JOHN MORROW, DEMOCRAT, ELECTED TO U. S. CONGRESS

Democratic Sweep

The country swept into the Democratic column with a vengeance last Tuesday, and the more returns that come in the greater the Democratic majority. A lot of old Republican war horses in rockribbed Republican states—men who had almost become fixtures at Washington—were turned out in the cruel world, and a hard winter confronting them.

New York state went Democratic by such a tremendous majority that they haven't quit counting yet. Last reports give a Democratic majority of 500,000. Kansas elects a Democratic governor; Lodge appears to have been defeated for United States senator in Massachusetts; New Jersey also. New Mexico re-elects Senator A. A. Jones to the senate by a majority of almost 10,000, and the entire Democratic state ticket was elected by 6,000 or more. Kansas joined the procession and went over into the Democratic camp with a whoop. In fact, a similar result was registered throughout the country—just an exception here and there to prove the rule. The Democrats made substantial gains in the United States senate, and have almost, if not entirely, wiped out the huge Republican majority in Congress.

Now, that the election is over, the people are anxiously waiting to see what disposition will be made of the warden of the state penitentiary. Nothing could be done, you know, until after election.

This is the season of the year when you have friends drop in to spend the evening with you.

Why not be prepared and keep a box of our delightful smokes in the house? It will add so much to their ease and comfort.

Pretty Bad Shape

One of the most laughable remarks—were it not for its gravity—we have heard following the campaign and when the returns were coming in, very much one way, was made on one of our street corners the evening following the election.

A knot of enthusiastic Democrats had collected, and among them was one of most prominent business men, and an equally prominent Republican. Of course, the Republican had to absorb all the banter attending the Democratic badinage. Naturally, he had to say something, even though expressing little regret over the result, and when the jest and banter died down contented himself with the following conclusive statement:

"Well, I'll say this, and that's one consolation: we're turning things over to the Democrats in the de—deast shape they ever were!"

It was certainly a land slide.

The state republican machine flew to pieces November 7. Too many faulty cogs in it.

State's Coal Output in 1921 2,456,492 Tons

Washington, Nov. 7.—New Mexico's coal mines produced 2,456,942 net tons of coal during 1921, according to statistics just completed by the United States geological survey. The state's coal output, which is exclusive of product of wagon mines, was valued at $9,585,000, or an average of $3.91 per ton. In its mining and preparation for market, 4,577 employes were utilized, each working an average of 150 days in the year.

Colfax county was the leading coal producing county of the state, with an output of 1,714,851 tons valued at $6,077,000, or an average of $3.54 per ton, and a total number of 2,667 workers averaging 150 days worked in the year.

McKinley county was second, with an output of 514,645 tons, valued at $2,380,000, or an average of $4.62 per ton, and a total number of 1,257 workers, averaging 123 days worked in the year.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Lloyd George Starts Campaign and Bonar Law Forms New British Ministry.

GERMANY IS TOPPLING AGAIN

Threatens Voluntary Bankruptcy and Reparations Body Hurries to Berlin—Daugherty's Dry Ship Ruling is Upheld—News From the Near East.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, forced out of the British prime ministership by the attitude of the Conservative party, seeks re-election to parliament and return to power. He opposes the radical demands of labor, and advocates the fostering of friendly relations with the United States and with Russia. In this instance especially British politics affects the world at large. Is it your opinion that Britain would be wise again to put the helm of the ship of state in Lloyd George's hands?

THOUGH he has not fulfilled prophecy by trying to form a new party, David Lloyd George is making a pretty fight for return to parliament and to power. He declares his object is to secure the dominance of a party or group that will keep the government in a middle course of safety and moderation. Addressing a gathering of the National Liberal party, he took a firm stand against recent radical demands of the Labor party, and also made it clear that one of his chief claims for support was his friendly relations with the United States. He asserted all reasonable concessions must be made to induce this country to enter the League of Nations, which would be crippled without it. And he said Britain must pay her war debt to the United States in full. "Working with the United States," declared he, "ought to be one of the chief purposes of the government. If these two nations would work together, it would be the surest guarantee for a just peace, and a just peace is the only lasting peace."

The ex-premier's quarrel with the Labor party is in a way international, for that party, in a manifesto issued last week, not only demands the creation of a "war debt redemption fund by a special graduated levy on fortunes exceeding £5,000," but also declares for the revision of the peace treaty and German reparations, for an international conference to arrange the freedom of the straits, for independence in Egypt and self-government in India.

Andrew Bonar Law, having been elected head of the Conservative party, accepted the post of prime minister and on Tuesday announced his cabinet. It is a respectable list of names, with quite a number from the peerage, but most of the new ministers are considered rather nonentities. The maintenance of the cabinet is Marquis Curzon, secretary for foreign affairs, Lord Gaves, the lord chancellor, and Stanley Baldwin, the chancellor of the exchequer, are men of proved ability. It is taken for granted that Bonar Law will make many changes in the ministry if he is returned to power at the general election, which is set for November 15. He is a candidate for Glasgow, and is opposed by a Labor candidate and also by Sir George Paish, noted economist.

The last named gentleman is now in the United States and, addressing the convention of the American Manufacturers' Export association, gave a lot of economic advice concerning protection and trade. He scolded our government for hoarding gold, and said that the most serious and as the first step in the restoration of foreign exchange. Sir George also wants America to throw open her doors to unrestricted immigration—an unwelcome suggestion in view of our experience with certain classes of immigrants in recent years.

BEING refused the cabinet positions they demanded, the Italian Fascists in convention in Naples made preparation for militant action that threatened to become revolutionary. Thereupon Premier Facta and his cabinet resigned. Former Premier Giolitti conferred with Benito Mussolini, chief of the Fascists, and it was believed he would be called on to form a new ministry. The Fascists are now the strongest organization in Italy and have announced that they will assume control of the government, legally or otherwise.

GERMANY, whose mark made a new low record of 2 1/2 cents a hundred last week, is again threatening to go into voluntary bankruptcy by defaulting in her reparations payments in material as well as in cash. Chancellor Wirth, whose political life is in great danger, has begun hedging and now has adopted the slogan of "First bread, then reparations," and has put the problem up to the cabinet. The Socialists are calling for more drastic measures, including confiscation of foreign money in the hands of private persons, and on the other hand the bourgeois demand the suppression of the decree against speculation and the agriculturists insist on higher official prices for German wheat and corn. The allied reparations commission went to Berlin to consult with the government. The British commissioner, Sir John Bradbury, said he would vote to declare Germany in voluntary default of its agreement if it should refuse to carry out within a reasonable time requests for internal reforms. This was a considerable concession to the French demands. It may be that in return France will agree to the indefinite postponement of the Brussels financial conference, leaving the entire reparations matter in the hands of the commission. French, Belgian and Italian exchange rates dropped sharply last week, going to the lowest prices of the year on the New York exchange.

