OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1921

NUMBER 6

Our Santa Fe Letter

DEMOCRATS ASSIST FARMERS OF THE STATE

Relief to the New Mexico farmer is sure to result from the resolution introduced in the house of representatives by Cos Howard, democrat of Roosevelt county, and in the senate by Hull of Curry county, also a democrat. The resolution calls upon the state corporation commission to reduce rates on hay and grain shipped within the state in order that New Mexico farmers may meet competition from Arizona and Colorado. At present inter-state rates are so low that grain may be shipped in from other states cheaper than from the Pecos valley and the east side. The resolution aims to have the intra-state rates brought down to a level with the rates from surrounding states in order that the surplus grain and produce crops of farmers of the state may be quickly moved.

TEACHERS' PENSIONS ASKED BY DEMOCRAT

Teachers who have served 20 years in the public schools of New Mexico will be pensioned in the future if the legislature acts favorably upon the bill proposed in the house of representatives by Puryear, democrat, of Chaves. Under provisions of the bill any teacher with 20 years work in New Mexico schools would be eligible for retirement on a pension of $500 a year, the sum to be paid out of the general school funds of the year.

GAME PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION ASKED FOR THE SQUEAL

The republican majority lived up to its threats and took the whole hog in the game protective dispute, leaving the sportsmen of the state nothing but the squeal. The house of representatives has passed the Gable bill for the protection of game, this measure squarely opposing the desires of the state game protective association and of sportsmen not affiliated with that body.

The game protective association asked for the creation of a commission with absolute power to open and close localities to hunters and fishers. They received in the Gable bill a commission with powers to suggest such closings, but the governor has the absolute power in his ability to veto any suggestion.

They asked the appointment of the game warden through the commission. The Gable bill provides for the appointment by the governor, with neither the advice nor consent of the commission. In other words, the sportsmen of the state received through the Gable bill a powerless commission and the double cross.

ROAD BOSSES NEAR END OF SOFT SNAP

Aided by five independent republicans the democratic minority in the senate nearly wedged a monkey wrench into the republican machine. Standpat republican senators attempted to modify the bill abolishing the road superintendents so that the present republican incumbents might hold office until the middle of June. The democrats and independent republicans beat three of their proposals in rapid fire style.

The democrats were not able to force the passage of the bill with the emergency clause, but effected a compromise which will transfer the powers of the road superintendents to the county commissioners and eventually force republicans away from the pie counter in democratic counties.

MINORITY PLACED ON SHEEP BOARD

There will be a democratic representation on the sheep sanitary board if a senate amendment by Hull, democrat of Curry, goes through the house as it did the senate. The bill for the creation of a sanitary board provided for five members, all of whom might be from the same political party.

Hull introduced an amendment stipulating that not more than three members should be of the same political faith. The republican board planned a solid board but saw the wisdom of permitting minority representation, and passed the bill with the Hull amendment.

ZINN MEMORIAL HELPS SOLDIERS

The senate has passed a joint memorial by Zinn, democrat of Quay, asking congress that 18 million acres of public domain, unreserved and unappropriated within the state of New Mexico, be donated to the state for division among the ex-service men and nurses in lots of 640 acres without other restriction than proof of honorable service in the army, navy or marine corps, or as a government or Red Cross nurse. The remaining balance would be sold in tracts of four sections, and receipts going to the common school fund.

Be thankful you are paying an income tax to Uncle Sam and not an indemnity to William Hohenzollern.

County Educational Notes

Paul Mayer of Carrizozo has been appointed a member of the Lincoln County Board of Education to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Senator E. M. Brickley.

The executive committee of the Lincoln County Teachers' Association, appointed by the chairman, Dr. E. E. Cole, met in the office of the county superintendent of schools last Saturday for the purpose of deciding on the time and place of meeting. Invitations were extended the association by Capitan and Lincoln. Several members of the committee, remembering the splendid hospitality of Capitan in the past, could hardly make up their minds to pass by another opportunity to have history repeat itself, but Miss Helen Pfingsten, a member of the committee and representing Lincoln, was so cordial in her invitation and pointed out the fact to the members of the committee that Lincoln was the first school district organized in the county, and being a place of historical note, and never having had the association meet there, was virtually entitled to it this year. A vote was then taken and Lincoln won. The time decided on was April 8th and 9th. An excellent program is promised for the association.

Mrs. W. S. Manning of Corona has been secured to fill the vacancy in the Corona school caused by the resignation of Mrs. W. B. Stookley.

Mrs. Greene, the school nurse, under the direction of the Lincoln county branch of the Red Cross, who has completed examination of school children in all rural districts but one, reports health in schools in splendid condition.

Escondido, a school situated in the mountains about 12 miles from Lincoln, has a basket ball team. Slowly but surely the rural schools are coming to the front in combining study and play.

All schools are planning exercises commemorating the anniversaries of our beloved statesmen, Washington and Lincoln.

Monday's Storm

A storm hit here Monday morning which was unusually severe, considering the mild winter that has prevailed. Some snow fell throughout the day and was accompanied by a heavy cold wind. The warm sun next day, however, soon melted the slight covering of snow, but the conditions are favorable for more moisture, and it will be welcomed by stockman and farmer.

Marriage Licenses

Lucille Nuley and Melbourne F. Keewom of El Paso.
William Coleman and Cardej Marr of Alto.
Bernardo Salazar and Margarita Salazar of Lincoln.
Francisco Chavarri and Anita Anderson.
R. A. Oxtis, Santa Rosa, and Genoveva Duran, of Santa Rosa.

Unrest Not Warranted

The article headed "Unrest Not Warranted," published in the last issue of the News, and credited to the Archer County (Texas) News, is quite amusing to one who takes pleasure in observing the illogical and inconsistent statements of those who pose as being extraordinary wise.

This would-be sage makes bold to say that there is no unrest. Then proceeds to tell us how "the bulk of the unrest is caused." And, further, lays down a panacea for "a hungry, ragged and clamoring world." Surely the writer of that article did not expect to convince anyone of his logic. Neither may I hope to influence anyone by his example. He states that "the best welfare worker extant is the one who raises twenty acres of corn, and a like number of rye, oats and barley." Yet he evidently does not take his own medicine, else he might know how to spell the name of the trench made in the earth by a plough; or, if an honest son of toil and did not know how to spell this ordinary word, he would have energy sufficient to consult a dictionary.

We agree with the author in question that "good old-fashioned work is a fine antidote for all manner of unrest," imaginary and real. But the production of grain is not the only realm in which we need workers. We need the editors with their papers, the preachers with their messages, the poets with their visions, the professors with their classes, and the politicians with their governmental responsibilities.

I can see no need, however, of men wasting their time trying to pull motes out of other men's eyes when they have beams in their own.

Irrigated Area of County

The irrigated area in Lincoln county has decreased 16.3 per cent in the last ten years, according to the census report. The report gives 7,355 acres under cultivation in 1909, which, in the same table, gives the acreage ten years later at 6,155. The acreage used in enterprise, what kind the report fails to state, shows an increase of 22.9 per cent, the acreage having increased from 9,678 acres in 1910 to 11,897 acres in 1920.

Alto People Wed

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday of last week at the Gurney Hotel, Rev. C. C. Higbee, pastor of the Methodist church officiating. The contracting parties were William Coleman and Miss Cardel Marr, of Alto. The wedding was witnessed by only the immediate members of the families of the principals. These young people have been residents of the Alto section since childhood, and are well and favorably known in that part of the county. The News joins friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous voyage on the ocean of life.

