OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 22

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, DEC. 8, 1922

NUMBER 49

Educational News

(By Mrs. M. L. Blaney)
On account of the cold weather the Jack's Peak school closed until April 1st.

Miss Edith Rockwell, who has been teaching the Parsons school has resigned on account of ill health.

The following county teachers and patrons attended the State Educational Association held in Albuquerque the past week:—E. E. Cole, H. C. Franklin, Mrs. H. P. Clarke, Mrs. J. B. French, Mrs. M. L. Blaney, Carrizozo; Mrs. Dora Kersey, Laureen Wilson, Ancho; W. J. Klopp, Capitan; Ruby Hybert, Otha A. Fox, Corona.

The following resolutions were passed by the Educational committee and adopted by the general assembly:

1. That the state and county boards of education be appointive, and that state and county superintendents be elected by their respective boards, and that higher standards be required.
2. That we commend the state board and the state department of education for their efforts towards raising the qualifications of teachers by raising the requirements for certificates to teach, and recommend that the granting of the first grade certificate be dependent upon at least two years of training above high school.
3. That we approve a plan which provides for a state educational auditor, but we oppose the revision of educational budgets by the state tax commission after July 15 of each year. We recommend that in filling the office of state educational auditor a person be selected who is not only a statistician but who is also familiar with school administration and educational needs.
4. That we support the provisions of the Towner-Sterling Bill.
5. That house bill No 60, chap. 83, laws of 1919, limiting the salary of teachers in one, two and three-room schools be repealed, and that house bill 109, chap. 88,

Court Adjourns

Judge Bratton arrived Sunday night from Clovis and finished the term of court for Judge Mechem, who had to go to Las Cruces to begin a term of court there Monday.

Only civil cases were heard by Judge Bratton, and they without a jury, as the petit jury had been discharged the previous Saturday.

A number of cases were disposed of by Wednesday, when court adjourned and Judge Bratton returned home.

Two Trains of Buicks

Two train loads of Buick cars passed through yesterday morning, destined for California points. There were 250 cars to the train. Two similar trains also passed through a few days previous to this shipment, making a total of 1,000 Buicks for the "native sons" and others—not native sons.

laws of 1921 be amended so as to allow the county board of education to pay salaries based on successful teaching experience and educational preparation.

6. That that portion of section 5, chap. 3, laws of 1919, which reads: "Teachers shall be employed by the board of school directors with the approval of the county board of education," and that this law be amended to read as follows: "The employment of teachers shall be by the county board of education."

7. That section 5, article 2, chap. 3, laws of 1919, which has to do with the compensation of county superintendents be repealed and that a law be passed providing for compensation to the county superintendent equal to that of the county clerk, also that the county superintendent be allowed a deputy to be paid in the same way as provided for other deputies to other county officers.

8. That the compensation to county superintendents for visiting schools shall come out of the general fund.

Woman's Club Minstrels

Last week the music committee of the Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. Albert Ziegler to perfect plans for a minstrel show to be given at the Crystal theater, January 24 and 25. There are on this committee Mrs. Ziegler, chairman; Mrs. T. E. Kelley, Miss Lorena Sager, Mrs. Mims, and, with Dr. E. E. Cole as burnt-cork director, the committee assigned the parts to the best local talent. There will be both white and black men and women, and will be one of the most popular forms of entertainment given in Carrizozo during the year. Remember "The Dixie Darktown Minstrels."

Dance at White Oaks

There will be a dance at White Oaks Saturday night, December 16, 1922. Everybody welcome. Refreshments will be served as usual, and we want you all to come and help us make it a success.

COMMITTEE.

Golden Wedding

A novel, interesting and pleasant event took place here Tuesday of this week, and marked the biggest thing of its kind, perhaps, that has ever taken place in Lincoln county. It was the Golden Wedding of Rev. and Mrs. John H. Skinner. Fifty-five members of the family were present, representing five generations. Twelve of this number, however, were husbands and wives of children and grandchildren, and, therefore, not lineal descendants.

Grandpa Bourne, in his 91st year, and who makes his home with Rev. and Mrs. Skinner, of course, headed the list. Next came Rev. and Mrs. John H. Skinner, in honor of whose 50th wedding anniversary the crowd had gathered; then their six children, forty grand children and six great grand children. There were five other members of the family in distant parts who could not be present at this anniversary—four grand children and one great grand child—otherwise an even sixty would have been the total.

In addition to this imposing collection of family members, about twenty-five guests—old friends of the Skinner family—were present, and many gold pieces were showered upon the couple in whose honor the gathering had been staged, and in commemoration of the event, as well as the recognition and esteem in which the Skinner family was held.

From noon until mid-afternoon the spacious dining room was filled with relatives and guests, and the greatest spread ever laid by one family in the history of Lincoln county was partaken of and greatly enjoyed.

The guests came and went at will during the hours the delightful repast was served, and each guest extended best wishes to the principals for many happy returns of the event. It was a most pleasant and hearty gathering and the assembled guests will long remember and cherish the occasion as one of the most novel nature, full of happiness, sentiment and hospitality.

Ranch Deal

R. C. Sowder, of Picacho, has just closed a deal for the Fuller ranch east and south of town. This ranch, formerly owned by O. Z. Finley, was purchased by Mr. Fuller during the past year and affords about the best range in this locality. Mr. Sowder bought all the cattle and leased the ranch for a period of five years. Other cattle purchased by Mr. Sowder will also be pastured on the ranch this winter.

New Mexico Baptist Orphan's Home

The New Mexico Baptist Orphan's Home, located at Portales, is trying to do its part in caring for the homeless orphans of the state. While the institution is young we have cared for seventy-five children, and have thirty-two in the home at the present time. They come from the homes of all denominations; hence we feel free to ask the public to help us in this work. As in the past two years, a Christmas campaign will be put on all over the state for funds to carry on this work. The management will greatly appreciate your help.

Carrizozo School Notes

(By Supt. E. E. Cole)
Mrs. H. P. Clark, Miss Mildred Schrader, H. C. Franklin, E. E. Cole, and Mrs. J. B. French, a member of the Carrizozo school board, all attended the State Convention of teachers at Albuquerque last week. They report a very pleasant and profitable time. Three especially fine lecturers were present: United States Commissioner of Education, John J. Tigert, Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of California, and J. C. Engleman, Field Secretary of the National Educational Association. The citizens of Albuquerque gave a complimentary concert to the teachers. Mlle. Claire Dux has a wonderful voice and is considered by many as superior to Galli-Curci. It would require two columns of this paper to tell of the good things we heard.

The past week has been Education Week in the Carrizozo schools. On Monday Mrs. Stadt and Mr. Burke addressed the students of the High School on the subject "American Citizenship."

On Tuesday the Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls furnished the following program on the subject Patriotism: "Law and Order, Kastler Taylor; "Trees and 'A Tree," Fred Tutou; "Our Flag and its Uses," Albert Roberts; "The oath of an Athenian Youth," with the Oath and Scout Law of the Boy Scouts, by Will Juell Miller. "America" was then sung and a Salute to the Flag was given.

On Wednesday Mrs. Maude Blaney and Mrs. McCall addressed the students on the subject "School and Teacher."

Thursday, Judge Bratton and Mr. Haley spoke on the subject "Illiteracy."

On Friday, Mr. E. M. Brickley and Mrs. E. E. Cole addressed the High School on the subject "Equality of Opportunity."

The seventh and eighth grades were invited into the High School to hear these programs.

Mrs. Blaney and Mr. Cole were guests of President and Mrs. Hill of the State University, at the University building, Monday noon of convention week. The young ladies of the Home Economics department served in most delightful style.

"Well, son, now you can hurry back and begin cutting into a fortune. If that vein's only four inches wide, you've got plenty to keep you for the rest of your life. Run along."

And Fairchild "ran." Whistling and happy, he turned out of the office of the Sampler and into the street. His coat open, his big cap high on his head, regardless of the sweep of the cold wind and the fine snow that it carried on its icy breath. The weight of months was over, and Fairchild at last was beginning to see his dreams come true.

So this was the reason that Rodaine had acknowledged the value of the mine that day in court! This was the reason for the mysterious offer of fifty thousand dollars and for the later one of nearly a quarter of a million! Rodaine had known; Rodaine had information, and Rodaine had been willing to pay to gain possession of what now appeared to be a bonanza. But Rodaine had failed. And Fairchild had won!

Won! But suddenly he realized that there was a blankness about it all. He had won money, it is true. But all the money in the world could not free him from the taint that had been left upon him by a coroner's investigation, from the hint that still remained in the recommendation of the grand jury that the murder of Sisak Larsen be looked into further. Nor could it remove the stigma of the four charges against Harry, which soon were to come to trial, and without a bit of evidence to combat them. Miches could do much—but they could not aid in that particular, and somewhat sobered by the knowledge, Fairchild turned from the main road and on up through the high piled snow to the mouth of the Blue Poppy mine.

