OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 23

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, SEPT. 14, 1923

NUMBER 37

School Notes

(By Sept. 12, E. Cole)

321 pupils enrolled in the Carrizozo schools during the first week of school. Not so bad, is it? Who was it that said that half the town had moved out this summer? He is a pessimist, at least.

About $20 raised in the Carrizozo schools for the Japanese earthquake sufferers. The pupils in the public schools of America are always sympathetic and willing to help the unfortunate.

The officers of the senior class for the year are William Kahler, president, and Archie Tuton, secretary and treasurer. The officers of the junior class are Opal Fite as president and Robert Poage as secretary and treasurer.

The usual annual reception and initiation of the freshmen by the three upper classes will occur Friday night of this week. What we do to the freshmen we shall tell you about next week.

We have a good sized class in beginning Latin this year, taught by Miss Crouch. There is also a class in second year Latin, Caesar, taught by Mr. Cole. This is fine. Latin is not a spoken language, yet there is not a more practical study on the face of the earth. Latin is the basis of the English language. A knowledge of Latin enables one to speak the English language correctly and accurately.

During the eclipse last Monday the pupils were given several opportunities to go out on the grounds to see something many will never see again. Perhaps none of them will ever see an eclipse again. The thermometer fell about ten degrees between noon and recess when the disk of the sun was most covered by the moon.

There is a new historical novel on the market which is attracting considerable attention. It is a story told by a seaman, an escaped convict from a Spanish prison, who is on one of the ships of Columbus. The historical setting is accurate and, therefore, a great deal of history is taught in simple English, in the form of a story, in semiprominent style. The book is sweeping the country. The road to the feet of the High

Cowboy Preacher

An itinerant sky-pilot, styling himself the "Cowboy Preacher," accompanied by his wife, blew into town Saturday and held forth to crowds on the streets at stated times until Sunday night. His garb, and his manner of delivery attracted considerable interest and the doctrine he propounded was wholesome and helpful. It had in it nothing new, except it was free from sectarianism and intolerance—two attributes, too often prominent in this benighted age.

Ladies Aid

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church will have a social gathering at the home of Mrs. D. S. Donaldson on Wednesday, the 19th, at 3:00 p. m. This is membership month, and we would like to double our membership. So come out and join us.

There will be a Chicken Dinner, given by the Ladies of the Methodist church, Thursday, September 27, at the Lutz Hall, beginning at 5:30 p. m.

School building has been graded and surfaced with cinders. It looks fine and makes our surroundings look more tony.

The Boy Scouts met last Friday night. Several new members were voted in and will be initiated on Friday night, Sept. 21. Something else is going to happen on that night, but that is a secret for the Boy Scouts—nobody else.

There are at this beginning of the school year, 49 pupils in the Senior High School and 53 in the Junior High School. This is about 15 more than the total enrollment in both high schools for all of last year.

We are glad to welcome to the Senior High School the following pupils from White Oaks: Luella Greenshaw, Lucille Greenshaw and Nonie Littell. Della Cochran, Velma Bates, Pearl Pfingsten and Charles Pfingsten come from Nogal. Mary Wingfield and William Wingfield come from Three Rivers. Welcome all, and may your stay with us be very pleasant.

Birthday Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Foreman entertained a number of friends last Sunday at their country home west of town, the occasion being Mrs. Foreman's birthday anniversary. The big birthday cake, bearing a number of candles, adorned the center of the table, and the guests were informed that the number on the cake multiplied by a certain figure would give her correct age.

The guests were—Mrs. Sarah C. Gray, Rev. and Mrs. John H. Skinner, Mr. and Mrs. Lin Braum, Mrs. W. T. Sterling and two children, Mary and William Wingfield, Mildred and Albert McCall; and later, just as the feast was about over, a half dozen camp fire girls, who had been on a "hike" to the malpais, dropped in and were served ices and cake.

The menu was very elaborate, most of which was home-grown, and consisted of the following:

Chicken, 2 styles
Boiled Ham, Corn Bread
Biscuits
Potatoes, Squash, Onions
Beans, B.lets, Cucumbers
Tomatoes
Preserves, Jelly, Cake
Cottage Cheese
Butter, Sweet & Butter Milk
Peach Pie, Ice Cream
Watermelon, Coffee

To New Quarters

Fred Latone, who has been conducting a grocery in a corner of the Trading Company building, is preparing to move his stock into the old Rolland drug store site. He is installing counters and rearranging the interior. A butcher shop will be run in connection and an experienced meat cutter will be in charge of the market.

Hondo News Items

Hondo, Sept. 12

The people of Hondo are busy marketing the large fruit crop they have this year. Most of it is being shipped from Capitan.

Our school is moving along nicely with the following teachers in charge: J. W. Wilfirth, principal; Miss Ola Casey, upper grade teacher and high school; Miss Louise Webb, intermediate, and Mrs. U. S. Clark, primary. At present the enrollment is 115, with sixteen of them in the high school. We are predicting a good year for the school.

The Misses Eva Rose, Bonita Clark, Reta Watson, Katie O'Kelley and Nannie Cheney left Sunday for Roswell, where they will enroll with this year's seniors. The thresher has been visiting us the past week and chickens look pretty scarce this week.

Nelson Bonnell and J. M. Jackson are setting up their new road implements with which they are going to keep our roads in first class condition from now on.

The Junior High School of Hondo is making a good start, considering its late beginning. There are sixteen enrolled now and at work, and six more, who had not contemplated having a high school so convenient this year, are expected next week.

Tourists are plentiful, about an average of fifty each day passing through, most of them going west to California.

Mrs. Louise Cox, County Supt., passed through our town Sunday afternoon enroute to Roswell, for a day's visit with home folks.

Jim Reeves moved back on his ranch last week. We welcome his return to our community.

Our Sunday School is progressing nicely. We met at 2:30 p. m., and any one in reach of us is cordially invited to attend.

This is our first attempt at news writing. Mr. Editor, and if we miss the waste basket this time we shall come again.

The past week has not been one of general showers, though various committees of the county have received their allowance. However, the ground is in good condition and grass is "bumping" itself. An extension of the growing period insures a beautiful supply of nutritious winter feed for all kinds of stock.

Lincoln News Notes

Lincoln, Sept. 12.

J. M. Penfield and son Edward, accompanied by Emilio Miranda, made a business trip to Roswell the first of the week.

Professor Robbins dismissed the school long enough Monday so that the pupils might observe the eclipse through pieces of smoked glass. Julia and little Ruth Penfield were among the few pupils who knew beforehand what caused the eclipse.

This year seems to be a record-breaker as to the quantity of apples shipped from Capitan.

Countless truckloads of apples from the Pittsworth orchards are daily passing up the Lincoln thoroughfare on their way to Capitan for the 100-car shipment.

Mrs. Carlos Vigil and children, of Carrizozo, are guests this week of Mrs. Frank Salazar.

O. T. Nye, an old-timer here, passed through on his way to and from Roswell, and stopped long enough to say "Howdy" to old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rolland and family, of Carrizozo, were Sunday evening guests at the Bonito Inn.

Miss Jane Nichols and Miss Daisy Zeininger, of Wichita, Kansas, stopped over-night at the Bonito Inn the first of the week. The two ladies were on a motor trip from Wichita to Silver City where they expect to spend the winter.

Miss Nichols was one of the Occupational Therapy teachers at Stanton a couple of years ago; so stopped on her way through the country to renew old acquaintances.

A Farmer's Opinion

R. A. Hunscomb of the Capitan District was a visitor here several days this week. He stated that pasture on the east side is good, and live stock putting on weight. The rains make a little late, but they insure good winter feed for live stock. If the rains had come earlier they would have pulled many a cattleman out of a hole. As it is most of the little fellows will pull through. But the farmer, who has been struggling against bad seasons for three years in succession, is in poor shape, but may manage to get along, and conditions might be worse. With deep snow this winter and good spring rains, he looks for great things for the farmer and stockman.

Still Serves

The local chapter of the American Red Cross has just sent $156.76 for the relief of stricken Japan. Mrs. Blaney, chairman of the soliciting committee, informs us. This amount, while not large, yet above the quota assigned, was hastily raised, and a proportionate amount from all American chapters will run the aggregate into millions. The Red Cross Still Serves.

Gov. Pinchot's Efforts to Avert Suspension of Anthracite Coal Mining.

ITALY THREATENS GREECE

Murder of Military Commission in Albania May Lead to Another War—Germany Paving Way for Abandoning Passive Resistance in the Ruhr

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE anthracite miners and the operators were entirely satisfied with the compromise settlement of their differences suggested by Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and the prospects are that there will be a temporary suspension of hard coal mining during which the pastoremen men will continue to work at an increased wage. Parts of the governor's plan were applicable to both sides, and it is presumed that negotiations will be carried further.

ITALY THREATENS GREECE

ITALY has threatened Greece with the seizure of the Dodecanese islands, and the Greek government has demanded that it withdraw its troops from the islands. The Italian government has refused to do so, and the Greek government has threatened to go to war with Italy.

Germany Paving Way for Abandoning Passive Resistance in the Ruhr

GERMANY has paved the way for abandoning passive resistance in the Ruhr by offering to negotiate with the French government. The German government has offered to accept the French terms for the Ruhr, and the French government has agreed to consider the offer.

MISSISSIPPI

MISSISSIPPI also had what amounted to an election last week—the runoff primary of the Democratic party. The contest for the governorship was between Henry L. Whitfield, former president of the State College for Women, and Theodor G. Bilbo, former governor. The former was victorious by about 15,000 votes.

Belgium's Reply to the British Note

BELGIUM'S reply to the British note was delivered last week, and was not very pleasing to either France or Great Britain. It was a compromise between the two powers, and was not very satisfactory to either.

Coal Ernest P. Burnett, Col.

COAL Ernest P. Burnett, Col. M. E. Galt and W. G. Farnes, American delegates to the International Red Cross conference in Geneva, and as far as Farnes and Galt refused to proceed because of a statement in a Swiss committee report that was considered offensive to the United States.

Capt. Lowell Smith and Lieut. John Richter

CAPT. LOWELL SMITH and Lieut. John Richter, army aviators, broke six aviation records at San Diego, Cal. They were in the air more than thirty-seven hours, established four new speed records as well as making new marks in duration and altitude. To complete the flight, they made 15 contacts with another plane to take on gasoline, food, water, and oil.

