OLDEST AND LEADING NEWSPAPER IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, NEW MEXICO

VOLUME 24 — CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MAY 23, 1924 — NUMBER 20

That Vegas Round-Up

(By Rattlesnake Robert)

Las Vegas, May 19. — The Kow Ketching Kontests, otherwise the 10th Animal Cowboys' Reunion, saddles up July 3rd and keeps buckin' through the 4th and 5th this year instead of the 2-3-4 dates formerly announced. Thisaway Gov. Hinkle and the other cowboys have got all day a-Sunday to recliperate and brush the horsehair off their pants legs before gittin' back to work. Also so's the boys from Chaparral Valley can stay here and go to church the next day for oncet in their onery lives. Then there's the summer schoolmarms which will have two whole days without no studyin' except studyin' whichaway Jim Whitmore is gonna fall off a steer.

They ain't many changes in the program of contests, except a new way of splittin' the money in a couple of 'em that will give the boys a better chance to make wages ever' day. Like in the bronc bustin' outa $700 four fellers like Sam Woody will get 80, 60, 40, or 20 pesos ever' day for two days and three that can stand the lively sittin' for the third day gets $150, $100 and $50. And this year there's half a thousand for the steer wrastlers, otherwise the bull-doggin' brotherhood, split $75, $50 and $25 for two days and $100, $60 and $40 for the finalities.

Steer ropin' this year is gonna be calf ropin' and not only you gotta loop 'em and upset the little buggers, but also you have got to tie 'em down by three legs so's the only way they can walk is like a egg walks uphill in the mud. The boys of the committee is pickin' flivver size yearlin's, light-bowed and built for speed and action and not so much like the anchor to the Levi Nathan or some other steamship, as they was last year. On account the amateurs beat the chaps a'most like a bear-dog lickin' a Mexican Careless last year, they ain't but one contest in the ropin' this year, and the big money is split four ways like a cherry pie for three days before the finalities.

On the account of a blight on the potato crop this spring the spud race will be effeminated and they won't have none this time. Instead whenever the 8,000 folks in the grandstand gits to yellin' "otro toro" Con is goin' to turn loose a big steer, let him high-tail 200 feet and then sic forty cowboys on him and the first one what ropes him gits ten dollars—that is, if he lives. This here is the Ladron Race, which, though smellin' jest as sweet by one name as the other, is sometimes called the Thief's Race, the Maverick, the Orojano, the Billythekid, the Runferyemoney, or the Tea Pot Dome Race, the idea bein' to git all you can while the gittin's good, and then git out. Ambulances and doctors provided. Flowers free.

The Gallo Race will also be effeminated this here time on the account of not wishing to have so much feathers and chicken blood in the track, but for everything that is cut out the vaqueros will milk a wild cow, bulldog a flivver, flirt with the summer school girls, stan' on their heads, recite a pome or something equally as difficult and a lot harder and more thrillin'. I mention right here that $5.00 worth of cactus eradicator will be gave out for the correct answer to the question "what makes the wild cows wild" following the wild cow milking competation July 3, 4, 5.

The personality of the Association is pretty much the same as last year. A bunch of ol' leather-necked, saddle-calloused, cool-headed cattlemen with sagebrush in the hair and hearts as big an' warm as the Pecos Valley—like President Jim Shoemaker—is the directors. Con Jackson, which is the name of the man with the red shirt that run it last year, is Manager and Arena Director, to who everybody should address their letters

National Roads Fleet

Albuquerque, May 24.—Albuquerque, New Mexico, during the next ten days will be the mecca of Good Roads Advocates of America. The cry throughout the nation is "On to Albuquerque." Good Roads Advocates in every walk of life will journey westward to take part in the 12th Annual Convention of the United States Good Roads Association, 8th Annual Convention of the Bankhead National Highway Association and United States Good Roads Show, that will open on the night of May 26th, and continue for the entire week.

Mr. J. A. Rountree, Director-General of the three organizations, assisted by a competent staff, has been active for the past twelve weeks in promoting and arranging the details of these meetings.

The Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce with its enthusiastic committees has arranged the entertainment features of this convention, which will consist of receptions, banquets, dinners on the mesa, automobile rides on the plains and mountains of picturesque New Mexico.

Governors in more than forty states have appointed delegates. More than one hundred Chambers of Commerce, State Good Roads Associations and automobile clubs have done likewise.

The Bureau of Public Roads at Washington has sent one of the largest and best exhibits to the Show that has ever been sent out. It will consist of map pictures, relief drawings, models of highways constructed under federal supervision in the various parts of the country and also moving pictures.

Probably the greatest array of distinguished men and women are to be on the program that has ever appeared on any program of any Good Roads convention held in America, according to statements made by Director-General Rountree. There will be governors, senators, congressmen, state highway commissioners and engineers, and Good Roads Advocates, both men and women, in every walk of life.

Ford Sales Pass Three-Quarter Million Mark

Car and truck deliveries alone show increase of 102,158 over last year. May has opened for a bigger demand for Ford products than any month this year, the Ford dealer announced here today. Ford retail sales in the United States during the first ten days of May averaged 8,385 daily, exceeding the last ten day period of the record-breaking sales for month of April, and indicating the continued upward trend of the market.

Figures just compiled show a total of 757,623 Ford units retailed to customers from January 1st to and including May 10th, of which Ford car and truck deliveries alone show a gain of 102,158 over the same period of a year ago.

With the increase already attained this month and with the present outlook for business the company anticipates a new high sales figure in May.

Educational News

(By Mrs. Louise H. Coe)

The State Board of Education has set the following dates as examination dates for this summer: June 26, 27, 28 and July 17, 18, 19.

The Lincoln County Teachers' Institute has been waived in favor of the Summer School, as most all the teachers of this county expect to attend a University or Normal.

Section 609 of the school law of New Mexico reads as follows:

> At the time of the making of budgets for the school year all surplus funds shall be applied and credited on such budgets and proper deductions made therefor.

This explains what became of the large balance that had been accumulating in this county from year to year for the past several years. The amount of the appropriation of the school budget for 1923-24 was $117,910, least it has been for several years, as the county officials were striving for economy in the schools and did not wish to place a burdensome school tax on the people. The amount of the credits for 1923-24 was $74,983.24. This included the accumulated balance in the banks, the state apportionment and all other moneys credited to the school fund. In previous years the amount of the appropriation was levied for, but according to the new law, section 609, the credits had to be deducted; therefore only $47,676.49 had to be produced in order to make the total amount of the budget. The school tax levy in Lincoln county 1913-24 was only seven mills, the lowest it has been for many years. As a result of deducting the balances the financial side of the schools have suffered. I hope the people will use their influence to have this section of the school law repealed.

How Veteran Can Compute Value of His Insurance

Washington, May 21. Veterans bureau actuaries informed members of congress today for the first time that the list of "factors" prepared by them and recently made public for computing the amounts of insurance due under the bonus law took into account the extra 25 per cent of adjusted service compensation allowed by the cash or insurance certificate.

This means that a veteran, in computing the value of the insurance policy he will receive, simply will multiply his credits at one dollar and a quarter a day for foreign service and one dollar a day for home service by this factor, which previously had been made public. The extra 25 per cent is not to be added as heretofore announced. As an example, the veteran having the maximum amount of home service credit, $500, the insurance policy would amount to about two and one half times that sum or $1,280, according to the age of the veteran.

Bonus Bill Becomes Law

The Soldier Bonus Bill is now a law. Both houses passed the bill, sent it to the President, but he vetoed the measure. It was passed over the President's veto by the house last week, and this week in the senate it passed by more than the necessary two-thirds majority. Many old-time Republicans endeavored to hold their members in line to support the Presidential veto, but enough broke away and joined the Democrats to override the veto.

Lieut.-Governor Dies

Lieutenant-Governor Jose A. Baca died at his home in Las Vegas Saturday night from pneumonia. Mr. Baca was 48 years of age and has long been prominent in the affairs of his county, and achieved a state-wide reputation two years ago when he made a successful race as the Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor. He leaves a widow and six children.

Mrs. Soledad C. Chacon, Secretary of State, becomes lieutenant governor of New Mexico. As lieutenant governor, Mrs. Chacon will be called to act as governor, should Governor Hinkle at any time leave the state, and in that event New Mexico would have the first woman in the United States to fill the Governor's chair.