FEDERAL JUDGE HAND in New York upheld the ruling of the attorney general prohibiting the carrying of liquors on vessels entering American waters, and the case brought by a number of steamship companies is now to go before the Supreme court, which probably will not hand down a decision for six or eight weeks. Meanwhile Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has informally instructed his agents not to enforce the order against foreign vessels whose supplies of liquor are sealed when they enter our ports. American ships, however, must obey the ruling. The French government has indicated that it will not comply with the request, presented unofficially by Ambassador Herrick, that it cooperate in preventing liquor smuggling from the St. Pierre et Miquelon islands off the southern coast of Newfoundland. According to French officials, the islanders trade French liquor for food at Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island ports, and do not themselves smuggle the booze into the United States. It is said this liquor trading is essential to the fishermen of the islands.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, Frank Morrison and James O'Connell, the executive committee for the national non-partisan campaign of the American Federation of Labor, have issued a manifesto denouncing the present congress as reactionary and calling on the voters to "put progress in" at the November election. The appeal says the congress has performed no service for the people, but has "tried by every trick and device to serve predatory interests." Its action in removing the excess profits tax and reducing the surtaxes and concerning the soldiers' bonus is especially condemned.

TEN members of the I. W. W. are on trial in Sacramento for violation of the California criminal syndicate law, and last week the state ting story of "wobblies" plots during the war. He is W. E. Townsend and says he was the right-hand man of W. D. Haywood, head of the organization. He testified that he and several hundred other wobblies were employed in the Chicago packing houses and, under orders from the I. W. W., conspired to send to our troops spoiled and poisonous canned foods. He also told of sabotage plots on railroads and in harvest fields.

NAVY DAY was celebrated throughout the United States on Friday—which also was the anniversary of the birth of Col. Theodore Roosevelt. The occasion brought forth many appeals for the maintenance of the efficiency of the navy personnel, which, according to Rear Admiral Rogers, should number not fewer than 125,000 men. To maintain our ratio under the Washington treaty, said the admiral, we should build fifteen or twenty cruisers of 10,000 tons each in the course of the next few years, besides large submarines. President Harding in a letter to Secretary Denby said: "It is well for us to have in mind that under a program of lessening navy armaments there is a greater reason for maintaining the highest efficiency, fitness, and morale in this branch of the national defensive service. I know how earnestly the navy personnel is devoted to this ideal, and want you to be assured of my hearty concurrence."

PREMIER POINCARÉ is to send out invitations to the Near East peace conference, which is to be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, but at this writing the date of the meeting is uncertain. Lord Curzon, British foreign minister, insists that the United States should participate. Italy says that Russia must be permitted to sit in the conference and also to sign the treaty, and France may consent to this in view of her improved relations with the soviet government. Evacuation of Thrace by the Greek civilians continues amid considerable disorder though the allied forces are doing their best to prevent troubles. The Greeks carry off as they can and often destroy the rest of their possessions, including crops. The American Red Cross has announced that it will care for 800,000 of the refugees. The press of Athens complains bitterly that the United States is the only nation that is giving aid. George Horton, American consul general at Smyrna, is on his way home to report on the destruction of that city and the attending circumstances. His statement as to the origin of the conflagration is awaited eagerly as the payment of insurance may depend upon it. Mr. Horton gave no advance information as to his report, but in his conversation there was an indication that he would tell the State department that the Smyrna fire was started by looters and not by Turkish soldiers.

TEN big transports steamed out of the port of Vladivostok last Wednesday, bearing all the Japanese troops that have held that city and most of the Japanese civilians as well. The forces of the Far Eastern Republic—the Chita government—at once entered the place and took control. The commander of the Red army is said to have ordered the British and American marines to leave Vladivostok and all foreign warships to leave the harbor.

THE constitution of the Irish Free State was adopted by the provisional parliament Wednesday and was taken to London for approval by the new British cabinet, which certainly will not be withheld as no change that could be offensive to the English government have been made in the draft as approved in June by the Lloyd George ministry. Eamon de Valera is in Dublin again but is suffering from a serious nervous disorder and the authorities therefore will not molest him. His condition is so serious that a priest is in constant attendance.

ONE noted American died last week—Dr. Lyman Abbott, the venerable editor of Outlook. For many years he has been prominent as a preacher, editor, author and lecturer, and he was the

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, but if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter."—Mrs. FANNING ROSENBERG, 822 N. Holly St., Phila., Pa.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make women lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. LIVERMORE, 2661 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Legislation for Welfare of the Veterans

WASHINGTON.—In addition to renewal of effort to consummate soldiers' bonus legislation when congress reconvenes, additional legislation to promote the welfare of the World War veterans is to be pressed.

Representative Burton E. Sweet of Iowa, author of the law which centralized all soldier relief activities of the government in the veterans' bureau, is directing the program for further legislative relief. He has the cooperation of Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who worked with Sweet on the program of relief.

To date the government has appropriated $2,000,000,000 for care and training of the disabled; has arranged for expenditure of more than $35,000,000 for construction of new hospitals, and created a separate veterans' bureau to supervise relief measures.

The program being considered by Representative Sweet is entirely apart from the bonus measure. Mr. Sweet includes the following:

Enactment into law of what is known as Order 57, which permits the veterans' bureau to rate men who are, have been, or shall be, inmates of hospitals or asylums during a continuous period of one year or more as totally and permanently disabled.

To make provision that in no case shall the compensation of a disabled man be reduced unless a physical examination shall have been made subsequent to his last rating, nor until he shall have been given at least three months' notice of the proposed reduction.

To provide that psychosis, neurosis, psychoneurosis, active tuberculosis, or chronic emphysema developing within three years after separation from the service shall be considered to have been acquired while in the service. The present law limits the period to two years.

To make more liberal provisions for the reinstatement of lapsed insurance policies, and for the investment by the veterans' bureau of insurance premiums in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in bonds of the federal farm loan bank.

Jake Barger's Memory Is Working O. K.

RECOLLECTION of a fight over a horse more than fifty years ago has just proved to be worth $50 a month for the rest of his life to Jacob Barger of Shawneetown, Ill.

Private Barger's case is one of the most celebrated on the records of the pension bureau. It was pending for twenty years. Special examiners took more than 500 pages of testimony regarding his claim to a pension. They visited half a dozen states. Special bills providing for a pension for him were introduced in seven or eight congresses. Representative Thomas S. Williams of the Twenty-fourth Illinois district, in which Shawneetown is situated, finally got through a bill at the session just closed and President Harding signed it.

The trouble arose from the fact that although Barger served more than a year in the Union army, there is no record in the adjutant general's office either of his enlistment or discharge. Some of his former comrades readily recalled him. Others failed to recall him and some even asserted there was no such man in their outfit.