Official Recognition of the Government of Mexico

OFFICIAL recognition of the government of Mexico by the United States was made Friday simultaneously in Washington and Mexico City. Formal recognition of diplomatic relations will follow almost immediately. The news was received by the Mexicans with great jubilation.

Good Roads Will Keep Boys and Girls on Farm

THE Kansas Automobile Owners' association believes good roads will induce more country boys and girls to stay on the farms and more city boys and girls to go to the farms, declares E. J. Heckle, in the Topeka Capital.

Highway Improvement Is Costing Billion a Year

THE magnitude of the country's road improvement program is emphasized in a summary of the government's participation made by Thomas H. MacDonell, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, who was the principal speaker at the twentieth annual convention of the American Road Builders' association, held in New York city.

Care Given to Highway Work in National Parks

GREAT care has been given to the construction of highways in the national parks of the United States. Roads have been built through deep canyons across towering mountain ranges, beside slipping streams lined with the lightning bolt and late spring forests.

New Mexico State Items

According to reports reaching Artesia, a new gin company has been formed at Lake Arthur and plans for the building have already been completed.

Irvin P. Galants and Albert C. Koester, business men of Baltimore, Md., who arrived in Las Vegas recently, report that the highways in New Mexico are the best in the Rocky Mountain states.

The first car load of fruit to leave the San Juan valley this season, was shipped from the Farmington station when one car of Bartlett pears went to the eastern markets. Shipping will continue for several weeks.

A big meeting was held in Clovis to form an organization to be known as the Eastern New Mexico Creamery and Produce Association.

The athletic director of the New Mexico Military Institute has completed the schedule for the football season. The season opens with Baylor A at Normal, October 6th.

The first car of apples to be shipped from the Las Cruces packing plant this year, went out recently to Chihuahua, Chih. E. C. Crisp, manager of the plant, predicts that a car a day will go out of the plant for the next forty days, most of them to the markets in the east.

Several William Mann and Fitzsimmons Steeds arrived in Clayton recently with a carload of horses for the local crop of cavalry. The horses have been in use in New York and are one of the finest bunches of animals that have ever been seen in the state.

Owing to the fact that the section of the state around Artesia has been ravaged with rains during the growing season, there is every indication that the hay, corn and fruit crop of the country will break all records.

ROAD BUILDING

Government statistics compiled at intervals during the past thirty years have shown, and do show, a steady tide of immigration of farm boys and girls into the cities.

"That is a state system of highways, such as the project proposed for Kansas, which would include 6,675 miles of hard-surfaced road that could be traveled 565 days a year, without one cent of additional cost to the taxpayer."

"One of the principal causes of the pull of the cities is the unimproved or only slightly improved roads which are an effective barrier between the farmer, his wife and children and the undoubted pleasure and gaiety that the city and town life offers."

"The plan also includes removal of the automobile from the personal property tax list. This feature in itself would tend to reduce the taxes of every automobile owner and give Kansas an improved system of 600-day roads, teaching every county and every important trade center in the state."

"The building committee of the Gallop Lodge of Elks has been instructed to go ahead with the plans for the new home and the work will be started at once. The members of the club recently acquired the Masonic property on Second street and plan to build a new home on the site which will cost about $20,000."

"The construction of good automobile roads will not hurt railroads but will help them. Railroads in hand will improve the condition of the highways by some of the money for motor roads are spending money for the benefit of the country at large rather than for the state themselves."

"Most of the traffic is local, that is within the state. Take the case of Connecticut, for instance. There the traffic on the highways is 70 per cent local. That is, it is traffic confined within the state borders, giving the state the largest benefit of its road improvement. In general, we have found that 50 per cent of the road traffic on automobile highways is truck or short-haul traffic and that 50 per cent is pleasure. But the bulk of traffic remains within state boundaries."

"The hard roads movement is gathering power as it moves. T. C. Powell, vice president of the Blue Railroad Co., is reported to have said: 'The time has come when the nation's railroad facilities are so heavily affected by the enormous tonnage offered that there is only one way in which we may get freight hauled. And that is by taking business men to employ motor trucks for the short haul, say, up to thirty miles or so, thus releasing railroad facilities and equipment for the longer haul which can go by no other means.'"

EQUAL RIGHTS TO WOMEN

Campaign for an Amendment to the Federal Constitution Launched in Colorado Springs

The campaign in the west for an amendment to the federal constitution giving equal rights to women will be launched in Colorado Springs. On September 23, the Woman's Party will present in the Garden of the Gods the first reproduction of its equal rights pageant, given last month at Seneca Falls, New York, which celebrates the seventy-fifth anniversary of the first equal rights convention in America, and announces the determination of the women of today to coincide the seventy-five year old struggle for equality with a federal amendment.

As this year marks the 75th anniversary of the first equal rights meeting ever held in the world, and as that historic gathering will be commemorated by women from all over the west at Colorado Springs, Saturday and Sunday, September 22nd and 23rd, and as it is fitting that this event should be in the minds of all citizens of today and as we desire to do special honor to these Colorado women who have participated in the work of Equal Rights for women, I do propose by authority vested in me as Governor of Colorado, these days are days to be set aside by the citizens of our state, to be observed in a manner appropriate to the great occasion to be celebrated. I am glad to appoint a committee of representative women to represent the state at the celebration in Colorado Springs.

Madame Writes on Apples
Boston.—Stammy Cline in the South Atlantic conference announced a reduction of 15 cents a barrel in export prices on apples shipped to ports in the United Kingdom.

Paper Money in Germany
Berlin.—Nobody knows just how much paper money is floating about in Germany, according to the conclusions reached by the Boerser Zeitung, which believes that with an approximate comparison would be impossible, since communications by industrial plants and numerous private corporations have not entered into comparison with the numbers in the production of paper money. Even railway stations have been operated, says the paper, are being urged to overcome the shortage of fractional currency. Under these conditions, it adds, "a continuous collapse" of the mark is most certain.

Get Threatening Letters
San Francisco.—Federal authorities are searching for the writers of anonymous letters threatening officials of the Argonaut mine, center of a nation's interest one year ago, when the lives of forty-seven miners were snuffed out in a disastrous fire. Better understood at that time that the Mine was of incendiary origin has been strengthened by the receipt of the letters, it is understood.

Santa Barbara Jail Empty
Santa Barbara, Calif.—Santa Barbara does not claim to be absolutely pure, but it is nearly a spotless town, according to the police. There is only one case on the criminal calendar of the county and that is a case in which the accused persons are residents of another city. There is not a prisoner in the city jail, say the police. "Even the Santa Barbara jail has been cleaned out, and the run round is breaking," said Acting Chief of Police Kelly.

A SCHOOL GIRL'S SUCCESS
Everything Depends upon her Health
Mrs. George E. Whitacre Tells of her Daughter's Breakdown and How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Healthy, Happy, Strong Girl

Every mother possesses information of vital importance to her young daughter, and the responsibility for her future is largely in her hands. When a school girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she suffers the consequences of wet feet, pain, headache, nervousness, loss of sleep and appetite, and if irregular, her mother should have a thought for her physical condition and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which has proved a reliable aid to nature for just such conditions in so many cases.

The Mother Writes:
"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Momma, I don't believe I can go to school another day.' I gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now she is a healthy, happy, hearty young girl and weighs 120 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her 'gram' work, and she works at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and it will be of any benefit you may wish to refer to."—Mrs. GEORGE E. WHITACRE, 601 W. Main Street, Mahoningtown, Pa.

Every girl ought to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to do well in school and to enjoy herself at other times.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a special medicine for young women just entering womanhood. Mothers can depend upon it. It is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing harmful, and has great power to tone up and strengthen the system, so it will work in a healthy and normal manner.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value. Let it help your daughter and yourself.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Abdominal Disorders in Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts.

George Ade on Women.
Women of high voltage are especially keen as "arrangers." The married woman decides that Herbert, her husband's bachelor friend (with the false eyebrows), is just the man for Ella, a holdover from the puff sleeve period. So she invites the two case-hardened waiters out for the week-end and issues secret orders that whenever Herb and Ella can be assembled together on one settee, then all the others are to run away and leave them. And yet you may have read in a book somewhere that woman is man's best friend.—From "Single Bipedness," by George Ade.

The girl was very rich, and the young man was poor. She liked him, that was all, and he knew it.
"You are very rich," he remarked.
"Yes," she replied, frankly; "I'm worth 75,000 pounds."
"And I am poor."
"No."
"If I thought you wouldn't."
"Then why did you ask me?"
"Oh, just to see how a man feels when he loses 75,000 pounds."

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT
Thousands of women have kidney and bladder troubles and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.
Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.
Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Killebrew's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.
Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.
However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Killebrew & Co., Hingham, N. Y. for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Barbaric Custom Still Observed by Ecuador Savages.
Feats Follow Quet of the Enemy in the Forests by Quarrelsome and Vengeful Jibaro.

Head hunters still dominate the forests of Eastern Ecuador. The Jibaro Indians, one of the world's most quarrelsome and vengeful people, are the subject of a study recently completed by Rafael Karsten, under the auspices of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution here, the results of which have been published.
The Jibaros, no doubt, at present are the most warlike of all the Indian tribes of South America. The blood feuds within the tribes, and the wars of extermination among different tribes, are continuous. Their religious and social life is bound closely to the taking of human heads.
The education of the boys aims at making them brave and skillful warriors. When a Jibaro has enemies upon whom he himself has been unable to take revenge, he tries to awaken and maintain hatred of them among his sons by discourses directed at them every day. This is repeated every morning when the father gets up.