Gallup Phone Connections

A new telephone line connecting Albuquerque and Gallup, New Mexico, was completed Friday, according to officials of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Gallup is connected for the first time with the Bell System.

The new circuits are carried on the Denver-El Paso pole line from Albuquerque south to Los Lunas, a distance of 23 miles, but an entirely new pole line was constructed from Los Lunas 146 northwest to Gallup. The route generally follows the Santa Fe railroad through Valencia county, crossing the Acoma and Navajo Indian reservations as well as the Fort Wingate military reserve in McKinley county.

Toll stations along the line include Old Laguna, New Laguna, Cubero, San Fidel, Grants, Bluewater, Baca, Thoreau and Perea.

The new line is composed of one through and one way circuit, each of 12 gauge copper and cost approximately $110,000 to complete it.

The operations of the Republican tariff have raised the price of everything the farmer has to buy, but not what he has to sell. A sharp cut in the tariff would lower the price of what he buys and the consequent rehabilitation of Europe, which is steadily stabilizing conditions, will vastly increase his market.

Auto Caravan Here

The Automobile Caravan, comprising twenty-one cars, which left El Paso last Saturday for a two thousand mile run, arrived here Tuesday afternoon, and spent its fourth night on the trip in Carrizozo. A committee appointed by President Sweet of the local Chamber of Commerce, met the incoming autoists and assigned billets for all. Besides the autos in the caravan, there was one motorcycle, and the crowd consisted of fifty people, of whom four were women. The town put on a metropolitan appearance during the visit, and our people turned out en masse to welcome the visitors. The caravan left early Wednesday morning for Vaughn, and will continue on its visits to towns throughout New Mexico and Arizona before finally returning to El Paso. Many makes of cars were in the "run," and practically all had been penalyzed by the judges for stops, accidents and other infractions of the rules governing the contest, by the time they reached this point. The notable exception to the rule was the Chrysler entry, which had a clean record up to date.

Announces for Assessor

In this issue will be found the announcement of E. C. Dow for the Democratic nomination for Assessor of Lincoln County. Mr. Dow was born at Lincoln and has spent his life in Lincoln county. Few men are better known in the county and more highly respected. Mr. Dow was elected County Commissioner two years ago from the first district and has served quite acceptably in that position. Mr. Dow's acquaintance with the county and his knowledge of county affairs equip him well for the position he seeks, and in recognition of these qualifications his candidacy will appeal to many of the voters.

SHE HAD GONE

SYNOPSIS.—Francis Ledsam defends Oliver Hilditch, a business man, in a murder case and succeeds in getting him off, only to be told by his wife that Hilditch is an arch criminal. Ledsam, dining with his best friend, Andrew Wilmore meets Hilditch and his wife and is invited to dine with them at their home. At dinner with the Hilditches, Oliver shows Ledsam how he killed his victim and says his own death the same way would make his wife supremely happy. Returning home Ledsam receives a phone call from Margaret Hilditch saying Oliver has been murdered. Ledsam gets the coroner to set Oliver's death down as suicide. He admits to Wilmore that he has developed a keen interest in Margaret. He meets her father Sir Timothy Brast, the evil shepherd, who tells him a crime will be committed before they leave the cafe. A murder is committed. Ledsam determines to solve the mystery. He meets Margaret. She refuses him permission to call and warns him to have nothing to do with her father. Ledsam solves the murder mystery and is congratulated by Sir Timothy. Ledsam again meets Margaret and asks to have "his chance." Wilmore's younger brother mysteriously disappears from Ledsam's office. Ledsam dines with Sir Timothy and Margaret at their place on the Thames.

There was something almost mysterious, a little inexplicable about the broad expanse of river into which they presently turned. Opposite were woods and then a sloping bank. From a house hidden in the distance they heard the bark of a dog. They even caught the tinkling of distant water-carts. Then there was silence, only the soft purring of the water driven by the punt pole. They didn't pass the front of the great old house, past another strip of woodland, and then up a narrow stream.

"To the left here," she directed, "and then stop."

They bumped against the bank. The little backwater into which they had turned seemed to resemble a bed of lilies whose faint fragrance almost enveloped them. The trees on either side made a little arch of darkness.

"Please skip your polo and listen," Margaret said presently. "Make yourself as comfortable as you can. There are plenty of cushions behind you. This is where I come for shelter."

Francis obeyed her calm without result. For a few moments speech seemed impossible. The darkness was so essential a thing to be exactly suited the atmosphere of the present time, only a few feet away, still lighted the house of the lives we were living. The chaos which she had barely time to see, was of course there. There was just the faintest clash of water from the oars, where the stream met the river, the distant barking of a dog, the occasional cackling of a few hens somewhere in the midst of the belt of trees, otherwise the silence and coolness were like a cloak. Presently Margaret leaned back in the punt. Her hands were clasped behind her head, her eyes were closed. She seemed to be resting.

"Is this a new position" he said a little hoarsely.

She made no answer. Her silence seemed to him more telling than words. He bent forward. His hand found the soft fur which encompassed her. They rested there. Still she did not speak. He tightened his grasp, moved further forward, the passion surging through his veins, his breath almost failing him. He was so sure now that he heard her breathing, save her face, pale as ever. Her eyes were a little parted, her eyes looked out, as it seemed to him, half in fear, half in love. He bent lower still. She neither shrank away nor invited him.

Her Lips Were a Little Parted, Her Eyes Looked Out, as It Seemed to Him, Half in Fear, Half in Hope.

"Dear," he whispered.

Her arms stole from underneath the cloak, her fingers rested upon his shoulders. He scarcely knew whether it was a caress or whether she were holding him from her. In any case it was too late. With a little sob of passion his lips were pressed to hers. Even as she closed her eyes, the scent of the lilies seemed to intoxicate him.

He was back in his place without conscious movement. His pulses were quivering, the passion singing in his blood, the joy of her faint caress living proudly in his memory. It had been the moment of his life, and yet even now he felt sick at heart with fears, with the torment of her passiveness. She had lain there in his arms, he had felt the thrill of her body, some quaint inspiration had told him that she had sought for joy in that moment and had not wholly failed. Yet his anxiety was tumultuous, overwhelming. Then she spoke, and his heart leaped again. Her voice was more natural. It was not a voice which he had ever heard before.

"Give me a cigarette, please—and I want to go back."

He leaned over her again, struck a match with trembling fingers and gave her the cigarette. She smiled at him very faintly.

"Please go back now," she begged. "Smoke yourself, take me home slowly and say nothing."

He obeyed, but his knees were shaking when he stood up. Slowly, a foot at a time, they poured from the mesh of the lilies out into the broad stream. Almost as they did so, the yellow rim of the moon came up over the low hills. As they turned into their own stream, the light was strong enough for him to see her face. She lay there like a ghost, her eyes half closed, the only touch of color in the shining strands of her beautiful hair. She roused herself a little as they swung round. He paused, leaning upon the pole.

"You are not angry?" he asked.

"No, I am not angry," she answered. "Why should I be? But I cannot talk to you about it tonight."

They glided to the edge of the landing stage. A servant appeared and secured the punt.

"Is Sir Timothy back yet?" Margaret inquired.

"Not yet, miss."

She turned to Francis.

"Please go and have a whisky and soda in the smoking room," she said, pointing to the open French windows. "I am going to my favorite seat. You will find me just across the bridge there."

He hesitated, filled with a passionate disinclination to leave her side even for a moment. She seemed to understand, but she pointed once more to the house.

"I shall be very much obliged if you will come and do me this—favor."

Francis stepped through the French windows into the smoking room, where all the paraphernalia for whisky and soda and cigars of the best were set out upon the sideboard. He helped himself to whisky and soda and lighted a cigarette, with the vain hope that the act might restore his nerves. But it was in vain. The hand which held the match was unsteady, and the cigarette he threw away after a few puffs. He helped himself to another whisky and soda and drank it almost at a draught. Then he went out through the window and down the path which led to the bridge. He could see Margaret sitting there, her head resting upon her hand, looking out upon the river. She did not turn round as he approached, and he stood for a moment looking at her, dumb with apprehension. Then she spoke, without looking at him.

"Sir Timothy has been showing me some of the wonders of his collection. You will have to be very careful, or you will be a victim of a passion."

