SEES DARK ERA FOR ANGLERS

Writer Predicts the Final Disappearance of All Fish from the Streams of the Earth.

The fishing is going to be very poor in an age or two hence. The fish are already getting quite scarce in the streams, and even the lake and oceans begin to feel the draft upon them. What a sad lot it will be for the man who can never get a fishing—who can never feel the thrill of a fishbite!

That seems to be the fate of the man down in the years to come. There is a great effort to keep up the supply, but the scarcity will gain on that, until fishing will become like hunting buffalo. The ocean fish will last a long time, but the days of the black bass, the perch, and the jack salmon are numbered, and fishing will be a lost joy.

It is not the incessant angling that is the explanation of the final disappearance of fish from our streams—it is the growing population and the increasing devastation of the banks, the poisoning of the waters with sulphurous acids, the dislocation of the beds, and the sad interference with the sweet habits of nature which the fish love so well.

But possibly this is all a part of the mysterious evolution, for in the future automobiles, aeroplanes, wireless messages and all the excitements of a sorrowful progress will unfit the heart for the serene joy of waiting for a bite.—Ohio State Journal.

HAS THE MILITARY INSTINCT

Some Time Ruler of Germany Demonstrated the Fact a Short Time Ago.

The eldest son of the German crown prince has made his first public, though unexpected, appearance in a military role quite in keeping with Hohenzollern traditions. He is at present 2 1/2 years old.

The other day pedestrians strolling along Unter den Linden and casting the usual glances along the windows of the crown prince's palace, saw little Wilhelm climb on to the window seat and stand upright on the seat. He caught sight of the crowd which was rapidly assembling outside and regarded it with benevolent curiosity.

Presently, shouldering a stick he carried like a rifle, he strutted solemnly backward and forward across the breadth of the window, every now and then stopping to present arms to the spectators. This little comedy had been going on for some minutes, when suddenly a large hand was thrust out of the back-ground. It seized the little prince and ruthlessly and unceremoniously dragged him from the scene.

SHE MAKES ALLOWANCES.

The woman whom everybody likes is tolerant and broad-minded. She always sees the best side of everybody. She is above reproach herself, but she is the first to make allowances for those who have wandered off the path, and to hold out a helping hand of friendship to them. She pities where others blame.

She "stands up" for her friends—and her enemies, too, if she should happen to have any.

And she is thoroughly good-natured. She can admire other people's beauty, accomplishments, successes, wholeheartedly. There is nothing envious, or mean, or petty, or small about her. Her philosophy is a bright, stimulating, every-day one. She sees things as they are, takes them as they come, and makes the best of them.

ALWAYS FULL.

"No," said Uncle Tom, firmly. "I shouldn't think of having a bath on a full stomach."
"Then you mean to say, nunk," broke in little curly-headed Willie just then, "that you never have a bath!"

FAMED AS LINGUIST.

Attorney General Wickersham is the Spanish scholar of President Taft's cabinet. He reads, in the original, the works of Cervantes, Lope de Vega, Calderon, Valera and Galdos, having found time to master Spanish before he passed his law examinations. And he talks fluent Spanish, as well as French and Italian.

NOT A WATERY WASTE.

Teacher—What is an ocean?
Johnny—A body of water that's bigger than the sea.

NO DANGER OF JUNGLE FEVER

If Travelers in Africa Had Temperament akin to That of Driver of London Cab.

Prof. Frederick Starr, the anthropologist, was discussing in Chicago the Roosevelt hunting trip.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "will encounter very great dangers in the jungle. I don't mean the wild beasts; I mean the fever. Mr. Roosevelt's is not the temperament to resist these dangers, either.

"His is a heady, rushing temperament; but the sort of temperament that keeps jungle fever off is like—

"I once boarded a four-wheeler in Piccadilly," said Prof. Starr, "and I made the driver drive to Claridge's.

"He drove at a snail's pace. Exasperated—for I was already late for luncheon—I put out my head and shouted:

"Look here, Cabby, we're not going to a funeral!"

"The cabby looked at me, took out his pipe and frowned.

"No," he said, "and we ain't going to no bloomin' fire, neither."—Los Angeles Times.

HOMESICK INDIANS DIE.

One of the most pathetic instances of homesickness is that of which the Modoc Indians are said to be the victims. After more than thirty years of waiting the Modocs, who because of their warring upon white settlers in Oregon, were exiled to Indian Territory and placed upon the Quapaw reservation, are hoping to be sent back to their native home. At that time there were 217 of the tribe and to-day they number only 49. Senator Curtis of Kansas, himself an Indian, in his plea for the return of the remnant of the tribe, gives it as his opinion that the mental anxiety brought about by their enforced separation from family and friends is the cause of this rapid decrease in their numbers.—Vogue.

