

Carrizozo News

OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 22

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, SEPT. 22, 1922

NUMBER 38

Washington News Letter

By Wallace Bassford

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—The Boston Transcript, Republican to the core, bitterly complains that there is no leadership in the White House. No, and furthermore, that is what the people voted for in 1920, and emphatically it is exactly what they got. One of the serious complaints against Woodrow Wilson was that he was too much of a leader; the criticism even went so far as to denounce him as a tyrant who had usurped the functions of Congress, which was, of course, untrue. The fact is that the Constitution has in it something of the spirit of the Roman law which in time of great national crisis provided for the choosing of a dictator; it places in the President's hands powers more absolute than those given to any monarch in the world, power so great that they have never been defined. In the World War both parties united in given him special powers such as they deemed wise or expedient, which President Wilson used with courage, force and quick decision. Like Aulus of the Seventy Fields, he was made a dictator for a great emergency. But the people viewed this great power with doubt and apprehension, and the partisan Republicans who had joined in voting it into his hands went out into the country and cried: "We are losing our liberties—Wilson is a czar!" The people did not stop to ask if the new powers were necessary to save the nation, engaged in a great war, or if the president was using these powers wisely, but, jealous of our freedom, they listened to the partisans who for party advantage declared him to be an autocrat. But when he came before the Republican Congress elected in 1918 and asked legislative reconstruction—returning to pre-war powers—that Congress refused to comply, followed Penrose's advice to "let the people sweat" and thus create still greater dissatisfaction. They are still sweating.

So Harding was elected because he was "a good scout." The absence of a back bone and an undershot jaw were unimportant, for under the new scheme of the Republicans the White House was to be governed and controlled by a sort of group of elder statesmen, including such as Lodge to furnish the dignity, the Morgan group to dig up the dough and George Sutherland to write the President's speeches. And, by the way, Sutherland did this so well that on one occasion when he was away and Harding had to write his own address to deliver before Congress (and which fell very flat) Bob LaFollette remarked that "It sounds like he might have written it himself."

The Department of Commerce figures out that the crop shortages in Europe will cause the need over there of almost 600,000,000 bushels of wheat, most of which would naturally have to come from the United States and Canada. But how the Europeans will be able to buy it is another question. The Republican Congress has, at the behest of the manufacturers, practically shut our doors against importations of manufactured goods; Europe has little else to sell; if she can not sell to us, how can she buy our wheat? The sauce which they have concocted for the manufacturer's goose, does not season the farmer's gander. To make the farmer think he's getting a fair deal, they have put a tariff tax on imported wheat, but as we export wheat instead of importing it, the price of the article is not affected by the tariff. The men who fixed the rate knew this. If they did, what object could there be except to try to make the farmer think he is getting a protection which he does not get. But the farmers don't buy "green goods" any more; they read, think and vote

$100 IS OFFERED

For the best essay written by a citizen of New Mexico on the theme:

"WHY THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET EXCELS"

All articles must be submitted to the Democratic State Central Committee, Santa Fe, by October 16. A sub-committee will pass on the articles and distribute for publication the one winning the prize.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE,
GEORGE H. HUNKER, Chairman.

After Cabinet Official

New York, Sept. 18.—From many angles the congressional foes of attorney general Daugherty are preparing their broadside against that member of president Harding's cabinet.

This has become known with the announcement by Rep. Oscar E. Keller, of Minnesota, that he had requested Samuel M. Undermyer to act as counsel in the move for impeachment. It was Rep. Keller who introduced the bill for institution of impeachment proceedings.

Accompanying Rep. Keller from Washington was Basil M. Manley, director of the people's legislative service, of which senator LaFollette is chairman.

They arrived here Saturday night and passed all Sunday morning and part of the afternoon in conference with Mr. Undermyer at his country home.

Mr. Undermyer, after his two visitors had departed, said he was sending to Rep. Keller at Washington his decision as to whether he would accept the invitation. The text of the telegram would have to be made public in Washington, Mr. Undermyer said.

Rep. Keller, in referring to the conference, said he and Mr. Manley had urged Mr. Undermyer to undertake the task because the proceedings contemplated are intended to go a great deal further than the charges made by organized labor growing out of the restraining order which Mr. Daugherty secured in Chicago.

The two visitors to Mr. Undermyer directed his attention, they said, to matters growing out of Mr. Daugherty's handling of cases turned over to the department of justice by Mr. Undermyer in his position as counsel for the Lockwood legislative committee which investigated

Au Revoir, Baron

Baron Anriemina left Tuesday for El Paso after a week spent in this county, singing, as he said himself into the hearts of our people. But he also sang himself into the pockets of our people as evidenced by that one thousand dollars raised for the cause that he represented the Salvation Army.

The Baron spent two days here after the drive, to rest up following an arduous week, and cooked two spaghetti dinners, in the disposition of which a number of friends assisted. One and all agreed that his culinary gift almost equaled his magical art in song, and that he excelled in both. In this, his second visit, he increased his circle of friends, and when he returns next year a still further enlargement of the circle will be realized. Therefore, Baron, inasmuch as you will return, we say au revoir, but not farewell. So 'tis!

It's toasted. This one extra process gives a delightful quality that can not be duplicated.

housing.

Other counts, Mr. Keller said, charged Mr. Daugherty with using discrimination in favor of big business in the enforcement of federal laws.

5th Liberty Loan Bonds

All 5th Liberty Loan Bonds bearing at the rate of 4 1/2 per cent, and bearing the letters A, B, C, D, or F, should be turned in for redemption not later than December 10, 1922, so that they may reach the department not later than December 15, 1922.

If you desire we will take care of the matter for you.

Try First National Service.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Experience produces Facts

With the completion and use of the first units of permanent highways the importance of the road question as a public issue and a taxpayers' problem becomes more apparent.

One of the first hard surface roads laid in Oregon was put down in 1919 from near Portland to Hillsboro, a distance of eleven miles, at a cost of $229,724. Concrete was laid 5 1/2 inches thick at edge and 6 1/2 inches in center. Within one year after the road was built it began crumbling at the expansion joints and at the end of three years of use it is being repaired and rebuilt over its entire length.

Engineers differ as to the cause of deterioration. Some claiming improper mix, others faulty subgrade, improper materials, too heavy traffic and numerous other reasons.

Concrete is one of the greatest materials that was ever invented for the use and benefit of mankind. Like every other material, however, it has its advantages as well as its disadvantages for certain classes of work. It is not a material that will stand continuous pounding or bending. Hundreds of miles of concrete roads have been laid, however, in western states with apparently no thought of results that would follow the continuous pound and impact of present day traffic. It is unfair to concrete to subject it to conditions which mean its sure destruction.

If a concrete base is used in road construction it should within a year or so be covered with a wearing surface of some bituminous character which will absorb the traffic impact and prevent crystallization of the expensive concrete base which is sure to follow as a result of the thousands of triphammer blows that are delivered against it constantly by passing vehicles.

This question of road construction is no longer a matter of likes or dislikes, of prejudices or opinions. Experience has demonstrated certain facts. It is unfair to the taxpaying public to refuse to recognize these facts. One fact that has been demonstrated above all others in modern road building is that an unyielding, non-shock-absorbing type of pavement will not give service commensurate with its cost of construction.—The Manufacturer.

U.B. Thrifty says

Edison is a smart fellow but the guy who invented interest was no slouch

There are times that the farmer finds his finances in a more or less depleted condition, unless he has a constant source of revenue.

Just a year round revenue is provided through the medium of a good dairy herd.

Dairying is a really profitable branch of the farm industry.

We wish to encourage it.

The Exchange Bank

CARRIZOZO, N. M.

"The Bank for You in 1922."

Start the day right
With a CLEAN SHAVE

A clean shave, then a hot towel and just a little talcum powder. This will put pep in any man.

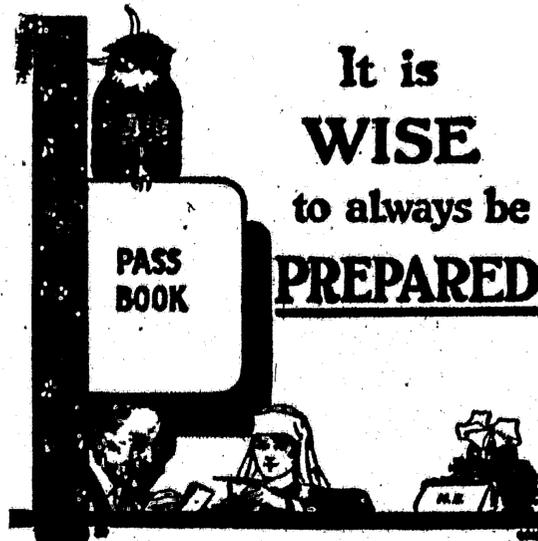

Are you getting the right results from your shaving outfit?

We have a splendid lot of razors, shaving soaps and lotions, and we know these will be a joy as long as you have them.

The price of a few shaves is the price of a new shaving outfit.

COME TO US FOR IT.

Rolland Bros' Pharmacy

It is WISE
to always be PREPARED

Sickness strikes most of us, old age overtakes us all if we live.

Saving and banking money prepares us for these things, also for being thrown out of work.

Are You saving as much money as you should?

Answer this question for yourself and come in and deposit some money?

WE WILL WELCOME YOUR ACCOUNT

Lincoln State Bank

THE CROSS-CUT

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Copyright by Little, Brown & Co.

MYSTERY, MINING, LOVE AND ROMANCE

He stooped and Anita, laughing at her posture, clambered upon his back, her arms about his neck. Fairchild found himself wishing that he could carry her forever, and that the road to the sheriff's office were twenty miles away instead of two. But her voice cut in on his wishes.

"I can walk now. We can get along so much faster!" came her plea. "I'll hold on to you—and you can help me along."

Fairchild released her and she seized his arm. Once, as they floundered through a knee-high mass, Fairchild's arm went quickly about her waist and he lifted her against him as he literally carried her through. When they reached the other side, the arm still held its place—and she did not resist. Some way, after that, the stretch of road faded swiftly. Almost before he realized it, they were at the outskirts of the city.

Grudgingly he gave up his hold upon her, as they hurried for the sidewalks and for the sheriff's office. There Fairchild did not attempt to talk—he left it all to Anita, and, hardwired, the sheriff, listened.

Did you ever carry a pretty girl pick-a-back? Well, it's some experience. Especially when the girl is as pretty and fascinating and altogether adorable as is Anita, and especially when the man is as much interested in the girl as is Fairchild. And especially when the carrying is done in a blizzard and the man is just bound to do all he can to help the girl along.

As for the tale Anita and Fairchild tell the sheriff—well, it's a fit climax to a story of mystery, mining, love and romance in the Colorado Rockies—a land where mystery, mining, love and romance are as much a part of things as the scenery.

