OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 23

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1923

Carrizozo School Notes

(By Sept. E. R. Cole)

Who was it that bet on the El Paso girls in basketball? Yes, we know who they were; and they lost their money. Good! Anyone who has not enough "patriotism" to back his own, his home team ought to lose and we are very glad of it.

The Carrizozo High School Basketball Team has made a wonderful record this year. The girls have played over a dozen games and won each and all of them. The crowning acts were making a tie for the championship of Eastern New Mexico and defeating El Paso twice—once on El Paso's own field. And all this time the team has complied with each and all of the rules of the State Association. Especially have they done their school work well, passed in all their studies every month of the school year up to date. Carrizozo may well be proud of this group of girls. Several of them will be graduated this year and you may be sure that there is not a college in the country that would not be delighted to receive them as students.

Right here we wish to express our thanks and appreciation to that splendid good friend and backer of the team, Mrs. Truman Spencer, who, at all times, has been ready and willing to help the girls. For the past three years or more Mrs. Spencer has helped coach and drill the team, go long distances to act as umpire or referee, and do anything for the good of the team. The girls of the team, and, indeed, all of us fully appreciate all Mrs. Spencer has done and will ever hold her in kindest remembrance.

Mr. Rolland, and others who have always backed the team to the limit, also receive our deepest thanks.

Mr. Cazier, the coach who has worked so hard and faithfully for its success, and on whom so much of the success of the team depended, has had our commendation at times in this column, and should receive his meed of praise. He knows how to coach and we hope he will give as strong a team next year. Mr. Cazier

Killed by Train

Lorenzo Guebarra, Jr., was killed by a train Monday night between Oscura and Three Rivers. The hour of the accident is not known, nor is it known just how it happened. Early on Tuesday morning the section foreman discovered the body, cut in two, one part laying between the rails, the other part beside the track. The sheriff's office was notified, and Deputies Cole and Straley went to Oscura and notified Justice Ranniger, who secured a coroner's jury which held an inquest. The body was brought to Carrizozo and interred in the local cemetery yesterday.

The deceased was a boy of 17 years, son of Lorenzo Guebarra, well known citizen of our town. The young man left here a few days prior to his death for El Paso, and it is supposed he was returning home and fell from the train with the result as stated above. The father and other members of the family have the sympathy of many friends.

CARRIZOZO DEFEATS EL PASO

The girls' basketball team of the Carrizozo High School defeated El Paso High School 32 to 29 in one of the closest games of the season. The game was a thriller—both teams fighting hard till the last whistle. The El Paso team was in the lead until the last eight minutes of play, when the Carrizozo forwards scored three field goals in rapid succession, cinching the game.

The Carrizozo team has won eleven games and tied one, and by reason of their victories claim the Girls' Basketball Championship of the Southwest.

Scoring for Carrizozo

Jeanette Johnson, 11 field goals and four foul goals; Lois Jones, 3 field goals.

Scoring for El Paso

Margaret Mulcahy, 10 field goals and 3 foul goals; Katherine Young, 1 field goal and 4 foul goals.

The team wishes to sincerely thank all persons who by their contributions made it possible for the team to make the trip to El Paso. BRYAN CAZIER, Coach.

Educational News

(By Mrs. Louise H. Coe)

The attendance banner was awarded again to the Corona High School, their report for the month of February showing 100 per cent attendance. This makes the third consecutive time the Corona High School has won this banner. However, they will only be able to keep it until March 15, as Miss Carrie Wicker, teacher of the school in district No. 25, reports 100 per cent attendance for the month of February, also; therefore, she is entitled to the banner for one-half of the month.

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association will meet in Carrizozo March 30th and 31st. All county teachers attending this meeting will be given Friday, March 30th. Our State Superintendent and many other prominent educators of the State, as well as local speakers, will be here to deliver addresses to teachers and others who are interested in this meeting. The public is cordially invited to attend these meetings. A copy of the program will appear in all the county papers next week.

The Corona school was visited this month. All work was progressing nicely. The school has very modern equipped Domestic Science rooms and is doing splendid work in this department under the able supervision of Miss Ruby Hylbert.

Miss Belle Norton, at one of the Carolina schools, has planned an extensive Easter program to be given April 2nd. All adjoining schools and the County School Superintendent have been invited to take part in this program.

March 22nd and 23rd are the dates set for the first State 8th Grade Promotion Examination. This office is mailing 120 sets of these questions to the various county schools, including the Carrizozo school. The next and last State 8th Grade Examination will be held April 26th and 27th.

"The Prodigal Judge"

The most lovable character of fiction comes to life in the great American picture, "The Prodigal Judge." The film version is based on the famous novel by Vaughan Kester, and is said to be such a perfect picturization of the story that it has been called "The Rembrandt of the Screen." The title of the film, reproducing as it does this interesting story, strongly indicates its merit and invites a vision of the scenes described in the story. It will be shown at the Crystal Theatre for two nights, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 20th and 21st. The price of admission is 25 cents and 50 cents.

Prominent Citizen Dies

Clarence Spence, a prominent ranchman and citizen of Carrizozo, died in an El Paso hospital Sunday night. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon and the remains were interred in an El Paso cemetery. The deceased had been in an El Paso hospital the past two months, and during that period he was, at times, near death's door, would rally time and again, and the family felt hopeful of his recovery until the dissolution which came at the end of a period of intense suffering. His difficulty grew out of a series of carbuncles, appearing one after another, until the poison from the eruptions entered the circulation, necessitating numerous operations. The system became so thoroughly saturated with the poison that treatment failed to eradicate it, and death followed.

The deceased was born in the state of Iowa, and was in his sixtieth year. He came to New Mexico in 1908, locating in Carrizozo. He engaged in the ranching business and was a well known cattle and sheep man of this county. He leaves a wife and five children, three sons and two daughters. He is also survived by four brothers, two of whom reside in El Paso, one here and one in Iowa—and a sister, for many years a resident of Carrizozo, but who now makes her home in Iowa.

To Hang at Estancia

The state supreme court has affirmed the district court of Torrance county, which rendered a verdict of first degree murder against Francisco Vaisa, and has fixed April 6 as the date for the execution.

Vaisa was one of the five men charged with the murder of Anton Koury, a merchant at Duran, on September 3, 1921. Three of the convicted men have been hung at Estancia, Vaisa took an appeal, while the fifth connected with the crime, Esquiuel Munchacha, escaped to Mexico.

Sentenced to Death

W. G. La Favors and C. H. Smelcer, the two men convicted last month at Alamogordo for killing Sheriff Rutheford, have since been sentenced by Judge Mechem to hang April 6. It is stated that a motion for appeal was made, but nothing is definitely known as to its status.

Ladies' Aid Society

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will meet with Mrs. Carlotta Jones on March 20. All members are requested to be present.

"SHIELD HIM?"