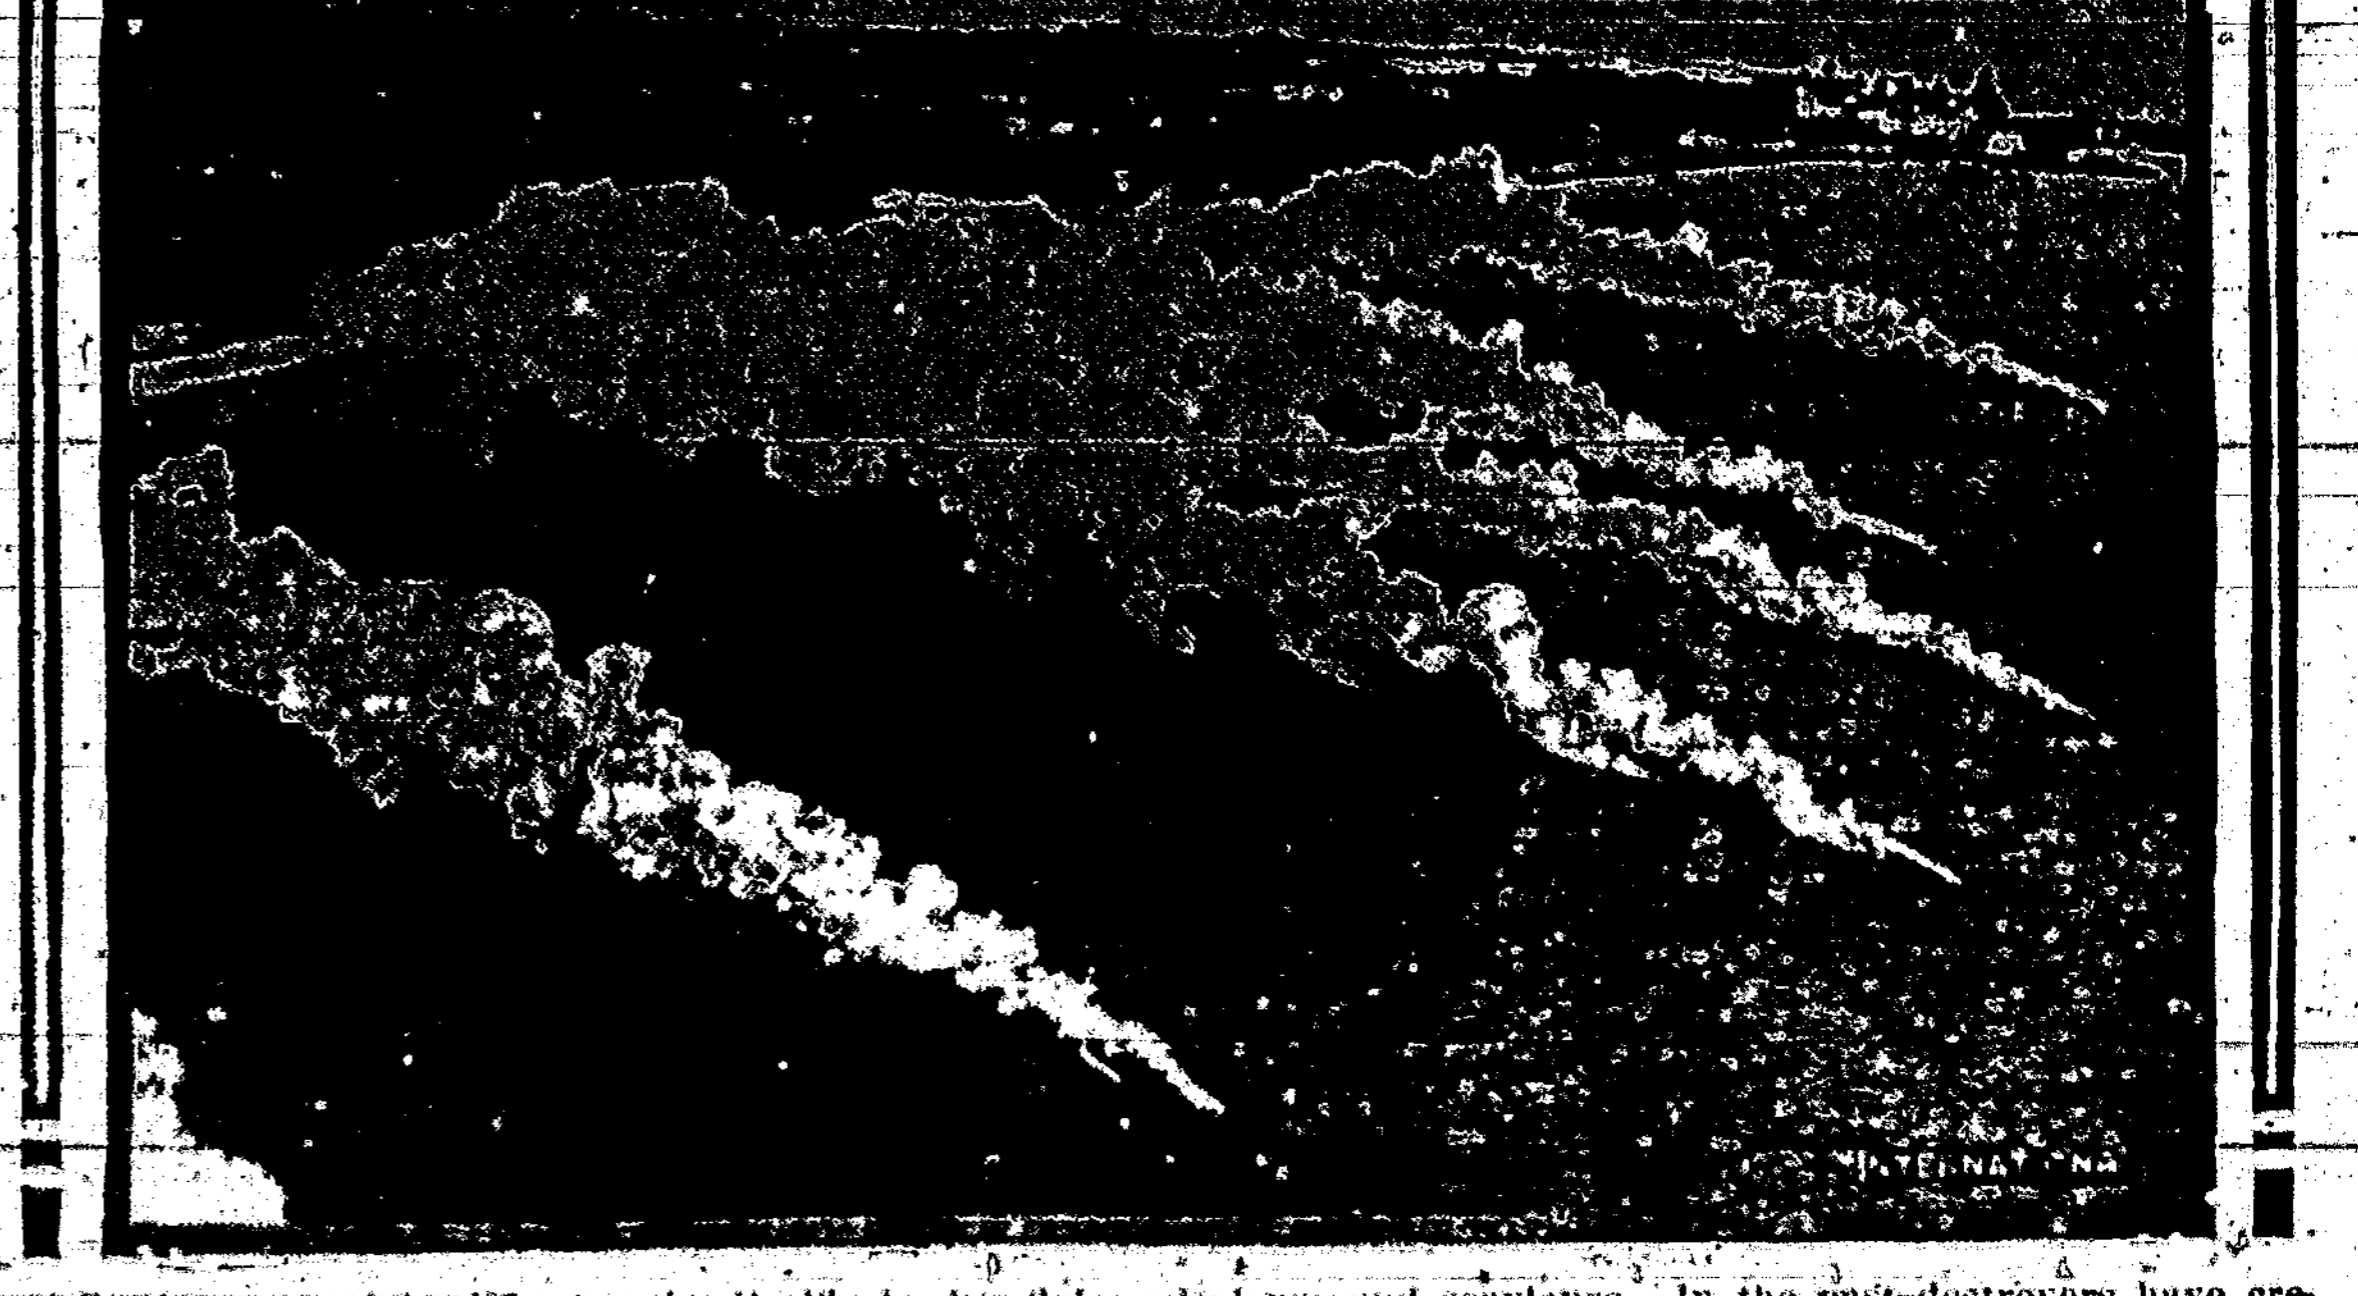

The large community houses, in which the Jibaro families live, are surrounded by death traps. These consist of holes in the ground large enough for a full-grown man to fall into. At the bottom are three pointed sticks, erect. At the surface the hole is covered with small sticks and leaves, which makes it impossible for the enemy, moving along in the darkness, to discover. When he falls, his feet are transfixed by the sticks.
Another death trap is described as follows: Across the path along which the enemy is expected to come a blackened string is stretched the height of a man's chest. At the tree where one end of the string is fastened a charged and corked rifle is tied. The end of the string is brought in such connection with the trigger of the rifle that when the enemy comes along in the darkness, gives it a push the shot is discharged and is likely to hit him in the chest. At any rate the house is warned by the discharge.

A man's social standing among the Jibaros depends on how many men he has killed. A youth in the "valiente class" among them will be secured at least one human head.
Each family lives by itself. They respect even a loose tribal organization which would impose some bonds upon them. The government of Ecuador long ago has given up all efforts to rule these districts and carry people. The smallest family disagreement is considered cause for war. Every Jibaro who dies, no matter what the cause, is considered to have been murdered, and the relatives and those present at the death are bound by a curse to avenge the death.
The Jibaros were taken by the military of operations in 1912 and 1913. It is estimated that between 2000 and 2500 native men of this race may be exterminated if war is to be made, and that from the amount of new arms (2000 to 3000 rifles of all types) that will be used in the extermination of this race the Jibaros are a people of peace. The Jibaros are a people of peace. The Jibaros are a people of peace.