"It is entirely out of control," he declared, "and I fear that it has scarcely the atmosphere of a calm. It is no attempt to combine certain items of my own with the requirements of another adventurer. Come and have a drink with me, Ledsam."

"I have just had one," Francis replied. "Mrs. Hilditch is to be the first guests and I am on my way to join her."

He paused and the two stared towards the open French windows. He crossed the rustic bridge that led into the flower garden, turned down the path and came to a sudden standstill before the seat which Margaret had indicated. It was empty, but in the corner by the long trailing fly which she had picked in the backwater. He stood there for a moment, stranded. There were other seats and chairs in the garden, but he knew before he started his search that it was in vain. She had gone. The flower, dropping a little now, though the stalk was still wet with the moisture of the river, seemed to kiss like her farewell.

Francis was surprised, when he descended for breakfast the next morning, to find the table laid for one only. The butler, who was waiting, handed him the daily papers and wheeled the electric heater to his side.

"Is no one else breakfasting?" Francis asked.

"Sir Timothy has been sharing our meals of late, sir, when he has been at home, but he rises very early. I understand that he breakfasted in town this morning, sir."

"Is Sir Timothy back yet?" Francis asked.

"Not yet, sir."

He turned to Francis.

"Please go and have a whisky and soda in the smoking room," she said, pointing to the open French windows. "I am going to my favorite seat. You will find me just across the bridge there."

He hesitated, filled with a passionate disinclination to leave her side even for a moment. She seemed to understand, but she pointed once more to the house.

"I shall be very much obliged if you will come and do me this—favor."

Francis stepped through the French windows into the smoking room, where all the paraphernalia for whisky and soda and cigars of the best were set out upon the sideboard. He helped himself to

Geneva Seeks Aid of League

Swiss Peninsula in a Sea of French Territory.

Washington, D. C.—Calling on the League of Nations—from within its own household, so to speak—to settle a discussion with France, next door, is an action threatened by the Canton of Geneva of the Swiss republic, in which this world organization has its seat.

This queer combination of world problem and domestic problem results from Geneva's being a sort of "political and economic peninsula thrust into France," according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society describing the canton.

"The Canton of Geneva seems to hang precariously to the rest of Switzerland like a fragment of food on the bottom of a spoon," says the bulletin. "Though it has an area of more than a hundred square miles its contact with Swiss territory is across a narrow neck little more than three miles wide. The contact with France, on the other hand, is along a border more than 50 miles long.

"Naturally, Geneva has looked largely to French land, only a stone's throw away in every direction, for its fresh food supplies. The fact that this surrounding region is one of France's garden spots increased this natural dependence. Hiking Geneva are the public markets and gardens and chestnut groves of the departments of Upper Savoy and Ain, and the general farming regions in which they are set with their poultry and small flocks of farm animals.

"Geneva has drawn many of its supplies from this region for centuries, long before the territory round by was either French or Swiss. The city was virtually independent during the Middle Ages, being ruled as the temporal realm of a bishop appointed by the pope. For fifteen years after the first French republic was established, Geneva was annexed to France, and no question of boundaries arose.

Old Privilege Withdrawn.

"When the canton's independence was restored in 1815, the custom of erecting on the surrounding country for octroi was recognized and privileges of Savoy and Ain were set aside in favor of the trade, the French economic frontier being extended some miles back from the real boundary line. The Swiss citizen voted against this government's accepting the change, and it is the customs dispute that may go to the League of Nations.

"To see Savoy's fertility creep almost to its doorstep, for centuries Geneva has struggled with the counts and later the dukes of Savoy to get possession of its territory. One side of this city will do for us to have direct social ties, to that quietly appointed lower house of Geneva, and then rejoined the bishop, ruling the bishopric. After the death of the reformer Calvin a succession of his relatives held the office of bishop of Geneva, but they were fairly genial.

Used "Economic Pressure."

"Another Savoyard duke used 'economic pressure' that left an distinctly modern ring in its efforts to ruin the city he could not gain possession of. He induced his son-in-law, the king of France, to prohibit French merchants from visiting the famous old Geneva fair and to set dates for the Lyons fair that would conflict with those of the Geneva meeting.

"Most dramatic of Savoy's efforts to gain possession of Geneva was 'the Escalade.' In 1602, while apparently friendly toward the city, the duke of Savoy sent his soldiers at night with ladders to scale Geneva's walls. The intruders were discovered, many killed, and the rest driven out. When Geneva became the stronghold of the Reformation, 'the Protestant Rome,' its relations with Catholic Savoy were even more strained. Alliance with cities of the Swiss Confederation afforded protection, however, and the city held its own.

"Modern Geneva, besides being the seat of the League of Nations, draws to its confines thousands of visitors and even permanent residents from many lands, and so is in more senses than one an international city. Astride the Rhine where it dashes from Lake Geneva, the city is most picturesquely situated. At its door the lake furnishes a delightful pathway to some of the most beautiful scenery and some of the most delightful resorts in Switzerland."

Declares Long Tongues Cause People to Lisp

Found—a sure cure for lisping!

This is stated on the authority of Professor Franke, well-known German surgeon, who announces his discovery in the German Medical Weekly at Berlin.

Professor Franke found that persons lisp because their tongue is too long. Nothing simpler, therefore, than to cut off a piece and remedy this defect that kills through ridicule.

He has cured several patients on that principle by removing about half an inch of their tongue and sewing it up again, in a fashion that neither the shape nor the appearance of the tongue was changed.

The tongues healed within two weeks and the patients spoke as if they had never lisped.

The operation, besides, is perfectly painless and without danger.

Lost Whale Is Killed

San Francisco.—An enormous Arctic whale, said to be the first ever found away from the vicinity of the eternal ice fields of the North pole, was killed near Farallone Islands, 14 miles west of San Francisco, by the whaler Traveler recently. The whaler was hunting the humpback or swinback Black whale (a smaller species) which frequents the Pacific in this vicinity.

Burglars Steal Watchdog

Burglars who visited a lumber company office at Stamford, Conn., found nothing of value so they carried off a watchdog. Later, they returned the animal, which was a ferocious bulldog.

Magnetic Storm Disrupts Cable

Scientist Tells How Sun Spots Burn Instruments.

Williams Bay, Wis.—Sun spots are interfering with the work, according to the latest confession of scientists. Edwin B. Frost, Director of Yerkes observatory here, attacked the theory following research which showed that the magnetic storms which disrupt cable service, and wreak havoc in wireless, often having cut definite electrical connections of the cable and telephone companies, are associated with the appearance of some particularly large or especially active sun spots crossing near the sun's central meridian.

"Sun spots have a relation," Professor Frost said, "which is still very imperfectly understood, with the earth's currents in the work and the changes of the earth's magnetism in a large magnetic storm, such as cut telegraphic service at solar maxima.

Sun of Supreme Importance.

"To the inhabitants of the earth the sun is the object of supreme importance in nature. It gives us light, heat, food, fuel and power, whether from the steam engine, water fall or windmill. Therefore every discovery about the sun is of great interest to the human race, whether or not the discovery seems to be of immediate application.

"Sun spots may be likened to eyebrows. It is a law of the earth's atmosphere that cyclones in the northern hemisphere spiral with them right to left, contrary to the hands of a clock; in the southern hemisphere they whirl in the other direction. It has been established that the winds of hot gases in the sun's atmosphere are electrified or ionized, and, therefore, sun spots become to a certain extent electromagnets. It has been early discovered that when one half cycle of about eleven years comes to an end at maximum of solar activity, and a new cycle of activity is begun, there is a reversal of the polarity of the sun spots in the two hemispheres. This which would precisely have corresponded to a south pole now corresponds to a north pole.

"Each especially expert in commercial circles, the first or second sun spot cycle after each change in polarity of the sun, which spots themselves be like it, often at a distance of one hundred thousand miles, would be of importance. In the northern hemisphere the conditions would be the opposite. In the new cycle just begun, the conditions are reversed as to the electromagnetic sun. As spots become more evident and large in the next few years, they will tend to move nearer the sun's equator.

"The new discovery shows that the entire cycle of solar activity must be regarded as twice as long as has hitherto been thought, covering two periods and two maxima of sun spot activity, or about twenty-two years."

