OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 22

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, FEB. 24, 1922

Two Fires at the Corn Ranch

A fire at the E. S. Corn ranch on the Macbe, in the eastern end of the county, last Friday, destroyed the barn and contents, including two automobiles, the adjoining sheds, corrals, and a large quantity of hay and feed. Edward Corn, son of the owner, and an employe, were riding the pasture, about six miles distant from the ranch house, when they noticed smoke in the direction of the house and made haste to reach the scene of the fire. Just as they reached the house the last portion of the barn roof collapsed, and nothing was saved. The loss is estimated by Mr. Corn at $5,000 with an insurance of $1,200.

All indications point to incendiaryism, as certain peculiar conditions were discovered that dissipated the idea of an accidental fire. Indeed, as Edward and the employe were heading towards the fire, they saw a horseman at a distance, but Edward was intent on reaching the blaze and gave little concern to the distant horseman. The employe, however, took especial note of the lone horseman and started towards him, but the suspect dropped off the hill and into a canyon and disappeared.

Then, Saturday night, or to be more exact two o'clock Sunday morning, a second fire occurred. This second blaze took the camp house and contents and the sheep shearing sheds and the shearing plant therein. In this last fire about $5,000 again went up in smoke, and was a total loss, no insurance being carried.

Mr. Corn left Sunday night for the ranch with the hope of finding evidence as to the perpetrators. He already possesses a fair idea, he claims, of who the responsible parties are, but he desires to make his supposition a certainty, when proper steps will be taken to bring the guilty party to justice.

Extraordinary bargains in furniture and hardware are featured at Kelley & Son's this week.

New Mexico Fails to Use Quota of Federal Road Fund

New Mexico is far behind Arizona in the matter of taking advantage of the federal aid for road work, according to E. S. Wheeler, chief of the federal road bureau for the two states.

Arizona has already covered the allotment for that state under the act passed by congress and approved last November, with the exception of about $35,000. The total allotment for federal aid road work in Arizona was $1,153,281. This amount is to be used on road projects for which the state pays one-third of the cost, the government paying the rest.

In New Mexico the amount allotted was $1,189,823, and according to Wheeler this state has not yet taken advantage of any of this fund, and has failed to take advantage of $219,000 still to the state's credit under the old federal aid system, in which the government paid half and the state half.

Stockmen Need Organized Effort To Meet Problems

Albuquerque, Feb. 20.—"Live-stock growers of New Mexico are in greater need of thorough organization and organized effort than ever before, in order to meet the pressing problems of the day," said T. E. Mitchell, president of the New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association, in a statement given out at headquarters of the association.

"Our organization has already accomplished much for its members and the industry," said Mr. Mitchell, "but we are in a position to do more during the years immediately ahead, both because of the strength the organization has achieved, and because there are definite things to be accomplished which can only be handled through organized effort. In the matter of taxation cattle growers must stand together, not for privilege but for equality and a fair rate of taxation and a valuation of live stock under which the industry can exist. This is for the welfare of the whole community. We have before us the struggle for a fair freight rate. We have our part to do in creating a new market for our product and enlarging old markets. We have the relations of the stockmen with the federal aid agencies to look out for. In a word, this is the cowman's time to realize an organized effort, and to that end we hope to see the coming convention in Las Vegas in March the biggest in our history. Present prospects are that it will be.

Upper Ruidosa Items

Orchard pruning and ditch cleaning are the chief employments of our farmers at present.

L. W. Adams, salesman for the Stark Bros.' nurseries, was calling on several in this community last week. He reports that a large acreage in this county will be planted in fruit trees this spring.

J. H. Jackson has rented the D. W. Lucas farm for the coming year.

Flora May, the small daughter of Mrs. Cunningham, is recovering from a light form of diphtheria.

Ike Wingfield has recently purchased five head of thoroughbred Jersey cows.

R. O. Creeley is moving this week to the Keyes farm, which he will cultivate the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hiles are the proud parents of a son who arrived the fourteenth of this month.

Washington's Birthday was appropriately observed by Miss Josephine Stetson's school Tuesday; thereby a holiday was gained Wednesday.

Neel Brothers have recently finished baling hay on the Douthitt farm. They will cultivate a large part of this place this season. Milton Davis has leased the farm for a term of years, but will devote his time to fruit growing and truck farming.

Kicked by a Horse

Pete E. Johnson was kicked in the stomach by a horse last Friday. He was brought from the Spence ranch, where the accident happened, and placed in the Paden hospital and his injury given immediate attention. The injury was quite painful, but little Pete is getting along nicely, and no serious results are anticipated.

Abe Martin "said a mouthful" when he remarked: "Joe Lark bought a pair o' shoes today with some money he had left from the Wilson administration."

Where the League Is Left

(From The New York Times)

It is no secret that the members of the League of Nations looked forward with a certain apprehension to the Washington conference. Would it help or hinder their own organization? Some who were present at the last meeting of the league in Geneva have reported that the shadow of coming events in Washington lay upon it somewhat disturbingly. And while several officials and champions of the league, such as Mr. Balfour and M. Viviani, came to Washington as delegates, there was a feeling on their part that the situation was one of obvious delicacy. Would the conference called by the president of the United States openly and formally cut loose from the league, officially renouncing it and all its works? On the other hand, would the effort be made to develop at Washington a new association of nations avowedly to rival and perhaps to undermine the league?

To all these questions the proceedings of the conference have given a plain answer. If the league is affected in any way by what was done at Washington, it has been strengthened. Not the slightest appearance of antagonism to it was manifested. If any of the American delegates had a scheme to displace or supplant the league by a competing international body, it was carefully suppressed. And the moral effect of the agreements and treaties arrived at by the Washington conference is so undeniably in line with the great aims of the league that the general impression of the world cannot fail to be that they are brought nearer attainment. Furthermore, some of the arguments used, and to be used, by the administration in support of the treaty for limitation of naval forces, and for what is a virtual alliance with England, France and Japan in regard to Pacific questions, are arguments doubly valid for the Covenant of the League of Nations. The chief objections of 1920 have thus become the leading recommendations of 1922. And the fear that the Washington conference might be so shaped as to destroy the League of Nations may now be dismissed, along with the absurd report that Mr. Lloyd George has set out to "kill" it by calling a conference at Genoa.

Old Citizen Dies Suddenly

Death claimed Benjamin F. Goff at his home in Carrizozo at 5:30 Saturday afternoon. Death was due to acute indigestion. Mr. Goff had been over town the greater part of the day Saturday, and mentioned to some friends of having suffered a severe attack the previous night, but appeared to be feeling fairly well when relating the attack of the night before.

The funeral was conducted from the Baptist church Monday afternoon, Rev. T. M. Blacklock, the pastor thereof conducting the services, preaching from Hebrew 9:27, "It is appointed unto men once to die." Rev. John H. Skinner, who had known the deceased for over a quarter of a century, supplemented the pastor's sermon, speaking from the standpoint of citizen, neighbour and friend. A choir from the different churches rendered appropriate music. Interment was in the local cemetery.

Benjamin F. Goff was born in Illinois, March 1, 1854, and there grew to manhood. He was married 43 years ago to Miss Lida Owings, who survives him. He lived in Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado during the intervening years until 1894, when he moved to White Oaks, and from that time made Lincoln county his home, having lived in Carrizozo since 1906.

Mr. Goff was a kind and considerate husband, and faithfully cared for and comforted an invalid wife during recent years. He was a good neighbor, an upright citizen, loyal, faithful and true unto the end. His sudden death was a great shock to friends, many of whom had known him for a generation, and for his sorrowing wife and relatives, those who have known him so long and intimately, feel the deepest sympathy.

Our boys' and girls' basketball teams went to Tularosa last Saturday and each met defeat at the village of the tulles. This, if we remember correctly, is our first double defeat this season. What is the cause?—over-confidence or carelessness, or are we just slipping.

The Washington birthday ball attracted a large crowd and furnished a most delightful means of entertainment. The ladies donned aprons, the gentlemen overalls, and, simple as the costumes were, they were very attractive, many calling forth commendable praise.

Mexico Would Abolish Pulque

Government Tackles Big Task in Depriving Poorer Classes of Their Beverage.