When Young Robert Fairchild's father—a man of mystery, living in fear—goes where earthly officers of the law neither see nor hear, he finds himself the owner of a mysterious silver mine, the Blue Poppy. With the inheritance goes a feud and the opposition of a choice collection of scoundrels. Nevertheless, the hero decides to claim the mine and work it. On the way from Denver he meets the heroine—Anita Richmond. She is driving in a desperate hurry, just about two turns of the road ahead of the sheriff. Fairchild helps her change a tire, gets a tip of ten dollars and lies like a whitehead about her to the sheriff. Quite an interesting way of beginning an acquaintance with the prettiest girl in town, who turns out to be engaged—as most people think—to the son of the chief villain—"Squint" Rodaine.

The author? Why, Courtney Ryley Cooper—the writer of short stories and movie scenarios. He ran away as a boy from Kansas City to become a circus clown. Later he wrote circus advertising—no wonder he has a vivid imagination! Anyway, you've undoubtedly read some of his circus stories in the magazines and know how fascinatingly he can write.

CHAPTER I

It was over. The rambling house, with its victrola, old-fashioned furniture—and its memories—was now deserted, except for Robert Fairchild, and he was deserted within it, wandering from room to room staring at familiar objects with the unfamiliar gaze of one whose vision suddenly has been warped by the visitation of death and the sense of loneliness that it brings.

Loneliness, rather than grief, for it had been Robert Fairchild's promise that he would not suffer in heart for one who had longed to go into a peace for which he had waited, seemingly in vain. Year after year, Thornton Fairchild had sat in the big armchair by the windows, watching the days grow old and fade into night, studying sunset after sunset, voicing the vain hope that the gloaming might bring the twilight of his own existence—a silent man except for this, rarely speaking of the past, never giving to the son who worked for him, cared for him, worshipped him, the slightest inkling of what might have happened in the dim days of the long ago to transform him into a beaten thing, longing for the final success. And when the end came, it found him in readiness, waiting in the big armchair by the windows. Even now, a book lay on the frayed carpeting of the old room, where it had fallen from relaxing fingers. Robert Fairchild picked it up, and with a sigh restored it to the grim, fumed oak case. His days of petty sacrifices that his father might while away the weary hours with reading were over.

What had been the story? Why the silence? Why the patient, yet impatient wait for death? The son did not know. In all his memories was only one faint picture, painted years before in babyhood: the return of his father from some place, he knew not where, a long conference with his mother behind closed doors, while he, as childlike curiosity, waited without, seeking in vain to catch some explanation. Then a sad-faced woman who cried at night when the house was still, who faded and who died. That was all. The picture carried no explanation.

And now Robert Fairchild stood on the threshold of something he almost feared to learn. Once, on a black, stormy night, they had sat together, father and son before the fire, silent for hours. Then the hand of the white-haired man had reached outward and rested for a moment on the young man's knee.

"I wrote something to you, Boy, a day or so ago," he had said. "That little letter I had prompted me to do it. I—I thought it was only fair to you. After I'm gone, look in the safe; you'll find the envelope on a piece of paper hidden in a hole out in that old European library in the basement. I hope your grandma knew—that you'll not do it with other eyes."

Now Thornton Fairchild was gone. The message had been read, and the safe was open.

conversation, he turned toward the bookcase and unlatched the paneled door. A moment more and the hollowed history had given up its trust, a bit of paper scratched with numbers. Robert Fairchild turned toward the stairs and the small room on the second floor which had served as his father's bedroom.

There he hesitated before the little iron safe in the corner, summoning the courage to unlock the doors of a dead man's past.

The safe had not been opened in years; that was evident from the creaking of the plungers as they fell, the gummy resistance of the knob as Fairchild turned it in accordance with the directions on the paper. Finally, a great wrench, and the bolt was drawn grudgingly back; a strong pull, and the safe opened.

Fairchild crouched for a moment, staring, before he reached for the thinner of two envelopes which lay before him. A moment later he straightened and turned toward the light. A crackling of paper, a quick-drawn sigh between clenched teeth; it was a letter; his strange, quiet, hunted-appearing father was talking to him through the medium of ink and paper, after death. He read:

"My Son: "Before I begin this letter to you I must ask that you take no action whatever until you have seen my attorney—he will be yours from now on. I have never mentioned him to you before; it was not necessary and would only have brought you curiosity which I could not have satisfied. But now, I am afraid, the doors must be unlocked. I am gone. You are young, you have been a faithful son and you are deserving of every good fortune that may possibly come to you. I am praying that the years have made a difference, and that Fortune may smile upon you as she frowned on me. Certainly, she can injure me no longer. My race is run; I am beyond earthly fortunes.

"Therefore, when you have finished with this, take the deeds inclosed in the larger envelope and go to St. Louis. There, look up Henry H. Beamish, attorney-at-law, in the Princess building. He will explain them to you. "Beyond this, I fear, there is little that can aid you. I cannot find the strength, now that I face it, to tell you what you may find if you follow the lure that the other envelope holds forth to you. "There is always the hope that Fortune may be kind to me at last, and smile upon my memory by never letting you know why I have been the sort of man you have known, and not the jerial, genial companion that a father should be. But there are certain things, my son, which defeat a man. Therefore, is it not better that it remain behind a cloud until such time as Fortune may reveal it—and hope that such a time will never come? I think so—not for myself, for when you read this, I shall be gone; but for you, that you may not be disappointed by the knowledge of the thing which whitened my hair and aged my face before my time.

Accept his counsel, laugh at his little eccentricities if you will, but follow his judgment implicitly. Above all, ask him no questions that he does not care to answer—there are things that he may not deem wise to tell.

"There is little more to say, Beamish will attend to everything for you—if you care to go. Sell everything that is here; the house, the furniture, the belongings. It is my wish, and you will need the capital—if you go. And if circumstances should arise to bring before you the story of that which has caused me so much darkness, I have nothing to say in self-extenuation. I made one mistake—that of fear—and in committing one error, I shouldered every blame. It makes little difference now. I am dead—and free.

"My love to you, my son. I hope that wealth and happiness await you. Blood of my blood down in your veins—and strange though it may seem to you—it is the blood of an adventurer. They say, 'see in the blood, it never dies. My wish is that you succeed where I failed—and God be with you! "YOUR FATHER."

For a long moment Robert Fairchild stood staring at the letter, his heart pounding with excitement, his hands grasping the foolscap paper as though with a desire to tear through the shield which the written words had formed about a mysterious past and disclose that which was so effectively hidden. So much had the letter told—and yet so little! Dark had been the hints of some mysterious, intangible thing, great enough in its horror and its far-reaching consequences to cause death for one who had known of it and a living pain for him who had perpetrated it. In that supercaloric which accompanies great agitation, Fairchild folded the paper, placed it in its envelope, then slipped it into an inside pocket. A few steps and he was before the safe once more and reaching for the second envelope.

Heavy and bulky was this, filled with tax receipts, with plats and blueprints and the reports of surveyors. Here was an assay slip, bearing figures and notations which Robert Fairchild could not understand, then a legal document, sealed and stamped, and bearing the words:

County of Clear Creek, State of Colorado.

DEED PATENT. KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That on this day of our Lord, February 22, 1902, Thornton W. Fairchild, having presented the necessary affidavits and statements of assessments accomplished in accordance with—

On it trailed in endless legal phraseology, telling in muddled, attorney-like language, the fact that the law had been fulfilled in its requirements, and that the claim for which Thornton Fairchild had worked was rightfully his, forever. Fairchild reached for the age-yellowed envelope to return the papers to their resting place. But he checked his motion involuntarily and for a moment held the envelope before him, staring at it with wide eyes. Then, as though to free by the stronger light of the window the haunting thing which faced him, he rose and hurried across the room, to better light, only to find it had not been imagination; the words still were before him, a sentence written in faint, faded ink proclaiming the contents to be "Papers Relating to the Blue Poppy Mine," and written across this a word in the holder, harsher strokes of a man under stress of emotion, a word which held the eyes of Robert Fairchild fixed and staring, a word which spelled doom of the past and evil threats of the future, the single, ominous word:

"I Made One Mistake—That of Fear."

"ACQUIRED"

CHAPTER II

son a matter-of-fact brain for Robert Fairchild, one sentence in that letter had found an echo, had started a pulsating something within him that he never before had known:

"—It is the blood of an adventurer." And it seemed that Robert Fairchild needed no more than the knowledge to feel the tingle of it; the old house suddenly became stuffy and prisonlike as he wandered through it. Again and again pounded through his head the fact that only a night of travel intervened between Indianapolis and St. Louis; within twelve hours he could be in the office of Henry Beamish. And then—

A hurried resolution. A hasty packing of a traveling bag and the cashing of a check at the cigar store down on the corner. A wakeful night while the train clattered along upon its journey. At last:

"I'm Robert Fairchild," he said, as he faced a white-haired, Cupid-faced man in the rather dingy office in the Princess building. A slow smile spread over the pudgy features of the genial-appearing attorney, and he waved a fat hand toward the office's extra chair.

"Sit down, Son," came casually. "Needn't have announced yourself. I'd have known you—just like your father, Boy. How is he?" Then his face suddenly sobered. "I'm afraid your presence is the answer. Am I right?"

Fairchild nodded gravely. The old attorney stared out of the window to the grimy roof and signboards of the next building.

"Perhaps it's better so," he said at last. "Did he get any cheerier before—he went?"

"No. Afraid of every step on the veranda, of every knock at the door." Again the attorney stared out of the window.

"And you? Are you afraid?"

"Of what?"

The lawyer smiled. "I don't know. Only—" and he leaned forward—"it's just as though I were living my younger days over again this morning. It doesn't seem any time at all since your father was sitting just about where you are now, and god, Boy, how much you look like he looked that morning! The same gray-blue eyes, the same dark hair, the same strong shoulders, and good, mainly chin, the same build—and look of determination about him. The call of adventure was in his blood, and he sat there all enthusiastic, telling me what he intended doing and asking my advice—although he wouldn't have followed it if I had given it. Back home was a baby and the woman he loved, and out West was sudden wealth, waiting for the right man to come along and find it. God! White-haired old Beamish chuckled with the memory of it. "Then four years later," the tone changed suddenly, "he came back."

"What then?" Fairchild was on the edge of his chair. But Beamish only spread his hands. "Truthfully, Boy, I don't know. I have guessed—but I won't tell you what. All I know is that your father found what he was looking for and was on the point of achieving his every dream, when—something happened. Then three men simply disappeared from the mining camp, announcing that they had fallen and were going to hunt new diggings. That was all. One of them was your father—" "But you said that he'd found—" "Silver, running twenty ounces to the ton on an eight-inch vein which gave evidences of being only the beginning of a bonanza! I know, because he had written me that, a month before."

"And he abandoned it?" "He'd forgotten what he had written when I saw him again. I didn't question him. He went home then, after giving me enough money to pay the taxes on the mine for the next twenty years, simply as his attorney and without divulging his whereabouts. I did it. Eight years or so later I saw him in Indianapolis. He gave me more money—enough for eleven or twelve years—" "And that was ten years ago?" Robert Fairchild's eyes were reminiscent. "I remember—I was only a kid. He sold off everything he had, except the house."

Henry Beamish walked to his safe and fumbled there a moment, to return at last with a few slips of paper. "Here's the answer," he said quietly. "The taxes are paid until 1922."

