CARRIZOZO WINS in Election for COUNTY SEAT By a Majority Vote of 285. 'Rah for Lincoln County!

NEWS OF CARRIZOZO AND VICINITY.

—Everybody smiles since Carrizozo won.

—Mart. Gordin and Clark Hust are in town today.

—Jim Harper of Three Rivers has been taking in our town since election.

—Jack Melson who mysteriously disappeared a month ago has been located at Cimarron N. M.

—Mr. Geo. Hoxier came down from the Vera Cruz mines Thursday and left that night for Kansas City where he will have an operation performed on his face.

—Bob Swan was taken to the county jail on Wednesday, charged with larceny of cattle. He was unable to furnish bond to the extent of $1500.

—Miss Eugene Peters of Angus is visiting her parents.

—A man was arrested at Capitan Monday on the charge of bigamy, he is accused of having only seven wives. Father-in-Law number seven accompanied by a Deputy Sheriff took the man back to Oklahoma for trial.

—Peter A. Schmidt, formerly Deputy Probate Clerk accompanied by his wife and daughter Isabelle left Thursday for their new home in Pomona California.

—The Dance in Wetmore's Hall election evening was well attended and every body reports a good time. The election returns being so favorable to Carrizozo probably helped the occasion. "It may be a long time before Carrizozo shall have such good cause rejoicing and the occasion will long be remembered by all present."

—Born to Mr. and Mrs. Whittingham, a girl baby. We extend congratulations to the happy parents.

—The Automobiles of Carrizozo were busy election day. Not one voter was allowed to remain at home.

—Mrs. Edwin Darling has been quite sick the past week.

—Miss Fenton, whose home is in Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. F. Whittingham.

—Engineer W. C. Hudnall left on a 60 days' leave of absence. He will attend the exposition at Seattle.

—Lee B. Chase is again with the Outlook.

—Art. Rolland has completed his new ten room house and will move in shortly. This is one of the most beautiful home in Carrizozo and is exquisitely furnished in mission.

UNLIKE MODERN "CORNER."

Fortunate Man Defused to Make More Out of the Misfortunes of His Fellows.

This story is told on David Brewster, a farmer who lived near Delphos for 30 years. During grass-hopper times many years ago Mr. Brewster fortunately had a crib full of corn, and corn got to be worth more than money in that part of the state. Two new settlers who were just about starving went to buy a little of the grain.

"Mr. Brewster," said one of the would-be buyers, "will you sell us a little of that corn?"

"Not a d—d ear," was the reply. "But we are nearly starved, and here is the money; just name your price," said one of the men.

"Put up your money. I'm not selling any corn," he replied.

"But we will pay you $5—$10—a bushel."

"Didn't I say I wouldn't sell you any corn? Do you take me for a liar?"

The men turned to depart.

"Say," called Brewster, "drive around to the end of the crib and put in ten bushels, but not an ear more. I'm not going to get rich off my neighbors' misfortunes. There are a lot of people around here who will need corn, and it must be divided into lots."

And the crib of corn, which would have brought its owner a small fortune, was given to his neighbors who were not so fortunate as himself. —Hochester Herald.

DRY FARMING EXPERT COMING

The International Dry Farming Congress has secured a Field Representative to travel over the dry regions.

This expert, Prof. E. J. Iddings, is a man who has had a life long experience in the work of dry farming in the west, and his knowledge of scientific soil culture is said to be perfect.

Prof. Iddings is now engaged in making investigations in New Mexico along the line of the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad. He has visited Tucumcari and Santa Rosa, and will arrive in Carrizozo at an early date.

After a thorough examination has been made, Bulletins will be issued from the secretary's office in Denver to assist the local farmers.

LINCOLN WITHDRAWS SUIT

The people of Lincoln have capitulated and submitted to the wishes of a majority of the Lincoln County voters. They have authorized their Attorney, Mr. Geo. B. Barber, to withdraw the suit filed a short time ago by the voters of the east side of this county.

Thus all objections have been withdrawn and next Monday after the vote has been canvassed by the Board of County Commissioners, Carrizozo becomes the legal county seat of Lincoln County.

Temporary quarters are now being secured for the county officers and citizens will be able to transact business with them very soon.

"It gives all the news." "Subscribe to your home paper first and then take the El Paso Herald."

The Herald is the best medium to keep in touch with general news and news of the whole southwest."

Misses Adams and Thompson of Corona came in on Sunday, invited to attend the Teachers Institute.

Two Candidates

HAROLD H. GATH

Author of "The Heart of the West," "The Heart of the East," "The Heart of the South," "The Heart of the North," "The Heart of the World."

Illustration by A. WAIL

"His very handsome," thought the girl, but she sighed.