A faint acid odor struck his nostrils as he started to descend the shaft, the "pertuma" of exploded dynamite, and it sent snow into Fairchild's heart the excitement and intensity of the strike. Evidently Harry had shot the deep hole, and now, there in the chamber, was examining the result, which must, by this time, give some idea of the extent of the ore and the width of the vein. A moment more and he had reached the bottom, to leap from the carrier, light his carbide lamp which hung where he had left it on the timbers, and start forward.

The odor grew heavier. Fairchild held his light before him and looked far ahead, wondering why he could not see the gleam from Harry's lamp. He shouted. There was no answer, and he went on.

Fifty feet! Seventy-five feet! Then he stopped short with a gasp. Twisted and torn before him were the timbers of the tunnel, while muck and refuse lay everywhere. A cave-in—another cave-in—at almost the exact spot where the ore had occurred years be-

Foot after foot, the muck was torn away, as Fairchild, with pick and shovel, forced a tunnel through the great mass of rocky debris which choked the drift. Onward—onward—at last to make a small opening in the barricade, and to lean close to it that he might shout again. But still there was no answer.

Feverish now, Fairchild worked with all the reserve strength that was in him. Behind that broken mass, Fairchild felt sure, was his partner, torn, bleeding through the effects of some accident, he did not know what, past answering his calls, perhaps dead. Greater became the hole in the cave-in; soon it was large enough to admit his body. Seizing his carbide lamp, Fairchild made for the opening and crawled through, hurrying onward toward the chamber where the slope began, calling Harry's name at every step, in vain. The place was empty, except for the pile of stone and refuse which had been torn away by dynamite explosions in the hanging wall, where Harry evidently had shot away the remaining refuse in a last effort to see what lay in that direction—stones and muck which told nothing. On the other side—

Fairchild stared blankly. The hole that he had made into the foot wall had been filled with dynamite and tamped, as though ready for shooting. But the charge had not been exploded. Instead—on the ground lay the remainder of the tamping paper and a short foot and a half of fuse, with its fulminate of mercury cap attached, where it had been pulled from its berth by some great force and hastily stamped out. And Harry— Harry was gone!

CHAPTER XVI

It was as though shades of the past had come to life again, to repeat in the Twentieth century a happening of the Nineteenth. There was only one difference—no form of a dead man now lay against the foot wall, to rest there more than a score of years until it should come to light, a pile of bones in time-shredded clothing. And as he thought of it, Fairchild remembered that the earthly remains of "Sisak" Larsen had lain within a few feet of the spot where he had delisted the prospect hole into the foot wall, there to discover the ore that promised bonanza.

But this time there was nothing and no clue to the mystery of Harry's disappearance. Fairchild suddenly strengthened with an idea. Perhaps, after all, he had been on the other side of the cave-in and had hurried on out of the mine. But in that event, would he not have waited for his return, to tell him of the accident? However, it was a chance, and Fairchild took it. Once more he crawled through the hole that he had made in the cave-in and sought the outward world. Then he hurried down Kentucky gulch and to the Sampler. But Harry had not been there. He went through town, asking questions, striving his best to shield his anxiety, cloaking his queries under the cover of cursory remarks. Harry had not been seen. At last, with the coming of night, he turned toward the boarding house, and on his arrival, Mother Howard, sighting his white face, hurried to him.

"Have you seen Harry?" he asked. "No—he hasn't been here."

It was the last chance. Clutching fear at his heart, he told Mother Howard of the happenings at the mine, quickly, as plainly as possible. Then once more he went forth, to retrace his steps to the Blue Poppy, to buck the wind and the sea snow and the high piled drifts, and to go below. But the surroundings were the same: still the cave-in, with its small hole where he had torn through it, still the ragged hanging wall where Harry had fired the last shots of dynamite in his investigations, still the trampled bit of fuse with its cap attached. Nothing more.

Back into the black night, with the winds whistling through the pines. Back to wandering about through the hills, hurrying forward at the sight of every faint, dark object against the snow, in the hope that Harry, crippled by the cave-in, might have some way gotten out of the shaft. But they were only boulders or logs or stumps of trees. At midnight, Fairchild turned once more toward town and to the boarding house. But Harry had not appeared. There was only one thing left to do.

This time, when Fairchild left Mother Howard's, his steps did not lead him toward Kentucky gulch. Instead he kept straight on up the street, past the little line of store buildings and to the postoffice, where he sought out the sole remaining light in the black, black building—

"Well?" he questioned, "what's up?" "My partner has disappeared. I want to report to you—and see if I can get some help."

"Disappeared? Who?" "Harry Harkins. He's a big Cornishman, with a large mustache, very red face, about sixty years old, I should judge."

"Wait a minute," Bardwell's eyes narrowed. "Ain't he the fellow I arrested in the Blue Poppy mine the night of the Old Times dance?"

"Yes."

"And you say he's disappeared? When does his trial come up?"

"A week from tomorrow."

"And he's disappeared." A slow smile came over the other man's lips. "I don't think it will help much to start any 'teller' expedition for him. The thing to do is to get a picture and a general description and send it around to the police in the various parts of the country! That'll be the best way to find him!"

Fairchild's teeth gritted, but he could not escape the force of the argument, from the sheriff's standpoint. For a moment there was silence, then the miner came closer to the desk.

"Sheriff," said he as calmly as possible, "you have a perfect right to give that sort of view. That's your business—to suspect people. However, some sort of an accident happened at the mine this afternoon—a cave-in or an explosion that tore out the roof of the tunnel—and I am sure that my partner is wandering among the hills. Will you help me to find him?"

The sheriff wheeled about in his chair and studied a moment. Then he rose.

"Guess I will," he announced. "It can't do any harm to look for him, anyway."

Half an hour later, aided by two deputies who had been summoned from their homes, Fairchild and the sheriff left for the hills to begin the search for the missing Harry. Late the next afternoon, they returned to town, tired, their horses almost crawling in their dragging pace after sixteen hours of travel through the drifts of the hills and gullies. Harry had not been found, and so Fairchild reported when, with drooping shoulders, he returned to the boarding house and to the waiting Mother Howard. And both knew that this time Harry's disappearance was no joke, as it had been before. They realized that back of it all was some sinister reason, some mystery which they could not solve—for the present, at least. That night, Fairchild faced the future and made his resolve.

There was only a week now until Harry's case should come to trial. Only a week until the failure of the defendant to appear should throw the deeds of the Blue Poppy mine into the hands of the court, to be sold for the amount of the bail. And in spite of the fact that Fairchild now felt his mine to be a bonanza, unless some sort of a miracle could happen before that time, the mine was the same as lost. True, it would go to the highest bidder at a public sale and any money brought in above the amount of bail would be returned to him. But who would be that bidder? Who would get the mine—perhaps for twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars, when it now was worth millions? Certainly not he. Unless something should happen to intervene, unless Harry should return, or in some way Fairchild could raise the necessary five thousand dollars to furnish a cash bond and again recover the deeds of the Blue Poppy, he was no better off than before the strike was made. Long he thought, finally to come to his conclusion, and then, with the air of a gambler who has placed his last bet to win or lose, he went to bed.

But morning found him awake long before the rest of the house was stirring. The first workers on the street that morning found Fairchild offering them six dollars a day. And by eight o'clock, ten of them were at work in the drift of the Blue Poppy mine, working against time that they might repair the damage which had been caused by the cave-in.

That day and the next and the next after that, they labored. Then Fairchild glanced at the progress that was being made and sought out the pseudo-foreman.

"Will it be finished by night?" he asked.

"Easily."

"Very well. I may need these men to work on a day and night shift—I'm not sure. I'll be back in an hour."

Away he went and up the shaft, to travel as swiftly as possible through the drift-filled road down Kentucky gulch and to the Sampler. There he sought out old Undertaker Chastine, and with him went to the proprietor.

"My name is Fairchild, and I'm in trouble," he said candidly. "I've brought Mr. Chastine with me because he assayed some of my ore a few days ago and believes he knows what it is worth. I'm working against time to get five thousand dollars. If I can produce ore that runs two hundred dollars to the ton, and if I'll sell it to you for one hundred seventy-five dollars a ton until I can get the money I need, provided I can get the permission of the court—will you put it through for me?"

The Sampler owner smiled. "If you'll let me see where you're getting the ore." Then he figured a moment. "That'd be thirty or forty ton," came at last. "We could handle that as fast as you could bring it in here."

But a new thought had struck Fairchild—a new necessity for money. "I'll give it to you for one hundred and fifty dollars a ton, providing you be the hauling and load me enough ore to get me through."

"That's all right," said the Sampler owner. "I'll be glad to do it."

"Six—seven—eight—nine—"

Again a wait, while they looked at one another with anxious eyes. A long interval until the tenth.

"Two went together then! I thought we'd counted nine!" The foreman stared, and Fairchild studied. Then his face lighted.

"Ninety's right. One of them went together!"

"And two—and three!"

"There goes four and five—they went together!"

"Six—seven—eight—nine—"

Again a wait, while they looked at one another with anxious eyes. A long interval until the tenth.

"Ninety's right. One of them went together!"