U. S. Bureau of Mines Recommends It for Use in Non-Gaseous Mines.
Washington.—The use of liquid oxygen as an excellent and cheap explosive in salt, fiscal and other non-gaseous mines, and in quarry and other outside blasting, is recommended by the United States bureau of mines after a series of tests.—Preliminary experiments in this novel explosive, conducted at the bureau's experimental station at Pittsburgh, Pa., indicate that it may be used to advantage where dust and gases are not present, but is especially useful elsewhere in lessening the cost of blasting.
While liquid oxygen has not been used in this country so far for this purpose, it is already widely used in Mexico where it has been employed in large quantities in the Upper Mexican mines of Germany since the war and has been adapted to tunnel work, from mining, quarry and excavation work in cities in that country. It was used not only in Germany but in the French iron mines of Lorraine after the German capture, and applied by them also to the destruction of French steel plants. French officials of the Army from distant before the explosion has come to stay, and the bureau is carrying experiments with American companies for its adoption there.

Through Smoked Glasses

The eclipse occurred last Monday afternoon on schedule time, and the bulk of our population spent the period of the eclipse looking at it through smoked glasses. The shadow covered about eight-tenths of the sun's surface in this latitude, and produced a yellowishness on the earth and surroundings that gave a semblance of approaching dusk. The eclipse was total in parts of Mexico, and the darkness was such a good imitation of the shades of night that chickens went to roost and children to bed. Astronomers tell us that a similar phenomena will not recur for three centuries, so if they are correct, all but those of Methuselah longevity have seen their last eclipse of Old Sol—at least from this sphere.

Woman's Club Notes

The first meeting of the Carrizozo Woman's Club was held at the home of Mrs. George L. Ulrich September 7. The hostesses were Mesdames Ulrich, French, Blaney, Allen and Stummel. Mrs. Ulrich, the retiring president, in the opening address, expressed her appreciation to the members of the Woman's Club for their cooperation during the past year.

The new officers were installed, after which Mrs. Stummel, as the new president, gave an unusually interesting address.

At this meeting the members responded to all with grace and grace. After the regular business meeting, a reception was given to the teachers and patrons of the school. About forty people enjoyed this reception. Delightful refreshments were served during the afternoon.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. J. K. Richardson, September 21.

Cattle Shipments

N. ranch, also loaded a car of calves on the same shipment. The arrangement was to load according to weight and to be good weight when reaching the market.

At the Movies

Next week will witness a number of attractive features at the Crystal Theatre, two of which deserve special mention. They are "Three Live Ghosts," in which Miss Nilsson stars, to be presented Tuesday night, and "Beyond" for Saturday night.

The "Three Live Ghosts," in which the star is supported by a good cast, including three rollicking soldiers for the ghosts, is a story of war, romance, imprisonment and escape, sandwiched in with pathos and comedy, and the happy re-union given the returning soldiers.

Ethel Clayton takes the titular role in "Beyond," a story dealing with the veil separating life on earth and the hereafter, the visit of spirits and a reminder of the promises of life. It is a well-told version of a popular theme, and is beautifully portrayed by the charming and talented artist who is a star of the first magnitude on the silver screen.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

WHO KILLED RUDOLF OF AUSTRIA?

THE proverbial "luck of the Hapsburgs"—a synonym for ill fortune rather than good—manifested itself in a number of ways during the long reign of Franz-Josef, late emperor of Austria-Hungary, but none of the occurrences were more startling or mysterious than those connected with the sudden death of Rudolf, crown prince of the realm and favorite son of Franz-Josef.

Married to the Princess Stephanie, daughter of Leopold II, king of the Belgians, Rudolf was far from happy in his marital relations, and comparatively short time had elapsed after his marriage when he attempted to induce his wife to secure a divorce in order that he might marry Maria Vetsera, a beautiful young baroness with whom he was madly in love. Franz-Josef, however, sternly forbade all thought of divorce and, Rudolf announced that he was prepared to renounce all his title and marry the Baroness Vetsera in spite of parental objections. This was recalled vividly when, only a few months later, there occurred the "Mayerling tragedy."

Late in January, 1900, Rudolf staged a gay house party at the castle of Mayerling, some twelve miles from Vienna. Among the guests was the Baroness Maria Vetsera and gossip concerning her affair with the crown prince ran high, finally breaking with a clash when, on the morning of January 30, Rudolf's valet entered his master's bed chamber and found the crown prince dead and, beside him, the body of the beautiful baroness.

The first official report stated that the crown prince had died of apoplexy but, as his rugged physique and exceptional health were well known throughout the court circles of Europe, this statement was received with a smile and much shaking of shoulders. Following this there came a flood of rumors and supposedly "authentic" accounts of the tragedy, some of which stated that the baroness had killed herself in despair and that Rudolf had committed suicide when he found her body, others telling of an alleged suicide pact between the prince and still others hinting at complicity on the part of certain court officials who had been instructed to put a stop to the intimacy between the baroness and the crown prince "at any cost."

A fourth story, which gained considerable credence on the continent, was connected with a former fiance of the baroness, whom she had discarded in favor of Prince Rudolf. This person, whose name was freely mentioned, was known to have been in the vicinity of Mayerling castle on the night of the tragedy, and the report was that he had secured admittance to the apartments of the prince by bribing certain of the servants, and had shot both Rudolf and the baroness, making his escape before the double murder was discovered.

Not another angle to the whole affair appeared several years later when the former crown prince and the baroness were reported to have been seen in the United States, and it was freely stated that news of their deaths had been given to the world in order to make a scandal which would have shaken the throne of Austria and imperiled the friendly ties existing between that country and Belgium. This latter version of the tragedy is not as well known as it appears to be, and the fact that one of the foremost mystery experts states that the crown prince "is believed to have died, probably by his own hand, at the castle of Mayerling."

But the entire affair—whether double murder, a suicide pact or an attempt to cover a scandal—is only one of the many tragedies which make their appearance during the reign of Franz-Josef, tragedies which included his unhappy marriage with the Princess Elisabeth of Bavaria, the execution of his brother, the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico; the mysterious disappearance of the Grand Duke John Alex. Saxe-Coburg; the murder of the Emperor's youngest son, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his marriage with the most mysterious bride in the greatest of all—the World War and the subsequent partition of the kingdom.

No Freshier Shortage
Stevens county has a small but rather remarkable colored settlement. It was founded in the early eighties. Nearly every family lives in its own homestead. Their crops of maize, broomcorn and watermelons never fail in this favored district. Many of them are in independent circumstances.

"How many families have you in the settlement, uncle?" we asked a venerable old member of the race.
"My nephew," he replied, "there are somewhat about 60."
"You must have a hard time getting preachers," we again ventured, laying in mind the racial love of religious exercise.

"Need we say, son? There is only about 30 preachers regular."—Hogton Hermes.

Agricultural Engineer Says This Sort Gives Farms Volume of Power Needed.

IS FLEXIBLE SERVICE, TOO

Steadily the trend of electrical development in the United States is reaching out to embrace the un-electrified rural sections and the great farming areas, according to C. A. Atherton, chairman of the power class committee of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. Mr. Atherton, who is in the engineering department of the General Electric Company's National Lamp Works, is positive that the various difficulties now regarding the extension of electric transmission lines into farming districts by electric light and power companies will be successfully met.

"American farms," he said, following the recent annual convention of the National Electric Light Association, "are now using three hundred thousand horsepower electric light and power plants. Such plants will probably always be used in the more remote districts. But it is only natural that what the farmer really wants is the convenient, flexible and less limited service from the big city power houses.

Farming a Big Industry
"The electrical interests," Atherton went on to say, "are naturally bent on being carried into the rural districts. Farming is the biggest and most important industry in every country. Not only does it employ more people, but it uses more power than any other. It is comparable in size with general manufacturing of all commodities.

"Undoubtedly the chief factor in creating the present strong demand for electricity on the farm are the growing realization of the labor saving which may be effected for the farmer's wife and a newly awakened pride in having the most up-to-date living conditions. Yet the part of electricity in the industry of agriculture is by no means small, only there must be adequate farm machinery for electrical applications.

"Electric farm machinery must be quite different from the heavy farm machinery of the past, intended for use a few hours each year, and then allowed to stand without attention until the next season. It must be made small, efficient, probably operating at a higher speed, and must be automatic.

Division of the Energy
"It must be arranged so that each member of the raw material may be fed in, a truck turned and without more attention the finished material piled or stored automatically. An entire process with such a machine might consume several weeks, consuming a quarter horsepower to do what formerly took four or five men and a six-horsepower steam engine five days to do.

"But sixty horsepower, two days a year, is very impractical and unprofitable on an electrical line, whereas eight weeks of a quarter horsepower is quite practical and may be made a profitable part of the producing equipment of the farm."

"Slimy" Taste

"When I felt sleepy, got somnolent, or listless, I take a good dose of two of Black-Draught and Black-Draught writes Mr. George B. Halsey, of R. P. D. 2, Columbia, S. C. and the good medicine it was, I had been having a hard feeling when I'd get up in the morning. I would be stiff and sore, and had a slimy, bad taste in my mouth, but didn't think so much of it till I began to feel sleepy and didn't feel like eating—then I knew I needed medicine. It was then I began Black-Draught, and I felt all made over, ready for any kind of work, ready to eat and sleep. So, for any return of this trouble, I take Black-Draught, and for 26 years it has been my medicine, and I wouldn't be without it at all. My work is constant. I am on my feet a lot. I am out of doors, and fresh air and Black-Draught are all the medicines I need. I recommend it to others for I know it is good."

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

"Why, Go' bless my soul, she's anchored!" cried Satan. "Derelle! and anchored. The people must have got away in a boat or sloop. There's not a sign of them. Port—hard—port—as you were—steady—ho!"

