OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

Washington News Letter

By Wallace Bassford
(Special Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 18.—The president has returned to the city from his fishing, boating trip to Florida. From all accounts Mr. Harding had a delightful time, freed from the cares of state—his arduous daily grind.

There will be no bonus legislation. While enjoying the scenery from the houseboat in Florida, the president found means to bring Speaker Gillette to his view; as a result the speaker will not aid his Republican brethren to put the bill through the house. The senate leaders announce that they will take no action on it until after the fall elections. They plan to let the needy veterans wait until the leaders can see what effect the bonus situation will have on the voters. The president would be glad to see a number of recalcitrant Republican congressmen defeated. He is sure he could better control a small Republican majority than the present unwieldy and miscellaneous collection, made up in some measure of grotesque political accidents and misfits from districts usually represented by seasoned Democratic congressmen of long service and proved ability.

Though the president shows more backbone in standing against the soldiers' bonus than he was supposed to possess, he yields readily to the demands of the ship-owners who also desire a bonus. But they are rich and powerful and can reach his ear. The Wall Street Journal daily reflects the desire of the big corporations and the few dozens of men who are all-powerful in big business. It says: "There is no way of passing a soldiers' bonus, and if there were a way the bonus should not be paid. In any form it constitutes the rawest bribe ever offered to the voters, while it prostitutes patriotic service to the level of the meanest panderer. But President Harding's program for building up a merchant marine will appeal as sound to all but the demagogue. The money used to subsidize shipping would be in the nature of a national defense."

The president accurately reflects the mind of Wall Street. It is still true, as when Israel roamed the valley of the Jordan, that "the ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib."

The Newberry case will not down: Townsend, of Michigan, and Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, are both opposed for renomination on the ground that they voted to establish the principle that a man could bribe the electorate and unblushingly admit it and then sit in the senate, posing as an equal of men honestly chosen, in the manner provided by the law. If these senators who voted for Newberry—accessories after the fact—should escape defeat in the primaries, their chance to get by the general election will be exceedingly slender, for all good people of all parties will unite to rebuke them for their contempt for the proprieties and their abasement of the senate of the United States. The seating of Newberry was the most damaging blow that has been struck at the root of our system of government within a generation; to find worse examples one must go back to the purchase of the presidency by Mark Hanna in 1896 and the theft of it from Tilden in 1876.

"The Kid"

One of the ten big productions of the year will be presented at the Crystal Thursday, April 6th. It is entitled "The Kid," in which Jackie Coogan is the star, and is associated with Charlie Chaplin. In other words, two national stars of filmdom appear in this picture which heads the list of popular productions for 1922. This big special feature will be the second that the Crystal has put on this year, and Manager Sterling announces that others will follow throughout the year.

Marshal Vega Has Tiff with an Unknown

Village Marshal Vega had an experience Tuesday night that he doesn't care to have repeated. While on his regular rounds he noticed a person who aroused his suspicion and he decided to trail him. The unknown, for the marshal could not identify him, went through the alley and to the rear of Rolland's drug store, the marshal trailing.

As the darkest spot was reached the marshal was accosted with the demand to know what he was doing there. The marshal responded that he was on his usual rounds as night officer, to which the unknown exploded with an oath, saying the marshal had been following him long enough, and made a lunge at him; and in attempting to ward off the blow the marshal felt a knife strike his arm, and a second thrust connected with his breast. Both cuts failed to reach the flesh as the overcoat and heavy clothing worn by the marshal protected him, and the gaping holes in coats and shirt are mute evidences of the intentions of his assailant.

The marshal pulled his gun, knocked his assailant down and endeavored to arrest him but in the darkness the man made his escape. The officer took a shot in the direction the man ran, but could not tell whether it took effect or not. It was a close call for the officer and is proof that there are some desperate characters at large who take long risks.

School Notes

(By Special Agent E. E. Cole.)

Several of the high school students have had the "flu" during the past two weeks, yet it has not become necessary to even talk of closing the schools, as has been done in several towns in this part of the state.

The class in general science is now making an interesting experiment. Three kernels of corn have been planted half an inch under the surface, flat side up, in a flower pot. Then some wire screen was tied over the pot to keep the earth from falling out. The pot was then inverted, under a glass bell jar, and supported on three blocks of wood. The roots will grow down, into the light and out of darkness, out of damp soil into comparatively dry air. The stems will grow upward, into darkness and wetness, away from light and dryness. The roots are already growing downward, out of the wet soil into the light and dryness. In a few days the stems will grow out of the hole in the bottom of the flower pot.

The high school had the pleasure of a good talk from Mr. Wilcox, one day last week. The speaker expressed his good will for the students. Among many things he said: "Keep up your efforts to get an education. Be builders every day of your lives. Time is the stuff that men are made of. Do not be in too much of a hurry; neither be slow. Too many of us are only half finished and do not hatch out anything. This is the golden memory of the schooling—make the most of it."

Mrs. Tuton's room, the fifth grade, gave a very interesting program on St. Patrick's Day, as follows:

- Song, "Where the River Shannon Flows."
- Song, "Tumble-Down Shakes in Athlone."
- "St. Patrick's Day," Beatrice Vlasop

"Husbands on Approval"

A comedy drama with the above title will be staged at the Crystal Thursday night, March 30. The entertainment will be given by local talent, under the auspices of the Epworth League, and promises to produce more laughs than anything we have had for many moons. Those in charge, and those taking part in the play have given much time to preparation and every feature has been given careful attention. The admission is 35 and 50 cents, and your money's worth guaranteed.

Kelley Makes Assignment

The Tri-State Association of Credit Men of El Paso, through its representative B. Palmer, took over the stock of Kelley & Son this week. The action was voluntary, and was made to protect all creditors and protect the firm's interest as well.

Kelley & Son, like similar business concerns, owe various sums to wholesale and jobbing houses, and while they have a large stock of goods, in which they have a substantial equity, fully $10,000 Mr. Palmer thinks, they have been unable to realize on sales, because of the continued depression; hence to avoid suits that would embarrass the firm and the possible loss to creditors, and the wiping out of the firm's equity in the stock, the assignment was made.

It was necessary to pass title to avoid the dangers of litigation and its consequent disastrous results, and the Credit Men's Association have full charge and will handle the matter in the interest of all concerned.