"My partner's Harry Harkins. He's due for trial Friday, and he's disappeared. The mine is up as security. You can see what will happen unless I can substitute a cash bond for the amount due before that time. Isn't that sufficient?"

"It ought to be. But as I said, I want to see where the ore comes from."

"You'll see in the morning—if I've got it," answered Fairchild with a new hope thrilling in his voice. "All that I have so far is an assay of some drill scrapings. I don't know how thick the vein is or whether it's going to pinch out in ten minutes after we strike it. But I'll know mighty soon."

Every cent that Robert Fairchild possessed in the world was in his pockets—two hundred dollars. After he had paid his men for their three days of labor, there would be exactly twenty dollars left. But Fairchild did not hesitate. To Farrell's office he went and with him to an interview, in chambers, with the judge. Then, the necessary permission having been granted, he hurried back to the mine and into the drift, there to find the last of the muck being scraped away from beneath the site of the cave-in. Fairchild paid off. Then he turned to the foreman.

"How many of these men are game to take a chance?"

"Pretty near all of 'em—if there's any kind of a gamble to it."

"There's a lot of gamble. I've got just twenty dollars in my pocket—enough to pay each man one dollar apiece for a night's work if my hunch doesn't pan out. If it does pan, the wages are twenty dollars a day for three days, with everybody, including myself, working like h—l. Who's game?"

The answer came in unison. Fairchild led the way to the chamber, seized a hammer and took his place.

"There's two-hundred-dollar ore back of this foot wall if we can break in and start a new slope," he announced.

"Well, you put it through for me!"

"It takes a six-foot hole to reach it, and we can have the whole story by morning. Let's go!"

Along the great length of the foot wall, extending all the distance of the big chamber, the men began their work, five men to the drills and as many to the sledges, as they started their double-jacking. Midnight came, the first of the six-foot drills sank to its ultimate depth. Then the second and third and fourth; finally the fifth. They moved on. Hours more of work, and the operation had been repeated. The workmen hurried for the powder house, far down the drift, by the shaft, lugging back in their pockets the yellow, candlelike sticks of dynamite, with their waxy wrappers and their gelatinous contents, together with fuses and caps. Crimping nippers—the inevitable accompaniment of a miner—came forth from the pockets of the men. Careful tamping, then the men took their places at the fuses.

"Give the word!" one of them announced crisply as he turned to Fairchild. "Back of us'll light one of these things, and then I say we'll run! Because this is going to be some explosion!"

Fairchild smiled the smile of a man whose heart is thumping at its maximum speed. Before him in the long line of the foot wall were ten holes, "upholes," "downs" and "swimmers," attacking the hidden ore in every direction. Ten holes drilled six feet into the rock and tamped with double charges of dynamite. He straightened.

"All right, men! Ready!"

"Ready!"

"Touch 'em off!"

The carbide lamps were held close to the fuses for a second. Soon they were all going, spitting like so many venomous, angry serpents—but neither Fairchild nor the miners had stopped to watch. They were running as hard as possible for the shaft and for the protection that distance might give. A wait that seemed ages. Then:

"One!"

"And two—and three!"

"There goes four and five—they went together!"

"Six—seven—eight—nine—"

Again a wait, while they looked at one another with anxious eyes. A long interval until the tenth.

nel now, coughing slightly as the sharp smoke of the dynamite cut their lungs—a long journey that seemed as many miles instead of feet. Then with a shout Fairchild sprang forward, and went to his hands and knees.

It was there before him—all about him—the black, heavy masses of lead-silver ore, a great, heaping, five-ton pile of it where it had been thrown out by the tremendous force of the explosion. It seemed that the whole great floor of the cavern was covered with it, and the workmen shouted with Fairchild as they seized bits of the precious black stuff and held it to the light for closer examination.

"Look!" The voice of one of them was high and excited. "You can see the fine streaks of silver sticking out! It's high-grade and plenty of it!"

But Fairchild paid little attention. He was playing in the stuff, throwing it in the air and letting it fall to the floor of the cavern again, like a boy with a new sack of marbles, or a child with its building blocks. Five tons and the night was not yet over! Five tons, and the vein had not yet shown its other side!

Back to work they went now. Again through the hours the drills bit into the rock walls, while the ore car clattered along the tram line and while the creaking of the block and tackle at the shaft seemed endless. In three days, approximately forty tons of ore must come out of that mine—and work must not cease.

Morning, and in spite of the sleep-laden eyes, the heavy aching in his head, the tired drooping of the shoulders, Fairchild tramped to the boarding house to notify Mother Howard and ask for news of Harry. There had been none. Then he went on, to wait by the door of the Sampler until Bitson, the owner, should appear, and drug him away up the hill, even before he could open up for the morning.

"There it is!" he exclaimed, as he led him to the entrance of the chamber. "There it is; take all you want of it and assay it!"

Bitson went forward into the cross-cut, where the men were drilling even at new holes, and examined the vein. Already it was three feet thick, and there was still ore ahead. One of the miners looked up.

"Just finishing up on the cross-cut," he announced, as he nodded toward his drill. "I've just bitten into the foot wall on the other side. Looks to me like the vein's about five feet thick—as near as I can measure it."

"And—" Bitson picked up a few samples, examined them by the light of the carbides and tossed them away—"you can see the silver sticking out. I caught sight of it in one or two of those samples. All right, boy!" he turned to Fairchild. "What was that haralin we made?"

It was based on two hundred dollars-a-ton ore. This may run above—or below. But whatever it is, I'll sell all you can handle for the next three days at fifty dollars a ton under the assay price."

"You've said the word. The trucks will be here in an hour if we have to shovel a path all the way up Kentucky gulch."

He hurried away then, while Fairchild and the men followed him late town and to their breakfast. Then, recruiting a new gang on the promise of payment at the end of their three-day shift, Fairchild went back to the mine. But the word had spread, and others were there before him.

Already fifteen or twenty miners were assembled about the opening of the Blue Poppy tunnel, awaiting permission to enter, the usual rush upon a lucky mine to view its riches. Behind him, Fairchild could see others coming from Chad! to take a look at the new strike, and his heart bounded with happiness tinged with sorrow. Harry was not there to enjoy it all; Harry was gone, and in spite of his every effort, Fairchild had failed to find him.

Some one brushed against him, and there came a slight tug at his coat. Fairchild looked downward to see passing the form of Anita Richmond. A moment later she looked toward him, but in her eyes there was no light of recognition, nothing to indicate that she had just given him a signal of greeting and congratulation. And yet Fairchild felt that she had. Then, absent, he put his hand into his pocket.

Something there caused his heart to halt momentarily—a piece of paper. He crumpled it in his hand, he rubbed his fingers over it wonderingly; it had not been in his pocket before she had passed him. Hurriedly he walked to the far side of the chamber and there, pretending to examine a bit of ore, brought the missive from its place of seclusion, to unfold it with trembling fingers, then to stare at the words which showed before him:

"Squint Rodaine is terribly worried about something. Has been on an awful rampage all morning. Something critical is brewing, but I don't know what. Suggest you keep watch on him. Please destroy this."

That was all. There was no signature. But Robert Fairchild had seen the writing of Anita Richmond once before!

What Makes Tows Liveable. We'd rather go out and camp along some running stream, where at least the birds would affect some sign of friendliness and neighborliness, than hang our hat in a house located among people who have forgotten how to smile, and how to visit among each other as our forefathers did.

Help That Bad Back!

Are you tormented with constant back-ache—tired, weak, all morning after the least exertion? Remember, you work out and discouraged! You look to your kidneys! When the kidneys weaken, poisons accumulate in the system and cause nagging backache, stabbing pains, headaches and dizziness. HEAVY "MAIL" IN THAT BOX

Incident Once More Proved Truth of Saying Concerning Satan and the Idle Hand.

Three small idle children sat upon the curb, and without doubt Satan was seeking mischief for six idle little hands. Perhaps Satan did not put the thought in the mind of the smallest, or perhaps it was just the impishness of childhood. He sat with his eyes upon the letter box beside him, and when they had wandered from that they rested upon two refuse cans in a basement entry. The cans were full to overflowing.

Suddenly he scrambled to his feet, littered to the cans, filled his hands with various juicy matter, returned to the letter box, and stretching on tiptoe, just managed to get his cargo into the top of the box. His companions saw, comprehended, and sprang up with yelps of joy. They being a bit bigger and quicker, followed his example with great success. There were many busy trips to the refuse cans; loud, hurried clanging of the letter box. Orange peelings, potato peelings and much impossible to identify joined Uncle Sam's sacred mail in the vitals of the green box—Kerchance.

A Cave-in

Soon, shutting off the chamber from communication with the shaft, tearing and reading the new timbers which had been placed there and imprisoning Harry behind them!

Fairchild shouted again and again, only gaining for his answer the ghost-like echoes of his own voice, as they traveled in the shaft and were thrown back again. He took off his coat and cap, and attacked the timbers like the four-wheeled man he was, dragging them by main strength three out of the way and clearing a path to the refuse boxes passed, while the sweet

Heavenly Messengers

By J. H. Rockwell

"And there were shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night, and lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid."