TRIED MANY TIMES BEFORE

Conquistadores Found the Aztecs Drinking Pulque, and It Has Been Favorite Tiptle of People Ever Since.

Washington, D. C.—If the Mexican government has undertaken to abolish pulque drinking, as dispatches say, it has assumed a task beside which the enforcement of our own eighteenth amendment would seem a minor detail of administration, according to a bulletin to the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

Beliefs against pulque are nothing new in the Mexican's life. As early as 1492, at least, a Spanish viceroys thought it would be a good thing to stop pulque drinking, and precipitated a riot which ended in the burning of public buildings, and as recently as 1917 an anti-pulque section was incorporated in the new Mexican constitution. But the Mexican has blissfully ignored such prohibitions, as did the Aztecs before him, and as did the 16th century before the Aztecs.

"Drunk only by the poorer classes, pulque can lay one claim, that of age, to be an antecedent of new world beverages. The conquistadores found the Aztecs drinking pulque, and the Aztecs told the legendary tale of how a certain Toltec saw a mouse gnawing at the heart of a growing maguey. Hearing closer he discovered a fluid seeping forth. The observant Toltec sent his daughter to convey a sample of the fluid to his king. The monarch liked the beverage and the girl, to whom was born a child named Micoque, meaning 'Child of the Maguey.' From that time forth, so runs the story, the Toltecs began to decline in power and, their vitality sapped by the wine of the maguey, they fell easy prey to the Aztec conquerors in the Valley of Anahuac.

"Pulque has long entered into Mexican history, and is closely related to social and labor conditions there, because the geography of certain districts of the states of Hidalgo, Tlaxcala, Mexico, and of the federal district itself, is extremely favorable to growing certain varieties of cactus. There are 33 kinds of cactus which thrive in the Mexican plateau, all of which are grouped under the generic name of 'maguey.' The Greek 'Agave' (tobacco) also is applied to this group, a characterization which is defensible even if the maguey is comparable to a (tobacco) tobacco.

Shipped by Trinidad. The visitor to Anahuac, a town of southern Hidalgo, might mistake the long lines of cars constantly moving away from the sidings as milk trains. Instead, they are pulque cargoes, many of them bound for Mexico City, where the sticky, whitish fluid will find its way into the exaggerated 'scooters' set out on the long quays of the pulquerias.

"The most picturesque thing about pulque is the method of its gathering. If undisturbed a maguey plant would develop a stalk from three to five times as tall as a man, and thousands of yellow flowers would bloom on this stalk. When the flowers are about to sprout this stalk is cut off, the heart of the plant is hollowed out, and into the receptacle thus formed flows the sap of the plant. This sap the natives call aguamiel, honey-water.

"Along comes the harvester, recognizes a plant which is ready for him by the fact that the heart has been stuck on one of the sharp spines of the cactus, and proceeds to empty the 'honey-water' into a pig-skin bag. A Difference in Viewpoint. Fermentation of pulque is hastened by the introduction into the fresh liquid of 'mother-pulque' which has been kept for ten days or two weeks. One's attitude toward the finished product is akin to that toward the olive—only much more so. The disinterested partaker's reaction is almost invariably the same—that pulque tastes like sour milk and smells like field eggs.

"This beverage is drunk so generously by the lower classes, least able to restrain their appetites, that it has become an economic problem of great magnitude in Mexico because of the immediate enforced idleness it causes, and because of the degeneracy that results from its long-time use.

"Pulque is not to be confused with mecal and tequila, both distilled liquors derived from the maguey, or with aguardiente, a brandy, distilled either from sugar-cane or from grapes.

"In lesser altitudes than that of the Mexican plateau the maguey matures very slowly, a fact which led to giving the nickname 'century plant' to the variety found in the Southwest of the United States. The abolition of pulque would not affect the high esteem in which the maguey plant is held in Mexico. Not only is its beverage very ancient, but its uses always have been many. A 'miracle of nature' Traced called it, and small wonder. It leaves provided papyrus on which many Aztec manuscripts were preserved, the natives pulled out a thorn with its attached fiber, and had a needle ready threaded.

VILLAGE COMPLETELY TORN UP

Uphaval in English Community Like Comic Opera.

Math-Eaten Fire Department of Essex, Eng., Rebels at Efforts Made to Modernize It—Firemen Are All Volunteers.

Harrow, Eng.—This little Essex village has been for weeks the scene of a political upheaval sufficiently comic to serve as the plot for a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. The village is the chairman of the Parish council, who has been investigating the village 'fire department' for the purpose of reorganization, and the hero, Sam Deards, octogenarian, captain of the fire brigade.

Until recently the village fire fighting apparatus was scattered around in various parts of the parish, a hose and ladder in one place, another set somewhere else, while each member of the volunteer brigade kept his helmet on his hall hatrack.

This arrangement is being disturbed by the chairman of the council, who is out for the latest thing in municipal administration and wants 'centralization.' He decided to round up all the apparatus and put it under one roof in the Central Fire station, the dignified name given a small shed. But Captain Deards very strongly objected. Under the old regime he kept a ladder and length of hose in his back garden, thus insuring his prompt attendance at any fire in his end of the village. The Central Fire station is a good half-mile from his house, and with the burden of eighty years on his shoulders he does not feel like running that distance every time there is an alarm.

Judging from the evidence of Coleman, chairman of the council, Harlow must be an exciting place when there is a fire. Not long ago, he says, there was a fire in the vicarage when 'the hose was leaking all over the place and there were serious misgivings as to whether it would not burst.' Again, at one storehouse where some of the fire brigade's appliances were kept, the council's investigating committee reported:

"They found the hose out of order and before they could open the door where the apparatus was deposited they had to get a crowbar."

During the investigation it developed that Harlow has no real fire engine.

"But there's a good one at Epping, only six miles away," said a member of the Parish council. "If we want them we just ring them up from the police station. We have good water pressure here, so we seldom need to pump. If we want more pressure we telephone the secretary of the local water company, and he telephones the works and they turn on the pumps."

What happens if the line is busy or the secretary is out golfing the councillor did not say.

The women are all volunteers who are paid a small retainer fee, with extra for fires, at so much for the first hour and a trifle less for each subsequent hour.

Extensive coal beds have been discovered recently in the region of Port Gueydon, in French North Africa.

WILL FLY TO THE NORTH POLE

Explorer Amundsen Counts on Airplanes for Dash.

Will Start From Seattle in May to Study Phenomena—Trip Expected to Last Five Years—New Equipping Ship.

Seattle.—Final preparations and equipping of the exploring ship Maud, in which Capt. Roald Amundsen, noted Norwegian explorer and discoverer of the South Pole, will resume his interrupted Arctic expedition next May, he being completed as the most modern ship that in the landlocked waters of Lake Union here.

A completed project made last in the line of the expedition's equipment last year. Several Capt. Amundsen's ship, the Maud, is being the expedition. The Maud will carry provisions for seven years, although the explorer does not expect the trip to occupy more than five years at the most.

The most important of the Maud's equipment, in Capt. Amundsen's opinion, will be the two airplanes, purchased in Norway and shipped here recently and which will be used in the making of extensive geographic and hydrographic surveys for a thousand miles on either side of the vessel's track through the northern seas. The primary purpose of the expedition, which is operating under the auspices of the Norwegian government, is to study the movement of the Arctic ice pack, the effect of wind currents, magnetic influences, and other phenomena of the polar region. The expedition's equipment is being with the ice pack prove not feasible. A wireless equipment installed aboard the Maud will be used to broadcast a message when he reaches the top of the world.

Captain Amundsen expects to strike immediately into the outward or northern drift of the ice as it leaves Behring sea next spring and to swing with the northwesterly current early in the summer.

With the explorer will be Capt. Oskar Wiisting, sailing master, who stood at his side "on" the South Pole; G. Olshack, engineer; Dr. H. V. Eversdorp, scientist of the expedition, two Norwegian arcticists and a crew of six Eskimo natives who joined the Maud in 1920.

