Some high class ball may be expected here in the near future as Mr. Haley will try to secure games with several high class teams.

In answer to a call of the precinct chairman the Republicans of this community met at Wetmore's Hall last night for the purpose of electing a delegate to the County Republican Convention, to be held at Lincoln on Tuesday, August 11. E. D. Fred was elected as Chairman and W. F. A. Gierke as Secretary. Owing to the hard rain of the evening but a small crowd was in attendance, and the meeting was adjourned to meet at the same place on Monday evening August 3, at eight o'clock, at which it is hoped that all Republicans of the precinct who can will be in attendance.

It is with pleasure that "The Outlook" publishes the name of Prof. C. L. Davis as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of Superintendent of Schools of Lincoln County. The people can do no better in filling this highly important office than by nominating and electing Mr. Davis. He is a learned and experienced man, a teacher of many years experience, and is highly qualified to fill this position. He has the sincere wish for his success from this office and we are confident of his worth being demonstrated in event of his choice to the place.

CONVENTION CALL

The Republican Delegate Convention of the Eighteenth Legislative District is hereby called to meet in the Court House in Roswell, on August 11th, 1908, at 8:30 P. M. for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the 38th Legislative Assembly.

The counties comprising the said district, viz: Lincoln and Chaves, will be entitled to representation in said convention as follows:

One delegate for each fifty votes cast for the Honorable W. H. Andrews for delegate at the last general election held in November, 1906.

Lincoln County—623 votes—13 delegates. Chaves County—467 votes—10 delegates.

The Republican County Committee of the counties comprising the said 18th Legislative District are requested to call all necessary primaries and conventions and to see that their counties are properly represented in said convention by duly accredited delegates. R. L. Miller, Secretary. E. A. Cahoon, Chairman.

MRS. MCKENZIE DEAD

Mrs. L. N. McKenzie died at her home in the McDonald Addition, Carrizozo, on last Tuesday evening and was buried beside the grave of her father, Henry Pifingston, on the banks of the beautiful Bonito, on the following day. A most sad and unusual attending feature to Mrs. McKenzie's death was the fact that her six-weeks-old child died about two hours before its mother. The little one was buried with its mother. Mrs. Minnie Pifingston McKenzie was born in Colorado twenty-two years ago and moved with her parents and family to this country several years ago. On July 30, 1907 she was married to Mr. L. N. McKenzie and they took up their residence in Carrizozo. Mrs. McKenzie's health has been impaired for some time, but has recently been convalescent, and hopes were entertained for her complete recovery, but a relapse was suffered and her demise followed.

She was a very popular young woman and a kind and loving wife. Her double bereaved husband has the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends and "The Outlook" joins these latter in words of condolence.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY

O. A. LARRAZOLO ADDRESSES A LARGE AUDIENCE HERE LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

Hon. O. A. Larrazolo, Democratic nominee for Delegate to Congress was in Carrizozo last Friday night and opened the local Democratic campaign. Mr. Larrazolo arrived here in the morning and was taken in charge by some of our prominent Democrats and in the afternoon was taken to White Oaks, where he made a speech to the citizens of that community.

Returning here for supper he was in caucus with party leaders until about 8:30 o'clock, when he was joined by members of the local Democratic club, and all marched in a body to Wetmore's Hall, where a large crowd was in waiting to hear the "Silver Tongued Orator."

The meeting was opened with music by the East Carrizozo Mexican Band and the singing of patriotic airs. Several numbers were also rendered by a male quartette composed of Messrs. Hall, Ray, Davis and Holland, and were accepted with much applause.

Editor John Haley, of The Carrizozo News, opened the meeting. First he thanked the ladies for so beautifully decorating the hall, which was handsomely hung in green stuffs and American flags, and then after giving his views of the Republican demonstration of the night before, and several other things, introduced the chairmen of the evening, Mr. E. R. Kelly.