"And the angel of the Lord said unto them, Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

HAVING FUN WITH SANTA CLAUS

Illustration by Howard

Suddenly a house loomed up before him that seemed to be settling into the snow like a ship on the brink of foundering. Even as the Christmas Angel lit the first match, shielding it from the wind, and holding it close to see the house number, the door was opened. He had been expected. An old negro man bowed him in. His face was sad and wrinkled, and his hair the color of wood ashes. He wore enormous carpet slippers and a checkered shirt, open at the neck, showed underwear of coarse red flannel.

"We-all been 'spectin' you, sah!" he quavered. "Lil gran'child sick in Chicago hospital. Ellen! Ellen!" he called, shrilly.

A slow, heavy movement in the room beyond, and a stout "mammy" came into view, breathing heavily as her weight threw her slightly from side to side, as she walked.

"De lettah come?" asked the old woman, haltingly. She rubbed her eyes and blinked for a full minute before she could see the writing. Woman-like, she turned the pages and read the last paragraph first.

"Te from de nurse," she announced. "Praise de Lord, de chile am safe an' sound; out ob all dangah, it say! Now it suah will be Christmas joy wir us."

Although he could not write, the old negro man proudly touched the pencil as his name was written in the boy's receipt book. Quite warm, now, and minus one of his glad tidings, the Heavenly Messenger departed into the falling snow, which soon swallowed him up, and then quickly covered over his foot-prints, as if in fear he might be followed, and some harm come to him.

The next message of glad tidings was delivered to a stenographer tucked away in a back room of a rather dilapidated-looking rooming-house. It was a letter from home. She knew it would come at the last moment. Yes, she had been crying, and it wouldn't have been like Christmas at all, had it not been for the Christmas messenger.

"I'm so tired of the office grind," she confided, more to herself, than to the boy. "I've written 'Dear Sir' a hundred and fifty thousand times this week, I'm sure."

Then she straightened his necktie, patted him on the head, and the angel trudged down stairs and out into the night again.

Next came a letter for the head of a family in a magnificent home—where the Heavenly Messenger passed a relay of servants before reaching the person named in the address. That worthy held the portieres aside and stepped forth in evening dress—a serious man, with gray hair. He signed for the letter, then looked at the Christmas Messenger, inquiringly.

"You will find him in room three-forty-two," said the night clerk at the Commercial hotel. And the Christmas Angel found him, a young athletic traveling man. He was just unpadding his grips and the very first thing he took out was a picture in a silver frame. The Angel studied this picture as the traveling man looked at his "special."

"I've seen that lady before," volunteered the Heavenly Messenger. "What?" shouted the traveling man. "Where is she?"

"I just took a letter to her over at the opera house," explained the boy. "She's a lady in a show."

"And I've looked for her for nineteen months," said the traveling man slowly. "How strange that I should find her on Christmas Eve. It is sure the 'glad tidings' they tell us about."

And the next moment he had his coat and hat on, and was rushing for the elevator, on his way to the opera house and the girl he had sought unavailingly for nineteen months.

The Heavenly Messenger whistled softly as he plodded through the drifted snow and pulled the knob which caused a bell to ring in the interior of an old-fashioned house. Light shone from the frost-coated windows of the front room, though it was now far past midnight. An old gentleman came to the door and pulled the Angel into the room abreast of a strong gust of wind and a blinding flurry of snow.

"Make yourself right at home, my little friend," he insisted warmly. "Take that chair up close to the fire. Emily! Here's a letter from the British consul in New York. What's as I live, Charles is safe. He was shipwrecked off the coast of France, but he is not seriously injured and is on his way home."

The motherly woman who had come into the room cried a little over the news from her son, but she did not forget to turn to the bearer of the good tidings and say: "Poor boy, it is a bad night for such a little fellow to be out. Are your feet wet? Take your shoes off and we will dry them."

More warmth came from the old gentleman than came from the fireplace, as he pictured to the boy Christmas time in England. The wife brought a plate of cookies shaped like animals and covered with pink and white frosting.

"Merry Christmas" she called softly, holding a lamp high over her head, as the Christmas Angel slowly made his way down the walk, and out into the night. "Gif my luff to your ma."

When the Special Delivery Angel awakened Christmas morning—or rather Christmas noon—his mother, sitting at his bedside, and stroking his hair, said to him in a regretful tone, "I had planned to have a turkey for dinner today, but I could not quite manage it. You have your father's eyes, dear. My, but he would have been proud of you!"

"I'd rather have chicken than turkey," answered the boy. "The gravy is better."

Highway Improvement

BRING CITY MONEY TO FARMS

Along Every Important Improved Road in the Country Are Signs Offering Produce.

"Mother's pin money," the odd dime and quarters that the farm wife gleaned from a precarious market in the old days, has blossomed into a fund to send the boys and girls away to agricultural college or put a new mower on that south forty.

No longer need the Saturday trip to town be marred by last minute efforts to tuck in the last dozen eggs or the butter crock. The era of spring wagon pilgrimages to trade in the surplus product of the hen-house and the milking shed, has vanished. The David Harum of today operates in his own "front yard"—and at a greater profit.

Good roads have linked the city consumer to the farm. Along every important hard surfaced highway in the country are signs offering everything from ice cold buttermilk to pork on the hoof. Where the housewife used to bargain for hours with the cross-roads storekeeper for a return of perhaps 15 cents a dozen on her eggs, she now delivers them to a passing motorist for double that amount.

A week of churning to buy the promised "silk dress" has given way to a good day's salesmanship at the roadside market. Many young boys and girls are paying their way through college with funds raised during the summer and fall in this manner. The photograph illustrating this article shows a Cook county, Illinois, farmer disposing of a robust Turk to a city housewife.

MANY CRASH CROSSING GATES

One Barrier on Long Island Railroad Is Broken Every Day—Drivers Want to Beat Trains.

Thousands of motorists annually smash through gates at railroad crossings in the United States. This fact indicates two sides to the grade-crossing argument.

On the Long Island railroad, which has only 400 miles of track, one grade crossing gate is broken practically every day in the year by motor drivers who attempt to "beat trains to crossings."

In the last year there were approximately 800 of such accidents on this line alone, according to T. P. Brennan, safety agent. From August 15 to 20 of this year there were 15 such mishaps on this road, resulting in injuries to many persons. One was killed.

Railroads of the United States are in a campaign to cut down accidents of all kinds, including those at grade crossings. Motorists are asked to enter this campaign and aid in making our highways safer by constant vigilance.

"How in the name of heaven," said Mr. Brennan, "can the Long Island or any other railroad render safe and prompt service to its patrons when the public highways are infested with motorcar drivers who refuse to exercise caution when approaching railroad grade crossings, who gloat over the fact that they 'beat the train to these intersections,' and who are daily apparently willing to sacrifice not only their own lives but the lives of those entrusted to their care?"

PLAN FOR BETTER HIGHWAYS

Ninety-Two Per Cent of Roads Are Dirt—Why Not Improve and Save Transportation?

Although good road building is making progress in every state in the Union at the end of another five-year period not more than 8 per cent of the roads of the country will be surfaced. Ninety-two per cent of the roads over which the products of the farms must be hauled will be dirt roads. That being the case, why not have good dirt roads and save transportation costs?

Cost of Canadian Roads. Fifty million dollars will have been spent on improving Canada's highways when the five-year period terminates in the fall of 1936.

Plan National Highways. The Associated Highways of America are planning a system of national trunk highways throughout the United States.

rents eddying off into the side streets and alleys. In the stores could be heard the crisp wrapping of paper, the continuous blare of horns, and tinkling of toy pianos, and weary shop girls serving patrons equally weary. Outside was wind and snow, and jostling people loaded down with bales and bundles of Christmas purchases.

In the postoffice the wheels were turning fast, while a steady stream of letters and packages poured in through the mailing-chutes, on every hand. Clerks at the various windows were busy handling out stamps, weighing bundles and making change.

In the center of the room a man was pushing a long, horizontal row of letters along a table into a cancelling machine; three others were steadily pounding packages with a rubber stamp. Still another man, nervous and working under pressure, stood just within a horseshoe railing of iron pipe, on which hung canvas mail sacks. With swift, trained hands he tossed letters and packages, from his central position in the horseshoe, into the open mail sacks, with unerring certainty.

Suddenly scooping up a small handful of letters, a clerk called out, "Special!" A small boy arose from a pile of mail sacks with a jump. Rubbing the sleep out of his eyes, he went across the room and entered the address of the "special" in his book. "Gee, but my feet hurt," he confided to one of the clerks. It was an oft-repeated story to the clerk, but he stopped his hurried work and regarded the boy with kindly eyes as he said: "Last trip, son; it is after ten o'clock now, and if anything should come in later, we will hold it until morning. I know how it is; used to carry them myself."

The boy went out into the night, and made his way towards the outskirts of the town, where there were no street cars; where the way was often dark, and the sidewalks worn and broken. It was the negro quarters, where broken window panes were stuffed with old rags and the window curtains were of paper, dirty muslin or pieces of faded red tabcloth.