Gabriel Warden, Seattle capitalist, tells his butler, who is expecting a caller, to be admitted without question. His informant's wife of danger that threatens him if he pursues a course he considers the only honorable one. Warden leaves the house in his car and meets a man whom he takes into the machine. When the car returns home, Warden is found dead, murdered, and alone. The caller, a young man, has been at Warden's house, but leaves unobserved. Bob Conroy, conductor, receives orders to hold train for a party. Five men and a girl board the train, the eastern express. The father of the girl, Mr. Dorne, is the person for whom the train was held. Philip D. Eaton, a young man, also boarded the train. Dorne tells his daughter and his secretary, Don Avery, to find out what they can concerning him. The two make Eaton's acquaintance. Dorne is found nearly dead from a murderous assault. A surgeon operates. Dorne is revealed as Basil Santoline, blind, and a power in the financial world as the adviser of "big interests." Eaton is suspected and questioned. He refuses information about himself and admits he was the caller at Warden's house. Eaton pleads with Harriet Santoline to withhold judgment, telling her he is in serious danger, though innocent of the crime against her father. He feels the girl believes him. Santoline recoils suddenly to question Eaton, who refuses his identity. The transfer requires Eaton to accompany him to the Santoline home as a ward prisoner. Eaton meets a resident of the house, Wallace Blackford, and Mildred Davis, a stenographer, with whom he is acquainted, though they conceal the fact. Eaton's mission is to secure certain documents which are vital to his interests. Harriet tells Eaton she and Donald Avery act as "eyes" to Santoline. While walking with her, men in an automobile deliberately attempt to run Eaton down. The girl recognizes one of the men as having been on the train.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

"To kill him, Harriet? How do you know?"

She caught herself. "I—I don't know, Father. He certainly meant to injure Mr. Eaton. When I said kill him, I was telling only what I thought."

"That is better. I think so too."

"That he meant to kill Mr. Eaton?"

"Yes."

She watched her father's face; often when relating things to him, she was aware from his expression that she was telling him only something he already had figured out and expected or even knew; she felt that now.

"Father, did you expect Mr. Eaton to be attacked?"

"Expect? Not that exactly; it was possible; I suspected something like this might occur."

"And you did not warn him?"

The blind man's hands sought each other on the coverlet and clasped together. "It was not necessary to warn him, Harriet; Mr. Eaton already knew. Who was in the car?"

"Three men."

"Had you seen any of them before?"

"Yes, one—the man who drove."

"Where?"

"On the train."

The color on Santoline's face grew brighter. "Describe him, dear."

He waited while she called together her recollections of the man.

"I can't describe him very fully, Father," she said. "He was one of the people who had berths in the forward sleeping car. I can recall seeing him only when I passed through the car—and once in the diner."

"That is interesting," said Santoline.

"What, Father?"

"That in five days upon the train you saw the man only three times."

"You mean he must have kept out of sight as much as possible?"

"Have you forgotten that I asked you to describe him, Harriet?"

She checked herself. "Height about five feet five," she said, "broad-shouldered, very heavily set; I remember he impressed me as being unusually muscular. His hair was black; I can't recall the color of his eyes; his cheeks were blue with a heavy beard closely shaved. I remember his face was prognathous, and his clothes were spotted with dropped food. It seems hard for me to recall him, and I can't describe him very well."

"But you are sure it was the same man in the motor?"

"Yes. He seemed an animal sort of person, small, strong, and not particularly intelligent. It seems hard for me to remember more about him than that."

"That is interesting."

"What?"

"That it is hard for you to remember him very well."

"Why, Father?"

Her father did not answer. "The other people in the motor?" he asked. "I can't describe them. I—I was excited about Mr. Eaton."

"Thank you, dear. Bring Eaton to me."

He had never, he said, to be

"I'll go myself," she said.

She went out into the hall and closed the door behind her; she waited until she heard the approaching steps of the man summoned by Santoline's bell; then, going to meet him, she sent him to call Eaton in his rooms, and she still waited until the man came back and told her Eaton had already left his rooms and gone downstairs. She dismissed the man and went to the head of the stairs, but her steps slowed there and stopped. She knew that the blind man's thought in regard to Eaton had taken some immense stride; but she did not know what that stride had been, or what was coming now when her father saw Eaton.

She went on slowly down the stairs, and when halfway down, she saw Eaton in the hall below her. He was standing beside the table which held the bronze antique vase; he seemed to have taken something from the vase and to be examining it. She halted again to watch him; then she went on, and he turned at the sound of her footsteps. She could see, as she approached him, what he had taken from the vase, but she attached no importance to it; it was only a black button from a woman's glove—one of her own, perhaps, which she had dropped without noticing. He tossed it indifferently toward the open fireplace as he came toward her.

"Father wants to see you, Mr. Eaton," she said.

He looked at her intently for an instant and seemed to detect some strangeness in her manner and to draw himself together; then he followed her up the stairs.

CHAPTER XIII

It Grows Plain.

Basil Santoline's bedroom was so nearly sound-proof that anything going on in the room could not be heard in the hall outside it, even close to the double doors. Eaton, as they approached these doors, listened vainly, trying to determine whether anyone was in the room with Santoline; then he quickened his step to bring him beside Harriet.

"One moment, please, Miss Santoline," he urged.

She stopped. "What is it, you want?"

"Your father has received some answer to the inquiries he has been having made about me?"

"I don't know, Mr. Eaton."

"Is he alone?"

"Yes."

Eaton thought a minute. "That is all I wanted to know, then," he said.

Harriet opened the outer door and knocked on the inner one. Eaton heard Santoline's voice at once calling them to come in, and as Harriet opened the second door, he followed her into the room.

"Am I to remain, Father?" she asked.

"Yes," Santoline commanded.

Eaton waited while she went to a chair at the foot of the bed and seated herself—her clasped hands resting on the footboard and her chin upon her hands—in a position to watch both Eaton and her father while they talked; then Eaton sat down.

"Good morning, Eaton," the blind man greeted him.

"Good morning, Mr. Santoline," Eaton answered.

Santoline was lying quietly upon his back, his head raised on the pillow, his arms above the bed-covers, his finger-tips touching with the fingers spread.

"You recall, of course, Eaton, our conversation on the train," Santoline said evenly.

"Yes."

"I want to call your attention in a certain order to some of the details of what happened on the train. You had rather a close call this morning, did you not?"

"Rather, I was careless."

"You were careless?" Santoline smiled derisively. "Perhaps you were—in one sense. In another, however, you have been very careful. Now, you have been careful to act as though the attempt to run you down could not have been a deliberate attack; you were careful to call it an accident; you were careful not to recognize any of the three men in the motor."

"I had no chance to recognize any of them, Mr. Santoline," Eaton replied easily. "I did not see the car coming; I was thrown from my feet; when I got up, it was too far away for me to recognize anyone."

"Perhaps not; but were you surprised when my daughter recognized one of them as having been on the train with us?"

Eaton hesitated, but answered almost immediately:

"Your question doesn't exactly fit the case. I thought Miss Santoline had made a mistake."

"But you were not surprised; no. What would have been a surprise to you, Eaton, would have been—if you had had a chance to observe the man—none of them had been on the train?"

Eaton started and felt that he had erred. "How many did Santoline know?" he asked. "The blind man recognized an Eaton, didn't he?"

"Santoline recognized a Santoline," he said. "I don't know who he recognized, or how he recognized him. Or when I recall that the blind man recognized a Santoline, I don't know who he recognized, or how he recognized him."

"You Understand Already," Santoline Asserted.

of the passengers. Not only this, but—and this seemed quite conclusive to them—you admitted that you were the one who had called upon Warden the evening of his murder. It seemed likely, too, that you were the only person on the train aside from my daughter and Avery who knew who I was; for I had had reason to believe from the time when I first heard you speak when you boarded the train, that you were someone with whom I had previously, very briefly come in contact; and I had asked my daughter to find out who you were, and she had tried to do so, but without success."