He ran to let go the halyards. Another anchor had been bent on to some spare chain. It was heaved over, and the Sarah came up to it, swinging less than fifty yards from the stranger. She was a picture, a forty-ton fishing yawl; white painted, gracie as a fish, dismantled, abandoned, and swinging to a taut anchor chain; beyond her and the emerald of the lagoon lay the great stretch of sands, running due south, blanketing to the heat and showing ponds of aquamarine and storms of gulls.

The anchor down. Satan stood with his eyes fixed on the prey; Jude too. They seemed considering her as a butcher might consider a carcass before he cut it up.

"Aren't you going to board her?" asked Hatcliffe.

"Have you ever seen a dead b'ary?" asked Satan. "Sometimes a b'ar isn't as dead as he looks, and sometimes a derelle isn't as empty as it looks. It's a common thing for sea on the Florida coast to hide in a driftin' canoe and rise up and laugh at them that come out to collect it. I can't make out that anchor chain hein' down, and I'll just give them one hour while we have dinner."

When they came on deck again after the meal, they dropped the dingy, and the three of them put off for the derelle.

She must have been dismantled outside the sands, for not a spar lay in the water alongside—dismantled and driven over by a big wave, her crew clinging to her. On the bow was her cabin, and on the deck was her mainmast, but was fastened and immovable; the mizzenmast was smashed.

Satan stood, whistling and looking about him. There he dived below, followed by the others. The cabin had been left in good order. It was a big, airy room, and decorated for a gentleman's taste, but everything was of the best, and a hanging lamp of solid brass still swung over the center table. The walls were of light-colored cane, the cushions of the best, the floor, and the ceiling of the finest sleeping quarters to be seen.

There was plenty of stuff lying about—trunks, clothes, boots. The people had evidently got off in a hurry, and leaving much what they took as long as they got away. The tape they had taken advantage of a very narrow escape.

Hatcliffe picked up a book, a volume of O. Henry. There was a name in blue ink, "Satan."

Jude, coming in the doorway after a moment, came and looked at the book. "It was a gift of mine, woman's patent leather with white straps and buckles (O. Henry)." "Look at them things!" said Jude with a burst of suppressed laughter. "A gift of mine!" said Hatcliffe. "Try them on, Jude."

"If I were them things," said Jude, "I'd have to walk on my hands. There's dead flesh more of it, and the three men as if a patient had been doing them."

Hatcliffe went to the door and looked out. He was looking at the sea, and the sea was looking at him. He was looking at the sea, and the sea was looking at him. He was looking at the sea, and the sea was looking at him.

"Look at that!" cried he, pointing to the most which. "Wanda! M—should think I had been! Come along and see!" He led the way to a heap of rubble and broken spars forward.

They went to the hall room, then to the galley—everything's dead, glorious dead, with this rough sea below!

net, a trysail, square sails, two jibs; in the galley, cooking gear, an Atkey cooking stove to burn coal or coke; in addition to all this some splendid blocks with patent sheaves with ball bearings which run so much better than dummies, a lower mainmast block and two quarter-blocks, fathoms of galvanized chain, and two Nicholson's patent anchors. Other things included lamps, a pair of binoculars, a sextant and a chronometer, charts, and lastly, glorious but useless, in a little engine room the auxiliary, a 18-horsepower petrol-paraffin Kelvin engine, two-cylinder, with the shaft running out through the quarter, and a spare Bergius propeller, which shuts up and opens up automatically when in motion.

When they came on deck again after a rapid glance at these things a brain-ways came to Hatcliffe.

"Look here!" said he. "Why not tow her back to Havana and claim salvage? She's worth a lot and she's derelle!"

"Not me," said Satan. "Have you ever claimed salvage? First there's the tow, and we're underhanded. Then there's the lawyers. What's to stop this Melgmann whoever he is poppin' up an' swearin' against me. He'd say he left her with the anchor down in harbor; it amounts to that, though she's derelle right enough. Not me! I'll take what I want without no lawyers to help me. She's my meat, by all the laws of the sea, and that's the end of it!"

Appeared Jude from the cabin hatch, carrying as a trophy a glass-bottomed hat she had searched from somewhere, a "crashed" strawberry-colored straw hat—or was it a bonnet? It had long strings and a rose stuck on one side of it.

"Look what that catwampus has left behind her!" cried Jude.

"Quit your foolin'," cried Satan, "and come along and lead a hand."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

what Selgmann was like—an American surely, one of the Gulf hunters, belonging, most probably, to one of the numerous clubs on the Florida coast, and Mrs. Selgmann—or was it Miss—or not even that?

One thing was certain, Selgmann was rich. They were not robbing a poor man.

At the end of the third day Jude gave out, not from weariness, but from distaste.

"Lord, haven't you had enough of this old truck?" said Jude. "I don't feel'st I ever wanted to see a lon'th of rope nor a cringle again."

Hatcliffe felt pretty much the same. "I'll finish the business myself," said Satan. "You can knock off if you like. Go'n hunt for turtles' eggs."

"I'm going," said Jude. "I'll come along, too," said Hatcliffe.

Satan ferried them over to the sands. It was about two hours before sundown, and an easterly breeze was blowing fresh and cool, shivering up the lagoon water and whispering among the sand-grains.

Jude walked despondently as they trudged along close to the sea edge and discovering nothing.

"D'you know," said Hatcliffe, "we've never even started to hunt for a sign of the Nombre de Dios? I wonder if she's sunk, really, anywhere near here?"

"I dunno," said Jude; "don't care neither. Satan's so full of his pecky old fillings he's no time to think of anything else."

"Cheer up, Jude." "I'm all right." "No, you're not. What's wrong?" "Lots of things."

"When we get back to Havana—" began Hatcliffe. She cut him short. "I don't want to go back to Havana," said she. "AIN'T GOING."

She sat down on the sand, puffed, nursed her knees, and stared over the sea, casting her hat beside her. She stood for a moment, then she sat down. She knew at once, knew what had been working in her mind for days.

"You're botherin' about what Satan said, dirty accident! I'd have punched his head, only the whole thing happened so quick and you landed him with that mop—don't worry."