Mr. Kelly took the floor and in a brief manner introduced the speaker of the evening. Mr. Larrazolo very deeply and dramatically bowed his acknowledgement of the attending applause and took the stand. After apologizing for his hoarseness and asking for as much quietude as possible he proceeded with his talk. While as an attorney, his chosen profession, Mr. Larrazolo may not have been a success, the fact remains that the failure has not been due to his inability to talk. He is a good speaker—above the average—and while his principal theme—the old overwork harangue of Tariff—was one known by heart to every man in the country, he has a good line of argument from his point of view, and if you like it from yours as well.

As was anticipated, he scored the passed actions and conduct of all but the Democratic innocents, and assured us in manner most emphatic that only a few honest Republicans were left. He pictured the impositions of hardships the Republican administration was heaping upon an innocent and unsuspecting public, and told of the glorious emancipation awaiting us as soon as the Democratic mule could cross the White House lawn.

He attacked the sincerity of the Republican National platform, and in most ways made an ideal Democratic speech.

Larrazolo is a good talker, and despite his variance with our views on political matters, we are candid to admit of his evident sincerity and belief in his theme. He was generously applauded, and after the close of the meeting, met and shook hands with many of his hearers.

He left Saturday at noon by stage for Nogal, Capitan and Lincoln, to continue his tour of speech-making.

DEMOCRATIC HOPES

THEY ANTICIPATE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF AND GAINING STRENGTH THROUGH THE RECENT HARD TIMES

"We have one argument this year," remarked a Democrat of some reputation a few days ago in talking with "The Outlook," "which the Republicans have used with great effect in the last three campaigns. That is the argument of good vs. bad times—and we intend to work it to the limit this year."

Reasoning of this sort is undoubtedly at the bottom of most of the Democratic optimism that is occasionally in evidence nowadays. Everybody knows that we have had bad times during the past year—and the Democracy, hoping against hope that the American people will forget a number of things and fail to think of a number of others, is seriously thinking of making "hard times" its paramount issue in the campaign of 1908.

In four of the eight years during which the Democrats have been in power since the civil war, the country had very hard times; times so hard, in fact, that the trouble of the past ten months seems mild in comparison. With the return of Republicanism to power in the spring of 1897, times at once began to improve. Of the eleven years and some months which have followed ten and a half have constituted an era of the most remarkable prosperity that this or any other country has ever known. That's not a bad record—a fact which "The Outlook" thinks Americans recognize pretty clearly, especially when they compare it with what Bryan would have done in 1896 or 1900 and with what he would do, if elected, after 1908.

There is no reason why the Republican party should try to shrink from the issue that the hard times of the past year bring up. In fact, it is an issue that should be welcomed. If the Democrats are so anxious to profit politically from the hard times, why don't they come out and say that Pres. Roosevelt caused the trouble? Why don't they say also that what the President did was wrong, and that the voters of America, at a Presidential election ought to make formal apology for all that he has done.

For one reason or another Mr. Bryan and his followers are careful to say little of this point. They don't dare attack the policies of the Roosevelt administration. What they hope to do is to keep silent on this point themselves and gain the votes of men who have been hurt by the panic; men who are not in the habit of thinking much and who are willing to strike without reason at the very first thing that comes in their way. It may be that a fair number of votes will go in this way—but when he obviously counts on enough of this kind to carry the election, Mr. Bryan does not pay the greatest possible tribute to the intelligence of the American people.

Theodore Roosevelt, as President of the United States, found a condition of affairs in big business which called for sharp measures.

He took those measures—and the shock to confidence that followed, combined with a period of tight money all over the world, resulted in the panic of last fall. To say that Mr. Roosevelt caused the trouble is absurd. The house cleaning had to come sooner or later. It was fortunate that it came with such a man as Theodore Roosevelt in the White House, instead of a shifting demagogue like Bryan, who would have torn most of the house down before it was cleaned.

The country has paid the price for the house cleaning of 1906, 1907 and 1908. "Big Business" as a rule, has made up its mind that a new day has dawned; that it must obey the laws and in general play the game straight. The election of Mr. Taff would mean not an inch of retreat from the Roosevelt policies. At the same time, with matters adjusted to the new conditions, there is no reason in the world to doubt that the election of Taff this fall would mean an immediate business revival, until in a very short time we would be back on the basis of the years between 1900 and 1907.