The Heavenly Messenger plodded down a side street, stamping his feet to keep the snow from caking on his shoes. He came out of the dark under the melting trees, whose ice-covered limbs cracked and crackled in the wind.

"I've Seen That Lady Before."

were the parting words the Angel heard, as he turned the corner of a street and lost sight of the little house of the kindly German folk. When the Special Delivery Angel awakened Christmas morning—or rather Christmas noon—his mother, sitting at his bedside, and stroking his hair, said to him in a regretful tone, "I had planned to have a turkey for dinner today, but I could not quite manage it. The Inaugural Ball

The Democratic State Central Committee furnishes us the following information on the Inaugural Ball at Santa Fe:

Arrangements are under way for the Inaugural Ball to be held in Santa Fe when Governor-elect James F. Hinkle takes office.

Announcement was made in the capital that the state is invited. There will be no specific invitations issued, but the public generally is invited. The ball will be held the night of January 1.

The place in which the ball will be held has not been determined, but will be selected within a short time, the Santa Fe committee in charge announced. There are at least two places under consideration.

The record crowd for inaugural balls is expected to attend this affair for the new governor. Thus far there have been many former New Mexico residents signify their intention of coming back home for the affair. The various committees in charge are making preparations for one of the gayest affairs the state capital has seen.

When the Paper Doesn't Come

My father says the paper he reads ain't put up right; He finds a lot of fault, he does, perusin' it all night; He says there ain't a single thing in it worth to read, And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need; He tosses it aside and says it's strictly on the bum, But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come. He reads about the weddin's and he snorts like all get out; He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout. He says they make the papers for the women folks alone; He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan; He says of information it doesn't have a crumb-- But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come. He is always first to grab it and he reads plumb clean through. He doesn't miss an item, or an ad.--that is true; He says they don't know what we want, the darn newspaper guys I'm goin' to take a day sometime and go and put him 'em wise; Sometimes it seems as though they must be deaf and blind and ought to hear him holler

COOKIES FOR IDA

By MILDRED WHITE

Mrs. Callum was calling on the young minister's gentle mother, Mrs. Callum, who was known to be a power in both church and village, was busy, as usual, upon an errand of mercy.

"It's that poor Ida," she explained to Mrs. Mather; "we women have been helping her for some time; I'm sure I don't know what the poor creature would do if it were not for the church. Of course you are new in our town, or you would not need to be told about Ida. She is unfortunate; used to be a bright girl, too, years ago; now, crippled like the mother before her, who was so long Ida's care. It was a problem how Ida was going to support herself until some one thought of--cookies. I guess they happened to think of cookies because both Ida and her mother used to be great hands at making them.

"Mrs. Barnes of the Ladies' Aid said: 'Why can't we solicit homemade cookies from certain church members, and give them to Ida to sell? A regular sale, at her little cottage, you understand; and the idea was a good one. Ida has her regular customers.' Mrs. Callum paused only for breath. "You think," she went on, "that any one would be glad to donate to such a cause--now wouldn't you? Yet when I asked that Gloria Vane, who's come to town, she laughed as she refused. I might have known, however, that there wasn't much hope, expecting a giddy, selfish creature to bother her snuffy head about others."

A young man, banding unsoon behind his high desk, raised his face, listening. Then, slowly he came into the living room, where his mother entertained her caller. He was a pleasing young minister, yet with a determined chin, beneath his engaging smile.

"I am going your way, Mrs. Callum," he said. "Will you drive with me?" Left alone, the sweet face of Robert Mather's mother grew troubled. Thoughtfully, she folded her sewing, thoughtfully went to prepare her son's evening meal. For many years each loving duty performed had been for Robert's sake. Even during the necessary college days she had followed to the college town, that she might be near to minister to his comfort and to advise.

It was a life of harmony and helpfulness that she would have for Robert; and Mrs. Callum but voiced general opinion when she spoke of Gloria Vane. Glory, who had come, a chance admirer of the countryside, to seek residence there. The tiny, shabby house she found had been marvelously transformed; and carefree, and irresponsible--so neighbors said--the girl passed her days.

Glory Vane bought her vegetables from Tony, and the grim woman who kept house for her cooked them. Timmy, a neglected Irish lad, tended Glory Vane's flower garden, and the two could be heard laughing and talking together--quite foolishly. There was no doubt of the young woman's frivolity and wasteful unconcern. When she came to church one Sabbath, clad in gay city mode, disapproval sat on many faces--for what good purpose could she be there? To attract attention, likely, and add to her vanity. Vain Glory.

Robert Mather, the young leader of men, was almost constantly to be seen in Glory's company.

Recalling all this, Mrs. Mather sighed, as she placed the last dish on the white table. Then she decided to carry her offering down to Ida. There would be time before Robert's return.

Ida, a wrinkled-faced creature in her wheel chair, smiled a cheery greeting. Rows of closed paper bags lay on the counter before her. "My orders ready to go out," she explained. "These new currant cookies just go like--well, like the delicious morsels they are. Every one wants the currant cookies. I get three cents more a dozen for them. And I'm growing into a real business woman, Mrs. Mather. I have a delivery; I think soon I'll have to enlarge my shop. It's a joy to be growing independent; Glory--and that's a glory girl, if there ever was one--says I will be independent. She stopped to buy cookies one day, and then, would you believe it? she began making them for me in her home, from an old recipe of her mother's--who is gone; dear little Glory is quite alone. Next, as they sold so fast, she got her housekeeping woman to make them, and they donated regularly.

"It's a secret that Glory is going to send me her woman, to keep on baking the cookies--a sort of partnership. And she sends Timmy to deliver the bags. She's paying him because, she says with her pretty laugh, Timmy does love to earn an extra penny. It'll be a pleasant secret between ourselves, she says to me, and so it has been." Ida paused. "I saw your son and my Glory-girl walking together the other evening," she added softly; "they made a beautiful pair." "I am sure that I will love your friend," Mrs. Mather said, as she clasped Ida's trusted hand. "I am glad you have told me--about her."

Christmas Entertainment N. E. Sunday School

The Methodist Sunday School has decided to have its usual Annual Christmas Tree Entertainment for the children. This, of course, includes all the grown-ups. Everybody invited, especially people with children. We have a good place for a good Sunday School. We earnestly beg of you parents to encourage the little folks to come and we promise to do the best we can by them. What would be more appreciated would be for you parents to bring the little folks. You will help us and we will help you. Your presence will encourage us to more efficient work.

We have a good corps of teachers just waiting for the scholars. I am sorry to say we had an attendance of but 44 last Sunday--27 of these under school age and 9 over school age. Only 8 children from our public school at our Sunday School. Somebody is at fault for this; (is it I or is it you?)

The following were appointed as chairman of committee for the Christmas entertainment: Mrs. McCall, Finance; Mrs. Boone, Entertainment; Mr. McQuillen, Selecting Tree; Miss Florence Spence, Decoration; Mrs. Spence, Preparing Presents.

These chairman are vested with power to draft any helpers they may require. We earnestly hope you will do all in your power to make this a success and a good time for the little folks.

$1,441,486 A YEAR'S DISASTER RELIEF COST

Red Cross Aided 145,000 Victims in United States—Losses Total $30,000,000.

Seventy-two disasters, with hundreds reported killed and injured, and more than 145,000 either homeless or requiring assistance, called for emergency relief measures and the expenditure of $1,441,486.38 by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, according to a statement based on the forthcoming annual report of the Red Cross. The greatest toll of life was taken by hurricane and tornado, while the overflowing of rivers, the breaking of dams and torrential rains drove the greatest number of people from their homes. The property loss was estimated at more than $30,000,000.

The year's disasters reported included twenty-six floods, nineteen tornadoes, fifteen fires, four epidemics, two theatre collapses, two shipwrecks (one an airship), and a bridge collapse, mine explosion, railway collision, and a drought. Of the floods in the United States that at San Antonio, Texas, caused the greatest property loss, $6,000,000 and the high mark of fatalities, 100, while the flood in the vicinity of Vicksburg and Natchez, Miss., forced 31,000 persons from their homes.

A National Calamity
In the Red Cross disaster relief records there will probably remain for many years one calamity which touched nearly every state with a sense of horror and of loss. This was the distressing collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington, D. C., resulting in ninety-six deaths and 125 persons injured. Situated in the center of the beautiful Northwest residential section, this motion picture theatre was patronized by many persons of prominence both in the official and civil life of the National Capital, whose family and personal connections radiated out over the entire country. The horror was intensified by a terrific snowstorm which, though it retarded, did not block Red Cross relief.

Airship Crash Finds Aid at Hand
The crash and destruction of the U. S. Army's large airship Roma in Virginia last February with the loss of 24 officers and men and 11 injured was the first disaster of its kind to call for Red Cross relief in this country. The suddenness of the accident tested the preparedness of the organization and of the Chapter at Hampton, Va., but the response was immediate and relief furnished the survivors, also funds for the expenses of relatives of the dead, who came from long distances to claim their own.