OUR COSTLY NEGLIGENCE

"Co-ordination" is a tired, haggard, nervous wreck of a word that was neatly worked to death at Washington during the early days of the war. It was the first of the dollar-a-year words to come forward to do war work, and it was worn to a frazzle. I hate to drag the poor word 'tiring' out from the quiet retreat in my dictionary where it has been resting and recuperating, but I must say that this lack of co-ordination, lack of organization, duplication, inefficiency, waste, and haphazard hodge-podge structure of the national governmental machine is no secret to those at Washington, who are even more directly responsible than we are for the condition into which it has fallen.

I submit pleas of avoidance and confession from both Democrats and Republicans. It is not a matter of politics. It is a matter of proved and confessed negligence on the part of the men we have hired to run the machine, and have kept year after year in places of trust and power and responsibility. They haven't kept up the plant. The form of organization is grotesquely inadequate. The morale of the working force is badly impaired, as I have set forth at length in previous articles. We have paid the price for this, grossly and hugely, in money and in poor service. This has been costly negligence on our part. I said I had confessed. Here they are, Reed Smoot, Republican and a senator from Utah, speaking:

The administrative branches of the government have undergone no fundamental change since the organization was devised by Alexander Hamilton.

No other government in the world could have gone on as ours has done, and called the bills involved in our wasteful methods of administration. We have been able to do it because this country has had resources and wealth unparalleled. But the war has brought us at last to realize that these will not last always. We need a complete survey of the whole situation de novo by a committee of men willing to acknowledge that it is a task of daunting magnitude for a year, and very likely, two years.

There is endless duplication of work among different departments, and even in the same department. . . . It is the same through all the government functions, and now, when the burden of carrying our enormous debt is weighing on the people, we can no longer neglect to give it consideration.

When he said these things, Mr. Smoot was urging a concrete proposal to bring about the reformation so badly needed.

And now Franklin D. Roosevelt, for seven years assistant secretary of the navy and recently the Democratic candidate for vice president:

The entire system of relationship which exists between congress and the executive departments is fundamentally wrong. Let me illustrate: I made an offer one spring to the appropriations committee of both house and senate, telling them that I would tomorrow discharge 15 per cent of the employees of the Navy department if they, the committee, would give me complete authority to take one-half of the salaries of the employees discharged and add it to the salaries of the other 85 per cent of the employees still left in the department. . . . Of course, however, under the present system congress would not think of giving executive discretion of this kind.

Congress, for various reasons, has so tied the hands of the executive officers of the government that they have no discretion in the fundamental questions of employment. . . . My own wonder is that, considering the existing circumstances, the employees of the government are as efficient as they actually are. Congress legislates for every minute item of employment. . . . There is a lot of work being done in other departments which ought properly to be under the Navy department, and in the same way there is a lot of work done by the Navy department which could perfectly properly be transferred to other departments.

After seven years down here in an executive position. . . . I cannot help the conclusion that our governmental methods are cumbersome and wasteful. The first improvement must come in what is, after all, the source of governmental activities—that is, the legislative branch. . . . This must come from congress. We need also a reclassification and redistribution of the work of the executive departments. This can only come if congress, working in accord with itself and with the executives, will discuss the whole question simultaneously and not merely piecemeal.

Well, there you are! A Republican who has been in the legislative branch of the government for seventeen years, and a Democrat who has been in the executive branch for seven years, both telling the same story of how badly the national business is managed.

The odd thing about it is that our agents and representatives at Washington who let this waste and inefficiency run on, year after year, pay no penalty. We pay the piper to the tune of millions and billions—literally that much. And the condition will endure until we make a real roar about it. Congress increasingly shakes its head over the situation and brings in various proposals of reform, and says how wrong it all is; but lacking a lively, instigated public pressure, nothing gets done.

WE'RE COLD TO REFORMS

We have not had in our time a President who was a business man or who had close acquaintance with business methods. The Chief Executives have, for the most part, not been executives as that term is now understood. Anything but. They regarded the governmental machine as one regards a hired motor car—a piece of mechanism in which to get somewhere, and with no thought of its power-transmission system or economy of operation.

Mr. Taft did sense the fact that he was at the head of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. Mr. Harding, I believe, shares this feeling.

As Mr. Taft pointed out, this great organization has never been studied in detail as one piece of administrative mechanism. No comprehensive effort has been made, until very recently, to list its many activities or to group them in such a way as to present a clear picture of what the government is doing. No satisfactory statement has ever been published of the financial transactions of the government as a whole. With large interests have never had all the information which should be currently available if the most intelligent direction is to be given to the daily national business.

Congress, the President and the administrative officers have been attempting to discharge their duties without full information as to the agencies through which the work of the government is being performed. In the past, services, agencies, bureaus, what not, have been created one by one as suggestions have seemed to demand, with little or no reference to any scheme of organization of the government as a whole.

Mr. Taft pushed out all this and made an earnest effort to change it. With what result? Why, just exactly none. Congress was cold. The public—meaning you and me—was colder.

We didn't take any interest in the project, and therefore congress possibly poured it away into the hell green sea of oblivion. Mr. Taft was given enough money to employ an efficient and business administration and to make inquiry into the methods of increasing the public business of the government.

But we weren't interested in the high cost of government or the high cost of living eleven years ago. Mr. Taft didn't get a rise out of us. He didn't have much of a pull with congress, either, poor man, and all his inquiry went for nothing as far as any action was concerned.

His and his commission did bring out and compile, however, certain facts and conditions. It was a trustworthy and competent investigation as far as it went. That is something to be good.

There is a patent disposition in congress now to take the whole business of the routine administrative processes of the government under comprehensive and set how long it takes to know them. Whether anything really worth while will come out of it will depend entirely on the degree of interest you show in the subject.

ACHIEVEMENTS of the conference on armaments signalize a new era of understanding in which preparedness for war will yield to moral preparedness for peace, said President Harding to the delegates at their last session on Monday.

"Your achievement is supreme," he continued, "because no seed of conflict has been sown; no reaction in regret or resentment ever can justify resort to arms. You have written the first deliberate and effective expression of great powers, in the conscientiousness of peace, of war's utter futility, and challenged the vanity of competitive preparation for each other's destruction."

Although the President made no reference directly to the hope he had previously expressed that an association of nations would come from the conference, he predicted a continuance of international discussion to carry forward the work.

Before Mr. Harding made his address the five treaties agreed upon by the conference were formally signed, and when the President concluded Secretary of State Hughes declared the conference adjourned sine die.

Now it is up to the United States senate to put the stamp of approval on the work accomplished by the conference. President Harding indicated that he would transmit to it without delay the treaties, and the steering committee of the senate, which met with him Tuesday evening, promised that they should have the right of way until the tariff bill is reported. The debate probably will be prolonged, but there seems little reason to doubt that the treaties will be ratified.

The best tangible results of the conference, appeared Wednesday, when Secretary of the Navy Denby, under direction of the President, ordered the suspension of work on eight battleships and six battle cruisers now under construction, pending final action on the naval treaty. When the treaty has been ratified the contracts for the ships will be canceled. The building operations stopped by Secretary Denby's order have been costing the government about $5,000,000 a month. Of the eight battleships, one will be completed later—either the West Virginia or the Colorado, which is almost completed and is not included in the list, also will be finished. Two of the battle cruisers are to be completed as airplane carriers.

Of the foreign countries represented in the conference the only one where there seems to be any organized opposition to the treaties is Japan. Baron Sakamoto is leading the opposition in the house of peers and criticized severely the agreements reached. Premier Takahashi and his ministers met the attack ably. The premier said that the government did not claim the conference was an unqualified success, viewed from an individual standpoint, but that it did believe, with the other powers, that the agreements reached were the first step toward a real and lasting peace and would lead to a future understanding for the total abolition of armaments.

Japan, like the United States, has stopped construction work on its new capital ships.

to the papal throne in St. Peter's basilica and assumption of the triple crown was accompanied by all the stately ceremony that has grown up about the crowning of a pope through the centuries of the Catholic church's history.

Since the new pope is an acknowledged liberal and one of the group that supported the policies of Benedict XV looking toward a reconciliation between the church and the Italian government, it may be that resumption of relations will come during his reign. This, though not especially desired by other European governments, is strongly favored by many prominent Italian Catholics. They believe the church would greatly benefit because the pope would be free to visit other countries. Americans in Rome hope that Pius XI may even come to this country, the first pope ever to visit the new world.