BUT TIMES HAD CHANGED.

The weary hunters returned to the village in deep chagrin.

"You told us about the bears on the hills," blurted one of the negroes, angrily.

"I surely did, bub," drawled the oldest inhabitant of the settlement. "See any?"

"Not a one."

"Bob cats?"

"Not a trace of them."

The old man lit his pipe.

"Wall, that do beat everything," he remarked, dryly. "Thar was plenty of them thar 69 years ago when I was a boy. Perhaps—"

But the disappointed hunters were making strides for the station.

HELP WANTED.

Geyer—I understand the coal barons are in favor of a higher duty on coal.

Myer—Because why?

Gyer—Owing to the mild winter they haven't been able to boost the price to the limit, so they think congress should help them out.

Myer—And will congress do it?

Gyer—Ask me something easy.

One never knows what congress or a woman will do.

A BREEZY REPLY.

"What is the first prime requisite for a good blow-out?"

"I should suppose to raise the wind."

Reasons Why.

Have you ever stopped to think of the many reasons why the county seat of Lincoln County should be located at Carrizozo? It requires but little thought to understand the many advantages to be derived. We present but a few of these, but they, in themselves, are of the utmost importance for the welfare of the people of Lincoln County.

Carrizozo is centrally located and offers the only railroad facilities of any county. It is the market place for almost the entire populace, and the only point in the county from which the product of the farmer, miner and stock man can be moved to the larger markets of the east and west.

Carrizozo offers the centre of population, and the district comprising its boundaries shows a larger gain in this respect than the balance of the county put together. There is a constant show of progress in its confines and it offers opportunities for investments that are not to be secured elsewhere in this county.

One of the greatest reasons that we have to offer for the removal of the county seat to Carrizozo is the reduced cost to the county in the court and sheriff's office. Owing to our facilities for reaching people, thousands of dollars will be saved annually to the county through the reduced costs of court attendance and mileage. Another feature that will appeal to the people will be the increased facilities for reaching the county records. Carrizozo being the centre of population, has greater need of these records owing to its steady growth. With Carrizozo as the county seat, fully 25 per cent of the realty transactions can be consummated in a many hours as it now takes days.

These are but a few of the many advantages which Carrizozo has to offer. There are many more just as vital, but we feel that the above constitute in themselves sufficient reasons for the removal of the county seat to Carrizozo.

New Mexico Today

New Mexico, particularly Lincoln County, has made wonderful improvements in the past 27 years.

Then many of the farmers used a forked stick with a piece of tin tacked over the lower fork for a plow. All the small grain was harvested with a reap hook, of which J. A. Laure, a merchant at Lincoln kept a large supply. Wheat was thrashed with a bunch of sheep or goats, and the gamma hay was cut with a hoe. Now the farmers have the best of machinery and most of them raise alfalfa for their stock in place of the wild grasses. Then everybody spoke the Spanish language. Now, all the young people and most of the older ones speak the English language. Then young folks had to pay J. P. 50 cents for a permit to have a dance and as they never accounted for the money I suppose it was all velvet.

Most all these old, superstitious people have passed beyond - have gone to their last hunting grounds, and with the rising generation has come a spirit of improvements educationally, and morally which has been beyond our greatest expectations. Good schools are now taught throughout the county, and with an efficient compulsory law all classes will soon be educated and superstitious ideas will be relegated to the past. I find many Spanish speaking people who now favor moving the county seat to Carrizozo. "It's better," they say "than to divide the courts."

who knew the combination! He stood up, a cold chill wrinkling his spine. He saw it all distinctly. Cavanaugh had overheard him speak to Kate and had opened the safe after their departure for the club. It was all very cleverly done. He knew that Kate was utterly blameless. Then it dawned upon him that they appeared as though they accepted the catastrophe as not wholly unexpected. To what did this labyrinth lead?

A rattle of the curtain rings wheeled them about. They beheld Cavanaugh himself standing in the doorway. "What's the trouble?" he asked, eyeing Carrington suspiciously. Carrington answered him lolly. "I left some legal documents of great value in this safe; they are no longer there."

Cavanaugh's jaw dropped. He stared at Kate, then at Norah. If ever there was written on a face an "assigned dismay" and astonishment, it was on the millionaire's. A moment before Carrington would have sworn that he was guilty; now he knew not what to believe. He grew bewildered. There had certainly been a burglar, but who was he?

