he had gone he began to wash the dog with that marvelous soap. I don't know what ingredients said soap contained, but after it was rubbed into the dog's skin that unfortunate animal became frantic and acted as though its reason tottered on its throne. Mr. Curfew tried to hold the beast, and it reached around and bit his ear almost off, and of course he released it then, and the uproar he made, as he danced around the house, holding his ear with one hand, and summoning the police with the other was simply scandalous.

"Meanwhile the dog ran off, entirely cowered. Mrs. Turpentine was crossing the road pushing her baby buggy, when the animal collided with said vehicle, and spilled her offspring into the mud. I am willing to admit that such an experience was aggravating, but I don't think it was ladylike in Mrs. Turpentine to come over to my house with her muddied infant under her arm, and shake her feet under my nose, and tell me that for five cents she'd pull all my hair out.

"Old Mr. Popplejay was standing on the corner, leaning on his cane, waiting for a street car, when the crazy dog ran against his cane and he took a header into the gutter, and I really felt sorry for him when I saw him going home ten minutes later, dripping slush and mud like a sea-serpent, but I couldn't sympathize with him so very much when he picked up a brick as he was passing our place and smashed a panel in our front door.

"For two days people were coming here claiming that we ought to reimburse them for damages done by that dog. It seemed that the unfortunate animal made a circuit of the town, and left a trail of resolution behind him. He upset six pans of milk for Mrs. Trumpeter, and scared Smith's family horse so it ran away and injured several members of the family, and killed eight prize chickens for Mr. Dippy, and I don't know what else. In view of which, I think we can struggle along without any of your marvelous soap."