Cardinal O'Connell was decidedly vexed because the choice of a pope was made by the sacred college before he and the other American cardinals could reach Rome, and there is talk of changing the papal constitution so that this cannot happen in the future. The incident may also be responsible for the report that two more American cardinals are to be created soon. The archbishops mentioned in this connection are Mundelein of Chicago and Hayes of New York.

HENRY FORD'S offer for the taking over of the government's nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals was referred to the agricultural committee of the senate. Acceptance of the offer was urged by Senator Underwood of Alabama, Democratic leader, and it was predicted the committee would recommend it. But in the house military affairs committee the Ford proposition was having hard sledding. Secretary of War Weeks was called there as a witness and his testimony must have been rather saddening to the automobile magnate. It was thus summarized by a Washington correspondent.

That Ford will pay $5,000,000 for that portion of the Muscle Shoals project which has already cost the government $100,000,000.

That the government, to complete the project, must spend $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 additional, which Ford will repay under exceedingly liberal terms.

That the government can realize between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 savings on the project which Ford wants to buy for $5,000,000.

That the government can realize more for the Warrior river plant and neighboring property than Ford is willing to pay for the entire Muscle Shoals undertaking.

In reply to a direct question as to what he would do with the offer if he were a member of congress, the secretary said he would vote to accept it if he thought certainly it would produce cheaper fertilizer for the farmers, but that he was greatly in doubt as to this, and he believed Ford and his engineers also were uncertain of it. He added that he would soon submit to congress two other offers for Muscle Shoals.

TENTATIVE estimates of the cost of the proposed soldiers' bonus place it at $300,000,000 a year, and the Republican members of the house ways and means committee spent a lot of time last week discussing how this was to be obtained. President Harding made it clear to the leaders that the bill must include a provision for the raising of the necessary revenue, and that it must not be too oppressive on the public; he agreed with Secretary Mellon that a bonus based on foreign bonds is out of the question. Likewise, the plan of raising money by way of general sales tax is going into the discard, for a majority of the Republicans evidently are opposed to it. Consequently the majority members of the committee have agreed that various miscellaneous taxes shall be imposed, but have not yet decided just what these shall be. Chairman Fordney favors an increased tax on tobacco and cigarettes, a tax on post office transactions and a light tax on stock and bond transfers. Other members urged taxes on gasoline and bank deposits, a federal automobile license, and a tax on the transportation of goods.

IN ORDER to relieve the congestion in the federal courts, the senate judiciary committee has decided to recommend an increase of 13 in the number of United States judges. These new judgeships, according to the plan, will go one each to the following districts: Massachusetts, eastern New York, southern New York, eastern Pennsylvania, northern Texas, eastern Michigan, northern Ohio, middle Tennessee, northern Illinois, Minnesota, northern California, northern Georgia and Arizona.

ALTHOUGH the United States has not accepted, and is not likely to accept the invitation to take part in the economic and financial conference in Geneva next month, preparations for the opening of the meeting are being made by the Italian government. All the city's hotels and others along the Italian Riviera as far as Rapallo are being requisitioned, rapid transportation and communication arranged and the ancient palace put in order for the sittings of the conference. Baron Avezano, formerly ambassador to the United States, is general secretary in charge of local arrangements, and Premier Bonomi, though he has resigned, is devoting most of his time to the affair, pending the appointment of his successor.

If America avoids this conference it will be because, among other reasons, the soviet Russian government, not yet recognized, is to be represented; because certain European powers show no disposition to help matters by reducing their military establishments; because none, except England, is trying to balance its budget, and because few of them recognize the relation of the general recovery of Europe to the recovery of Germany.

"WAR" broke out in Ireland again last week, this time between the Irish themselves and along the Ulster border. Presumably because they had not learned that three political prisoners sentenced to death at Derry had been reprieved, raiders who were identified with the army of the Irish republic invaded Ulster and carried off scores of prisoners, doing also a lot of shooting. A few of the captured men were released at once, but the others were held, supposedly as hostages. Naturally, the northern counties at once blazed with indignation and thousands of armed men swarmed to the border and formed a line of steel there.

Of course the provisional government of the Irish Free State was not responsible for the kidnappings, nor could it prevent them. It was believed by some that the attacks were planned largely to embarrass Michael Collins and his colleagues.

Owen O'Duffy, chief of staff of the Irish republican army, issued this statement:

"That there should be spontaneous and determined action in Ulster is not surprising. The patience of our people there has been sorely tried lately by continued raids, arrests and tortures inflicted upon them by agents of the northern government."

The majority of those in prison in Belfast and Derry are suffering because they carried out my orders while I was liaison officer, to protect the lives and property of Catholic civilians from the ravages of Orange mobs when those who are intrusted with law and order refuse to give protection."

Ulster and the Free State are still disputing over the settlement of the boundaries of Ulster, and there is some talk by British officials of calling on General Smuts to mediate.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MELLON announced last week that the government will pay off the Victory 3% per cent bonds on or before June 15 next, and after that date they will cease to bear interest. These bonds, of which there are about $400,000,000 outstanding, were issued May 30, 1919, and mature May 30, 1922, but the government reserved the right to call them for redemption this year. At any time before June 15 the bonds will be redeemed by the federal reserve banks at par and accrued interest. If they are held until June 15 they will be redeemed at 100%.

Fainting Man Not Unnaturally Objected to Poor Imitation of the Patent Spirit.

Observing a poorly dressed man stagger and fall prostrate on the sidewalk, a passing physician hurried to his side and began to feel for his pulse. Apparently the man was unconscious and the physician was about to draw his hypodermic syringe from his medicine bag when a workman with a dinner pail in his hand stepped forward from the group of surrounding spectators. "Here, give him some of this!" he said, exhibiting a whisky flask in his hand.

Grabbing this the physician poured part of its contents into the victim's throat, whereupon the victim suddenly raised his head and spat it out, gasping. "You're you don't?"

"Reviving you with whisky," said the doctor.

"That ain't whisky, it's cold tea."

Solves "Servant" Problem.

The servant problem is still difficult; but a Wilkesden engineer is making an effort to solve it. He is reported to have invented a mechanical maid-of-all-work, which, it is claimed, will be able to perform all the ordinary duties of the up-to-date "domestic." Among the accomplishments of this mechanical servant are said to be the following: It can wash, dry and polish household crockery and glass; peel potatoes; wash greens; slice bread and bacon; polish silver; scour pots and pans; separate milk; churn butter; heat water; make ice cream; chop fruit and vegetables; seed raisins; mix dough; vacuum clean floors, walls and ceilings; clean and polish boots and shoes.—London Mail.

What it is. "What is a flapper?" "A flapper, Henry, is the latest style cigarette holder."

"X" is no blackmaling letter, yet it makes no pay.

MORE IMPORTANT TO 'SAM'

Accused Man Could Do With One Lawyer and Use the Other One as a Witness.

Not so long ago a Quaker city lawyer found a formidable phalanx opposed to him in the trial of a case. Presumably the other side was not strong, at least in the lawyer's estimation, in point of witnesses, and when he came to sum up, the attorney detailed the following to the jury as illustrative of the predicament of the other side:

A negro was brought before the court to plead to an offense.

"Sam Jackson, you are in custody of the law," announced the judge. "The state provides counsel for those who lack it. I hereby appoint these two gentlemen present in court to defend you. Have you anything to say?"

Sam's face brightened at the judge's words. "Two lawyers, yo honah!" he exclaimed delightedly. . . . and then with an engaging grin: "Yes, and, yo honah . . . but if it ain't crowdin' the law, can't I swop off one of dem lawyers for a witness?"

To win a race a Jockey doesn't put extra weight on the horse that helps him succeed

No man or woman who wants to succeed in the race of life can afford the handicap of headaches, insomnia, indigestion and debility. Nor can they afford to take anything that may keep up a continual irritation of the nervous system.