In the year's overseas record for aid rendered by the Red Cross are two fires in the Philippines, one in Manila, which destroyed 1,000 homes, with a loss of $1,500,000 and 5,000 persons made homeless, the other at Tonal, which drove 3,000 from their dwellings. In medical relief that was quick and effective the smallpox epidemic in San Domingo, which had a total of 22,000 cases with 225 deaths in a single day, tested the readiness of the Red Cross for action, and the same can be said of the San Domingo hurricane, which killed 12 persons and reduced the homes of 182 persons to wreckage. A flood in San Salvador, with a death toll of 50 and 2,000 refugees, was also effectively handled by the local Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Relief Machinery Perfected
The year has seen the further perfection of disaster relief administrative measures in every field of American Red Cross activity, and that the work may be carried on to still greater accomplishments the American Red Cross is appealing for widespread renewal of membership during the annual Roll Call, to be conducted this year from Armistice Day (November 11) to, and including, Thanksgiving Day (November 30).

Red Cross Roll Call Heard World Around

The Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross for registration of the membership for 1923 will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and close on Thanksgiving Day, November 30. The ground work for this stupendous task of re-enrolling the membership throughout the world has been laid in a plan for the first complete and comprehensive system of registration of the Red Cross membership in all its 3,800 active Chapters at home and abroad.

An important feature of the round-the-world Roll Call campaign will be a universal effort to re-enlist the service of war-time Red Cross workers in the peace program by their participation in the Roll Call. In this way the vast army of volunteers will once more affiliate with the work of the Red Cross in its manifold phases. Cooperation also has been assured by Government and private maritime interests in a deep-sea Roll Call that is designed to reach every member or potential member in every part of the world who may be on voyage or temporarily in any port.

Thousands of Chapters will adopt the home campaign plan of enrollment which originated in Pittsburgh, where last year it resulted in a membership increase of 50 per cent. All records in the past campaign will be kept.

The Christmas Club

Last week we published the initial announcement of the Christmas Club offer made by the Lincoln State Bank. There will be a series of these ads, the second one appearing this week. This offer should appeal to the man or woman of small means and limited income, for the reasons that it provides an opportunity for saving and a good return on the sum invested. Consult the Bank's officials, learn more of the features of the Club proposition and lay away a nest egg for Christmas, 1923.

LADY GOT SO WEAK COULD SCARCELY STAND

After Suffering From Many Female Troubles This Lady Heard of Cardui and Took It, She Says, "Until I Was Well."

"SOME TIME AGO," says Mrs. Buena McFarland, of R. F. D. 2, Boettie, N. C., "I suffered a great deal with weakness common to women. I had bearing-down pains, my sides and back hurt, and my limbs drew. I would get so weak in my knees I could scarcely stand."

"I was very nervous, and could not rest. I didn't feel like eating. I grew thin, and did not have ambition for anything."

"I had been trying other remedies, but did not get any better."

"Some one told me of Cardui, and what it was recommended for. I also took a Ladies' Birthday Almanac and read of a case something like mine. I told my husband to get it and I would try it."

"I saw a great improvement after the first bottle (of Cardui), so I kept it up until I was well. Now I am the picture of health."

"Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others."

Cardui had stood the test of extensive use, for more than forty years, in the treatment of troubles common to women. Try it.

RED CROSS HEALS WOUNDS OF WAR

25,000 Disabled Ex-Service Men in Hospitals After Four Years of Peace.

CHAPTERS' FIELD OF SERVICE

Every Veteran Needing Help Gets Individual Attention of Sympathetic Workers.

When on November 11 the world waits to observe the fourth anniversary of Armistice Day, and the American Red Cross inaugurates its Annual Roll Call for the enrollment of the 1923 membership, the people of the United States may well pause to think of the unparalleled contribution to the cause of peace made by our Army and Navy in the World War. The glory of it is a common tradition; but the wounds of war remain. They are not healed in a day, in a year, nor in four years. And on Armistice Day there will be under treatment in Government hospitals over 25,000 ex-service men, broken physically by wounds, exposure, nervous strain and exhaustion incident to their service in the war.

The Government without stint is undertaking to furnish these disabled men with the compensation and medical care to which they are entitled, yet their special care is a duty of the Red Cross. Why? Because the Government cannot handle the cases of ex-service men individually; it must handle these men in bulk under a standardized policy. The Government has neither the authority, the funds or the equipment for working out the problem of the individual man. There is where the American Red Cross finds its greatest field for service, aiding through its very active Chapters in reaching the disabled man with immediate practical help, assisting his family while his claim is emerging from the process of adjustment, furnishing articles of comfort, funds to tide over the difficult periods, the friendly touch of personal encouragement, helpful recreation and worry-dispelling amusement. It is the warm hand of sympathy and understanding which the American Red Cross extends to the majority of these disabled ex-service men, some of them friendless in the whirl of life, thousands of them with wives and children dependent upon them, and hundreds of them frequently helpless in the face of grim necessity.

2,679 Chapters Aiding Veterans
In this work, upon whose accomplishment the American Red Cross is urging a record-breaking enrollment in the Roll Call which opens on Armistice Day and closes with Thanksgiving Day, 2,679 Chapters in all parts of the country are engaged. This is 350 more than were working for ex-service men last year when approximately $10,000,000 was expended by the National Organization and the Chapters working together in harmonious unity.

For the current fiscal year National Headquarters appropriated $3,030,002.90, an increase of $363,580.84 over the amount spent for the work among ex-service men in the year ended June 30 last. Since it is estimated that the Chapters will expend close to $7,000,000 from their own funds, the grand total of Red Cross expenditures for this single work is expected again to reach the $10,000,000 mark by June 30, 1923.

Hospital and District Office Work
During the fiscal year a total of over 1,000 persons, paid and volunteer, has been engaged in Red Cross duty in hospitals or district offices of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau. An average of 8,000 new cases requires definite and particular attention each month. The demand for Chapter-made articles for hospital patients is constant.

During last year Service Claims and Information Service at National Headquarters handled $7,200 compensation and insurance claims, 24,500 allotment and allowance cases, and 9,700 miscellaneous claims. Since February, 1919, it has disposed of 64,174 allotment checks payable to veterans which the Post Office Department reported undeliverable.

The Chapter is the unit of the Red Cross organization which is accessible to every disabled veteran or his family. Between July 1, 1921, and June 30, 1922, the Chapters had reported 1,666,079 instances of service to ex-service men and their dependents, at a cost estimated from reports now at hand of more than $5,340,000.

The basis of this far-reaching work of the Red Cross is the individual needs of the disabled veteran to the end that he may obtain his rights under the law; that his special wants may be immediately supplied, that his own and his family's situation may be rendered happy and cheerful, and that their outlook for the future may visualize incentives for independent and fruitful effort.

Spread Christmas Joy Abroad
More than 100,000 Christmas boxes for the children of Central Europe were packed by the Junior Red Cross last year. The spread of Christmas joy through these boxes will be largely increased this year because of the plans already under way.

All the way from Walla Walla comes a communication that we believe holds some interest for the general smoking public. At least, it gave us a thrill, which we want to pass on if possible.

Walla Walla County Attorney's Office Walla Walla, Wash. Dear Sir: A gentleman owes a debt he pays it, or leaving the ability to do so, he at least admits it. For many years I have been indebted to you, and up to the present time have made no acknowledgment; owing from the time that the obligation was first incurred it has been a constant reminder, but then it has been a constant reminder, and the statute of limitations does not run against a gentleman's debt.

Mr. Harding especially emphasized the point that the contemplated legislation would not call for new expenditures, but instead proposes to substitute for the present annual drain of $60,000,000 upon the public treasury direct compensation equal to a trifle more than half that amount.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Asks Congress in Extra Session to Pass Ship Subsidy Bill.

DEMOCRATS ALL AGAINST IT

Measures Link Bonus and Modification of Volstead Act—Turks at Lausanne Are Having Hard Sledging—Clemenceau's Frank Speeches in American Cities.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, the "Tiger" of France, is telling his American audiences that Europe's unrest is due to the fact that the United States abandoned the Old World to its troubles without trying to help it adjust matters after the war. He says we should enter an informal alliance with France and Great Britain. What do you and your acquaintances think about that?

PRESIDENT HARDING, addressing the extra session of congress which opened Monday of last week, appealed for the enactment of a ship subsidy bill. He said there were but three courses to be taken in this matter—"constructive, obstructive and destructive." And though he admitted there is, even in his own party, decided opposition to such a measure, he urged that congress take the constructive course. He argued that the measure as drafted provided complete safeguards against exploitation for favored interests and said that he believed government aid for the merchant marine was as justifiable as government aid of industry through tariff laws or railroads through land grants and loans, and government expenditures for good roads, inland waterways, reclamation and irrigation projects.