Eaton wet his lips.

"Also," the blind man continued, "there was a telegram which definitely showed that there was some connection, unknown to me, between you and me, as well as a second—or rather a previous—suspicious telegram in cipher, which we were able to translate."

Eaton leaned forward, impelled to speak; but as Santoline clearly detected this impulse and waited to hear what he was going to say, Eaton reconsidered and kept silent.

"You were going to say something about that telegram in cipher?" Santoline asked.

"No," Eaton denied.

"I think you were; and I think that a few minutes ago when I said you were not surprised by the attempt made today to run you down, you were also going to speak of it; but that attempt makes clear the meaning of the telegram. It seemed to me clear to me before you understood. I said only that you were careless and followed. It did not say that you were followed. I could not believe that; there was several possible reasons why you might be followed—"

"You assume that, Mr. Santoline," he asserted, "because—?" He checked himself and altered his sentence. "Will you tell me why you assume that?"

"That that would have surprised you? Yes; that is what I called you in here to tell you."

As Santoline waited a moment before going on, Eaton watched him anxiously. The blind man turned himself on his pillows so as to face Eaton more directly.

"Just ten days ago," he said evenly and dispassionately, "I was found unconscious in my berth—Section Three of the rear-most sleeper—on the transcontinental train, which I had taken with my daughter and Avery at Seattle. I had been attacked—assaulted during my sleep some time in that first night that I spent on the train—and my condition was serious enough so that for three days afterward I was not allowed to receive any of the particulars of what had happened to me. When I did finally learn them, I naturally attempted to make certain deductions as to who it was that had attempted to murder me, and why; and ever since, I have continued to occupy myself with those questions. I am going to tell you a few of my deductions. If you fancy I am at fault in my conclusions, wait until you discover your error."

Santoline waited an instant; Eaton thought it was to allow him to speak if he wanted to, but Eaton merely waited.

"The first thing I learned," the blind man went on, "was the similarity of the attack on me to the more successful attack on Warden, twelve days previous, which had caused his death. The method of the two attacks was the same; the conditions surrounding them were very similar. The desperate nature of the two attacks, and their almost identical method, made it practically certain that they originated at the same source and were carried out—probably by the same hand and for the same purpose."

"Mrs. Warden's statement to me of her interview with her husband a half-hour before his murder, made it certain that the object of the attack on him was to 'remove' him. It seemed almost inevitable, therefore, that the attack on me must have been for the same purpose."

"I found that a young man—yourself—had acted so suspiciously both before and after the attack on me that both Avery and the conductor in charge of the train had become convinced that he was my assailant, and had segregated him from the rest of the passengers. Knowing that, Eaton—knowing that, I want to call your attention to the peculiarity of our mutual positions on the train. You had asked for and were occupying Section Three in the third sleeper, in order—I assume—and I believe, correctly—to avoid being put in the same car with me. In the night, the second sleeper—the car next in front of yours—was cut off from the train and left behind. That made me occupy in relation to the forward part of the train exactly the same position as you had occupied before the car ahead of you had been cut out. I was in Section Three in the third sleeper from the front."

Eaton stared at Santoline, fascinated; what had been only vague, half felt, half formed with himself, was becoming definite, tangible, under the blind man's reasoning. His hands closed instinctively, in his emotion. "What do you mean?"

"You understand already," Santoline asserted. "The attack made on me was meant for you. Someone stealing through the cars from the front to the rear of the train and currying in his mind the location of Section Three in the third car, struck through the curtains by mistake at me instead of you. Who was that, Eaton?"

"I don't know," Eaton answered.

"You mean you prefer to shield him?"

"Shield him?"

"That is what you are doing, is it not? For, even if you don't know the man directly, you know in whose cause and under whose direction he murdered Warden—and why and for whom he is attempting to murder you."

Eaton remained silent.

In his intensity, Santoline had lifted himself from his pillows. "Who is that man?" he challenged. "And what is that connection between you and me which, when the attack found and disabled me instead of you, told him that—in spite of his mistake—his assault had been accomplished? told him that, if I was dying, a repetition of the attack against you was unnecessary?"

Eaton knew that he had grown very pale; Harriet must be aware of the effect Santoline's words had on him, but he did not dare look at her now to see how much she was comprehending.

"I don't understand." He fought to compose himself.

"It is perfectly plain," Santoline said patiently. "It was believed at first that I had been fatally hurt; it was even reported at one time—I understand—that I was dead; only intimate friends have been informed of my actual condition. Yesterday, for the first time, the newspapers announced the certainty of my recovery; and today an attempt to attack you is a sign of my daughter."

"But—"

"You are merely challenging my deductions: Will you reply to my questions?—tell me the connection between us—who you are?"

"No."

"Come here!"

"What?" said Eaton.

"Come here—close to me, beside the bed."

Eaton hesitated, and then obeyed.

"Bend over!"

Eaton stooped, and the blind man's hands seized him. Instantly Eaton withdrew.

"Wait!" Santoline warned. "If you do not stay, I shall call help." One hand went to the bell beside his bed.

Harriet had risen; she met Eaton's gaze warningly and nodded to him to comply. He bent again over the bed. He felt the blind man's sensitive fingers searching his features, his head, his throat. Eaton gazed at Santoline's face while the fingers were examining him; he could see that Santoline was merely finding confirmation of an impression already gained from what he had been told him about Eaton. Santoline showed nothing more than this confirmation; certainly he did not recognize Eaton. More than this, Eaton could not tell.

"Now your hands," Santoline ordered.

Eaton extended one hand and then the other; the blind man felt over them from wrists to the tips of the fingers; then he let himself sink back against the pillows, absorbed in thought.

"You may go," Santoline said at last.

"Go?" Eaton asked.

"You may leave the room. Blackford will meet you downstairs."

Santoline reached for the house telephone beside his bed—receiver and transmitter on one light bar—and gave directions to have Blackford await Eaton in the hall below.

"You yourself will assume charge of the correspondence of which I speak, Daughter."

It Broke His Fall.

More Lightfoot, one of the best hoodlums on the job, lost his footing and fell to the street, four stories below.

Does it on his head, struck the cement pavement, and went through to the basement.

When the policeman went to the basement, expecting to find him, he found still, he was not lying on the ground.

"Great news," said the policeman.

"What?"

"He's dead," said the policeman.

"What?"

"He's dead," said the policeman.

"Bah! I've made some of my best shots with my eyes shut."

Find What CANADA has to offer YOU!

If your dream of success seems like a hopeless ambition, if you are discouraged trying to get ahead on high priced land, if your present location fails to give you opportunity, there is a new deal for you, a new chance in the fertile, virgin farms of Western Canada, where wheat produces 20 to 40 bushels to the acre, where the 1922 crop was biggest in history, where oats, barley and hay and fodder crops are the basis of a great dairy industry, and a man's work brings him success and prosperity.

Low Priced Land—the Last Great West

In Western Canada you still can buy virgin prairie land at $15 to $30 per acre, on long terms if desired, near to towns, railroads, etc.—land such as has for many years produced the world's best wheat, oats, barley, hay, etc. in the ground ever.

Taxes Favor the Farmer

The tax laws of Western Canada encourage the producing farmer. The tax on land is reduced when it is brought under cultivation—while on your buildings, machinery, improvements, personal property, automobiles, there is no tax at all. A single crop is often worth more, acre for acre, than the cost of the land.