Judge Freidrich Dies in Capitan

Judge Isaac Freidrich died at his home at Capitan Sunday after a lingering illness covering many months. His body was laid to rest in the Capitan cemetery the following day. He is survived by a wife, who faithfully and tenderly cared for him during all the long months of his illness, and a daughter, Mrs. William Ellis, who lives at Las Cruces.

Judge Freidrich was one of the best known men in Lincoln and adjoining counties. He came to this county with his family thirty years ago from Texas, and with the exception of a period of a few years in Roswell has since made this county his home. He formerly practiced law, but for some years past he had been so feeble that he gave no attention to legal matters.

The judge moved from Kansas to Texas in the early days, and practiced law in Austin and other points in that state. He was in his 74th year when death claimed him. He was loyal to friends, faithful and true to his family to the end. May he rest in peace.

Free Garden Seeds

Through the courtesy of Senator A. A. Jones of New Mexico, the News has received about fifty packages of garden seeds, containing assortments of beet, cabbage, lettuce, tomato and turnip seed. The News will distribute these to its patrons, who care to call at this office.

Those with a little ground adjoining their homes can cut down living expenses by setting out a little garden and supplying their own table with vegetables.

Missionary Society

On Tuesday, Feb. 15, the M. E. Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. John Wilson, opposite the church. A good attendance is desired. This will be lesson day and a good program has been prepared. As a special announcement, the Society wishes it to be known that all local mission work should be reported to Mrs. Squier and Mrs. B. F. Stimell. The hour set for meeting is 2:30 o'clock.

Income Tax Facts You Should Know

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has innumerable sources for checking up persons who fail to file an income tax return and pay the amount of tax due.

One of these is "the information at source" provision of the revenue act which requires that reports must be made by all persons, trustees, guardians, fiduciaries, and by partnerships, personal service corporations and organizations, of payments to others during the year 1920 of $1,000 or more. A separate return of information for each employe whose salary is $1,000 or more is required of employers. The return must show the name and address of each recipient and the amount paid.

These information returns are filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D.C., and carefully checked with the returns of individual income. If John Doe, who has received a salary of $1,000 or more during the year 1920, has failed to report this payment in his personal return, he will hear from the collector of internal revenue.

Thousands of delinquents have been discovered and penalties aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars have been collected as the result of this audit. It may be called extravagance to spend a thousand dollars to collect ten, but it is the U. S. way.

Former White Oaks Man Passes Away

Old-timers in White Oaks remember S. J. Wallace, who lived there with his family for a number of years preceding 1904 when he moved to Tucumcari. His death, which occurred there last week, is announced in the following dispatch:

"Tucumcari, Feb. 8.—S. J. Wallace, better known all over the eastern part of the state as Dad Wallace, died at his home here last week at the age of 81 years. For several years he had managed a small farm near here, in which business he had been very successful. He leaves a host of friends who will miss him."

To Save Fish Along Coast

Pollution of Water and Catching in Nets Is Cause of Serious Condition.

NEW JERSEY STARTS MOVE

Experienced Fishermen Say That Supply of Migratory Fish Has Been Seriously Depleted—Other Sea-board States Are Suffering.

Newark, N. J.—A movement has been started in New Jersey to save from extermination the migratory fish which spawn in one place and move along the Atlantic coast with the changing of the seasons—such as mackerel, menhaden, herring and numerous other varieties peculiar to certain localities on this coast. Experienced fishermen declare that the supply of these migratory fish has been seriously depleted by the pollution of the areas in which they spawn and by the reckless manner in which they have been caught in nets.

The method proposed by the New Jersey Fish and Game Conservation league to prevent from extermination is to induce the United States government to take control of and regulate the catching of these fish and stop pollution of the spawning areas. It is contended that only in this way can the increasing cost of fish food to the consumer be checked or reduced.

Four Fundamental Points.

The four fundamental points in the New Jersey league's proposal for national legislation are:

- Protect spawning areas against pollution.
  - Prevent fishing in spawning areas.
  - Regulate the size of the meshes of nets so the immature fish cannot be caught.
  - Protect the natural food supply of eatable fishes.
- The fourth point has to do with one of the most perplexing phases of the salt water problem—the matter of the menhaden industry. The menhaden, otherwise known as mosebunker, which once swarmed along the coast in incalculable numbers, attracting herds of edible fishes that preyed on them, have been slaughtered right and left to produce oil and fertilizer. In the view of experts their end is not far off, and with their passing will disappear from Atlantic coastal waters many of such edible species as now remain.

Fisheries Board Breaks Down.

Efforts to cope with the problem through state regulation here have failed utterly, the last straw being the complete breakdown of the state board of fisheries, which had been created by legislative enactment with a view to increasing the supply of food fishes and reducing the cost to the consumers. The five members of the board resigned in a body in July, 1919, and there have been no reappointments.

Investigation by a committee of veteran coast men disclosed an equally deplorable condition. It is said, in other seaboard states. It was learned, also, that fisheries officials of Connecticut and Maryland agreed with those of New Jersey that a federal law was the only remedy.

Is Haven For Weary

Doctors, Taxes, Policemen Unknown in Tristah da Cunha.

Chaplain Tells of a Wonderful Island Where Lawyers and Factors Never Invade.

Buenos Aires.—The island of Tristah da Cunha is described as "an unspoiled haven of rest for the weary soul, a Mecca for those who long for relief from worries of life," by the chaplain of the British cruiser Dartmouth, which has just returned from a visit to that isolated spot.

"No need to worry over money there, for there is none," said the chaplain. "There are no taxes, no doctors, no lawyers, no clergymen, no policemen, not even a head man. Newspapers and mail arrive, with luck, about once every two years."

"There is not even any medicine, for the last supply of remedies was thrown into the sea by the inhabitants, whose lives are remarkably healthy. Epidemics are unknown."

Tristah is a British possession in the South Atlantic between South Africa and South America. Its snow-capped peak towers nearly 8,000 feet above sea level. It is only 21 miles in circumference. The nearest inhabited place is St. Helena, 1,300 miles away.

the first nine months of 1920 more than 61,775 acres out of about 148,200 acres of war-swept soil had been put into condition for cultivation.

PLANS LAW BY DIVINE RULE

Washington Judge Will Practice the "Principles of New Thought" and Trust Clients.

Yakima, Wash.—Harcourt M. Taylor, retiring judge of the Yakima superior court, has announced he will resume practice of law "in accordance with the principles of new thought."

"As I shall apply the teachings of Jesus, the Christ, to legal service," he states, "I shall accept no employment to fight lawsuits, as counsel or assist others to do so, nor attempt to collect debts; though if I can assist people in keeping out of lawsuits or settling litigation in which they are already involved I shall consider I have rendered the highest legal service. I shall trust in God, not those whom I serve, for my compensation, making no fixed charge. My clients will pay me what they think is right and their means justify."

The island itself is of volcanic origin, the only habitable portion of it being a tongue of fertile land at the foot of the precipitous cliffs.

"Sufficient potatoes are grown in plots to meet the needs of the inhabitants. Cattle and sheep were introduced years ago and many cattle now run wild. Clothes are only to be obtained by bartering from ships that call. For protection to the feet the people make moccasins of bullock hide. Wonderful socks are made by the women from wool carded by themselves.

"From June to October of last year the people had been without bread, tea, coffee and sugar, but they all looked pretty well nourished."