Mr. Palmer was unable to give us any figures yesterday when interviewed concerning the situation; but said they were busy taking stock, and that it might require two or three weeks' time to assemble all affairs of the firm, after which the association would handle the business in the interest of creditor and debtor. Mr. Palmer added that time was required to adjust the matters and passing of title would supply that, and that he had no doubt as to a successful outcome—the payment of all accounts, leaving an unimpaired equity to Kelley & Son.

Many rumors have been afloat concerning this change, many of them calculated to injure the general business of the town, besides those concerned in this transaction. The information given above which was obtained from the representative of the Association of Credit Men, clears up the situation, and we feel confident will be productive of a better feeling in commercial circles. It may also mean a reorganization of the firm and the creation of a stronger and bigger establishment in the future.

New Grocery

Roy G. Skinner has added a line of groceries to his market and restaurant business. He has enjoyed a good business in the market and restaurant field, but found it advisable to add groceries, not only for his own convenience but to meet the requirements of his customers. The combination will, no doubt, prove to be a good move.

A Man To His Mate By J. ALLEN DUNN

COPYRIGHT MORRIS MENDEL CO.

GUN-PLAY.

Synopsis.—Littering on the sea. Francisco water front, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who asks Rainey to lead him aboard the sailing schooner Karluk. In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlsen. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice floe, and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund refuses to be pacified. He declares his intention of accompanying the Karluk on its expedition north, where it is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered. Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father. Carlsen, who is a physician, drugs Rainey. Awakening from his stupor, Rainey finds himself at sea. Carlsen informs him he has been kidnaped. He offers Rainey a share of the gold, and Rainey is forced to declare himself satisfied. Lund gives him a brief account of a former expedition of the Karluk, tells him he distrusts Carlsen, and suggests a "partnership." Rainey to act as Lund's "eyes." Rainey is made second mate. Captain Simms is ill and the navigation is entirely in the hands of Carlsen. At the latter's suggestion a shooting match is staged and the sea hunters exhaust their ammunition. Carlsen shows his skill with the pistol and Lund does some astonishing shooting "by sound." Sandy, the ship's boy, is swept overboard and is rescued by Rainey.

Her eyes flashed and then she made a visible effort to control herself. "But it was very brave of you, and I want to ask your pardon," she concluded, with the crimson of her cheeks flooding all her face before she turned away, and made abruptly for the companion. A little bewildered, the touch of her skin but strong fingers still sensitive to his own, Rainey went to the wheel. "Shall I take it over, Mr. Carlsen?" he asked. "It's my watch." Carlsen surveyed him coolly. Either he pretended not to have heard the girl's ingenuo or it failed to get under his skin. "You'd better get into some dry togs, Rainey," he said. "And I'll prescribe a stiff rum or grog, hot. Take your time about it." Rainey, conscious of a wretched feeling in his side, a growing nausea and weakness, thanked him and took the advice. Half an hour later, save for a general soreness, he felt too vigorous to stay below, and went on deck again. Sandy had been taken forward. Lund had disappeared, but he found the giant in the triangular fore-cabin by Sandy's bunk. "That you, Rainey?" Lund asked as he heard the other's tread. Then he dropped his voice to a whisper: "The lad's grateful. Make the most of it. If he wants to spill enything, get all of it. Best day's work you've done in a long while, matey. Pump that Sandy. Pump him dry. He'll know almost as much as Tamada, an' he'll come through with it easier." "Just what are you afraid of?" asked Rainey. "Son," said Lund, simply, "I'm afraid of nothing. But they're primed for somethin', under Carlsen. We'll be makin' Unalaska tomorrow or the next day. Here's hopin' it's the next. An' we've got to know what to expect. Here's somethin' for you to chew on: Inside of forty-eight hours there's gold to be an' upset aboard this hooker an' it's up to me an' you to see we come out on top. If not—" agreed it would be the best net to be seen talking to him." "Right, Matey, things are comin' to a head. There's ice in the air, I can smell it. Feel the difference in temperature? Ice, all right. An' that means two things. We're sign one of the Aleutians; an' Bering strait is full of ice. Early, a bit, but there's nothin' reg'lar 'bout the way ice forms. I've got a strong hunch somethin' will break before we make the strait. "There's one thing in our favor, Xore savin' Sandy has set you solid with the hunters. They won't be so keen to maroon you. An' they'll think twice about puttin' me ashore blind. I used to get along fine with the hunters. All said an' done, they're men at bottom. Got their hearts gold-plated right now. But—"

CHAPTER V.

Sandy Speaks. The next morning Rainey, going on deck to relieve Hansen at eight bells, in the commencement of the forenoon watch, found Lund by the bows as he walked forward, waiting for the bell to be struck. Evidently on his trail, he had been watching Rainey's movements.

had a deeper scheme than the one he fed to the hunters, and which he merely offered to serve some present purpose. Rainey's jaw muscles braced. "Go on, Sandy," he said tersely. "There ain't much more, Mr. They're goin' to put it up to Lund. First they figured some on settin' him ashore with you an' the Jap. That's what Carlsen put up to 'em. But they warnt in favor of that. Said Lund found the gold, an' ought to have an ekal share with the rest. An' they're feelin' diff'unt about you, sir, since you saved me. Not becuz it was me, but becuz it was what Deming calls a d—a plucky thing to do." "How did you learn all this?" demanded Rainey. "Scraps, sir. Here an' there. The sailors gams about it nights when they think I'm asleep in the fo'c's'le. An' I keeps my ears open when I waits on the hunters. But they ain't goin' to give you no share, becuz you warnt in on the original deal. But they ain't goin' to maroon you, neither, unless Lund bucks an' you stand back of him." "How about Captain Simms?" "Carlsen sez he'll answer for him, sir. He boasts how he's goin' to marry the gal. That'll give him three shares—countin' the skipper's. The men don't see that, but I did. He's a bloody fox, is Carlsen."

CHAPTER VI.