Rent Now—Buy Later

Pay Out of Profits

Canada welcomes the industrious settler. What you have here isn't so important as your capital in mind, or your energy and your present holdings to improve, and if possible, to sell. Make a good thing out of it. Rent now, buy later. It's the best way to get started. You can get a good start on a small plot of land, and buy later, if you wish, from successful settlers on very liberal terms—some cases with option of purchase.

Buy on Exceptional Terms—32 Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land on a long term, the Canadian Colonization Association has been organized with headquarters at Winnipeg, Manitoba. It is a non-profit organization, and its object is to help settlers in Canada. It will sell you land on a long term, and you can pay for it in 32 years. It will also help you to get a good start on a small plot of land, and buy later, if you wish, from successful settlers on very liberal terms—some cases with option of purchase.

We Help Find Your Opportunity

The Canadian Colonization Association maintains information by means of its Canadian Colonization Association, which is a non-profit organization, and its object is to help settlers in Canada. It will sell you land on a long term, and you can pay for it in 32 years. It will also help you to get a good start on a small plot of land, and buy later, if you wish, from successful settlers on very liberal terms—some cases with option of purchase.

TOURIST TRAFFIC TO BREAK ALL RECORDS

Denver.—"Unprecedented tourist travel the coming summer throughout the Rocky mountain region and especially in Colorado may be confidently looked for," declared Archibald
Fries, vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in charge of traffic and commercial development departments, who is making a nation-wide tour for the purpose of investigating general business conditions and visiting agencies not properly on the railroad itself, and who was in Denver
the other day.

Mr. Fries said that the American public was coming to realize the value of Rocky mountain playgrounds as never before, and that the tourist bureaus, railroads and the like which were responsible for this education of the public were greatly to be praised.

Railroads are rapidly overcoming the car shortage which so embarrassed
the Colorado farmer last year, he said,
more capital being expended for locomotives and other rolling stock than in any previous year of railroad history. Mr. Fries predicted that by June 1 the Baltimore & Ohio will be in as good a position for handling its share of the nation's traffic as at any time in its history.

Faces Trial for Polygamy.
Grand Rapids, Mich.—A warrant charging polygamy has been issued here for the arrest of J. Frank Fetterhoff, 77 years old, and said to be a former lay preacher in a local Methodist church. Mrs. Ida Van Liew
Fetterhoff, the complainant, charged Fetterhoff was married to two other women.

Denver.—Treasurers of the sixty-three counties in Colorado have filed returns with the Colorado tax commission showing that in 1923 the state will receive the sum of $42,000,321.00
in taxes. This includes state, county, municipal and school taxes, and is a decrease from 1922 of $234,071.50.

Bureau Reports Portray Prosperity.
Washington.—Evidence of a rising tide of prosperity was portrayed by two different government branches.
The federal reserve board, making public its monthly report on finance and commerce, told of increases taking place in the production volume of commodities generally, while the Department of Labor reported decreased unemployment, heightening demand for labor in nearly all industrial centers and an impending labor shortage
in many areas.

Kills Masher Who Ignored Warnings.
Kansas City, Mo.—Mrs. Frank Merritt, wife of a policeman, shot and killed Ralph Schell as he stepped from an automobile in front of a filling station here, according to a statement made to police by Merritt. Schell formerly was a member of the police department. The slain man had repeatedly annoyed Mrs. Merritt and had been warned to cease paying her extraneous, Merritt further stated.

1924's Very Yellowish This Year
The yellowish tint of the 1924 season is due to the fact that the sun has been unusually bright and hot during the winter months. This has caused the leaves of the trees to turn a pale yellowish color. This is a natural phenomenon and is not caused by any disease or insect pest. The yellowish tint will disappear as the weather becomes cooler and the leaves turn a deeper green.

Short Coats in Winsome Colors

You know perfectly that longing
which comes upon you at this season of the year, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, for more clothes or for, at least, one new outfit—something that is fresh and inspiring and out of the beaten track.
They can talk all they please about women coming down to more-uniform dress. After all that particular way of expression is not a part of their natures. They long, by instinct, for a change and if fashion is not presenting something for their gaze then they go out and hunt with all their might
for it.

At this particular season there seems to be a decided tendency toward the brilliantly colorful things—those that shine out on the streets and in the restaurants. Something perhaps gathered from oriental craftsmanship or from the embroideries and woven designs of the peasants of various countries. Women are becoming quite fearless about wearing, upon the streets, these costumes which are not afraid to show bright tones in their making, and a more or less informal cut and construction about the way they are made. They slip into all sorts of peasant lines and they get away from the hard tailored effects which have obsessed us in the past.
They are, in fact, a combination of all those lines and phases which we women love most and in which we are supremely happy, once we decide to adopt them as our own style.

We started out with the jacket and the separate skirt. We were a little dubious at the outset, but we have come more and more into that style of expression until we have found ourselves quite miraculously attuned to the thing that it represents. We have lost our fear of the bizarre. We have stepped into an unrestricted area of self-expression.

Taking on New Life.
Some women are not aware of the fact that they can never really express themselves in browns and dark blues that are totally unadorned. In donning those colors they are merely suppressing their more vivid selves and, when they do actually decide to come out in
the other day.

Embroidered Coat in Brilliant Colors
Does for Sports or Street Wear.

to the open and wear the shades that they really like, they find themselves taking on new life and attracting new friends and finding new experiences that give them the utmost relief.

It is a well-known trick to wear, at first, colors of startling hues while within the confines of one's own home.
In this way you become accustomed to a certain abandon in the way of color and line. Then, gradually, you find yourself just naturally translating those effects into the clothes of everyday life—those which you wear while associating with your most conventional friends and acquaintances. You do it, by this means, in all innocence, and when a stray remark reaches your ears
about how gay you are becoming, you smile in a superior manner, knowing all the time that you yourself are finding enough satisfaction in that expression to make up for any stray criticism that may meet your friends' attention. Those who have not tried wearing bright colors do not know what a vast amount of satisfaction
they can manage to derive from them.
They fail to realize that their days
could be brighter and more interesting if they, too, would decide to adopt the more vivid modes, but they do not have enough judgment left to realize that the sparkling quality of the bright embroideries and patterns are something of a force in the world.
They would not be realizing so great a pleasure because of their own staid mode.

force is the realm of dress. So many women like them that it is impossible to say they will not last. The evidences are all to the contrary. Everything looks as though they will "carry on."

On Background of Blue.
A coat that is made of one of those bright new all-over embroideries that have taken the world of fashion by storm, happens to be done on a background of darkest blue, over which are imposed colored threads, ranging through the shades of purple, green, and yellow—anything, in fact, that helps the brilliancy of the foundation to show to its best advantage, and that makes of the coat the most colorful of affairs. The hat carries out the same tones. The fact is that it is made of the same material as the coat.
The effect of the whole is of something very gorgeous and antique that yesterday by modern artists who recognize the value of the antique fashions and who know enough to incorporate them into the display of modern fashions.

An Embroidered Sweater in One of the Latest Fashion Expressions.

The coat has a short sort of a pep-pina. They either are made in this manner or they are made to end at a long waistline where they more or less drape about the hips and retain that blousiness of their upper sections which is so necessary a line when it comes to the latest fashions.