The reason there is no bread is that fifty or sixty years ago a shipwreck near the island allowed rats to get ashore, so that since that time no wheat has been raised. But the men say that they are going to try again when the next mail in a year or two brings them some seed wheat. In the meantime they are in no hurry, if there isn't any bread they can be contented on potatoes. And, to supplement their potatoes, fish are abundant, and cattle, and birds with their eggs, and hells. They want for many things, says the chaplain, nevertheless there appears to be little discontent, and few ever wish to leave the island.

SUICIDE RATE IS 15 A DAY

Cold and Hunger Cause Many to Seek Death in Budapest, Says Statement of Police.

Budapest.—Cold and hunger are causing an average of 15 suicides daily in this city, according to an official statement by the Budapest police. A recent suicide was a former army officer who brought home a scant supply of wood and provisions, killed his wife and three children and then took poison.

Another former officer drew his monthly pension of 300 crowns, used it in buying one simple meal at a restaurant, and then went back and hanged himself.

Rehabilitation of Veterans a "Failure"

WASHINGTON.—The present system of rehabilitating disabled war veterans is denounced by the American Legion as a "failure" which should be remedied by consolidating under a single head the three government agencies now engaged in that work.

The Legion memorial asserts that the function of the three agencies—the bureau of war risk insurance, the federal board for vocational education and the United States public health service—"must be co-ordinated, their machinery decentralized, and all three placed under the common control."

"To do this," the memorial says, "there must be a new law which shall place the unified organization under control of a single administrative head." For this new organization the Legion asks an appropriation sufficient to buy, build, equip and enlarge hospitals sufficient to provide facilities for all the men now under hospital treatment. Bills providing for this have been introduced in both houses of congress at the behest of the legion.

The memorial says the United States has been more liberal than any other nation in its provisions for the disabled soldiers, but that it had failed in a large measure to make these provisions available. This is attributed to "an astonishing state of divided responsibility and wasted effort among the government agencies."

"In the rehabilitation of a disabled man there are three needs—medical treatment, vocational training and financial support," the memorial proceeds. "The government has recognized the three needs, but overlooks the fact that they are the simultaneous needs of a man, not of three different men or of one man at three different times. It makes three problems out of what really is one three-part problem."

Temporary Bar Against Foreign Goods

TO PREVENT the United States from becoming a dumping ground for foreign goods before a new tariff bill can be perfected, a move is developing in congress for re-enactment of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as soon as possible after March 4.

The plan is to use the Payne-Aldrich law as a temporary dike against the flood of foreign goods that Europe is preparing to rush into American markets now unprotected. Those who foster the movement propose that the old law should be re-enacted only as an emergency barrier, to remain effective until the Fordney-Perkins tariff can be made law, probably late in the summer.

Representative Watson of Pennsylvania is one of the supporters of this plan, and he has been gaining converts to the idea rapidly.

Consideration of the new tariff thus far made Republican members of the house ways and means committee in complete accord in favoring ample protection for chemical industries which gained a foothold in the United States during the war. In the recent hearings Schedule A of the tariff law, relating to chemicals, oils and paints, was discussed.

In the hearings on the chemical schedule a change in the basis of valuation in calculating ad valorem rates of duty was urged. Henry Howard, chairman of the executive committee of the Manufacturing Chemists' Association of the United States; Nathan M. Clark, representing the Pyrexolin Manufacturers' association, and also a number of others, proposed that the domestic value rather than the foreign value be taken as the basis of any rates that are in any way regulated by the value of the imported article.

Representative Fordney, chairman of the committee, and other Republicans on the committee showed a decided sympathy with this reversal of the policy which has been in effect for more than a century.

Congress May Reduce Naval Estimate

REPRESENTATIVE Kelley of Michigan, chairman of the house naval subcommittee on appropriations, after a conference with President-elect Harding, will propose to the committee a 40 per cent cut in the naval estimate for ship construction.

Representative Kelley said he was giving his own views and made no attempt to reflect the opinions of the President-elect, but declared he thought the policy should be to gradually complete the naval building program of 1918, but with a view to proportionate disarmament of the nations.

"The coming year in my opinion," he said, "should be a normal, healthy, naval-building year. The navy is asking for $184,000,000 for new ships alone—something more than thirty, including six battle cruisers, ten battle-ships and ten scout cruisers. As this work goes forward now the navy is spending about $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 a month. This rate, I believe, is rapid enough to carry on the necessary construction, and about $100,000,000 ought to be enough to carry out the building program."

"I told Senator Harding that in any discussion of the reduction of armament I could not see how we could avoid building these ships, for it would cost as much now to discontinue building as it would to finish the job."

Representative Kelley said proportionate armament reduction "should be made off the bottom."

"We should abandon the old ships and old guns," he said, "in any disarmament scheme. Every nation will keep its new weapons."

Disarmament is scheduled for lengthy discussion in both branches of congress. In the senate the foreign relations committee will resume consideration of the Borah and Walsh resolutions for naval disarmament.

Gen. Crowder's Difficult Errand in Cuba

HOW to accomplish deflation without precipitating a financial crash, a possible revolution, or American intervention, is the Cuban problem confronting Gen. Enoch Crowder, who was sent there by the United States to straighten out Cuba's tangled political and economic affairs. The Cubans have great confidence in General Crowder.

The Menocal administration professes deep distrust of the schemes for Cuban financial reform. These schemes are alleged to favor absorption of the tottering Havana banks by Wall street financial interests and the consequent profits of millions by them from Cuba's distress.

Cuba eyes her present financial troubles largely in speculation in sugar when the world shortage was accentuated through the hoarding by profiteers, which sent the price of sugar to 18 cents per pound on New York docks. Cuban planters and mill owners reaped fortunes overnight, but this only whetted their appetites, and they formed a combine which was pledged to withhold 1,000,000 bags of sugar from the market until the price should go to 25 cents or more.

to find that their sugar spree was over. The sugar and related industries which had ordered large amounts of machinery and supplies from America C. O. D., now were unable to pay for the goods and the docks and wharves soon were piled high with goods, while the harbor was filling with more ships whose cargoes neither could be discharged nor paid for.

While the harbor congestion brought commerce and industry to a standstill, a survey of the situation disclosed the collapse of the sugar boom had left three large banks insolvent. They were full of 18-cent sugar paper. To save the insolvent banks from immediate confession of bankruptcy and to avert ruin on the solvent institutions, the government declared a moratorium.

OWN GAS KILLS HIM

Chemist Commits Suicide Under Dramatic Circumstances.

Pays All Debts and From Remaining Stock of Chemicals Mixes Compound to Conquer Gas.

London.—Competing his own lethal gas, Constantine Du Marcheskey, a chemist and botanist of international repute, former professor in the University of Petrograd, committed suicide in a Geneva hotel under dramatic circumstances.

Marcheskey escaped from Russia with a small fortune, which was exhausted after two years' residence in Geneva, where he continued his research work and wrote a number of scientific books. When his funds were gone he was proud to appear for the first time in view of his high standing he could have obtained a handsome subsidy to pursue his studies from scientific associations in America, France and England had he stooped to solicit aid.

He preferred to die. He scrupulously paid all his debts and then from his remaining stock of chemicals mixed a special composition, which he poured into a receptacle, to which he attached a tube.

At the other end of the tube was a mask which he placed over his face, and then kneeling himself by the bed released the gas which was given off from the composition. He died from asphyxiation. Firemen had to wear masks to remove the body from the room.