"When's this coming off?" asked Rainey. "Quick! They're goin' to sight land tomorrow, they say. I heard that this mornin'. I hid in my bunk." "All right, Sandy. You're smarter than I thought you were. Sure of all this?" "I ain't stunch to look at, sir, but I ain't had to buck my own way without gittin' on ter myself. You won't give me away, though? They'd keelhaul me." "I won't. You cut along. And if we happen to come out on top, Sandy, I'll see that you get a share out of it." "Thank you, sir." "I'll come out with you," said Rainey. "If any one comes in before you get clear, I'll give you an order. I sent for you, understand." But Sandy got back into the galley without any trouble. Rainey began to pace the cabin again, and then went back into his own room to line the thing up. Lund was asleep, but he would wake him, he decided, filled with admiration at the blind man's sagacity and the way he had foreseen the general situation. There was not much time to lose. Rainey did not see what they could do against the proposition. He was sure that Lund would not consent to it. And he might have some plan. He had hinted that he had cards up his sleeve. What Carlsen's ultimate plans were Rainey did not bother himself with. That it meant the spoiling of the whole crew he did not doubt. He intended eventually to gather all the gold. And the girl—she would be in his power. But perhaps she wanted to be? Rainey got out of his blind alley of thought and started into the main cabin to give Lund the news. The girl was coming out of her father's room. "Any better?" asked Rainey. "No. I can't understand it. He seems hardly to know me. Doctor Carlsen came along because of father's condition, but—there's somethin' else—and the doctor can't help it any. I can't quite understand."

toward him, his face livid, his mouth searling, and his black eyes devilish with mischief. "I'll attend to this end of it," he said. "Peggy, you had better go in to your father. I'll be in there in a minute. He's a pretty sick man," he added. His snarl had changed to a smile, and he seemed to have swiftly controlled himself. The girl looked at both of them and slowly went into the captain's room. Carlsen wheeled on Rainey, his face once more a mask of hate. "I'll put you where you belong, you d—d interloper," he said. "What in h— I do you mean by asking her that question?" "That's my business."

"I'll make it mine. And I'll settle yours very shortly, once and for all. I suppose you're soft on the girl yourself," he sneered. "Think yourself a hero! Do you think she'd look at you, a beggarly newslinger? Why, she—"

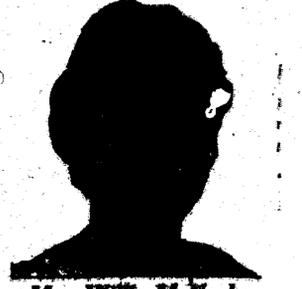

"You can leave her out of it," said Rainey, quietly. "As for you, I think you're a dirty blackguard." Carlsen's hand shot back to his hip pocket as Rainey's fist flashed through the opening and caught him high on the jaw, sending him staggering back, crashing against the partition and down into the cushioned seat that ran around the place. But his gun was out. As he raised it Rainey grappled with him. Carlsen pulled trigger, and the bullet smashed through the skylight above them, while Rainey forced up his arm, twisting it fiercely with both hands until the gun fell on the seat. Simultaneously the girl and Lund appeared. "Gun-play?" rumbled the giant. "That'll be you, Carlsen! You're too fond of shooting off that fat of yore."

Rainey had stepped back at the girl's exclamation. Carlsen recovered his gun and put it away, while Peggy Simms advanced with blazing eyes. "You coward!" she said. "If I had thought—oh!" She made a gesture of utter loathing, at which Carlsen sneered. "I'll show you whether I'm a coward or not, my lady," he said, "before I get through with all of you. And I'll tell you one thing: The captain's life is in my hands. And he and I are the only navigators aboard this vessel, except a fool of a blind man," he added, as he strode to the door of Simms' cabin, turned to look at them, laughed deliberately in their faces and shut the door on them. "Well?" asked Lund, "what are you goin' to do about it, Rainey? Stick with me, or line up with the rest of 'em, work yore passage, an' thank 'em for nothin' when they divvy the stuff an' leave you out?"

"You haven't said outright what you are going to do yourself," replied Rainey. "As for me, I seem to be between the devil and the deep sea. Carlsen has got some plan to outwit the men. It's inconceivable that he'll be willing to give them equal shares, and he has no use for me." "You ought to have grabbed that gun of his before he hid," said Lund. "He'll put you out of the way if he can, but now his temper's bilved over a bit, he'll not shoot you. Not afore the gold's in the hold." "As for me," he went on, his voice deepening, "I found this gold, an' they didn't. I don't have to divvy with 'em, an' I won't. If enny of 'em thinks he's my equal all he's got to do is say so, an' I'll give him a chance to prove it. Feel those arms, matey, size me up. Man to man, I c'd break enny three of 'em in half. Put me in a room with enny three of 'em, an' the door locked, an' one 'ud come out. That 'ud be me."

This was not bragging, not blustering, but calm assurance, and Rainey felt that Lund merely stated what he believed to be facts. And Rainey believed they were facts. There was a confident strength of spirit aside from his physical condition that emanated from Lund as steam comes from a kettle. It was the sort of strength that lies in a steady gale, a wind that one can lean against, an elastic power with big reserves of force. But the conditions were all against Lund, though he proceeded to put them aside. "Man to man," he repeated, "I c'd beat 'em into Hamburg steak. An' I've got brains enough to fool Carlsen. I've outgassed him so far." "He's got the gun," warned Rainey. "Never mind his gun. I ain't afraid of his gun." He nodded with such supreme confidence that Rainey felt himself suddenly relegating the doctor's possession of the gun to the background. "If his gun's the only thing troubles you, forget it. You an' me got to know where we stand. It's up to you. I won't blame you for shirkin' ever. An' I can git along without you, if need be. But we've got along together fine; I've took a notion to you. I'd like to see you get a wack of that gold, an' all the devils in h— I an' out of it ain't goin' to stop me from gittin' it!"

One Man's First Pipeful

The following letter tells a good-luck story: L. C. LAY, Waco, Texas, 1118 South 4th Street, November 26, 1906. Larus & Brother Company Richmond, Virginia Gentlemen: When I smoked my first pipeful of Edgeworth some six months ago, I was something like the old maid who was carried to the altar and then found she was not the bride she had expected. "Do it again, for there is something in this about it." And so was my experience with Edgeworth.