Then the old soldier told the story of the fight between two members of the company over a horse. It was a terrific encounter, and Private Barger untold the story in such detail as only an eyewitness could have recalled. He even remembered the name of one of the combatants.

The examiners made another round of the survivors. The story of the fight was confirmed, and when Representative Williams produced this evidence before the House committee on invalid pensions it convinced the members that Private Barger was telling the truth and was entitled to a pension.

Don't Burn Up a National Park Forest

SUGGESTED by the message of President Harding calling for the observance of "Fire Prevention day," the National Motorists' association has been asked by the national park service to transmit a message to the motorists of the country urging them to aid in co-operating with the government at all times in its efforts to prevent fires in the national parks of the country.

To motorists possibly more than to any other one class come exceptional opportunities for service of this character, due to the fact that more than 70 per cent of the annual visitors make the trip in automobiles to these playgrounds, which belong to all the people, according to A. B. Cammerer, acting director of the national park service. It is estimated that 1,200,000 persons have visited the parks this year. This is an enormous increase over previous years and mainly is due to motor travel, according to official statements. In his message to motorists Mr. Cammerer said:

"The very great number of motorists who will visit the parks in the future should, and doubtless will, consider it a patriotic duty to aid the government in every possible way in preventing fires in these preserves. Nowhere else, except possibly in the national forests, is there such necessity for constant vigilance against the fire evil.

"The government is doing all it can to make these parks accessible and delightful for motorists and others. They come from every state in the Union. In the Yellowstone, of the 93,000 visitors this year, 53,000 came in automobiles. These motor tourists should lead, therefore, in the education of their fellows as to the importance of observing safety regulations within the parks.

"Unfortunately, despite warning signs conspicuously posted, there are always some park visitors who will throw away a lighted match or cigarette or leave a camp fire unextinguished, and heavy losses and expense often result."

One of the heaviest and costliest fires in the Sequoia National park was caused by a camper falling to put out his camp fire before leaving the park.

Uncle Sam Has Big Guns Up His Sleeve

A SUPERSENSITIVE fused shell that will burst on contact with the cloth of an airplane wing, and a 2,000-pound projectile that will pass through 16 inches of hardened steel before exploding, are two of the wonders of modern ordnance exhibited for members of the Army Ordnance association, American Society of Mechanical Engineers and Society of Automotive Engineers at the association's annual field day at Aberdeen proving grounds, Maryland.

The latest development in the 16-inch gun has a range of 26 miles. It could be fired from the other side of Long Island and make direct hits on New York city. The gun would fire a projectile of more than a ton in weight, which would go ten miles into the air before coming down to the ground. Upon striking, this projectile could pass through 16 inches of steel and then explode. This gun has been designed primarily for use in sea-coast defenses against battleships.

A similar gun, 14 inches in diameter, with a length of 50 feet, has been mounted on a railway car for use by highest mountain in the world, in passing from the gun to the target. Upon striking the target it would penetrate thirty or forty feet in the ground and then explode, making a crater 60 feet in diameter and 30 feet deep. To shoot this projectile requires about 500 pounds of powder.

A 2,000-pound bomb can be dropped from an airplane at a height of 3,000 feet. It will take the bomb approximately 28 seconds to come down. Upon hitting it will penetrate about forty feet before exploding, making a crater 50 feet in diameter.

1923 SUPERIOR Chevrolet Sedan

In 1922 Chevrolet led the world in sales of quality closed cars chiefly because of the Sedan. This new Fisher Body Sedan is completely eclipsing its predecessor because:

QUALITY has been still further improved by more artistic design and added improvements.

ECONOMY has been still further increased by engineering refinements and greatly broadened production and distribution facilities.

SERVICE is now offered on a flat rate basis by 10,000 dealers and service stations.

PRICE remains the same, in spite of added equipment and more expensive construction, which have greatly increased value.

Some distinctive features of the new line are: streamline body design with high hood and crowned, paneled fenders; vacuum feed and rear gasoline tank on all models; drum type head lamps with legal lenses. Curtains open with doors of open models.

Closed models have Fisher Bodies with plate glass Ternstedt regulated windows, straight side cord tires, sun visor, windshield wiper and dash light. The Sedanette is equipped with auto trunk on rear.

Frog Carries Young in Pouch. Lions symbolize Africa; tigers, Asia; and the kangaroos, Australia, but South America's most characteristic creature is the frog, says A. Kingsley Noble in the Megor Magazine. There are no important mammals in South America, but there are more kinds of frogs there than anywhere else in the world. Of those there is no more interesting one than the marsupial frog, which carries its young in a pouch on its back. Noble spent many days with a Harvard museum of comparative zoology expedition studying South American frogs.

Western Canada

Wonderful Stock Raising Country

Best stretches of undeveloped fertile agricultural land of the highest productivity await the settler in Western Canada. The land possesses the same character of soil as that which has produced the high quality of cereals that have carried off the world's premier honors so many times in the past ten years.

Native Grasses are Rich and Abundant

Cattle fatten upon them without any grain being fed. Limited capital on high-priced lands is not a handicap, neither are the taxes levied upon the settler. The stock raising business in Western Canada—where land is cheap where a home may be made at low cost, and where dairying, mixed farming and stock raising give an assured profit.

Land may be purchased from the Railway Companies or from responsible land companies or from the Government. Free brochures of 1000 acres and more are available in the most convenient districts.

senate of the bill known as the Bursum Indian Bill, which purports to effect a final settlement of the century-old controversy between the Pueblos and their non-Indian neighbors over the land and water of the Indians. Alleging that they have not been consulted, that official explanations have been refused, that the bill will destroy them as a people, that it will make them dependents of the government, that it will force them to go into courts to settle tribal matters they have always adjusted among themselves, and that the government to which they look for protection in their rights has destroyed them. They say in conclusion:

"The bill will destroy our common life, and rob us of everything we hold dear—our lands, our customs and our traditions. Are the American people willing to see this happen?"

The memorial was adopted after an all-day and all-night session of the Pueblos in their council hall at Santo Domingo, following discussion of the bill in the council of the various pueblos.

The pueblos represented were Taos, Santa Clara, San Juan, Tesuque, San Ildefonso, Nambe, Cochiti, Santo Domingo, Isleta, Laguna, Sia, Santa Ana, San Felipe, Acoma, Paganate, Jemez, Zuni, Pecos and Picuris.

County Result

The result of the election in Lincoln county is most gratifying to Democrats; it did not exceed our expectations but did go beyond our hopes. And yet, inasmuch as the whole vote is Democratic, it does seem that we should have wiped the slate clean, and not be forced to regret the loss of one or two on the ticket who were as good men as we possessed.