Mr. Harding especially emphasized the point that the contemplated legislation would not call for new expenditures, but instead proposes to substitute for the present annual drain of $60,000,000 upon the public treasury direct compensation equal to a trifle more than half that amount. Congress listened to the President calmly and coldly and then the majority got busy with the program, to do the best it could in the circumstances. The bill was quickly reported favorably by the committee on merchant marine, and on Wednesday the house adopted a special rule for its consideration. This provided for three days of general debate and three for consideration of amendments, and a final vote on Wednesday of this week. Meanwhile the Democratic members in caucus decided to oppose the measure solidly, and some Republicans let it be known they would vote in the negative because they thought the people of their districts didn't want the bill.

THIRTEEN were two interesting features of the senate's session Tuesday. The first was the swearing in of the first woman to hold a seat in the United States senate—Mrs. W. H. Felton of Georgia. Senator-elect George DeLoach of the presentation of his credentials that this historic event might take place. Next day Mrs. Felton answered once to her name in the roll call, and retired after 22 hours and 28 minutes of actual service. The other feature was the bringing up of the Ku Klux Klan matter. A letter from Governor Barker of Louisiana to a New York newspaper man was read by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. It urged that senators and congressmen be asked to assist in combating the organization. Governor Barker was in Washington at the time the President for federal aid in driving the Klan from his state. Mr. Harding told him the federal government could interfere in the matter only where federal interests were involved and that he was confident Louisiana could take care of the situation. Parker left for home with the statement that he was going to make a fight to the finish against the Klan. Governor Hardwick of Georgia says he will cooperate with Governor Parker in this, and already Governor Allen of Kansas has started legal proceedings to stop the operations of the Klan in his state, because it has not filed its articles of incorporation. Governor Olcott of Oregon also has declared himself the unrelenting foe of the Klan.

TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY of Michigan put an end to the long controversy over his election as senator and at the same time relieved his party of great embarrassment by resigning his seat. He said it would be futile for him to attempt to continue his public service as he would be continually hampered by "partisan political persecution." Republican leaders, though sympathizing with Mr. Newberry, agreed that he had adopted a wise course.

TWO soldiers' bonus bills have been introduced in the house, and both of them involve modification of the Volstead prohibition act for both provide for financing the bonus by taxes on liquor now classed as intoxicating. The bill introduced by Representative Hill of Maryland provides that the bonus be financed by a 20 per cent tax on beer and cider containing not more than 2.75 per cent alcohol. The measure sponsored by Representative Britten is the old bill amended so that the necessary funds shall be raised by a tax of $10 a barrel on domestic beer, $30 a barrel on imported beer, $5 a gallon on imported champagne, $5 a gallon on imported still wines, and $2 a gallon on domestic wines.

Whether either or both of these bills are fathered by the "wet" organizations is not stated, but the coupling of the bonus and the liberalizing of the Volstead act may turn out to be a clever and winning move. The Association Opposed to Prohibition is on the war path and overlooking no chance. Its executive committee has decided to conduct active campaigns to have the state and national conventions of both parties insert "wet" planks in their platforms. Senator Spencer of Missouri, Democrat, has announced that he will introduce a bill to create a scientific commission to investigate and decide the question, "When is liquor intoxicating?"

YSMET PASHA and his Turkish Nationalist colleagues and themselves up against a tough proposition in the Near East peace conference which began its sessions at Lausanne on Monday. Lord Curzon, by promising Britain's full support for the French program in relation to Germany, brought about complete accord between Great Britain and France in regard to the terms to be imposed on the Turks, and in general it appeared that Italy would agree with them. To start with, the allies decided, over the protests of the Turks, that the proceedings of the conference should be secret and every delegate was pledged not to reveal them, the press being given only a brief communique each day. After several days the Turks again protested against this, asserting that the British and French delegates were giving out the news to correspondents secretly, while they, as Moslem gentlemen, were observing their pledge. All of which availed them nothing. Ysmet also objected in vain to the presence of "third parties," especially the Japanese, in the conference, and asked why Russia was not fully represented. In the latter he was backed up by Premier Mussolini of Italy who declared Russia should participate fully in the conference. This stand of the Fascist statesman was a great surprise to the British and French. The soviet delegation was a week late in arriving.

When the conference got down to business Ismet Pasha submitted the demand of Turkey for the 100,000 troops or more resulting from the secret Balkan war.

ly decided at once that these demands should be rejected, but it was said the matter might be referred to a committee. They were opposed vigorously by Venizelos for Greece and by the Bulgarians, Rumanians and Jugoslavs.

Stamboullski asked the conference to give Bulgaria a corridor to the Aegean sea, including Dedeagatch, but Greece and the allied powers opposed this. It is not unlikely Bulgaria will be granted an outlet by the free use of a railroad to Dedeagatch, which would remain Greek territory. Abdul Medjid Effendi, a man of scholarly attainments, has been elected caliph of the Mohammedan church by the Nationalist assembly, and installed in Constantinople. The deposed sultan reached Malta safely under protection of the British, and it has been rumored that they will make use of him later in India to create antagonism there against the Nationalists.

WILHELM CUNO, the new German chancellor, spent much of the week selecting the members of his cabinet from the bourgeois parties, and seemingly he believes his government will be strong enough to withstand the assaults of the angry united Socialists. The latter rejected President Ebert's appeal to drop their quarrel with the People's party and help save Germany from collapse. This caused Ebert to repudiate his own party and authorize Cuno to ignore the Socialists.

KING GEORGE opened the new British parliament with the usual speech from the throne, in which he asked that, as regards trade and employment, the ameliorative measures prepared by the Lloyd George government be continued and extended. James R. MacDonald, who had been elected leader of the Labor party and therefore is leader of the opposition in parliament, started the debate on the king's speech by calling for alleviation of the distress arising from unemployment. How serious this question is was made plain by the enormous parade of the unemployed in London which at first demanded access to Prime Minister Bonar Law but was turned away from Downing street by diplomacy. The first urgent business of parliament, however, will be the passage of the Irish bill, for if the Free State constitution has not been ratified by December 6 the Anglo-Irish treaty will lapse.

M. GEORGES CLEMENCEAU is delivering a series of addresses in the largest American cities, explaining the present day attitude of France and telling Americans wherein, as he thinks, their own country is at fault in not taking an active part in the efforts to revive Europe. His structures and his advice are received with enthusiasm, with interest or with dissent, according to the opinions of his individual hearers and readers, but always they are received with friendly spirit, for the aid man himself inspires admiration and liking everywhere. It is not likely that he can induce America to enter into the alliance with France and Great Britain which he advocates, but probably he will be successful in giving us a better understanding of the policy of France and her urgent needs.

ANOTHER great mine disaster occurred last week, this time near Birmingham, Ala. Cars running while severed an electric cable and a spark caused a terrible dust explosion 1,100 feet from the entrance. Four hundred and seventy-five men were trapped, and of those 84 were killed. Many others were severely injured.

EVERYONE will be interested in the story which came out of French Lick Springs, Ind., where Mayor Hylan of New York has been stopping after a visit to Chicago. It is to the effect that Hylan and Mayor Thompson of Chicago have formed an alliance for the purpose of getting William Randolph Hearst nominated for the presidency in 1924. It is said they will hold over the heads of the leaders of the Democratic party the threat of forming a third party to include all the immigrants and more radical farmer and labor elements. In fact,

It is reported that some of the ores taken from the mine have run as high as 1,500 ounces to the ton, which is one of the best showings in New Mexico for some years.

Following the signing of the Colorado river compact by commissioners of seven states at Santa Fe, another water controversy of long standing was amicably settled when the states of Colorado and New Mexico, through their representatives, Delph E. Carpenter and Stephen E. Davis, Jr., signed an agreement, subject to approval by the respective State Legislatures providing for the equitable distribution of the waters of the La Plata river between the two states.

Adoption of plans for a state-wide campaign which will assure the erection of a new athletic stadium at the university in time for the opening of the football season of 1923, and the decision that the University of Arizona Wildcats will meet the Utah Aggies in a post-season game to be played at Phoenix on Christmas day were the outstanding results of a recent meeting of the university board of athletic control.

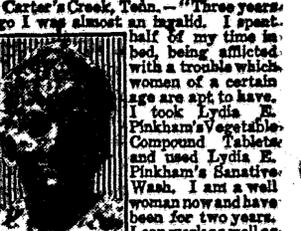

Thirty-five years ago the Vixna mine was one of the richest silver producers in the then famous Tombstone district. Since then several shafts have been sunk on adjoining properties in the hope that the Vixna vein would be encountered, but none found the ore. Recently a six-inch vein of "horn silver," equally rich ore, was found but a few feet beneath the surface of the main street in Tombstone when excavations were made for a cement curbing. Mine men say the vein is undoubtedly the long-sought Vixna vein.

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help other women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. L. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment, and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain. If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. We believe it will help you greatly, for it has helped others.

Peg Legs as Racers. A novel London-to-Brighton (51 miles) walking race is reported in the London Morning Post. The race, walked by two men, one with a steel artificial leg and the other with a wooden leg, arising out of an argument as to the rival merits of different artificial limbs, resulted in a win for V. F. Bell, wearing a steel leg. He did the distance from London in 19 hours and 31 minutes. W. J. Ellison, with a wooden leg, took half an hour longer.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper. Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so. But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many need for a simple bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmor & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

"Since Tanlac has overcome a bad case of indigestion and nervousness of three or four years' standing for me, my work has in the store, as a pleasure, and I am certainly grateful for the good health it has given me," said Mrs. J. W. Pickens, of 518 E. 15th St., Los Angeles, who owns and operates the book store at 219 Mercantile Place.