Tones of Rust Turn to Brown

Color, always an important factor in fashions, is claiming more than usual attention this season. This is practically the first time, notes a Paris fashion correspondent, that the Paris dressmaker has had an opportunity to launch absolutely postwar colors. During the years that have succeeded the signing of the armistice it has been largely a question of using up stocks of both manufactured goods and raw materials. But throughout the seasons which have intervened the French manufacturer has had time to readjust himself to a new regime, so that what is being shown this winter as novelty is actually new. Hence the new colors appearing for 1921 are worthy of more than passing mention.

Strong, well determined and definite describe the tones shown on the color cards for next spring. The choice of the Paris dressmaker and milliner is equally well defined. Red is the present winter novelty, and it is anticipated that its favor will be increased in the spring. In the new red series rust shades still are immensely popular.

Rust Color Leads Into Brown.
These rust tones gradually lead to brown, a color in high favor and shown in a very large assortment of tones, running from the deepest so-called black browns into high shades that touch on russet and gold.

There is no reason why red and brown ever should have been considered as belonging to the autumn and winter. They are infinitely more suitable to wear in the springtime. When the little green buds are shooting forth on the trees and nature everywhere is putting on new dresses we feel that we must be in keeping with our surroundings by being clothed in fresh new raiment, and no color adapts itself so readily and so cheerfully to the mood of spring as bright, warm red. Nor does it ever show off to greater advantage than in such a setting as the soft green of new foliage. Later in the summer, when the streets are hot and dusty and the leaves parched and brown, red is not attractive.

Green is another claimant for fashion's favor and a big future is prophesied for it, particularly the dark bottle and olive shades. In the new cotton materials for the coming summer greens are prominent. It is interesting to notice the exactness with which all the shades seen in silks have been reproduced in cotton fabrics. There are lovely deep-green organdies, with shadow printings in lighter shades of the same color. Of a predominance of these new shades is apparent.

Feathers in Greens and Browns.
Costly feathers, such as 'paradise and sigrette and their imitations, are no longer in black, but must be in one of the new dark greens or browns. Preference is given for these colors in evening headresses of metal fabrics, which show a combination of them in the weave. Deep eerald, singly or in combination with metal, is very popular for evening headresses. Prominent milliners are exploiting glowing red hats. Red shades enter into practically all embroidered designs. Lanvin is making a big feature of black and white and red, and everywhere is found the same evidence of marked preference for deep red, rust color, dark browns and dark greens. A coat dress or robe manteau by Cheruit developed in velours de laine is in the new Platane green. Note the drapery across the stomach and the fact that the dress is entirely of panels, one overlapping the other; also that there is a buttoned-on panel at the right side only, with no balancing panel at the left.

Robe Manteau Paris Perennial.
The type of dress known as the robe manteau has become a Paris perennial. It has proved so popular that dressmakers each season present new types of this character. The climate in Paris is favorable to this sort of dress, as a heavy wrap is rarely needed until Christmas, and the robe manteau furnishes a lovely background for a beautiful fur trimming or a separate piece of fur.

Cheruit has made stunning coat dresses in velours de laine. The model described above is one of her best numbers. It may be said to look exactly like a coat, except that across the front the skirt portion drapes slightly in the new wrinkled stomach effect and over this falls a soft rovers, or flap, thus making a simple and clever variation of the coat dress. Mine, Jenny also is very successful with the robe manteau. She, too, makes it of velours de laine and trims it with fur, but keeps somewhat to the Russian type, though one notes also the slight introduction of the stomach drapery or wrinkled effect about this part of the body.

Jenny Model in Russian Effect.
One of Jenny's models of this type is developed in dull red velours de laine and trimmed with mole skin. It has the creased fullness drawn close over the stomach. At one side is a long sash of the cloth lined with a beautiful gray satin. Where the sash is attached to the dress a buckle of carved shell is placed.

There is considerable discussion over long skirts, but about the only places where one actually sees them are the dressmaking establishments. Fremet is among the dressmakers who stand out in favor of the long skirt. Some of her models are ankle length. Just to what extent women will accept these mature-looking gowns is yet to be determined.

A model of this character is developed in red lace and black satin. The novelty of the lace, as well as the form of the dress, adds to its interest. The lace is an all-over pattern and embroidered in gold threads. The low waistline girdle is made of flowers and beads.

Conservative houses such as Beer are keeping to the somewhat conventional type of evening dress—that is, the draped style with extreme décolletage and sleeveless bodice. It is to be noted, however, that many of the draped forms suggest a princess costume.

WOMEN USE "DIAMOND DYES"

Dye Old Skirts, Dresses, Waists, Coats, Stockings, Draperies—Everything.

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains easy directions for dyeing any article of wool, silk, cotton, linen, or mixed goods. Beware! Poor dye streaks, spots, fades, and ruins material by giving it a "dyed-look." Buy "Diamond Dyes" only. Druggist has Color Card.—Adv.

A Ship of Rumor.
Laid up for her final rest at Port Stanley, in the Falkland Isles, the old Great Britain, seventy-seven years of age, and the first big screw steamer to go into deep waters, had to submit to a short detention on account of bad weather in the year that saw the opening of the Crimean war. Returning to Liverpool early in 1854, the Great Britain was taken for an advance guard of a Russian invasion, and for an hour or two caused a greater sensation locally than the famous Russian troop trains early in the great war. She was at that time, according to a local paper, the fastest ship in the world.—London Chronicle.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarrhal Deafness requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRHAL MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRHAL MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions. Circulars free. All Druggists. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Where the New Books Begin.
"What sort of a novel is it?"
"Old-fashioned."
"That so?"
"Yes. The story ends that they were married and lived happily ever after."
"What's old-fashioned about that?"
"The newer authors usually start off their books with the wedding day, and work the old triangle racket through to the finish."

Concerning Chickens.
An Atlanta man asked an old ducky what breed of chickens he considered the best.
"All kinds has dere merits," replied Caesar, after a moment's consideration. "De white ones is de easiest to find, but de black ones is de easiest to hide aftar yo' gits 'em."—Harper's Magazine.

Some people must get awfully tired of listening to their own talk.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proved to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

She Meant Well.
The orchestra in the grillroom was playing classical music during the lunch hour. A woman was listening with what she probably regarded as the proper attitude to assume when good music is played. After each number she applauded, and murmured to her companion, "I do so adore good music!" She beckoned to a waiter and asked him if the orchestra played any music by request. She was informed that it did.
"Will you please tell them to play the sextette from 'Tosca' for me?"

Glad but Confusing New Year.
"I wish you a happy First of January, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-one!" exclaimed the person who is genial but precise.

"You have been going through that rigmarole over and over again," protested his wife. "Why don't you say 'Happy New Year,' and let it go at that?"

"I want to keep myself reminded of the change in figures. I never write the date correctly until the middle of February."

Important to Mothers.
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, that famous old remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the signature of Dr. J. C. Fletcher. In Use for Over 30 Years. Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria.

Uses for Balsam Wood.
Although it has been known for more than 100 years, balsam wood is just coming into use as a substitute for cork in some of its capacities. It is the lightest commercial wood known, and a paraffine treatment makes it available for many purposes for which cork heretofore has been exclusively used. It must be disposed of quickly after being cut, for it rots rapidly when exposed to the atmosphere in the tropics, where it grows.

His Conclusion.
"So she refused you."
"That's the impression I received."
"Didn't she actually say no?"
"No, she didn't. All she said was, 'Ha-ha-ha!'"