Robert Fairchild studied the receipts carefully—futilely. They told him nothing. The lawyer stood looking down upon him; at last he laid a hand on his shoulder.

"Boy," came quickly, "I know just about what you're thinking. I've spent a few hours at the same kind of a job myself, and I've called old Henry Beamish more kinds of a fool than you can think of for not coming right out and saying and making Thornton tell me the whole story. But some way when I'd look into these eyes with the fire all dead and taken within them, and see the heart of an old man in his face, I'd say to myself—"

"What?"

"I'd say to myself, 'I'd like to see you try to do it.'"

Tonight you and I will go to Indianapolis and probe the will—it's simple enough; I've had it in my safe for ten years. After that, you become the owner of the Blue Poppy mine, to do with as you choose."

"But—" "Don't ask my advice, Boy. I haven't any. Your father told me what to do if you decided to try your luck—and silver's at $1.29. It means a lot of money for anybody who can produce pay ore—unless what he said about the mine pinching out was true."

Again the thrill of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recollection of a

GOOD HIGHWAYS TO REGULATE ROAD TRAFFIC

Highways Authorities Must Be Given Wide Discretion as Conditions Vary Greatly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Regulation of the character and weight of highway traffic to prevent undue injury to the highway is an administrative matter and cannot be properly taken care of by detailed and arbitrary legislation. This is the conclusion of the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, based on experiments to determine the effect of all kinds of traffic on road surfaces and observations on conditions throughout the United States.

Even in a single state conditions vary to such an extent that a load which may be carried on one road without injury may cause untold damage to another. Under the average regulatory law thus far made effective, the greatest service has not been secured from the best roads, nor the safety of the lesser capacity roadways assured. The influence of sub-grade soils, tire equipment, distribution of load to the wheels, speed, and many other variables is too complex to be written into law.

Main Highway in Indiana Community.

The seasonal variation alone in the carrying capacity of the roadbeds, due to moisture conditions, is one of the most serious of all the causes of road damage. Highway authorities therefore must be given wide discretion in traffic regulation. The bureau urges that as a solution of the problem the state highway officials of each state be given broad powers, so that traffic can be regulated to suit conditions as they exist at any particular time.

ORGANIC MATTER IN SANDS

Material Unavailable for Concrete to Be Investigated by Bureau of Public Roads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sands unsuitable for concrete on account of the presence of loam or other organic matter are to be investigated by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture and methods of treatment devised to make them safe for use.

Until recent years it often happened that concrete made of good cement and well-graded and apparently good sand, would disintegrate and become worthless. In such cases the poor quality has been attributed to all the different things which go to make a poor concrete.

A few years ago laboratory workers discovered the effect of organic matter in sand and devised a simple test to determine its presence in harmful quantities. The bureau now hopes to find methods of treatment so that such sands can be used. Samples of sand from all parts of the country are desired and anyone is invited to send in a sample in which the presence of organic matter is suspected, addressed to the Bureau of Public Roads, Washington, D. C.

ROAD BUILDING IN ARKANSAS

Highway Costing $2,000,000 Just Completed Near Pine Bluff in Jefferson County.

A $2,000,000 road has just been completed in the Northern Road Improvement district of Arkansas, near Pine Bluff including 75 miles of asphalt pavement and two-course gravel compaction, from Stuttgart and other points to the Jefferson county line. Motor trucks will now be able to pass over this highway with heavy loads of rice from the 90,000 acres of rice lands in that vicinity, affording cheaper and quicker access to the markets. Plans are now on foot for constructing a connecting road with Pine Bluff through Jefferson county.

Thinking of Good Roads.

The fellow who laid the longest way round is the shortest way home must have been thinking of good roads as well as other things.

Producer to Consumers.

One advantage in dealing with a consumer direct is that when you have established a reputation with a certain article you can sell this article.

Gaudy Sleeves in New Styles

One of the first notes from the Paris opening says: "No great change is shown, except that sleeves are more gorgeous than ever and more varied." Well, that is just as we would have it, asserts a fashion writer in the New York Times.

We have grown accustomed to petting and pampering our sleeves as though they were the favorite twins of the family. We know now that unless we pay special attention to that portion of our costume we are lost as far as style is concerned. And we have realized the fact that beautiful sleeves can make a gown as no other detail can.

Sleeve of Lace Cut in Circular Piece (Top), Having Turned-Back Cuff of White Moire. Below: White Puffed Cuff, Fur Cuff and Cuff of Plaited Organdie, Black Velvet Wristband.

A trifle of experimentation will show that the design of one's sleeves can be carried into the line of the gown in such a way that the sleeves become and remain the actual center of attraction and style. And now that we have the sanction of Paris for going ahead with our sleeve achievements, we should manage to do some extraordinarily lovely things during the coming season. We have spent a season in experimentation, as it were, and now, after our months of education, we are launched upon a career of actual artistic accomplishment.

The style declaration that there is no trimming can be accepted and believed until we consider the sleeves of the day. For all the decoration that once was spread over a far broader surface has now been concentrated within the area of the sleeve. We find there not a mere suggestion of trimming, but an actual mass of it. The fact is that often the sleeve is nothing but trimming, and so greedily is it of the place it has come to hold that it succeeds in preventing decoration in any other place. We find embroidered sleeves, brocaded sleeves, lattice-worked sleeves, puffed sleeves, plain sleeves. In fact, there is no end to the surprises that are sprung upon us at every turn of fashion's way.

Now there are certain questions about sleeves which might as well be settled at once. First, sleeves will be long. They will still be full, though not quite so extraordinarily so as they have been. Some of them will be fitted, even from the elbow to the wrist. In evening dresses there will still be only suggestions of sleeves or indications that sleeves might be there in that particular space if the thing had so happened. For coats and capes there will be those voluminous crosses between sleeves and capes which make the wraps look as spacious and comfortable as can be. All of these things will be so, and then there will be so many exceptions that the rules will seem utterly superfluous.

Some of the Newer Sleeves.

A study of some of the newer sleeves is a good approach to the fall costumes, for, as has been said, they will set the pace. And, if one's foundation fashion knowledge has much to do with sleeves, then the path to general smartness of attire will be a simple one indeed.

Among three interesting types of sleeves one is made of strips of beautifully brocaded ribbon. The design is Egyptian, and the colors are all those gorgeous dull ones that designate that period. The color of the gown is a dull blue and the material is one of those soft and pliable silk crepes so fashionable just now. Then the ribbon with its dark yellow, green, red and golden tones is applied in long bands on the sleeves ending at the elbow, and the sleeve is faced with a dull red silk to match that coloring in the woven ribbon.

There are any number of ways of using ribbons in these newer and more elaborate sleeves. They fairly blossom forth in this particular for all the intensely colored ribbons and all those with metal threads and brilliant designs can, in some way, be worked into the design of a gown so that this sort of trimming will look like some intricately specified placement of embroidery.

and transparent sleeve. Another one has made a cap over the top of the arm, or, rather, the shoulder, and has used for this a two-inch woven ribbon placed in a series of strips. Still another sleeve of ribbon—this for a more dressy sort of frock—has strips of picot-edged ribbon in a narrow width, extending from the elbow away into the world in careless lengths. Ingenuity goes a long way in the using of ribbon for the beautifying of sleeves. And it is possible for anyone to design a dress that will make use of some valued bit of ribbon to the glorification of the whole gown. These old-fashioned ideas are coming into general usage again, especially with relation to sleeves, for with the evident necessity for making the sleeve a picturesque quantity, all sorts of modest and manners must be employed in order to lift the modern sleeve out of the class of the usual.

Ruffles of Soft Chiffon. Another sleeve is made of a series of ruffles of soft chiffon. It is a youthful sleeve and one that, doubtless, will find great favor among the younger girls still wanting to look their fluffiest selves. At any rate, it is a sleeve that any mother will love to design for her daughter's party frock. It carries with it so much of charm and grace. And it is evident that, with a sleeve of this fluffy character, not a great deal in the way of other trimming is needed. There might be a few ruffles to match on the skirt, but a more attractive idea would be to keep the frock very straight and plain and full, with the low hanging bertha, and the circle of brightly colored ribbon roses. Then let the ruffles on the sleeves in their graduated widths count for everything all by themselves. They will be much more effective that way and will have a chance, without interruption of design, to display the really lovely lines which they establish for the whole costume.

An interesting sleeve finish is suggested for a dinner dress. The dress itself is one of those draped affairs with the lines of the fabric made gracefully to follow those of the figure itself. Then a shaped piece of silver and gold brocade is arranged for a low-cut collar and over the arm is hung a strip of the same trimming to make the armhole decoration. By this little trick, that sometimes ugly line of the sleeveless gown is done away with altogether and the arm is still left to shine in uninterrupted splendor. There are any number of adaptations of this idea to be seen on the newer gowns, and while the combination of black satin with sparkling silver trimming is one that has found much favor, there are other color combinations which can be worked out most successfully in this way.

Among the Handsomer Gowns. White organdie and cream batiste, combined with lace, have suddenly become very popular among the handsomer gowns for late summer wear. This may be an indication, too, that a style of this sort will carry over into winter. But on the street and in all the smart luncheon places these days one is very apt to see a black crepe or a black satin dress quite handsomely trimmed with some of this lingerie trimming that the season's thin and cut steel buckles. This is a sparkling trim, if you please, but it is only illustrative of the lengths to which the designers are going in their effort to supply a touch of distinction in some of the newer black frocks.

Showing Winsome Group of Sleeves That Are Prominent in Some of the Newer Frocks. These Sleeves Range From the Chiffon Ruffles to the Flat Strips of Brocade Material.

Then there is a broader cut, barine back and lower down the hand, being

Whole System Is Benefited by Tanlac

Thousands of frail, nervous people and convalescents everywhere have testified to the remarkable power of Tanlac in bringing back their health, strength and working efficiency. It seems to quickly invigorate the constitution, and is a powerful foe of weakness. Mrs. George G. Owen, of Salem, Oregon, says:

"My nerves were upset and the little I ate wasn't enough to keep up my strength, so I lost weight and became so weak it seemed I had no energy at all. Tanlac restored my health completely, and I gained twelve pounds in weight." There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac. It enables the stomach to turn food into healthy blood, bone and muscle, purifies the system and helps you back to normal weight. Get a bottle today at any good druggist.—Advertisement.

Fortune in Scrap Iron. Charles Perrott has just appeared before a Paris court charged with concealing $150,000 war profits to escape taxation. When war broke out he kept a small cafe at Saint Denis, his wife attending to that while he peddled with a handcart. He bought scrap iron, and made so much money that he paid $5,400,000 for the war stock of the American camp at Remorantille.

The Cuticura Toilet Trio. Having cleared your skin keep it clear by making Cuticura your every-day toilet preparations. The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal, the Talcum to powder and perfume. No toilet table is complete without them.—Advertisement.

Triumph in Right Beginnings. In contemplation of a man begin with certainties, he shall end in doubts, but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end in certainties.—Bacon.

Being pleased with yourself is a condition of mind not intended for dress parade.

BELIEVED IN "EARLY TO BED"

Small Town Evidently No Place for Individual Acustomed to the City's Bright Lights.