WOMAN WILL LIVE ON ISLE TO STUDY BIRDS

Naturalist Will Dwell in Tent on Scott Head Island to Learn of Migrations.

London.—An extremely interesting though lonely six months is ahead of an English woman naturalist, Miss E. L. Turner, who has just left London to take up her residence on Scott Head Island, five miles out from the wild and desolate coast of Norfolk.

Miss Turner is undertaking herself on this almost unknown and never visited island in order to learn more about bird habits. She has spent years studying birds, but confesses she has gained little real knowledge about them. She is particularly anxious to find out something more about migratory birds, and on this identification she feels sure she will be able to keep watch of their arrival.

There are no houses on Scott Head island, and Miss Turner has taken her own tent, a weirdly painted affair which caused some curiosity among the scientists who accompanied her as far as the coast.

"The tent," explained Miss Turner, "is the one from which I believe the British army took the idea of camouflage. I used it in the Faroe Islands as a hiding place while watching birds there in the winter of 1914. It became a dirty yellow and could be seen all over the islands, so one day I got some green paint for it. The day was windy. I crawled at the flapping canvas and dabbed paint on it as best I could. Then I walked away from it, and, to my astonishment, it became invisible."

Wedding Ends Romance

Grafton, W. Va.—A romance which started about fifty years ago culminated a few days ago when Mrs. Mollie Naylon of this city became the wife of Marvin Robins at Strasburg, Va. They were sweet when young, but were separated and each one married. After a long period they met again when Mr. Robins came to Grafton last fall. They will reside at Strasburg.

Rabbit With Five Horns

Eddie Davis, north of Del Rio, Tex., discovered a freak of nature in the form of a cotton-tail rabbit with five horns on its head. The horns are about two and one-half inches apart and are similar to goat horns. The rabbit was captured in a trap on a farm. The animal is now on display at a store and is attracting wide attention.

Woman Wars on Speeders

Mill Hall, Pa.—Mrs. Emma Russell, the only woman constable in Clinton county, has gone after crime seriously. Since taking office January 1 last, she has made a campaign against drunkenness in the village, has reprimanded and arrested both boys and girls for using profane language and has prohibited corner loafing. She is now waging a war on automobile speeders.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

THE AUTOCRAT

"How did Three-Finger Sam come to leave town?"

"He got too influential," answered Cactus Joe. "All our civic associations from the chamber of commerce to the Jack Rabbit Social club decided it was best for him and the Gulch to part."

"I can remember when his word was law."

"That's what spoiled him. He got so looked up to an' bossy that he thought he could open a jackpot, draw four card an' win without a word of criticism."—Washington Star.

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

Mrs. J. Clark Says Tanlac Was More Than Match for Her Troubles.

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark, of 415 Walsworth Ave., Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

All Are Georges

Senator Copeland, congratulated on a brilliant speech, said at a dinner:

"Economy is the thing, but each man wants the other man to shoulder the burden. It's like the story.

"'George,' said the movie manager's wife, 'you're always wanting me to economize, but I notice that as soon as I cut down on help and make my own dresses and all that sort of thing, you start right in smoking imported cigars and giving suppers to your stars.'

"'Well,' said George, 'what do you suppose I want you to economize for, anyhow?'"—Detroit Free Press.

Doubly Useful

"My new housemaid is a treasure," declared the enthusiastic matron. "I had a bridge game on, and one lady failed to show up. You know how it is—she gave me no notice whatever."

"Very annoying."

"The housemaid, however, put on one of my gowns and filled it beautifully."

"That was helpful."

"Yes, and I won her week's wages."

Saving the Babies

Eradication of tuberculosis among cattle is saving the necks of babies, literally saving their necks. According to Dr. James H. Stone of Boston, who gave a public lecture at the Harvard Medical school, the condition formerly called scrofula in infants is on the decrease. This so-called scrofula was really a tubercular infection of the lymph and lymph glands of the neck. The infection was the cattle type, and the babies got it in their milk. Pasteurization of the milk and the fight against the disease in cattle now makes the milk supply safer. But, Doctor Stone warns, much remains to be done. The danger comes suddenly when tuberculous dealings in the udder of any cow, thus permitting the infection to pass directly into the milk.

THE RAILROAD AND OUR COUNTIES

The introductory advertisement in the CARRIZOZO NEWS this month of the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad invited co-operation for mutual welfare, and promised useful statements for closer understanding between the road and the public. The following information will be useful as to the local situation and serve as a basis for discussion of transportation service, business relations, community development, taxation, and other subjects of importance to the people and the road whose interests are substantially identical.

Payments represent vouchers sent to points within the counties for payment, also taxes assessed within the counties against the E. P. & S. W. System lines, and the payroll covers the services of employes the checks for which were sent to points within each of the counties named for payment.

The excess of expenditures in the counties named were nearly Two Million Dollars more than the receipts therefrom.

Lodge's Permanent Court of Arbitration

Senator Lodge bitterly opposed President Wilson's fight for the adoption of the Versailles Treaty including the provision for a Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague. The situation today is that the Permanent Court which President Wilson's work established is functioning, settling international disputes with the regularity of clock-work, with 53 large and small nations supporting it and obeying its decisions without war, while the United States sits off on a lonely pinnacle with no hand in the great work of bringing peace to the world. And no one realizes more than Senator Lodge our ridiculous position, with Uncle Sam in the attitude of the pevved child who will not play the game, so he has offered a scheme for a "World Court," so like the Permanent Court of The Hague, already functioning daily and upheld by 53 countries, that they seem like two peas out of the same pod. Lodge has the assurance to suggest that the 53 nations stop the functioning of their Permanent Court and start all over again by adopting his World Court. George W. Wickersham, former Republican Attorney General, refers to Lodge's performance as "buffoonery" and says "the people will readily distinguish between true coin and counterfeit imitation, and will regard Mr. Lodge's substitute as counterfeit, too obvious to be accepted even by the most simple."

L. L. Beard has assumed control of the Capitan Mountaineer, and the paper appeared the past week under the new management. Mr. Beard succeeds Sam J. Bigger, the latter having had charge of the Mountaineer since the death of his father last year. To the retiring publisher the News expresses its appreciation for many courtesies, and extends a hearty welcome to his successor.

If Republicans had not been so long on promises four years ago and so short on performances since, their campaign this year might have been made without so many inexcusable excuses.

Power of Money-Force

HOW are you applying your money-force? Are you concentrating it? making it represent character and ability.

Money-force is the compensation you receive for labor—a symbol of the energy you have expended in service.

You add power to your money-force when you retain a percentage of it in an interest-bearing surplus. If you have no surplus you are the plaything of chance.

The most certain way is open a savings account with this strong bank and deposit regularly a fixed portion of your earnings. The four per cent interest, compounded twice a year, that we pay, will constantly add to your money-force.

Two Attractive Pictures

Friday night, May 30, the Crystal Theatre will show a thrilling drama entitled "Storm-swept." Authorities agree that this is a very attractive picture, full of action, laughs, tears, romance and sentiment. Wallace and Noah Beery take the leading parts in this dramatization and are aided by an all-star cast.

Saturday night, May 31, Viola Dana, the vivacious and popular star, plays the leading role in "Seeing's Believing." The star gets into difficulty because people take literally the title of the production, and she gets into hot water, or jail. So, to counteract public opinion, she adopts the slogan "Don't believe everything that you see," and gets away with it.

Pain In Back & Sides

"FOR A LONG TIME," says Mrs. Dora Payne, of Huntington, Tenn., "I felt listless, tired and worn-out. I did not feel like doing my work, visiting or anything.

"I suffered much pain in my back and sides. My limbs hurt, my knees would tremble without apparent cause and I would have to sit down.

"I was very nervous. ... I would have a tired, dull headache.

"I had read so much about Cardui I asked my husband to get it for me. The very first bottle seemed to help me. After the second ... I was better than I had been in months. I certainly can praise Cardui.

"I have taken three bottles. Now I hardly wait, when the sun shines, to garden. I am feeling fine."

Similar results to those described above have been reported by thousands of other women. Cardui's 40 years of success should encourage you to give it a thorough trial for the relief of any common female ailments.

CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

The $4,000,000,000 taxed robbery of the American people each year under the Fordney-McCumber tariff act is the most complete illustration we have of the operation of special privilege. Out of the Republican policy of special privilege has come every form of governmental corruption to which the country has been subjected almost continuously whenever the Republican party has been in power. It has been responsible for the bribery and corruption of public officials, for such scandals as the Credit Mobilier, Whiskey Ring frauds, the Star Route cases, the Naval Oil leases, Newberryism and all of the collateral and minor scandals that have disgraced the country when it was under Republican rule.

Republicans have discovered that there is a wide gulf separating promise and performance, and the leaders of the party are spending sleepless nights endeavoring to reconcile the difference.

Nearly twenty years ago Mark Hanna gave his party the slogan, "Stand pat." It is still standing pat and standing still.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Changes Tax Bill to Accord With the Views of the Democrats.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IT LOOKS as if the Republicans must go before the country in the Presidential campaign with a tax reduction law mainly of Democratic fashioning. This is the chances to the house measure made by the senate are sustained in conference and if the bill is not vetoed by Mr. Coolidge. The Democrats then would have gained one of the big political advantages for which they have been striving.

With the aid of the radical Republican senators and the two Farmer-Laborites, the Democrats in the senate last week forced the acceptance of the Simmons schedule tax bill by the committee of the whole in place of the Mellon plan. It fixes the surtax maximum at 40 per cent, and the normal tax rates at 2 per cent on net incomes up to $4,000, 4 per cent between $4,000 and $8,000, and 6 per cent above $8,000.

Under the Simmons surtax schedule a rate of 1 per cent applies on incomes between $10,000 and $11,000, instead of 2 per cent between $10,000 and $12,000, as in the Mellon plan, and 1 per cent between $12,000 and $13,000, as in the present law. The rates then advance by 1 per cent in intervals of $2,000 and $4,000 until 20 per cent is reached on incomes of $100,000. A rate of 21 per cent applies between $100,000 and $120,000, 22 per cent between $120,000 and $140,000, 23 per cent between $140,000 and $160,000, and 40 per cent on that portion of income in excess of $500,000.

Next the Democratic-Farmer-Labor coalition put into the bill the Democratic graduated corporation tax and the Democratic estate tax. The former provides that corporations earning $5,000 or less shall pay a normal tax of 5 per cent, and individual earnings in excess of specified exemptions would be subject to surtaxes ranging from a fraction of 1 per cent to 40 per cent. This would be a substitute for the 13 per cent flat tax already approved by the senate in lieu of the present tax of 13½ per cent on corporation earnings and the general capital stock tax, which is to be repealed.

The estate tax is charged to all inheritances, and provides that on a transfer to a husband, wife, child, adopted child, parent, or grandchild of the decedent a tax of 1 per cent up to $50,000 shall apply with a graduated tax on larger amounts up to a maximum of 20 per cent of the amount in excess of $10,000,000. These rates shall be increased by 25 per cent in the case of a transfer to a brother, sister, nephew, or niece of the decedent. The rates are increased by 50 per cent in the case of a transfer to any other person. Exemptions are $50,000 for husband or wife, $10,000 for a parent, child, adopted child or grandchild, and $5,000 for others.

It is said in Washington that while President Coolidge strongly disapproves of the changes in the bill made by the senate, he is not likely to veto it. He hopes some of the objectionable features will be removed in conference, especially the corporation tax substitute and the amendment providing for full publicity of tax returns.

SENATE and house conferees on the immigration bill agreed upon the feature providing complete exclusion of Japanese immigration after July 1 next, and then, yielding to the earnest arguments of President Coolidge, changed their minds and decided to recommend postponement of exclusion until March 1, 1926. This would give the State department time to negotiate with Japan for exclusion by treaty, which would mollify the citizens of the island empire considerably. The provision for exclusion as agreed on is in the following language:

"This subdivision shall not take effect as to exclusion until March 1, 1926, before which time the President is requested to negotiate with the Japanese government in relation to the abrogation of the present agreement on this subject."

Senator Shortridge of California declared his intention of raising a point of order against the conference report when it comes to the senate on the ground that the senate conferees had exceeded their authority.

SENATOR NORRIS expressed intention of continuing his efforts to save Muscle Shoals and other valuable resources of the country for the people will win wide approval, but it isn't likely he is doing the cause any good by his vicious attacks on President Coolidge in that connection. The senate agriculture committee heard James Martin Miller, correspondent, declare again that he correctly quoted the President, in his telegram to Ford's secretary, as saying he was "trying to deliver" the Muscle Shoals project to Ford—which Mr. Coolidge has specifically denied. Norris then said some very nasty things about the Chief Executive.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE vetoed the Tyson bill increasing the pensions of veterans and widows of the Civil war, on the ground of economy, but it is asserted it will be repassed by both houses. Secretary Mellon is said to have recommended that the President veto the soldiers' bonus measure.

SENATOR COUZENS and Governor Fuller gained a big point in their fight on Secretary Mellon when the senate passed the Jones resolution empowering its committee to go ahead with full counsel in the investigation of Mellon and the bureau of internal revenue, especially Frank J. Hogan who will get the job, and the inquiry will be limited to those the record of the latter in practicing enforcement.

Operations of the Department of Justice in connection with liquor cases in Chicago were called to the inquiry committee. Those present the governor, Couzens & Lucas (your "spy" and more about the conviction and prison of Grossman. Former Judge Lucas had testified previously concerning the Grossman matter, and his work C. W. Mc[illegible], assistant attorney general, appeared before the committee and said Lucas had lied like. This may develop interesting time.

CALIFORNIA legislature in odd primary election elected three judges and gave their predecessors (Wolfe, by a majority of something like 60,000 judges have to obey the law literally, calling the night was not a drunk. In the Democratic primaries McAdoo has gained an unprecedented lead and will be nominated without doubt.

Indiana legislature has carried the country as against Johnson by a large majority. The chief interest there was in the race of Ku Klux Klan for the gubernatorial nomination. He was backed by the Ku Klux Klan and defeated a field majority over all its opponents combined. The Democrats were split for Ralston, and Dr. Carleton McCulloch was in the field for the gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Coolidge has now defeated Senator Johnson in all the direct primary states except South Dakota, and veteran politicians believe the California is eliminated for all time as a Presidential possibility. The President and his close advisers are now formulating a platform for presentation to the Cleveland convention, devoting themselves at present especially to planks dealing with international matters. According to one veteran correspondent the tentative program embodies these features:

1. The United States shall join the World court if it is divorced from the League of Nations.

2. The court shall be established in connection with The Hague tribunal as originally advocated by the United States.

3. An international conference on land and further armaments limitation shall be called by President Coolidge, contingent upon the acceptance of the Dawes reparations settlement by the European powers.

Senator Ladge, in a resolution introduced in the Senate, has proposed that the President be asked to call a third Hague conference of all nations for the purpose of divorcing the world court from the League of Nations, and that the United States join the court on that condition.

NEARLY a dozen political parties or groups were active in the recent elections in Germany, and the results are that in the next reichstag certain groups favoring the acceptance of the Dawes committee report probably will be able to combine and control the vote of that body. Their majority, however, will not be large, and unless some of the groups change their views, the necessary two-thirds vote cannot be mustered for a change of the constitution so that the Dawes railroad plan can be accepted. The Nationalists claim 105 seats in the reichstag, making them the largest single party, and they assert the government of Chancellor Marx must resign and the chancellorship must be given a Nationalist. The Communists will play a big part in German politics, for they polled almost four million votes and have 60 members in the reichstag. They have revived their threat of a Red revolution and already have incited numerous strikes, both in the Ruhr and in occupied Germany. The Nationalists are said to be combining with the People's party and with some of the Catholics, Fascists and Bavarian People's party members to form a combination bloc with a total of 234 votes, which is a majority. It is believed this bloc will gradually work toward a restoration of the monarchy. Its success depends on the stand taken by the Catholics, who may prefer a coalition with the Socialists.

GERMAN police set big spy ring of the Paris office of the soviet Russian commercial delegation in search for some aspect, and added a lot of excitement. Berlin pretended strongly against what it charged was a violation of the extraterritorial rights and commercial immunities, which Paris refused to grant. All trade relations between the two countries were suspended and Krestinsky, soviet ambassador, was summoned to Moscow.