But, with these shorter jackets,
there is always a skirt of some plain material and while one cannot say that all of the skirts are plaited, still so many of them are fashioned in this way that they throw the plainer skirts quite into the minority. There are side plaited skirts done in the very narrowest of widths. There are those which are pressed in wider sections.
And there are also those which are arranged in accordion plaits so that they will take up as little stuff as possible and fit themselves more elegantly to the wider varieties of hip-lines. But, after all, the fact remains that the plaited skirts are more graceful looking with short coats than are most of the plain skirts, unless they are posed on the very slimmest and most perfect of figures.

Sweaters of Angora Wool.
The young things are wearing sweaters of fuzzy angora wool that rival the short coats for their display of color and brilliance of effect. They are adorned, or the more lavish of them are, with embroidered bands
which bring them into the limelight
where these colorful fashions are concerned. One of them is knitted from a light tan wool—almost a cream color, in fact. And then the band about the surplice front, as well as the wide,
tight belt and the streamers which lie
at the side, are embroidered on a knitted foundation with all the bright colored wools known to fashion.

The hat worn with this sweater is one of those blocked felt ones which are leading the hat fashions of the moment. There must be upon it some bow or rosette of ribbon fashioned in picturesque manner, for the felt hat,
just now, is nothing at all in fashion
unless it be trimmed with ribbon in some representation or other. This one, for example, is of gray in the same tone as the sweater, and it is trimmed with a large rosette of silk ribbon in a darker tone of the same color. Thereby it leaves to the embroidery on the sweater that exploitation of color which tunes in with the modern style and follows the motifs or decoration at the points where they will be most appreciated.

The separate dress that is made over loose and flowing lines combined with the coat, the general construction of which is in the same manner, is another of the styles which promises to have a great effect upon those fashions for spring which are destined to be accepted.

A combination of this sort is made up of a skirt of plaited silk done in five shades of color—background being blue, and the shades of purple, green,
and yellow.

ENGINEER SAYS IT IS WORLD-BEATER

"My Digestion Is Sound as a Dollar Since Taking Tanlac," Declares Buffalo Citizen.

"There is no doubt about it, Tanlac does all they claim it will do—and more," was the positive statement made recently by Richard H. Lawson, well-known engineer, of 1007 Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I used Tanlac for a combination of troubles and it put me in splendid condition all the way round. First, I had a bad case of stomach trouble, was simply chock full of sourness and gas, had a general distressed feeling and a burning pain in my stomach that I couldn't get rid of. With my appetite wrecked and digestion gone, I became awfully weak, nervous and run down and could get scarcely any rest or sleep at all.

"Tanlac answered every demand
made upon it in my case and today my digestion is sound as a dollar. I have an immense appetite, and with every ache and pain gone, I am sleeping fine and feeling strong and energetic as of old. Tanlac is 100% good."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—

HOW PHONE SYSTEM BEGAN

There Were Only Eight Subscribers
and the Switchboard Was by Way of a Joke.

One switchboard, with a capacity of eight subscribers' stations—that was the beginning of telephone service,
the first step toward the commercial development of the late Alexander Gram-bell's now famous invention. A crude switchboard had been used in Boston in 1877, but only for experimental and demonstration purposes.
Its chief function was to convince the people of Boston and casual visitors of the utility of the telephone and of its future possibilities, says Telephone Press Service.

The ancestor of the modern commercial telephone switchboard was installed in New Haven, Conn., in 1878.
From its eight lines has been evolved
the network of wires and cables which covers the country from coast to coast.

From a single switchboard the number of central offices within a city has increased to over 100. From less than a dozen subscribers' stations, the total within the limits of a single city has mounted in several cases to over 100-000 and in one case to over 1,000,000.
Under one roof as many as 20,000 lines are switched and central offices are now planned with a capacity of more than double that number.

The Brutal
When Ethel went round to visit her chum one evening she found her utterly miserable.

"Whatever is the matter, Lily?" she asked.

Lily's face grew longer than ever
as she answered between sobs:

"I've broken off my engagement with Jack."

"Never mind, Lily," said Ethel com-fortingly, "he is certain to come round and patch it up with you before long."

"I don't think so," replied Lily. "You see, I wrote and told him never to see me or write to me again. And," she added vehemently, "he hasn't even been nice enough to answer my letter."

SEEMS TO BE TOO EXACTING BUSINESS MEN LIKE OTHERS

Character in Novel Would Appear to Demand a Whole Lot From His Fellow Men.

Thus in Forrest Reid's "Tender
Among the Residents," the hero slides
from adventure into criticism:

"My idea of poetry, you see, is of a mysterious thing—a kind of mixture of enchantment and music—something immensely primitive—a survival—old
—old as Egyptian magic.

"That kind of poetry obviously can't be taught, and everything Trefusis does has been taught to him. I don't mean to say technique isn't of great importance, and, of course, it is quite proper that Trefusis should learn something about rhyme and meter;
but rhyme and meter, however, dangerously handled, in themselves are no more than the walls of the house."

"I mean, unless it is a haunted house
there is for me no poetry."

When the ghost walks for Pender,
we suppose it has to be not with measured, but with metered, tread.—
Chicago Journal.

Orators and literary folk of a certain widespread school seem to imagine that business men are all alike
that is, dishonest and prosperous from robbing the poor. The truth is many business men are themselves poor. Many of them fall because of unreliability, idleness, extravagance,
lack of intelligence.

Business' men are like any other class of men; some of them capable,
reliable, industrious and successful,
and some of them the reverse.
Thousands of proletarians are in business, as thousands of our best men are working for wages and in training to occupy the big positions and enjoy the big incomes. In any group of business men, most of them do not amount to much, as is the case in any other group. The rich were robbed in Russia because they were aristocrats by birth. It cannot be done in the United States because here the well-to-do come up from the ranks, and are the best fighters as well as the best money makers.—From E. W.
Howe's Monthly.

Petroleum for Airplanes.
What appears to some as an epoch-making event in the development of airplane and automobile motive power is the recent successful trip near Copenhagen, Denmark, of an airplane using petroleum as engine fuel. It was observed by experts who witnessed the test that the plane flew just as well as with gasoline, that there was less vibration and no soot formed, nor was there any self-ignition in the engine, which ran 100 less revolutions than normally.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

When Bananas Were 10 Cents Each.
According to the latest statistics
available, the United States imported 43,363,793 bunches of bananas in 1921.
Not so very long ago this fruit was sold in this country, wrapped in tinfoil, at 10 cents apiece, and was considered a tropical curiosity. So much for what cold storage, among other things, has done to make this possible.—Compressed Air Magazine.

Legislature Adjourns

The New Mexico legislature adjourned last Friday noon, after a sixty-day session. The session was marked by considerable friction between the two houses, largely by reason of political differences—the house having a large democratic majority, while the senate, which was a hold-over from the 1920 election, had a corresponding republican majority. Notwithstanding the sparring between the two branches, for the greater part of the session, the two bodies, at the last, came together on some quite important legislation, and taken, as a whole, the laws enacted are said by authorities to be very good.

Every pledge of the Democratic party was carried out so far as the house was concerned, and bills passed to meet every obligation assumed, but it was quite natural that some of this legislation would fail in the senate which was ruled by an exactly opposite political idea. This was especially true with reference to a state wide primary. The house passed a primary bill, in compliance with the platform promises of the democratic party, but when it reached the senate it substituted a county primary bill; and upon that rock the two bodies split and the result was the session adjourned without a primary law. This result is much to be regretted, for not only was a primary law a demand of the democratic platform but it was endorsed by an overwhelming vote of the people at the November election.