The outstanding feature of the result in this county was the great number of scratched ballots, both Democratic and Republican. And the scratching was county wide—it was the rule in every precinct. Another feature was the orderliness in which the election passed off. Partisans labored hard, as was to be expected; yet, in the main, very little feeling was manifested. Whatever feeling was expressed or felt melted away at the rise of next morning's sun, and we are again one people.

Frenger for Speaker

The magnificent victory won in Dona Ana county by the Democrats entitles the organization to much credit. So much credit is due it, in fact, that Numa Frenger, county chairman and representative-elect to the legislature, should be accorded the honor of presiding over the deliberations of the next house of representatives, which is Democratic. Frenger is capable, just, honest and active and will make an able speaker. What do you say, Deacon Young? All right; let's go!

The "Hobo Kid"

This is rather a novel way to start a paragraph, and if "the kid" happened to be around he might take exception to it. Well, the "kid" blew into town a short time ago on a freight train, hungry and dirty from riding. He stated he had not eaten for two days nor slept in a bed for two months. To one of the men whom he "panhandled" he stated his home was in New Jersey. One year ago he heard "the call of the wild," since which he traveled through most of the states from New York to Arizona and from Canada to the Gulf. He said he was over 17 years, but looked to be well under 15. His ambition when the wanderlust fever attacked him was to be a wild western bandit, but failed to connect. His associates on the road were of the hobo brand. He rested with them in the "jungles" while awaiting a "rattler" (train), and had acquired the slang of the profession, and seemed proud of it. The man to whom he was relating his adventures on the road, having boys of his own, saw an opening for getting the "kid" on the right track, and reforming him, as the lad had a good face and was intelligent, so he took him to a restaurant and gave a substantial meal. He paid for a bath and haircut and supplied him with clean garments, all of which he badly needed. He kept him for a week or two, and found him a nice home on a ranch west of the malpais. The lad remained on the ranch a few weeks and came to town one Sunday to visit his friend, but did not return. The "rattle of the rail" was music to his ear and he swung on to an outgoing train the same afternoon and was gone. It was a praise-worthy act on the part of this man to try and save the lad from a course that is almost certain to lead to his destruction, and we believe he would not wish to see his name mentioned in connection with this act of human kindness. However, we will say that he lives less than 100 miles from Taylor's Garage, Carrizozo.

In the District Court, Lincoln County, State of New Mexico.

GEORGE W. MCGHEE, Plaintiff, Vs.
THE HARVESTER MINING CO., a corporation, Defendant
No. 3250

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an execution issued out of the above named court on the 6th day of October 1922, wherein the above named plaintiff recovered a judgment against the defendant on the 21st day of April, 1922 for the sum of $23,668.01 and cost of suit, I have levied on the following described property of said Harvester Mining Co., the defendant herein:

One lode mining claim, located Nov. 20, 1915 and duly recorded under the mining laws of the United States by Geo. W. McGhee, Thomas B. Mulchay and W. E. Horton, said lode claim beginning at Corner No. 1 and running 1,500 feet in a northerly direction to Corner No. 2; thence West 600 feet to Corner No. 3; thence 1,500 feet in a southerly direction to Corner No. 4; thence 600 feet to place of beginning; with discovery shaft situated on said claim at the juncture of Rockford and Nogal canons, about 300 feet east of the Parsons Power Line in the Nogal Mining District in the county of Lincoln, New Mexico.

Also 1 Marathon mill, 1 ore crusher, 320-kilowatt transformers, 500 feet of 2 1/2 inch pipe, one 6 horsepower gasoline engine, one 4 hp triple pump, 2 concentrating tables, 1 Ford truck, 3 electric motors, 1 fuel oil burner, and all other equipments and personal property on or near said mining claim and belonging thereto.

I will therefore on the 18th day of December, 1922 at the hour of 10 a. m. at the premises described, sell all of the above property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said judgment, interest, cost and cost of sale to the highest bidder therefor.

His Headpiece was Working

All aboard! Away they go, the day is simply charming. Forget for just one afternoon, the busy cares of farming. All work—no play, the maxim says, makes a dully boy of Johnnie, and such, no doubt, is the effect on wife and daughter Bonnie.

With lively pace, the motor glides along the highway spinning; the engine acts just like a charm, its humming note beginning. Away along the stretching road, the car in steady motion, the farmer says "We're going some, she's speedy, that's my notion."

A quarter mile, or so, ahead, they see a railway crossing; a mile away, or maybe less, a train comes roaring, tossing. Our farmer is a thoughtful chap, and in and out of season his headpiece, steady as a clock, obeys the voice of reason.

His car he steps, some distance back, without a bit of flurry. He knows the worth of playing safe—this is no time for hurry. Just then the train goes rushing past, the enginemen both waving. Says Jack "If all folks drove like that, much trouble they'd be saving."

So, safe and sound, they all arrived when they had homeward driven. A moment's time, you'll never miss if it's to safety given. So, friends, each one can help the cause of accident prevention. Speak out with ringing, warning words, when you the subject mention.

Nervous Break-Down

MRS. ANNIE LANGE, of R. F. D. 1, Burlington, Tex., writes as follows regarding her experience with Cardui: "Some time ago I had a nervous break-down of some kind. . . I was very weak and so nervous. I had fainting spells and suffered a great deal, but more from the weak, trembly, no-account feeling than anything else. . . I knew I needed a tonic, and needed it badly. I began the use of Cardui to see if I couldn't get some strength, as I knew of other cases that had been helped by its use. I soon saw a great improvement, so I kept it up. I used seven bottles of Cardui, and can say the money was well spent, for I grew well and strong. Am now able to do all my housework and a great deal of work besides."

If you are weak, run-down, nervous and suffer from the ailments peculiar to women, it is very likely that Cardui will help you, in the way it helped Mrs. Lange and has helped thousands of others, during the past 40 years. Ask for, and insist on, Cardui.

"MURDERED!"

SYNOPSIS.—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost thirty years has caused him suffering. The secret is hinted at in a dramatic letter by the elder Fairchild, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Henry Beamish, a lawyer. Beamish tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against certain men, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Ohadi, on the road to Ohadi from Denver Fairchild assists a girl apparently in a frenzy of haste, to change a tire on her auto. When the car has left, the sheriff and posse appear in pursuit of a bandit. Fairchild, lawless, mistakes them as to the direction the girl had taken. At Ohadi Fairchild is warmly greeted by "Mother" Howard, boarding-house keeper, his father's wife, from Mother Howard Fairchild learns something of the mystery connected with the disappearance of "Squint" Larsen, his father's co-worker in the mine. He meets the girl he had assisted, but she denies her identity. She is Anita Richmond, Judge Richmond's daughter. Visiting his claim, Fairchild is advised by a man he recognizes from descriptions as "Squint" Rodaine. He is in Ohadi, his father's old friend. Harry Harkins, a Co. chairman summoned from England by Beamish to help Fairchild, tells him with joy. The pair find the mine closed and have not sufficient funds to have it reopened. Harry offers to help, but the mine is closed. Harry offers to help, but the mine is closed. Harry offers to help, but the mine is closed.