As was predicted some time ago, the negotiations in London between the Polish and Danzig governments are getting on well. The senate officials promised an extraordinary list of Danzig cases to Chief Justice Cardozo in the hope. If allowed, they would have Danzig legally in the Czar of Russia, but there is no chance that the hearings will allow this.

A LBERTAN community, as are provincial law and its enforcement, are getting it and last week there was a combined strike and lockout throughout the country. The workers refuse to pay their part of the pension fund, and the employers refuse to collect from their employees. However, the government is determined and the opposition is strongly worded, and the behavior of most ordered the strike terminated.

CHIEF game rulers, trappers, fish wardens and fishing are combining the search for Major Mitchell and Sergeant Harvey, the last survivors of the army's globe-circling aviation, and an offer of reward has spurred the Alaskan hunters to renewed effort. Various reports indicated that the missing plane flew to the north coast of the islands. The other three planes of the squadron proceeded to Attu island and were awaiting favorable weather for the flight to Attu island and thence to Japan.

THE general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Springfield, Mass., by a vote of 502 to 12, accepted in full the plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The union cannot be formally consummated for two years, but apparently the breach which has existed since 1844 is now healed. The bishops of the Church South will vote for the unification and the question will then be submitted to all annual conferences of both church organizations.

PEACE in Nicaragua was seemingly assured when on Monday the warring factions and representatives of the naval vessel American gunboats signed a treaty on board a United States cruiser. A temporary president of Nicaragua was selected pending free elections.

Francis A. Chapman has been appointed by the comptroller of currency at Washington, D. C., as receiver for the State National Bank at Albuquerque, according to a message to J. E. Juan Mirelis of Capitan paid dear for a load of government wood taken from the Lincoln National forest. He hauled the wood to Roswell and sold it. Bob White, Capitan ranger, took the matter before Justice of the Peace A. P. Fletcher, who fined Mirelis $15 and costs, amounting to $26.45. The judge advised Mirelis that for a second offense the fine would be $100 and ninety days in jail.

The new hatchery is to be located below the lodge and it is hoped to have it in operation by the first of August so as to supply all the streams of the county with trout fry during the latter part of the season. The new hatchery is backed by all the fishermen of the county and will make this section of the state one of the finest fishing grounds in the entire West. Hundreds of anglers spent a week or month in this vicinity last season and it is believed that with more fish in the streams the number of visitors can be more than doubled.

Committees were named in each ward to organize the whole city. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Julian Salud on June 11, 1924.

ROAD BUILDING

KEEPING ROADS OPEN IS EXPENSIVE TASK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Removal of snow from the highways of the country is a matter of increasing importance each winter, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Since 1900, the number of motor vehicles registered has increased from 48,000 to over 15,000,000, while the mileage of surfaced road has increased from 150,000 miles to about 430,000 miles. Approximately 62 per cent of the motor vehicles are registered and 53 per cent of the surfaced roads lie within the territory where the average annual snowfall is 20 or more inches.

The snow-clearing program of the states east of the Mississippi for the past winter included 16,000 miles of main trunk-line highway as compared with 18,000 miles for the previous year, according to information collected by the bureau. This amounts to about 30 per cent of the surfaced mileage in the states where snow is a problem, those north of the southern boundary of Virginia and Kentucky.

With the exception of a few small areas the annual snowfall in this belt ranges from 20 to 130 inches, making the clearing of the above mileage an undertaking of considerable size. As indicating the size of the undertaking in various sections, the average annual snowfall ranges from 74 to 132 inches in Maine, from 25 to 92 inches in Pennsylvania, from 10 to 22 inches in Delaware, from 28 to 121 inches in Michigan, and from 9 to 101 inches in West Virginia. The above figures taken from weather bureau records covering a period of years show that the problem of snow removal varies considerably in difficulty even in different parts of the same state. In nearly every state in the group the average maximum snowfall is more than twice as great as the average minimum snowfall, Delaware being the only conspicuous exception.

Snow is removed by state forces in Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois and Indiana, and on one section of road in Minnesota. The work is left to counties, towns or other local units in New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, New York, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin and the greater part of Minnesota. In Michigan and Wisconsin the counties may be ordered by the state highway department to remove snow from state roads.

Pennsylvania, one of the pioneers in snow removal, may be taken as having an organization typical of those well organized for the work. The work is done by the state highway department with its regular maintenance forces and funds, the funds being derived from motor vehicle registration fees. The state is divided into four districts which are subdivided into 15 districts. Under the district engineers are 12 superintendents, 700 foremen, 6,500 laborers, 130 truck drivers, and 40 motor operators. One hundred and sixty-seven trucks and 30 tractors are available, all of which are equipped with snow plows and also 500 road machines and crews. A master mechanic's shop is located within the jurisdiction of each of the 15 superintendents. The equipment is kept in condition for instant use and the permanently organized maintenance force is ready to start work as soon as a few inches of snow has fallen. This organization has a system for the past season of 5,200 miles of primary roads to be cleared to an average width of 20 feet and secondary roads to be cleared as far as practicable.

Representatives of the federal bureau who have visited all the states east of the Mississippi believe that some method of snow removal on the main trunk-line roads is desirable in the interest of economy. Such work is nearly overlooked with and is really a part of the maintenance of state roads.

Methods of snow removal vary considerably, but all states report that it is essential that work be started almost as soon as the snowfall begins and continue until the roads are cleared. In the states which have had the longest experience in snow removal two types of equipment are preferred, these being adjustable steel blades and V-shaped plows attached to the front of trucks and tractors. The adjustable steel blades have curved surfaces ranging in height from 18 to 30 inches and are approximately 12 feet long. The blade is set at an angle to the line of travel. If trucks are used they are loaded to capacity with ballast. This type of equipment is regarded as effective for depths of snow up to 36 inches.

V-shaped plows vary in height from two feet to five feet with wings ten feet long. The sides of the plow are generally concave, the purpose being to give the snow a rolling motion.

Road machines driven by horses, trucks or tractors are used to some extent as supplementary equipment.

In the eastern states, rotary plows have not been used to any great extent, but it is anticipated that their use may increase. Some of these are of such design as to throw snow from 30 to 40 feet from the center of the road and this is a great advantage where the usual added fill is likely

The Difficulty

As the prominent citizen was interested in all kinds of welfare work, his secretary had no hesitation about ushering in a dish-faced man with a prospectus.

"What is this about?" asked the prominent citizen.

"A proposed society to encourage people to mind their own business."

The other looked over the prospectus and then said: "This is, no doubt, a good thing. But if I joined I'd have to resign from six other organizations."

Spoons in History

Ordinary spoons were known to the Egyptians, who made them of wood, stone, ivory and bronze, and in Biblical times we may read that Moses made golden spoons for the tabernacle, silver spoons have been found in the buried cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. The name "spoon" is derived from an Anglo-Saxon word that meant chip of wood, so we can guess what the primitive Englishman employed for this useful implement.

The more time we take in the wrong direction the further we are from our destination.

MEMORIAL DAY 1924

OLD-AGE ARMY AT CEMETERY; GOD GRANT IT Telegram

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

MEMORIAL DAY is with us again, and again all good Americans will fittingly observe this national holiday—and holy day. For it is a holy day. In a sense it is the most comprehensive of all our days of national observance. For Memorial Day has grown as the United States of America has grown, as the American people have grown.

Memorial Day is now hallowed by more than fifty years of observance. Think what it has now come to mean to us. Can you not read into it something of the spirit of every one of our days of national observance?

Surely on Memorial Day an American can make good resolutions as fittingly as on New Year's Day, and with much to inspire them. The birthdays of Lincoln and Washington are closely akin to it. After Day, with its memorial dues and its sense of responsibility in posterity, is closely in touch. Easter Day and Memorial Day are inseparably bound together in early spring and budding hearts. And Memorial Day fits well in place with Flag Day, with Independence Day, with Armistice Day. There is something of Thanksgiving Day in it and something of the Christmas spirit.

On Memorial Day in short, we weep as we show flowers because the dead are ours; we live with pride that they are in God's keeping. We remember, not to relive vanished days, not to rack over the defeats, but to glorify our memories and to give thanks at the Providence that has watched over our nation and to pledge ourselves anew to the cause of liberty, humanity and justice to which our nation is devoted. Memorial Day means to us all that Old Glory means.

Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a flash of color beneath the sky:
Hats off!
The Flag is passing by.

Blue and white and crimson it shines
Over the gleam-tipped, ordered lines.
Hats off!
The Colors before us fly;
But more than the Flag is passing by.

Sea-fights and land-fights, grim and great,
Fought to make and to save the State;
Weary marches and sinking ships;
Cheers of victory on dying lips;
Days of plenty and years of peace;
March of a strong land's swift increase;
Equal justice, right and law;
Stately honor and reverent awe;
Sign of a nation, great and strong,
To ward her people from foreign wrong;
Pride and glory and honor—all
Live in the Colors to stand or fall.

Moreover, Memorial Day will be observed at the very ends of the earth for at the very ends of the earth are buried our American soldier dead. In the eight American War Cemeteries in Europe flowers will be strewn by loving hands and tribute paid by eloquent tongues—in France, in Belgium, in England.

Diverse indeed were the leagues and allies that made up the "Yanks" of the A. E. F. And far away, indeed, rest some of these Yanks. Sergeant Demetrious Pantelis, who died for liberty in the Flag of the United States" was borne by men in the uniform he had worn to the lands of his fathers among the Isles of Greece in the Mediterranean, and there interred with all the honors of war. Do you think that grave will be neglected Memorial Day?

Sam Sue Hee was born in San Francisco. The World War found him in China, enlisted and the father of three children. Sam needed many thousand miles to get to the front at Peace Valley. His journey ended one bitter cold in July of 1918. Yeste Sam, at the request of his widow, sent the body 10000 miles by land and by sea that Sam "American soldier" might rest near the graves of his comrades at Flat Creek, in Sha Hung, just beyond the South Gate Tai Sam Shan. Do you think the grave of Sam Sue Hee will be neglected Memorial Day?

These [illegible] in each of the places between Flanders New Market over seas by the United States and the cadets of the Virginia Military academy recently the battle of New Market, in the famous Shenandoah Valley, fought May 15, 1864. Here Confederates cadet Breckenridge defeated the Union forces under Sigel. There is probably no secondary battle of the Civil War of more importance. Had Sigel won, Lee could not have spared the men to check the advance without exposing Richmond to immediate and perhaps fatal capture. The fact that New Market could be remembered with the applause of thousands of spectators shows how thoroughly the wounds of the Civil War are healed.

The most fitting way for us to observe the 59th year of the close of the [illegible] battle. There were men of them—all under sixteen—under fifteen. Six, one of their professors. They stood beside an veterans under galling artillery fire. Then they charged with the 62nd Virginia Infantry, a six-gun battery on elevated ground, overpowered the gunners and captured the guns. A Cadet mounted a caisson and waved the Academy flag. And how the triumphant youngsters yelled! They lost 8 killed and 46 wounded in that wild charge. Truly, the American is the same fighting man from one generation to another.

Memorial Day will see both the Blue and the Gray in line, marching as bravely as of yore. But alas, the steps will be feebler and ranks thinner. Herewith is pictured Maj. Giles B. Cook, who has just left the White House, after inviting President Coolidge to attend the commencement exercises of the Lawrenceville Industrial school of Virginia. He is said to be the only survivor of the twelve members of the staff that surrendered with Gen. Robert E. Lee to General Grant at Appomattox Court House. "Uncle Jack" Armstrong of Windsor, S. C., eighty years of age, is said to be the only survivor of the First South Carolina Infantry, C. S. A.

The oldest member of the G. A. R. in New England is Henry D. Lay of West Newbury, Mass., who celebrated his hundredth birthday the other day, with his good wife by his side and surrounded by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. What changes have been wrought in the span of his life! The political world has practically been made over. The industrial and commercial world has been revolutionized. The whole scheme of living has been changed. The American people have marched from the Mississippi to the Pacific.

When Henry D. Lay was born in 1824 there were only twenty-four stars on the Flag. The western boundary of the United States was the Rocky Mountains and the Red River. Missouri and Louisiana were the only two states west of the Mississippi.

No figures are at hand for the United Confederate Veterans, whose general commander is Gen. William B. Haldane, Louisville, Ky. But the figures for the Grand Army of the Republic, whose commander in chief is Garfield M. Gallagher, Van Wert, O., tell a saddening story. The peak of the membership was 490,000 in 1890. In 1921 the membership had fallen to 204,717. In 1923 it was 178,741. The decrease in Grand Army posts from 1922 was 4,045 to 4,000.

So, this year, there will be fewer veterans, few old in Gray to cheer, and their graves to cover with flowers. But [illegible] we can strew flowers for Grant and Lee, for Sherman and Jackson, for Sheridan and Stuart and for their men, alike [illegible] Pride and glory and honor—all Live in the Colors to stand or fall.

Those are graves there are the graves of the American people who [illegible] the graves of Washington and the graves of Woodrow Wilson. Each was soldier-born in the service of his country. Each deserves well of his country.

Out of the blue and the Gray rose the Blood, to that the memories who with it each shall cheer "Over There." But—

For far away are Flanders Fields
Upon its grave to lay
My verse and forget-me-nots,
My rosemary and bay.
A gentle poppy on my breast
Will speak Memorial Day!

Restless the quiescence of the American people's thoughts on Memorial Day will be in the offerings at the memorial shrine in Arlington, the tomb of our "Unknown Soldier."

We gather here to the Nation's breast within the confines of the capital of the town in which that heroic Washington, the great father, and of the exquisite monument to Lincoln, the martyred savior.

About Johnny Clem, the Boy Hero of Civil War

Johnny Clem, the drummer boy, was born at Newark, O., August 13, 1851; was left an orphan when very young and enlisted as a drummer boy in a Michigan regiment when eleven years of age. During the war he became noted for his bravery, and had many narrow escapes. In the battle of Shiloh his drum was smashed by a piece of shell, and he was knocked down by the force of the explosion. From this incident he was called Johnny Shiloh, and later the Little Drummer Boy of Chickamauga. In another battle three balls passed through his cap, and he was twice wounded. While carrying a dispatch from General Thomas to General Logan, at Atlanta, a ball struck his pony near the top of the animal's head, killing it and wounding the rider. Later he was appointed orderly sergeant by General Thomas and attached to his staff. In 1864 he was mustered out, then went to school a while, and in 1871 was appointed by General Grant second lieutenant in the Twenty-fourth United States infantry. He was promoted first lieutenant in 1874, appointed captain and assistant quartermaster in 1882, promoted major and quartermaster in 1895, lieutenant colonel in 1901, and colonel in 1903, and was retired August 16, 1916. In the intervening years he saw active service on the border, among the Indians and in Porto Rico, and was chief quartermaster in the Philippines several years.

Like French Mode With Few Changes

The burden of going forward has shifted from the ingenious hand of the Paris designer to the graceful shoulders of the fashionable woman, observes a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. A short time ago the Paris couturier was industriously offering his artistic product to a waiting world. New ideas, some quite radical, were exhibited—certain old motifs were retained, and descriptions and sketches of the new Paris suggestions were broadcast to wherever smart women gathered. The readers know that the new Paris silhouette is straight and affectedly simple, that French skirts miss the ground by some fourteen inches, that elaboration is the essence of the current mode and that plait, flounce and tunic are its principal manifestations. They have seen sketches of the beltless frock and of the low waistline, the severe tailleur and the three-quarter length coat.

The next and, to most women, the most important phase of the springtime mode concerns the extent to which the recent innovations will be indorsed. For femininity, despite ideas to the contrary, does not leap boldly from one extreme to another, preferring rather to slowly absorb new ideas and adopt them gradually and in a modified form.

Consider first the skirt length, which has been a much mooted question since the revolutionary days of the war. One season long, one season short, its only consistency is its certainty to change. This season Paris has insisted on very short skirts, reaching on an average to no more than eight inches below the knee. It is not surprising that the American woman, the slimness of whose ankles is proverbial, should have espoused this style with some degree of enthusiasm—but, always a little more dignified than the Parisienne, she has tempered her acceptance with a becoming modesty.

Admitting the influence of Paris, but subjecting it to domestic revision, the approved skirt length this side the Atlantic has been established at about ten inches above the ground—and it marks a decided improvement both in poise and dignity over the French frocks.