The responsibilities for sins of commission as well as those of omission will not be difficult to fix, and the people will sit in judgment and render the verdict. With every pledge fulfilled by the house, in so far as that body had the power to do so, its members need have no fears as to what that verdict is to be. In many ways a long step forward was made, and new avenues of hope opened for a still better legislative situation for the future. The rule of the few was conspicuous by its absence at the legislative session just adjourned.

Married

PADEN-ARMSTRONG—Saturday, March 10, at Alamogordo, Morgan B. Paden and Miss Elsie Armstrong, two well-known and popular young people of Carrizozo were married. The wedding was not entirely a surprise, but few knew of its near approach until the announcement of its occurrence was made. The groom had left the previous afternoon, presumably for El Paso, and the bride left Saturday morning for the same point. However, both stopped in Alamogordo and it was there the event that crowned the plot of their departure came to light. They went to El Paso following the ceremony, and reached home yesterday afternoon on their return. They have a cottage neatly furnished, and will be at home from this date.

The contracting parties are among our best known young people. The groom, a son of Dr. M. G. Paden, is a native of Lincoln county and is not only a good fellow, but a very substantial citizen. The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Armstrong, and has made Carrizozo her home for the past three years. She was a clerk in the post office for a time, but more recently has been one of the popular "hello" girls at the central phone office. The News heartily joins a host of friends in best wishes for their happiness and prosperity.

St. Patrick's Day

Tomorrow will be the 17th of "Old Ireland," and wherever a son of the "ould sod" happens to be on that date he will sport a bit of green. Lincoln county may not have its full quota; but it has some, and they are good ones at that. For instance: There's the Moores and Malones, the Finleys and Frenchs, the Parleys and Kearneys, the Barrys and Blaueys, the Collins and Colliers, the Rileys and Reddys, the Dawsons and Lawsons, the McDonnells, O'Connells, MacClanes and O'Donnells, McQuillens, O'Dows and O'Dillions, O'Bannon, O'Branum; then there's the Hales and the Haleys, the Padens and Dagaus, O'Kalleys, O'Kanes and O'Hagaus. Arrah, where can you bate them—the O's and the Macs.

Wild Animal Bounties To Be Discontinued

Santa Fe, March 13.—Thousands of dollars in wild animal bounties already applied for in the various counties of New Mexico may never be paid (so runs a communication with the above date line) as a result of a law abolishing the bounty system, passed recently by the legislature and now awaiting the signature of the governor. The new procedure provides for a concentrated drive on predatory animals by the U. S. Biological Survey, financed cooperatively with the state. It is believed the new system will be less expensive for the taxpayers and will be much more efficient than the county bounty system.

The law putting the new system into operation does away with the bounty and leaves no provision for the payment of bounties that are still unpaid, it was stated yesterday by those familiar with the situation. Those having big claims may have recourse to suits and counties which lose in these actions will have authority to make special levies for judgments.

In many of the counties the wild animal bounty fund was constantly overdrawn and many hunters often were obliged to wait from one to three years for their money. The bounty system is said to have been inefficient as many hunters were believed to have avoided entire extermination of coyotes and other animals in order not to deprive themselves for further income from that source.

New York City Has more Phones than All England

At the end of September, 1922, the number of telephones in Great Britain reached a million, the exact number being 1,005,773. It is interesting to note in this connection that the million mark for telephones in New York City was also exceeded during 1922. On September 30, this city had a total of 1,056,000 telephones.

MODERN METHODS

A few years ago an automobile could be possessed only by the rich. Now few can afford to be without one. Electric light in every city home is a new thing. It is only in these modern days that we have learned that the luxuries of yesterday must be the necessities of today.

Communications have undergone the same change. The letter; the telegram and the personal visit used to be the only means by which business and social affairs were handled. Today the modern means is the telephone.

Just your words are not enough. You want to project your own voice with all its intimacy and directness and its evidence of your personality into your message. Moreover, you want to tell your story and get your answer in one operation. It is more satisfactory than any other method and that is why progressive business men do business by telephone.

Sixty-Seventh Congress Comes to an End After Passing Rural Credits Bill.

FARM BLOC IS VICTORIOUS

Ship Subsidy Measure Killed—Strange Situation Created by Harding's World Court Proposal—German Nationalists Preparing to Fight French—Death of W. Bourke Cockran.

EDWARD W. PICKARD

PUTTING aside all partisanship, what do you and your acquaintances really think of the achievements of the sixty-seventh congress during its last session?

WITH the passage of the rural credits bill the last session of the sixty-seventh congress practically closed its business, and when final adjournment came that measure stood out as the one big accomplishment of the lawmakers during the entire session. Of course, the usual supply bills had been put through, and one of them, for the army, unfortunately carried the usual pork feature for rivers and harbors, despite the efforts of the administration. Congress this time has done little which it can point to with pride, and this is said without partisanship for both parties are to blame.

The farm bloc, backed by Secretaries Hoover and Wallace, had its way in the matter of farm credits legislation, for the Capper bill as passed included the important features of the Leontroff-Anderson bill which Secretary Mellon and many members of the house banking and currency committee did not like. One amendment adopted by the house extends the life of the War Finance corporation until January 31, 1924. During the debate on the measure Representative Burton of Ohio denounced the plan for the formation of intermediate credit banks attached to the federal land banks involving the use of $40,000,000 in government funds as provided in the Leontroff-Anderson part of the composite bill. Too much borrowing and too much credit had been one of the causes of the difficulties of the farmer, he asserted. He said he spoke from experience as a banker during the war period.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S pet, the ship subsidy bill, went to its death Wednesday according to schedule. The senate voted against recommitting it, but carried the motion of Senator Ladd of North Dakota to proceed with the consideration of the house filed-milk bill, which effectually disposed of the subsidy measure. Senator Garaway of Arkansas introduced a bill which provides that the shipping board shall turn over to states and municipalities any ships which the latter are willing to operate, with a view to developing trade from particular ports. He said he believed that the shipping board planned to punish senators who have been hostile to the subsidy bill by withdrawing ships from trade routes in which they are especially interested.

INTEREST was added to the proceedings of the last week of congress by the development attending the President's attempt to have the United States become a member of the permanent court of international justice organized under the auspices of the League of Nations. In a message asking for senate authority to act, the President pointed out that the United States had had a conspicuous part in the original conception of the court, and added that "our deliberate public opinion of today is overwhelmingly in favor of our full participation, and the opposition to the plan, threatening a filibuster. Senator Lodge summoned the foreign relations committee to consider it, and the committee instead of voting addressed to the President a series of questions framed by Mr. Borah. These were embodied in this resolution:

- "That the President be requested to advise the committee whether he favors an agreement obligating all powers, or governments, who are signers of the protocol creating the court, to submit all questions about which there is a dispute and which cannot be settled by diplomatic efforts, relative to:
 - "(a) The interpretation of treaties;
 - "(b) Any question of international law;
 - "(c) The existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
 - "(d) The nature or extent of reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation."

"Secondly, if the President favors such an agreement, does he deem it advisable to communicate with the other powers to ascertain whether they are willing to obligate themselves as aforesaid? Or are they to insist that such questions shall only be submitted in case both, or all, parties interested agree to the submission after the controversy arises?"