To prepare a tobacco that many pipe-smokers will welcome as a discovery six months after they have lighted up the first pipeful, is something well worth doing. Perhaps more than once a pipe-smoker chances upon next to a smoking tobacco that seems a lot better than the sort he has been smoking. But a few days or a few weeks or a few months later, it doesn't seem to smoke quite so good. Now, a good smoking tobacco has got to seem like a discovery not only at the first pull at the pipe, but on through the year. That means that it has got to suit exactly the needs of many pipe-smokers who would throw it aside if it didn't. Edgeworth seems to keep on being regarded as a discovery by smokers months and years after they begin smoking it. It might seem like a discovery to you. We don't insist that it will. Pipe-smokers differ too widely in their individual tastes. But we would like to have you put it to the test. Simply write on a post-card your name and address, then that of the dealer selling your smoking needs, and we will send you samples of Edgeworth in both forms—Pipe Size and Ready-Rubbed. Edgeworth Pipe Size is pressed, then sliced. Rub one thin, moist slice for a moment between the hands. That's an average pipe-load. Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed is just that—ready to pour straight into your pipe. It packs rather well. Now see how freely and evenly it burns. Edgeworth is sold in various sizes, suited to the needs and means of all pipe-smokers. Write to the dealer who sells your smoking needs, and we will send you samples of Edgeworth in both forms—Pipe Size and Ready-Rubbed.

Ruler of Tibet Is Hard Worker

Britons Find Chief Tells More Than English and American Business Men.

PUTS IN 20 HOURS EVERY DAY

Ponders Religious and State Affairs in Varitable Wandering of Flowers, Birds and Wild Animals—Climate is Cold.

London.—The Dalai Lama of Tibet, the religious and secular head of that secluded country, has to work harder than the average British or American business man. He gets up at four o'clock in the morning and labors until midnight, notwithstanding the fact that he is unquestionably the "big boss."

Sir Charles Bell, a British political officer in India, who has just returned after a year's residence in the romantic "forbidden city" of Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, says the Dalai Lama is a wonderful personality. Sir Charles is one of the few Europeans who have mastered the Tibetan language and this helped him to become friendly with the head of all Tibet.

"He paid me the honor of inviting me into the forbidden inclosure of his country palace," said Sir Charles. Climate is Cold. "This was a little, wonderful of flowers, birds and wild animals—a hidden retreat where he gives deep thought both to his religious and state affairs. Hundreds of canaries were singing here, and there were also stags, pheasants and a great tiger from Bengal."

"The climate was intensely cold when Sir Charles arrived, and for days the temperature indoors never rose above freezing point. In the place of window glass Tibetans used a sort of wax cloth. It lets the wind in, but they are a hardy race and do not appear to feel the discomfort of the cold. "Mutton, yak beef and pork are the staple diet," Sir Charles went on. "Tibetans do not like either chicken or eggs. They do not sleep on beds, but on the floor, on which are placed large downy cushions. You lie on top of these and fold them over you. They are very comfortable and warm."

When the five pleaded guilty to a charge of crap shooting, Judge Stewart announced that they might shoot to see what the sentence would be, the term to depend upon the fall of the dice. The results ranged between 3 and 12 months.

Special Analysis of Marital Statistics Reveals Some Interesting Facts—Figures Show Gain in Marriage of Boys.

Washington.—Sixteen hundred boys and 14,834 girls, fifteen years of age, in the United States were listed as married in 1920, the census bureau announced in a statement presenting a special analysis of marital statistics. Eighty-two boys and 469 girls of the same age were recorded as widowed or divorced.

The analysis revealed a distinct increase during the recent years or since the 1910 census in the percentage of married persons for each year of age from fifteen to thirty-four, especially Noted Hunter in Montana Declares Bruin Will Kill Animals Just for Fun.

Ovando, Mont.—J. K. Stadler, a professional hunter employed by the government, brands the stock-killing bear as the worst enemy of live stock in isolated places. Mountain lions, of which he has killed three-score, are branded by Stadler as cowardly animals, only one of all he has killed showing any disposition to fight. JOKE WAS ON THE ARCHITECT

Inside Story of Status on Home of Vanderbilt.

Son of Builder Says Figure of Tired Mason on Fifth Avenue Mansion Was Joke on and Tribute to His Father.

New York.—New Yorkers who thronged Fifth Avenue last fall to get a glimpse of the Broadway dandy, the deposed Macchante, the bride's dollar mark and other curious sculptures and carvings that adorn stately St. Thomas' church, missed one of the avenue's oldest architectural jests.

For more than three decades, it became known today, the figure of a tired mason has rested and sunned himself on the roof of the old W. K. Vanderbilt mansion at Fifty-first street, within a stone's throw of St. Thomas', gazing down at the fashionable equipages and richly clad crowds that flowed through the famous thoroughfare.

The few architecturally inclined persons who knew of the existence of the Vanderbilt mason believed that the figure was erected as a tribute to a mason who was killed during the construction of the house, but Richard Hunt, architect, who with his late father, Richard Hunt, Sr., built the house, said the figure was at once hunting, says the stock killer is rather more among bears, but when one begins the game he kills in a spirit of wanton mischief, not for food.

He will trail the stock for miles—stick to the trail for weeks, if necessary—to get the chance to kill. Getting one beef or sheep, he will persist until he gets all in sight, unless killed before this happens.

SENTENCED TO LEARN SPEECH

Five Boys Must Know Lincoln's Gettysburg Oration or Go to Reform School.

Passaic, N. J.—Five boys who amused themselves by throwing stones at trains and clambering about on freight cars were sentenced by Recorder Harbour to learn Lincoln's Gettysburg address and be prepared to undergo a catechism on it unless they wished to go to the reform school. The eldest boy, John Hallinik, fourteen years old, of Athenia, was told that when he reported back to the recorder in four weeks he must be able to recite the address.

"I won't sentence you now," said the recorder, "but when you come back here I want you to know something about Lincoln's life and his great address at Gettysburg. Study it as you would a lesson, and I will regard 80 points as a passing mark for your recitation. For every five points below 80 I will send you to the reform school for a year."

The boys left court to get copies of the Gettysburg address with the determination to read it till they know it by heart and also know what it means.

a joke on and a tribute to the senior Hunt.

"The Vanderbilt home," said Mr. Hunt, "was built during the transition period, when it was customary to adorn the roof with a sculptured figure of some sort. The masons and sculptors were continually after my father to tell them what kind of figure he planned to use, but he kept putting them off, saying there was plenty of time to decide after the house was finished."

"Finally, when walking through the nearly completed building my father observed a screen in the large hallway, and directed the workmen to remove it. Behind the screen was a sculptor—Kipson, quite well known at that time—putting the finishing touches on a study of a mason at rest, with his square paper cap on his head and a mallet in his hand. He had used as his model my father, who frequently put on a mason's cap and took an active part in the work."