Yet this is what many people do who drink excessive amounts of tea or coffee. For tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance that is sometimes very injurious. Many doctors say that caffeine raises the blood pressure, irritates the kidneys, and over-stimulates the entire nervous system. Also that it is especially bad for growing children, or for any one who has any tendency to nervousness or insomnia.

If you want to avoid a possible cause of headache, insomnia, or nervousness, it might be well to stop taking tea and coffee for awhile, and drink rich, satisfying Postum, instead.

Postum is a delicately-roasted, pure cereal beverage—delicious and wholesome.

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, healthful beverage for awhile, and see if you will not feel brighter, more active, and more resistant to fatigue—as so many thousands of others have felt.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in package) of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

Was Lincoln a Partisan?

"Lincoln was the great partisan," declared President Harding in his speech favoring the return of the convention system and consequent repudiation of the direct primary system, but the president did not explain the partisanship of Lincoln in having a stalwart Democrat in his cabinet as Secretary of War and another Democrat in command of the army and a host of Democratic major-generals fighting the nation's battles in the field. In fact, the only major general on the Union side who never lost a battle was a Democrat. Furthermore, Lincoln himself has frequently been characterized as a Jeffersonian Democrat.

By declaring Lincoln to be a great partisan, and then declaring himself a partisan, the president easily places himself in the Lincoln class.

Two days after the president's Lincoln day speech a first-term congressman—what they term up in New York a "chicken congressman"—elevated President Harding into the Lincoln and Washington class. He drew the parallel with Lincoln by telling how Lincoln was nominated late at night in a Chicago hotel just the same as Harding, which makes it perfectly plain that they are the same type of statesmen. Mr. Chalmers, the congressional eulogist, with a seriousness excusable in a new-comer, declared: "I said in opening that I highly respected and honored the father of his country, Washington; the savior of our country, Lincoln; and Harding, the savior of the world."

When upon the house defeated the bill to make Lincoln's birthday a legal holiday in the district of Columbia, and yet want the great and noble Washington of the world to be made a holiday in the

CARRIZOZO :: NEW MEXICO

The president is having Congress create thirteen more United States District Judgeships, whose chief business will be to try bootleggers and such—another load for the backs of the taxpayers. Incidentally it gives him an opportunity to take thirteen members of the Agricultural Bloc from the Senate and place them where he put Keyson. Curiously enough there are just thirteen of these senators still remaining in the Agricultural Bloc who can be depended upon to stand by the people on most occasions—except when there is a soft life-time job to be had.

The American Red Cross has announced that it has just spent $100,000 to relieve some of the most urgent cases of actual distress among the people of certain parts of Montana and North Dakota. Congress took two hundred times that amount of money from the grain growers for the Russia relief. Most of the metropolitan newspapers do not publish these stories, for they are members of the cabal of publishers who have agreed to print only news indicating that the administration is a success, and to throw on the floor all of the news depicting the tremendous amount of distress in the land.

Perhaps few of the farmers in the country realize that the 20 million dollars which the republican congress so generously voted for the aid of a comparatively small section of Russia came out of the pockets of the wheat growers, many of whom are in real need of aid themselves. In other words, it was appropriated from the funds of the United States Grain Corporation and not from the United States Treasury, and the funds of the Grain Corporation represents profits made off the wheat growers. These profits amount to more than thirty million dollars. Another phase of the matter is the fact that congress set a precedent in this case, for charity of this kind in the past has been by private subscription. There was plenty of food in Russia, but the parts where food was abundant would not furnish it to the famine region without a price, and the price could not be raised by the sufferers. It must give the wheat farmer, who finds it hard to make ends meet, a pleasant thrill to think that he is helping to feed the Russians, while his own children may be in need of the necessities of life. The Bible says that he who does not look after his own household first is worse than a heathen.

Cutlery Making

"I have heard repeatedly exclamations of astonishment at the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. entering the manufacture of saw lines," said T. E. Kelley, of the local Winchester store yesterday.

"As cutlery was the first line Winchester announced it was a common question to hear: 'What does Winchester know about cutlery? They are not cutlery experts and can't make knives.'

"When the United States wanted to dig the Panama Canal they looked around and could find no one who had had experience in successfully digging Panama Canals. Nevertheless, they didn't stop, and when they analyzed the job they found that it was capable of being broken into elementary engineering operations.

"If the people who ask, 'What does Winchester know about cutlery?' will stop to think, they will see that Winchester was in the same position General Goethals was when he started the Panama Canal. He had never built a canal, but he did know how to dig." "Winchester had never made a knife, but was familiar with all the operations that went to make up a knife, and it was only necessary to change some of the details of the equipment and rearrange the sequence of the operations and a knife drops out of the machine instead of a gun part.

"The blade is the knife. The knife is a success or failure depending on whether or not it has a good blade. The blade is forged—that's the key. Next is grinding, and that's an old sort of the Winchester. The knife must next be hardened, and in that no difficulty was experienced after having conquered the British bayonet, which met the most rigid test imposed. So you see by a careful analysis of the problem of making knives there was not a single basic operation with which it was not only familiar but willing to pass on to experts, with the result that the company makes the best knives on the market.—Advt.

Quarterly Conference

The second quarterly conference was held at the Methodist church Monday evening last. In the absence of the presiding elder Rev. L. E. Conkin presided. From the reports of the stewards, the League, the W. M. S. and the S. S. superintendent, every department was found to be growing in point of attendance, interest and spirituality. Mr. McQuillen was added to the official board, and elected treasurer and auditor.

The following were elected delegates to the district conference, which convenes in Alamogordo, March 24 to 26: W. M. Sumford, Mrs. Geo. B. Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson, Mrs. Martha Taylor and Mrs. L. E. Conkin. Alternates—Mrs. Wm. McClean, Mrs. Fetter, and O. Z. and Mrs. Finley.

There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefitted by the helpful action of Taulac.—Rolland Bros.

The Triumph of Half a Century

Forty-five years ago the telephone was an experiment—an invention of uncertain utility and of questionable value.

Today it is an actual business necessity and an almost indispensable household servant.

The development of the telephone to its present high state of facility and efficiency has come about through hundreds of supplementary inventions and the solving of hundreds of scientific problems.

Nearly half a century of research, experimentation, invention and the strenuous of organizing genius has resulted in a public service of incalculable value—a service which thousands of telephone men and women are constantly striving to improve and enlarge.

It is their constant endeavor to serve you efficiently and satisfactorily.

Interesting Experience of a Texas Lady Who Declares That if More Women Knew About Cardui They Would Be Spared Much Sickness and Worry.

Mayfield, Texas.—Mrs. W. M. Peden, of this place, relates the following interesting account of how she recovered her strength, having realized that she was actually losing her health.

"Health is the greatest thing in the world, and when you feel that gradually slipping away from you, you certainly sit up and take notice. This is what I did some time ago when I found myself in a very weak condition."

"I couldn't rest well at night and was just 'washed'."

"I heard of Cardui and after reading I decided I had some female trouble that was pulling me down. I sent for Cardui and in a very short while after I began the Cardui Home Treatment I saw an improvement and in a week I was all right—good appetite, regular rest, and much strength. I had a very healthy baby."

A Man To His Mate

By J. ALLEN DUNN

THE DEAD ALIVE

"Karuk ahoy!"

The face of Captain Simms paled, the tan turned to a sickly gray, and his jaw dropped. Rainey saw fear come into his eyes. His companion did not stir a muscle except for the quick shift of his glance, but went on sitting at the table, the gold in one palm, the fingers of his other hand resting on the grains.

"Jim Lund!" gasped the captain hoarsely.

"That's me, you skulking sculpin! Thought I was bear meat by this, didn't you, blast your rotten soul to h—! But I'm back, Bill Simms. Back, an' this time you don't slip me!"

"You left me blind on the floe, Bill Simms!" he roared. "Blind, in a drivin' blizzard with the ice breakin' up! If I didn't have use for your carcass I'd twist your head from your scaly body like I'd pull up a carrot."