Thereupon it was announced at the White House that the administration would wait until the next congress met before pressing for action on the President's request. The Democrats, meanwhile, were in high glee over the affair and hastened to take all political advantage of it. They declared they would endeavor to force a vote on the matter before adjournment in order to put the senators on record.

AT THIS writing it seems probable that the senate will refuse to confirm several appointments made by the President, the most important being that of James G. McNary to be controller of the currency. There was no apparent opposition to the appointment of Mondell of Wyoming to be a member of the war finance corporation and that of Tower of Iowa to be governor of Porto Rico. Among other appointments of the week by the President were those of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines as director of the veterans' bureau and Richard M. Tobin of San Francisco as minister to the Netherlands.

Mr. Harding on Tuesday made the expected changes in his cabinet. Postmaster General Work was made secretary of the interior to succeed Mr. Fall, and was himself succeeded by Harry S. New of Indiana. These nominations the senate promptly confirmed.

CHANCELLOR GUNO of Germany finds himself between the Devil and the deep sea. On one side the Socialists are pressing him to check forcible opposition to the French in the Ruhr and to do all in his power to induce the French to withdraw, fearing that long continued occupation will lead to another European war. On the other side the Nationalists, now including the Monarchists, are not only demanding that the opposition continue, but are organizing the nucleus of a national army and are stirring up all kinds of trouble for the French in the Ruhr. Guno told his cabinet that if Germany let up in her resistance to the French there probably would be a revolution and that it was impossible to start overtures for a settlement now. It was believed in Berlin that the government was seriously considering the idea of asking the United States to intervene.

There is no doubt that the Nationalists, headed by Ludendorff and backed by von Hindenburg, are creating a dangerous situation. The field marshal is quoted as having said to a meeting of the Hanover Agricultural League: "We will never forget that we are all Germans and must do our duty, and that, if necessary, we will fight even until the last flag is torn to pieces and the last sword-blade shattered. It is better to perish in honor than to live in disgrace."

Prince Wilhelm Friedrich von Lippe was arrested in Düsseldorf by the French who said they found on him documents showing that he is a member of a secret organization in the police the French have deported large numbers of them and have placed many of the officers under arrest. They met with the stubbornest opposition in Bohemia. Both the French and the Belgians have seized large sums of German money in the occupied regions on the ground that it was sent to help in the financing of trouble. General Depoin announced measures for collecting the 49 per cent tax on Ruhr coal and said refusal to meet this obligation would result in the court martial of the offenders and the seizure of coal at the mines. Shipments of coal to Holland and Switzerland are not subject to the assessment.

POLAND and Lithuania agreed on a truce in their squabble over the neutral zone, but it was not very strictly observed during the week. The Poles claim to be trying to avoid any clashes and assert that German officers are leading their opponents. There are reports that the Germans in East Prussia are aiming to retake Memel, and other reports that the Poles are planning to seize East Prussia. The chances for serious trouble in that region are still excellent.

ELLIOTT WADSWORTH is in Paris for the American treasury trying to collect the $250,000,000 due the United States for the upkeep of our army on the Rhine, and reparations commissioners of the allies, as financial experts, are examining the question. Really there doesn't seem much to examine, for it was agreed after the armistice that Germany should pay the expenses of the forces of occupation before anything else in the way of reparations, and the allies already have collected these costs.

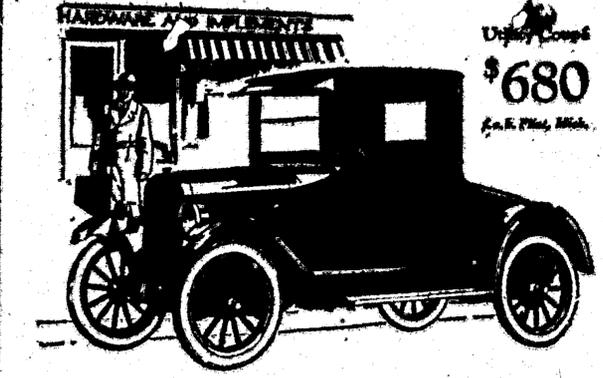

CZECHOSLOVAKIA comes forward as the first of the continental European nations to plan definitely for the payment of its war debt to the United States. In its budget for 1923 is an item of nearly $4,000,000 to apply on that debt, which is estimated at about $100,000,000. Foreign Minister Benes says a commission will come to Washington soon for the purpose of settling discrepancies, and that his country hopes to get as good terms as any Allied debtor to America.

That Finland also intends to pay the United States is shown by the fact that Dr. Axel Leonard, the Finnish minister in Washington, has begun preliminary conversations with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on the matter of refunding Finland's debt, which amounts to more than $8,000,000, with $1,150,000 of accrued interest.

BY AN order of the federal railroad labor board issued Wednesday, wage increases of two cents an hour were awarded to 65,000 railway freight handlers and laborers and the eight-hour day was restored to all of the 321,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees. The decision disposed of the last of a batch of wage cases that had been pending for months, and follows one of several weeks ago, in which the board restored the eight-hour day to 15,000 railway signalmen. The wage increase amounts to half of the decrease in pay ordered by the board last July.

GOVERNOR BLAINE of Wisconsin saved the state's National Guard from being abolished, sending to the legislature a special message praising the efficiency of the organization and urging its continuance at a strength to meet national requirements. It is interesting to note that while Senator La Follette declared his opposition to the bill abolishing the guard, Mrs. La Follette announced that she favored the measure.

W. BOURKE COCKRAN, congressman from New York, died suddenly Thursday as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. The previous evening he had participated in a lively debate on the farm credits bill. He celebrated his sixty-ninth birthday Wednesday. Mr. Cockran was a famous orator of the old school and the Democrats elected him to congress several times. He was prominent in the party nationally and was a familiar and popular figure in national conventions.

Garrulous as Ever.
It may be, as that English writer says, that women don't talk love as much as they used to, but we all know that if he reversed the two words he'd be away off.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmor & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician, but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so-called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the ill-peculiar to women.

In His Pilgrimages the Patron Saint of Ireland Evidently Visited Many and Strange Localities to Preach His Gospel and Win Converts.

If you want to know the history of St. Patrick, look at the map. For everywhere the good saint went he seems to have left his name behind him. If he sailed from a certain port or passed through a certain town, or founded a church, or built a barn, or stood on a rock, or drank out of a well, the port, the town, the church, the barn, the rock, and the well were all named after him. Hence one can trace the itinerary of his earthly travels by the number of places which bear, in some form or other, the name of Patrick, writes Marjorie Elaine Porter in the Detroit News.

To begin with, there is Kilpatrick, meaning the cell or church of Patrick, in Dumbartonshire, Scotland, where it is assumed, by some historians, the saint was born. In spite of the fact that the claim is disputed by England, France and Wales, who also declare themselves to be the mother countries of St. Patrick, there are arguments on Scotland's side worthy of consideration.

St. Patrick's Confession.
One of the most forceful is the document called "St. Patrick's Confession," in which the saint wrote: "I, Patrick, a sinner, the rude and least of all the faithful, and most contemptible to very many, had for my father, Calpornius, a deacon, a son of Potitus, a presbyter, who dwelt in the village of Bannavem Taberniae, for he had a small farm hard by the place."