HARD TO EXPLAIN POISONING

Scientists Unable to Tell Why Bites of Some Animals Are Fatal and Others Innoxious.

Scientists in Great Britain have been greatly interested in the recent case of a monkey bite resulting in the death of the king of Greece, says a London dispatch. The result is that a study is being made of the effects of bites from various animals. Inasmuch as the monkey is what is known as a "clean feeder," it seems extraordinary that the bite of such an animal should produce the fatal poisoning of a human being.

It does not, however, appear that the malignancy of an animal's bite can be measured by what it feeds upon. A dog is a carnivorous creature, yet its bite seldom produces serious results, while on the other hand the bite of a horse or a donkey frequently results in poisoning. Only a few weeks ago a woman died from being bitten by a donkey, while a man lost a hand through being nipped on the thumb by a horse.

Improvement Noted.
"I think our son Josh is showing more respect for parental authority than he used to," remarked Farmer Oerntosel.

"But he doesn't do a thing we tell him to," said Josh's mother.
"Not yet. But you can't expect everything at once. He has at least got to where he's sufficiently old and dignified not to talk back."

Hopeless.
"And why is he here?" we inquired, stepping in front of padded cell No. 44.
"He was a politician, and when he finally got in office he really tried to carry out his campaign pledges," replied the attendant.—Judge.

Superlative.
Rogers was walking with an absent-minded friend.
"Yesterday," he said, "Mrs. Fulsome half recognized me. She asked me if my name was Rogers."
"And was it?" asked his friend.—Tit-Bits.

The Munchausen Medalist.
The Munchausen prize for 1920 goes to a denizen of New Jersey, who tells of a windmill going so fast in a young cyclone that it pumped hot water.—Portland Oregonian.

NOTHING YOU MIGHT NOTICE

Scottish Farmand and Parisian Viter on a Par as Far as Meals Were Concerned.

James B. Sweeney, the Knights of Columbus delegate who heroically saved France's prettiest girl from death at the Folies Bergere in Paris, was discussing, at his Brooklyn home, his trip abroad.

"The restaurant prices in Paris," he said, "are incredible. A simple dinner at a fashionable place costs $20, and even then it is difficult to get enough to eat. The portions—"

Mr. Sweeney laughed.
"—the portions remind me of the Scottish farmand's porridge.

"Jock," said this fellow's employer, "there's a fly in the parritch."
"That dimes matter," replied Jock gloomily; "I'll no droon."

"The farmer glared at him.
"What do ye mean?" he said, angrily. "That's as much as sayin' ye haven't enough milk."

"Oh," said Jock, still more gloomily, "there's mair than enough for a' the parritch I have."

course, this treatment is not confined to green, for the new cottons appear to have been successfully dyed in every hue under the sun, but much more is made of the green shades this year than for a long time past.

Navy Blue Leases Popularity.
Owing to the marked preference for the foregoing color blue is less important. In fact, there is a minimum of blue in the new color cards in proportion to the prominence of the above mentioned colors. It will not be easy for the American woman to depart from navy blue, which always has been a favorite with her. She has worn it so continuously that the navy blue dress or suit has become almost a national uniform. It will be refreshing to see a number of other colors, for the one great criticism of our dressing is that there is so little variety in it. Apparently every woman chooses the same color and the same model.

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:
In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful. It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only recourse, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

School Notes

(By E. E. Cole)

One day last week one of the students of the high school was so deeply interested in a book that he failed to go to class until one of the teachers came after him. It was a good book, too, one of the Boy Scout books. This reminds us that the Boy Scouts have a first class library of fifty books, well selected and reflecting credit upon the one who selected them. This must have been T. E. Kelly, who has been scout master for several years.

Nearly all the rooms are preparing programs for the Washington-Lincoln exercises to be given on Feb. 22. The grade up to the fourth will have their exercises between one and two o'clock; the grades up to the seventh will have their exercises from two to three; those above the sixth grade will have theirs from three to four. This arrangement is to allow parents to visit the various grades in which their children are.

The Camp Fire Girls met on Thursday evening with Evelyn French. The girls wore their ceremonial costumes for the first time. The evening was spent in review and practice work for their first public demonstration. Although it has been hard work to build a strong foundation for the "Fire," the girls are not discouraged, and, now that the worst is over, they look forward to spring when they expect to enjoy many hikes and parties.

The senior class of the Carrizozo High School gave a Valentine Party in honor of the sophomore and junior classes, Friday evening, Feb. 11, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Wilson. Many hearts were exhibited and some great lovers present. Those who came traded old hearts for new and learned what Cupid had in store for them.

The Girls' Club met Tuesday, Feb. 1, at the home of Mrs. J. E. French. The Club was called to order and discussed a few patterns. Some played games and others sewed. While the individual plates of taffy were cooling, the girls drank lemonade and played the virola. For a time the front and back porches were lined with candy pullers and plates of taffy that were hardening. A stranger would almost have taken it for a candy kitchen. Dr. and Mrs. Cole arrived in time to eat some real home-made candy. Mrs. Cole very kindly invited the Club to meet with her for the next regular meeting.

Mrs. Greene, our efficient county nurse, reports that the Carrizozo school children are rapidly recovering from the whooping cough. One fact that helps is that many parents are keeping their children home from the theatre and other places where crowds assemble. There is one case of measles, brought from El Paso, but that is almost recovered.

Two prizes have been awarded the boys who have improved the most in the matter of coming to school clean. One of the boys was offered the choice of a pair of roller skates or a watch costing three dollars and fifty cents. He was told to go to Kelly's and take his pick. He chose the watch, a choice which most of us consider the wise one. Mrs. Greene gave the prizes.

Mrs. Greene says that the children are coming to school cleaner than ever before.

The "Greatest Mother" concept which was visualized in the famous art poster used by the American Red Cross in its second war fund campaign has had its symbolism adapted to the Red Cross works of the post-war era and will illuminate the main poster to be used in the Fourth Roll Call November 11-25. This adaptation will bear the title "Still the Greatest Mother in the World." Everyone is familiar with the original "The Greatest Mother in the World," the effectiveness of which has been shown in part by the fact that it has furnished a synonym for Red Cross that has come to almost a household term. More than any other symbol, except the red cross itself, the public has made it the trademark of the American Red Cross.

faces, hands and in every other way. One little girl brushed her teeth so hard the other day that she brushed a tooth out. The school across the track is showing marked improvement and is a credit to Mrs. Craddock and Miss Hughes.

FIRST AID TRAINING TO MEN AND WOMEN

American Red Cross is Teaching Hundreds of Thousands Life-Saving Methods.

The purpose of instruction in First Aid to the injured offered by the American Red Cross is to train men and women to administer First Aid treatment promptly and intelligently when emergencies demand it. First Aid treatment is not intended to take the place of a physician's service. A surgeon should always be summoned as a precautionary measure where there is an injury of any consequence, but when one cannot be secured a few minutes' delay may mean a fatality. In such a case a person trained in First Aid is invaluable not only to the individual, but through him to the community in which he lives.

There is perhaps no way of ascertaining the number of deaths or serious disabilities which result from lack of proper safeguards or prompt emergency treatment. It is safe to assert they number thousands daily. There can be no doubt that the application of First Aid methods to each case would immeasurably lighten the country's toll of suffering and death.

The dissemination of First Aid training and information has already produced a far-reaching and beneficial influence in the prevention of accidents on railroads, in mines and in great industrial concerns.