Recently two newspaper correspondents were sent to the coal fields in Clay county, where martial law has been declared, and in the evening they wandered to a small village near the fields in an effort to find some entertainment.

After walking up and down Main street several times, the correspondents sighted a public drinking fountain. It was then nine o'clock. On examination they found that the drinking fountains had been locked by the town official for the night. Then they headed for a drug store and found the proprietor locking up for the night. On inquiry they were told that "it is past nine o'clock."

One correspondent said to the other: "Well, Mack, do you suppose the hotel is closed for the night?"

"I don't know," the other replied, "but I think we had better get to bed before they move the curbstones in."—Indianapolis News.

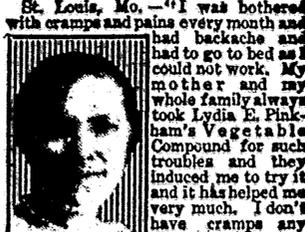

Cutting Down Time of Apprenticeship. The industrial association of San Francisco, Cal., has started a school of apprentices with some novel features. The boys have been divided into three classes and one class moves along behind the other. The first two weeks will be spent in school after which they will be put to work as assistant helpers for four weeks after which they will return to school and so on during the term of their apprenticeship. In this manner of alternating the school and shop experience it is anticipated that from 12 to 18 months will be saved and the boys will be full-fledged plumbers in two and a half or three years instead of four. The apprentices will be paid for the time they are at work, but not for the time at school.

Going Down. Blackstone—"Is your wife still reducing?" Webster—"If you mean my income—yes."

Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man and writing an exact man.—Francis Bacon.

CRAMPS, PAINS AND BACKACHE

St. Louis Woman Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered with cramps and pains every month and had to go to bed as I could not work. My mother and my whole family always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for such troubles and they induced me to try it and it has helped me very much. I don't have cramps any more, and I can do my housework all through the month. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends for female troubles."—Mrs. DELLA SCHOLZ, 1412 Salisbury Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Just think for a moment, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use for nearly fifty years. It is prepared from medicinal plants, by the utmost pharmaceutical skill, and superior methods. The ingredients thus combined in the Compound correct the conditions which cause such annoying symptoms as had been troubling Mrs. Scholz. The Vegetable Compound exercises a restorative influence of the most desirable character, correcting the trouble in a gentle but efficient manner. This is noted, by the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM. Restores Hair and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair. Sells Everywhere.

HINDERCORNS. Remove Corns, Calluses, Bunions, etc. From Ground onto Heel and Off F. LAVERING, Fremont, Neb.

IF YOUR USES "Cutter's" VETERINARIAN. The Cutter Laboratory. Berkeley, U.S. Lucas, California.

HANDY JACK—One man changes two men. Handy Jack, etc. From ground onto heel and off F. LAVERING, Fremont, Neb.

Advertisement for Fletcher's Castoria. The box is shown with text: "Net Contents 15 Fluid Ounces", "900 Drops", "ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT.", "A Vegetable Preparation which stimulates the food by regulating the Stomach and Bowels of INFANTS CHILDREN", "The only Promoting Dietetic Cheerfulness and Best Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC", "Drops of CHILD-SANITARIUM", "A helpful Remedy for Constipation and Diarrhoea and Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP resulting therefrom in Infancy.", "Yac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher", "THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.", "At 6 months old 35 Doses 40 CENTS". Below the box is the text "Exact Copy of Wrapper."

Advertisement for Fletcher's Castoria. Text: "Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA", "Special Care of Baby.", "That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.", "Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.", "A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.", "Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.", "MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA", "GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.", "THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY."

10 Cents Gives Cheerful New Color Tone to Old Curtains PUTNAM FADELESS DYES, dyes or tints as you wish

MARSHAL FOCH'S FIRST PIPE

French General Discarded Cigarettes When Great Offensive Against German Enemy Began.

The truth about Foch's famous pipe came out also on the Metz trip. It was on the way home, and the marshal was dining in M. Poincare's private car. After dinner the prima minister said: "Pray smoke your pipe if you like, marshal." The soldier pulled a beautiful case, containing two handsome pipes, from his pocket. As the chief of state commented on their beauty, he said they were given to him by a group of American artists.

"Have you been smoking a pipe for long?" asked Poincare. "My first pipe was on July 15, 1918." "The very day you began the offensive that led to victory?" exclaimed Poincare. "Yes. The cigarettes were fearful at the time, so I took to the pipe, like everybody else." And that is the true story of the famous "peace pipe" of Marshal Foch, if we can trust Le Globe.

Didn't Want to Talk.

In the smoking room of an east-bound car the other evening there were two men—one of them grouchy, the other receptive. After smoking two indifferent cigars the latter said to the former:

"How far are you going?" "Buffalo," acknowledged the other, taken off his guard.

"Is that so? Well, Buffalo is a great town. I have a cousin living there and I've been there myself several times. Er—what are you going to do in Buffalo?" "Change cars."—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Well Supplied.

Dr. Samuel McGaughey sends this one: "We are living 'hard by' Acton, which has several churches. Mary Jane, our five-year-old daughter, has been in several old entertainments in the various churches. The other day one of our friends asked her to which church she belonged. Her answer was, 'I am half Presbyterian, half Baptist and half Catholic.'"—Indianapolis News.

Balloon Steering.

Drifting for miles in a free balloon might seem to offer little prospect for a landing again on your own doorstep. But an accommodating air current and a little head work turned this trick for Julius P. Smith, of the army air service, at Langley field, Virginia. His experience is unique in lighter-than-air work. Carried off in one direction by the wind, the aeronaut ascended until he struck a calm. Figuring that the calm was caused by two strong air currents moving in opposite directions, he threw out ballast, rose above the calm, caught the current moving swiftly in the direction opposite and returned to his starting point.

Call not that man wretched who, whatever he suffers, has a child to love.

The teeth of the barlequin snake are arranged like those of a cat.

Advertisement for Murine eye drops. Text: "MURINE Night and Morning. These Strong, Healthy Eyes. If they Tingle, Smart or Burn, if Sore, Irritated, Inflamed or Red. YOUR EYES."

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET

For U. S. Senator A. A. JONES
 For Congress J. M. MORROW
 For Governor JAMES F. HINKLE
 For Lieut. Governor JOSE A. BACA
 For Secretary of State SOLEDAD CHACOS
 For Attorney General MILTON J. MELNICK
 For Land Commissioner JUSTINIANO BACA
 For Treasurer JAMES W. COBBIN
 For State Superintendent ISABEL ECKLES
 For Auditor JUAN YIGIL
 Corporation Commr. BONIFACIO MONTAÑA
 Supreme Court Justice SAM G. BRATTON
 Representant 1st Dist. MERRITT U. FINLEY

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY TICKET

For Sheriff ED W. HARRIS
 For Treasurer and Collector HARRY G. NORMAN
 For Clerk and Recorder RALPH M. TREAT
 For Assessor JOHN L. BRYAN
 For Probate Judge W. E. KIMBRELL
 For Surveyor BEN F. NABORS
 For Supt. of Schools LOUISE F. COE
 For Commissioners
 1st District - EUGENE C. DOW
 2nd District - MELVIN FRANKS
 3rd District - ROBT. H. TAYLOR

Carrizozo News

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Postoffice at Carrizozo, New Mexico, June 2, 1902.

Oldest and Leading Newspaper in Circulation in Lincoln County, New Mexico

Subscription, in advance, $2.00 per Year
 Advertising Rates (also in all) furnished upon request

JNO. A. HALEY - Editor and Publisher

FRIDAY, SEPT. 22, 1932

Worthy of Support

Almost a month ago the Democratic County Convention named its candidates and their names have been carried in those columns.

Four of the nominees of that convention are at present officials of the county and new-comers as well as old-timers should be well acquainted with the manner in which all of these four men have conducted the affairs of their respective offices. The four are: Ed W. Harris, sheriff; Ralph M. Treat, clerk; Harry G. Norman, treasurer, and John L. Bryan, assessor. That all of these men have well and faithfully performed their duties is generally conceded, and their re-nomination was but a concession to a service well rendered.

Two of the nominees for county commissioner, viz: Robert H. Taylor and Melvin Franks, have served the people as commissioners. Mr. Taylor two terms in territorial days and once since statehood, while Mr. Franks served two terms—the first for five years—following at a t e h o o d. Both men are closely associated with the affairs of Lincoln county and their experience fits them beyond that of most men for the position each has been named. Eugene C. Dow, nominee from the Lincoln district, is a young man of sterling character and is highly regarded by all in the section where he lives.

W. E. Kimbrell, for probate judge, is another nominee who served the people of Lincoln county, before statehood, for two terms as probate clerk. His record is clean, his standing is high and he possesses a knowledge of probate affairs that should command him to all voters.

Mrs. Louise F. Coe is one of the best trained and most capable teachers in this county, and a better knowledge of the duties of county school superintendent is possessed by none. She is especially familiar with the needs of the weaker districts, which require active supervision, and her election would mean that the necessary supervision would be given. Her accomplishments are well known and with it all she possesses energy, determination and good judgment.

JONES
For Senator

HINKLE
For Governor

EFFICIENCY

It is not obtained by selecting executives for their political faithfulness, but by choosing men and women for their business ability.

Putting efficiency into government is the aim of the Democrats. It is possible for them to do this, having no band of regulars to appoint.

ECONOMY

It has been lacking in administration so long that taxpayers now hand out more money for a wasteful support of a political machine than ever before.

Democratic candidates stand for fewer and smaller expenditures, saving money for all citizens.

Republican Name Ticket

The Republican met in convention at Lincoln Wednesday and named the following county ticket:

For Sheriff, Leopoldo Gonzales.
 For Treasurer, Ira O. Wetmore.
 For County Clerk, Samuel Kelsay.

 For Assessor, Robert A. Hurt.
 For Commissioners, First district, Pablito Aldaz.
 Second district, Brack Sloan.
 Third district, Frank E. Richard.

For Supt. of Schools, Miss Florence Spence.

For Probate Judge, Agustin Chavez.

For Surveyor, A. H. Harvey.
 For Representative, W. E. Blanchard.

Undergoes Operation

Martin Connors, who has been employed at the Pure Food Bakery, underwent an abdominal operation Monday, at the Paden Hospital, Dr. Johnson performing the operation. A quantity of pus was drained from the opening, and the patient's condition is reported satisfactory.

is a man who has had much experience. He was named as the Democratic candidate for county surveyor, and all who know him will agree that the county could do no better than elect him surveyor.

Merritt U. Finley has been a leading citizen of Lincoln county for the past eight years, and before coming to this county was long prominent in the civic and commercial life of Roswell, and was honored with responsible positions when he made Chavez county his home, and his record as an official was one of careful attention to public affairs, featured by practical economy in the expenditure of public funds. Mr. Finley has been named as the Democratic candidate for representative from Lincoln county, and should he go to Santa Fe in that capacity he will be heard from and his efforts will be in the direction of securing relief for the people.

No Political Debts

Unhampered by the necessity for following the line of political expediency in governmental matters, James F. Hinkle, if elected, would occupy a position resulting in greatest benefit to the state.