After delving in the past, and investigating the archives, the majority of scholars and historians now agree in placing Bannavem Taberniae, in Scotland, in the neighborhood of Dumbarton on the Clyde. Granting, then, that St. Patrick celebrated his first birthday in Dumbartonshire, the next place he lived, in accordance to the map, was Dalpatrick, the district or division of Patrick, in Lanarkshire. During this period of his career he is said to have visited a certain rock near Inverness, which from that time on was given the name of Cragpatrick, the translation of which is the rock of Patrick. Then later, he founded two churches in this region, one at Irongray in Kirkcubright, and the other at Fleming in Dumfries. Of course, each of these was named Kirkpatrick in his honor.

Saint's Work in England.
When he finally sailed away to begin his life work as a missionary, the port from which he embarked was called Portpatrick. Upon reaching England, he is said to have preached in Westmoreland, at a place that was afterward named Patterdale, or Patrick's dale, to commemorate the occasion of the saint's visit.

While in England he left another landmark to bear his name by founding a church of Kilpatrick at Durham. Then he is supposed to have gone to Wales. While there, he walked across a causeway in Carnarvon bay, which for this reason was given the name of Eborbadrig, meaning Patrick's causeway. Now, it is said, this is believed to have been the spot where Next, following the map and the historians who vouch for its reliability, he left for the continent, and sailed from Llanbadrig or the church of Patrick, on the island of Anglesea. From here his footsteps have been traced to Inlisp-trick, the island of Patrick, where it is thought he made the first landing of his journey through Ireland. When he finally reached the Emerald Isle proper, he disembarked at Holmpatrick, another of the many places named after him, which is located in the county of Dublin.

On the Isle of Man.
It is believed by some historians that St. Patrick made a detour at this point and sailed northward again to the Isle of Man, which they consequently claim was called Inlisp-trick for some time after to mark the occasion of his visit. Here, too, he founded a church of Kirkpatrick near the town of Peel.

After this, it is thought, he returned to Ireland and began the great task he had undertaken. He landed in the county of Down, where he was greeted by the armed forces of the powerful chief, Dichu, a descendant of an Irish king. The chief and the natives believed Patrick and his followers were pirates, with which both land and sea were infested at that time, and so came out prepared to defend their possessions. When he learned Patrick was a harmless missionary, he was willing to bury the hatchet.

Made Convert of King.
To Dichu and the rest St. Patrick preached the gospel with the result that he was able to convert the entire tribe and baptized the chief on his own threshing floor. So impressed was Dichu with the missionary and his teachings that he donated one of his barns to be used as a temporary chapel and also gave a large plot of ground on which the church was to be built. The only stipulation Dichu made in granting the land was that the church, when completed, should face north and south instead of east and west.

The barn in which Patrick held the first religious services while his church was in the process of construction, was called Sabbal-patrick, or the barn of Patrick, and from this came the name of the parish of Saul which sprang up about it. At Saul, tradition claims St. Patrick died 50 years or more after his first meeting with Dichu. About two miles from Saul is the village of Downpatrick, near which are the ruins of Saul abbey, one of the many churches said to have been founded by St. Patrick, and where some claim his remains were interred.

St. Patrick's Church in Dublin.
Judging further from historical maps, St. Patrick next journeyed to East Meath, where he founded an abbey called Donnach-Patrig, or the house of Patrick. From there he went to Dublin, where he founded another church, which it is believed, occupied the site where St. Patrick's cathedral stands today.

Other places which bear St. Patrick's name as evidence that he had some historical connection with them are, St. Patrick's purgatory, on an island of Lough Derk in the county of Donegal; St. Patrick's Wood at Leitrim; St. Patrick's rock at Cashel; and the St. Patrick's wells, at which the good saint is said to have refreshed himself are far too numerous to mention separately.

In his old age he returned to the place where he first started his labors as a missionary in pagan Ireland with the chief Dichu, and spent his last days in the village of Saul, where he is believed to have died in 461.

ROAD BUILDING

LENGTH OF WORKING SEASON

Most Important Factor in Road Construction—There is Considerable Variation

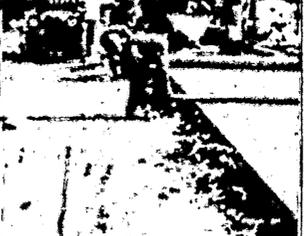

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
The length of the working season is a most important element in road construction and one in which there is considerable variation, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, which has collected data from all of the states.

Deducting Sundays only there are 313 working days in the year, and Alabama, Mississippi and New Mexico report that grading is possible on 300 of them. Neighboring states report as follows:

Florida, 263; Louisiana, 260, and Texas, 275. Contrasted with these are Maine, with 110; New York, 150; Wisconsin, 153; and western Oregon, 100. In 14 states grading will probably be impractical after the middle of November, and in some of them at an earlier date.

Gravel surfacing can be placed in most of the states on from 120 to 200 working days, although 10 of them report a greater number.

In 20 states concrete surfacing can be placed on from 100 to 150 days, and in 10 states on from 150 to 200 days. In 23 states the season is generally over by November 1.

Building on One Side of Road While Other is Open to Traffic.

Gravel surfacing can be placed in most of the states on from 120 to 200 working days, although 10 of them report a greater number.

In 20 states concrete surfacing can be placed on from 100 to 150 days, and in 10 states on from 150 to 200 days. In 23 states the season is generally over by November 1.

FINE STREET-PAVING RECORD

Total of 150 Miles Completed in City of Birmingham During the Year of 1922.

The street-paving record of Birmingham for the year 1922 is a gratifying one. A total of a hundred and fifty miles of paving has been completed. The nearly $500,000 invested could not have been spent in a better cause. The city as a whole has reached that stage of highway construction where continuous travel east, west, north or south inside the city limits over smooth and hard-surfaced thoroughfare is possible. Within another year the connecting links with the outlying suburbs still required for completion of the Greater Birmingham highway system will probably have been finished and the city may then look with real pride on her system of streets.

FINE HIGHWAY IN TENNESSEE

Largest Contract Ever Let in State Calls for Construction of 50 Miles of Road.

The largest highway contract ever let in Tennessee provides for 50.2 miles of new road in Grainger county, beginning at Fats Springs, 43 miles across Hawkins county and two miles in Sullivan county extending to Kingsport.

The new highway passes through the Holston river valley for about 40 miles and lies between Bay mountain and Clinch mountains. The road will be surfaced with asphalt and will cost $1,387,000, or $27,700 a mile. It is a federal route.

HIGHWAY BUILDING IN TEXAS

Leads All Other States in Matter of Construction, Having Added 933 Miles.

Texas led all other states in the matter of road building in 1922, having added 933 miles during the year. The average for all states was 200 miles. Sometimes it is a good idea to stop planning what we're going to do just for a moment in order to contemplate what we have accomplished. Five years of this sort of progress and traveling salesmen will be the envy of all who know the joy of a good car and a good road.

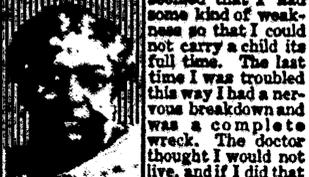

Roads With Banked Curves.
Highway engineers in England are constructing roads with an allowance for super-elevation on corner curves wherever desirable. French road engineers long ago adopted the banked curve, and in some parts of the United States they are now in use.

Would Color Highways.
In England, the suggestion has been made that the public highways be colored by means of some cheap chemical process. This is one of the most interesting and practical suggestions that have been made in the history of road building.