CHAPTER XI

They started forward then, making their way through the mine and all of the drift flooring, slippery and wet from years of flooding. On—on—they stopped.

Progress had become impossible. Before their twisted and torn and pitted about in rapidly confusion, the timbers of the mine suddenly showed in a perfect barricade, supported from behind by piles of muck and rocky refuse which left no opening to the chamber of the slope beyond. Harry's carbide went high in the air, and he slid forward, to stand a moment in thought before the obstacle. At place after place he surveyed it, finally to turn with a shrug of his shoulders.

"It's going to mean more'n a month of the hardest kind of work, boy," came his final announcement. "Ow it could 'ave caved in like that in more than I know. I'm sure we timbered it good."

There was only one thing to do—turn back. Fifteen minutes more and they were on the surface, making their plans; projects which entailed work from morning until night for many a day to come. Harry reached for a new ax and indicated another.

"Well out this first," he announced.

And thus began the weeks of effort, weeks in which they worked with crude appliances; weeks in which they dragged the heavy stulls and other timbers into the tunnel and then lowered them down the shaft to the drift, two hundred feet below, only to follow them in their counterbalanced buckets and laboriously pile them along the sides of the drift, there to await use later on. Weeks in which they worked in mud and slime, as they shoveled out the muck and with their gad hooks tore down loose portions of the hanging wall to form a roadbed for their new train.

It was a slow, stalling progress, but they kept at it. Gradually the train line began to take shape, piled together from old portions of the track which still lay in the drift and supplemented by others bought cheaply at that graveyard of miner's hopes—the junk yard in Ohadi. At last it was finished; the work of moving the heavy timbers became easier now as they were situated onto the small tram truck from which the body had been dismantled and trundled along the rails to the cave-in, there to be piled in readiness for their use. And finally—

A pick swung in the air, to give forth a chunky, smacking sound, as it struck water-soaked, spongy wood. The attack against the cave-in had begun. A foot at a time they tore away the old, broken, splintered timbers and the rocky refuse which lay piled behind each shattered beam; they stopped every few feet, and then they re-forget Squint Rodaine and his chalky-faced son; down here they could feel that they were working toward a goal and lay aside the handicap which humans might put in their path.

Day after day of labor and the indentation upon the cave-in grew from a matter of feet to one of yards. A week. Two. Then, as Harry swung his pick, he lurched forward and went to his knees. "I've gone through!" he announced in happy surprise. "I've gone through, we're at the end of it!"

Up went Fairchild's carbide. Where the pick still hung in the rocky mass, a tiny hole showed, darker than the surrounding refuse. There was joy in Harry's voice as he made a momentary survey.

"It's fairly dry behind there," he announced. "Otherwise we'd have been scrambling around in water up to our necks. We're lucky there, anyhow."

Again the attack and again the hole widened. At last Harry straightened. "We can go in now," came finally. "Are you willing to go with me?"

"You mean—?"

"But Harry stopped him.

"Let's don't talk about it till we 'ave to. Come on."

Silently they crawled through the opening, the silt and fine rock rattling about them as they did so, to come upon fairly dry earth on the other side, and to start forward. Suddenly, as they walked along, Harry took the lead, holding his lantern far ahead of him, with one big hand behind it, as though for a reflector. Then, just as suddenly, he turned.

"Let's go out," came shortly.

"Why?"

"It's there!" In the light of the lantern, Harry's face was white, his big lips held. "Let's go—"

But Fairchild stopped him.

"Harry," he said, and there was determination in his voice, "if it's there—we've got to face it. Don't you think that certain people would make an investigation if we should happen to quit the mine now?"

"The Rodaines?"

"Exactly. And how much worse would it be for them to tell the news—than for us?"

"Nobody 'as to tell it—" Harry was staring at his carbide case—"there's a way."

"But we can't take it, Harry. In my father's letter was the statement that he made only one mistake—that of fear. I'm going to believe him—and in spite of what I find here, I'm going to hold him innocent, and I'm going to be fair and square and above-board about it all. There's nothing on my conscience—and I know that if my father had not made the mistake of running away when he did, there would have been nothing on his."

Harry shook his head.

"I couldn't do much else, boy. Rodaine was stronger in some ways than he is now. That was in different days. That was in times when Squint Rodaine could 'ave gotten a 'undred men together quicker'n a cat's wink and lynched a man without 'im 'aving a trial or anything. And if I'd been your father, I'd 'ave done the same as 'e did. I'd 'ave run, too—'e'd 'ave paid for it with 'is life if 'e didn't, guilty or not guilty. And—" he looked sharply toward the younger man—"you say to go on?"

"Go on," said Fairchild, and he spoke the words between tightly clenched teeth, Harry turned his light

"Look—There—Over by the Foot-wall!"

before him, and once more shielded it with his big hand. A step—two, then—

"Look—there—over by the foot-wall!"

Fairchild forced his eyes in the direction designated and stared intently. At first it appeared only like a succession of disjointed, broken stones, lying in straggly fashion along the footwall of the drift where it widened into the slope, or upward slant on the vein. Then, it came forth clearer, the thin outlines of something which clutched at the heart of Robert Fairchild, which signified him, which caused him to fight down a sudden, panic desire to shield his eyes and to run—a heap of age-decayed bones, the scraps of a miner's costume still clinging to them, the heavy shoes protruding in comically tragic fashion over their heels; a body and one

It—this remnant of a tragedy of a quarter of a century ago. Their lips refused to utter the words that strove to travel past them; they were two men dumb, dumb through a discovery which they had forced themselves to face, through a fact which they hoped against, each more or less silently, yet felt sure must, sooner or later, come before them. An now it was here.

And this was the reason that twenty years before, Thornton Fairchild, white, grim, had sought the aid of Harry and of Mother Howard. This was the reason that a woman had played the part of a man, to all appearances only one of three disappointed miners seeking a new field. And yet—

"I know what you're thinking." It was Harry's voice, strangely hoarse and weak. "I'm thinking the same thing. But it mustn't be. Dead men don't always mean they've died—in a way to cast reflections on the man that was with 'em. Do you get what I mean? You've said—" and he looked hard into the cramped, suffering face of Robert Fairchild—"that you were going to 'old your father innocent. So 'm I. We don't know, boy, what went on 'ere. And we've got to 'ope for the best."

Then, while Fairchild stood motionless and silent, the big Cornishman forced himself forward, to step by the side of the heap of bones which once had represented a man, to touch gingerly the clothing, and then to bend nearer and hold his carbide close to some object which Fairchild could not see. At last he rose and with old, white features, approached his partner.