Propositions involving the expenditure of money would not be decided upon their merits as they affected a possible vote in the future, but upon the question of whether or not the spending was essential to the good of the state and could the money be disbursed without adding to the tax burden of the citizens.

In selecting officials for the conduct of the state's business, Mr. Hinkle, as a governor, would not be expected to nor would he attempt the building of a mere political organization, but would obtain the presence of capable executives, selected because they were fitted for the tasks ahead of them.

To perpetuate Republican control of New Mexico's administration would make these things impossible. There is Republican organization to be maintained. This has cost taxpayers of the state vast sums of money, has made the present tax rate one that discourages new residents coming into the state. Continuance of the Republicans in charge of the state government simply means the present extravagance would go on.

With the election of Mr. Hinkle, business policies would be introduced in Santa Fe without the handicap of having a multitude of party friends to be helped out with taxpayers' money.

Francis should send a few of

Thousand Dollar Drive

When Baron Auriemma, the Salvation Army singer, reached here he was told by the Lincoln County Advisory Board that a week's drive for funds would not bring over $600.00. He said no: $800.00 was the minimum. However, the Baron raised his sights before the week was over to $1,000.00, and just missed it, at the week's close, by $8.31, as the total is $991.69. This sum will be augmented by small subscriptions, of which the committee has been assured, which will run the sum beyond the $1,000.00 mark.

Every community visited responded—some quite liberally—and a few communities that were not visited sent small amounts. Corona heads the list outside of Carrizozo, with Capitan, Fort Ft. Stanton, White Oaks, Lincoln and Nogal following in order. Carrizozo, with two concerts by the Baron to swell its figures, has to its credit over 60 per cent of the total.

The advisory board is greatly pleased with the result and the Baron left so happy that his sobriquet of "Sunny Jim" was never more applicable. We are quite willing to hand it to the Baron, for he overcame the handicap, due to conditions, that, at the start, appeared insuperable, and made the drive a stupendous success.

Admitted

The Albuquerque Morning Journal, the strongest republican paper in the state, says:

"The ticket nominated by the Democratic convention is generally conceded to be one of the strongest state tickets, if not the strongest, yet put into the field by that party. At least four names on it will tax the ingenuity of the Republican managers. They are the candidates for Governor, James F. Hinkle; for United States Senate, A. A. Jones; for Congress, John Morrow; and Supreme Court Justice Samuel G. Bratton."

Heading Both Ways

The Republican state convention, in its platform, highly commended the present Republican officials, from governor down, and then proceeded to leave cash and everyone of them off the ticket. Funny, wasn't it?

If the curious voter should take a slant at his tax receipt he would have a slight appreciation of what Republican efficiency and economy have cost the tax-

The Titsworth Co., Inc.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

We carry in stock—

Fresh Fruit Fruit Jars Jar Rubbers
 Cement Lime Chicken netting Hog fence Grain bags
 Steel and Felt roofing Doors Window glass and sash
 Building paper Pump engines Wagon skeins, timber, Etc.
 Lubricating oils Dry batteries Paints and oils
 Black Leaf "40" Black Aggressin Patent Medicines, Etc.

Our prices are reasonable

The Titsworth Company, Inc.

CAPITAN, NEW MEXICO

Political Horoscope

Santa Fe, Sept. 18.—Horoscopic science gives New Mexico a rather accurate picture of conditions and the cause thereof.

A Las Cruces Democrat finds that the horoscope for September 7 and 8 reads:

September 7—Astrologers read this as a rarely unlucky day. Mars and Saturn are in strongly malefic aspects and Neptune is adverse.

September 8.—Again the astrologers read misfortune in the stars. Saturn and Mercury rule this day strongly and they are in evil aspect. All the planetary influences of this week are said to be disturbing, making for discontent and unhappiness.

The Republican state convention was in session September 7 and 8.

The first five years of statehood, which should have been the best years, by far, has

A Wish

"I HAVE TAKEN Cardui for run-down, worn-out condition, nervousness and sleeplessness, and I was weak too," says Mrs. Silvie Estes, of Jennings, Okla. "Cardui did me just lots of good—so much that I gave it to my daughter. She complained of a soreness in her sides and back. She took three bottles of Cardui and her condition was much better."

"We have lived here, near Jennings, for 25 years, and now we have our own home in town. I have had to work pretty hard, as this country wasn't built up, and it made it hard on us."

"I WISH I could tell weak women of Cardui—the medicine that helped give me the strength to go on and do my work." This card fulfills her wish.

CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

1—Salvaging the wreck of Sempalo Correla, seaplane of the New York-to-Brazil flyers, off Cape May. 2—Queen Titania (Miss Edna Freeman of East Orange) and her court at the Asbury Park baby parade. 3—First photograph showing the occupation of Milan by the Italian Fascist to break a general strike.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Shop Crafts Policy Committee Called to Chicago; Strike May Be Settled.

RAIL EXECUTIVES SAY NO

Government Will Not Enforce Injunction Too Drastically—Ending of the Anthracite Strike—Landslide for La Follette in Wisconsin—Greeks Whipped by Turks.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SETTLEMENT of the railway shopmen's strike may be at hand. Last week E. M. Jewell, head of the shopmen, called their policy committee to meet in Chicago September 11, the day set for hearings on the motion to make permanent the sweeping injunction obtained by Attorney General Daugherty. There are 50 members of the committee, and some of them said freely that it was obvious that a settlement was in sight.

President Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio was said to be working on a plan for separate agreements.

On the other hand, various railway executives flatly denied that any movement was on foot looking to an agreement with the shopmen. Their chairman, T. DeWitt Cuyler, asserted the railways already had won the strike, that on September 1 they had 505,000 shopmen at work, and are adding thousands daily to their shop forces.

Criticism of the unparalleled inclusiveness of the injunction issued by Judge Wilkerson was not confined to labor circles by any means, being shared by members of congress, many editors and other presumably unbiased persons. Probably taking note of this fact, the administration let it be known that the government had no intention of enforcing the injunction to the point of abridgment of free speech or otherwise invading the constitutional liberties of citizens. Attorney General Daugherty indicated that there would be no interference with labor meetings "held for lawful purposes," but that the government would step in if the strike meetings were for the purpose of "inciting riots" or other violation of the law. So far organized labor has practically ignored the restraining order, but the government agents, while keeping close watch on the proceedings, have done little in the way of attempting enforcement. Naturally, on Labor day, the union leaders, from President Gompers down, took the opportunity to attack bitterly the action of the attorney general. Later the labor chiefs mapped out a plan of attack on the injunction, seeking counter-injunctions.

Talk of a general strike largely subsided during the week, for all but the more radical laborites recognized that such a thing, hitherto unknown in the United States, could not succeed. They probably realize, also, that the workers, no less than the rest of the population, would be deprived of most of the necessities and comforts of life by a general strike.

OPERATORS and miners in the anthracite fields accepted the terms proposed by Senators Lepper and Reed, and the strike was settled by an agreement which, like that in the bituminous case, is almost a complete victory for the men. The old wage scale has been extended until August 31, 1922, both sides joined in recommending national legislation creating a separate anthracite coal commission, and the continuance of production after the extension date is to be upon such terms as the parties may agree upon in the light of the report of the commission.

The senate by a vote of 49 to 7 passed the administration coal distribution and price control bill. The grand jury at Jeffersonville, Ind., is investigating the Harris slaying.

announced that the union will stand back of every union man who is accused of participation in the murders, and already he has declared that all such are innocent. Interest of the American Legion has been aroused by the discovery that two of the murdered men were overseas veterans.

JOHN H. CLARKE of Ohio resigned as associate justice of the Supreme court of the United States, and George H. Sutherland, former senator from Utah, was appointed to fill the vacancy and confirmed by the senate. Justice Clarke gave slight reasons for his resignation except that he had reached the age for retirement. He was appointed by President Wilson in 1910 and had sometimes been criticized by conservatives because of his decidedly liberal tendencies. Mr. Sutherland, whose great legal ability is widely recognized, is classed as a liberal. He was born in England in 1862 and received his education in the schools of Utah and the University of Michigan. He is a close personal friend of President Harding.

RUNNING true to form, the Republicans of Wisconsin renominated United States Senator Robert M. La Follette in the primaries last Tuesday. No one with any knowledge of the situation expected they would do otherwise. However, "Bob's" majority was probably a surprise even to him, being well over 200,000 according to incomplete returns. It was a landslide and carried with it the entire state backed by LaFollette, including Governor J. J. Blaine, who won by more than 150,000. Rev. W. A. Ganfield, college president and candidate of the Anti Saloon league, was unable to detach from the senator's support many of the Republican drys although La Follette is openly wet. Then, too, the senator naturally received the votes of the large population of Teutonic origin. The one surprise of the day was the defeat of Congressman A. P. Nelson of the Superior district by H. H. Peavey, Nelson is a prominent leader of the drys and his downfall was accomplished by a combination of the LaFollette organization and the Association Opposed to Prohibition.

The Democratic nominee for senator against La Follette is Mrs. Jessie J. Hanover of Oshkosh.

In the second Democratic senatorial primary in Mississippi, according to partial returns, former Senator James K. Vardaman was beaten by Hubert D. Stephens, former congressman. Woodrow Wilson, when informed of this, expressed his satisfaction, which will be shared by the American public generally.

GREEKS' army in Asia Minor has been almost demoralized by the forces of Kemal Pasha, the nationalist leader, and at this writing the latter is not far from Smyrna. The situation for the foreign colony in that city is critical and British and American warships have arrived there to protect their nationals. There have been some bloody encounters between the opposing armies, but for the most part it appears the Greeks have retired, in considerable confusion, without putting up much of a fight. The Turkish leaders are said to be much superior to the Greek commanders. It was reported that General Tricoupi, recently made commander in chief of the Greek forces, was captured by the Kemalists.

The Greek morale, both in Smyrna and Athens, seemed to have been broken. Movements were said to have been started to compel King Constantine to abdicate and there were rumors that the cabinet was about to resign and that former Premier Venizelos would return to power. However, it was stated that the government would not consider the evacuation of Smyrna or the surrender of the Greek mandate in Thrace. Both of these things the Turks demand before they will talk of peace. The Kemalists, and the French who are friendly to them, blame Great Britain for its support of the Greeks and their claims. A rising of Turks on the south side of the Dardanelles has alarmed the British, who are concentrating on Gallipoli peninsula to check a possible march on Constantinople. Bulgaria

THE assembly of the League of Nations is holding another session in Geneva and Augustin Edwards, Chilean minister to England, was elected its president. The chief matter before the league is the Austrian situation. Chancellor Seipel presented the case for the suffering little republic and tried to make it clear that unless the allies granted immediate and liberal relief, Austria might have to merge with another nation, possibly Germany—which would violate the treaty of Versailles—or preferably Czechoslovakia, or maybe Italy, which desires such an outcome. The league council, after hearing the chancellor, soothed him with honeyed words and referred to a committee the entire question of how Austria shall be aided and under what guarantees. Seipel scored the British and French banks in Vienna whose manipulations added to the downward crash of the crown and prevented the Austrian government from taking constructive measures. "Austria realizes she must submit to financial control to obtain sums necessary to her salvation, but this must not affect her sovereignty," he said.