The benefit of a widespread knowledge of First Aid in the event of a great disaster, such as a train wreck, an explosion, an earthquake, etc., is obvious. Laymen who have had First Aid training can render efficient assistance. Many lives may depend upon such emergency care.

Red Cross First Aid work includes (1) the formation and conduct, through Red Cross chapters, of classes for instruction in accident prevention and First Aid to the injured among men and women in all communities and in every industry; (2) the introduction of courses of instruction in high schools and colleges.

The Red Cross is prepared to supply First Aid books and equipment at reasonable prices.

Every person in this country able to do so should, in his own interest, receive Red Cross First Aid instruction. Information about the course and instruction classes may be had at the nearest chapter headquarters.

Yellow Men Sleep

By JEREMY LANE

Copyright by The Conroy Co.

"WHAT A WORLD."

Synopsis.—Cornelius Levington, well-born, an orphan, comes to manhood through the devious ways of the underworld. He is saved for a better life by Andrew March. The strange adventures of "Yellow Men Sleep" begin when Con takes by force a small leather sack from Chee Ming, the Chinese cook of an acquaintance. This sack contains a Chinese map of the Gobi desert, which is precious beyond price to Andrew March. Eighteen years before armed men in the Gobi had taken March's wife and infant daughter from him. Now he sends Con in search of his. On the voyage Con saves Chee Ming a fellow passenger. Con is shot by a gun-sound dart, and while he is in the consequent stupor his map is stolen. On the river boat to Peking he again sees Chee Ming, and realizes they are seeking the same destination. Con keeps faith with Andrew March and starts on his mission westward with a caravan. After weeks of difficult travel he reaches the little settlement of Shan-sung and reads instructions from Andrew March to the effect that Con has been made a federal agent to search out Chee Ming, who has brought quantities of kowtow, a deadly drug, to San Francisco. At Shan-sung Con is unexpectedly joined by March. The two Americans press forward into the desert. Armed Europeans swoop down on them, rob them of everything and leave them to die in the desert.

CHAPTER VI

Treasure.

This shred of a chance, half humorous, was deep-set in anger and loss. Hand was a rasp to their bodies, and the slashed clothing gave scant protection. Already, in imagination, Con was in need of a drink. The thought of brandy was a horror now, and the idea of clear, cool water like a knife in the throat. Andrew March sat down and studied the bottom of his foot.

"How much do you think," Con inquired, "in miles?"

"Oh, not so very far. If we only had one camel—"

"Yes—one with milk in her."

"Don't talk like that," said the elder man, sharply.

The subject of drinkables was thus dismissed by the veteran, and Con bowed his head in acknowledgment.

Late in the day the sand storm passed, and the air cleared. They went up along the vane of sand, fresh drifted, out of the gully, to gaze at large upon their world—a prison as vast as the horizon circle.

"The white race could wander far here and get lost," said Andrew March.

"Let's not talk about getting lost, either," said Levington.

It was the elder man's turn to nod agreement.

The country was fantastic in formation and color, reddish hills running in rows ahead, like the spine of a world monster showing through. At intervals were cuts, showing the deeper layers of rocky blue and blood-color. Not so much as a dead twig anywhere, or a bird. The skyline was notched with tilted rocks. Levington could not help wondering how soon he would wither and dry up, to bleach beside some colorful boulder.

Pain was gripping him; it was neither grief nor illness, but the current of life, deeper than many are called to feel. He met it silently, with a fortitude that perhaps his mother and father before him helped to integrate. Death had small part in this bitterness. It was a matter of life.

"Help me to keep sane," he said to March.

"That is mutual," said his friend. "But you are not in any danger. I watched you a long while before choosing you for this task. You are not a materialist, and only materialists go insane."

"Yes, I suppose all the others are born with a touch of some kind."

"So I've heard," replied March.

They walked through the sand. Sometimes their feet sank deep and threw them backward, but perhaps the next step would find smooth and solid rock. Progress was a rack of physical straits, and pitifully slow. The hills ahead, so hard to reach, were on a diagonal across their route. It startled Levington to find that this diagonal straightened out every hundred paces. This was simply the effect of the landscape upon their eyes. The hills were distinctly misleading, having a tendency to deflect the course that should lie at an angle over them. Without strict attention to their shadows, the two pedestrians must certainly have wandered off into sandy oblivion. The perennial hands of the ages had wrought cunningly to confuse.

"Our path should lead across those big humps to the southwest," said March.

They suffered the illusion of growing smaller, since there was nothing anywhere to renew familiar associations and comparisons.

Night drew down before they had made any noticeable progress. They rested upon the pink sands, and Con had a pillow of proper shape, restful to the eye in the darkness, although it was solid rock. A dull substitute for sleep claimed their bodies. Levington's dreams were wrecked by huge tumbling mountains that proved at the striking moment to be riders, desert robbers with the fervor of a perverted religion in their ice-colored eyes. All through this wretched slumber, the white man ached and burned from the lashing of the storm, perverts by the thought of their capture and plight. At daybreak the wind began again.

"Let's go," said Con.

"My understanding"—sa March studied his tattooed foot, he made this pun—"dictates plainly a continuance of that direction."

Levington followed him over the unfriendly surfaces. An old wind, half asleep, hissed against rocks, and at moments burned their ankles. By the flying dust the sun was diminished to a far red-hot griddle. Con could not look at his friend for the heat it gave him. He knew that he must himself look as bad. It was not vanity that made him care, but a simple desire to remain human, and not become a thing of rags and beard and thirst.

Tolling up the unequal slopes, to arrive at a new point of confusion, they would note that their shadows no longer fell true beside them, and March would sit down and study the map in its inconvenient location. Then they would go on.

The crest of the first series of hills gave only a sharper wind, a broader vista of desolation. Levington was desperately weary. His step slouched, and the once powerful shoulders lurched sideways. Lonely thoughts passed through his mind, like birds in a ruined hall. His eyes were puffed. There was Memphis, and that mystic high board fence at the end of the blind alley. There was Bill the yellow cook, twisting his hands together in such a quick fascinating manner; or laughing with a voice like the cry of gulls; again, lateing wonder-tales in a language beyond translation. A phantom ghost stood at moments on the edge of the world. Then the unclean woman of Howagiac appeared, with oily black hair, straggling upon her neck, her body bulging with neglect—and suddenly Levington was choking. March gave him a hand.

"Control yourself," whispered the elder man. "It can be done. Same as walking straight when you're drunk. I've seen men in India go for ten days without water, and fifty days without food. It can be done."

"Thanks," muttered Con hoarsely. "I'll try. Ten days, you say, without water."

"And they haven't as good reason as we."

After a time Con turned again to March, and the twist on his face was meant for a smile: "Do you think it will be ten days this time?"

They pressed down into the narrow valley. The next miniature range did not lie parallel either to their course or to its dry sister range. Complexity of lines and contours increased. The two sun-caught men could no longer rely upon their own shadows, for time was passing, and they could not determine how much to allow for the shifting of the planet. Con's head pounded with fear. It seemed of earth herself was no longer tolerant. Much of the former Levington was broken down. All the coils of his body that had ever cried for brandy were now dead and gone. He had been burned down to the pure primitive thirst for water. No killing attempts could remain here to soothe men. Dew, once red and full as stores of summer night, had faded out. Con had been starved and waded to a place of humanly bare world and basic—a relation of man to the earth and sun—where the heats of sex are but a new zero. All the moist forces of Levington were turned inward to sustain life itself.