"The appearances are against us," came quietly. "There's a 'ole in 'is skull that a jury'll say was made by a single kick. It'll seem like some one 'ad killed 'im, and then caved in the mine with a box of powder. But 'e's gone, boy—your father—I mean. I can't defend 'imself. We've got to take 'is part."

"Maybe—" Fairchild was grasping at the final straw—"maybe it's not the person we believe it to be at all. It might be somebody else—who had come in here and set off a charge of powder by accident and—"

But the shaking of Harry's head stilled the momentary ray of hope.

"No. I looked. There was a watch—all covered with mold and mildew. I tried it open. It's got Larsen's name inside!"

CHAPTER XII

Again there was a long moment of silence while Harry stood pawing at his mustache and while Robert Fairchild sought to summon the strength to do the thing which was before him. All the solidness of the old days had come back to him, ghosts which would not be driven away; memories of a time when he was the grubbing, though willing slave of a victim of fear—of a man whose life had been wrecked through terror of the day when intruders would break their way through the debris, and when the discovery would be made. And it had remained for Robert Fairchild, the son, to find the hidden secret, for him to come upon the thing which had caused the agony of nearly thirty years of suffering, for him to face the alternative of again placing that gruesome find into hiding, or to square his shoulders before the world and take the consequences.

There was no time to lose in making his decision. Beside him stood Harry, silent, morose. Before him—Fairchild closed his eyes in an attempt to shut out the sight of it. But still it was there, the crumpled heap of tattered clothing and human remains, the awry, heavy shoes still shielding the fleshless bones of the feet. He turned blindly, his hands groping before him.

"Harry," he called, "Harry! Get me out of here—I—can't stand it!"

Wordlessly the big man came to his side. Wordlessly they made the trip back to the hole in the cave-in and then followed the trail of new-laid track to the shaft. Up—up—the trip seemed endless as they jerked and pulled on the weighted rope, that their shaft bucket might travel to the surface. Then, at the mouth of the tunnel, Robert Fairchild stood for a long time staring out over the soft hills and the radiance of the snowy range, far away. It gave him a new strength, a new determination. His eyes brightened with resolution. Then he turned to the faithful Harry, waiting in the background.

"There's no use trying to evade anything, Harry. We've got to face the music. Will you go with me to notify the coroner—or would you rather stay here?"

"I'll go."

Silently they trudged into town and to the little undertaking shop which also served as the office of the coroner. They made their report, then accompanied the officer, together with the sheriff, back to the mine and into the drift. There once more they clambered through the hole in the cave-in and on toward the beginning of the slope. And there they pointed out their discovery.

A wait for the remainder of that day—a day that seemed ages long, a day in which Robert Fairchild found himself facing the editor of the Bugle, and telling his story, Harry beside him. But he told only what he had found, nothing of the past, nothing of the white-haired man who had waited by the window, straggling at the slightest sound on the old, vine-clad veranda, sucking of the letter which he had found in the dusty safe. Nothing was asked regarding that; nothing could be gained by telling it. In the heart of Robert Fairchild was the was a determination to fight for that innocence as long as it was humanly possible. But gospel told what he did not.

There were those who remembered the departure of Thornton Fairchild from Ohadi. There were others who recollected perfectly that in the center of the rig was a man, apparently "Sissie" Larsen. And they asked questions. They cornered Harry, they shot their queries at him one after another. But Harry was adamant.

"I ain't got anything to say! And there's an end to it!"

Late that night, as they were engaged at their usual occupation of relating the varied happenings of the day to Mother Howard, there came a knock at the door, instinctively, Fairchild bent toward her:

"Your name's out of this—as long as possible."

She smiled in her mothering, knowing way. Then she opened the door, there to find a deputy from the sheriff's office.

"They've impounded a jury up at the courthouse," he announced. "The coroner wants Mr. Fairchild and Mr. Harkins to come up there and tell what they know about this here skeleton they found."

It was the expected. The two men went forth, to find the street about the courthouse thronged, for already the news of the finding of the skeleton had traveled far, even into the little mining camps which skirted the town. Everywhere were black crowds under the faint street lamps. The basement of the courthouse was illuminated; and there were clusters of curious persons about the stairways. Through the throng started Harry and Fairchild, only to be drawn aside by Farrell, the attorney.

"I'm not going to take a part in this unless I have to," he told them. "It will look better for you if it isn't necessary for me to make an appearance. How do you know but what Thornton Fairchild was attacked by this man and forced to kill in self-defense? It's a penitentiary offense for a man to strike another, without sufficient justification, beneath ground. And had Sissie Larsen even so much as slapped Thornton Fairchild, that man would have been perfectly justified in killing him to protect himself. Guide yourselves accordingly—and I will be there only as a spectator; unless events should necessitate something else."

They promised and went on, somewhat calmer in mind, to edge their way to the steps and to enter the basement of the courthouse. The coroner and his jury, composed of six miners picked up haphazard along the street—according to the custom of coroners in general—were already present. So was every person who possibly could cram through the doors of the big room. To them all Fairchild paid little attention—all but three.

They were on a back seat in the long courtroom—Squint Rodaine and his son, chalkier, yet blacker than ever, while, between them sat an old woman with white hair which straggled about her cheeks, a woman with deep-set eyes, whose hands wandered now and then vaguely before her; a wrinkled woman, adgeing about her seat, watching with craned neck those who stuffed their way within the already crammed room, her eyes never still, her lips moving constantly, as though mumbled some never-ending rote. Fairchild stared at her, then turned to Harry.

"Who's that with the Rodaines?"

Harry looked furtively. "Crazy Laura—his wife."

"But—"

"And she ain't 'ere for anything good!" Harry's voice bore a tone of nervousness. "Squint Rodaine don't even recognize 'er on the street—much less appear in company with 'er. Somebawd's appeasing 'er."

"But what could she testify to?"

"Ow should I know?" Harry said it almost petulantly. "I didn't even know 'er."

"Yes, yes, yes!" It was the bald, using a regular district-court introduction of the fact that an inquest was about to be held. The crowded room sighed and settled. The coroner stepped forward.

"We are gathered here tonight to inquire into the death of a man supposed to be L. A. Larsen, commonly called 'Sissie,' whose skeleton was found today in the Blue Forge mine."

state of Colorado, so do your full duty in arriving at your verdict."

"First witness," he called out; "Harry Harkins!"

Harry went forward, clumsily seeking the witness chair. He was questioned regarding nothing more than the mere finding of the body, the identification by means of the watch, and the notification of the coroner. Fairchild was called, to suffer no more from the queries of the investigator than Harry. There was a pause. It seemed that the inquest was over. A few people began to move toward the door—only to halt. The coroner's voice had sounded again:

"Mrs. Laura Rodaine!"