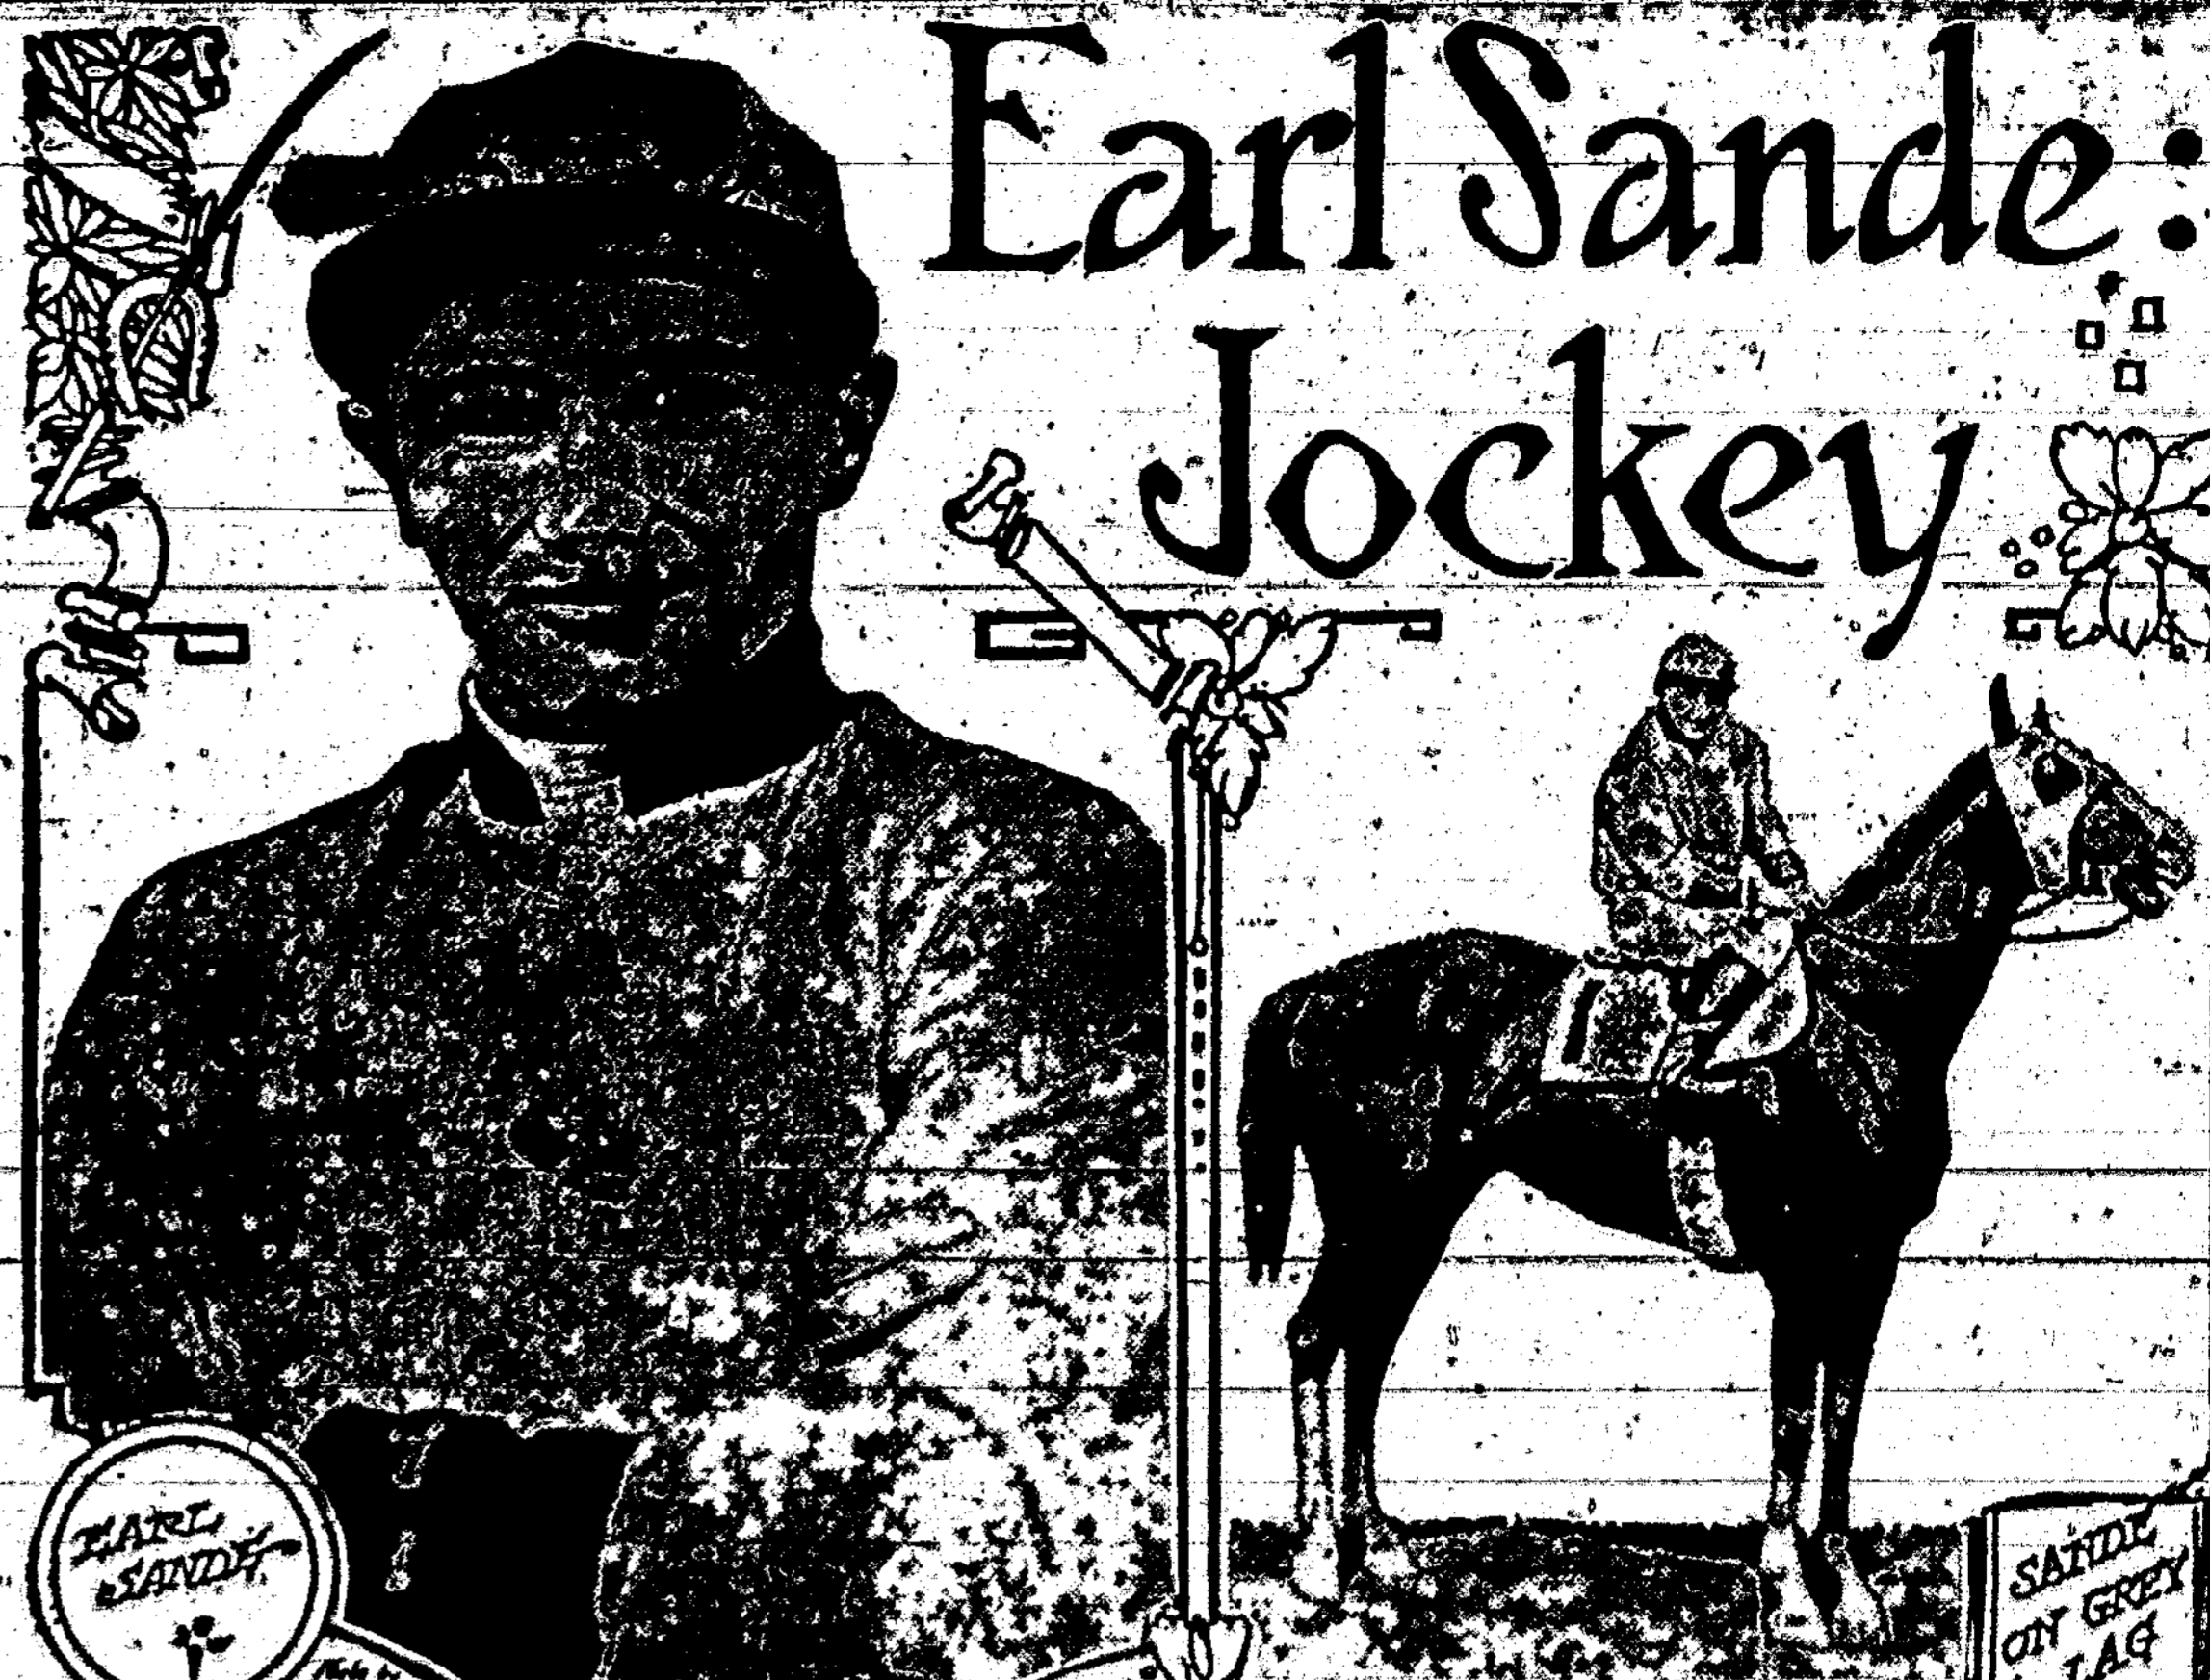

No reply. "What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

"What's the good?" said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog." "You're treating me as if I were a dog," said Satan. "You're treating me as if I were a dog."

Earl Sande, Jockey

Best American Race Rider Rant Away from Home to Win Fame and Fortune

ONE day in the spring of 1917 a man in a covered wagon drove by a country schoolhouse near American Falls, Idaho. Behind the wagon were two led horses. The driver stopped and called to a seventeen-year-old boy through the window. The boy came out. The man said the led horses were thoroughbreds and that he was going to Arizona to race them.

"Want to come along and ride 'em?" asked the man.

"Yes," answered the boy, who went back into the schoolhouse after his gun, climbed into the wagon and rode off.

Earl Sande was then 17, and Earl Sande is now talked about by horsemen and the racing public as the best of all the present-day jockeys of the American turf. Certainly, so far as the American racing public is concerned, his name is one to conjure with. Probably it is so exaggerated to say that he is the greatest of all the time because who could the thousands of spectators to flocked to the track as they lined the winners home to the barn, shake hands with the victors.

The figure of young Earl Sande is the popular idea of the worth of a jockey's mount. In 1922 Sande finished in sixth place in respect to the number of times won. This means a lot for Sande since only during the summer months. The first jockey who surpassed him in the number of winning mounts rode the whole year through, beginning and ending at his so-called winter track. His percentage of winning mounts is what tells the main story. The winners for 1922 in the order of number of winning mounts, with their percentages were as follows:

Earl Sande: Jockey

In January of 1915 he went to New Orleans, with a letter to a horseman, Joe Goodman, who gave him a job working horses. His first mount was Liberator, a 20-1 shot. Sande finished second. A few days later he won his first race, on Prince, and he beat Albert Johnson and L. Lyke, both leading jockeys.

Sande did well at New Orleans. One day he rode two winners, Mary's Beau and F. C. Cole—both at 50 to 1. At Hot Springs he had a bad fall on Bixen to One, which was seized with blind staggers, and a crushed foot laid him up quite a while. By way of Kentucky spring meetings he arrived at Saratoga. There trainer H. G. Boyd bought his contract and he rode for Commodore J. K. Ross, the successful Canadian owner. One day at Haver de Grace in the fall of 1919 Sande rode six winners out of seven mounts. Three of them his employer's horses. In the fall of 1920 he went to the Kentucky stable, owned by H. F. Schantz, the old man, and trained by Edward C. Hirsch.

This stable led the list of winning owners in 1922, with an 88.44 percentage, 40 thirds and 220 wins.

Sande has nothing of the spectacular or theatrical about him, contrasting sharply in this respect with such of the popular jockeys as Ted Simon and Harry Campbell. He is a well-cut, hard-working young fellow—and looks the part. His build and his face is exactly Scandinavian—he has brown and slightly wavy medium-length hair for a jockey. He has broad, square shoulders and large hands with short, strong fingers. There is nothing about him to attract attention in a crowd of young men of his age.