It is clearly apparent that a portion, at least, of the people of New Mexico, have a very erroneous idea of the character of our present territorial Sunday law. An excellent illustration of this point has just been given by the fact that some one out at Gallup who neglected to give his name recently sent to the district attorney a printed program of events at the Carbon City on July 4 and 5—the 5th being Sunday—and wrote on the margin of the bill, "How is this for a violation of the Sunday law?"

For the entertainment on Sunday the program announces five foot races, a sack race, a block throwing race, a barbecue, two pony races, a ladies horse race, a baseball game and an Indian chicken pull, constituting in all, what would seem to be a very attractive program.

It is plain from his inquiry, that the person sending the bill regarded the affair as a violation of the Sunday law. But that would depend upon circumstances. Some or all of the games mentioned, if they had the effect, in the language of the statute, of "disturbing any worshipping assembly or private family" would constitute violations of the law, but otherwise not.

The mistake that is commonly made in regard to the Sunday law is in the idea which some people entertain, that is for the purpose of requiring all the people to observe the Sabbath in some particular manner. But the law has no such purpose. It does not attempt nor intend to compel Mr. Smith to observe the Sabbath in Mr. Brown's way, but merely undertakes to protect Mr. Brown in the observance of the Sabbath in his own way, without interference by other parties. If you should get up a ball game on Sunday, in front of a church, you would violate the law by disturbing "a worshipping assembly," but if you take your game to the fair grounds, or some other proper place for such things, you will be within your rights under the law, and no one can interfere with you.—Albuquerque Journal.

Theodore Roosevelt has made a good many effective speeches since he has been President. He has made few, if any, more powerful than his argument for a big and efficient navy at Newport on Wednesday of last week.

The President's naval speeches are always worth listening to. Mr. Roosevelt has been a close student of naval affairs and knows what he is talking about.

One thing that the President said at Newport was particularly interesting. "Ultimately, and I think, at a not very distant point," he said, "as this country grows up, it becomes more and more important that we should keep on the highest possible level the plane of living of our workmen for the chief end of a national policy in this country should be to keep on the highest level of prosperity the tiller of the soil and the wage worker for the prosperity of all other classes will follow their prosperity. Therefore, gentlemen, as it becomes more and more important to keep that prosperity on a high level, it is very possible that we shall have to exercise a continually greater rejection among immigrants that come hither; and shall, it may become necessary to take an attitude that will at first provoke friction."

"It is absolutely necessary that, if we claim for the right to choose who shall come here, we shall be in trim to uphold that right if any power challenges it, and if it can not be upheld by words, it can not be upheld by a coast-defense navy. It can be upheld only by the possession of an effective fighting navy, a navy able to preserve the honor and the interests of the United States, not by inviting attack and then seeing if we can not repel it, but by taking such action as shall guarantee us against our shores being attacked."

There are many reasons why this country should have a good navy. We don't expect to force a fight on anybody else—and at the same time we don't want to be in a position where it will be profitable for anybody else to force a fight on us. The day when a gunboat policy or a coast defense policy would satisfy a majority of Americans has passed. As a people we know more about naval affairs than we did. That means an adequate number of battleships for the American navy.

Chicago, July 25.—"President Roosevelt's statement on the Standard Oil decision has had the effect of a gigantic battery of the government's legal forces in Chicago.—United States District Attorney Sims and his assistants are straining every nerve to regain the $29,000,000 fine which slipped through their fingers in the decision of the Court of Appeals this week. Prosecutor Sims bases much hope on the theory of Attorney General Bonaparte that the issue may be appealed to the United States Supreme Court through an application for a writ of certiorari."

It is not in order to discuss an Appellate court decision, principally because it is a waste of time, but it is in order to express a regret, which the whole country entertains, that the Standard Oil will likely escape the heavy fine that Judge Landis imposed. This feeling is not from prejudice, but from a solemn judgment on the part of the public, that the Standard deserves a burdensome penalty.