Great Britain's seizure of the entire phosphate deposit on the island of Nauru in the Pacific was the subject of protest to the league council by the United States, and Marquis Imperiali of Italy also demanded information concerning this. The treaty of Versailles provides for equal exploitation opportunity of national resources in mandated territory by the allied and associated nations. After a heated debate Lord Balfour considered and finally consented to the "request for additional information as long as it is expressly understood there is no criticism of the British government's action."

HUGO STINNES, German industrial magnate, and Senator de Lubersac, president of the committee on French devastated regions, have made an agreement providing for the delivery by Germany of one billion dollars' worth of reconstruction material and work. To obviate the bad effect of having many Germans working in France, de Lubersac explains, it was arranged that the greater part of the labor will be utilized in Germany. The German manufacturers of the goods delivered are to have 6 per cent profit. The Socialist press in Germany attacks the whole plan as purely a selfish contract at the expense of the German government and labor, and it estimates Stinnes' profits at 45,000,000,000 marks.

Dr. Hermes, German finance minister, is negotiating with Belgium concerning guarantees for six-month treasury certificates which Germany is to give Belgium in lieu of cash. His difficulty is threefold, for he must satisfy not only the Belgians, but also the German cabinet and German financial and industrial leaders. It seems likely he will have to seek for the guarantees from foreign financiers.

SECRETARY OF STATE HUGHES and his party arrived at Rio de Janeiro, were given an enthusiastic reception and housed in a palace, and on Thursday the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of Brazilian independence was inaugurated with impressive ceremonies and patriotic festivities. The centennial exposition is still far from complete but will be opened soon. It is interesting to note that at the presidential reception Secretary Hughes took second place to Mgr. Churubini, ambassador from the Vatican, because Brazil is a Catholic country. Two immense Vatican guards in red uniforms and gold helmets accompanied the representative of the Pope.

Although the aviators who started from New York for Brazil in the seaplane Sempalo Correla came to grief a few days after the start and their plane was wrecked, they are proceeding on their way in another machine, and are now in Caribbean waters.

ONE eminent American died last week—Dr. Rev. Samuel Fallows of Chicago, head of the Reform Baptist church. He was a veteran of the Civil war, from which he received a breast wound.

Southwest News From All Over New Mexico and Arizona

New Mexico's school bill this year will be from $700,000 to $800,000 under last year's, according to State School Auditor John Joerns.

Roy Calvin, 18, of Lavena, wounded by a ricochet bullet when Policeman George Harding shot at the tires of the automobile he was driving, died at Phoenix.

One of the most disastrous fires in Des Moines for many years occurred recently when the two large store-houses belonging to E. E. Cory were destroyed.

The new oil well of the Midwest Refining Company between Farmington and Shiprock, is now down to the depth of 500 feet. The drilling is progressing rapidly.

Nestor Candelaria, a railway shop striker, died at his home in Albuquerque from injuries sustained in a fight. Officers are searching for a shop worker who is said to have struck Candelaria.

At work in earnest on the proposed railroad from Fort Worth to Tucuman, Col. C. H. Powell of Chicago is now sending out questionnaires to farmers and business men along the right-of-way. No recent work has been done on the road.

The first "Home Rodeo" to be held in Clayton took place recently when one of the largest crowds ever seen in Clayton was present. Some of the best riders and ropers in Union, Harding and Colfax counties participated in the many events and special prizes were awarded to the winners.

Harvey Burkett was found guilty of second degree murder in his trial at Fort Sumner, charged with the killing of Ora Hall, near Hicardo, Feb. 6, and sentenced to forty to fifty years in the penitentiary. His attorney gave notice of appeal. The men were ranchers, and the killing followed a dispute over range land.

The tippie at the Weaver coal mine at Gallup was burned recently. Indications are the fire was of incendiary origin. Authorities are investigating. The loss of the tippie caused a complete suspension of operations at the mine, throwing 172 miners out of work temporarily. The damage was estimated at $40,000.

Committees are hard at work on the plans for the big Indian fair which is to be held in Gallup, Sept. 23-29 and 30 in the City park. Ray Alrich and Mike Kirk, Indian traders, have lined up Indian dances as follows: The fire dance of the Navajos, the Comanche war dance of the Salinas, the Eagle and the Butterfly dance of the Hopis.

The nude body of Guy Derner, well-known in Phoenix and throughout Arizona, was found floating in the Arizona canal, near Black Cañon road, about eight miles from Phoenix. On the throat was found a deep abrasion and the chest was bruised in a number of places. About half a mile up stream from where the body was discovered Derner's automobile was found standing on the banks of the canal. On the seat his clothes had been neatly arranged.

Two brides in a double elopement who are being detained in Albuquerque following the arrests of their husbands on a charge of having stolen the two automobiles in which they came here on their honeymoon, requested officers to allow them to obtain work in Albuquerque and not be returned to their homes in Laramie, Wyo. Authorities received advices to hold Leo E. Grant and James A. Holford, the bridegrooms, for authorities at Cheyenne, Wyo., where the automobiles are alleged to have been stolen.

Effective Oct. 1, the wages of all employees of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company who are paid by the day will be increased 10 per cent.

Officials of the coal mines in the vicinity of Raton report that the 1921 wage scale went into effect the first of September. The step was made to make the wage scale the same as that of competitive fields.

Preliminary statistics by the Department of Commerce reveal a decrease of 33.8 per cent in the lumber cut of Arizona and New Mexico mills during 1921 over the preceding year. These figures are the result of a careful census of the lumber industries in these states conducted by the bureau of the census, Department of Commerce, acting in co-operation with the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. New Mexico's output fell off 14 per cent, while that of Arizona has shrunk to almost one-third of its 1920 production estimate. The falling off in lumber production in the two states during 1921 is attributed by the forest service to the general slump in business conditions. Some thirty-seven mills were idle in the two states through the year.

George Langford, game warden at Chamberino, N. M., was shot in the back with a pistol the other day while driving on the New Mexico state highway near the Deck farm at Chamberino. He is in a serious condition in Providence hospital in El Paso. Deputy Sheriff Felipe Lawson of Las Cruces, who investigated the case, arrested three men. Mystery surrounds the shooting. Two men are said to have been seen in the neighborhood.

WRIGLEYS

I'm telling you "Chew it after every meal"

The Perfect Gum

Made of purest materials—
In modern, sanitary, sun-lit factories—
No expense spared to make it wholesome and full of flavor—
Wax-wrapped and sealed to keep it good:
WRIGLEYS is bound to be the best that can be made!

It's good—and good for you aiding digestion

whitening teeth
clearing breath

Soothing to over-wrought nerves and a general pick-me-up.

Must Be Well Dressed. "She wants a new gown." "What for?" "She's going to sing over the radio next week and she couldn't think of appearing for all those people in a gown she has already worn twice."—Detroit Free Press.

Fowls of the Air. "See here," said the angry customer, "when I order poultry from you again I don't want you to send me any of those airplane chickens." "What kind do you mean, sir?" "The sort that are all wings and machinery, and no meat."—Boston Transcript.

A BRUSH A PAIL and

Just mix Alabastine with water cold or hot and apply to any interior surface. The sure result is beautifully tinted walls in exactly the color you wish.

Alabastine comes in all standard colors and these intermix to form countless others so that your decorating taste may be accurately followed.

Note genuine without the Cross and Circle printed in red.

Alabastine

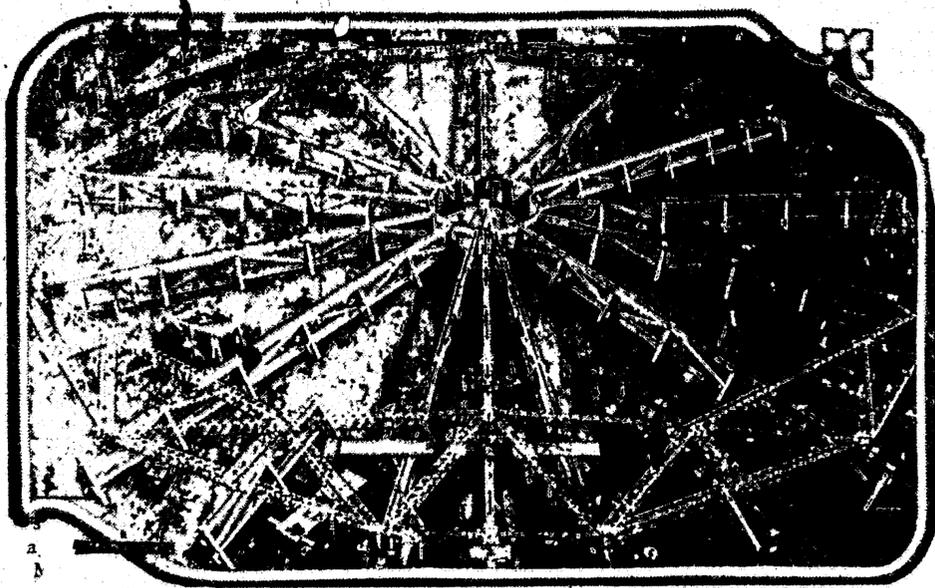

Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper

Independent Islander. The native of Iceland is dependent upon his own resources for all the necessities of his family. He makes his own clothes, builds his own boats, and shoes his own horses.

Most Unwelcome Truth. The kiss of a pretty girl is always highly regarded among men, but as a rule, after a man passes fifty he would rather have a mass of young turnip greens.—Houston Post.

USE THEM FIRST FAULTLESS STARCH

Building One of World's Largest Dirigibles

One of the largest dirigibles in the world is under construction in the aircraft factory at the Philadelphia navy yard. Sections of the huge craft are shipped to Lakehurst, N. J., to be assembled in the hangar built to house the ZR-2, which descended in flames in England a year ago. More than a billion nuts and several million rivets will be used during the construction of the giant dirigible. The photograph shows a section of the airship being assembled at the factory.

Smock Marriage an Old Custom

Records Show That Such Ceremonies Were Common in Early Colonial Times.

FREED GROOM OF WIFE'S DEBT

Sometimes She Were Only a Sheet, but Nobody Objected—Embarrassment Often Relieved by Happy Man Buying Trousseau.

Bangor, Me.—A Bangor lawyer, attending court in the ancient town of Wiscasset, Lincoln county, spent a rainy afternoon rummaging through the colonial records of the place, and in the course of his reading came across the official registration of a "smock marriage." Not knowing what a "smock marriage" was, he looked further and got some light on a custom that prevailed in England and in some of the colonies as well in the Eighteenth century.

Use Various Expedients. To carry out the law fully as the people understood it the ceremony should always have been performed as it was in the Birmingham case, but various expedients were contrived to get around it. Sometimes the bride stood in a closet, and put her hand through a hole in the door; sometimes she stood behind a cloth screen and put her hand out at one side; again, she would wind about her a white sheet furnished by the bridegroom; sometimes she stood in her chemise, or "smock." Eventually, in Essex county, immodesty and embarrassment were avoided by the groom furnishing all the clothes worn by the bride, retaining title to the same in himself. This he did in the presence of witnesses, that he might be able to prove the fact in the event that he was sued for any debts she might have contracted.