Sande can ride the year at 112 pounds. And at that he has his troubles to avoid taking on weight. His figure of frame than most jockeys, and riding at 112 pounds means careful dieting and strenuous road work. During the racing season he takes coffee and fruit for breakfast. Six days a week he has a cup of beef broth for lunch. He stays on beef and vegetables.

Other horses and times his more to a second. He is a strong salisher. He doesn't get rattled. He comes pretty near getting the best there is out of his mount.

Also Sande has nerve. Success and pride of place make many jockeys conservative about taking chances in a big and tangled field. A jockey has no terror for Sande; if there's a chance to get through, he takes it. He seems to be equally at home in a five-furlong dash of two-year-olds and in an all-around handicap over a distance of ground. So it is that if Sande's mount belongs in front at the finish it is usually there or thereabouts.

Sande does more than win on the best horses; he brings many an inferior mount home first by clever horsemanship. Some of his winning mounts are long-shots; there would be more of them but for the fact that his loyal and enthusiastic following almost invariably backs everything he rides. Both laws and grandstand say the same thing when Sande is up on a mount of unknown or doubtful quality.

"I don't know what chance the horse has, but I'll sure get a ride for my money."

And that's no small part of the battle these days on the American turf. The truth is that many owners of the thoroughbred and even critics of racing declare that horsemanship is today a lost art. They go so far as to say that there are only three or four great jockeys riding in America today and that the best of the others are mediocre compared with the riders of twenty years ago.

These experts attribute this mediocrity to our American increased specialization of two-year-old racing and special races at the expense of handicaps and stakes over a distance of ground. They say that these scrambles over a short course have destroyed all sense of pace and judgment in the average jockey. The boys ride a mile and a quarter race just as they do a five-furlong dash. Their one idea seems to be to get off as rapidly as possible and drive the mount frantically as far as it can stagger.

One of the most interesting devices used by the lumbermen along the upper reaches of the Ottawa river during the spring run of logs, is what is called a "rudder boom."

New Fall Styles Are in Limelight

Just here and there in exclusive little shops, in smart restaurants, shaded by the hood of a handsome limousine, one sees suggestions of new styles. They are a relief, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, because we have had so much of the sameness of summer. We have grown tired, before it is really time that we should, of the things that have made the past fashion season a success.

Often, at this between-fashion time, some styles are laughed which become, during the following months, quite the leading motifs. You see, at this time of year when new fashions are not crowding their way upon a woman's attention, she has time to think more carefully and to work out the why and wherefores of the becomingness of a certain garment or a hat or a pair of shoes. She has tested all of the vagaries of the current season and she knows by mid-season which of them came near satisfying her. Perhaps then she can perfect that most satisfactory one of all and try it out while she has time to ponder and develop until she has reached as near a conception of perfection as it is possible to achieve.

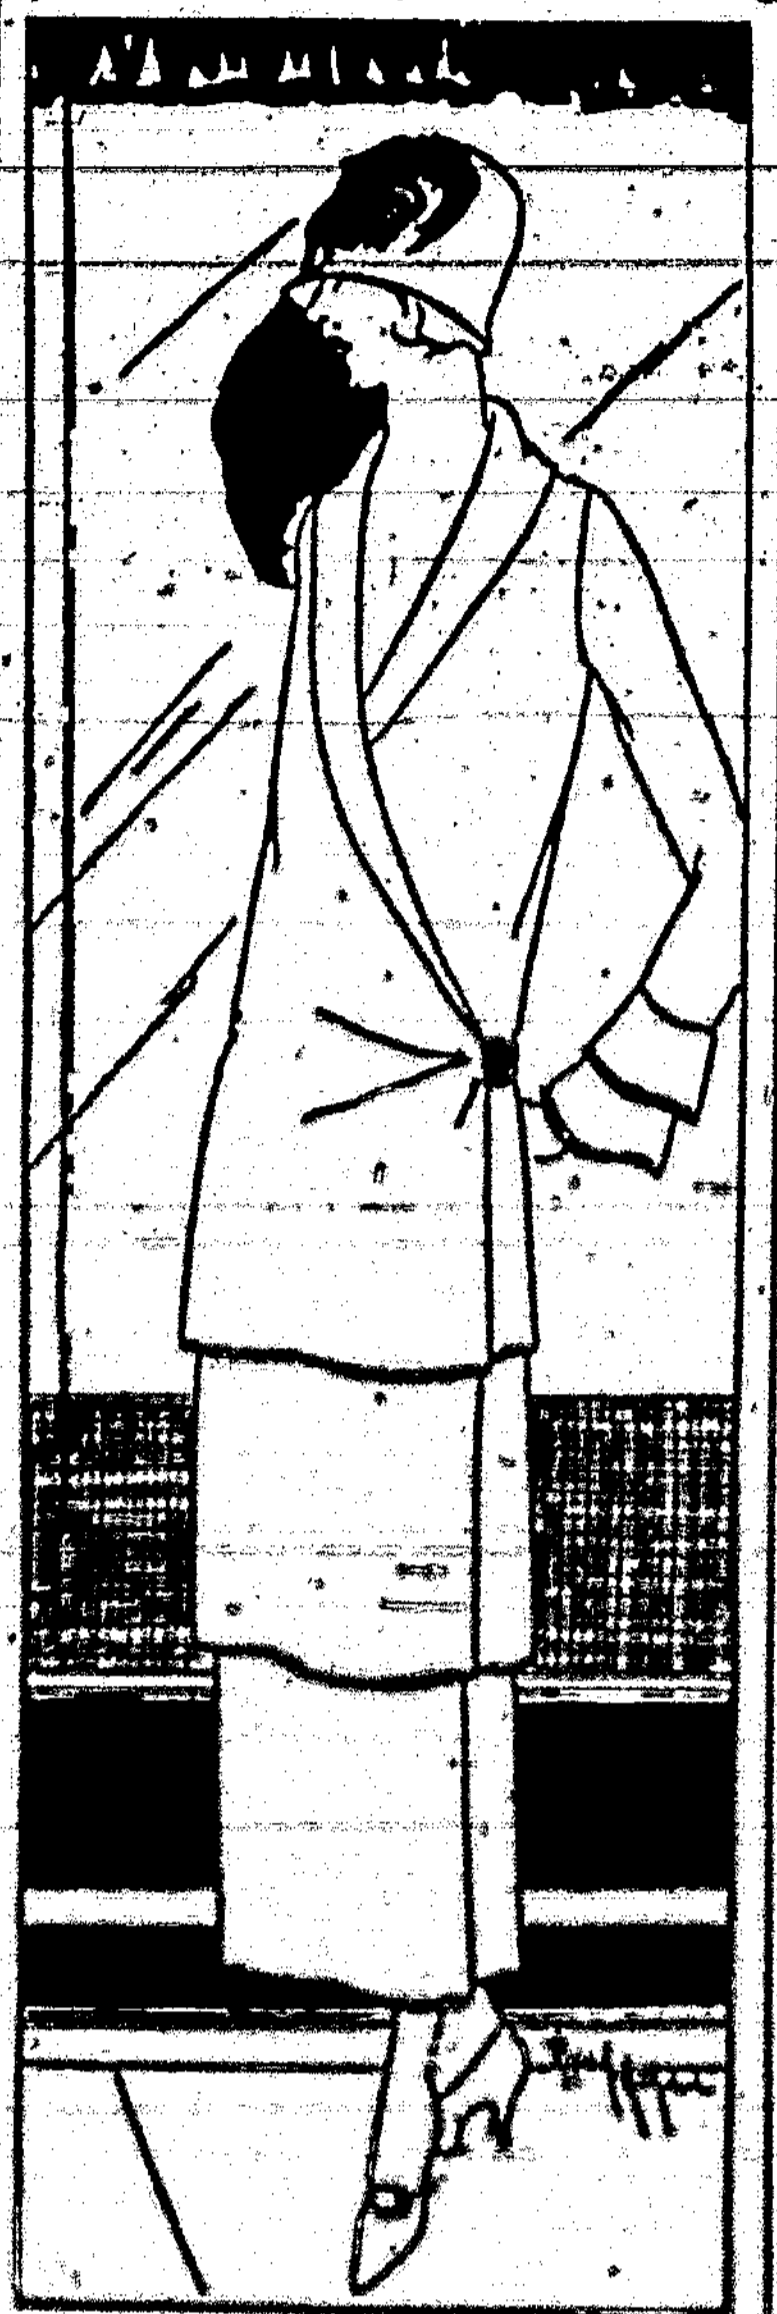

Let's take a glance at those newer styles which are making their appearance now. To begin with, the coat dress is surely going to be popular, and some of them are appearing in lightweight serges which have a certain style about them that is lovely to behold. They are simple wrap-around affairs, with every line of grace about them and with the very last degree of efficiency reached in their design. They hook with one large clasp over one hip. That is all the trouble they go to.

Building the Coat Dress.
A coat dress, when it is of the handsomest variety, is lined throughout with satin or soft crepe. Its skirt folds over, one side above the other, leaving the under portion with so much stuff and so much fullness that it covers the figure completely. As for skirts, they are built wholly to suit the lines of the individual figure, though the tiered variety can be said to hold sway for those who are tall and slender enough either by nature or good corseting to allow them to stand the crosswise trimming.

Then there are some coat frocks which have straight and quite lightly draping skirts. Some of these are tucked in rows of tiny tucks horizontally and others of them see the same arrangement of pin tucks to extend perpendicularly. The collars on these dresses are usually of the shawl variety, folding in simple fashion over a lace underbodice or showing under their rolling collars frills of coffee-pocket effects and extend again over the hands in quite tight-cut arrangements. But often the only divergence of the extreme straightness of the silhouette comes in the manner of shaping the cuffs to give that slight flare and interruption of the straightness of the line.

A most successful coat dress for the late summer is made of striped flannel, the wide stripings being cut to run crosswise of the garment. The dress is perfectly plain, closing at the side in a straight line to the neck, where a white flannel turn-over collar does everything there is in the way of trimming with the exception of a repetition of the same idea. Flannel, indeed, is an extremely smart late summer material. It is one of those things that carry in the season, is liked by a few, found wholly satisfactory, and then, in mid-season, is developed to greater heights of accomplishment than had ever been conceived for it when the fabric first was launched upon the market.