Another instance wherein the word of Paris was accorded something less than its wonted reception concerns itself with the widely heralded entirety tailored suit. Not that there has been any hesitancy about accepting the O'Hessen styled costume. Far from it. The trim, severe lines, the short hip-length jackets and above all the splendidly conceived materials of the Paris-designed tailleur place it in the front ranks of the new clothes. But in France the suit is a necessity, an absolute essential. No Parisienne dares complete her wardrobe without at least one of these tailored costumes, which is not the case in these less impulsive shores. Whether from a fear that the suit would become relegated through a too extended vogue, or from a sense of [illegible] conservatism, the fact remains that the response of the American woman to the rigidly tailored vogue has not nearly measured up to expectations. Of course it's a safe acquisition—the severe suit will be decidedly en regle this season and even more so next—but it is not prescribed. And if it doesn't become you, you may neglect it in your new outfit and have no qualms about being demode.

Silhouette and Trimmings.

As to the silhouette and the trimming details of the new Paris dresses, they have been indorsed without qualification. The slim outline is even more acceptable this side of the Atlantic than in Paris, inasmuch as the typical American girl has more youthful proportions. And where the silhouette is the medium point is en vogue in the evening. The cut-out effect, with one or two straps, is a universal and invariable note at all times.

Among the fashionable feathers for daytime liard is the most emphasized. Alligator, despite much propaganda, is quite out of the picture. The popular suedes are brown and gray—but decidedly not black, which is both dressy and demode. For wear with black cloth—and black is widely worn this season—black patent kid, trimmed with white piping, is both smart and effective. When the color scheme of the costume is brown, tan shoes trimmed with brown, gold or white are appropriate. The brown shoe is back after a protracted absence and is worn in conjunction with tweed hose.

In the evening fancy colors are far and away the most important shoe fancy. Lame shoes [illegible] challenged closely by gilver and rel in the color scheme. And silver kid, both as a trimming on the vamp and as the back leather of the shoe, are widely noted. The smartest costumes among the satins are black trimmed with silver kid and brown trimmed with gold kid.

Decorated Footwear.

It is most important to bear in mind in connection with the question of your new evening shoes that the color of the dress must be closely approximated in the slipper—the smartest and most effective touch of the season [illegible] evening dress and shoe is an identity of color.

It is evident that the most popular type of shoe for the evening will be the white suede slipper trimmed with [illegible].

Buckles, in various shapes and sizes, are the most important of the shoe accessories. They are made from numerous materials—some are set with [illegible] some bronze, others enamel and some few are developed in the finest of leathers. The tendency is away from the steels and toward the more striking effects such as brilliants studded with colored stones. In addition to the conventional square, oval and round buckles there are novel wing motifs, butterflies, circlets, crescents and snakes.

The jeweled heel is the dernier cri of the evening mode. The heel itself is more conservative and much more subdued than in the immediately preceding seasons, but this comparative severity is more than compensated for by the garish brilliance of the studded jewels. These stand out on dull backgrounds in vivid sparklings of red, green and blue.

Stockings for afternoon wear feature the beige shades with their interesting versions of the much-wanted peau brule and nolette, the latter a taupe variation. The leading evening colors are gazelle, silver, rose and blonde. The fabric of the stocking is chiffon, almost without exception—and it is the sheerest and most fragile type of chiffon.

Safety Practice

Bluebelle, attired in complete riding costume, made it a point to seek the meadow every morning and climb a haystack. Seated on its peak, she would wack it vigorously with a riding crop. The other boarders were much puzzled over this procedure and a delegation was appointed to make discreet inquiries.

Thus the question was put direct.

"Why are you sitting on that haystack, Bluebelle?"

"Preliminary practice," explained the dear girl. "After a little of this it doesn't seem so far from the ground when you get on a horse."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, as many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and assists the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Woman

If a man is to gold, who cheers him? In trouble, who consoles him? In wrath, who soothes him? In joy, who takes his daily toast? In prosperity, who rejoices? In sorrow, who bares his breast to the world, and drowns with gentle tears and warm caresses the rankling wounds made by the slurs and arrows of outrageous fortune? What, but woman, if you please.—Sir Sir Marmaduke Wardenry.

On Friday, May 2nd, The Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. A. Ziegler with Mrs. Dingwall and Miss Brickley assistant hostesses. This was a very interesting meeting. The officers and chairman of the departments made reports of the year's work—Mrs. Richard, art chairman; Mrs. Ziegler, music chairman; Mrs. Blaney, chairman of applied education; Mrs. McCammon, chairman of home economics; Mrs. Coe, publicity chairman. At the beginning of the club year, Mrs. Harvey, membership chairman, collected dues that were in arrears and twelve new members have been secured.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $87, after having paid all state and district dues, making a payment of $20 to the state loan fund and other club expenses, notwitstanding the loss of $139 in one of the bank failures.

The parliamentarian, Mrs. McCall, conducted parliamentary drills during the year and gave instructions on correct procedure of meetings.

Plans have been made by the club for improvement on the local cemetery.

A basket picnic will be given given at the Bar W ranch on the 6th of June; everybody invited. This affair will mark the closing of the club year.

Nogal to Celebrate

The people of Nogal have decided to have a Fourth of July celebration and will invite all communities in the county to join them in the event. Detailed plans have not yet been perfected, but when completed they will be given to the public and co-operation invited.

Nogal has invited the people of Lincoln county often in the past to join her in the celebration of our Natal Day, and has invariably furnished entertainment and sport satisfactory to all who attended. That such will again be the result we confidently believe. Let's go.

Carrizozo School Notes

(By Miss E. E. Cole)

"I expect to pass through this life but once. If, therefore, there is any kindness I can show, or any good I can do to any fellow-being, let me do it now, let me not defer it, for I shall not pass this way again."—Hegeman.

Last Saturday night, the seventh grade pupils gave their teacher, Mrs. Blaney, a very delightful party at the home of Don English. We have heard the details but they are rather complicated and we cannot write them up.

The seventh grade has twenty-nine pupils and all of them say they are going to go clear through the high school. When this grade graduates it ought to be the largest graduating class the school has ever had.

Nineteen pupils of the Carrizozo schools were neither absent nor tardy during the year just closed. They are:

Mrs. Lowe's room — Frances Green.

Mrs. French's room—Dorothy Gallegos, Juana Pacheco, Sofia Pacheco.

Miss Connell's room — Alex Chapman, Preciliano Pino, Helen Happerin, Beatrice Pino.

Miss Fite's room—Florentino Lopez, J. H. Taylor, Dollie Core.

Mrs. Nickels' room—Randall Keating, Wallet Chapman.

Mrs. Blaney's room — Ruth Brickley, Gleneth English, Helen McCammon.

Mrs. Clarke's room—Josephine Brady, Native Brady, Lorene Stimmel.

Certificates of attendance, commending the pupils for "Regularity and Punctuality," have been given to these pupils.

Were you not, all of you, impressed with the fine quality of the boys and girls who were graduated from the Carrizozo school's last week? They are of the same high quality all over the nation. What a pity they cannot keep the high standards for which they so earnestly declaim on commencement night. The prayer "God keep us men" is a better prayer than "God give us men."

Where the Teachers spend the summer:

Mrs. Craddock will attend the Normal University at Las Vegas.

Mrs. Lewis Adams will remain in Carrizozo.

Mrs. Tatum and family will attend the University at Las Vegas.

Mrs. J. B. French has gone to Knoxville, Tennessee, to visit her alma mater and witness the graduation of her daughter Evelyn from the high school of the same institution.

Mrs. Clara Fritz Lowe will be in Corona during the summer.

Mrs. S. H. Nickels and family will be at the Normal at Vegas.

Miss Eleanor Connell will be at home at Midland, Texas.

Miss Grace Fite goes to California.

Mrs. Blaney will spend the time between Carrizozo and her Oscuro home.

Mrs. Clarke will be at home on the Ruidoso.

Miss Myers goes to Los Angeles.

Miss Crouch will spend the summer at Columbia, then take a position as teacher of Spanish and French at Coffeeville, Kans.

Miss Mentz will also be at Columbia, and teach in a high school in Iowa.

Mr. Custer will be in Carrizozo all summer.

E. E. Cole teaches in the Normal University, at Las Vegas, which position he has been offered six years in succession. During August he will visit Battle Creek and Washington City.