"Is that that I hear thunder?"

"Maybe the pulse in your own ears," answered March.

They staggered up a third series of hills, which were spread fan-shape in the midst of the world. Looking back, they noted that the first range appeared to have turned partly about since they passed that way. The sun of afternoon showed in the wrong quarter of the sky. March sank to his knees and began to draw intersecting lines in the sand. To Con, as he sprawled near his friend, it was like forcing the solar system back into place. West and north were again established, almost against conviction. They dragged across the third range, but the inactive flutter of hope in their hearts died quickly, when they saw that had miscalculated. Across a deeper valley was another monster bank of dust, another range.

Abruptly Con stopped and pointed down the slope. Directly below them something was moving.

Stones were rolling down the hill. It was not clear from what point they started. Perhaps a dragon had burrowed into the hill and was kicking out the earth from his nest. Clouds of red clay went flying down, below the two watchers. Levington peered, forgetting the awful sun. It was like recovery from blindness, to find something in motion in the dead world. At length, from a hole in the hillside, a living creature appeared, resembling somewhat a man.

Now others of the same species emerged and stood on a sandy ledge, halfway down the slope. They seemed like fat, misshapen children, thin-jegged, hunched of shoulder, with heads set close. Their caps were coils of their own hair. The arms of all were dwarfed. They had come out to take the air after their labors within the hill. The falling clay had stopped. More and yet more of these semi-humans came out into the sunlight, until the slope was darkly patched with their leathery bodies.

March shook his head. Levington noted the first sign of fear in the elder man, who remained silent.

From that distance they determined that the creatures were naked above the waist, but that they wore short, dark skirts like those pictured upon the ancient walls of Assyria. Their canes or staves proved to be implements resembling garden hoses. The faint sound of their conversation drifted up to the Americans. But this was drowned in the slow thunder of Con's temples.

"Cave men?" muttered Levington.

"Witches' children?"

"Aren't they solid? Have my eyes gone out?"

March did not hear, for he simply whispered to himself, "What a world!"

A dromedary was coming across from the further hills. Leisurely it followed a slanting way up to the cluster of creatures around the pit. On the beast were strapped four baskets. Now many hands set about filling these with pebbles, or so it appeared. The camel-driver was another of the crooked dwarfs. When the baskets were full, he led the animal down by the same path, starting across the valley toward the opposite barrier of sand.

The little men who had come out of the hill began to disappear. Their bare bodies were like rough nuggets of copper. Levington's eyes twitched, and he brushed a hand across his face. He wanted to laugh and fling himself down hill. He would ask them for water. For an instant he hated Andrew March for being afraid, and an instant later realized this feeling was merely his own deep-spring fear. He swallowed thickly. A tear stood in one eye, making humorous the pain in his heart.

"Didn't know I had it in me," he said, grinning.

March did not see the tear. He had grown pale beneath the grime.

"Oh, God!" he mumbled, "this isn't what we came for!"

"Suppose we'd better not ask them for a drink," said Con. "We'll go on and hunt for it, because it must grow natural somewhere around here. Shall we follow the dromedary?"

The little men had gone in. Dust rose like smoke from the open shaft. The laden beast was etching his way across the valley. March had roused from his apathy. He looked at Con, who asked:

"Can you make it—down hill?"

"Boy," said March steadily, "you've got a tumbler nervous system."

Commanding their scant energies, the white men made a final play for life, and walked along the crest of the ridge, to keep the animal in view without exposing themselves. The afternoon was waning. The wind slackened. The valley beneath them was painted with soft purple shadow. The hunched little humans and the dromedary turned into a cleft in the great bank, and disappeared.

"There must be something to drink

The two sun-caught men could no longer rely upon their own shadows, for time was passing, and they could not determine how much to allow for the shifting of the planet. Con's head pounded with fear. He had been burned down to the pure primitive thirst for water. No killing attempts could remain here to soothe men. Dew, once red and full as stores of summer night, had faded out. Con had been starved and waded to a place of humanly bare

"Yes, because the dromedary is natural, at least."

"You might wait here," continued Levington, "and I'll run on to make sure."

"We'll go together," said March.

They descended to the valley, and crossing, entered the ravine. Con was light-headed now. He had no further thought of avoiding discovery, by no matter what means. Instinct by an end ended in thirst, and even the idea of death meant a possible drink. This pervasive dryness was a question of the soul, a thirst far deeper than the body. Reckless intent shone in Levington's eyes.

March looked at him sidewise, and Con heard only the latter fragments of his speech:

"Cincinnati—you were going like this when I first saw you. I knew then how Washington needed you in the Gobi. God needs you—this is it—"

"Cincinnati," said Con, uncertainly, "netted me the best friend in the world. He stumbled headlong in a returning wave of weakness, quite the opposite of a moose since."

Dust of the dromedary was rising not far ahead. It required a furious expense of will power to gain upon it. Then, something like a loving hand touched their faces. This was a cool breeze from the far upper end of the ravine. The pathway was wide and well graded. In the sunlight colored strain walled high and various on either side, as might appear to an ant traversing a lane of birthday cake. The breeze was soft upon their cheeks. Perhaps the peculiar halting person beside the dromedary felt that he was being followed—a most fabulous event to him. Some antenna of his wretched consciousness was troubled, and he glanced behind him, through the dust cloud. His throat closed upon a cry of horror. Convulsed, he fled up the rise, and out of sight. His pale scream came back.

"Announcing us," whispered Con, grimly.

"But look!"

Another figure waited at the end of the upward road—some one upon a horse, motionless. The sunlight was a rain of black dots for Levington now, but his muscles were galvanized to a forward motion. It was not in him to stop. He took time to note, stupidly, that though his feet were bleeding, they were insensible as boots. He guessed that the mounted figure might be a sentinel. The sequence of what followed was never afterward clear to Con.

Closer, he saw the glitter upon a long gray cloak. The sentinel had no weapon, and gave no sign other than to watch with curiosity the two faded wanderers. The pony was well groomed and restive, Arabian in build. From beyond the crest of the road a volley of shouts came down into the ravine, and the swift beat of hoofs. All these on-coming riders were as yet invisible, but the cries were resonant with hate.

March called out to the gray sentinel, in the best Chinese he could frame with swollen lips. In response, the left arm of the rider came up, glittering, to shield the face below the eyes.

A rushing cloud of horsemen thundered into the ravine from the upper levels. Swords were here, flashing in the ruddy light. Harsh battle-chanting filled the dust. The riders swooped down to trample the intruders.

Levington was not accountable. He leaped forward to breast them. His hands worked with strange power. Something elemental lived in him; something like the centaurs that had peopled the night horizons. His throat rattled the challenge. The first of the wild horses swerved as if he were a crouching wolf. Con rocked forward, and seized a sword-wrist as it swung low at March's head. And abruptly all strength left him. He fell in the road.

Prominent Western Man Praises Tanlac

G. W. Logan, Peabody, Kansas

"Tanlac has completely restored my health and I feel finer than in years," digestion. My main trouble was indigestion. Nothing seemed to agree with me. At times I would have dizzy spells and at other times my back would ache so bad that I could hardly get up and down in my chair. This is just the condition I was in when I started to take this medicine. It took just six bottles to make a well man of me. I now have a fine appetite, everything tastes good and my digestion is perfect.