Prodded to her feet by the squint-eyed man beside her, she rose and, laughing in silly fashion, stumbled to the aisle, her straying hair, her ragged clothing, her big shoes and shuffling gait all blending with the wild, eerie look of her eyes, the constant munching of the almost toothless mouth. Again she laughed, in a vacant, embarrassed manner, as she reached the stand and held up her hand for the administration of the oath. Fairchild leaned close to his partner.

"At least she knows enough for that."

Harry nodded.

"She knows a lot, that old girl. They say she writes down in a book everything she does every day. But what can she be 'ere to testify to?"

The answer seemed to come in the questioning voice of the coroner.

"Your name, please?"

"Laura Rodaine. Least, that's the name I go by. My real maiden name is Laura Masterson, and—"

"Rodaine will be sufficient. Your age?"

"I think it's sixty-four. If I had my book, I could tell. I—"

"Your book?"

"Yes, I keep everything in a book. But it isn't here. I couldn't bring it."

"The guess will be sufficient in this case. You've lived here a good many years, Mrs. Rodaine?"

"Yes, around thirty-five. Let's see—yes, I'm sure it's thirty-five. My boy was born here—he's about thirty and we came here five years before that."

"I believe you told me tonight that you have a habit of wandering around the hills?"

"Yes, I've done that—I do it right along—I've done it ever since my husband and I split up—that was just a little while after the boy was born—"

"Sufficient. I merely wanted to establish that fact. In wandering about, did you ever see anything, twenty-three or four years ago or so, that would lead you to know something of the death of the man into whose demise we are inquiring?"

"I know something. I know a lot. But I've never figured it was anybody's business but my own. So I haven't told it. But I remember—"

"What, Mrs. Rodaine?"

"The day Sissie Larsen was supposed to leave town—that was the day he got killed."

"Do you remember the date?"

"No—I don't remember that."

"Would it be in your book?"

"No—no—it wouldn't be in my book. I looked."

"But you remember?"

"Just like as if it was yesterday."

"And what you saw—did it give you any idea—"

"I know what I saw."

"And did it lead to any conclusion?"

"Yes."

"What, may I ask?"

"That somebody had been murdered!"

"Who—and by whom?"

Crazy Laura munched at her toothless gums for a moment and looked again toward her husband. Then, her watery, almost colorless eyes searching, she began a survey of the big room, looking intently from one figure to another. On and on—finally to reach the spot where stood Robert Fairchild and Harry, and there they stopped. A lean finger, knotted by rheumatism, darkened by sun and wind, stretched out.

"Yes, I know who did it, and I know who got killed. It was 'Sissie' Larsen—he was murdered. The man who did it was a fellow named Thornton Fairchild who owned the mine—if I ain't mistaken, he was the father of this young man—"

"I object!" Farrell, the attorney, was on his feet and struggling forward, jamming his horn-rimmed glasses into a pocket as he did so. "This has ceased to be an inquest; it has resolved itself into some sort of an inquisition!"

"I fall to see why." The coroner had stepped down and was facing him.

"Why? Why—your inquiring into a death that happened more than twenty years ago—and you're basing that inquiry upon the word of a woman who is not legally able to give testimony in any kind of a court or on any kind of a case! Have you any further evidence upon the lines that she is going to give?"

"Not directly."

"Then I demand that all the testimony which this woman has given be stricken out and the jury instructed to disregard it."

The official smiled.

"Please come to Denver at once. Have most important news for you."

He who smokes last smokes best

Wherein our correspondent takes a long shot at Zanesville, O.

When we printed a letter from a smoker who professed a preference for the early morning smoke, apparently we started something. Almost the next mail brought along a batch of letters, among which the following is a fair sample:

Dear Sirs:

Will you allow me to take issue with your A. E. K. from Zanesville, Ohio, who states that the best pipe of the day is the one smoked right after breakfast?

Of course, I have no intimate knowledge of local conditions in Zanesville, Ohio, but up here the majority of us regular pipe smokers have a decided leaning towards the last pipe of the evening.

Take a night when you are sitting in front of the fire after the neighbors have gone. Your wife suggests it is bedtime, and while you admit it is, you know you are craving for one last smoke. The good old "upstairs" and you promise to follow directly. But instead you take out your pipe and light up. You smoke slowly and peacefully, calling out at intervals that you'll be there in a minute. Only you don't go until the last puff has died in the bowl of your pipe.

That's my idea of the best smoke of the day.

Or suppose you've been out to a stiff, formal party where all they care for is your cigars and cigarettes. You get home about 12 O. M., take off your glad rags and jump into something cool and comfortable. Then you find your old pipe, hunt up the blue can of Edgeworth and light up for a real smoke.

Yes, Mr. Editor, I am a pipe smoker. I can produce who like his after-breakfast pipe best. I'll guarantee to name a dozen men who prefer the last smoke of the evening. As most of us are Edgeworth smokers, too.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) T. S. Flint,
New York City.

Yes, as we suggested above, when we gave space to an expression of opinion about which is the best pipe of the day, we started something. But we are glad to open our columns to friendly discussions about pipes and smoking in general.

So if you have any particular notions, fads or fancies, send them along. We are taking a neutral standpoint ourselves, not even acting as referees in the debate.

And if you aren't an Edgeworth smoker, be sure and tell us about it. For we want to send you free samples, generous helpings both of Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Edgeworth has made friends all over the world. Some smokers may not care for Edgeworth, but those who do, we believe, settle down and never make any other tobacco the rest of their lives.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed are packed in small, pocket-size packages, in handsome tin tins, and also in various heavy in-between sizes.

For the free samples address Larus & Brother Company, 44 South 21st Street, Philadelphia, Pa. If you will also add the name of the dealer to whom you will go you should like Edgeworth. We would appreciate that courtesy on your part.

University of Colorado Receives $612,000 Check.

Denver.—The savings fund of the general hospital and medical school of the University of Colorado is $612,000 richer by virtue of a check for that amount received by Clark G. Mitchell, of the Bankers Trust Company, agent of the university, from the Rockefeller Foundation of New York City. Six hundred thousand dollars of this sum is a part of $700,000 promised from the Rockefeller Foundation as a gift for medical and hospital needs of Colorado.

The $12,000 is a part of a donation of $50,000 promised by the foundation to tide over the medical school at Boulder, following failure of the legislature to appropriate the necessary funds. A condition was attached to the promise of donation by the board of education of the foundation to the effect that a like sum be raised among the people of Colorado, which was done, under the leadership of Dr. George Norlin, president of the University of Colorado.

INCREASE IN MOTOR TRUCKS

Business of Nation Turning More and More to Highway Transportation, Say Statisticians.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the business of the nation is turning more and more to highway transportation is indicated by statistics on motor-vehicle registration as of July 1, compiled by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Registration of passenger cars, taxis, busses, and motor trucks totaled 10,020,471 on this date, an increase of 157,174, which is a healthy growth, as the first half of the year is the off season for registration of new vehicles.