"Mr. Vanderbilt liked the figure—and that's how it happened that the mason was put up."

The only other figure of an artisan gracing a wealthy home in New York, so far as could be learned, is a heroic statue of a steel puddler, which stands on the lawn before the Charles M. Schwab mansion on Riverside drive. Mr. Schwab was a steel puddler himself before he was "discovered" by the late Andrew Carnegie.

Odd Appearance of Drug Store Attracted Woman Customer, Until the Clerk Explained Situation.

The woman needed three ounces of tincture of myrrh. Hurrying up the street her glance was caught by two mammoth bottles of apothecary waters, and two swinging doors of frosted glass.

Down she stepped—three steps down—into as attractive a drug store as she had seen. All was pure white, walls, dazzling plateglass mirrors, gleaming soda water accessories and row upon row of shelves filled with bottles of ointments, camphors and medicinal remedies.

"Three ounces of tincture of myrrh," said the woman to the clerk. The clerk hurried out of sight and the woman began to notice how queer was the structure of this drug store. There were columns and pillars where there shouldn't have been any. The counter had a peculiar bend to it. Then a strange, prickly feeling came over the woman.

When the clerk finally appeared he explained cheerfully: "Used to be a barroom, lady!"—Chicago Journal.

"Not me!" said the visitor, drawing a paper from his left-hand coat pocket with the same hand. "What I'm telling you is I'm collecting for the place where she's running a charge account, and it's up to you!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

TOO MUCH FOR GRANDMOTHER

Mathematical Problem, Old Lady Declared, Was Something That "No Fellow Could Understand."

The little girl at the elementary school had been promoted to multiplication and for her home work was set the task of finding out how many legs 400 normal horses possess. A bit puzzled as how to work it out, in the evening, as she sat with her exercise book in front of her, she called in the services of her grandmother.

"Let's see," said Grandma, adjusting her spectacles, "one horse'll have four legs, two eight, three twelve, four sixteen, five twenty—" and then she broke off. "How many horses did you say?" she asked.

"Four hundred, granny," replied the little girl.

"E-e, child," said the old lady, shutting up the book, "there isn't one living could do that sum."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

His Honor's Guess.

In Ireland some years ago an Irish-American was brought up before Justice Barry on the charge of suspicious conduct. The officer who arrested him stated, among other things, that he was wearing a "republican hat."

"Does your honor know what that is?" asked the counsel.

"It may be," responded the judge, "that it's a hat without a crown."—Boston Transcript.

An Important Election

The thing of biggest moment to Carrizozo is the coming village election. Tuesday, the 4th day of April, the people of Carrizozo are to decide whether the town is to grow or stand still—mayhap decay. Should the people declare for growth, progress and some of the creature comforts to which all are entitled, the water bonds will receive an overwhelming vote of approval. Should the decision be otherwise—which is unthinkable—we shall be where we have been the past decade, a town without modern conveniences, a town without the comforts that pure water brings to every home.

The cost, while it has not been definitely arrived at, will be only nominal—lower, everyone knows, than we could secure a water supply from any other source or by any other means; because it so happens we are the beneficiaries of the railroad company; and, as a result, the town board has called a bond election to vote on an issue of only $25,000.00 in bonds; whereas, but for the generosity of the company four times that sum would not be sufficient to give us a system similar to the one proposed. With this condition confronting us, to reject the opportunity offered could scarcely be classed less than short-sightedness. There have been some statements made, calculated to create opposition to the issuance of the bonds, but we respectfully suggest to those who are in doubt about the matter that they approach the subject with clear and open minds and give the proposition a thorough investigation; and when that is done we believe a great majority will render a verdict in favor of aiding the up-building of the town, adding comforts to the home and make Carrizozo what it should be—an object of pride to its people and an attraction to all who visit it.

The regular election for mayor, trustees and clerk will also take place on April 4th, and is equally important with that of the bond election. The issuance of bonds, the expenditure of the funds derived therefrom and the installation of a beneficial water system require the services of men with good, common sense and possessed of a degree of honesty and stability that will insist upon and see to it that the town gets value received for every dollar spent.

With this purpose in view, a mass meeting was called and a ticket nominated, the personnel of which was published in the last issue of the News. Full notice had been given of the meeting, a large crowd was present, took an active part in naming the ticket, in a free, open contest, without any star-chamber proceedings, and the persons who received a majority of the vote cast were declared the nominees for the respective offices. The majority spoke its choice, and, on the whole, selected a very good ticket. The majority evidently believed that ticket would give the town what it wants, an honest, economical administration; and so thoroughly do conditions justify its election we confidently believe the choice made by the people in the mass meeting will be given a rousing ratification at the polls Tuesday, April 4.

True Detective Stories

THE FINAL DETAIL

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

THE annals of crime disclose a surprisingly large percentage of cases in which the criminal, having spent months or even years in building up the superstructure of his scheme, makes a fatal blunder in connection with some apparently unimportant detail—a blunder which wrecks his entire plan and brings his operations to the attention of the authorities.

For example, the chances were more than a thousand to one that William Brockway, counterfeiter, being desirous of securing a proof of a plate on which he was working, would select a printer who was not a personal friend of a prominent detective. But chance, which so often plays a leading role even in true detective stories, directed him to a man who knew A. L. Drummond, of the United States Secret Service, well enough to call him by his first name.

"This man came into my place yesterday afternoon," reported the printer, "and wanted some proofs pulled of a plate which he had with him. I took one look at the plate and told him to come back today—said my machinery was out of order. He didn't leave the plate, but he didn't have to. I saw what it was—the figure $1,000, surrounded by a lot of scroll work. 'If he returns today,' directed Drummond, 'pull his proofs for him and hold one of them for me. A couple of my men will be outside your shop, so signal them and they will follow your customer.'

The plan worked according to schedule and, shortly after receiving a proof of the mysterious plate, Drummond got word from his operatives that they had trailed the suspect to a house on Greenwich street. In addition, one of the government agents had recognized him as William F. Brockway known to be the most expert counterfeiter in the country and the man who had achieved fame by manufacturing $100,000 worth of bonds which the Treasury department had accepted as genuine—only to reverse its opinion some weeks later.