Well, here they are—the main characters in the best tale that J. Allen Dunn ever wrote—all except Peggy, the captain's handsome daughter. The scene is the main cabin of the Karuk, about to call from San Francisco to the mysterious islands of the North Pacific for gold—a sample of which lies on the table. Lund, returned from the dead, and snow-blind, breaks in upon the "syndicate." The man handling the gold is Carlson, physician and mate, who is planning to kill the captain, with drugs, seize his daughter and make off with the gold. Rainey, a newspaper man there by chance, is shanghaied when the Karuk calls.

Of course the handsome Peggy is the "mate." But who is the "man"—Lund? Carlson? Rainey?

The author, born in England, is an Oxford man who has traveled the world and settled down here fifteen years ago to write short stories and a dozen or so thrilling "best sellers." This story is as fascinating as Jack London's "Sea Wolf"—and less brutal.

CHAPTER I

Bill Samson.

It was perfect weather along the San Francisco waterfront, and Rainey reacted to the brisk touch of the trade-wind upon his cheek, the breeze tempering the sun, bringing with it a tang of the open sea and a hint of oriental spices from the wharves. The dull thump of a heavy case upon the timbered walk and the shuffle of uncertain feet warned him from blundering into a man tapping his way along the Embarcadero, a giant who halted abruptly and faced him, leaning on the heavy stick.

"Mate," asked the giant, "could you put a blind man in the way of finding the sealin' schooner Karuk?"

The voice rited its owner, Rainey thought—a basso voice (suppered to the occasion), a deep-sea voice that couldellow above the roar of a gale if needed. For all his shagging clothes and shuffle, the man was certainly a sailor, or had been. He wore dark glasses with side lenses, over which heavy brows projected in shaggy wisps of red hair.

Billed as the faint proclaimed himself with voice and action, Rainey sensed something back of those colored glasses that seemed to be appraising him, almost as if the will of the man was peering, or listening, focused through those hollow sockets.

"You're not fifty yards from the Karuk," Rainey replied. "But you're lookin' in the wrong direction. Let me put you right. I'm going that way myself."

"That's kind of ya, matey," said the other. "But I planned for that sort, headin' you whistlin' on you cabin swingin' along. Give me the touch of your arm, matey."

Rainey waddlingly stood up his countenance. The stranger's bulk was enormous. Rainey was well over the average himself, but he was only a scribbled hunk of a man, his stretched limbs of manhood. And, for all the unimpaired eyes and shuffling feet, there was a stamp of co-ordinated strength about the giant that bespoke the blind Samson. Great eyes, Rainey could imagine him agile in a position, leaning on a beam.

His weight was made up of stiff head, stout spine and legs that were not an ounce of fat.

low the soft loose collar of his shirt. About thirty, Rainey judged him. Buffeted by time and weather, but in the prime of his strength.

"Snow-blinded, matey," said the man, "North o' Point Barrow, a year an' more ago. Brought me up all standin'. What are you? Steamer man? Purser, maybe?"

"Newspaperman," answered Rainey. "Waterfront detail. For the Times."

"You don't say so, matey? A writer, eh?"

Again Rainey felt the tug of that something back of the dark lenses, some speculation going on in the man's mind concerning him. And he felt the firm fingers contract ever so slightly, sinking into the muscles of his forearm for a second with a hint of how they could bruise and paralyze at will. A faint sense of revulsion fought with his natural inclination to aid the handicapped mariner, and he shook it off.

"The Karuk sails tomorrow," he said. "I had a short talk with Captain Simms when she docked. Not much of a yarn. She didn't have a good trip, you know."

"Why, I didn't know. But—hold a minute, will ye? You see, Simms is an old shipmate of mine. He don't dream I'm within a hundred miles o' here. Aye, or a thousand." He gave a deep-chested chuckle. "Now, then, matey, look here."

Rainey was anchored by the compelling grip. They stood next to the slip in which the sealer lay. The Karuk's decks were deserted, though there was smoke coming from the galley stovepipe.

"Simms is likely to be aboard," went on the other. "Ye see, I know his ways. An' I've come a long trip to see him. Nigh missed him. Only got in from Seattle this mornin'. He ain't expectin' me, an' it's in my mind to surprise him. By way of a job, how's the deck? Clear?"

"No one in sight," said Rainey.

"Fine. Be me a favor, matey, an' pilot me down into the cabin, if so be the skipper's there. If he ain't, I'll wait for him. I've got the right an' sun o' the Karuk's cabin. I know every inch of her. You'll see when we go aboard. Let's go."

Rainey led him down the gangway to the deck of the sealer, still cluttered a bit with unsorted gear. Once aboard, the blind man seemed to walk with assurance, guiding himself with touches here and there that showed his familiarity with the vessel's rig. He approached the cabin skylight, lifted it on the port side. Through it came the murmur of voices. The blind man nodded in satisfaction and widened his grin with a warning "hush-ah" to his guide.

"We'll fool 'em proper," he flipped rather than uttered.

The companion doors were closed, but they opened noiselessly. The stairs were carpeted with corrugated rubber that muffled all sound. Two men sat at the cabin table, leaning forward, hands and forearms outstretched, fingering something. One, Rainey recognized as the captain, Simms—a heavy, square-built man, gray-haired, clean-shaven, his flesh tanned, yet somehow unhealthy, as if the bronze was close to tarnishing.

The other was younger, tall, nervously active, with dark eyes and a dark mustache and beard, the latter trimmed to a vandyke. Between them was a long, slim sack of leather, a mine's poke. It was half full of something that stuffed its lower extremity solid, without doubt the same substance that glistened in the mouth of the sack and the palms of the two men—gold—course dust of gold!

Rainey felt himself thrust to one side as the blind man strolled across the bottom of the companionway, towering in the cabin while he thrust his stick with a thump on the floor and thundered, in a bellow that seemed to fill the place and come tumbling back in deafening echoes:

"KARUK AHOO!"

The face of Captain Simms paled, the tan turned to a sickly gray, and his jaw dropped. Rainey saw fear come into his eyes. His companion did not stir a muscle except for the quick shift of his glance, but went on sitting at the table, the gold in one palm, the fingers of his other hand resting on the grains.

"Jim Lund!" gasped the captain hoarsely.

"That's me, you skulking sculpin! Thought I was bear meat by this, didn't you, blast your rotten soul to h—! But I'm back, Bill Simms. Back, an' this time you don't slip me!"

Jim Lund's face was purple-red with rage, great veins standing out upon it so swollen that it seemed they would surely burst and discharge their congested contents. He looked, Rainey thought, like a blind Hercules, restrained only by his affliction.

"You left me blind on the floe, Bill Simms!" he roared. "Blind, in a drivin' blizzard with the ice breakin' up! If I didn't have use for your carcass I'd twist your head from your scaly body like I'd pull up a carrot."

captain, and to Rainey his words lacked conviction. "I didn't know you were blind. I heard you shout just before the blizzard broke loose. There's others present, Jim. I can explain it to you when we're by ourselves. When you're a mile calmer, Jim."

Lund banged his stick down on the table with a smashing blow that made the man with the vandyke beard, still silent, keenly observant, draw back his arm with a catlike swiftness that only just evaded the stroke. The heavy wood landed fairly on the fisted half of the poke and caused some of the gold to leap out of the mouth.

"What's that I hit?" asked Lund. "Soft, like a rat." He leaped forward, felt for the poke, and found it. He lifted it, hefted it, his forehead puckered with deep seams, discovered the open end, poured out some of the colors on one palm, and used that for a mortar, grinding at the grains with his finger for a pebble, still weighing the stuff with a slight up-and-down movement of his hand.

He nodded as he slipped the poke into a side pocket, and the cabin grew very silent. Lund's face was grimly terrible. He stepped back across the companionway.

"So," he said, his deep voice muffled by some swift restraint, "you found it. And you're going back after more?" His forehead was still creased with puzzlement. "Wal, I'm going with ye, eyes or no eyes, an' I'll keep tabs on ye, Bill Simms, by day and night. You can lay to that, you slimy-hearted swab!"

His voice had risen again. Rainey saw the sweat standing out on the captain's forehead as he answered; "Of course, you'll come, Jim. No need for you to talk this way."

"No need to talk! By the eternal, what I've got to say's his steamin' in me for fourteen months o' blackness."

"What's That I Hit?" Asked Lund.

an' it's comin' out, now it's started! Who's this man, who was talkin' with ye when I come aboard?"