"I was so run down that I felt miserable all the time. My sleep was broken and restless, I had no appetite, and the gas from undigested food caused my heart to palpitate so I thought I had heart trouble. For a time I had a swelling in my legs, too, and it was an effort for me to get about."

"It is wonderful how Tanlac has given me such perfect relief from these troubles. I eat heartily now, sleep like a child at night, and just feel fine all the time."

DYED HER DRAPERIES, SKIRT AND A SWEATER WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can dye or tint faded, shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, hangings, draperies, everything like new. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed, even if you have never dyed before. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run. So easy to use.—Advertisement.

Pearl-Coated Beads.
"French pearls," supplied before the war, were glass beads given a pearl-like luster by fish-scales obtained from Russia, says Science Siftings. The United States bureau of fisheries has now separated a "pearl essence" from the scales of Chesapeake bay sea herring and shad, and has found this a suitable coating for the beads. The real pearls are strikingly imitated as the silvery coating hardens.

Muscle Shoals Ready in 1925

Work on Project Is Resumed as Word Is Given U. S. Engineers to Finish Job.

$7,400,000 MORE IS NEEDED

Gigantic Dam and Other Sections of Construction to Furnish Work for 2,000—All the Big Machinery Has Been Bought.

Florence, Ala.—The roar of construction work on the great Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals is again sounding through the valleys and over the hills along the Tennessee river. The government has stepped in to rescue from possible decay the huge wartime nitrate and power projects involved in the building of what will be the world's largest water-power dam. United States army engineers, just furnished with $8,100,000 in congressional appropriations, are once more proceeding with the work of harnessing the mighty waters of the Tennessee under a government program which provides for the completion of the Wilson dam, the installation of power-generating machinery and the distribution of electrical "juice" by late 1925 or early 1926.

The army appropriation bill to be introduced in congress December 4 is to ask $7,500,000 additional for the work of the fiscal year 1923-1924. It will require but $7,400,000 more after that before a finished job at the dam and power house will make it possible to send out the electrical current.

The Engineers' Task.
The army engineers do not vex themselves with the question of what is to become of the electrical energy to be taken from the waters of the river. It makes no difference to them whether nitrates or fertilizer is made there, whether the power is to move the street cars in distant New Orleans, drain the swamps of Florida, run an up-to-date electric hair-curling iron for a girl in Mobile, or whether the farmer in Mississippi, Tennessee or Alabama is to light his house and barn, pump his water, or drive his machinery with the electrical energy to come from the harnessed waters. Whether Chattanooga, Memphis, Pensacola, or other communities are to use the electrical energy for cheaper power for manufacturing, gives the army engineer dam builder no concern.

His concern is that the work has been halted since April 15, 1921, by lack of money. The dam was one-third completed then and the air began to be filled with the roar, not of the dam building, but of who should finally use the dam.

The dam was projected in war time to furnish nitrate for explosives for the army.

Now, with the construction resumed, about 1,200 men are at work on the dam. Soon 2,000 will be at work and the call is going out for a small group of able civilian engineers to assist.

In war days the government had a payroll of 35,000 men on the dam project. The men at work today are being paid at the base rate of $2.50 a day, but, as this is a government payroll, and congress has granted a bonus to government workers, they actually receive about $3.20 a day.

Machinery Bought.
All the big machinery for the power installations was bought long ago. It consists of four unit, 30,000 horsepower turbines, capable of generating a total of 120,000 horsepower. It is on the ground, ready to be installed. Construction equipment on the dam works has already been inventoried at $5,000,000.

Col. W. J. Barden, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., is in charge of the dam construction. He has retained during the idle period a small nucleus of the civilian engineering force and is now searching for a few more high class engineers but is unable to locate them, probably because the government does not pay very high salaries.

The work will go on all winter, because there usually is no ice in the Tennessee. In 1917 and 1918 there was something in the nature of an icejam at Muscle Shoals, but as a rule the winters are open.

The dam builders expect to finish the foundation work in the north channel by January 1. They expect to finish the foundation in the south channel by January 1, 1924. They expect to close the openings under the dam and create the "pool" by January 1, 1925.

This "pool," as the engineers describe it, will in reality be a lake eighteen miles long, formed by the water backed up by the dam. The "pool" ready, the electrical machinery will be installed and then the electrical current will be ready.

The construction plant, cofferdam and temporary structures were deprecating at the rate of $100,000 a year when congress voted the new funds.

THE BOLSHEVIK TERROR ABATES

But Things Are Not Yet Quite Normal in Moscow.

Prisoners Are Released After Long Term Behind Bars—Peasants in Volga Region Dividing Land and Mapping Farms.

Moscow.—The Bolshevik terror has greatly abated in Moscow, but things are not yet quite normal. Only a few weeks ago a whole gang of Greek and other foreign peddlers, who had imprudently crossed the Russian frontier for trading purposes, were arrested at the Nikolaevsky railway station and sent to prison by the Cheka, or G. P. U. (government political department), as it is now called. They have since been released.

The assistant German representative at Tiflis was arrested at the same time, and also two British subjects, since released.

On the other hand, some foreigners, long in prison, are being released. One was the Chinese cook of Colonel Johnson, a British railway officer in Siberia in 1919, captured by the Bolsheviks.

This cook, though unable to speak a word of Russian or English and absolutely ignorant of political intrigue was kept in prison by the Bolshevik since December, 1919, and released only recently. His case is typical of many equally innocent.

An extraordinary movement, unnoted so far by the outside press, is going on throughout Russia, particularly in the Volga region. That is the division of land among the peasants and the mapping of every farm, thus making Russia the greatest peasant state in the world, fundamentally opposed to Bolshevik principles. The soviet government at first intended dividing the land itself, but recently it found it could not handle such a big proposition, so it said to the peasants: "Divide the land yourselves." The movement began on the Volga, and many students knowing something of surveying have gone into the country to carry out the order. All these students are getting good food for the first time in many years.

Thus the muzhik becomes complete master of his farm, which can never be nationalized, as even Lenin capitulated to the peasant, and a man stronger than Lenin is not likely ever to appear again in Russia.

POSTOFFICE NEAR NORTH POLE

Canada Has Most Northerly Mail Station in World.

Mounted Police Squad Is Now Stationed 850 Miles From North Pole—More Posts to Be Added in Far North.

Ottawa, Ont.—As the result of recent voyages of exploration in the North, Canada now claims the most northerly post office in the world—Craig Harbor, on Ellesmere Island, only 850 miles from the pole.

Another new post office in the northland is at Ponds Inlet, on Baffin Island. Both were established by the Canadian explorer, Captain Bernier, during the latest tour of his schooner, the Arctic.

An inspector and six men of the Royal Canadian Mounted police are at

The Bernier expedition was sent for the purpose of taking first steps in an extensive program calculated to maintain efficiently Canada's sovereignty in the vast northern empire, known to be rich in mineral deposits. The vessel carried materials for the construction of houses and provisions for the maintenance of posts.

According to a statement issued by the Canadian department of the interior, it is the intention of the government to establish additional posts year by year, and to continue scientific and exploratory work. A patrol ship will visit the new northern posts annually, taking in supplies and mail to the men left there. A representative of the air board accompanied the expedition and

Church at the Crystal

Pastor Glazier of the Methodist church has been conducting evening services at the Crystal Theatre the past few Sundays, and will again preach there next Sunday evening. Good congregations have greeted him on each occasion, and the move appears to be a popular one. The Theatre, is more centrally located than the church and many go there who would not attend services at the church during the winter evenings. Then, again, there is a spice of novelty in going to church at the Theatre, and, besides, everybody knows the trail. The pastor is a very interesting speaker; those who attend church regularly asserting that he is one of the most entertaining speakers ever holding a pastorate here. Killing at Arabela

Alfredo Fresquez was so badly beaten with stones and six-shooters last Saturday night at Arabela that he died Tuesday without regaining consciousness. His skull was fractured in two places by the blows of his assailants, and his face and head beaten into a pulp.

The information we have is that a crowd had gathered for a dance on the date mentioned at the little mountain town in the eastern part of this county. What provoked the row is not clear, and may be brought out at the examining trial. At any rate Fresquez was attacked outside the dance hall, the weapons used being stones and guns. Friends went to his relief and carried the wounded man into a house and protected him from his assailants, but not until he had suffered injuries that later caused death.

Sheriff Harris was called to the scene upon the death of Fresquez, but had not been notified of the encounter that preceded it. Dr. Shaver accompanied the sheriff and examined the body. The arrest of four men was made by the sheriff, and they were brought to Carrizozo and lodged in the county jail. The names of the accused men are: Francisco Analla, his son Jose, Francisco Trujillo and Meliton Sabedra.

The examining trial will take place today.