"Mr. Carrington," said Cavanaugh, pulling himself together with an effort, "you need have no worry whatever. I will undertake to restore your documents. I offer you no explanations." He left them abruptly.

The young lawyer concluded to grope no longer. Somebody else would have to lead him out of this labyrinthine maze. All at once there came to him a sense of infinite relief. Providence had kindly taken the matter out of his hands.

"Never mind, Kate," he said. "For my part, I should be entirely satisfied if I never saw the miserable thing again."

"Father will find it for you." Her eyes were dim with tears of shame. "What is it, girl?" "Nothing that I can explain to you, John. Good night."

When he had gone to his room, Norah turned to her sister and sobbed on her breast.

"Oh, Kate!" "What is the matter, child?" "I told grandma the combination!"

CHAPTER III.

Carrington tumbled out of bed at six and threw out the old-fashioned green blinds. A warm, golden summer morning greeted his eyes, and the peaceful calm of Sunday lay upon the land. A robin piped in an apple tree, an oriole flashed across the flower beds, and a bee buzzed just outside the mill. A brave day! He stepped into his tub, bathed and dressed in his riding clothes, for there was to be a canter down to the sea and return before breakfast. From the window he could see the room walking the beautiful thoroughbreds up and down the driveway. There were only two this morning; evidently Norah was not going.

The Cavanaugh girls had created almost a scandal and a revolution when they first appeared at Glenwood. People had read and talked about women riding like men, they had even seen pictures of them, but to find them close at hand was something of a shock. Yet, when they saw with what ease the Cavanaugh girls took the hedges, ditches and fences, how their mounts never suffered from saddle-galls, and, above all, how the two always kept even pace with the best men riders, opinion veered; and several ladies changed their habits.

Norah, who saw the droll side of things, used to say that the accepted riding habit for women reminded her of a kilt for a harr.

Carrington stole quietly down to the horses. He had great affection for the sleek thoroughbreds. Their ears went forward when they saw him, and they whinnied softly. He rubbed their velvet noses and in turn they nuzzled him for sugar leaves. Had it not been for the night and the attendant mysteries, his happiness would have been complete. People waste many precious moments in useless retrospection; so Carrington resolutely forced the subject from his mind. One thing was certain; the Cavanaugh knew who the burglar was; and there was something strange in the idea of an empty safe in a millionaire's home. Fuhaw! He took out the expected sugar leaves and extended them on both palms.

The pair lipped his hand and crunched the sweets with evident relish. "How are they to-day, James?" "Fit for 20 miles, straight away or across lots, sir. Your mount is feeling his oats this morning; he hasn't been out for a run since Thursday, sir. I've put the curb on him to ease his back into his head to out on things. Here comes Miss Kate, sir."

Carrington's pulse rose. Kate was approaching them. She was pale but serene. She smiled a good morning, which took in the gentleman and the groom.

"I hope I haven't kept you waiting." "Not a moment; I only just got down myself," said Carrington. She remained without assistance and adjusted her skirts. The filly began to waltz, impatient to be off. "To the beach?" Carrington asked, swinging into his saddle. She nodded and they started off toward the highway at a smart trot. Once there, the animals broke into an easy canter, which they maintained for a mile or more. Then Kate drew down to a walk.

"What a day!" said he, waving his hand toward the sea line. There was color aplenty on her cheeks now, and her eyes shone like precious stones. There is no exhilaration quite like it. She nickered the elders with her crop, and once or twice reached up for a ripening apple. In the air there was the strange sea smell, mingled with the warm scent of clover.

"I'll race you to the beach!" she cried, suddenly. "Done! I'll give you to the sixth tree," He laughed. There was really nothing at all in the world but this beautiful girl, the horses, and the white road that wound in and out to the sea.

She trotted her mount to the sixth tree, turned, and then gave the signal. Away they went, the horses snuffing the sugar as their riders. With their ears laid back, their nostrils wide, their feet drumming, they thundered down the road. Carrington gained, but slowly, and he had to hold his right arm as a shield for his eyes, as the filly's heels threw back a steady rain of sand and gravel. Faster and faster a milk wagon reared out just toiling footed obstacles scattered to the wrong side of the road, and the star pipe in the orchards squeaked and belted inland. It was all very fine. And when they struck deep-lavay sand the animals were neck and neck. It was now no easy task to bring them to a stop. Carrington's hunter had made up his mind to win, and the filly was equally determined. As an expedient, they finally guided the animals toward the hall of an ancient wreck; nothing else would have stopped them.