"That's Doctor Carlson. He's to be surgeon this trip, Jim," said Simms deprecatingly, though he darted a look at Rainey half suspicious, half resentful.

Rainey, on the hint, turned toward the ladder quietly enough, but Lund had slipped him by the biceps before Rainey had taken a step.

"You'll stay right here," said Lund, "while I tell you an' this Doc Carlson what kind of a man Simms is, with his poke full of gold and me with the price of my last meal spent two hours ago. I wasn't apta out the parts."

"I rescued an Aleut off a bit of a berg one time. There wasn't much of him left to rescue. Hands an' feet an' nose was frozen as he lost 'em, but the pore devil was grateful, an' he told me something. Told about an island north of Behring Strait, west of Kamabete sound, where there was gold on the beach richer and thicker than it was lay at Nome. I meanin' fig' it gets close enough for my Aleut to recognize it—it ain't an easy place to forget for one who has spent—an' that we're blown south, an' we git into an' trouble. The Aleut, an' I, I take my ship. But I was close enough to get the reckonia' of that island."

"Finally I land at Seattle, broke. I meet up with the man they call Hard-back Simms. Also they call him Honest Simms these days. I like him, an' I finally tell him about my island. I put up the reckonia', an' he supplies the outfit, grub, an' crew.

"Simms' trick is still agin' me. The Harback gits into his gits tipped an' started north, way north, with wind on the lee after bear an' we kill a Kadlak bear. Me—I'll never stand for the shootin' of another bear if I can stop it."

"I've bin havin' trouble with my eyes right along. I'm on the lee not eighty yards from Simms. No, not sixty! It was me killed the bear, an' we're goin' back to the schooner for a sled. I stayed behind to bleed the brute. All of a sudden, like it always hits you, snow-blindness gits me, an' I shouts to Honest Simms.

"Along comes a Point Arrow blizzard. That's a gale that breeds an' breeds of a second out of nowhere. It gathers up all the loose snow an' ice crystals an' drives 'em in a whirlwind. You lose your direction even when you got eyes. I'm left in it by that blizzard, breakin' free, while he scuds back to the schooner with his men. That's Honest Simms! Jim Lund's left behind but Honest Simms has the position of the island."

"I didn't hear you call out you were blind, Lund. The wind blew your words away. I didn't know but what you were as right as the rest of us. We found the schooner by sheer luck before we perished. We looked for you—but the floe was broken up. We looked—"

"Shut up!" bellowed Lund. "You called inside of twenty-four hours, Honest Simms. The natives told me so later, when I could understand talk ag'in. D'ye know what saved me? The bear! I stumbled over the carcass when I was high spent. I ripped it up and clawed some of the warm guts, an' climbed inside the bloody body an' stayed there 'til it got cold an' clamped down over me. Waitin' for you to come an' git me. Honest Simms!"

"That bear was bed and board to me until the natives found it, an' me in it, more dead than alive. Never mind the rest. I get here the day before you start back for more gold."

"An' I'm goin' with you. But first I'm goin' to have a full an' fair accountin' o' what you got already. I've got this young chap with me, an' he'll give me a hand to start a square deal."

Lund propelled Rainey forward a few steps and then loosened his grip. The captain of the Karuk appealed to him directly.

"Mr. Lund is unstrung," said the captain. "He is under the delusion that we deliberately deserted him and, later, found the gold he speaks of. The first charge is nonsense. We did all that was possible in the frightful weather. We barely saved the ship.

"As for the gold, we touched on the island, and we did some prospecting, a very little, before we were driven ashore. The dust in the poke is all we secured. We are going back for more, quite naturally. I can prove all this to you by the log."

Lund had been standing with his great head thrust forward as if concentrating all his remaining senses in an attempt to judge the captain's talk. The doctor sat with one leg crossed, smoking a cigarette, his expression sardonic, spinlike. To Rainey, a little bewildered at being dragged into the affair, and annoyed at it, Captain Simms' words rang true enough. He did not know what to say, whether to speak at all. Lund supplied the gap.

"If that ain't the truth, you lie well, Simms," he said. "But I don't trust ye. You lie when you say you didn't bear me call out I was blind. Sixty yards away, I was, an' the wind hadn't started. You deserted me—left me blind, tucked in the bloody, freezing carcass of a bear. Left me like the car you are. Why, you—"

The rising frenzy of Lund's voice was suddenly broken by the clear note of a girl's voice. One of two doors in the after-end of the main cabin had opened, and she stood in the gap, slim, yellow-haired, with gray eyes that blazed as they looked on the little tableau.

"Who says my father is a cur?" she demanded. "You?" And she faced Lund with such intrepid challenge in her voice, such stinging contempt, that the giant was silenced.

"I was dreaming," she said, "or I would have come out before. If you say my father deserted you, you lie!"

Captain Simms turned to her. Doctor Carlson had risen and moved toward her. Rainey wished he was on the deck.

"Go into your cabin, Peggy," said the captain. "This is no place for you. I can handle the matter. Lund has cause for excitement; but I can satisfy him."

"Excuse me? I guessed it. That doctor's idea."

BETTER ROADS

WAR MOTORS FOR ROAD WORK

Multiple Cotypes Virtually All of Surplus Cars Turned Over by War Department.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More than 27,000 motor vehicles have been distributed by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture among the various states for road-building purposes. Up to October 31 a total of 27,194 had been so distributed, including 1,850 retained by the Department of Agriculture for use on roads in the national forests and in connection with the administration of the federal aid act. These comprise virtually all the surplus motor vehicles turned over to the Department of Agriculture by the War Department to be distributed under the Wadsworth-Kahn act among the states for road-building purposes.

The number of motor vehicles distributed to the states up to October 31 was as follows:

Table with columns for State, Trucks, Autos, and Total. Lists states from Alabama to Montana with corresponding vehicle counts.

Top—Ordnance Truck as Received by Government. Bottom—The Same Body as Converted by Arizona Road Department for Highway Work.

Table with columns for State, Trucks, Autos, and Total. Lists states from Nebraska to Wyoming with corresponding vehicle counts.

CONCRETE ROAD MATERIALS

Engineers Making Experiments to Determine Just What Are Best and Right Proportions.

Experiments to determine just what kinds of materials are best for concrete, and in what proportions to mix them so that they will wear well in a road, are being made by engineers of the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. An apparatus will be used that consists of heavy steel wheels, guided by a mechanical arrangement, roll continuously back and forth over the pavement.

More than forty different sections of concrete pavement, each ten feet long, will be laid. Materials from many different parts of the country are being brought to the government experiment station at Arlington, Va., near Washington. They will be mixed with varying quantities of cement and water to determine which is best. Experiments have shown that there is a measurable amount of wear of the surface of a concrete road each year.

Good Roads in California

California, already a joy for motor tourists, is to spend $5,000,000 more this year on good roads. The collection for motor highways would be $1,000,000 in the next year.

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

New Rule on Senatorial Elections?

WASHINGTON.—One of the after-effects of the senate decision that Senator Newberry is entitled to his seat is a proposed new rule, to be added to the standing rules of the senate. Senator Pomeroy of Ohio offered the rule, which was incorporated in the record of the proceedings without reading and referred to the committee on rules. In offering it Senator Pomeroy said: "Mr. President, I desire to offer a new rule, to be added to the standing rules of the senate, relating to the nomination and election of United States senators. The Supreme court held the corrupt practices act unconstitutional so far as it related to the nomination of senators. The justices of the Supreme court in handing down their opinion said: 'As each House shall be the judge of the elections, qualifications and returns of its own members, and as congress may by law regulate the times, places and manner of holding elections, the National government is not without power to protect itself against corruption, fraud or other malign influences.' The rule which I present modifies the corrupt practices act so as to make it a rule of the senate, and thereby avoid the constitutional question which was decided by the Supreme court. If it should be adopted and enforced, the method of relief against extravagant expenditures will be the same in the senate that it would have been under the act if the act had been held constitutional. The rule offered is long. It provides for the filing by the candidate of itemized statements of moneys received in aid of his candidacy; of moneys expended by him, and of political promises made, the same being forbidden. No candidate shall expend any sum in the aggregate, in excess of the amount which he may lawfully expend under the laws of the state in which he resides; provided, that no candidate shall expend any sum, in the aggregate, exceeding $10,000 in any campaign for his nomination and election. Willful violation by a candidate denies him the right to a seat.