Alpaca Has Gained Favor.
Alpaca is another of these new summer materials that has grown in favor through the hot months. It was launched in Paris in the spring, and the early reports from fall showings of fashion dressmakers seem to show that the new has, if anything, gained in favor.

The dresses of heavy, knit crepe are the ones that held the attention of the shopper just now. They come in so well for just this between-season wear and they are bound to last through a whole winter and into the following spring, if they are happy and wisely chosen. The crepe is so soft and becoming in the fact that it will never cease to be a favorite with women who know how to dress ready smartly and who know how to get the best effect out of the clothes they choose as their own. One crepe dress goes such a long way that it cannot be disregarded in the planning of a wardrobe, and usually there is no better time to invest in one than between summer and fall, when the designers' attention is just naturally given to this sort of thing.

Fringed crepes, so say the cables from Paris, are to continue in favor with the couturiers over there. That is a signal, then, for us to go ahead and wear them with utter abandon, for they will be bound to last for several seasons more if they are well done and conform to the demands of the individual figure. One of these is a new design in its lines of tan and green, with spots of black scattered through the patterning. Then the fringed cape reaching over the shoulders is made of tan chiffon, with an edging of black ribbon to fit it in color to the gown's foundation print.

Next, after all, are about the most important considerations of the moment. You can buy a new hat and make a whole costume which had been hunched on the down-and-out path look like something fresh and new. A hat has subtle charms to change the appearance of a dress, and any woman who is essentially a good dresser and who knows clothes for what they are worth will never hesitate to put money into a hat at this time of the year.

colored lace that folds in interestingly with the line of the bodice section. The sleeves are fitted into armholes that follow the lines of the figure closely or else the armholes are squared off in that manner which has distinguished some of the best looking of the street frocks. Then the sleeves extend in a fitted line to the wrists, at which point they are apt to flare slightly either by means of applied ruffles matching those upon the skirt in many cases, or with shaped lower sections that merge into large

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

To Strengthen Panama Canal Defenses

WASHINGTON.—Various means of strengthening the defenses of the Panama canal are suggested in an official Navy department critique, prepared as a result of a study of last spring's maneuvers in Panama bay.

"In drawing up their estimates," says the critique, "both commanders considered the possibility of blocking the canal by an attack in force on the Pacific side defenses and locks."

This situation, coupled with other facts developed during the maneuvers, led the naval experts to reach rather definite conclusions as to the future needs of national defense in that quarter. The official critique concludes as follows:

"Some of the benefits to be gained from this problem can be summarized in certain conclusions as follows:

"There are certain well-defined weaknesses in the Panama canal defenses—these are:

"Susceptibility of certain vital parts to damage by bombs carried by aircraft.

"Grouping of the coast defense artillery too close together to prevent attacking vessels which have once gained control of the sea and air from reaching positions that will permit firing on the Miraflores locks.

"Lack of sufficient aircraft in canal defenses to insure immunity from attack by enemy bombers should a base be obtained within striking distance.

"The need for improving our fleet communications, both radio and visual.

"The necessity for balancing our fleet by the addition of:

"(a) Scouting cruisers.

"(b) Destroyer leaders.

"The necessity for having a sustained speed of at least 12 knots for:

"(a) Fleet submarines.

"(b) All auxiliaries that will accompany the fleet.

"The necessity for more maneuvers of this nature for fleet training.

"The necessity of denying to any possible enemy a base within aircraft striking distance of the canal.

"The desirability of studying the question of establishing by suitable treaties, aircraft base or bases at points within striking distance of the canal.

"The necessity for looking ahead as to the probable and possible developments in submarines and aircraft."

Development of Naval Shore Stations

RECOGNITION of the strategic importance of the Pacific is seen in the approval by the Navy department of recommendations of a naval board for development of American shore stations.

More than 67 per cent of all appropriations for bases and naval depots and air stations during the next 20 years will go to the construction of first and second lines of support for the navy in the Pacific under the provisions of the report which, through the signature of Acting Secretary Roosevelt, became the basic policy of the department. Among the important projects which the board and the department have given formal approval were:

Naval base, Honolulu, $42,528,000; naval base, San Francisco, $26,528,000; naval base, Pearl Sound, $23,668,000; naval base, Canal Zone, $17,818,000; naval base, San Diego, $17,101,000.

These projects, covering the western coast approaches, contemplate the expenditure of about $111,000,000 of the $125,488,000 aggregate of the entire program. Restrained by the $100,000,000 treaty from further development in the Philippines, Guam and Samoa, the board allotted only a small sum to these points for necessary repair work and recommended the concentration of defensive preparations in the Pacific to Hawaii with the immediate focus of development at Pearl Harbor. The experts agree that the completion of the program for Pearl Harbor was the most pressing now in view and set aside $2,000,000 for this one development.

The program for naval air stations, outlined in a supplemental report, called for expenditures of an additional $10,458,000 to be provided in 20 equal annual installments. This report also has been definitely approved by the department. It gave prominent place to air depots in the Hawaiian group, recommending the department ask for $200,000 in the next appropriation bill as the first installment. The Hawaiian main program would be given $2,000,000 in the next budget and annual allotments of about $8,000,000 for each year between 1925 and 1928 when the work would be completed.

With reference to the Atlantic and Gulf coasts the Willard report recommended the following expenditures in the next 20 years:

Naval base, New York, $12,450,000; naval base, Chesapeake bay, $6,750,000; naval base, Boston, $4,500,000; naval base, Key West, $1,450,000; naval base, Charleston, S. C., $1,514,000.

Completion of the Great Lakes training camp as the single interior depot for personnel replacement was approved at a total cost of $3,000,000.

Strong-Voiced Senate Next December

THE strong-voiced senate in an Albany will convene next December, says the Washington correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer in a dispatch to his newspaper.

Prominent and popular late introduced "Alpaca" and white-knitted straw clothing, the modern model, with a wide stripe enough to carry from the waist to the knee, and intended to be used in debate, according to specific advance notice, for "raising hell."

In former days, outstanding talkers in senate debate attracted general notice. "Fira-Alpaca" Joe Foraker of Ohio was known from end to end of the country. Even more recently the attitude of detached enthusiasm was unusual enough to give his subject in "Hill-hearing" Hiram Johnson of California.

This greatness is but a memory, when a glance is cast along "Tall tales" row in the new senate, where the talent of "Magnificent" Johnson of Massachusetts and "Whizzer" Brookhart of Iowa, with their associates credited with equal standing in the fellowship of temperance, is added to that of the colleague of larger experience and equal fighting power, who has been waiting for the first of them all.

"Fighting Bob" La Follette of Wisconsin.

These newcomers to whom La Follette has been backing to come all beside him are arriving to do what the people of their states want them to do—sift up the dust in the senate and make the rafters ring with demands for a new deal loud enough to be heard back home without wires or wireless.

Perhaps never before has the senate untried at one time so much fighting power and capacity for making all the old bones of government procedure. It is no more the "unholy trinity" of the senate known to Marcus Alphonso Hanna, and even the late Bobo Penrose. All right organization, reverence for the established order, unanimous support of every "party measure" were characteristic of them.

Unpublished Washington Letter Found

A LETTER written by George Washington about a month after the surrender of Cornwallis, and believed to have been unpublished, has been made public by Secretary Weeks. The letter was discovered by accident in old records of the house of representatives, and a photostatic copy was presented to Mr. Weeks by William Tyler Page, clerk of the house.

The letter was addressed to Robert H. Harris, who had been a member of Washington's staff and was a lawyer of distinction, who afterward refused, on account of ill health, a place on the Supreme court. The letter reads:

"Mount Vernon, 15 Nov. '81.

"Dear Sir:

"A few days previous to my leaving the Camp before York I was favored with your letter of the 11th—Thinking I should see you on my return, I postponed acknowledging the receipt of it till now that I despair of that pleasure being on the eve of my departure for Philadelphia without making my stay on the road except one day at Annapolis if the Govt. should be there.

"I desired Doct. Draper who came to this place with me on Tuesday last and proposed being at Perth Amboy next day, to let you know I should stay a few days at home and should be glad to see you. He possibly did not go there—or you might be attending the courts—

"I thank you for your kind congratulations on the capitulation of Cornwallis—it is an interesting event and may be productive of much good if properly improved—but if it should be the means of relaxation and shall us into supineness and security it had better not have happened—Great Britain for some time past has been encouraged by the impolicy of our conduct to continue the war—and should there be an interference of European politics in her favor, peace may be further removed from us than we expect, while one thing we are sure of and that is, that the only way to obtain peace is to be prepared for war—policy, interest, economy—should be to stimulate the States to fit the continental battalions, and provide the means of supporting them—I hope the present favorable moment for doing it will not be neglected.

"Mr. Custer's death has given much distress in this family—I congratulate you on your late change and am,

"D. Sir,

"Yours most obed. &

Young Women of Holland Understand That Americans Treat Their Wives Well.

Thirty-five young women from Holland stepped foot on American shores the other day admitting they are seeking "kind husbands" because they heard that American men are good to their wives. Some American wives may be inclined to enjoy a silent laugh over this innocence displayed by the Hollanders, but after the first humorous aspect of the situation has passed, most of those who have enjoyed the comedy will be inclined to believe after all that there is much merit in what these foreign women say about the husbands of America, observes the Chicago Commercial.

When one sits down and considers the lot of women in many countries of Europe, and reflects upon the limited opportunities which they possess for enjoying life, it ought to be a source of mutual satisfaction both to husbands and wives to America that they are living in a country where a higher standard of marital relationship obtains than in many foreign nations.

Come on CARRIZOZO!

An occasion for the richest savings! Merchandise prices forced "way down."
Yes, they hit bottom with a thud!

CARRIZOZO TRADING CO. Stages Bold Spectacular Price Butchery.

The Plain Unvarnished Facts:

Why all this merciless and neryy price cutting? Well, folks, it's simply this: The usual way in announcing a sale is to give it some Decoy Name, and then try to justify it by some Makeshift excuse, but in most cases the same motive exists. We have no particular name for this sale, but we have a reasonable reason. Our store is overstocked, we must unload, we must have money, so we have priced our merchandise so as to accomplish all of the above in just Seven Short Selling Days. "It's housecleaning and money raising time" here, and we are going to do it quickly. We have put such shockingly low prices on our entire stock that our shelves will be speedily stripped. It will be a landslide of brilliant unmatched bargains.