Drummond accordingly made a report of the entire matter to Washington, and forwarded a proof of the plate which Brockway had in his possession. To his amazement, the treasury officials stated that the figures and the scroll did not form a part of any government currency or bond issue and that, as federal funds could not be used except in the search for counterfeiters of money or government bonds, Drummond could not be permitted to handle the case.

Accordingly, all the data was turned over to the New York police, and Brockway dropped out of sight for nearly a year, until a rumor was passed along from Washington that the master counterfeiter was working on some coup which would be the biggest of his career.

Drummond knew where to find Brockway, but the secret service men had to work under a handicap, because the ex-convict appeared to have an uncanny way of knowing just when he was being followed. Then he would slip and twist and turn and lose himself, no matter how many men were trailing him.

As a last resort Drummond enlisted the services of his son, a boy of ten, whom he sent to the elevated station at Twenty-eighth and Sixth avenue, with instruction to play around there until he received a signal from two of the operatives. Brockway, not dreaming that the secret service had begun to use children as detectives, was unsuspecting and the boy followed him until he entered the St. James hotel, at the corner of Twenty-sixth and Broadway. With that much of the trail already blazed, it was easy to pick up the rest, and within a few days Drummond was notified that the counterfeiter divided his time between the St. James and a house on Lexington avenue. His associates were two men of about his own age, men whom Drummond recognized as Lewis Martin and Nathan Foster, both of them prominent in all branches of the work connected with the manufacture and passing of counterfeit money.

But even then Chief Brookes of the secret service, declined to allow Drummond to handle the case officially, because all the indications pointed to a plot to counterfeit railroad bonds, rather than United States currency. It was only when Inspector Byrnes of the New York police force, asked permission to use Drummond as a private agent that Washington permitted him to continue with the case.

Using the proof of the "$1,000 scroll" as a foundation, Drummond searched through all the prominent bond issues listed on Wall street, until he found its counterpart—the general portion of the bonds of the Central Pacific railroad. Armed with this information, which was essential to the securing of a definite and specific warrant, Drummond raided the house on Lexington avenue and Martin's room at the St. James hotel. There, in addition to the bank and trading stamps, he found fifty-seven counterfeit $1,000 Central Pacific bonds, all of which were as perfectly executed as the best of the currency of the country and he would not have had the

The Service Is Yours—

WHILE the plant of The Telephone Company belongs to the stockholders, the Service belongs to the public; and it is under the control of the public to a much larger extent than it could possibly be controlled by the Company independently of the public.

As a matter of fact, the telephone organization is simply an agency through which a community serves itself. If this agency is hampered by unreasonable legislation, restrictions on requirements, or by inadequate revenues, or by unjust burdens of taxation, the ability of the agency to properly function is impaired if not wholly destroyed.

Because of the requirements of the public for efficient and abundant telephone service, the public has a very vital interest in the financial health and general well-being of the Company.

With your whole-hearted moral and financial support the Company can continue to give you the quality and quantity of service you require.

Warren G. Harding Completes His First Year as President of United States.

FALL AND WALLACE IN CLASH

American Government Declines to Participate in Geneva Conference—Lloyd George's Threatened Resignation—Fourteenth Canadian Parliament Opened—Flume Fumes Again.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

WARREN G. HARDING at noon of March 4 completed his first year as President of the United States. He was asked for an expression regarding the accomplishments of his administration to date and authorized this statement:

"The record of the administration speaks for itself; it would be a poor administration that required the executive to speak for it."

At an entertainment by the National Press club in honor of the first official birthday the President said:

"The long step toward getting back toward normal ways of government would seem to me to have been the achievement of the year."

Representative Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, made in the house a speech setting forth in detail the accomplishments of the year from the Republican viewpoint. He dwelt on economic, actual and prospective. He said that the United States would be the only government in the world living within its revenues next year, if it could keep within the estimates outlined by the administration. Reviewing the work of the arms conference, he said: "I challenge the record to produce a greater achievement in the history of diplomacy."

Democratic members then proceeded to tear to pieces the Fess eulogy from their standpoint. Cordell Hull, chairman of the Democratic national committee, also took issue with the Fess statement. His general position is that while the Republican congress has enacted a multiplicity of unimportant laws and the arms conference provided for a limited program of naval reduction the Republican party has failed to carry out its major promises made in the campaign of 1920.

Now, in the house debate over the administration's statement of economic Fess talked exactly as if he believed everything he said and the Democrats talked back exactly as if they believed everything he said. And the taxpayer in the gallery knew that everybody couldn't be telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The upshot was that Representative Byrns of Tennessee, ranking Democratic member of the appropriations committee, secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the President to inform the house in what way the savings had been made, from what particular appropriations and in what specific amounts. Thereupon the President instructed General Dawes of the budget bureau to prepare a complete statement covering the entire situation. One thing at least stands out clearly: Nobody doubts that "Mr. and Mrs. Dawes" will give the facts and figures as they are.

President and Mrs. Harding left Washington Wednesday evening by train for St. Augustine, Fla. The presidential party included Attorney General Daugherty, Speaker Gillett, Undersecretary of State Fletcher, Brigadier General Sawyer, his personal physician, and George B. Christian, his secretary. Mr. Christian said the President would occupy his time in "rest and recreation" in Florida for a week or so.

DITONED battle between the Interior and Agricultural departments which has long been waged in official Washington with absorbing interest...

that he had protested to President Harding against the circulation of "vicious propaganda emanating from the Department of Agriculture." The battle, in brief, is over legislation, pending and prospective, which would transfer the forest service from the Agriculture department to the Interior department and practically turn over the development of the natural resources of Alaska to the Interior department, with responsibility to the President. This battle is not a petty quarrel between two departments. It is a real battle between two cabinet members. Some of the old-timers take it so seriously as to predict the resignation of one or the other of the secretaries. Moreover, the battle is significant as indicating the difficulties that lie in the way of the proposed reorganization of all the executive departments.

Until 1906 the Interior department controlled all the public lands. The national forests were then created for the application of scientific lumbering and grazing and the forest service was established to administer them. The Interior department retained control of the remaining public lands and the ten national parks, established for recreational purposes. In the national forests the Interior department is charged with the execution of all laws "relating to surveying, prospecting, locating, appropriating, entering, reconveying or patenting of public lands and to the granting of rights of way amounting to easements." The national forests now number 168 in 21 states and territories and contain about 242,200 square miles. The national parks now number 19 and contain 10,850 square miles.