Senator Hitchcock's Bank of Nations

SENATOR HITCHCOCK of Nebraska proposes a Bank of Nations with the United States as majority stockholder, an international trade "dollar" as a substitute for gold, and conduct of world business on a credit, instead of a cash basis. He has introduced a bill in the senate providing for establishing such a bank of nations with $2,400,000,000 capital. The United States would hold $1,300,000,000 of the stock.

He said concerning this proposed bank in the senate that this plan is to apply to the international field the same ideas that have been successfully used in the domestic field—that is, to establish a great international bank, with the power to issue currency against a safe reserve of gold. The plan is to make it the business of this bank to finance international trade, to buy and sell exchange, and to lend money to importers and exporters. In a supplemental way the bill would also give power to buy and sell interest-bearing bonds of nations owning the bank. After the United States secretary of treasury had taken for the treasury of the United States $1,300,000,000 of the stock the bill would offer $200,000,000 of the stock for sale to bankers and exporters and importers interested in international commerce. They might also have checking accounts in the bank. The bill would then offer for sale to other nations of the world $600,000,000 of the capital stock, provided they entered into the necessary treaties to become stockholders. It would make one-third of each stock subscription payable in gold and two-thirds in interest-bearing bonds of solvent governments, meaning those governments which had made the arrangements with the United States to reduce armaments so as to make their governments solvent.

General Pershing's Military Policy

GENERAL PERSHING, chief of staff, appearing before the house military affairs committee with respect to military policy, urged the following: That the regular army should not under any circumstances be reduced below 150,000 men. An efficient force of 14,000 officers, and creation of a "picking board" to weed out malfeasants in the officer corps. Retention of nine camps for training centers, one in each corps area, and seven supplementary camps for training and mobilizing national guard and reserve units. Retention of the following camps as military training centers was recommended by the general: Devens,

Mass.; Dix, N. Y.; Meade, Md.; McClellan, Ark.; Knox, Ky.; Custer, Mich.; Fort Riley, Kas.; Travis, Tex., and Lewis, Wash. Camp Grant at Rockford, Ill., and Camp Dodge, Ia., were included in the supplementary list. The others are Upton, N. Y.; Lee, Pa.; Jackson, S. C.; Sherman, O., and Pike, Ark. The War department program, General Pershing said, proposes consolidation at Camp Bragg, N. C., of all field artillery schools east of the Mississippi, and the artillery center at Camp Knox, Ky., "should be moved to Bragg next summer."

Under no circumstances, General Pershing said, should the enlisted personnel of the army be reduced below 150,000, and even if congress should reduce appropriations to force a cut to 100,000, he said that this would not justify a corresponding cut in officer strength. General Pershing proposed creation of a board of five general officers to pick out the inefficient officer material, bringing the total down to about 12,000. He would then complete the officer quota of 14,000 by appointment of capable second lieutenants and by rigid promotion requirements.

Blanton on the "Scandals" of Congress

REPRESENTATIVE BLANTON of Texas, whose recent narrow escape from expulsion from the house will be recalled, has bobbed up again with all his old-time vigor. This time he laid bare the ancient "scandals" of the house and senate restaurants; the house barber shop, the hairdresser and the stationary room. Concerning the latter he said, in part: "Mr. Blanton. In every congress each one of us has credited to his account $275 for stationary. Let me show you some of the things they keep there in the stationary room for congressmen of the United States to buy with government money. Take, for instance, carving knives and forks, with steel like this. (Exhibiting them.) This is a leather-bound pencil set, with four dozen of cards and set of red and white and blue pencil clips. A man who had registered as Verne Plum of Chicago, was found dead in a room of a downtown hotel at Phoenix. He was shot through the head and a revolver lay at his side. Farm loans by the state of Arizona will be discontinued until $500,000 erroneously loaned has been repaid to various funds. It was announced by the State Loan Board, comprised of the governor, the secretary of state and the state treasurer. It may require several years to repay the amount, it was explained, as only the proceeds from the sale of state lands can be used for this purpose. The state's plight, it was declared, is due to the action of the old State Land Department in crediting interest money to the permanent fund instead of to the institutions as specified in the enabling act. This will necessitate a transfer of funds, as soon as there are sufficient on hand to make a change in the accounts.

Harry F. Rowe, former state treasurer of Arizona, was acquitted by a jury in Phoenix of a charge of conspiracy. He was indicted jointly with Phil K. Mrs. Lida Goff.

The Woman's Club

One of the delightful social events of last week was a Washington Party given at the Wetmore Apartments under the auspices of Mrs. Ira Wetmore, as chairman for the day. A few days before, the club members received the following invitation:

At a Washington Tea We request you to be At Mrs. Wetmore's Next Fridge.

Many responded to this little invitation, and it was the largest meeting held this year.

The house was appropriately decorated with flags and flowers. The "tea table" was the center of attraction. Not only were the national colors displayed, but the color scheme of colonial times was carried out in the buff-colored china, and delicious pound cake and marble cake, which came all the way from Chicago—the real old-fashioned kind, like great, great grandmother used to make. At one end of the table Mrs. Geo. Ulrick poured tea from a very old silver teapot, and Mrs. W. C. McDonald poured coffee from a beautiful old coffee urn.

The program was also a treat. The pupils from the sixth grade, with Mrs. Vaughn as teacher, gave a playlet entitled "The History Play." The girls from the eighth grade sang "For You, Old Glory," accompanied by Miss Dora Anderson. Miss Claire Adams, a sealer, sang beautifully "Carry me back to Old Virginia," accompanied by Mrs. Donaldson. Mrs. Edwin Finley and Mrs. D. A. Saunders were very attractive in colonial costume, and Mrs. Finley sang "Sing Again that Song to Me," accompanied by Mrs. Saunders.

As a closing number Mrs. Albert Ziegler, always a favorite, played a trio of selections by McDowell: "The Deserted Farm, In Autumn, and From an Indian Lodge."

The book review department will meet Monday evening at Mrs. French's with Mrs. E. E. Cole as leader.

Parliamentary Law will be discussed at the meeting Thursday evening with Mrs. M. L. Blaney as leader. Members of the club are invited to all these meetings.

Next regular meeting will be held at the courthouse, Friday, March 3.

School Notes

(By Association and B. E. Cole.)
Wednesday is the next Visitors Day.

The Camp Fire Girls met last Tuesday night with their Guardians, Misses Fordon and Herron.

The Boy Scouts met Thursday night at the High School.

The Washington-Lincoln programs of the past week were unusually good. The little tots showed as much enthusiasm in getting up the plays and recitations as did the older ones. The assuming of historical characters and speaking of historical sentiments have a high educational value. The exercises train the pupils to appear in public, to be at ease before a crowd, to speak clearly and loudly enough for the audience to hear, and to pick up many other points.

The programs of the grades were given Feb 17, and were well attended by parents. The programs of the High School were given on the 21st.

The Carrizozo schools had the unusual pleasure of a visit from a high-grade reader during the past week. Mr. Fouché, a reader and actor of national prominence, who is on his way to California to fill a three months' engagement in the large towns and cities of the coast, spent last Sunday and Monday here. He showed us contracts with such cities as Los Angeles and San Diego, showing that he has a good reputation on the Pacific coast. Mr. Fouché wanted to give a reading, especially a Shaksperian one, to the people of the town Monday night but Supt. Cole wanted the pupils of the school to know what good reading is, and arranged for a meeting at the Methodist church at three o'clock that afternoon. The program lasted one and a quarter hours and was keenly enjoyed by the boys and girls. The effect was noticeable next day in the grades. This was especially true in the sixth grade. When the superintendent stepped into this grade, at once several hands went up, the pupils wanting to show how much better they could read than before Mr. Fouché came to town. This was just what we were after. Our purpose was to let the pupils see the value of proper expression in reading; distinctness of speech, loudness and many other valuable points necessary to good reading.