A marriage of this kind was performed in Bradford, in 1778, the following being a true copy of the record:

A "Foxy" Bridegroom. "Bradford, Dec. 24, 1778. This may certify whomsoever it may concern that James Bailey of Bradford who was married to the widow Mary Bacon November 22 last past by me ye subscriber then declared that he took the said person without anything of estate and that Lydia the wife of Ellazer Burbank & Mary the wife of Thomas Stirkney & Margaret the wife of Caleb Burbank all of Bradford were witnesses that the clothes she then had on were of his providing and bestowing upon her.

WILLIAM BALOH, minister of ye Gospel. It is noted by the same writer that in all cases of smock marriages that have come to his knowledge the bride has been widowed. It is thought that during the reign of George III there were several such marriages performed.

that now is so known. One such marriage is reported in the archives of the Town of Friendship, Knox County, originally known as Meduncook (signifying Sandy Harbor). It is also one of the few instances in Maine history where advantage was taken of the provision of the law that in a community where there resided neither minister nor magistrate a man and woman who appeared before witnesses, read the marriage service to each other and signed a marriage agreement became lawfully wedded. Married Themselves.

Such a marriage was performed in 1772, and the record on the town books reads: "Certificate—This may certify all whom it concerns that W. Elwell of Meduncook hath been duly published to Hannah Thomas of Meduncook. (SVD) SEDATE WADSWORTH. Clerk Meduncook April ye 18th 1772."

"Meduncook, May 12th, 1772.—Whereas the subscribers, Wm. Elwell and Hannah Thomas, being lawfully published & desirous of entering into the holy state of Marriage & being confined in a place where there is neither a minister or a magistrate, do by these presents & in the presence of Almighty God & before these witnesses that may sign this instrument, engage & do take each other as man and wife, according to the laws of God and man, according to the best of our capacities & as though we were married by a magistrate or minister. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands:

"WILLIAM ELWELL
"HANNAH THOMAS, her X mark."
Signed in the presence of we, the subscribers, & that the man took her, as were naked and gave her clothes to put on—Wm. E. Frost, Samuel Condon, Cornelius Morton, Mary Condon her X mark, Otis Pinkham, Mercy W. Lary her X mark.
"N. B.—Wm. Elwell & Hannah Thomas took the common prayer book after they had signed the above instrument & read the church ceremony of marriage to each other in serious manner before the witnesses to the above instrument before me—Wm. Frost.

"The aforesaid William Elwell & Hannah Thomas were married in the above manner, May 12th, 1772—their first child, named Hannah, was born June ye 21st, 1773; their second, a son, named Elias, born April ye 5th, 1776."
There is nothing to show that the practice of smock marriage outlived the Revolution. In Maine, up to 1852, a husband was liable for debts of his wife contracted before marriage, and no such subterfuge as the smock marriage could relieve him, considering the glory of the bridal finery of today.

SNAKE AS SUNSHADE HANDLE

Dog is Rapidly Being Displaced in England as a Pet by Freak Rivals.

London, England.—The place long held by the dog as a family pet and street companion threatens to be usurped by the monkey and other exotic creatures. Women are seen carrying marmosets, mongooses, foxes, and parrots.

People also are getting accustomed to the woman with a young white fox on a string, another with three cats and the chimpanzee that rides in a motorcar. But the most startling innovation in family pets was observed at a lawn party where a guest carried what appeared to be a sunshade with a highly decorative handle. Close inspection revealed the "handle" to be a spotted snake.

PEDIGREE HUNT IN BRITAIN

American Visitors Are Eager as Natives to Know About Their Ancestors.

London.—"Among the keenest inquiries into their pedigrees—and genealogy never before was as popular as it is at this moment—are many of the Americans now visiting this country," says Secretary Fothergill of the Society of Genealogists.

"The day of 'faked' pedigrees is past. What the modern American is seeking is the truth about his forebears, traced backward generation by generation.

"They are particularly interested in the new field for genealogical research that has recently been opened up, the deposition books of the old courts. This has not yet been properly exploited, for in many instances the records of the ecclesiastical and common law courts and the court of chancery are not yet open to public inspection.

"The fascination of these books is that they are not mere lists of names and dates. The very words spoken by the parties and the witnesses to these old disputes are preserved, so that the authentic voice of one's ancestors may be heard down the centuries."

The main work of the society is the preparation of the huge consolidated index, which already constitutes a record of more than 2,000,000 baptisms, marriages and deaths, with other biographical details in many cases.

WILLING TO TAKE A CHANCE

When Carlo Got Through Laughing the Deputy Game Warden Decided Not to Arrest Him.

San Quentin, Cal.—Carlo Ballesteri was fishing on the beach here. A man came up and watched him a while. Said the man:

"I'm a deputy fish warden. I think I'll put you in jail for 30 days for fishing with a net, which is against the law."

"Ha, ha!" said Carlo, or words to that effect.

"Thirty days in jail is nothing to laugh at," said the man.

"Ain't I the bird that knows it?" inquired Carlo. "I'm doing a life stretch at San Quentin prison and am fishing by special permission."

"O!" said the fish warden, and contented himself with confiscating the net.

Aged Woman Works Garden.

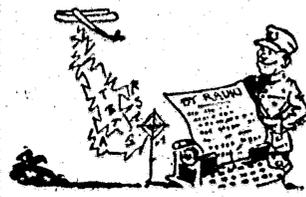

Nutdrell, O.—Mrs. William Russell, who is eighty-seven years of age, and lives in the west end of the town, has a garden consisting of half an acre of land which is filled with vegetables, such as potatoes, corn, beets, carrots, beans and many kinds of flowers. This garden, which is kept in excellent shape, is worked solely by Mrs. Russell. Mrs. Russell rises at 4 o'clock every morning and works in her garden most of each day.

Pennsylvania Has Soft Coal Reserves to Last 290 Years.

Harrisburg.—Pennsylvania's bituminous coal fields contain 45,890,860,000 short tons of recoverable coal, enough to meet the demands of the next 290 years at the present rate of consumption, the state department of internal affairs announced in making public the results of a recent survey of the bureau of topographic and geological survey. The supply available is less than previous estimates, which had placed the amount recoverable at least 75,000,000,000 short tons. The survey fixes the original bituminous deposits at 75,239,065,000 tons, of which 5,519,775,000 have been mined. Waste and unrecoverable coal reduces

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Another Addition to Horrors of War

WASHINGTON.—Typewriting in an airplane flying among the clouds with radio machinery duplicating the letters at a ground station miles away and reeling the message off in print, is a development announced by the Navy department as giving to naval aircraft "a means of communication in advance of radio telegraph and telephone systems now in current use."

Successes already attained by experts working in conjunction with the navy, the department asserted, assures the practicability of the scheme. That such a development will be of incalculable value to all forms of aviation, commercial and military, follows inevitably on the heels of the work being done by the navy, it is predicted. The device has been named the "teletype." It resembles the commercial typewriter, in that a keyboard having the letters of the alphabet and other symbols on it is arranged for hand operation.

Each key is connected to the radio installation in the plane and when a letter is struck, a radio impulse is flashed from the antenna on the plane to the receiving stations below, where the letter is reproduced on paper.

A reversal of the operation, so that the plane can receive messages from ground stations, is said to be only a matter of detail. The new system, it is declared, also possesses the advantage of eliminating much of the chance of error in transmission, receiving and sending, experienced in the telephone and telegraph devices.

"This," the statement said, "will be a marked step in advance in that it will allow explicit directions to scouting and combat planes in flight by the commander in chief of the fleet and will enable scouts and other types of planes to convey accurate and detailed information to the high command."

Truthful Information for the Motorist

THE National Park to Park Highway association plans to educate not only the matured mind, but the school children of the nation to the many advantages of the western portion of the United States.

There is much untruthful booster publications. Opportunities are colored, scenic attractions are commercialized and thereby cheapened, recreative places are thought of only in the sense of the dollar, geology has been belittled with fictitious and misleading localized names and descriptions, botany is unknown by natives and plants as well as trees have received local names.

The National Park to Park highway connects with one wonderful highway all of the national parks in the Rocky mountains and on the Pacific coast. The plans being formed in the general office of the association by Gus Holmes, the managing secretary, are a set of publications covering separately the following subjects:

Scenic attractions, recreative places of interest, such as forests, lakes and streams, free to the public.

Historical places of interest; many of these attractions are found directly on or as side trips from each community center.

A complete publication on formation and geology over the entire 6,500 miles.

An absolutely reliable publication on trees and plants found growing along the highway or on side trips. In other words, the National Park to Park highway is to be geologized, botanized, mapped, charted and signed to assist the private automobile traveler.

It is generally recognized that there is no highway in the world that offers so many different climatic conditions. While passing over nine ranges of mountains and through many fertile farming and fruit growing sections, everything that is grown in the West can be found on this highway, to say nothing of the many other industries, such as mining, lumbering, shipbuilding and many other kinds of manufacturing. In fact, it is not generally known that the West stands as the barrier and the protector of the nation against the encroaching of undesirable hordes.

It is the desire of the National Park to Park Highway association that only truthful information and advice shall be given to its many patrons, and it is the purpose of its thousands of members to see that it is done. The general offices are in Denver.

Picric Acid Used as a New Stump-Buster

ATTENTION of farmers in all sections of the country to the free distribution of excess war explosives for farm work is called by the United States Department of Agriculture. Since last fall the department, in cooperation with the various state agricultural colleges, has distributed 3,000,000 pounds of picric acid, a surplus explosive, which is very efficient, easy and safe to handle. In Minnesota the state agricultural college reports:

"We feel that picric acid has been a great benefit to the state and has done a great deal to stimulate land clearings. The 774,000 pounds allotted to Minnesota were distributed to 3,511 farmers, averaging 223 pounds per farmer. We estimate that this will clear 35,000 acres of land and has made a saving of over $70,000 for the farmers of the state."

The economy of this explosive is emphasized by the department in a recent circular showing that last fall's distribution saved the farmers about $300,000 over the cost of other explosives. There are now available some 6,000,000 pounds of picric acid, and of this amount 1,500,000 are available to each of the lake states—Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Picric acid is a high explosive which was used in large quantities during the war, and is now being distributed to farmers for agricultural purposes, says the department. No charge is made by the government for the explosive itself, but as it has to be dried out and carted before it can be used for peaceful purposes the cost of this work must be paid by the farmers.

Picric acid is a comparatively safe explosive and is used in the same way that other agricultural explosives are used. It has several advantages over commercial explosives in that it keeps indefinitely without deteriorating, it is not affected by heat or cold and it does not cause headaches or other ill effects when used in the open air.

Where Oil Bubbles Up Out of the Sea

TWENTY years ago a skipper of the British steamer Etolia, cruising 300 miles off the Texas coast, and with more than a mile of water between the ship's keel and the ocean's floor, passed through patches of oil on the surface of the sea. "The oil appeared to be bubbling up from the sea," said the notes in the ship's log, and since that day there runs through the records of the navy hydrographic office repeated reports of such oil signs at sea.