That same evening Newcomb and McDermott, the Democratic leader, met by appointment in McDermott's law office. McDermott was a wealthy, first-class manufacturer who had held various state and national offices. As a business man his policy was absolute honesty. He gave liberal wages, and his men paraded, and adjusted their differences. There were as many Republicans as Democrats in his employ. Politics never entered the shop. Every dollar in his business had been honestly earned. He was a born leader, kindly, humorous, intelligent. But once he put on his silk hat and frock coat, a metamorphosis took place. He became a different man; cold, purposeful, determined, with a burning over obstacles without heart or conscience, using all means to gain his desired ends: scheming, plotting, undermining this man or elevating that, a politician in every sense of the word; cunning, astute, long-headed, far-seeing. He was not suave like his old enemy, the senator; he was blunt because he knew the fullness of his power. But for all his bluntness, he was, when need came, a diplomat of no mean order. If he brought about a shady election, he had the courage to stand by what he had done. He was respected and defeated alike.

The present incumbent in the city hall was no longer of use to him. He was wise enough to see that harm to his power would come about in case the reform movement got headway; he might even be dethroned. So his general's eye had lighted on Newcomb, as the senator's had lighted on Willard; only he had mistaken his man, whereas the senator had not.

"My boy," he began, "I'm going to lecture you."

"Go ahead," said Newcomb. "I know what the trouble is. I crossed out Mr. Murphy's name from the list you fixed up for my inspection."

"And his name must go back," smiling. "We can't afford to turn him down at this late day."

"I can," said the protégé, imperiously and firmly.

For a moment their glances met and clashed.

"You must always remember the welfare of the party," gently.

"And the people," supplemented the admonished one.

"Of course," with thin lips. "But Murphy's name must stand. We depend upon the eighth ward to elect you, and Murphy holds it in his palm. Your friend Willard will be forced to accept Matthews for the same reason. It's a game of chess, but a great game."

"Matthews? I don't believe it. Willard would not speak to him on the street, let alone put him on the ticket."

"Wait and see."

"He's a blackie, a gambler, worse than Murphy."

"And what is your grievance against Murphy? He has always served the party well."

"Not to speak of Mr. Murphy."

"What has he done?"

"He has sold his vote three times in the common council. He sold it once for $5,000 in that last pavement deal. I have been rather observant. Let him remain alderman; I cannot see my way clear to appoint him to a position in the city hall."

McDermott's eyes narrowed. "Your accusations are grave. If Murphy learns, he may make you prove it."

Newcomb remained silent for a few minutes. His face was thoughtful.

"Why hasn't it been turned over to the district attorney?"

pose; then having decided to pursue a certain course, he reached into a pigeon-hole of his desk and selected a paper which he gave to McDermott. The latter studied the paper carefully. From the paper his glance traveled to the face of the young man opposite him. He wondered why he hadn't taken more particular notice of the cleft chin and the blue-gray eyes. Had he made a mistake? Was the young fellow's honesty greater than his ambition? McDermott returned the paper without comment.

"Is that proof enough?" Newcomb asked, a bit of raillery in his tones.

"You should have told me of this long ago."

"I hadn't the remotest idea that Murphy's name would turn up. You can very well understand that I cannot consider this man's name as an appointee."

"Why hasn't it been turned over to the district attorney?"

"The plaintiff is a patient man. He left it to me. It is a good deal, and I may have to hold it over Mr. Murphy's neck."

McDermott smiled.

"The Democratic party in this county needs a strong tonic in the nature of a clean bill. I want my appointees men of high standing; I want them honest; I want them not for what they have done, but what they may do."

McDermott smiled again. "I have made a mistake, in not coming to you earlier. There is a great future for a man of your kidney, Newcomb. You have a genuine talent for politics. You possess something that only a dozen men in a hundred thousand possess, a tone. Words are empty things unless they are backed by a tone. Tone holds the auditor, convinces him, directs him if by chance he is wavering. You are a born orator. Miller retired from congress next year. His usefulness in Washington has passed. How would you like to succeed him?"

Insidious honey! Newcomb looked out of the window. Washington! A seat among the Seats of the Mighty! A torchlight procession was passing through the street below, and the noise of the drums and brass bands, the world's applause, the beating of hands, the yells of triumph, the laudation of the press—the world holds no greater thrill than this. Art and literature stand pale beside it. But a worm gnawed at the heart of this rose a canker ate into the laurel. Newcomb turned. He was by no means gullible.

"When I accepted this nomination, I did so because I believed that the party was in danger, and that, if elected, I might benefit the people. I have remained silent; I have spoken but little of my plans; I have made few promises. Mr. McDermott, I am determined, first and foremost, to be mayor in all the meaning of the word. I refuse to be a figurehead. I have crossed out Murphy's name because he is a dishonest citizen. Yes, I am ambitious; but I would forego Washington rather than reach it by shaking Murphy's hand. The blood of the old war-governor flows in his veins at that moment."

"It must be replaced," quietly.

"In face of that document?"

"In spite of it."

"I refuse!"

"Listen to reason, my boy: you are young, and you have to learn that in politics there's always a bitter pill with the sweet. To elect you I have given my word to Murphy that he shall have the office."

"You may send Mr. Murphy to me."

said Newcomb shortly. "I'll take all the blame."

"That is real!"

"It is. And I am surprised that you should request that of me."

"He will defeat you."