"My wife was also troubled with indigestion at times and it relieved her the same way. You may publish my statement wherever you like and if anyone doubts it, just tell them to see me."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Many a Pretty Face Spoiled by Pimples

Not only are these pimples and spots disfiguring, but they lead to serious skin diseases that spread and cause the most discomforting irritation and pain. Sometimes they foretell Eczema, boils, blisters, scaly eruptions and other annoyances that burn like flames of fire, and make you feel that your skin is ablaze.

If you are afflicted with this form of skin disease do not expect to be cured by lotions, ointments, salves and other local remedies, as they can not possibly reach the source of the trouble, which is in the blood. Begin taking S.S.S. today, and write a complete history of your case to our chief medical adviser who will give you special instructions, without charge, while at once to Medical Director, 182 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

Austria's Flight to Be Investigated—Morris and Shidehara Discuss Plan for American-Japanese Accord

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Germany, Austria and Turkey were on the anxious seat last week; and various other nations were only less concerned.

When the matter of German reparations came up, Downer, the French minister of finance, made a long address in which he insisted that France must be paid 400,000,000,000 gold marks.

It was on the question of disarmament that the French yielded most. General Nollet's report said that the Germans were not faithfully carrying out the treaty terms in that respect.

Don't forget the Valentine party at the Methodist church next Monday night. Fill the "heart" with pennies—if you are old enough—and your stomach with the good things the ladies are preparing.

Non-Jury Court Term

Judge Mechem was here again this week holding a non-jury term of court. Quite a number of cases were brought before the court and their disposition will lighten the docket. Several attorneys were here from the outside and hearings have lasted throughout the week.

The Woman's Club

At the regular meeting held Feb. 4, Mrs. O. Z. Finley presided and Mrs. J. E. Farley was the leader. She read a paper on Citizenship which was full of interest. Mrs. Stadman's able talk on Americanization was equally enjoyed by all present. With such a beginning for the club, the outlook for the future is indeed bright.

The next meeting was postponed to Feb. 25th, for the purpose of having some of our future members share in the patriotic program scheduled for that date, and which will be in charge of Mrs. F. E. Richard.

The Indian program planned for March 4th will be given in the evening at the Crystal. The public in general is invited and a small admission of 15c and 25c will be charged.

Miss Mamie Humphrey resigned as chairman of the legislative department and Mrs. Stadman was appointed to the vacancy.

Three names were added to the membership roll: Mesdames S. G. Anderson, G. F. Keating and R. M. Tapat.

Methodist Church

The unfavorable weather last Sunday did not prevent a goodly number of people from attending both morning and evening services. Good! Who said heroism was a lost art? We were glad to notice an increased number of men at the Epworth League business and social meeting last Thursday evening at the home of R. T. Cribb. They evidently enjoyed the evening and will doubtless be on hand for future occasions of like nature. Plans are being formulated for an Epworth League banquet on Washington's birthday. The Sunday School is arranging for a Valentine Social at the church, Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Further particulars will be announced at Sunday School next Sunday morning.

The pastor will continue the general subject of "Our Life Work" for next Sunday. The morning theme will be: "Guiding Principles in Our Life Work." Do not stay home Sundays and nurse the blues. We believe there is more religion in laughing than in crying. Come and laugh with us.

C. C. HIGBIE, Pastor.

Board of Town Trustees

The Board of Town Trustees of Carrizozo met in regular session at the office of the town clerk on Monday evening, Feb. 7.

Members present: A. J. Roland, mayor; F. E. Richard, S. L. Squier and Julian Taylor, trustees; W. W. Stadman, clerk; Wm. Brady, marshal. Absent—Ben Lujan.

The minutes of last meeting held January 12, were read and approved.

On motion of F. E. Richard, seconded by S. L. Squier, the town marshal is instructed to make necessary repairs on the side walk crossing at the corner of Sixth street and Alamogordo ave.

On motion of F. E. Richard, seconded by Julian Taylor, and passed by the board, the Streets, Alleys and Sanitation Committee is instructed and authorized to examine and make the necessary fill on that portion of Alamogordo avenue fronting the Western Garage.

On motion of Julian Taylor, seconded by S. L. Squier, the marshal is instructed to notify the county health officer of the unsanitary condition of old cess-pool back of county jail, with the view of having the same investigated and put in proper condition.

On motion of S. L. Squier, seconded by F. E. Richard, the clerk is instructed to have traffic cards or tags printed for the use of the town marshal in enforcing the traffic ordinance.

The following bills were presented by the clerk, audited and allowed, and warrants ordered drawn for same:

W. Brady, Jan. salary	$40.00
Field-Parker Co., stationery	5.31
Clerk's Jan. salary	25.00

There being no further business the board adjourned.

PARSONS NEWS LETTER

The ground hog who saw his shadow last week was a wise old bird to seek shelter for a few weeks longer, as this week we are experiencing the coldest weather of the season. After Sunday's blizzard the thermometer dropped to zero for a couple of nights. In one or two places it registered a few degrees below.

Mrs. Steraus and her daughter Irma left Saturday for Trinidad, Colo. Little Irma has been ailing for sometime, and her mother decided to take her to Trinidad to consult a specialist on nervous diseases.

Lee Bragg is home again after being away most of the winter.

Mrs. Ellen Stayton made a trip to Capitan this week to make final proof on her homestead in Bear Canon.

Herbert Reddy, who is working on the Helen Rae, spent a few days at home with his family the first of the week.

White Oaks Women's Club

Mrs. R. A. Crenshaw entertained the Women's Social Club on Thursday, Feb. 3. The afternoon was very pleasantly spent at cards and sewing.

After two new members had been initiated, the hostess served a dainty three course luncheon.

Those present were: Mesdames Barber, Crenshaw, Cleghorn, Ellis, Forsythe, Grumbles, Harmon, Hamner, Leighner, Owens, Rustin, Spence, Smith, Van Schoyck, Fewel, Starkey, and Miss Bertha Mayer.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Cleghorn on Thursday, Feb. 10.

What is Your Income?

Deputy Internal Revenue Collector will be in the following places in this county on the dates set opposite, to-wit:

Corona	Feb. 15
Ancho	Feb. 16
Carrizozo	Feb. 17, 18, 19
Capitan	Feb. 21

Harry Pelts, Deputy Collector.

Woman's Club

The music study department of the Woman's Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Albert Ziegler Thursday evening, Feb. 17 at 8 o'clock. All members of the club are welcome.

Banks Optimistic

"The bankers of the important financial centers, who have been steadily and actively in participating in handling the financial problems which have characterized the period of readjustment from war conditions, are optimistic on the present financial and business situation," said Edward Cookingham, president of the Tilton bank, Portland, Oregon. "It is important that all of us—bankers, farmers and wage earners—recognize the fact that the economic adjustment now going on is inevitable and must run its course. However, there are so many favorable features to the present situation, and so much of encouragement in the future outlook, that it is difficult for me to be otherwise than optimistic."

The fish and game law is not what the sportsmen had a right to expect and certainly not what was desired; but let us hope it will be an improvement over the old law, which, if true, will be a step in the right direction.

A. B. Zumwalt, superintendent of the Bonito and Eagle Creek pipe lines, was down Sunday securing men and teams to work on the Lake. The railroad company is laying the Lake, with the hope of closing a leak, and the work will require a number of men and teams for a considerable period.

The Alamogordo basket ball teams—girls and boys—will be in Capitan tomorrow to play the Capitan teams. The games between these teams, played at Alamogordo last Friday night, resulted in one team each winning—the Capitan girls falling out, Alamogordo boys the other.