The surprising fact, however, is that of the 157,174 increase in registration; motor trucks constituted 116,701, against 35,030 passenger cars and 5,443 taxis and busses. This means an increase of over 10 per cent of the number of motor trucks at the beginning of the year. Figures are not available to show what part of the increase of 5,443, or nearly 11 per cent, in the taxi and bus registration is due to the increase in the number of busses traversing rural and suburban routes, but it is very probable that a considerable part of the increase is due to the development of this new form of transportation.

It has been frequently said that the traffic is always ready and waiting when good roads are built, and that the commercial vehicle as a class is more handicapped by lack of good roads than the pleasure vehicle. The increase in the registration of commercial vehicles, coupled with the present activity in highway construction, seems to bear out this statement in the opinion of department officials.

The table of statistics issued by the bureau shows a registration of 9,467,874 private cars, 55,990 taxis and busses, and 1,006,905 motor trucks, making a total of 10,020,471. Motor cycles are not included, there being 149,924 against 100,231 at the beginning of the year.

Motor Truck is More Handicapped by Lack of Good Roads Than Pleasure Vehicle.

Line Highways with Trees. Forestry Department of Minnesota Plans to Set Out 30,000 Plants Along Roads.

To make Minnesota famous as "the state with the tree-lined highways" is the object which the forestry department of that state has set out to accomplish. The department will plant 30,000 trees along the highways this year and each year hereafter will add to the number. What Minnesota is doing is also being done in Pennsylvania and other states. Experts say if the trees are set back far enough their roots will not injure road pavements. It was contended at one time that tree roots and the shade cast by the branches were detrimental to asphalt paving, but experience in Washington, D. C., and other cities, especially in Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts and California, has proved the falsity of that idea.

The committee in charge of the raising of funds for the building of the railroad from the San Juan valley to Gallup, reports that over $3,500,000 in land subscriptions has been set aside for the road.

Navajo City, the newest town in New Mexico, has been launched on the Silverbrook road, twenty miles west of Farmington. The new location is the nearest possible townsite to the Mid-west company's oil field and will do much to boost the field after the town is laid out.

E. A. Rogers, pioneer resident of Prescott and owner of the Courier for 40 years, died at his home in Prescott after a short illness. Mr. Rogers, who was 68 years old, had retired from active newspaper work January 1, 1920, selling his interest in the Courier at that time.

At a meeting of a large number of the sportsmen in the vicinity of Gallup a branch of the game protective association of New Mexico was formed with some of the livestock men in the county as leaders. T. F. Smaling, local banker, was elected president of the association and the other officers are all workers for the betterment of the game conditions.

Announcement has been made at Phoenix of the affiliation of the American Woman's Overseas League, a Phoenix organization composed of ex-service women who served overseas during the World War with the Women's Overseas Service League, the national organization of overseas women.

The Arizona state board of registration for engineers has decided to join the national council of the state board of engineers and examiners. This move will make it possible for any Arizona registered engineer to obtain a reciprocity certificate in any state in which a similar board is organized without the requirement of additional examinations.

A. B. McMillen, whose attorney demanded of the jury in his libel suit against Carl Magee, at Albuquerque, that it set a figure on the value of the reputation of his client, is dissatisfied with the jury's instructed award of one dollar. Mr. McMillen asked damages of $50,000, the jury falling by $49,999 to reach the figure asked. Mr. McMillen has filed a motion asking that the verdict be set aside and a new trial granted.

Howard Dillman of Phoenix was instantly killed near Benson, Ariz., when his racing car that Dillman was piloting over the Douglas-Phoenix race course crashed into a touring car, overturned and was demolished. Joe Diaz, also of Phoenix, mechanic for Dillman, sustained a deep gash in his head and minor bruises.

FATHER OF BLOCK SIGNALING

Name of William Robinson Written Large in the History of Railway Transportation.

An automatic electric system of railroad signaling was put into successful operation for the first time 50 years ago. It was the invention of William Robinson, and the trial to which he submitted his signaling appliances was made early in September, 1872, at the town of Kinross, on the old Philadelphia & Erie railway, in northern Pennsylvania.

Mr. Robinson is very generally referred to as "the father of automatic block signaling." His invention is recognized as the forerunner and at the same time the basis of "practically every automatic electric block signal system in use on railroads today." This tribute to his work appeared in a recent report of the Interstate commerce commission: "Perhaps no single invention in the history of the development of railway transportation has contributed more toward safety and dispatch in that field than the closed track circuit."

So easy to use.—Advertisement.

OLD RAGS USED IN ROOFING

Discarded Odds and Ends Play an Important Part in the Nation's Housing Supply.

Old rags play an important part in the nation's housing supply, as most of the roofs on modern homes are partly made from them. In the form of roll roofings and prepared shingles, old rags cover more American homes than all other types combined. In the preparation of asphalt materials for roofing purposes thousands of tons of rags are made use of every year. Thrift states.

After the housewife has thrown away her accumulation of odds and ends or sold them to the leather-lunged junk man who roams the streets of all American cities and towns with his jingling bell, they pass through many hands before eventually reaching the factory, where they are sorted and reduced to a pulp. This is made into a raw, coarse fabric of long fiber and great durability. Into every pore and opening of this cloth hot asphalt is pressed and the material is then covered on both sides with asphalt and crushed slate. The product of the process is a very durable, waterproof solid material which is used to cover most American houses.

Cynical Rhadamanthus.

Pilled in for speeding the young couple stood before the rural magistrate.

"Ten dollars for reckless driving," said the latter.

"But listen, judge," pleaded the young man, "we were on our way to have you marry us."

"Twenty dollars, then," exclaimed the magistrate. "You're more reckless than I thought you were."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Wasted. "Now, I don't like euchre." "Why not?" "Can't bear to see good poker hands going to waste."

As a rule, a man's insignificance is in exact proportion to the importance of his telephone voice.

SOCIETY MEN WEAR CORSETS

Fad Spreading in England, and Said to Be by No Means Confined to Fops.

The corset-wearing habit among men is coming into vogue again, says an investigator in England.

"A leading London corsetiere who supplies most society men, puts down a good customer's bill at $750 per annum. Let no one imagine that it is only fops who wear them. The majority of wearers are military men, who, I learn, require a greater amount of padding than civilians. Others are ordinary well-dressed men, given to manly sports, and by no means effeminate.

"A man's figure has to be gradually coaxed into shape and it is put first of all into a soft silk corset with scarcely any bones, until he attains by degrees to the full glory of the perfect figure. "This process usually takes three months, and five special makes of corsets are employed in the development, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say the 'repression,' of the figure."