"No he won't."

McDermott was exceedingly angry, but he could not help admitting the young man's resolution and directness.

Seattle Wash., August 11.—Clean marriages are God-blessed marriages. Practically, Washington's clean marriage laws applied generally would be the salvation of the nation. There is one thing sure and that is that this new code will cut down business in the divorce courts and the police stations. Unhappy wedlock is nearly always the result of the marriage of those unfit.

Clean wedlock means pure citizenship, a better government, a grander nation, a mental superiority that will attest our leadership among the great nations of the earth. That is what Mr. Edge's bill meant and that is why we gave him all the support in our power.

That is the statement of an energetic young woman beautiful, accomplished, a social leader, a girl but 23 years old, who labored tirelessly and effectively to help secure the support that put the now famous "clean marriage law" through the recent session of the legislature of the state of Washington.

She is Miss Emma Mabel Taylor of this city, and she is but one of many of Seattle's women, who though having no vote, threw the tremendous power of their moral support behind Assemblyman Leslie Edge in his fight for his clean marriage bill.

Edge won, and today only those physically, and mentally, and morally fit can be married in Wash.

Under the provision of Edge's marriage law both parties to a marriage contract must submit to an examination by a licensed physician and obtain a certificate of their physical fitness to wed before they can secure a license.

And the law goes still further. It declares that no girl under 18 years and no man under 21 years of age can marry. Even with her parents' consent no girl under 18 can wed.

The strong popular sentiment that forced the law through the legislature is still active with the result that it is being rigidly enforced.

A phenomenon rarely seen at all and only in the west, was witnessed in this city last Sunday night near nine o'clock when a rainbow was located in the northern sky. It had been raining all evening and when the moon rose and began to peep from under a heavy rift in the southeast it caused the formation of the arch in all its splendid colors.

The sight was a beautiful one and just as moonlight is soft and pale so was rainbow in proportion and lacked the marked distinction in colors seen ordinarily, which softness added to its beauty.

Rainbow at night is very rare and can only be seen when the moon is full and the atmosphere is as clear as glass. Generally is in the west. Such nights are rare except on these plateaus in a mirage of a desert. —Tucson Daily Star.

THE EXTREME OF PREJUDICE

Writer of Famous Picture Blotted Out
Feature That Swinburne Had Praised.

Lovers of cats have read with mingled feelings in the Rossetti reminiscences of Swinburne's fondness for that animal, and what happened to a picture by M. Legros exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1898, because in some art notes the poet wrote of "the splendid cat," which was painted in the picture. The picture was bought, presumably before Swinburne's eulogium had appeared, by a person of some distinction. Years afterward, in 1895, Mr. W. M. Rossetti had occasion to look at this painting in the house of the original heir. To his surprise, the cat had disappeared. "Why," said Rossetti, "there used to be a cat in the corner of that picture." "Yes," replied the owner, "here was; but my predecessor on seeing that Swinburne had found a good word for the cat, got her obliterated forthwith." And so it is, that "The Rectory," that cat, vanished from the scene, all on account of the fury aroused by the publication of "Poems and Ballads." Prejudice could scarcely go further; but it is evidence of the spirit that denied the laurelship to England's great poet.

ENGLAND LACKS HORSES.

The census of horses set going by the government in Devonshire is nearly complete; and it is found that the police had nearly all the facts already accumulated.

The result of the census is likely to be alarming. It is not so much that the number of horses has fallen off—though there is probably a decrease of at least 15,000 foals in England—as that the right type is wanting. The other day, at special request, a government buyer of remounts, accompanied by a professor, went down to Cornwall to purchase.

A hundred horses were specially collected and paraded; but of the 100 only six were selected as sound and of the right type. If this happens at Liskeard, the center of the Brood Mare society, where Mr. Williams is organizing his scheme for ear marking—in the literal sense—national horses, the results will be twice as bad elsewhere. Among those who know the facts the alarm at the national deficiency is great. —London Daily Mail.

HIS SOUL FAR ABOVE TRADE

Also the Haughty Man of Wealth Had
What is Considered by Many a Bitter Graft.

Andrew Carnegie, at a dinner in New York, continued his indictment of Great Britain and Germany for their barbarous and stupid building of warships.

"How perverted," said Mr. Carnegie, "is a nation that thinks to promote peace by augmenting its armament. As though my neighbor and I should point cannon at each other's houses from every window, explaining, whenever we crowded a half dozen more guns in, that this sort of thing heightened neighborly feeling and good fellowship!"

"Perverved indeed," said Mr. Carnegie, "are such ideas of peace! As perverted as the New York aristocrat's idea of honor."

"A young westerner came to this aristocrat and asked him for his daughter's hand."

"I can support her in good style," he said. "I am worth $11,000,000."

"The aristocrat, whose family had done no work since his grandfather, 40 years before, had retired from the wholesale clothing business, frowned and said thoughtfully:

"But, my young friend, did you make this money in—er—trade?"

"Trade?" said the suitor haughtily. "I guess not! I'm in the legislature." —Chicago Journal.