The national park service was created in 1916 to administer the national parks under the secretary of the Interior. The Agricultural department then began a campaign in print, and from the platform, for the transfer of the national park service to the Agricultural department. It also set up the national forests as recreational rivals of the national parks.

Then came the proposed reorganization of the executive departments, approved by the President. Under this reorganization, the Interior department would become practically a public works department. One contemplated transfer is that of the forest service from the Agricultural department.

On top of this came the concern about the plight of Alaska, which is not prospering. "Too much bureaucratic government" was one cry that was raised. It is now proposed to take Alaska out of the hands of the many bureaus and hand it over to the Interior department for administration and development. The secretary is already building the government Alaskan railroad and controls the oil and mineral deposits in the national forests. The two big national forests in Alaska are the Tongass and Chugach, containing 220,000 acres. Secretary Fall approves this disposition of Alaska. It has been announced that President Harding will visit Alaska this summer to get first-hand information. It was planned that Secretary Fall should be in the presidential party.

Naturally the Department of Agriculture is not pleased with this program. The American Forestry association has sent out much "literature" protesting against it. Some of it is pretty strong. The gist of it is that the transfer of the national forests means their exploitation by "private interests." Anyway, Secretary Fall says he is being held up to "execration, public abuse and private calumny."

THE United States has formally declined the invitation of the allied powers to participate in the European financial and economic conference which is now set for April 10 at Geneva. The declination runs from Secretary of State Hughes to the Italian ambassador, Senator Ricci. The document is a gem of purest ray serene. The language is friendly, the statements are plain, the meaning unmistakable. In diplomatic terms he says that the conference is not primarily economic but is rather a conference of a political character in which the United States cannot helpfully participate. "Nothing doing. See you later. Wish you good luck. I remain, etc." is about the way it would read in the

that the absence of the United States will detract from the usefulness of the conference. But if Europe will hold the kind of conference in which the United States can helpfully participate, it must not expect us unecessarily to become involved in European questions. Better luck next time, maybe, when things get down to brass tacks.

LOYD GEORGE resigning the British premiership doesn't fit in with American notions of the little Welsh wizard. But either he had it scribbled in mind—or he ran a gorgeous bluff. Anyway, he served an ultimatum on the Tory leaders of the coalition party that unless he could be assured of loyal support and co-operation he would resign. Whereupon all Britain buzzed like a disturbed bee-hive. Sir Arthur Balfour was named everywhere as the probable successor. But the coalition chiefs got busy at once. Sir George Younger, the unflinching "die-hard" leader, was made to step back into the line; it was his speech that had forced the issue. Other leaders publicly voiced their confidence in the premier. Balfour, as a conservative leader, put the finishing touch by declaring emphatically for a continuance of the coalition government and endorsing the leadership of Lloyd George, who he declared was incomparably the greatest figure of the greatest age in British history. So the crisis has apparently been passed—though possibly only for the present.

Sir Arthur, by the way, is very much in the British public eye just now. King George has bestowed upon him a knighthood of the Order of the Garter. His achievements at the Washington arms conference are universally acclaimed as regaining for Great Britain the world dominance lost during the world war. Anyhow, in declaring for Lloyd George he bowed himself out of the premiership.

CANADA'S fourteenth parliament was opened Wednesday by Governor-General Byng. W. L. Mackenzie King is the first liberal prime minister to hold the reins of government since Sir Wilfrid Laurier was defeated ten years ago on his policy of reciprocity with the United States. Premier King is a veteran of the Laurier ministry of 1911, in which he served as minister of labor. Rodolphe Lemieux of Montreal, selected by Premier King, is speaker. The government commands about one-half of the members of parliament. The official opposition group, numbering about fifty in a house of 225 members, is led by Arthur Meighen, the defeated premier. T. A. Crerar leads an unofficial progressive group of about 65, who are expected to support the government in most of its policies, especially on the tariff. Both liberals and progressives believe in customs duties "for revenue only," as against the conservative policy of protection. Who said "reciprocity"?

FIUME is on the map again and seems to be trying to rival Vesuvius. The Fascisti and their adherents have chased out President Zanella of the Free City government set up under the treaty of Rapallo between Italy and Jugoslavia. Gabrielle d'Annunzio has sent word that he supports the "uprising." The Italian parties have chosen Giovanni Giuriati, former chief of the post-warrior cabinet, as head of another provisional government for the Free State. The Jugoslavs are rushing troops to the frontier, ostensibly to repel threatened raids by the Fascisti. They are insisting upon observance of the treaty of Rapallo. Italy apparently intends to restore order in Fiume and enforce the Rapallo treaty. She also has moved troops forward.

Make Every Meal A Perfect Feast

Tanlac Makes Each Bite a New Delight

WHEN your digestive system is working efficiently and smoothly, extracting from your food abundant stores of vital energy and piling up a reserve force of vigor to meet any emergency, every bite is eaten with keen zest and appreciation. If your meals are not a real event, if you do not approach the table organ and through ample secretion of digestive fluids. It then promotes energetic action of all the bowel muscles and glands and enables the food to pass through the digestive canal in the normal time. Each of the thousands of little glands whose duty it is to pick up nourishment from the food and send this to all parts of the body are stimulated to their utmost. The whole result is that food is taken care of without distress of any sort in such manner as to derive the utmost benefit from it.

If your appetite is not keen, if your food seems to disagree with you, if you are underweight, nervous, irritable and lack energy, give Tanlac the chance to show you that it can work a miracle with the most lively anticipation of its delights, then you are only half-living, because you are only half getting the value of your food.

Lack of appetite, or distress from indulging the appetite, are both due to the same cause—failure of the digestive system to properly do its important work. The undigested food remaining in the alimentary canal may merely cause a distaste for more food when it cannot take care of what it has, or it may undergo chemical and putrefaction changes that cause acute disease.

Besides, these chemical changes produce poisonous substances that are carried to every cell and organ of the body and that cause all sorts of distressing symptoms.

Tanlac, the famous digestive tonic and body builder, has achieved its wide success because it is able to invigorate the entire digestive tract.

It acts to cause vigorous stomach preparation of the food, both through the muscular churning action of that in your condition as it has in so many thousands of other cases.

If you are dependent, gloomy, with little taste for and enjoyment of life, try Tanlac and no doubt you will see the clouds of gloom roll away under the sunshine of health.