The same year the steamer Dunstan, in almost the same position, "passed through a stream of kerosene oil about fifty feet wide." Four years later the San Jacinto encountered, close to the same locality, "a layer of crude oil; color a dark yellow; very strong odor." It steamed more than five hours at 12 knots before the oil surface was left behind.

Through the years that followed, reports of oil on the sea's surface have come at frequent intervals. The hydrographic office records show 33 such mariners' observations during the last 20 years, some of them from points well north of Cape May, some far out in the Atlantic. But the greatest number are clustered in the gulf southeast of the Texas coast in waters ranging from 300 to 900 fathoms in depth. One observation was made in 1907.

Advertisement for Colgate's Cashmere Bouquet Soap. The text says: "Your Skin is so Fragrant and Smooth. Out-of-door girls today as in Grandmother's time know a valuable recipe: 'Care for your complexion with rain water and a pure soap.'" It features an illustration of a woman's face and a box of soap. The box is labeled "Cashmere Bouquet Toilet Soap" and "Colgate Co." Below the illustration, it says "Luxurious—Lasting Refined." At the bottom, it says "Peculiar 'Freak' of Nature. By a curious 'freak' of nature, insects which are most beautiful when fully developed, are often the most repulsive in the grub stage."

Advertisement for Nu-Way Stretch Suspenders. The text says: "Marriage in Haste. 'What do you think is the cause of so many unhappy marriages?' 'Too many people are married before they get sense enough to stay single.'" It features an illustration of a man in a suit. At the bottom, it says "Nu-Way Stretch Suspenders Company, 1400 Broadway, New York City."

Advertisement for Bellans for Indigestion. The text says: "Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION. BELLANS THE INDIGESTION KICKER. 6 BELLANS Hot Water Suro Relief. BELLANS. 25c and 75c Packages, Everywhere." It features an illustration of a bottle of Bellans medicine.

Advertisement for Nujol. The text says: "Constipation. Relieved Without the Use of Laxatives. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try it today." It features an illustration of a bottle of Nujol. At the bottom, it says "Nujol. A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE."

Advertisement for Squeezed to Death. The text says: "SQUEEZED TO DEATH. When the body begins to stiffen and movement becomes painful it is usually an indication that the kidneys are out of order. Keep these organs healthy by taking GOLD MEDAL HAZELNUT OIL CAPSULES." It features an illustration of a bottle of Hazelnut Oil Capsules.

Advertisement for Ladies Let Cuticura. The text says: "Ladies Let Cuticura Keep Your Skin Fresh and Young. Soap 25c, Ointment 25c and 50c, Talcum 25c." It features an illustration of a woman's face.

Advertisement for Gray Hair. The text says: "Gray Hair. In part of each hair is necessary to its growth. The hair is made up of cells. The cells are made up of protein. The protein is made up of amino acids. The amino acids are made up of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen." It features an illustration of a woman's face.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

A very good rain fell yesterday morning, and while late, will do much good.

W. M. Ferguson and T. B. Zumwalt passed through yesterday enroute to Hot Springs from their homes on the Mesa.

Come in and be convinced that cash talks with us.—City Market.

George Murray, an old-time cow puncher of the Carrizozo flats, is in town today from the Hatchet ranch—just the same old George.

Deane Gumm was here Sunday to Tuesday from Corona, visiting his mother. They had an outing at Eagle Creek during the son's visit.

Lost:—White face, 2-year-old bull, bearing O. Z. Finley's brand. $5.00 reward. Enquire of Gregorio Pino, Carrizozo. 9-22-41

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Sowler were here the early part of the week, looking after the disposition of some steers recently purchased.

Mrs. Helen Robertson was down Saturday from the Helen Rae mines, Nogal. Mrs. Robertson is contemplating an eastern trip soon that will cover a period of several months.

For Sale or Trade—A De Luxe machine; 40 records; practically new; less than half cost. Call at this office.

John L. Bryan, county assessor, was here this week from Capitan. John, like all stockmen, has been looking for some grass on which to winter his stock, but his search was not fruitful.

FOR SALE—Some 11-4 inch Studebaker wagons at low prices. THE TITSWORTH CO. 3-11-41 Capitan.

George L. Ulrick, president of the Exchange Bank, returned yesterday morning. He had been in Santa Fe the past month where he was engaged with the State Tax Commission, of which he is a member.

FOR RENT.—A 3 room apartment on Tularosa Ave., close to court house. See E. O. Prehm at Ziegler Bros.

Dr. T. H. Williams has returned to his home in Chickasha, Oklahoma, after a month here and at Mescalero Agency. The doctor, who visits us annually, says a month in our mountains is the finest tonic in the world and is a real life saver.

J. H. Fulmer, Jr., president of the Parsons Mining Company and the Lincoln County Light & Power Co., has returned from the Pacific coast. Mr. Fulmer is full of hustle and we hope he brings to a realization the big things in which he is interested.

FOR SALE:—At a bargain, a 6 horse power engine, in good condition. Enquire at Jicarilla store. 9-15-21

Sunday evening at the home of Pastor T. M. Blacklock, Mr. John L. Walker and Miss Lula Current, both of White Oaks, were united in marriage.

The advantage of buying and selling for cash is mutual—merchant and customer profit—City Market.

Monday morning little Estelle Miller, the two months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sile Miller of Carrizozo left this world. Funeral services were conducted at the home Tuesday afternoon by Rev. T. M. Blacklock. Mrs. E. O. Finley and Mrs. E. D. Boode sang.

Fred Getty returned Friday night from a six-weeks' vacation. Fred visited the extreme north-western section of our country while absent, and made trips into British Columbia as well. He says he had a most delightful trip, and he looks like he enjoyed every minute of it.

APARTMENT TO RENT:—A nice 3 room apartment for rent on Tularosa Ave. See E. O. Prehm, at Ziegler Bros.

Al Thomas, of Albuquerque, who is interested in the Thomas iron mines at the head of the malpais, spent the past week here. Mr. Thomas and associates have spent considerable money the past few years in developing a large body of high grade iron that should be very attractive to men engaged in that business.

Peter Burleson, of Lincoln, passed through Sunday on his way to Corona to take charge of some state road building. Mr. Burleson has been complimented on his knowledge and manner of road building. Some of the best stretches of highways in the county were built under his supervision. But, as he states, the best of roads get torn up from traffic and need going over at regular intervals if they are to be kept up to standard. "The trained man's eye is, after all, worth more than both his hands."

We have gone on a strictly cash basis, and our customers will receive the benefits of the system. No bookkeeping, no bad accounts—just a legitimate profit.—City Market.

Stock owners are facing the most serious problems in the history of the live stock industry. In many sections of the county—and the state as well—there is no grass, and in others it is so slight that it is a question as to getting stock through the winter. Some expect to move their stock to grass, but grass seems scarce everywhere within reach, and the best reported is in Mexico, and a move to that point is fraught with serious obstacles. There appears only one of three things to do—ship, feed or take a heavy loss by attempting to hold them. We understand that large shipments will be made, if cars can be secured; and that seems the best thing to do.

Friday Night's Concert

A most delightful concert was given at the Crystal Theatre last Friday night under the auspices of the Salvation Army, headed by that incomparable singer, Baron Auriemma. The Baron was assisted by local talent and from beginning to end was one of the most pleasing affairs ever given in the town. The receipts were quite satisfactory—practically $100.00. The following is the program:

1. Selection Orchestra
Geo. Ferguson R. C. Pitts H.
Bamberger Lewis Burke Edwin McCarty.
 2. Prologue from Paggiacci Leoncavallo
Goodnight Sweet Dreams
Baron Auriemma
 3. Idyl, Piano Solo....Lauge
Otto Prehm
 4. Ariosa from Paggiacci
Absent
Baron Auriemma
 5. Selection
Orchestra
 6. Jolly Student
High School Chorus
 7. At Dawning
Roses at Twilight
Long, Long Trail
Mrs. E. D. Boone, Baron
Auriemma
 8. Let the Rest of the World go by
Baron Auriemma
Raymond Lackland
 9. Talk
Frank J. Sager
 10. O Sole Mio
Calm as the night
Baron Auriemma
 11. Selection
Orchestra
 12. Rosary
Maria Mari
Baron Auriemma
- Accompanists Mrs. J. H. Mims,
Miss Lorena Sager.

Off for Encampment

Judge John Y. Hewitt came down from White Oaks Wednesday and took No. 4 that afternoon for Des Moines, Iowa. The fifty-sixth annual encampment of the A. O. U. will be held in the Iowa capital next week, and Judge Hewitt goes as a representative from this state. Following the adjournment of the encampment, Judge Hewitt will go to Mitchell, S. D., to visit a sister who has had a long illness.

Better Goods for Less Money

Carrizozo Trading Co.

Cheaper and Better than ever before.

All Car Models in Stock

WESTERN GARAGE, Inc.
SALES & SERVICE

CARRIZOZO NEW MEXICO

Dr. Price's is the last word in baking economy

No other high-grade baking powder is sold at such a moderate price

Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder not only produces food of the best quality,—it safeguards health as well because it contains none but wholesome ingredients.

Try it to improve your baking at reduced cost.

Contains No Alum—Leaves No Bitter Taste.

Your grocer may have some of Dr. Price's left at the special offer recently made of 2 large cans for 30c—Ask him.

Send for the "New Dr. Price Cook Book." It's Free. Price Baking Powder Factory, 1001 Independence Boulevard, Chicago.

Large can, 12 ounces, only 25c.

ZIEGLER BROS'

Fall Opening

Styles that herald a brilliant season are here in bright profusion

IN presenting the New Autumn Frocks and Coats in our comprehensive selections, we invite particular attention to the beauty and design, the splendid qualities of material, the elegance of the trimmings, workmanship, tailoring and smartness of the modes, coats and Dresses, distinctly suited for every particular type.

The Coats

The excellence of the Coats is pronounced in every detail, some fur-trimmed, others in smart all-cloth effects, are of the soft pliable materials in graceful wrappy models or straight slender lines. All have one thing in common, that is the new wide sleeves, an attractive feature of the New Fall Coats.

Come and See Them

The Dresses

Cañon Crepe, Crepe de Chin, Twill and Tricotine are some of the favored materials, while black, brown and blue are the leading colors of the latest Fall Dresses. A dash of brilliant color, flowing panels and drapes are striking characteristics. They all combine in an alluring air of youth and dignity.

Come and See Them

AUTUMN MILLINERY

Silk Waists and New Over Blouses

Gloves to Match
Fall Frocks

New Fall Sweaters

New Materials for the Fall Dresses

ZIEGLER BROS.

Established since 1886

The Eighth Member

Ida, the eight-months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Velasco, El Paso, had her picture in last Sunday's Times. The little tot is the eight member of a family of four girls and four boys. The mother of this interesting family was born and married at Lincoln.

Banquet

The Board of Trade will have a get-together-banquet, for the membership and wives. The proceeds to go towards improvements, to be discussed at this time.

Time—Tuesday, September 24th 1922