To the "Outlook" it appears that the nomination of Delegate Andrews at the coming Territorial Republican Convention was assured. Many heretofore luke-warm and semi-interested papers have avowed their final positions in the past few days, and each of them are found in the Andrews column. Instructed delegates are numerously mentioned in last week's papers and the Senator has been gaining over his opponents steadily and consistently. He has every prospect of nomination and figures from an unexpected and well-informed source place his probable majority at from 25 to 35 and to his nomination on the first ballot. Decidedly the majority of one of his most formidable opponents makes the prospect of Andrews' nomination assured.

With news of a positive nature that warns to get our new depot and plant at once, with a rainfall copious enough to be satisfactory to all, with news of the resumption of business along all lines throughout the country, and with a prospect of a general recovery of the "live lines" of the territory and beyond, the depression of business conditions is being lifted. The depression of business conditions has been, as in all parts of the territory, the result of the people having had to close their eyes to the fact that they had not allowed themselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by the fact that in a more prosperous future.

MR. WELLS OBJECTED

A PRINTER WHO OPPOSED THE "TALKING" OF HIS OFFICE

The idea seems to be prevalent in this section of the United States, or among some people of this section at least, that when a newspaper says anything or does anything that is not to their liking, the aggrieved party should proceed to "beat up" the publisher.

Not long since we all read of the murder of a young man in El Paso who had taken exception to a piece in one of the dailies of that city, and who had declared his intentions of cleaning out the office, but was, instead, shot and killed by the publisher.

Still more recently a policeman in Albuquerque felt called upon to chastise the Editor of the Sun, and without reckoning with his host went to the sanctum of that deceminator of worldly happenings and avowed his intention of "doing things" in a way to make the natives set up and notice. A few moments later he was the occupant of a downy couch in an ambulance and on his way home a wiser and much more humble wing of the law.

On Thursday of last week The Texico Trumpet had a "bad actor" in the person of one Mr. Simmons who felt that he had been unjustly roasted, to deal with. Simmons is the proprietor of a hawdy house in the Twin Cities, is a about 30 years of age, broad shouldered, and athletic looking. Remembering that Bell or Loomis were small men, and only able to navigate through the air of a pair of crutches, he strapped on an arsenal of shotguns and went looking for the publisher of his anger.

Probably fortunately for Mr. Simmons, Editor Loomis was not in the Simmons just went on in to the book office of the Trumpet with all shells set, and proceeded to put that printery on the hummer. Now while the main stem of the front office was absent, a very athletic young hercules, by name J. C. Wells, was on watch in the mechanical department of the concern. Simmons proceeded to immediately display his "guts" and informed Mr. Wells that he Simmons was a bold, bad, wicked, bloodthirsty individual; and that he was mad—awful mad. He was going to do several things, the nature of which we leave to your imagination, and that he was going to start at it right then.

Mr. Well, an inoffensive and pleasant appearing young man, (We know him well) had ideas of his own concerning the propriety of such action, and put in a protest. His protest consisted in the artistic welding of a stove poker. By means of this harmless little toy he brought Simmons into subjugation to such an extent that that young worthy made his exit through the alley and into Texas, nursing a broken left arm and numerous other prominent bumps. Although having fired three shots at Mr. Wells, this latter went with his bulk of 115 lbs. was unhurt.

Simmons got over into Parmer County, Texas, but was captured and now languishes in the Portales jail, being unable to give the necessary $1,000 bail to admit of his liberty until the grand jury convenes this fall.

Here's to the knocker, the enterprise blooker, the industry shookey whom we all know so well

He stands on the corner, the acing scerner, calamity warner, and raises a yell.

Of things that allure us, he's ready to nurse us; he'll always assure us they're really no good.

"The whole dratted section"—just note the inflection—"has missed its connection—I knew that it would!"

If you are looking for blessing, his visage distressing and language depressing will give you a chill.

He's the crystallized juices of diverse abuses, that only have uses in fostering ill.

The knocker in heaven, would raise six and seven, and Paradise leaven with sparkings of—well

'Twere folly to write it, dare not it dote it, for the knocker would bite it as something to yell.

So here's to the knocker, the enterprise blooker, the industry shookey, whom we all know so well!

He's known by the curses he so freely disburges, and really it worse is—he's known by his yell—Ex.