You are entitled to be healthy, vigorous, efficient and happy. Give yourself the chance to become so as thousands of others have, by taking Tanlac.

Get Tanlac from your druggist this very day. Why wait for tomorrow when Tanlac—and health—await you today?

Where Harem Wives Cheap. She—You refuse to buy me a single hat, and then you tell me that while you were in the Congo you had a harem of half a dozen wives. Oh! is that how you could afford to pay for the clothes of all those women? The Returned Soldier—Oh, that was easy. When they wished to dress up, they simply put rings in their noses.—La Regiment.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Harry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleaning of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

She Got the Name. "Mary," said the mistress, "did you ask everyone for cards today, as I told you, when they called?" "Yes'm. One fellow, he wouldn't give me no card, but I swiped his hat an' shoved him off th' steps. Here's his name on th' sweat band."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

GOAT EAT GOAT! Ever eat any goat meat? Sure? Department of Agriculture says about 142,000 goats are slaughtered and sold as meat yearly. Few cities require goat meat to be marketed under its real name. It tastes like mutton, a trifle sweeter. In this nightmare called civilization we probably eat a great many strange things without knowing it. If a written history could accompany each article of food, few city folks would have to be cautioned against overeating.

DYED HER DRAPERIES, SKIRT AND A SWEATER WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can dye or tint faded, shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, hangings, draperies, everything like new. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed, even if you have never dyed before. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run. So easy to use—advertisement.

BUDGET SYSTEM A START

The remedy is already being applied to remove some of the conditions I have described. A budget plan has been put into effect. A director of the budget, in the person of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, has been appointed to office. General Dawes is at work now trying to find out in detail where the money comes from which you pay to run the government and where it goes and how properly to apportion it among the spending agencies of the government. He is just at the beginning of his big task, but the work has begun. That is the important thing.

The budget and accounting act provides for the presentation by the President of a regular and alternative budget of the United States to congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, covering the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923.

Recognizing in the budget machinery created by this law an agency through which executive policy and pressure involving better business administration could be exerted, Mr. Harding assembled on June 29, 1921, for the first time, the heads of departments and independent organizations and bureau chiefs, and after announcing a government policy of economy and efficiency, directed that an immediate attempt with the budget machinery be made to reduce expenditures under the appropriations of the current year ending June 30, 1922.

General Dawes, director of the budget, has reported to the President $112,512,028.32 "as the estimated savings in expenditures reported to me by the heads of departments and independent organizations, in compliance with your directions to all concerned to secure a reduction in expenditures under appropriations and balances available during the current fiscal year, where consistent with the mandatory obligations imposed by congress, either direct or implied."

"Of this amount, $22,822,113.14, pertaining to continuous appropriations and involving for the most part building and construction, will be postponed for expenditure in future years unless otherwise decided by congress. Whatever may be the relation of total expenditures to total revenues at the end of the current year, which, for

WRITE TO THESE MEN.

The chief defects, or places where waste is apparent in the conduct of the business of the government, that I have pointed out in these articles, have been, first, the excessive proportion of the government income that went for military expenditures; second, the chaotic condition and lack of adequate supervision and control of expenditures, which have been in part remedied by the introduction of the budget system; and third, the haphazard organization of the government departments and the unorganized condition that prevailed in government employment.

The remedy for two of these conditions I have treated briefly in the two immediately preceding articles. I come now to the matter of reorganization of the departments and the reclassification of government employees.

A joint committee of the two houses of congress, with Walter F. Brown as chairman, is studying the whole question of organization of the government and the function of the various departments and bureaus and independent establishments. I cannot too strongly advise you to keep yourself in contact with the work that joint committee is doing.

I have given you the names of the members of the committee in another article but I will repeat them here. They are Senators Borah of Utah, Wadsworth of New York and Harrison of Mississippi; Representatives Reavis of Nebraska, Temple of Pennsylvania and Moore of Virginia. Write to any of them or to Mr. Brown, the chairman of the committee, who represents the President, with headquarters in the house office building here at Washington.

This is the third or fourth attempt that has been made to effect a general reorganization of the conduct of the business of the executive departments. They have all failed through lack of interest. There was lack of public interest, and consequently lack of interest in congress.

This joint committee is at work now. It is collecting facts. It is finding out the actual condition. It is studying the departments. Presently it will make a report to congress. If you will show an active, insistent interest in the work that it is doing, congress will take action. If you do not show this interest, there is every chance in the world that no action will be taken, and that things will remain much as ever.

Bureau of Public Roads Distributes Different Articles for Highway Construction.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many and varied are the articles of surplus war material which have been distributed through the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, among the various states for road-building purposes. These articles were turned over by the War department to the Department of Agriculture under the Wadsworth-Kahn bill, the sole stipulation attached to their use being that they be devoted exclusively to the construction and maintenance of roads. The distribution, which has been in process for some time, probably will be completed about the middle of next year. The total value of machinery, equipment, and supplies, independent of motor vehicles, which have been distributed is more than $30,000,000. More than 10 closely written typewritten pages are required for the list of articles alone. In the list are included many thousands of iron and steel bars, including 128,497 pairs of splice bars for 25-pound rails; 49,400 axes of various kinds; several hundred automobile bodies, and many thousand tons of spare parts; 12,898 brooms of various kinds; 275,063 feet of assorted cable; 69 cameras; 1,231 miscellaneous flat and gondola cars; 1,200 miscellaneous concrete carts; 117,350 feet of cord; 1,533 compasses of various sizes; 1,108 field desks; 24 grindstones; 4,000 hammers; 10,078 sets of assorted barages; 1,000 hatchets; 362,292 feet of various kinds and sizes of hose; 81,025 assorted lanterns; 14 sets of micrometers; 15,502 sheets of sand paper; 150,430 picks; 47,000 spark plugs; 307,647 fence posts; 25,000 gross tons of rails; 688,007 sheets of roofing metal; 494,800 feet of various kinds and sizes of rope; 97 salamanders; 378,812 shovels of various kinds; 47,892 spades; 1,757 tractors of various types; 4,773 wagons; 7,900 wheelbarrows; and wire of various kinds amounting to approximately 2,000 tons.

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and run-down," writes Mrs. J. E. Wise of 706 Louise St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH KIMBOLD, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experience of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their words are true.
